Otter: 'We have our work cut out for us'

Gov. C.L. 'Butch' Otter pauses while giving his State of the State address to legislators at the Capitol in Boise on Monday.

Budget proposal trims deficit to $50 million

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter didn't take long to let legislators know this session will be one of thankless decisions.

Otter's State of the State address on Monday blended homespun images of families making ends meet with the realities of the state budget. At the same time, Otter hit an upbeat note, mentioning the new C3 call center in Twin Falls among examples of economic development.

"No one in this room is under any illusion about the task before us," Otter said in the packed House chamber of the State Capitol, which was lined with extra chairs to accommodate the 35-member

Senate. "It could be the kind of legislative session that leaves people wondering why anyone would want to go into politics or public service."

Otter's budget proposal calls for an average 2.2 percent reduction in state agency budgets, after using other funding sources to trim a projected $340 million budget hole to just $50 million.

Magic Valley lawmakers react to Gov. Otter's annual address

BOISE — Magic Valley legislators had an open mind when they listened to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's State of the State message.

For the most part, they liked what they heard. Some of it, like changes to education, they still need to learn more about as the session progresses.

Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome and co-chairwoman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said the governor struck the right balance with an upbeat mood that still didn't avoid the state's realities.

"It helps when you have a governor that is upbeat and it was upbeat," Bell said. "He pointed out the good things that are happening. He acknowledged that we are not out of the woods and he pointed out he does have a plan forward."

She added: "There was a lot of reality in his speech, but I also felt like he did see a rainbow out there somewhere."

Rep. Bert Stevenson, R-Rupert, said he was a little concerned that a plan to repair the massive Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer wasn't mentioned in the speech, as it has been in prior years.

"We do have some plans forward," he said. "We'll just have to wait and see, I guess."

$20K more approved to develop downtown

Consultant led downtown Boise revitalization effort

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency has put another $20,000 toward its four-block downtown revitalization project, this time to bring in a man aiming for base hits rather than home runs.

The agency's board approved on Monday a four-month contract, not to exceed $20,000 plus expenses, with Brix & Co., known in the development community for leading the rebirth of downtown Boise several years ago.

"We don't know what we're doing" in terms of getting land developed, URA board member Bill Koch told Brix CEO Mark Rivers, echoing another board member. "We know something needs to be done, and we all have an idea of what we want to do, but that's what we need you for."

Rivers' proposal states his scope of work will be to "provide visioning, business plans, outreach and consensus-building support on prospective redevelopment opportunities;" prioritize redevelopment options with an emphasis on URA-owned properties, and "support overall City and URA goals with capability, expertise, relationships and professional assistance."

Rivers tempered his presentation with doses of reality, even using that term in a bulleted list. He said the nation is still in a recession, despite optimism from economists, making it hard for capital to flow to development. That may throw a wrench into forcing mixed-use development in downtown, he said.

Mixed-use development, which combines retail with office and living spaces, was a linchpin of a $350,000 consultation the URA paid for in 2008. From that, the $200,000 purchase and demolition of the old Red's Trading Post on Shoshone Street and the move of a St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center financial office onto Second Avenue West have been the only physical achievements.

Instead, Rivers said he will push for base hits, or small victories, instead of looking for home runs.

"The market isn't going to bear a home run. There is no panacea today," Rivers said. "The best thing

Arizona shooting puts focus on public safety, mental health

By Melissa Healy and Eryn Brown
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — In the best of times and most favorable of circumstances, it's tricky business to identify whether a person who is mentally ill might become violent so that those in his path are protected from potential harm and he gets needed treatment.

But with community mental health services stretched taut by budget cuts and burgeoning need, these are not the best of times, say many experts at the intersection of mental health and public safety. Nor were circumstances ideal to identify Jared Lee Loughner — the alleged gunman in last weekend's Tucson shooting spree — as a clear-cut case of someone about to become violent.

Loughner's increasingly bizarre and mistrustful pronouncements, combined with his age — 22 — suggest to many mental health professionals a flowering of mental illness marked by delusional thinking. People diagnosed with schizophrenia, for instance, most often begin showing signs of the illness in their late teens or early 20s, when they suffer episodes of hallucinations and become preoccupied with false beliefs and delusions — for instance, of persecution or conspiracy.

His apparent embrace of such notions as mind control, a new currency and "conscience dreaming" — all mentioned in a YouTube posting Loughner is reported to have made — bespeak a troubled mind but reveal little about his actual propensity for violence, said Dr. Mark A. Kalish, a forensic psychiatrist who teaches at the University of California-San Diego. The mentally ill, Kalish noted, are no more likely to engage in violent behavior than their peers in the general population.

Nonetheless, in the wake of yet another shooting by another troubled young adult, the question of how to protect the public from violence perpetrated by some among the mentally ill has already stirred debate.

For some activists, early signs of Jared Loughner's mental instability suggest that state laws governing the involuntary commitment of the potentially violent mentally ill need to be broadened. Most states require that a mental health professional find an individual not only to be severely disabled by mental illness but also to be an imminent danger to himself or others before allowing involuntary psychiatric commitment.

Others, including many mental health professionals, just as forcefully note that no laws will ensure safety from the violent mentally ill unless state and community mental health services are in place to find them and treat them.

"It isn't that we don't know how to get people to help. We're just not doing it," said Robert Bernstein, executive director of the Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law in Washington, D.C.

"Community-based programs are so underfunded they don't have the resources to respond appropriately" to evidence that a person may be teetering on the edge of violence, Bernstein added. "Every day, people with mental illness are failing to receive services, and every day, people experience preventable crises — are taken to the emergency room or arrested and jailed."

After the four months, the URA board can review the results and base action off of them. The URA board members — minus state Rep. Leon Smith, who was in Boise, and Gary Garnand, who was absent — voted unanimously to approve the contract.

"If we don't do anything, we know what is going to happen, which is nothing," said Tom Frank, vice chairman of the board.

The URA board also approved $48,640 to southeast Twin Falls. A new waterline will open the area to large industrial users, according to a staff report. It also approved a 10-year lease, at $1,333.33 per month, for the Veterans Affairs clinic in downtown Twin Falls. The initial 10-year lease, which recently expired, was for $1 per year as a means to encourage development.

URA Director Melinda Anderson said the new lease is at the low end of typical rents for downtown medical office space, $4 per square foot.

Shootout on Washington Street

Every time a law enforcement officer makes a traffic stop, he or she has to wonder if it's the last thing they'll ever do.

But compared with the 1930s, it's positively safe out there for Magic Valley cops nowadays.

Between February 1934 and November 1935, four south-central Idaho officers were killed in the line of duty. Which Twin Falls Patrolman Craig Bracken must have known when he approached a Ford coupe he and his partner had stopped near the intersection of Washington Street and Fourth Avenue West on May 8, 1939.

.38-caliber bullets fired from the passenger-side window. One of them hit him in the left side, just below the heart.

The officer managed to return fire, and his partner shot and wounded the gunman, Danny Williams, and the driver, William Hale. They had just stolen the car and robbed a gas station.

Williams was collared with the help of two passers-by, but Hale managed to melt into the neighborhood. He was arrested the next day trying to hitch-hike to safety, a bandage wrapped around his head.

Bracken, who was 45 when he died and left behind a wife and three young children, had become a star in the TFPD for a bust he made 11 months before his death.

Police Chief Howard Gillette assigned Bracken to hide out in the basement of a jewelry store owned by the city's former mayor, Duncan Johnston. Gillette suspected Johnston of murdering and robbing a Salt Lake City salesman.

Bracken watched as Johnston removed a piece of the basement's concrete wall and took a folded piece of cloth from a hiding place. It contained the missing jewels, of course. Later, Bracken discovered the murder weapon, a .25 automatic Colt pistol, hidden in the basement floor.

Johnston was convicted of first-degree murder and spent the rest of his life in the Idaho State Penitentiary.

T.F. stabbing investigation continues

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

Police continue to investigate an early Saturday stabbing in downtown Twin Falls.

Staff Sgt. Terry Thueson said police responded to reports of a fight outside Woody's Bar at 1:15 a.m. to find that two men had suffered stab wounds. One of the victims had already gone to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. On Monday, Lt. Craig Stotts said in an e-mail to the Times-News that both victims had been treated and released from the hospital with puncture wounds to their torsos.

Stotts said an argument inside the bar led to an outside physical altercation. No charges had been filed in the case as of Monday afternoon, and the names of the victims were not made available. Stotts said detectives continue to review evidence and interview multiple suspects, victims and witnesses.

Man sentenced for burglary tools, resisting officers

If all's well that ends well for Twin Falls police, the same can't be said for Patrick R. VanWert Jr.

