Idaho educators say state will make smooth transition to new standards

Southern Idaho leads north in snowpack

It's still early, but it looks like irrigators will join skiers in dubbing this a banner water year.

A strong La Nina weather pattern carried a lot of moisture to the western U.S. in the last part of 2010, boosting the vast majority of mountain snowpack measurements above average for this point in the year, according to the U.S. Natural Resources and Conservation Service's January water supply outlook.

Southwestern states are doing even better than those in the northwest as winds pushed December storms more toward California, Nevada and Utah. Snowpack levels in southern Utah are more than 250 percent of their New Year's average.

For the second year in a row, southern Idaho has received fringe benefits from storms to the south. The report marked the Salmon River Basin as the dividing line between areas of aboveaverage snowpack to the south and below-average snowpack in north Idaho. Southern basins are a month ahead of where they normally sit as far as snowpack.

The Camas Creek Divide near Fairfield posted one of the higher snowpack readings in Idaho, at 173 percent of average. In the Salmon Falls Basin, the Magic Mountain measurement station hit a 30-year record. The Snake River headwaters have about a third more snow than normal.

Meanwhile, basins in the Idaho Panhandle have the lowest snowpack in the state, riding below normal after a dry November.

Coming as it did a few weeks before Ronald Reagan's inauguration in 1981, the murders of Officers Bill Pogue and Conley Elms turned out to be one of the defining events of the Sagebrush Rebellion. And as much as any other single incident, it served to turn land users and land managers into adversaries.

That tension persists to this day, echoed in former Idaho gubernatorial candidate Rex Rammell's call for citizens of Idaho County to kill wolves and dare the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to do anything about it. Rammell is also charged with poaching an elk near Idaho Falls and then threatening a Fish and Game officer who took it

Dallas, celebrated in story, song and a madefor-TV movie, was never a hero or a defender of traditional Western values. He's a stone-cold

And, to a large degree, Dallas left us with the uneasy resource management relationship we have today.

Restarting the economic engine

e have magneto trouble. can we start up again?' mused John Maynard Keynes in December 1930, likening the stagnant economy of the Great Depression to a broken generator in an automobile. Fear not, he wrote, the car eventually would get rolling again, and "we need not assume . . . that motoring is over."

David Ignatius

As 2011 begins, many investors are acting as if Keynes' "magneto trouble" has been fixed. Stock markets are up as investors feel the return of "animal spirits," to use another of Keynes' graphic metaphors.

The comments from financial analysts are upbeat, eerily so if you remember the recent past. "We see equity markets trading strongly through 2011," said Britain's RBS. "We are in a bull market for sure," enthused John Lekas, a senior portfolio manager for Leader Capital.

But is the economic engine really fixed? As Keynes would have noted, that's partly a matter of perception. If investors believe that good times are back and start investing on that expectation, a virtuous cycle will take over: Growth will accelerate, manufacturers will add workers and build plants, unemployment will fall, consumers will spend more, and eventually we're back to full prosperity.

Here's how Keynes put it in his essay titled "The Great Slump of 1930." The economic decline, he said, was "probably a little oversons." The key to a "real lend on easier terms and over a wider geographical field, partly by borrowers recovering their good spirits and so becoming readier to borrow."

Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke is a good student of Keynesian psychology, which helps to clarify his controversial experiment with the monetary strategy known as "quantitative easing." His goal was to change investors' expectations and thus alter the underlying reality.

By purchasing $600 billion in Treasury securities last fall (and thereby flooding the economy with freshly printed cash), Bernanke hoped to make money so cheap, and fixedincome yields so low, that investors would find it irresistible to buy stocks. As the equity markets rose, he hoped, we would see the virtuous cycle of investment and job creation.

So far, Bernanke deserves good marks for playing the confidence game. "Despite all the consternation over quantitative easing, it was a pretty shrewd move, assuming his later exit strategy works," says David Smick, a Fed watcher who wrote the prescient book "The World is Curved."

From the Fed's perspective, here's what has happened since Bernanke announced the bond-purchase program last August: The S&P 500 index of major stocks is up about 20 percent; the Russell 2000 index is up more than 30 percent; stock-market volatility, as measured by the VIX index, is down roughly 30 percent.

Beyond these financial measures, there are signs of improvement in the real economy. The Institute for Supply Management reported Monday that its index of factory activity rose in December for the 17th straight month. Sales of automobiles and other consumer durables have been increasing. And the banking system finally seems to have steadied.

Here's one striking example of how the system is healing itself. According to the Bank for International Settlements, the volume of outstanding credit default swaps – the risky instruments that helped exacerbate the crisis – has declined by nearly half from its peak of $60 trillion in 2007.

What could go wrong with this happy picture? Given that it's composed of expectations about the future, almost everything: The economy is still fragile and vulnerable to another shock. That's why Bernanke has not ruled out purchasing even more Treasury bonds (that is, run the printing press a little longer) and why he thinks Congress should pass pro-growth fiscal measures to complement the Fed's monetary policy.

