Order stirs debate over BLM inventories

Otter criticizes federal land policy

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

A recent federal land policy change is being treated as a power grab by some and a return to mandated management by others.

On Dec. 22, U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar signed Order 3310, directing the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to regularly conduct wilderness resource inventories and give consideration to lands with wilderness characteristics when making land-use planning and project decisions.

In the three weeks since the announcement, protests have begun to dribble in, including Tuesday's letter of opposition to Salazar from Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

Otter claimed the order directs the BLM to "treat much of the Idaho acreage under its control as

'de facto wilderness.'"

"Without any state or public input, the Interior Department has circumvented the sovereignty of states and the will of the public by shifting from the normal planning processes of the Federal Lands Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA) to one that places significant and sweeping authority in the hands of unelected federal bureaucrats," Otter wrote.

BLM managers point out that everything still has to go through the public comment process.

"I think people see the title (of the order) and think, 'Oh my gosh, BLM is going to be declaring everything as wilderness,'" said BLM spokeswoman Jessica Gardetto. "But all public land actions still go through public comment."

BLM Deputy State Director Cheryl Zwayne said the policy is still in flux. BLM managers were given a 30-day internal comment period and those comments will be used to produce the final guidance within 60 days.

"It's my understanding that we'd start looking at lands as part of the (Resource Management Plan) process, and for those areas where projects are proposed, we could amend current RMPs," Zwayne said. "There's not going to be a large instantaneous designation of wild lands."

CSI teams with elementary schools to bring lab work to life

JEROME — The white lab coat and goggles worn by Rosa Davila were a far cry from a magician's cape and top hat. Still, students watched in rapt attention as her liquid experiments changed color — as if by magic.

Davila, a College of Southern Idaho chemistry professor, carefully mixed different chemicals and waved her hand above them. Yellow, dark blue, light blue, clear — the colors changed each time her hand neared the glass container.

It was her way of showing students at Summit Elementary School on Thursday that science can be exciting. It takes patience, she said, and it's best to prepare in advance for science experiments.

Science Discovery Day is a collaborative effort between CSI's science department and local elementary schools to bring science to life and prepare young students for upcoming science fairs. This was the first year Summit participated, while Perrine Elementary School in Twin Falls will participate for the second year on Wednesday.

Bill Ebener, CSI biology professor and event coordinator,

Brandon Wright reacts as he watches an experiment Thursday at Summit Elementary School in Jerome.

said the day is designed to get students interested in experimental science rather than descriptive science — a move from making model volcanoes for science fairs to understanding the scientific method and how it applies to real life.

Bonuses would be awarded school-wide

Collaboration seen as important part of Luna plan

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

There is no "I" in "team" and when it comes to Idaho's public school teachers, collaboration will be rewarded.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's plan to overhaul Idaho's education system includes an incentive-based formula to reward high-achieving teachers. While all educators would be paid based on a scale that starts at $30,000 for new teachers, each would be able to earn bonuses of up to $8,000 by tackling hard-to-fill positions, accepting leadership roles and by fostering student achievement.

In a Thursday phone interview with the Times-News, Luna clarified that student achievement would be measured by school, not by teacher.

"We do not go down to the classroom level," he said, adding that instructional teamwork and collaboration are critical.

Essentially, that means that if a school's student body reaches set goals of a yet-to-be-determined growth measurement, all its teachers would be rewarded equally. Luna said the system recognizes that everyone plays a role in student growth, from drama and physical education teachers to those in math and English.

Jerome School District Superintendent Dale Layne said he greatly favors measuring such achievement by school rather than by individual teacher.

"We really promote teachers working together," Layne said. "I'm in favor of it if we keep it school-wide."

Layne said many of his district's teachers relaxed when they learned that student growth would be based upon school-wide success.

Unknown fluid snarls traffic along Twin Falls' Pole Line Road

Emergency response personnel in hazmat suits clean up a minor chemical spill Thursday at the corner of Pole Line Road and Bridgeview Boulevard in Twin Falls.