The 42-year-old Twin Falls man was sentenced in late December to serve time in Twin Falls County Jail and pay $212.50 in fines and fees for possession of burglary tools and resisting or obstructing officers.

VanWert was arrested in December after he fled from police who were looking for someone else.

He was sentenced to serve 60 days in jail and one year of probation for each misdemeanor count and given credit for time already served.

According to police, VanWert fled on foot during a traffic stop they made while attempting to locate Russell Wageman, who they later arrested for an alleged probation violation.

Alleged drunken driver pleads not guilty

A Jerome man accused of driving while impaired and causing an October crash that sent two victims to the hospital pleaded not guilty to three related charges on Monday in Jerome.

Joseph A. O'Donnell, 27, is charged with two counts of felony aggravated driving under the influence and misdemeanor failure to obey a stop sign. He allegedly struck a 2000 GMC pickup after failing to yield at the intersection of 400 South Road and Golf Course Road in southern Jerome County. Three of the GMC's occupants were injured in the crash, while O'Donnell was not.

He is scheduled for a 9 a.m. April 6 jury trial, preceded by a 9 a.m. March 28 pretrial conference. He faces up to 15 years in prison and a $5,000 fine for each aggravated DUI charge.

personal responsibility and upbeat approach.

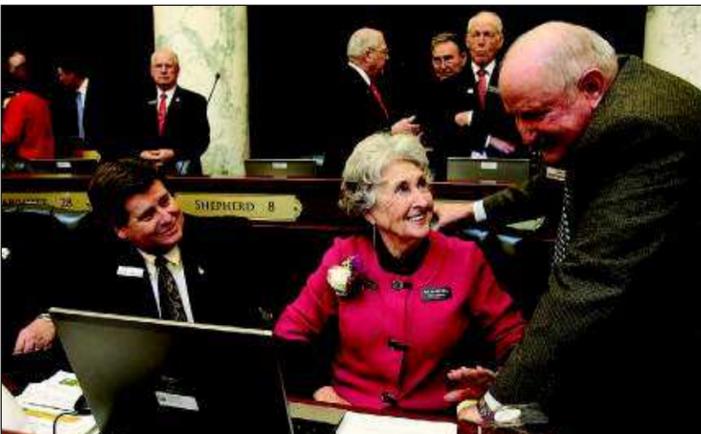

"We truly do have to get back to our roots in Idaho and get back to self-responsibility and relying on those things that got us here in the past 200 years," Wood said. "He was spot-on with that."

Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, said Otter's speech was "refreshing" with a good focus on families working together on things like personal budgets and helping their children with education. That teaches responsibility, he said.

"(Otter) recognized the challenges we face and he had some solutions," said Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson.

House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said that the governor made good use of analogies to explain the state's need for fiscal responsibility.

"Sometimes you've just got to suck it up and it's not pleasant always," Bedke said. "So I think that kind of resonated" Another underlying theme is that it won't be business as usual, Bedke said. "I think there's going to be some real changes in the way we provide Medicaid and welfare payments," he said. "I think that in order to make his budget balanced, there's got to be some changes there."

Budget

The agency most hit in terms of dollars would be the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, proposed to lose $25.2 million or 4.13 percent from this year's mark. Others would be trimmed less — a 1.72 percent cut to community colleges comes out to $413,300.

Otter would also save another $15 million by delaying expanding the grocery tax credit by one year.

The bright spot: Public K-12 schools wouldn't be cut under his proposal, though reductions the Legislature made in the last session wouldn't be restored.

Otter also called for changing the way public school teachers are paid. He said the state needs to refocus from how much is being spent to how much children are learning — basing teachers' pay on their performance, not their years on the job.

In an afternoon press conference, Otter and Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna said that a comprehensive revamp of Idaho's public education structure will be unveiled on Wednesday before a joint meeting of the House and Senate education committees.

"The way to proceed forward is to comprehensively change the way we deliver education," Luna said.

Otter relies on a patchwork of sources in his proposal to reach the $50 million deficit.

His budget assumes 3 percent revenue growth and transfers of $40.2 million from other state funds. He'd also use $33.2 million in carryover from the current fiscal year, based on revenues exceeding projections.

Otter stressed the value of family and community roles, saying the state needs to focus on finding better ways to foster local support systems.

"The solutions we seek are in our towns, our neighborhoods and around our kitchen tables," he said.

Otter said citizens, businesses and civic organizations are setting an example.

He also acknowledged that the State Tax Commission needs to improve its operations and gain public trust, saying he has talked with legislative leadership about the issue.

The commission's former chairman, Royce Chigbrow, resigned last week amid allegations that he improperly intervened in tax cases.

Additionally, former and current auditors in the commission have given sworn court testimony that well-connected individuals and companies cut secret deals that cost the state millions in lost revenues.

"While those talks progress, I look forward to working closely with all of you in finding solutions that help restore public confidence in that institution and the essential work it does with greater accountability and efficiency," Otter said.

Leon Mills sworn in as Twin Falls Co. commissioner

Light business week ahead as Mills learns ins, outs of county

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Friday was supposed to be an easy day for Leon Mills. Instead, his last day at ConAgra Foods Lamb Weston became 12 hours of putting in a temporary water line.

A weekend later and Mills swore to protect and uphold the Constitution as a county commissioner and took a peek at an audit of Twin Falls County.

"We look very well for a county," Mills said Monday, his first day in office. "The people that I'm taking over for did an excellent job."

It's a job that will have him bouncing around at least as much. His commission assignments are still to be determined, but life as a commissioner can include jumping from a Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center board meeting to meeting with the Twin Falls School District minutes later. The swearing-in ceremony, which also saw Commission Chairman George Urie and other county officials sworn in for repeat terms, filled a room in the Twin Falls County Courthouse with workers, friends and family. "I wish (Mills) all the best here," said former Commissioner Tom Mikesell, whom Mills is replacing. "It is a difficult time to be a public official."

Mikesell withdrew his bid for re-election prior to the May primaries.

The commissioners' meeting agendas are light on business in the coming days so Mills can be brought up to speed on the issues and processes of the county. Mills, who unsuccessfully ran for a commission seat in years past, said the body is "a lot bigger than I imagined."

"I'm just glad that the day has come," he said after being sworn in. "Now seems to be a good time to make a change, especially in my time in life. I just completed a 21-year career at Lamb Weston and I'm ready for a new challenge. I'm really excited, really!"

Other Magic Valley elected officials who won or retained their seats in November were also sworn in on Monday, Morley and new Cassia including new Jerome County Commissioner Roger Robert Kumau.

T.F. council discusses possible wastewater bond

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council gave the OK on Monday to start the process of acquiring a bond to pay for $7.5 million in wastewater improvement projects.

The council made no commitment for using the bond or even declared how it would pay for it; members merely voted for the city attorney to begin the months-long — and public hearing-filled — process for judicial confirmation. A judge's ruling that an expense is "ordinary and necessary" is one way for the city to incur debt; the alternative is a public vote.

Council members said figuring out recommended ways to pay for the bond will be a great project for the new Citizen Finance Committee to cut its teeth on.

"This is a perfect opportunity for them to weigh in, look at all the details, and give us some advice based on their perspective," Mayor Don Hall said prior to the 6-0 vote.

Assistant City Manager Travis Rothweiler said funding the project by tacking it onto residential and commercial water bills — an idea not even being considered at this point — would add an average of $4.14 to those bills.

The proposal, broken into five projects ranging from $118,000 to almost $2.9 million each, are necessary to keep the city from falling out of compliance with federal and state wastewater standards, according to a city staff report.

One project would replace an ultraviolet disinfection system for $2.66 million. City Manager Tom Courtney said the current system is 15 to 18 years old and first-generation; it's now hard to find parts for it, he said. If it, or any of the parts proposed to be fixed, broke down, it could put the city out of compliance, he said.

"We're trying to avoid potential violations, and this is the proactive approach," he said.

Before the vote, Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka questioned why a bond was even being pursued. Why not budget the projects in, or dip into reserves, she asked.

After explanations from city staff, Councilman David E. Johnson, who made a motion to approve the request before the council began the discussion, said it was just a motion to start the process, not decide anything.

"That's why I jumped on the motion early: we are just starting the ball rolling," he said.

City Attorney Fritz Wonderlich backed Johnson up, saying it was months before the council needs to commit to even taking the bond.

Otter's budget proposal creative — and doable

A year ago, the theme of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's recommended budget was "Things are tough all over." But the message on Monday was "Let's see if we can get through this together."