BOKBLUSTER.COM

The best sign that the economic engine is really repaired would be a joint plan by the White House and congressional Republicans to trim the federal budget deficit over the next 10 years. The elements of such a long-term recovery program are clear: reform and simplification of the tax code; cuts in entitlements programs; reduction in military spending to reflect a changing strategic environment. There is bipartisan support, in principle, for such moves, but in practice?

Keynes put it well at the end of his 1930 essay. He explained that political leaders, "like-minded and acting together, could start the machine again within a reasonable time; if, that is to say, they were energized by a confident conviction as to what was wrong."

Look to SLO for good example of downtown

Just back from several weeks around San Luis Obispo, Calif. How humbling to discover a community of Twin Falls' size that understands the value of a thriving downtown.

SLO, the town calls itself, is slightly larger than Twin Falls, with a college. It displays a firm commitment to people walking sidewalks and shopping commercial storefronts. Not once did we see a $220,000 parking lot covering a failed urban renewal project. Instead of paving over the town, SLO seemed more concerned with encouraging its habitation.

Yes, we paid $4.16 a gallon for tourist-trap gasoline along the coast. But the station had a nice sign, "Please pump first, then pay for purchase."

Apparently Mayor Greenman feels it takes too much effort to conduct legal meetings and he certainly doesn't concern himself with the consequences of these actions because he knows Councilmen Anderson and Hansen and Councilman Curtis will endorse any action he participates in,

Mayor Greenman has managed to recruit a group of citizens that will come to council meetings to do his bidding on whatever issue he has coached them on. It is an ongoing agenda promoting the corrupt practices of Mayor Greenman while attempting to give him credit for things he had nothing to do

For example, they are trying to give him credit for bringing the new potatoprocessing plant in Heyburn to this area, when it is common knowledge

Mayor Greenman has recently joined The Voice and all the kooks that are boycotting any and all of the businesses that advertise in The Weekly Mailer and The Weekly News Journal. The reason Mayor Greenman and his followers have given for supporting this boycott is because John Walsh and myself (Tony Hart) have written letters to the editor of the Twin Falls Times-News expressing our opposition to the policies of Mayor Greenman.

The real reason for this boycott is that this group vehemently hates Jay Lenkersdorfer and will do anything they can to harm him. And this is the same group that claims moral superiority over the rest of us, because we want to root out and destroy the corruption in our city government.

Let DEQ do its job on chicken operations

Does this sound familiar? State Rep. Jim Patrick plans to propose that large-scale poultry operations come under the authority of the Idaho State Department of Agriculture. I wonder if the proposed process will limit the ability of our Idaho Department of Environmental Quality as dictated in the memorandum of understanding pertaining to confined animal feeding operations?

That ill-conceived document has led to extreme suffering by your constituents, Rep. Patrick, because ISDA would not effectively respond to complaints about flies and odor, among other things! Counties would not even accept complaints! And, of course, our "cow-friendly" Legislature engineered everything to citizen's disadvantage with little frills like the one-mile rule.

So now we are about to add more reality to the idea of ISDA being like "the fox guarding the hen house"! I hope that reasonable limits will be observed as the onslaught of chickens begins, but that is probably wishful thinking. Some of our counties already smell and appear like "outhouses in distress" due to CAFO overdevelopment.

As the chicken saga develops, it is my desire that DEQ not have its authority diminished as was dictated by the aforementioned MOU. In other words, let it do its job too! It is my opinion that our state Legislature has failed, and continues to fail, to realize that there are reasonable limits to what our environment can support.

And a closing thought: Seems like an editorial some months ago was lamenting the fact that previous "water-wise" legislators were gone. Pardon me, but weren't they the ones "asleep at the switch" as our water was being over allocated?

Patient's card reveals meaning of Christmas

It's Christmas, yes CHRISTmas. Tis the season tainted with the global economy, unemployment, joblessness, health care, Social Security, foreclosures, weather disasters, TSA, terrorism and immigration. We're all knocking ourselves out to what end?

Today, it occurred to me that I've been working in health care for the last 30 years. All of those hours. days, then years and I'm still dealing with the paperwork, processes, payer demands, federal hoops and personnel issues. Every year, I've asked myself or been asked why I keep doing this. "What's in it for me?"

Early on, it was easy to answer that question. I was fresh and ambitious. Then came changes in reimbursement and burdensome paperwork loads; more recently, reductions in work force, wages and benefits. My fa-la-la-la is in desperate need of a tune up.

Then I received a reminder of the reason for the season. A patient had taken the time to send a card expressing her appreciation for the help she'd received at home. She is "thankful for those of you who care for the sick and the helpless." I need not question the reason I get up every day and come to work. This is "what's in it for me."

The Annas we take care of will never know how much they give to us. Nurses care for the sick and the helpless. None of us expect fanfare or truckloads of appreciation. We all perform jobs we are trained to do.