A small fluid spill closed a busy Twin Falls intersection for about two hours Thursday.

The Twin Falls Fire Department was one of multiple agencies that responded to the spill at noon Thursday at the intersection of Pole Line Road and Bridgeview Boulevard.

Battalion Chief Brian Cunningham said several motorists reported a container of fluid blocking the eastbound lane of Pole Line. No witnesses reported seeing the vehicle that dropped it. Cunningham said the container was a 2-gallon weed sprayer containing an unknown fluid that had a vapor cloud coming off it, noticeable even in the rain.

All roads leading to the intersection were closed, except the west-most westbound lane of Pole Line. Cunningham called in a hazardous materials response team from Jerome.

"Because it was an unknown fluid, we took all the precautions," Cunningham said.

Two team members donned white chemical suits with respirators and collected the container while an ambulance and Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security vehicles stood by.

The samples were tested for an RMP for the Jarbidge area of southwest Idaho, which is still in the public comment period for its initial draft. BLM Jarbidge Field Office Manager Rick Vander Voet said the order won't change the plan's methodology. But since he manages some lands with wilderness characteristics, the order may influence the final decision on management alternatives.

The guidance has been a long time coming but isn't new. Prior to 2003, the FLPMA established the BLM as a multiple-use agency that "where appropriate, will preserve and protect certain public lands in their natural condition." As part of its multiple-use directive, the BLM was to regularly inventory its lands for all uses.

In 2003, former Utah

Gov. Mike Leavitt sued then-Interior Secretary Gale Norton over BLM land inventories. As part of the settlement, the Bush administration declared federal land would not be given wilderness protection unless designated by Congress.

Some claim Salazar's order is an end-run around the Bush policy. Others say guidance for preservation of natural value fills the gap that's been missing for BLM managers since 2003, and that the state by definition isn't sovereign over federal land.

"This is just another use on the spectrum we manage," Zwayne said.

"Under the Norton settlement, the BLM was directed to ignore public feedback that related to wildland protection," said John Robison, public lands director for the Idaho Conservation League.

"With these guidelines, the public actually gets its voice back."

ted to the U of I law school, and after spending a summer at the University of Colorado earned a law degree there in 1940. She was admitted to the Idaho Bar on July 27, 1940.

At the time there were fewer than a half-dozen women attorneys practicing in Idaho.

Schmitt began her legal career as a prosecutor in Rexburg, and was successful, among other things, in sending "three burglars to prison." After eight months she moved to Boise to be a law clerk for Idaho Supreme Court Justice Raymond Givens — the first woman ever to clerk for a Supreme Court justice.

Next, Schmitt moved to Canyon County and worked as an associate in the firm of Dunlap & Dunlap. Her boss, former Idaho Supreme Court Justice S. Ben Dunlap, allayed any doubts about Schmitt's legal ability in an article announcing her joining the firm: "She can handle lots of cases I don't have time to do. In fact, I don't know what I'd do without her."

Later, she opened her own law office in Nampa. Schmitt practiced law for 11 years in Nampa and Caldwell, serving as Canyon County deputy prosecutor for 5 1/2 years.

In 1956, at age 42, Schmitt went back home to Gooding, but not as a practicing attorney. She worked as a court reporter for Judge D.H. Sutphen and Judge Charles Scoggin for 18 years, then opened a law practice with Scoggin.

Schmitt died in Twin Falls in 1984 at age 70.

Filer board divvies up remaining bond funds

By John E. Swayze

Times-News correspondent

FILER — The remaining slice of Filer School District's $17 million construction bond will be set aside for the district's future expansion needs.

Filer School Board members agreed Wednesday to put the $400,000 left after building the Filer Intermediate School and other projects toward acquiring additional land. Developing the details of how that process should move forward will be part of next month's public board meeting.