As predicted the newly reelected governor proposed whopping cuts — $25 million — in adult Medicaid services. But he also did three things many didn't expect:

Otter actually proposed raised the appropriation for public schools by $21 million after last year's $128 million cut.

He recommended delaying the increase in the grocery tax credit — it's $75 for the neediest Idahoans and $50 for everybody else — for a year, saving $15 million.

The governor suggested tapping the non-endowed portion of the Idaho Millennium Fund, a fund made up of tobacco settlement proceeds, with part of that covering a Medicaid shortfall for this year and the rest boosting next year's budget

Legislators had been expected to address a $340 million shortfall for the next budget year, but bigger-than-anticipated state revenue and a variety of other budget maneuvers helped shrink the deficit.

State agencies have also indentified nearly $78 million in savings that can be funneled back into the state's general fund to help shore up Idaho's budget during the next year, leaving a shortage of about $50 million.

Otter on Monday called for $35.5 million in cuts from state agencies, with differing amounts for each but averaging 2.2 percent.

Aside from the Medicaid cuts, which could be politically explosive, there's some serious pain in this budget. There will be no raises for state employees, and some agencies could continue furloughs.

But compared to what might have been, Otter crafted a creative — and achievable — map of the road ahead.

The Legislature should concur.

Sports superstars and taxes

If the economy has a New Year's resolution, it should be to become more like LeBron James — that is, to seek stardom and not be content with runner-up status.

Amity Shlaes

James, you might recall, jumped from the Cleveland Cavaliers, a team that chronically disappointed in state with an adverse business climate and high taxes, to the Miami Heat, a team with one championship to its name located in a state with one of the hottest growth rates and low taxes.

Now a study of a sport other than basketball offers some insight into why and where athletes relocate. Henrik Kleven, Camille Landais and Emmanuel Saez looked at movements and performance of top soccer players in 14 countries over decades, tracking successive tax regimes and salary. Tax rates, they found, matter to players, motivating them to shift locales and affecting the record of their teams.

Teasing out the relative motivating power of the tax factor has always been difficult. Maybe James broke Cleveland's heart because Florida has no income tax and Ohio's taxes weigh so heavily. But maybe James left the Cavaliers for the Heat because he knew he needed to be with Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh to become a champion. Maybe he preferred the Dade County winters.

The value in the Kleven-Landais-Saez work is that the authors take pains to isolate the tax variable. Their soccer experiment begins back in the early 1980s, when only one in 10 players played outside his home country. There were two reasons for the stay-at-home trend: a league rule limited the number of foreign players in a lineup to three, and teams had to pay a special fee to hire any out-of-contract player, making transfers prohibitively expensive.

Then in 1995 the European Court of Justice, in a finding now known as the Bosman Ruling, banned those restrictions. European soccer players became free agents. Most top players earn enough to be in the highest tax bracket of most European countries.

In 2002 Belgium introduced a preferential tax scheme to lure foreigners. In 2004 Spain introduced the so-called Beckham Law, after superstar David Beckham, one of the first to take advantage of it. The law applied only to those migrating to Spain after Jan. 1, 2004. That migrant class was eligible for a top tax rate of 24 percent, well below the 45 percent that then affected local citizens, for the five years following the move. Only those workers who hadn't been tax residents in Spain were eligible.

Beckham wasn't an isolated case. Cristiano Ronaldo of Portugal moved from Manchester United to Real Madrid in 2009, after Britain's top tax rate rose to 50 percent from 40 percent.

Players who for one reason or another weren't eligible for tax breaks moved less, providing one form of control in the experiment. Italy, which didn't offer a parallel tax lure, failed to draw the same talent as Spain. Denmark changed its tax law several times, offering breaks but limiting the period of their effect to three years. Foreign players did indeed flock to Denmark, far more than to neighboring Sweden. The players tended to stay in Denmark for the three-year period when the breaks were in force.

All this matters because the power of tax rates so often is discounted. Recently, for example, the Census Bureau came out with preliminary figures showing that, as usual, Americans were migrating in droves to low-tax states like Texas and Florida from high-tax states like Michigan and, yes, Ohio. LeBron James's new home, Florida, ranks No. 5 among states on the Tax Foundation's business climate ranking, which emphasizes taxes, while population grew 20 percent. Ohio, which ranks fourth from the bottom in the Tax Foundation survey, grew by less than 2 percent in the same period. These correlations suggest that taxes affect behavior of crowds far larger than the superstar athletes.

Yet the general tendency among policy makers is to downplay the findings. No sooner had the Census Bureau posted the numbers than the Brookings Institution countered with a memo positing that real estate and the housing bubble were the real news. These critics like to point to the exceptions: Nevada, low tax, lost people in 2009; Florida also lost population. Those points are accurate, but too much emphasis on them obscures the reality that over the long term, and most of the time, low-tax places grow faster.

The future of the Beckham Law is now in doubt because of Spain's financial straits. The evidence suggests the best move would be not to abolish such a rule but to broaden it so that the break benefits the locals. Then locals might start performing like stars. Stars can take a national economy to the next level, but only regular citizens can keep it there.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Let consumers decide Smokin' Head's fate

This letter is in regard to the article, "Obscenity letters sent after city stymied on sign," regarding the new business, The Smokin' Head.

I have several problems with the views taken by those opposing this business. America has a free enterprise marketing system. If a person wants to open a business, they have every right in the book. This isn't communist Russia, where the government dictates what one can sell and how one can sell it.

Yes, certain towns and cities have codes in place to ensure that the desired community is developed, but the businesses in question are not stepping over the bounds laid down in our codes.

Everyone is throwing a fit over this man opening his own small business. If he was outside of the legal bounds, then yes, those protesting would have a foothold. As it is now, there is no foothold to be had. He has his rights to open his business, and then it is the consumer's choice on whether or not to support him.

AUSTIN D'YAY Jerome

If it offends you, don't stop at adult business

Concerning the Smokin' Head shop in Twin Falls: It is apparently the Twin Falls City officials' jobs to take down a taxpaying, small business owner and not the real issues in Idaho such as actual crime. If they really believe it's an issue of the Smokin' Head harming other stores, it's comparable to me refusing to eat at the Outback Steakhouse because it's near the IHOP and I'm not a breakfast person.

Maturity is the name of the game and if the officials can't handle a shop of this nature, maybe they are not mature enough for their jobs which should require handling actual problems in the community. Heaven forbid the man paints his building purple. Purple! Since when has purple been deemed offensive or dangerous? If he were forced to paint his building white with calligraphic writing on his sign, it would be misleading, let alone invasive of his rights. The issue with the "Adult XXX" sign left me flabbergasted. How are people supposed to be aware of the store's content without a posted sign? The merchandise is legal, the intent is to make a living as an owner and operator, the man is going to put money back in the system to aid Idaho's economy. He sounds like an absolute menace.

Defending this man and store does not mean one condones or finds utility in his merchandise but that one is open-minded enough to let go something that does not actually concern one. In this world, we need to stop pulling over the elderly drivers, stop searching children for bombs, and stop wasting time, energy, and money to stop things that don't harm us. If it bothers you, don't shop at his business. Stop trying to regulate everything; it only leads to trouble. Don't be concerned about people being driven away from Twin Falls because of a shop of that nature; let them be driven away by the poor city government.

Massive loads would industrialize highway

If you love rural Idaho (and western Montana), please start the year with heightened awareness of the most important economic and environmental issue we have ever faced in the Pacific Northwest, which is the pending tragedy if 207 Exxon Mobil loads of massive industrial drilling equipment (600,000 lbs. each) are dragged up the federally designated Lochsa Wild River Corridor on narrow U.S. Highway 12.

The highway would be industrialized! Unresolved safety issues abound. Exxon Mobil is hell bent on rolling over your national heritage while callously ignoring the Wild River Act and the Scenic Byway legislation. They get tens of billions more and you get trashed.

They are aided and abetted by the corrupt Idaho Transportation Department and the clown Cowboy Butch and the duplicitous Montana Gov. Schweitzer who are facilitating this wanton destruction. Of utmost importance is a superb new book, "The Heart of the Monster. Why the Pacific Northwest and Northern Rockies Must Not Become an Exxon Mobil Conduit to the Alberta Tar Sands." It is available (only $15) from the Rediscovered Bookstore in Boise (208-376-4229) and Fact and Fiction bookstore in Missoula (406-721-2881).

This beautiful book with color photos is masterfully written by David James Duncan and Rick Bass. Please visit the website: www.fightinggoliath.org. Contact the Boise public interest legal firm Advocates for the West: www.AdvocatesWest.org.

Also, feel free to contact me at ScottPhi@cox.net.