Without hesitation, I can tell you the pride in the work I do, with compassion and empathy for those is my care, and working with competent staff to make sure our patients get the best we can offer is "what's in it for me." I am truly blessed. May the season bring you peace, comfort and joy.

had 4.000 arks by the end of the people who don't take the time to put the carts away.

Some of these problems are the damages they cause by blowing into other carts and ruining them. Also, blowing into cars and denting them. Sometimes, there are so many carts left in the parking lots it's hard to park your car or walk into the stores as you have to dodge all the carts.

It's a waste of time for employees to have to walk all around the parking lots to gather up carts. The only reason this happens is because people don't want to take a few seconds it takes to put the cart away or because they are just too lazy to walk the little extra

One idea I have the might help solve this problem is as follows:

The stores make a cartdispensing machine that you have to deposit 25 cents to get a cart out and use it. The only way you get your 25 cents back is to put the cart back in the return stall. Maybe then more people will return the carts. Which would help solve the problems as stated above.

This should make everyone happy, including the employees who have to gather the carts. The customers who won't have to pay for repairs to a car. The customers who receive the 25 cents back for doing the proper thing.

Coming soon to a pump near you: Gas at $5 a gallon

The following editorial appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on Monday, Jan. 3:

Good news: With recession loosening its grip, about 1.1 million more Americans bought new cars last year than in 2009.

Not only did sales pick up, more Americans opted for bigger vehicles. Sales of midsize SUVs like Jeep Grand Cherokees and Honda Pilots jumped 41 percent during the first 11 months of the year.

That increase came at the expense of smaller economy cars, whose sales remained flat in 2010. Sales of some models like the Honda Civic and the Toyota Corolla actually fell.

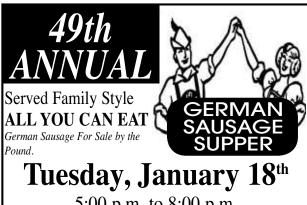

Bad news: The former head of Shell Oil told an industry publication last month that he expects gas to hit $5 a gallon in 2012.

The U.S. Energy Information Administration, an independent agency that analyzes trends for the federal government, predicts a somewhat more modest increase. It forecasts gas prices averaging about $2.67 a gallon in 2012, up 14 percent over 2009 prices but still well shy of $5.

But the trend is clear: Long-term increases in gasoline prices and, indeed, in all energy prices.

We're not being critical of consumers who opted for SUVs over economy cars. But such choices have consequences.

And American consumers aren't the only ones making them.

investigation into whether State Tax Commission Chairman Royce Chigbrow tried to use his official position to help clients of his son's accounting firm, as well as a political supporter.

Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower also said his office continues to look into Chigbrow's actions, including whether he violated Idaho laws that forbid disclosure of taxpayer of information.

Verizon unveils first '4G' wireless tablet, phone

LAS VEGAS — The first gadgets with built-in access to Verizon Wireless' new, high-speed wireless data network are a smart phone and a tablet from Motorola Mobility Inc., both designed to take advantage of the network's speed for videoconferencing.

UI wheat expert leaving to work at Oregon State

Associated Press

MOSCOW — The University of Idaho's top wheat breeder is leaving to work at Oregon State University in Corvallis as the school's new head of its wheat variety development program.

"One of the things that attracted me to that position is they have a good group of wheat researchers that I could interact with," Zemetra told the Lewiston Tribune. "The financial issues have played into it a little bit, but it's mainly the opportunity at this stage in my career."

Zemetra is working one more semester at the UI before heading to Oregon.

Zemetra has been with the Moscow-based University of Idaho for 26 years, but in the last two years the school has seen deep cuts in state funding due to Idaho's budget woes.

About $5.6 million has been cut from the College of Agricultural and Life Science's extension budget, resulting in the loss of some positions at the school, making Zemetra's job somewhat tougher.

He also said he and his wife, Lindey Seipe, spent 2002-2003 at Oregon State on sabbatical and became fond of Corvallis.

"We have a goal of retiring in Oregon, in that area," he said.

He also said his last few gradudegrees, and he's not in the middle of any major grants. Zemetra brought in about $5.3 million in grants and external research funding to the university during his tenure.

Brundage and Zemetra's Brundage 96 wheat varieties are credited with expanding domestic and international markets for Idaho wheat. The Idaho Wheat Commission gave Zemetra its Distinguished Service Award in 2007, and he also recently received the Innovation Award from the University of Idaho for his work in winter wheat variety development.

"I really do like the University of Idaho, and I appreciate everything the UI has done and the Idaho Wheat Commission has done for me here," Zemetra said. "But there's also the excitement of going to a new position, and in a sense, getting to refocus my efforts on wheat breeding."

At Oregon State, Zemetra is replacing Jim Peterson, who left in July to work in the private sec-

It's unclear if Zemetra's statefunded position in Idaho will be filled, but Zemetra said the school should find a way to do that.