"This was part of the bond proposal we brought to the public when we started," Board Chairman Aaron Williams said. "I'd feel more comfortable with this, and I think the taxpayers would agree this is something we need to do."

In other business, $10,700 in construction bond money was earmarked to purchase of sound panels to be installed on the north and south walls of the intermediate school gymnasium.

"If you go into that room and just whistle, it's a count of four to five (seconds) before it's gone," said intermediate school Principal Matt Mahannah. "I know it sounds like an exaggeration, but fill that room with kids — the noise in there gets jet engine loud."

Board members also approved a $4,233 funding request for a scoreboard at the new Filer High School junior varsity softball field.

"Everybody needs to know that, with the exception of what we've approved here tonight, the money cow has officially gone dry," board member Shirley Gailey said.

Beginning in February, the scheduled time for public school board meetings held on the second Wednesday of each month will change from 7 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

John E. Swayze may be reached at swayzef@aol.com or 326-7212.

Science

"Understanding science is crucial for us and this is the place where they can understand science and how it is applicable to their lives," said Ebener, who has worked with school districts for the past couple of years to promote more science in classrooms.

About 50 students filled the elementary school's gym and rotated to a station in each corner before gathering in the middle to watch the "magic of chemistry," as Davila called it. Each station reviewed the scientific method and asked students to come up with a hypothesis. There were estimates on how much trash was accumulated at breakfast time, a jug of oil and water to show density and replicate a lava lamp, and other simple experiments used to pique students' curiosity.

Fifth-grader Abbey Andersen said science is her second-favorite class and she would like to one day have a career in the science field.

"I think it's cool how a bunch of chemicals and acids make the liquids change colors," she said. In the upcoming science fair she plans to do an experiment to find out how much bacteria lives in orange juice.

"We want to keep the joy in it," said Megan Jacobson, CSI organic chemistry professor. "In order to do good science you have to think. We need to create people who think instead of memorizing and repeating. It's the central place where all the subjects meet."

Katie Cutler, school gifted and talented program coordinator, said science is becoming increasingly important.

"We are really kicking it up and have all different activities and ways to get into the classroom," Cutler said.

Firefighters respond to Heyburn ammonia leak

By Laurie Welch

Times-News writer

HEYBURN — An ammonia leak at a Heyburn business Wednesday posed a slight inhalation hazard to residents until firefighters closed it off.

No one was injured during the incident, which caused a scurry of activity at the evening's Heyburn City Council meeting.

Heyburn City Superintendent Scott Spevak and Police Chief Dan Bristol both left the council meeting after being notified of an ammonia smell coming from Beef Tech at 800 J St.

Beef Tech harvests blood from newborn calves, which would otherwise be euthanized at birth. The components of the blood are used to produce vaccines or for other medical purposes and research.

Minidoka County Fire Protection District Chief Mike Brown said a crew of 10 firefighters from the Heyburn Fire Station responded to the scene at about 7 p.m. after receiving complaints of the smell from area residents.

Brown said the ammonia was emanating from a release valve on a refrigeration unit, due to an excessive build-up of pressure.

"There was nobody in the area, but it was a toxic environment right around the building," he said.

He said no one was inside the building at the time of the incident.

Firefighters in full protective gear entered the building and shut down the refrigeration system.

pH and came out extremely basic rather than acidic. The team reduced the pH of the samples to neutral, then began trying to categorize the material on the scene.

Meanwhile, the team spread an absorbent material on the road, between where the container landed and the curb, to collect the spill. Traffic was restored by 2 p.m.

Cunningham said Thursday's rain didn't complicate the cleanup.

"Even coming from Jerome, the response was quick," he said. "It could have been worse later with the weather."

The exact identity of the chemical spilled remained undetermined Thursday night.

Heyburn pursues infrastructure grants

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — Heyburn officials moved three projects to improve city infrastructure forward on Wednesday.