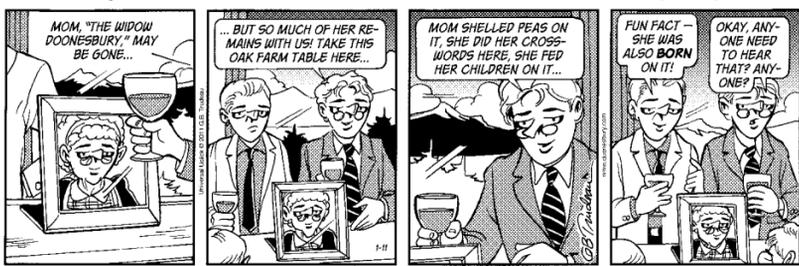

Then write some letters and scream bloody murder!

The importance of the book cannot be overstated. Will you please read it? Will you please help in this monumental battle? This is the year to stop the pending pillage and destruction by Big Oil. This Northern Rockies nightmare would be the land equivalent of the 2010 Gulf BP oil spill apocalyptic tragedy.

Dona W. Williams

BURLEY — Dona Waters Williams, an 88-year-old resident of Burley, passed away peacefully Saturday evening, Jan. 8, 2011, at the Parke View Care and Rehabilitation Center.

Dona was born July 6, 1922, in Cascade, Mont., the daughter of Clarke Arden and Stella Nancy (Call) Waters. She received her education in Pocatello and graduated from Pocatello High School. She married Carl John Williams on March 26, 1942, in Idaho Falls. Their marriage was solemnized in the Salt Lake LDS Temple on Nov. 19, 1943. Dona and Carl were a part of the Homestead Act and drew a farm on the Northside Project of Rupert. Together, they worked side-by-side and instilled in their children the necessity of hard work. They were involved in many other enterprises throughout their married life and through the Idaho Farm Bureau, Dona had served on several women's committees.

Dona was a wonderful wife, mother and grandmother. She used her excellent homemaking skills in creating a loving atmosphere in the family home. Her talents in ceramics, sewing, crocheting and oil painting were used to beautify their surroundings. She was an outstanding musician. Her voice was simply beautiful. During her younger years, she sang soprano and, in her seasoned years, became a wonderful tenor. She was a gifted conductor and directed many church choirs. As a violinist, she played in several symphonies and had served as concert mistress. While living in Burley, she was a member of the Magic Philharmonic Orchestra. She also sang for several years in the Sweet Adelines Women's Barbershop Chorus. Dona was a lifelong member of the LDS Church. She was a teacher of the youth, had served as a Relief Society president, visiting teacher and directed the singing throughout her life.

She is survived by her children, Janice Pierson of Burley, Carl John Williams II (Pamela) of Victor, Nancy Griffin (Gary) of Millville, Utah, Stephen W. Williams of Idaho Falls, Kim Waters Williams of Burley, David Walden Williams (Lynne) of Idaho Falls and Michael Shawn Williams (Shawna) of Buckeye, Ariz.; 37 grandchildren; 43 great-grandchildren; and two sisters, Lou Ann (Juan) Hansen of Monticello, Utah, and Kathleen (LaVere) Simon of Glens Ferry. Dona was preceded in death by her parents; her husband; and three younger brothers, Keith, Virgil and Darrell Waters.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 13, at the Burley LDS West Stake Center, 2420 Parke Ave., with Bishop Dan Alvey officiating. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 12, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Thursday at the church.

Mary Josephine Howell Leuze (Jo), age 79, died peacefully at home surrounded by her family Saturday, Jan. 8, 2011, after a courageous battle with cancer, and is destined to continue her eternal life with Jesus Christ, her Lord and Savior.

The daughter of Manning and Violet Howell, Jo was born in Grundy Center, Iowa, on May 27, 1931, the only birth in Grundy County that year.

Jo leaves behind her husband of 55 years, James Doyle Leuze (Jim); her sister, Jacquelyn Phillips and her family; three sons, Eric, Kurt and Kyle; and five grandchildren, Adam, Aaron, Taylor, Hana and Konrad.

Jo grew up in Iowa, met Jim in seventh grade and attended Iowa Falls High School. She won a shooting competition against the boys and represented her high school as a cheerleader and as her school's citizenship representative for the Daughters of the American Revolution. Jo then attended Grinnell College, where she graduated with a degree in education and speech therapy. Jo married her sweetheart, Jim, on Aug. 6, 1955, after his return from the Korean War. They lived in Story City and Ames, Iowa, while Jim finished college and then moved to St. Paul, Minn., where Jo gave birth to their sons Eric and Kurt. In 1963, they moved to Cadillac, Mich., where Kyle was born, and in 1969, to their current home in Twin Falls, Idaho.

Jo's sense of humor, sensitivity and boundless energy made a difference in the life of each person she met. A member of the Twin Falls Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Jo frequently assisted in church services and volunteered regularly at church events and charity activities. Jo treasured many relationships: lifelong friendships from her childhood; the personal relationships that grew out of her experiences at Head Start, where she and her co-workers were known to dance and sing; and strong bonds Jo formed with her church family through the Episcopal Cursillo, a program that emphasizes individual spiritual growth and training so that lay people may be effective Christian leaders with the goal of bringing all to Christ. Jo also enjoyed many professional accomplishments. Jo was a compassionate special education teacher in Michigan and then was education coordinator for the Head Start program in southern Idaho, where she served 31 years. One year, she received a statewide award as "Educator of the Year." Jo also served on the Idaho State Library Board. Jo enjoyed knitting, reading, cooking and laughing with her grandchildren — but she spent her life serving others. For several years, Jo and Jim delivered lunch for Meals on Wheels and served meals to the homeless with her church family. Jo also provided spiritual support to church members in the hospital, visiting them and serving them bread and wine in communion as a reminder of the love of God through Jesus Christ. When Jo learned that she had metastatic breast cancer in early 2009, she said "today is the first day of my life as well as the last, for it will never be the same." Jo rejoiced each day of her life, despite the physical pain she endured, treasuring each moment with her friends and family and trusting in the Lord's unfailing love. Based on Jo's life, which she committed to loving and serving others with joy, patience, kindness, faithfulness and gentleness, she is sure to receive the reward that every disciple of Jesus Christ seeks — the acknowledgment of the creator, who will say, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Gifts to 900 Women, P.O. Box AK, Twin Falls, ID 83303, or to the American Cancer Society in Jo's memory are encouraged. A celebration of Jo's life will be at 5 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 13, at Twin Falls Episcopal Church of the Ascension, 371 Eastland Drive N., Twin Falls. Cremation is under the direction of Serenity Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Penny Mothershead of Hansen shows off some stools she has reupholstered. 'Buy a good staple gun and don't be afraid to try things,' she says.

Upholstery can be a challenge for DIYers

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Have you ever looked at your dining room chairs and wished you could change their color or pattern to match your new decor scheme?

If you're the kind of do-it-yourselfer who likes a challenge, you probably can change those chairs — and, depending on their design, some bar stools, ottomans, upholstered headboards, motorcycle seats and cushions for patio furniture and campers. But would-be upholsterers, beware: The professionals warn that you can get over your head fast on more complicated projects.

For example, "I wouldn't tackle a wingback chair," said Penny Mothershead, a Hansen resident who does a lot of DIY. She appreciates the artistry and expertise of professional upholsterers, acknowledging the value of their work and labor. "It's really quite expensive, and rightly so."

But she also said people interested in upholstery shouldn't be afraid to take on smaller projects.

"Look at a magazine; there are so many that have fabulous, wonderful ideas. If you just look around, you'd be surprised how you can make the same thing and it'll still look like a million bucks," she said. "You can cover up a lot of stuff with a little cheap trim and a glue gun, so I'm pretty fearless."

If you're going to try a basic upholstery project, keep in mind that good tools and attention to detail will make the result look a lot better. A staple gun is practically required, and if you have access to an industrial sewing machine, use it; the heavy-duty mechanism and needles can make it through leather and thick fabric more easily and safely than your home machine.

"You don't want to have to stitch a vinyl any more than you absolutely have to," said Tamra Armstrong, owner of M & T Upholstery in Kimberly. An industrial machine places stitches farther apart, so it doesn't pierce the vinyl as much as a home machine would, giving greater strength to that material. "It's like perforating a piece of paper; it tears."

(those marked as upholstery threads are best), or all your work might tear out the first time someone sits down hard on that ottoman you spent so much time stitching with household thread. And pulling the fabric taut evenly is critical to many pieces.

"Even on the simple stuff there's a right and wrong way to do it," said Eric Lewis, owner of Eric's Custom Upholstery in Jerome. He noted differences in results achieved when attention is paid to the direction of the material, the nap, and the pattern.