Looking for an edge, older job-seekers update looks

By Bonnie Miller Rubin Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO - Charlotte Doyle hit the gym two hours a day, embraced the latest fashions and made sure that not a strand of gray peeked through her thick blond

But at age 61, she got pink-slipped from her job in pharmaceutical sales. So, in 2009, shortly after she was laid off after 29 years. Dovle decided to take an unorthodox step in a cutthroat job climate and get her teeth straightened.

"I need to do everything I can to be competitive," said the Homewood, Ill., resident, flashing a gleaming mouth of metal. "I desperately want to work."

While most older jobseekers know the importance of keeping their skills current, some are applying that same advice to their faces. From orthodontics to between — they are turning to such enhancements to gain an edge in the workplace.

Looks matter. In a quarter-century of research, Nancy Etcoff, a psychology professor at Harvard Medical School, has found that attractive people are more likely to be hired and promoted, earn higher salaries and be perceived as more intelligent and creative than their less fetching

Not that plastic surgery, cosmetic dentistry or other elective treatments have escaped the recession. In 2009, doctors performed 12.5 million cosmetic procedures, a figure that has steadily decreased during matter of staying competithe previous two years, according to the American

> It's another tool, though perhaps an extreme one, for aging baby boomers, many of whom are counting on working past conventional retirement age as a hedge against longer life spans and shrinking nest eggs.

Teeth whitening? Laser peels? Even "hair systems"? Check, check and check.

No group keeps data on why people take such steps to improve their appearance, but anecdotally, employment is often cited as the primary motivation decades, when social status and romantic viability topped the list, experts say. tive," said Dr. Loren Schechter, a Morton Grove, Ill., plastic surgeon. "Even surgery – facelifts, eyelifts - is coming back to pre-2008 levels. That wasn't there a year ago."

Those older than 55 are among the hardest hit by unemployment, with nearly 30 percent out of work for a year or longer, said a July poll by Pew Research Center.

Companies sometimes insist that appearance is key to conveying a certain image - whether a TV anchor or a hostess at a hot new club.

In almost three decades on the job, Doyle never heard anyone say anything about her looks or her job performance at a pharmaceutical powerhouse. The sales rep said she hit her quotas and nurtured close ties with her customers, many of whom sent cards after the ax fell. She suspects her layoff had less to do with aesthetics than her six-figure salary.

Still, Doyle, now 63, became more acutely aware of age when recruiters told her to omit or finesse key dates on applications. "That didn't seem like a good way to start a relationship," she said.

AROUND THE NATION

WASHINGTON

Pentagon plans to cut spending

For the first time in more than a decade defined by costly wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, the Pentagon announced plans Thursday to freeze its ballooning budget, forcing the services to shrink the Army and Marines and increase health care premiums for military retirees and their families.

The Pentagon says it can stop asking for annual budget increases in 2015, adjusting its spending only for inflation. The last time the Pentagon's budget went down was in 1998.

The plan is aimed at helping the nation whittle away at its massive deficit. But the proposal, which requires $78 billion in spending cuts and relies on another $100 billion in cost-saving moves to cover urgent requirements, is tied to two assumptions: that the war in Afghanistan will end on time and that Congress will agree to plans to cancel popular job-making programs and charge retired military families more for health care.

CBO: Repeal would increase deficitRepealing President Barack Obama's landmark health care overhaul would add billions to government red ink and leave millions without coverage, Congress' nonpartisan budget referees said Thursday ahead of a politically charged vote in the House.

House Speaker John Boehner brushed off the Congressional Budget Office analysis as emboldened Republicans, now in the majority in the House, issued their own report arguing that Obama's coverage expansion would cost jobs and increase budget deficits. But Democrats seized on the CBO analysis, calling it a game changer in the battle for public opinion.

In a letter to Boehner, budget office director Douglas Elmendorf estimated repeal would increase the deficit by $230 billion from 2012 to 2021, the 10-year estimating period for budget projections. Moreover, Elmendorf said about 32 million more people would be uninsured in 2019 as a consequence.

But Boehner told reporters: "I do not believe that repealing the job-killing health care law will increase the deficit.'

Simpson puts gavel down on heckler

Republicans made history Thursday by staging the first-ever reading of the entire Constitution on the House floor. But that record may come with an asterisk: Democrats asked why original sections that later were amended, including references to slaves, were left out of the recital, and lawmakers initially did not catch that a couple of key paragraphs were omitted when two pages got stuck together.

The solemn occasion was briefly interrupted by a protester when Rep. Frank Pallone, D-N.J., was reading the section of the Constitution that set out the eligibility requirements for the presidency. As Pallone read the words, "No person, except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution," a woman yelled out "except Obama, except Obama!"

The presiding officer, Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, asked that she be ejected, and she was. Police later said Theresa Cao, 48, of New York, was charged with unlawful conduct and disruption of Congress.