The Heyburn City Council unanimously voted to pursue a grant proposal through the Local Highway Technical Assistance Council and the state to continue the city's 21st Street upgrade. The second phase would add to the now mile-long improvement project expected to receive funding in 2013.

The first phase runs from 500 West Road to 600 West Road, while the second phase would continue toward U.S. Highway 30, stopping just short of the railroad tracks, said Keller Associates Inc. Engineer Donn Carnahan.

The second phase is expected to cost $2.74 million with $1.6 million actually going to construction. Heyburn would be required to supply a grant match of $152,232.

If the funding is approved, the second phase won't actually be built for about five years, said Brandon Keller, also with Keller Associates.

The second phase is not tied to the first phase, which has already had funding approved, he said.

Wednesday's vote didn't obligate the city to anything, but just set the five-year process in motion.

Also Wednesday, the council directed city staff to apply for an Idaho Department of Environmental Quality grant for a water and wastewater facility planning study.

The study is needed to evaluate what upgrades might be needed to the city's wastewater collection system.

City officials completed work on a $6.2 million upgrade to Heyburn's wastewater treatment plant in 2009, and are now eyeing the 50- to 60-year-old wastewater collection system.

"Some of the concrete pipes have collapsed and some of the lift stations are getting old," Keller said.

City Superintendent Scott Spevak said the city has 36 lift stations, six of which have already been upgraded.

"We've been trying to do one a year," Spevak said.

Keller said the $44,000 facility planning study will require a $22,000 match from the city.

Council members also unanimously approved two contracts putting in place final pieces of the city's new urban renewal agency.

One contract outlined the first assignment for Harlan Mann, who was chosen to help lead the agency. Mann is a community development consultant out of Boise.

Mann will develop an urban renewal eligibility report for not more than $3,000.

The second contract hired attorney Ryan Armbruster of Boise law firm Elam and Burke. Armbruster will be paid $185 per hour and $160 per hour for his associate's service.

Heyburn City Attorney Steven Tuft said part of the agency's responsibilities is to repay the city the money it expends establishing itself. It could take 10 years or more for that to happen.

Laurie Welch may be reached at lwelch@magicvalley.com or at 677-5025.

Luna, IEA at odds over student-teacher ratio

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho's teachers union Thursday questioned the state schools chief's portrayal of student-teacher ratios as debate about overhauling public education continued.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna wants to increase the state's average number of students per teacher from 18.2 to 19.8 and put the money saved into the core initiatives of his technology-heavy "Students Come First" plan.

Idaho's student-teacher ratio would increase through a gradual elimination of about 770 teaching jobs through attrition and a two-year uptick of nearly two students per teacher in grades four through 12. The student-teacher ratio in kindergarten through the third grade would remain unchanged.

The question now is what would be gained and lost by increasing that mark.

Like many statistics, there are multiple ways to look at the proposed change.

First, there's a difference between student-teacher ratios and average classroom sizes. Many teachers lead more than one classroom. That's something the Idaho Education Association, the state teachers' union, is quick to point out.

"The reality is that there are many teachers out there who are working with a whole lot more students than that (18.2-student mark), so it sounds very simplistic to say, 'Just add two more kids,'" said IEA President Sherri Wood.

She added: "It's about how many kids can we educate and giving them the needed attention in order for them to be successful in the classroom. It just baffles me when I hear policy makers say there's no research. Obviously they haven't spent time in a classroom with 35 students when you're attempting to teach them something"

In a Thursday phone interview with the Times-News, Luna said there's no evidence to suggest that larger class sizes hurt student performance.

"There is no credible study that decreasing class size has a positive effect on student achievement or increasing class size has a negative effect," Luna said, adding that the most important factor is the quality of teachers and principals.

Luna said he's "been surprised at the number of very positive e-mails from teachers" he's received about his proposal and drew a distinction between unions and the educators they represent.

"There's a huge difference between union leaders and classroom teachers," he said. "I think it's in their (union leaders') DNA to oppose anything we propose."