Upholstery fabric can be expensive, so Mothershead recommends thinking outside the fabric store — perhaps an old leather jacket with a torn sleeve could become a seat cushion cover, or a canvas skirt from the thrift store could recover a footstool. The remainder bin at the fabric store is also good for finding material for small projects, and to help you get a sense of the weight and textures that work best.

With these less expensive options, if you make a mistake, you won't have blown dozens or hundreds of dollars. "If you waste a yard of it, you're not going to kick yourself," Lewis said.

Pay attention to how the seams come apart, he said. "See if you can figure out how it was covered, and watch when you're taking the cover off, and that will explain to (you) how the cover is supposed to go back on."

GREENER CLEANERS

Manufacturers are making more planet-friendly products, and consumers are buying them

By Mary MacVean
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Maybe 2011 is the year a clean start means returning to Grandma's scrubbing ways and getting down on hands and knees with simple baking soda and vinegar. Or maybe it means staring down that supermarket aisle of cleaning products and making better choices about the dizzying selection of powders and liquids that claim not only to clean but also to be healthy for people and the planet. Sustainable, Earth-friendly, green, renewable — what do the words tell a shopper?

"The last 24 months was a real sea change as large traditional brands are introducing greener or green versions of products. I believe that trend will continue," said Jeffrey Hollender, author of a new book, "Planet Home," and former chief executive of the cleaning products company Seventh Generation.

"On the industry side, it really is about sustainability all through how products are made, resourced, formulated, delivered to the store, recycled," said Brian Sansoni, a spokesman for the American Cleaning Institute, a trade group based in Washington.

One brand, Earth Friendly Products, has seen its sales quadruple in five years as it gets shelf space in Costco and supermarkets and no longer is relegated only to health-food stores, said Kelly Vlahakis-Hanks, company vice president and daughter of the founder.

"Eventually, everyone will go green," she said.

Clive Davies, director of a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency green products labeling program, said

Vlahakis-Hanks is right.

"You see the biggest, most astute companies — they're all positioning themselves in recognition of that," Davies said.

An early complaint about Earth-friendly products was that if they did no harm, they did no good either — that is, they didn't clean well. But consumers no longer have to sacrifice effectiveness, Sansoni said. Products have improved, but shoppers have to wade through the "green-wash," sorting out claims for nontoxic, green, planet-friendly and other attributes without clear definitions.

One strategy: Look for the EPA's Design for the Environment seal indicating the product has met the program's sustainability criteria, which include the product's effect on human health, Davies said.

In 2003, 43 products qualified for the seal. Now more than 2,000 products from 300 manufacturers qualify, including store brands,

"green" companies such as Method and Seventh Generation as well as older manufacturers such as SC Johnson and Colgate-Palmolive, Davies said. Most products don't earn the seal the first time they apply, but they can change their formulas and eventually comply, he said.

Other government and private efforts are under way to regulate product testing, ingredient disclosure and the ways companies communicate green marketing messages.

In late 2010, the California Air Resources Board adopted a rule that will mean reformulations of about 2,000 consumer products to reduce volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, to lower levels of smog-forming ozone.

"The reductions should not alter the effectiveness of the products," said Dimitri Stanich, a spokesman for the air resources board. But over three years, the changes will eliminate daily emissions of about 7 tons of ozone, which burns the nasal passages, irritates lung tissue and triggers asthma and other diseases, Stanich said.

Green cleaners can be made with plant-based oils, herbs and even vinegar, which is appearing in products such as Windex Multi-Surface Vinegar. Joey Green, author of the book "Cleaning Magic," noted that vinegar is just one of the old-fashioned pantry staples that people can use on their own. White vinegar not only cleans but also deodorizes a room if it's misted. Vanilla extract on a cotton ball placed in a saucer will do the same. Toothpaste cleans silver and can remove crayon stains on a wall, Green said.

Perhaps in reaction to frugal times, new products expected to hit the marketplace include more laundry detergents that work well in cold water and detergents that not only clean but also soften and take static out of clothes, Sansoni said.

Yellowed grass may be environmental

Akron Beacon Journal

Q: My grass turns yellow as winter approaches, starting at the edge of the lawn along the street and extending in about 6 to 8 feet. Could it be caused by road salt? The grass started yellowing this year before the salt trucks were out. It greens back up in warm weather.

A: It's hard to say what's causing the yellowing, but it's probably one or more environmental factors rather than a disease or pest problem, said Joe Rimelspach, a turfgrass specialist at Ohio State University.

He suspects there are differences between the soil at the edge of the lawn and elsewhere, or that the edge is environmentally stressed in some way. The grass there is weakened as a result, and as the weather turns cold, that grass goes dormant before the rest of the lawn.

Rimelspach said taking soil tests of both the affected and unaffected areas and comparing the results would show whether there are differences in soil chemistry. You also can check for differences in soil texture and composition, such as buried stone or debris, by using a spade to cut and lift off the sod and then digging through the soil to examine the content. Differences in heat, water and light also could figure in.

He recommended fertilizing the lawn in the fall and again in late fall. Those two applications often make a considerable difference in the health and quality of turf going into winter, he said.

Upholstery

Once the piece is apart, look at the base. Is it in good shape, or is the wood cracked, worn or coming loose? Fix any problems you see before you recover it, or your work may be for naught when it breaks.

You'll probably want to consult a book or website to go over some of the basics — Mothershead recommends eddieross.com, and she has taught College of Southern Idaho Community Education classes on furniture refinishing — but experience is the best way to learn, as each piece is unique.

"I probably don't do anything like what I was taught in (an introductory) class (at CSI), because it's easier for me to do it another way, just things you learn from trial and error," Armstrong said. She runs the shop with her husband, and she finds they have self-taught different approaches to the same upholstery issue. "I have always found that the way he does things is different from how I do it. Whatever works for you."

And if you get something taken apart and can't figure out how to get it back together right, don't feel too sheepish when you take it to an upholsterer to finish. That happens all the time.

"It's not something you can learn overnight," Lewis said. "To get a professional job, it's best to go to a professional; like the old saying is, you get what you pay for."

That's true of furniture as well as labor, he said; the inexpensive, generic furniture many people buy these days is often not cost-effective to re-cover.

"It's sad to say, they end up in the landfills, but they're not worth repairing most of the time," Lewis said. "You can still buy quality furniture, but it's more expensive. ... There's a lot of nice furniture out there, and if someone's had a piece for 15 years and it's gone through the kids, there's probably something good about it."

Of course, if you're doing it yourself, you might be willing to risk the cost of materials and your time to fix a tear or change a color scheme on an inexpensive piece. And that could be good experience under your belt when you tackle something more valuable or complicated.

It also, Lewis hopes, will give you a better appreciation for what the professionals in his field do each day. "I encourage people to try, because it gives them a reality of how much labor there is involved in what we do," he said.

Question: Why do people use baking soda to freshen up carpets? This practice has been passed down through many generations of home-makers in my family. My mom, my mom's mom, my grandmother's mom, and her mom all swear on their golden box of Arm and Hammer that this works! This seems strange. Do I have to pass this on to my daughters? ~ "Rebellious Carpet Baker"

Lori Chandler
Cleaning Center owner
734-2404

Answer: That is so funny! Actually baking soda causes several problems in your carpet. Not only are the granules sharp, which break down and tear carpet fibers, but also when baking soda becomes wet, it turns to paste! My suggestion... NILO FRESH. This is a great carpet freshener that has been approved for professionals by the Carpet and Rug Institute (CRI). Start a new tradition in your family with Nilo Fresh.

All eyes on crop report

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News Correspondent

RUPERT — Each January U.S. Department of Agriculture forecasters finalize crop production from the preceding season and changes are usually small, causing barely a ripple in the grain markets. This year could be different.

Forecasters have already dropped U.S. corn yields by a historic 11 bushels per acre since August but many private analysts are expecting to see corn yields cut again.

Even though U.S. ending stocks are down 51 percent compared to a year ago, demand for corn remains strong thanks largely to ethanol. Ethanol production is on pace to increase by 5 percent again this year, after gaining 160 percent over the last five years.

That's only part of the story, said Kelly Olson, administrator for the Idaho Barley Commission. She tracks corn and wheat prices to determine trends for both malt and feed barley prices. Although world corn production is up 1 percent, world ending stocks are down 12 percent after holding mostly steady last year. This is the third consecutive year that global corn consumption has outpaced production.

If USDA cuts U.S. corn production significantly in its next monthly world agriculture supply and demand report, to be released Wednesday, U.S. corn prices could heat up. The Chicago March 2011 corn futures contract closed Monday at $6.07 per bushel.