An untimely death in a timeless play

RAT Players present 'Death of a Salesman'

By Melissa Davlin Times-News writer

The problems of yesterday hold true today.

Next week, Random Actors of Theatre Players will open their production of "Death of a Salesman." In performing the play, actors are honoring the time period and the playwright's intentions while recognizing parallels to today's events.

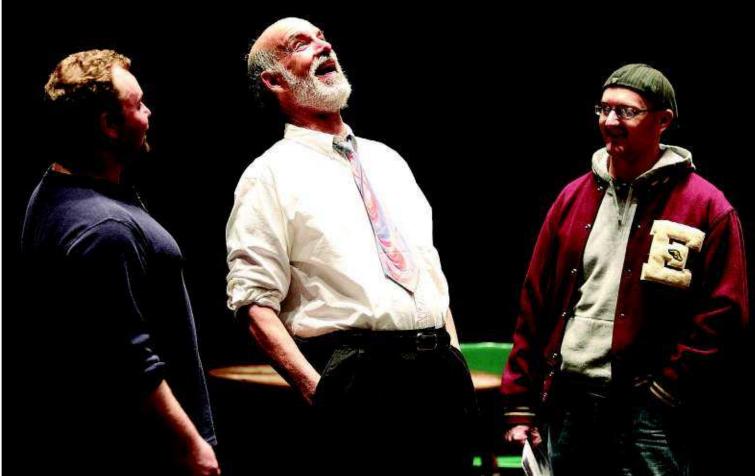

The RAT Players are using a 1949 printing of the "Death of a Salesman" script.

"It's purest for the author's intention," director Tamara Harmon said. Later versions of the script might modernize the speech, or update references something that might make the dialogue easier for the actors but if it's not what Arthur Miller wrote, RAT isn't interested.

To relate to the characters, the actors researched the time period. What did teenagers wear? Was the baseball player they referenced just high-profile, or a household name?

The director and actors also face a challenge with stage directions for the play, which bounces back and forth between memories and the present. Harmon uses lights and stage directions to tip off the audience as to when the scene is taking place.

So, at age 48, after a year of weekend training, officer's basic school and a twoweek training exercise, Floyd went to Iraq in March 2003 with an Army Reserve unit based in Salt Lake City.

Now Floyd, who has practiced in Hailey and Boise, has published a coffee tabletype book titled "Aid and Comfort to the Enemy: A Surgeon's View of the War in Iraq" (Artbook Press, $40.)

The book features photographs he took with his Hasselblad and Nikon D 100, including those of surgeons operating on Iraqi soldiers, Bedouins tending their goats and a cache of weapons that the U.S. military destroyed.

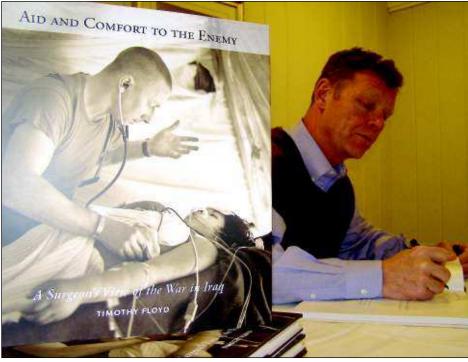

It also features a narrative of Floyd's experience, including the surreal experi-BELLEVUE – It was in Dr. ence of stashing Berretta 9 mm pistols and M16 rifles under his airplane seats and in the overhead bins and sleeping with a gun strapped to his leg.

Floyd's book has been getting a lot of media and other attention across the nation, said Cheryl Welch of Ketchum's Chapter One Bookstore.

The Association Orthopedic Surgeons has ordered copies for its waiting rooms and libraries. And Chapter One has received dozens of phone orders from other doctors, people who served with Floyd and former patients who live throughout the nation.

to life. The eight advanced students, now juniors and seniors, were the first freshmen Haycock worked with at Twin Falls High.

"Their maturity, commitment levels increase. They get better as they understand the crowd," Haycock said. "They own it. They don't let anybody mess around."

Taking ownership of the plays has resulted in some interesting changes to the original works.

Shakespeare's story of wooers in disguise and reverse psychology gets a spruce-up in the costume department. Now, Haycock said, the play has a punk theme, reflected in the music between scenes and some characters dressed as the infamous hooligans.

"It's all shopped from stores and students' wardrobes," he said.

A lot of the roles traditionally filled by men are played by women, Haycock said, which "ends up making some fun jokes."

Haycock chose the plays to fit the personalities of their casts. "Bolligrew," a silly play, is staffed with jokesters, who have spiced up what was originally intended as a performance for children.

"With this group, they sort of added things that aren't children's play," Haycock said. The play, which Haycock and cast members call "Monty Python-esque." remains family-friendly, though.

"It's a bunch of really bad British accents and funny, odd characters and gestures," Haycock said. "It should be a riot."