Idaho already has the seventh-highest student-teacher ratio in the nation, according to a National Center for Education Statistics report based on 2008-09 data. The six states above it are Arizona, California, Nevada, Utah, Oregon and Washington.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he likes that the ratio for the lower grades would be untouched because that period is crucial for learning basic skills.

"I love the idea of helping all the other teachers get back on the salary schedule they're supposed to be on," said Greg Lowe, superintendent of Wendell School District. "But how does that affect our district as a whole with having less teachers and higher class sizes? ... I'd have to look at that and see how that would affect us"

Officials may boost moose hunting permits

COEUR D'ALENE, (AP) — Idaho Fish and Game officials are considering offering 23 more moose hunting permits next fall in areas east and west of Coeur d'Alene due to more complaints about the animals searching suburban developments for food, a newspaper said Thursday.

The proposed change would redistribute hunters to areas with the highest moose densities, wildlife manager Jim Hayden told The Spokesman-Review.

The agency is proposing 26 fewer moose permits for the Priest Lake Basin and Purcell Mountains, where wolf packs will thin the number of moose, he said.

"People seem to like the moose the first two to three days after it shows up in their yard," said Phil Cooper, wildlife education coordinator for Idaho Fish and Game. "But when the moose starts making a noticeable dent in their shrubs, they call us."

Moose are trophy animals with permits sold through a lottery system.

Two decades ago, moose sightings were rare, but hunting restrictions have helped grow the population. Moose densities in the Idaho Panhandle range up to 1.5 moose per square mile, historically high for the area.

Shiras moose are the subspecies found in the inland Northwest. They can weigh up to 1,100 pounds.

While moose tend to wander, one that remains in an area forces wildlife officials to make a decision.

"It's a conundrum," Hayden said. "We don't want to leave an aggressive moose in a highly populated area."

Woman injured in rollover near Filer

A Washington woman was seriously injured in a single-vehicle accident early Thursday near Filer.

Rebecca Evart, 34, of Spokane, Wash., was traveling northbound on U.S. Highway 93 in a Cadillac SRX when, for unknown reasons, she lost control of her vehicle, according to an Idaho State Police release. Evart's vehicle drifted across the southbound lanes of the Twin Falls Alternate Route, and rolled several times as Evart was partially ejected, despite wearing a seat belt.

Evart was taken by air ambulance to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise with serious injuries. She was listed in critical condition Thursday evening.

The crash remains under ISP investigation. Troopers were assisted at the scene by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office and emergency responders.

Idaho Education Association President Sherri Wood said if Luna's payment plan rolls as presented, it should create school collaboration.

"I'm OK with it. I think it will be really interesting to see how it rolls out," she said. "It's going to be a lot of work."

Wood said that under the plan, high-achieving teachers will assist their peers "just as they do now" to achieve school-wide goals.

She doesn't believe schools that fail to meet growth goals will face recruitment issues due to teachers favoring schools that meet their goals and earn performance-based bonuses.

Wiley Dobbs, Twin Falls School District superintendent, said such concerns are worth examining, but take a backseat to the plan's focus on stimulating student achievement.

"I think it's something to keep our eyes on but whenever you implement a new plan, it is imperative to try it and then pull back and analyze it," he said. "It absolutely has to be school-wide for teachers to work together to share ideas toward the common goal of student growth."

OREGON
Study tracks salmon coping with warming river

GRANTS PASS — Scientists working with sockeye salmon struggling to cope with warming temperatures in British Columbia's Fraser River have identified broad genetic traits that can predict which fish will live or die before spawning a new generation.

Oregon State University salmon geneticist Michael Banks, who did not take part in the study, says it represents a breakthrough in tracking how salmon are surviving the new stresses from global warming.

The study combined radio tracking of fish in the ocean and river with a profile of 32,000 genes in individual fish.

It was published in this week's issue of the journal Science.