Traders are also watching a Southern Hemisphere corn crop closely. While La Nina often brings cooler, wetter winter weather to the Pacific Northwest, the phenomenon has the opposite effect in Argentina. Drought is a real threat to the crop which had been pegged to be up 11 percent over last year based on planted acreage. Hot, dry weather at pollination has put 10 percent of the Argentine crop in trouble and could shave 20 percent off the expected yield. Argentina is one of the world's largest corn exporters and downgrading the crop there could also send U.S. prices higher.

Even as Olsen sees bullish signs for the corn market, she is optimistic about the price outlook for both wheat and barley.

A stocks-to-use ratio of 35 percent for the U.S. wheat market is hardly considered bearish, but Olson says supply and demand trends are headed in the right direction.

"I'm more bullish for wheat than corn," she told growers during a marketing seminar last week. "Europe is almost out of milling quality wheat. Buyers will have to come to the U.S. and that will push the price for protein wheats up."

Not only did former Soviet Union countries suffer a devastating drought in 2010, but extremely dry conditions forced growers to seed less winter wheat than expected in the fall and 15 to 20 percent of what did get planted is in poor condition. In Australia, the problem is too much rain at

Idaho ag cash receipts up

Net farm income soars 55 percent over last year

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

MOSCOW — Rebounding milk prices helped Idaho agriculture post a 12 percent boost, totaling $5.78 billion, in projected cash receipts for 2010.

The figure comes from an annual report by University of Idaho agricultural economists.

The report, "The Financial Condition of Idaho Agriculture: 2010 Projections" was prepared by Ben Eborn, University of Idaho Extension educator in Teton County; Paul Patterson, Extension agricultural economist in Idaho Falls; and Garth Taylor, an economist in the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at the Moscow campus.

Taylor said Monday that Idaho agricultural cash receipts bounced back to their second-highest level ever, behind only 2008.

"Agriculture is certainly the brightest spot in the state's economy. Agriculture is the superstar," Taylor said.

The report showed that projected net farm income grew 55 percent to $1.44 billion and repaired much of the damage from a 49 percent drop in 2009.

"Farmers' paychecks increased significantly," Taylor said of the gain.

The gain reflected a 10 percent increase in total revenues that outpaced an overall 2 percent rise in total expenses.

Helping boost growth was revenue from milk, estimated to be $1.95 billion, up 39 percent from 2009.

Production was up 7 percent and prices averaged 27 percent higher than 2009.

"Milk checks accounted for over one-third of cash receipts,"

Taylor said. "Beef and other livestock accounted for over one-fifth of cash receipts; we're talking well over half of agricultural cash receipts coming directly from livestock, in one form or another."

The report indicated sales of cattle and calves contributed $1.11 billion to agricultural cash receipts, representing a 16 percent increase. That helped build overall livestock receipts to $3.19 billion, a 27 percent increase in 2010.

Although dairy producers saw bigger paychecks in 2010, they are still dealing with "a tremendous hangover" of debt taken on to keep them operating while milk prices remained well

No-till farming reduces greenhouse gas, study finds

By Rick Callahan
Associated Press writer

INDIANAPOLIS— Cropland that's left unplowed between harvests releases significantly smaller amounts of a potent greenhouse gas than conventionally plowed fields, according to a new study that suggests no-till farming can combat global warming.

Researchers said the findings could also help farmers make more efficient use of the costly nitrogen-based fertilizers used to promote plant growth. No-till farming apparently slows the breakdown of fertilizers in the soil, they said.

The three-year, federally funded, Purdue University study looked at the amount of nitrous oxide released by no-till fields compared to plowed fields. No-till farmers don't plow under their fields between crops and disrupt the soil surface as little as possible, although they do cut into it to plant seeds and inject fertilizers.

The study found no-till fields released 57 percent less nitrous oxide than chisel tilling, in which plants are plowed back into the soil after harvest, said Purdue agronomist Tony Vyn, who led the research.

"We're done. You can take it the rest of the way."

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 11, the 11th day of 2011. There are 354 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Jan. 11, 1861, Alabama became the fourth state to withdraw from the Union, with delegates voting 61-39 in favor of an Ordinance of Secession during a convention in Montgomery.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1805, the Michigan Territory was created by an act of Congress.

In 1815, Sir John A. Macdonald, the first prime minister of Canada, was born in Glasgow, Scotland.

In 1908, President Theodore Roosevelt proclaimed the Grand Canyon National Monument (it became a national park in 1919).

In 1913, the first sedan-type automobile, a Hudson, went on display at the 13th National Automobile Show in New York.

In 1935, aviator Amelia Earhart began an 18-hour trip from Honolulu to Oakland, Calif., that made her the first woman to fly solo across the Pacific Ocean.

In 1942, Japan declared war against the Netherlands, the same day that Japanese forces invaded the Dutch East Indies.

In 1943, the United States and Britain signed treaties relinquishing extraterritorial rights in China.

In 1964, U.S. Surgeon General Luther Terry issued the first government report that said smoking may be hazardous to one's health.

In 1977, France set off an international uproar by releasing Abu Daoud, a PLO official behind the massacre of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

In 1995, 52 people were killed when a Colombian airliner crashed as it was preparing to land near the Caribbean resort of Cartagena — however, a 9-year-old girl, Erika Delgado, survived.

Ten years ago: The Army acknowledged that U.S. soldiers killed an "unknown number" of South Korean refugees early in the Korean War at No Gun Ri, but said there was no evidence they were ordered to do so. President-elect George W. Bush chose Elaine Chao to be secretary of labor after Linda Chavez withdrew. The Federal Communications Commission approved the merger of America Online and Time Warner.

Five years ago: A Georgian court convicted a man of trying to assassinate President George W. Bush and Georgian President Mikhail Saakashvili with a grenade in Tbilisi on May 10, 2005, and sentenced him to life in prison. Gunmen stormed an offshore oil platform run by Royal Dutch Shell in Nigeria and seized the workers, an American, a Briton, a Bulgarian and a Honduran. (The four were freed nearly three weeks later.)

One year ago: A federal judge in San Francisco began hearing arguments in a lawsuit aimed at overturning Proposition 8, California's voter-approved ban on same-sex marriage. (Chief U.S. District Judge Vaughn R. Walker later overturned the ban; his ruling is currently under appeal.) Mark McGwire admitted to The Associated Press that he'd used steroids and human growth hormone when he broke baseball's home run record in 1998.

ANSWER: Your plan is to double two clubs to show the unbid suits plus values and follow up by raising partner to four spades. This way you show a high-card raise to game, whereas an immediate jump to four spades suggests trumps but not high cards. This may be important if the opponents save in five clubs.

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

DEAR ABBY: "The One Left Behind in Oregon" (Nov. 16) was disowned by her parents and brother after leaving her abusive husband. She asked how to forgive her father now that he is dying. You told her she didn't have to because he did not ask for forgiveness. I disagree. If she doesn't do it, SHE will be the one to suffer.

As a recovery counselor, I work with people to help them forgive those who had hurt them — whether or not the offenders deserved to be forgiven. Why? Because resentment hurts the resenter far more than it hurts the offender. Grudges are cancers in our souls. Forgiveness isn't a gift we give to others, but a gift we give ourselves.

It is especially important for "Left Behind" to see her father now as a way to prevent any regrets she may have in the future. If he's still hostile on his deathbed, that's an issue HE'LL carry to the grave.

— KATHERINE IN CHILLICOTHE, OHIO
DEAR KATHERINE: Many readers echoed your sentiments and offered a different perspective for "Left Behind" to consider. Read on:

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I had an alcoholic father who beat us, then left us never to return. I was angry for years until I realized I was hurting no one but myself. He never asked, but I forgave him so I wouldn't carry anger around for the rest of my life. I wrote him a letter and told him I forgave him for all the beatings and drunken rages. He never responded, but I felt a burden lifted off my shoulders.

"Left Behind" might consider writing her father a letter saying how hurt she has been, but letting him know she has forgiven him. She might be surprised and get a response back, but if she doesn't, at least she'll be rid of that burden.

— FORGAVE HIM IN DAPHNE, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: My family members also sided with my abusive ex-spouse. At first it hurt, but over time I came to realize that not forgiving them was hurting me more than them. I'm not saying I have the same relationship with my family now, but in order to truly move on with my life I had to clear my heart and mind. Forgiveness is not only for the offenders as much as it is for the offended. Forgive your father even if he doesn't ask for it, and see him before it's too late. If he sends you away, at least you tried.