Seventeen-year-old Tyler Newbry is another advanced student in "Bolligrew." Like Gardner, Newbry got interested in drama in eighth the extra, extra guy," Newbry

Two pros help Burley troupe mount Cole Porter musical

By Judy Albertson Times-News writer

BURLEY Combine Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" and Cole Porter's music and lyrics, and vou get "Kiss Me, Kate."

Taking its inspiration from The Bard, "Kiss Me, Kate" is a play-within-a-play that follows the lives of egotistical actor-producer Fred Graham and his temperamental costar and ex-wife, Lilli Vanessi, in a production of, you guessed it, Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

Porter's score borrows freely from Shakespeare's dialogue for lyrics in the musical numbers that take place "onstage" but makes use of more modern syntax in the "backstage" numbers.

Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation's production of "Kiss Me, Kate," directed by Dennis Byington, opens Jan. 21 in Burley. You'll hear classic songs including "Another Op'nin; Another Show," "Wunderbar," "So in Love," "Always True to You in My Fashion," "Too Darn Hot" and "Brush Up Your Shakespeare."

Porter's most successful musical, the original production of "Kiss Me, Kate" opened on Broadway in 1948 and ran for 1,077 perform-Awards in 1949. It was revived in 1999, taking advantage of new technology in music and evolving social values.

"I had the opportunity to perform in the 'Kiss Me, Kate' production while I was in college," Byington said. "Of course that was before the 1999 revised edition."

Byington finds this production challenging.

"This one is a play within a play and has a whole different approach. There are two sets of costumes, so it's a little more complex," he said.

Byington added: "I have always liked the show because it's so much fun what with the gangsters and all the fun stuff there. And I have been able to see how having professionals pulls the best out of everybody."

Jerome girls nip Minico 40-36

JEROME - The lead didn't come often for the Jerome girls basketball team on Thursday, and when it did it wasn't much. But it was enough.

The Tigers struggled through much of their home game with Minico but got it done when it mattered most, using a late run to clip the Spartans 40-36.

After falling behind by as many as eight, Jerome (9-3, 3-2) outscored its guests 16-4 over the final 10 minutes of the game to move back above .500 in the Great Basin Conference.

"We struggled at times, but we made some adjustments and got excited," said Jerome senior Carrie Thibault, who scored gamehigh 12. "We're still a young team and we're still growing. But tonight was a night where the entire team stepped up."

Tigers scored the opening basket of the game and then never led by more than a single point until Kolbie Stauffer hit a free throw with 20 seconds left to make it 38-36.

Minico (3-9, 1-4) built its lead on the strength of 52.6percent shooting in the first half, but the Spartans' hot shooting ran cold down the stretch, allowing Jerome to get back into the game.

"We just couldn't step up and hit the shots when it mattered," said Spartan guard Marlee Chandler, who scored a team-best 10 points. "We just need to learn to play all four quarters and keep our heads."

Jerome used a 7-0 run to get back to 32-31 early in the fourth quarter. The teams traded several baskets before Frankie Carey banked one in from an almost impossible angle to put the Tigers ahead to stay at 37-36.

Kippes, Buhl edge Filer in OT

By Stephen Mevers Times-News writer

Cassidee Kippes is building herself quite the reputation as a clutch player.

With 10.5 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter and her team down by two, Kippes walked ket on a steal and layup with calmly to the free-throw line after being fouled and sank two shots to send the game into overtime. The Indians kept the momentum going in the extra period, outscoring Filer 8-3 to seal a 46-41 win over their Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference rival.

"This win just feels awesome. We have been struggling this season and this win does a lot for our confidence as a team and we know we can hang in this conference," Kippes said.

After being held without a field goal for nearly the entire fourth quarter, Buhl put the game in the hands of Kippes. The junior scored the team's first basjust over one minute remaining to tie the game at 36. This after Filer staged a serious comeback to put a scare into the Indians.

"I started being more aggressive and driving to the hoop, hoping to score or at least draw the foul," Kippes said. "I knew I had to do something for our team down the stretch. I

28 teams to clash at Buhl Invitational

Bigger and better.

That's the hope for the 2011 Buhl Invitational wrestling tournament, which kicks off this aftercontinues noon and Saturday at Buhl High Twenty-eight teams are scheduled to appear at this year's tournament, up five from a robust 23 in 2010. New Plymouth is absent from this year's event, while Parma, Mackay, Salmon, Middleton, and Nevada schools Battle Mountain and White Pine provide new faces for 2011.

The increase in participating schools provides more opportunity for matches and a greater chance of facing less familiar opposition.

"It's going to be a really good tournament," Buhl coach Anthony Bartlett said Thursday evening as he finalized seeding for the brackets. "It's pretty tough to seed, a lot of good kids."

Jerome won last year's tournament title handily and figures to be in contention for another team crown while Bartlett said North Fremont should also be in the title mix.