Two Idaho men injured when train rams truck

SIDNEY — Two Idaho men were injured when a train clobbered a semitrailer at a crossing in the Nebraska Panhandle.

Sidney radio station KSID says the truck was struck at it tried to cross tracks Wednesday morning around 8:20 on a county road near U.S. Highway 30 about six miles west of Sidney.

Cheyenne County Attorney Paul Schaub (SHAHB) says there are crossing signs denoting the tracks but no crossing guards. The investigation is continuing.

The driver was identified as 52-year-old Bruce Elam, of Boise, Idaho; his passenger was identified as 43-year-old Lawrence Clifford, of Post Falls, Idaho.

Both men were flown to Regional West Medical Center in Scottsbluff. Hospital spokeswoman Joanne Krieg said Thursday that Clifford is in critical condition, Elam in serious condition.

IDAHO
Agency extends tax deadline

BOISE — Idaho tax payers will have a few more days to procrastinate before filing their 2010 income tax returns.

The Idaho Tax Commission has pushed this year's filing deadline back to April 18. In most years, April 15 serves as the final day to get submit returns without penalty.

Agency officials say they're making the change to conform to the same change imposed by the federal Internal Revenue Service. This year, April 15 falls on a legal holiday observed in Washington, D.C.

Tax Policy Supervisor Dan John says changing the deadline in Idaho should help make the process less confusing for taxpayers.

Idaho settles again with drug companies

BOISE — Idaho is getting $750,000 from a pair of drug companies after settling allegations they engaged in illegal pricing.

Warrick Pharmaceuticals Corporation and Schering-Plough Corp., which has become part of Merck & Co., will pay the money after the state said they improperly set prices for drugs including Warrick's Albuterol.

Attorney General Lawrence Wasden says, where published prices are false or misleading, the taxpayers are significantly harmed by excessive Medicaid reimbursements.

This settlement is just the latest in now eight cases since 2005 where Idaho and drug companies have come to agreements over allegations of improper pricing. That's recovered approximately $9.4 million for taxpayers.

Walgreens says pharmacist responded to complaint

BOISE — Walgreens says an Idaho pharmacist who is the subject of a Planned Parenthood complaint over the state's health-worker conscience law has addressed allegations she improperly balked at filling a prescription.

In a short statement issued Thursday, Walgreens spokesman Jim Cohn said the pharmacist responded to the complaint with the Idaho Board of Pharmacy. He didn't give specifics.

He says the board investigated the matter and "to the best of (Walgreens') knowledge" has not taken any adverse action.

Jan Atkinson, a Board of Pharmacy compliance officer, said Wednesday her office received the complaint in November, but indicated an investigation was continuing.

Idaho lawmakers opt for lower tax revenue forecast

The Associated Press

BOISE — Lawmakers have opted for a more pessimistic tax revenue forecast than the one picked by state economists.

Last year, the Economic Outlook and Revenue Assessment Committee deemed an outlook by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter as too rosy, and picked a tax revenue forecast that was about $70 million less than the one favored by the governor.

This year, both sides appear to be on the same page and have recommended a budget based on a tax revenue forecast that is about $91 million less than the one favored by the Idaho Division of Financial Management.

The recommendation by the Republican-dominated panel would set spending for the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, based on $2.43 billion in tax revenue.

It's the forecast Otter used when crafting his budget recommendation for the next fiscal year, which is based on 3 percent growth rate in tax revenue.

That's significantly below the 6.9 percent growth, or $2.52 billion in tax revenue, state economists projected.

Lawmakers on the committee voted 12-3 to recommend Otter's lower forecast — with a caveat.

The panel agreed to change their recommendation before lawmakers begin setting budgets in February, if Idaho tax revenue shows signs of improvement in January's tax collections.