— HAVE ALSO BEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: To forgive someone is a decision to let go of the hatred, hurt and resentment even when the other person doesn't deserve it or ask for it. When we can do this, the terrible deed loses its hold on our lives. Forgiveness is an act of strength, not weakness. It is healthy for us.

— A.Q. IN MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: I was in a similar position as "Left Behind" with my mother many years ago. Although I couldn't bear to talk to her face-to-face, I wrote a letter saying a few positive things about our relationship. She never spoke of it to me, but I learned later from another relative that she read it over and over and that it was in her hands when she died. Knowing that I made the best effort I could to say goodbye in a compassionate and loving way has lasted far longer than the hurt and anger.

— ANNA IN CORTLAND, ILL.

Cam Do! Auburn wins BCS title

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press writer

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Auburn running back Michael Dyer never heard any whistle, so he just kept running — past the tackler who thought he had him down and deep into Oregon territory.

Dyer broke stride, then took off on a once-in-a-lifetime run in the final minutes, setting up a field goal on the last play that led No. 1 Auburn over the No. 2 Ducks 22-19 in the BCS championship game Monday night.

The freshman running back upstaged Auburn's Heisman-winning quarterback Cam Newton with a 37-yard run, in which he appeared down but wasn't — his knee never hit the ground — as he rolled over Oregon defender Eddie Pleasant to put the Tigers in scoring position.

Three plays later, Dyer ran 16 yards to push the ball to the 1 and set up Wes Byrum's 19-yard field goal with no time left. It was his sixth career game-winning field goal — the one that capped off a perfect, 14-0 season, brought the title back to Auburn for the first time since 1957 and left the Southeastern Conference on top for the fifth straight year.

"Fifty-three years, baby," coach Gene Chizik said to the cheering crowd. "This is for you. War Eagle!"

A classic sequence to close out a wild finish — five crazy minutes of football that made up for the first 55, which were more of a bruising battle than the offensive masterpiece everyone had predicted.

The craziness began when Casey Matthews, son of the former NFL linebacker Clay, knocked the ball from Newton's hands while he was trying to ice a 19-11 lead.

Oregon's offense, shut down by Nick Fairley and Company for most of the night, moved 45 yards over the next 2:17 and Darron Thomas threw a shovel pass to LaMichael James for a touchdown. Thomas hit Jeff Maehl for the tying 2-point conversion with 2:33 left and the game was down to one possession.

SIBLING RIVALRY

Baker siblings suit up for different schools

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Every morning, David and Mindy Baker look at the schedule to find out which jacket to wear that day.

Will it be the green and white one, or the orange and black?

That's because two of the Baker children are currently standout varsity basketball players — but at different schools.

Basketball season is a busy time in the Baker house. As parents of seven — a true Baker's half dozen — David and Mindy find themselves cheering in the stands nearly every night of the week. What's more, seventh-grader Jordan Baker recently made the basketball team at Burley Junior High, and fifth-grader Benjamin Baker is in Junior Jazz.

"It's a lot of work, it's crazy, but it's a lot of fun," Mindy Baker said.

After attending Burley his freshman year, Seth decided to transfer to Declo, where he saw a better fit for him socially, academically and athletically.

"I made some friends out at Declo and I personally like the smaller schools," Seth said. "I don't have anything against Burley, I still come over and watch their games. I just saw the better opportunity for me as a person."

Seth became the black (and orange) sheep of the family, as the rest of his siblings have attended Burley, including older brother Matt, who won a pair of state basketball championships with the Bobcats in 2007 and 2008.

"It was tough at first, trying to decide if (transferring) was the right thing. But once I got out there I knew it was the right decision," Seth said.

Declo head basketball coach Dee Lewis isn't complaining.

"When I got the call the summer before (Seth's sophomore year) that he was thinking about it, it was good for us," Lewis said. "He brings a toughness to our team. He loves basketball and he really works at it."

Seth is versatile with his size and athleticism, playing in the post while also contributing in the Hornets' up-tempo style. He leads Declo in scoring with 16 points per game and grabs 6.1 rebounds per night. He dropped a career-high 27 points on Valley last Friday.

Meanwhile, Chelsee is coming into her own at Burley, where she's averaging 7.9 points and 6.5 rebounds as a freshman varsity starter. Last Thursday, her offensive rebound and putback with 10 seconds to go was the difference in the Bobcats' one-point win over Canyon Ridge.

"It's kind of been an eye-opener," Chelsee said of playing varsity. "The game's a lot quicker, that's the biggest difference."

CRHS tabs Slotten to be new football coach

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

For its first head football coach, Canyon Ridge High School ventured to Shelton, Wash. For their second, the Riverhawks simply had to look across Blue Lakes Boulevard.

Twin Falls defensive coordinator Dave Slotten was officially hired Monday to step across to the red half of Twin Falls and establish Canyon Ridge as a competitive entity in the Great Basin Conference.

"I've been head wrestling coach (in the past), been a head baseball coach and I've wanted to be a head football coach," Slotten said Monday evening after his hiring had been finalized. "This is the opportunity that knocked and I'm really excited about it."

Canyon Ridge's search committee recommended Slotten to the Twin Falls School District board of trustees, which stamped its approval in Monday's board meeting. District superintendent Wiley Dobbs and board vice chairman Lori Ward confirmed him as the hire to the Times-News.

Canyon Ridge is expected to issue a statement today regarding the hiring.

Slotten replaces Bill Hicks, who resigned in November to focus on his assistant principal duties at the school. Hicks was the school's first football coach and led the program for two seasons.

Slotten, a Twin Falls High graduate, served as the Bruins' defensive coordinator for the past four seasons and also had a couple other seasons at the helm of the defense during his 15-year run with Twin Falls.

During his latest stint, Slotten led a defense that helped the Bruins improve from a 0-9 record to back-to-back playoff appearances and a Great Basin Conference championship in 2009. The Twin Falls' defense allowed 17.4 points per game in 2010.

"Dave will do a good job. He's wanted to be a head coach for a long, long time. We're excited for him," said

CRHS makes great hire for all the right reasons

It's a little less than two hours into Dave Slotten's official tenure as Canyon Ridge High School football coach, and he's already gushing about things that he's got planned, projects to work on, ways to build up the red half of Twin Falls into a respectable, competitive program.

"That's kind of how I do things," he said, referencing his eagerness to jump in at the deep end without a second thought.

This end is pretty deep, but Slotten's fully aware of the situation into which he's just leapt.

Having closed its second season in October, Canyon Ridge is still a fledgling program. Bill Hicks came to get it started, to get the primary mechanisms in place and turn it over to someone with more time and energy to devote to building it from the ground up — in addition to head coach and athletic director, the two positions

Sticking with the program: Petersen not leaving Boise State

By Jason Chatraw
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — After four days of swirling rumors regarding his coaching destination for the 2011 season, Boise State head coach Chris Petersen put them to rest Monday with the announcement that he's sticking with the Broncos.

At an impromptu press conference with Boise State athletics director Gene Bleymaier, Petersen confirmed that Stanford talked with him about its opening in a phone conversation — and that he never received an offer.

"Well, I think that's a very unique and special place," Petersen said of Stanford. "I think most people know that I think it would be something to have a conversation about, but that's about as far as it went."

Stanford's head coaching position opened up late last week when Jim Harbaugh announced he was leaving the Cardinal to coach the 49ers in the NFL.

While Stanford brass made it known it wanted to interview some of its top remaining assistants, Petersen was the highest profile coach outside the program at the center of wild speculation regarding who might land the job.

Rumors grew more intense while Petersen traveled from Hawaii to Northern California in the Sacramento area for recruiting visits late last week. And Petersen didn't miss an opportunity to take a dig at speculating media members.

"I had to chuckle because I was in Hawaii and had supposedly been in negotiations with Stanford for days, but it wasn't that," Petersen said.

Petersen also took the opportunity to reaffirm his commitment to the program that he has helped guide to near unprecedented heights in the national picture.

"(My decision to stay) was about Boise State being a great place that we really love," Petersen said. "We've said this many times that this is a tough job. ... We're trying to figure out how to like doing more the job that we do."

Apparently for Petersen, doing a job he loves means being in a city that has taken

Rockets hold on to beat Celtics

BOSTON — Aaron Brooks scored 24 points, hitting a pair of free throws with 18 seconds left after Boston cut a 12-point deficit to four and the Houston Rockets held on for a 108-102 victory over the Celtics on Monday night.

The Rockets snapped a five-game losing streak despite playing without leading scorer Kevin Martin.

Kyle Lowry had 17 with eight assists, Luis Scola scored 12 with nine rebounds and Jordan Hill had 12 points and eight rebounds for the Rockets.