In addition to Buhl and Jerome, other area teams participating include Burley, Canyon Ridge, Declo, Filer, Glenns Ferry, Gooding, Kimberly, Minico, Twin

COWBOYS PICK JASON GARRETT AS 8TH HEAD COACH

ARLINGTON, Texas -About 10 minutes into his tenure as coach of the Dallas Cowboys, Jason Garrett had to step aside to make way much authority he would coaching staff, and Jones wanted to be the one to answer. As Garrett backed away from the microphone and Jones took over, it seemed like business as usual for the Cowboys.

Garrett is 44 and received a four-year contract. But the real key is how much Jones already trusts and respects Garrett, as indicated by the power he has granted the coach.

Cotton Bowl preview

No. 11 LSU (10-2) vs. No. 18 Texas A&M (9-3)

6:30 p.m., FOX

Line: LSU by 1.5.

Series Record: LSU leads 26-20-3. Last Meeting: Texas A&M 33-17, 1995. WHAT'S AT STAKE

LSU is going for its sixth 11-win season, and fourth under sixth-year coach Les Miles, whose name is again being mentioned for the coaching vacancy at Michigan, his alma mater. Texas A&M, playing in January for the first time since the 2005 Cotton Bowl, has a six-game winning streak since losing three in a row, a stretch that included a loss to Arkansas in Cowboys Stadium.

KEY MATCHUP

Texas A&M WRs Ryan Swope and Jeff Fuller vs. LSU All-American CB Patrick Peterson. Swope set an Aggies record with 67 catches this season while Fuller has 65 catches and 12 TDs. Peterson, a junior likely playing his last game before going to the NFL, is the only player in LSU history with touchdowns on an interception return, a blocked field goal and a punt return.

Byrd, Pettersson share first-round lead in Hawaii

KAPALUA, Hawaii - Jonathan Byrd and Carl Pettersson didn't miss a beat in the PGA Tour opener Thursday, both enjoying the views and surprisingly calm conditions in the Tournament of Champions to share the lead at 7-under 66.

That wasn't the case for others.

Kapalua was missing its two-time defending champion when Geoff Ogilvy had to withdraw with 12 stitches in his right finger, making him the first defending champ in 50 years to miss the winnersonly event.

Stuart Appleby was missing his putter. It wasn't in the bag when he showed up Thursday morning, and he sent caddie Scott Sajtinac to a nearby golf shop to get the closest he could find. With the price tag still glued to the shaft, Appleby opened with a 69.

Durant, Thunder top Mavs

DALLAS — Kevin Durant scored 28 points, Russell Westbrook had 15 points and nine assists and the Oklahoma City Thunder beat the short-handed Dallas Mavericks 99-95 on Thursday night.

Jeff Green had 16 points and nine rebounds, and Serge Ibaka added with 13 points and eight rebounds. Shawn Marion had a season-high 25 points for the Mavericks, who were without top scorer Dirk Nowitzki for a career-high sixth straight game with a sprained right knee. Tyson Chandler added 14 points and matched a season high with 18 rebounds. Jason Terry had 19 points for Dallas, 2-4 during

Tews makes quick impact at Filer

By Stephen Meyers

Times-News writer

Allen Kelsey knew right away the type of player he was getting in Austin Tews to start his first season as the Filer basketball coach.

Both relocated to the Magic Valley this school year from Preston High School, where Kelsey was the athletic director and Tews was a freshman on the basketball

"I had the opportunity to watch a few of his games his freshman year," Kelsey said. "I knew we were getting a real good player. He's a very good shooter and I'm excited to see him improve. He's made a big step from his freshman year. He's been a nice addition to the Filer program."

Since moving from Preston, the sophomore guard has stepped into the starting point guard role for Filer, leading the Wildcats to an early 5-4 record Kelsey said.

Times-News Athlete of the Week

Tews had himself a nice week at the Payette Holiday Tournament over the holiday break.

He canned five 3-pointers and scored 18 points to lead Filer to a 53-45 win at Payette Dec. 28 to win the tournament. That came a day after he scored 15 to lead the Wildcats past Vale, Ore., 63-44. In the two games, he went 9-for-14 from downtown and is shooting nearly 50 percent from 3-point range on the season.

"He was shooting the ball just great,"

The 5-foot-8 guard is like a sparkplug on the court, weaving in and out of defenders and shooting from all over the court. He possesses a great crossover dribble and step-back 3-point shot in addition to a solid pull-up jumper from midrange.

"I just like to score," Tews said. And work on his craft.

Tews routinely can be found dribbling a basketball - or two - to improve his ball-handling and spends extra time in the gym working on his

"He's willing to really work at it and he loves it. He puts in a lot of time to get better," Kelsey said.

Said Tews: "I just love the game. It's a lot of fun and I'm always trying to come up with new moves and improve."

In his first season at Filer, Tews has felt right at home.

"It's been a lot of fun. I love my teammates and my coaches and it's a really good situation," Tews said. "We're coming together as a team and improving and it's always a good battle in this conference and every game will be tough."

Hasselbeck to start for Seahawks vs. Saints

RENTON, Wash. (AP) -By this point, the pleading with coaches was done. Matt Hasselbeck knew he wasn't going to start what could potentially be the last game he ever played for the Seattle Seahawks.

Instead of sulking, outwardly showing any bitterness or anger while Charlie Whitehurst took the snaps in Seattle's biggest game in nearly three years, the only quarterback to ever lead the Seahawks to the Super Bowl stepped to the middle of Seattle's spacious locker room at Qwest Field last Sunday evening.

"I think it was important that I offer something," Hasselbeck said Thursday.

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

IF JANUARY 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: There is probably no more vacation time left for you and that is probably a good thing because you will be hard pressed to find enough hours to keep up with your obligations in February. You will need to remain on your toes to avoid criticism and to handle matters from the past that pop up. You might have a bad case of cabin fever, but wait until April to break away from routines. Plan ahead so that you do not need to begin anything of great importance in June or September, when the stars are not favorable for new financial or romantic enter-

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-Apr. 19): You can never be sure of a sure thing. Stay on your toes and don't take the promises or representations of others at face value. Rely on consensus from a group of like-minded individuals for the best results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid making key decisions. To maintain harmony, you are likely to agree to something you will regret later. The seeds of a great idea might not be ready to plant, but can be set aside for better timing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Mutual self-interests must be served. It might seem for a few hours today that everyone you meet has an ax to grind or only have self-preservation in mind. Steer clear of controversies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A hidden agenda is obvious. t is fine to be suspicious of others when the writing is right there on the wall. A little bit of cynicism is healthy when dealing with an obvious attempt to block your path.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be a grown-up. It is tempting to listen to the inner child who is having a temper tantrum. Rather than giving in to an urge to misbehave or to say something you shouldn't, strive to act like an adult.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Chance is never cast in stone. Your precious plans are not set in granite and are not impervious to a change of heart. This is not the best time to ask for favors or beg for support for your proj-

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mirages simply disappear if you get too close. Appealing romantic alliances or lucrative business deals might not hold up under scrutiny. Friends will probably show their true colors in a oneon-one situation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Revenge is a dish best served cold, they say, but you may forget that in the heat of the moment. You may be tempted to retaliate if someone casts aspersions on your good name or shows disapproval.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Crossed swords or cross words may put you at a crossroads. You can spoil a good thing if you let criticism get under your skin or if you fight rules and regulations. Don't fight a losing CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have an eye for details, especially in matters that detract from your opponents or adversaries. Someone close is looking for unconditional love and affection, rather than dutiful obedience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hostility hurts. Issues from the past might waste your time or cause friction with an old buddy. Look ahead, not behind. Recent financial changes can be put to good use if you put your thinking cap on.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Knuckle down to your normal chores. You may prefer to work on your own or in privacy where you can daydream at leisure. Step up the pace because the boss is looking for results, not excuses.

The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty leve of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

DEAR ABBY: Just how honest should you be with a friend? My friend "Frannie" did not receive a promotion in her department, and I think I know why - her appearance. The promotion would have required more interaction with clients.

Frannie is bright, hardworking, has Christian ethics, a beautiful, trim figure, a wide smile and dresses well. But - she wears no makeup, doesn't pluck her huge unibrow and wears sandals that expose her very hairy toes and the hairy tops of her feet.

Many people have commented to me about her hairy feet and face, but I have not had the heart to tell her what they say. She has also been asking me why guys shy away from her.

Do I say nothing, or should I offer helpful advice?

- FRANNIE'S FRIEND IN NORTH CAROLINA DEAR FRIEND: What you need to ask yourself before raising a sensitive subject like this is: Is it true? Is it helpful? Is it kind? From where I sit, telling Frannie what she needs to hear passes those tests. Because Frannie has been asking why men shy away from her, that's your opening to talk to her about her grooming. Many women have body-hair issues, but there are solutions for it. The poor woman needs the services of a cosmetologist.

DEAR ${f A}{f B}{f B}{f Y}$ Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I separated more than a year ago, but we have remained friends for the sake of our children. During our marriage, my sister moved in with us. When I moved out, she stayed on to help my husband financially, and also to help with our children.

Yesterday, my husband confirmed that he's now sleeping with my sister. I must see them almost daily and I don't want to make a difficult situation worse. How can I get over the hurt and betrayal I feel toward them – especially my sister? How can I forgive them? Will time really heal this wound?

- BETRAYED BY MY SISTER

DEAR BETRAYED: It may help in your healing if you accept that your marriage ended the day you walked out the door, leaving your sister in the role of wife — contributing financially to the household, parenting the children, and I assume, emotionally supporting your husband. Not to have seen this coming was naive. The stronger you become, the easier it will be to forgive them and go on with your life, but getting there may require professional counseling. I'm recommending you start sooner rather than later.