Ray Allen scored 19 for Boston, Marquis Daniels had season highs of 19 points and seven rebounds and Rajon Rondo had 12 assists. The Celtics have lost two straight, but they hope that Kevin Garnett will be able to CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Stephen Jackson scored 27 points and the Charlotte Bobcats stayed hot under new coach Paul Silas with a 96-82 victory over the listless Memphis Grizzlies on Monday night in a game played in a nearly empty arena because of a snow-storm.

A crowd of about 1,000 fans braved the treacherous roads that shut down much of the city to watch the Bobcats move to 5-2 since Larry Brown was fired. D.J. Augustin added 18 points and nine assists and Matt Carroll scored 12 points for Charlotte, which was never threatened.

Zach Randolph had 15 points and 15 rebounds for the Grizzlies, who lost their second straight thanks to terrible shooting. Memphis missed 33 of its first 42 shots in falling behind by 16 points in the second quarter.

BULLS 95, PISTONS 82

CHICAGO — Derrick Rose scored 29 points and Carlos Boozer added 27 points and 11 rebounds to lead the Chicago Bulls to a 95-82 win over the Detroit Pistons on Monday night.

Luol Deng added 17 points and eight rebounds for the Bulls, who have won seven straight home games.

Detroit has lost five straight on the road and have only won one once away from Auburn Hills in 14 games.

Tayshaun Prince led Detroit with 15 points and Austin Daye had 14.

MV Christian's games canceled

Times News

District IV basketball commissioner Sean Standley said league athletic directors decided Monday to cancel all Magic Valley Christian School's games this season.

MVCS, which closed its doors Jan. 3, had 10 remaining games on its schedule, including Northside Conference South Division games against Castleford, Lighthouse Christian and Murtaugh. If put down as forfeits, the games would have counted against each school's season allotment of 20 games.

What worked out smoothly for the remaining Northside Conference South Division schools was that MVCS had not played a conference game yet, essentially leaving every school with the same conference record outside of Castleford and Lighthouse Christian, which have already played each other. "Everybody was pretty much in the same situation and recording the games as canceled was the best option," said Lighthouse Christian Athletic Director John van Vliet. "Now we're going to try and schedule new games which is pretty difficult this late in the season."

After looking at the remaining games on MVCS' schedule, Lighthouse Christian is trying to pin down dates with Richfield. Castleford athletic director Laurie Howard said they are trying to schedule games against Sho-Ban and Glenns Ferry.

"It's definitely tough this late in the season to schedule games, so we'll see if we can get it done playing one at home and one away," Howard said.

Another ramification of MVCS' closure was that the Conquerors were in line to host the Class 2A golf tournament this spring, so that burden now falls on Declo which is trying to coordinate where it will play the tournament, according to Declo Athletic Director Jay Darrington.

Hire

he gave up, Hicks is also an assistant principal at Canyon Ridge.

The Riverhawks' search committee believes Slotten is that man. On first glance they've chosen wisely.

Slotten is a local lifer, having graduated from Twin Falls High School, not an out-of-town coach with no local ties that could be here one season and gone the next (It should be noted Canyon Ridge did a good job reaching out to Hicks, who wanted to come back to this area after a few years in Washington state).

Being rooted to the area, combined with the fact that he helped lead the Bruins' football renaissance over the last two seasons, gives Slotten instant credibility on the local level.

He's also been chomping at the bit to get a head coaching job for the last three years (at least). Now that he's got his shot, he doesn't intend on anything other than building his program from the youth ranks up, making sure that everything is in good standing long after he's hung up the whistle.

This is where Canyon Ridge got it right: Slotten's long-term vision, if all goes according to plan, will have the Riverhawks — and the Bruins — on firm footing for years to come.

Slotten and Twin Falls coach Allyn Reynolds are good friends that spent the better part of two decades working together on the Bruins' staff. While they'll be eager to match wits every season and pose as foes for a couple of hours on one Friday night a year, they're both into bigger things than always trying to one-up the rival school.

"We've met now twice (since Slotten was offered the Canyon Ridge job) and talked about what we want to do with the youth football program, and I think that's where it'll be good with Twin Falls as a whole," Reynolds said. "It's not one of these things where we want to put Twin Falls kids against Canyon Ridge kids early, we just want to play football and worry about that stuff when they get older."

The ultimate goal for both men is to make Twin Falls prep football, whether played in red or blue jerseys, something to be reckoned with around the state for years to come.

With these two taking charge with a vested interest in football players in high school as much as Grid Kids, there's no reason to think reaching across town won't be a rousing success for both schools.

And that possession will be remembered for one incredible play.

Dyer took the handoff from Newton and ran off right tackle for what looked like a 60-7-yard gain.

Nothing routine about this one, though. He never heard a whistle, wasn't sure his knee hit the ground, so he popped up and kept going. Almost everyone on the field had stopped playing, but the referee never blew the play dead. Dyer made it to the Oregon 23. An official's review ensued and the replay showed that, indeed, his knee had never touched the turf. "I was going out there, trying to make a play. I just kept my feet moving," he said.

The freshman finished with 143 yards and was named Offensive Player of the Game — no small feat considering he had the Heisman Trophy winner, Newton, playing well on the same offense.

to him as quickly as he has taken to it.

"I've been saying this all along that this is a great place," Petersen said. "We've done some awesome things here with this football program and the athletic program in the last five to 10 years — and I think it's going to continue in that direction."

"It's the same thing that we talk to our recruits about and it's going to get better. We're all on the same page and we know what we need to do to continue progressing. I feel very confident about that."

Part of what gives Petersen so much confidence is the fact that he has been able to retain a cadre of quality assistants, which included the luring back of two top-notch assistants in Brent Pease and Robert Prince.

Pease, who was Boise State's receivers coach for the past five years, had left two weeks ago for Indiana to become the offensive coordinator before returning

Monday to be announced as Bryan Harsin's replacement. Harsin, who was the Broncos' offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach last season, left to become the co-offensive coordinator at Texas last week.

Prince, who coached receivers and was the pass game coordinator at Boise State from 2001-03 before leaving for the NFL, returns to be the receivers coach and the pass game coordinator.

Siblings

Burley coach Roger Caresia put Chelsee with the varsity team during summer ball and was quickly impressed with her attitude and confidence.

"We realized then that Chelsee can handle this," Caresia said. "We brought her up, gave her an opportunity and right away she had no problem mentally or physically. The older girls have accepted her because she's done it with her play — she plays hard, and that's how you earn the respect of the upper-classmen."

Chelsee's maturity and fearlessness come from years of battles in the Baker driveway.

"When Chelsee started playing ball she would always come in crying because she was playing against Matthew, Seth and Adam," said David Baker. "They'd beat her up, they didn't care that she was a girl and was younger — if you come out to play, you better come to play ... As she got older, occasionally Seth would come into the house all upset over something Chelsee did on the court."

Seth and Chelsee's relationship is typical for teenage siblings.

"He picks on me a lot, but he says it makes me tough," Chelsee said.

"She's just a girl. She spends too much time in front of the mirror," Seth said.

But dig a little deeper, and their true feelings for one another come out.

"He's way good and I like watching him play. He works really hard," Chelsee said. "He's really calm. He doesn't get mad about stupid things. He's just chill."

Said Seth: "I think she's really good, she plays up a long ways. That eighth grade to varsity jump is big. I've seen it destroy girls, but she hasn't been like that. She's tried hard to make the adjustment. She's hard-working and humble."

Shortly after Seth made that statement, Chelsee proved how humble she is. Using a women's ball, little sister defeated big brother in a game of H.O.R.S.E.

Seth won Rock-Paper-Scissors to decide who went first, but it was all downhill from there. Chelsee was lights-out, draining everything from over-the-head shots to NBA-depth 3-pointers.

"I wasn't able to execute," Seth said. "Her game plan overpowered mine. Next time we'll play with a men's ball."

After her victory, Chelsee didn't boast. Probably because she knew there was a rematch waiting for her in the driveway when she got home.

Twin Falls coach Allyn Reynolds. "You lose a good guy but you've got a chance to get a good guy. It'll be a good deal for Canyon Ridge."

Slotten will finish the wrestling season in the Twin Falls corner, assisting Said Dabestani, which he has done for some time.

Asked if it will be strange to face his alma mater from the opposite sideline in football next season, Slotten didn't hedge.

"I bleed blue, but if you're lined up against someone it doesn't matter what color the jersey is, you have one goal: to kick his tail," Slotten said. "Hopefully we meet in Week 8, and hopefully it's a big deal."

Said Reynolds: "We're good friends but for those two hours, we're certainly going to be adversaries."