Time to stop beggaring the state police

The year 1977 was a long time ago. Idaho had 41 percent fewer residents than it does today. Its violent crime rate was 42 percent lower than it is now. And yet Idaho has exactly the same number of state police officers patrolling its highways as it did 34 years ago. That's outrageous.

The Legislature must — must — go along with Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter's budget recommendation of a 20.7 percent increase in general fund appropriations for the ISP.

Think not? Have you driven to Boise or Pocatello and back recently?

If in a single round trip you've seen a single white-on-black ISP patrol car, that's an exception.

According to ISP Chief Jerry Russell, there currently are 33 vacancies in the ISP. Nine positions are being held vacant due to budget cuts; seven officers are gone on military leave.

“But when you look at the cost of startup, it's substantial,” Russell told the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee this week. Plus, he said, the vacancies mean bigger costs in overtime, “because somebody has to respond out there when there's that call for service, that fatal accident takes place or whatever. So it affects service and it also impacts the financial health.”

For years, the Legislature has been shortchanging ISP to fund other projects. Partly as a consequence, if you're on the road in the middle of the night, you're on your own.

And yet Rep. Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian, asked ISP Chief Jerry Russell this week, “If you had to take a 7 percent reduction” in general funds — does the agency have have priorities set out “so you can lop off, say, a whole service out of your organization to meet that requirement?”

Yes, Russell said. “With 7 percent, we're looking in the neighborhood of 30 officers additional that I would lose,” he said.

“... Bottom line, it would be devastating as far as services.” That ranges from patrolling highways to doing criminal investigations.

Enough, already. For years, the editorial page of this newspaper has pleaded with legislators not to use ISP as a bank to fund other programs. But lawmakers have chosen to go another direction.

And since 2008, general fund appropriations to the ISP have declined 37 percent.

This no longer just a public safety issue — it involves ISP officers as well.

Every day that the state police operates with fewer officers than it needs puts more cops at risk.

This can't continue. It's time for the Legislature to step up.

Our view:

Since 2008, general fund appropriations to the Idaho State Police have declined by two-fifths. That's unacceptable.

What do you think?

How to cut $100B without really crying

To hear the Democrats talk, they have new Republican House Speaker John Boehner right where they want him.

“The reality of governing is different than the reality of campaigning, and it's easier to throw out a number than it is to support it,” David Axelrod, President Obama's outgoing senior strategist, said last week.

Kevin Hassett

The number, of course, is the $100 billion in cuts to federal spending that House Republicans have been discussing since they unveiled their 2010 campaign platform last September. Republicans in the House barely had time to adjust to their majority status before facing questions and skepticism about whether and how they can pull that off.

Boehner is going to win this one. Government spending has surged so much in the past two years that cutting $100 billion is a piece of cake.

First, let's understand exactly what Boehner and his team promised.

In their “Pledge to America,” congressional Republicans wrote:

“With common-sense exceptions for seniors, veterans, and our troops, we will roll back government spending to pre-stimulus, pre-bailout levels, saving us at least $100 billion in the first year alone and putting us on a path to balance the budget and pay down the debt.”

Note the operative phrase, “the first year.” Those now predicting defeat for Boehner make his task tougher by implying that the word “fiscal” precedes “year.”

The 2011 U.S. fiscal year began on Oct. 1, 2010, without a budget in effect, and with Democrats in charge. Since that time, the government has been funded by passage of continuing resolutions, maintaining expenditures at 2010 levels. When the current one expires on March 4, Republicans will have just seven months to make their mark on the 2011 budget.

But since Boehner didn't specify “fiscal year,” Republicans simply can say that the starting pistol went off only last week. House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan said as much: “We will be cutting $100 billion plus over this calendar year. If you think we're stopping shy of $100 billion in cuts, you got another think coming.”

The budget hawks have tied a hand behind their backs by vowing not to cut spending for seniors, national defense and veterans. Still, with 12 months to accomplish it, the lift is pretty easy.

The Heritage Foundation's Brian Riedl came up with an ambitious plan for cutting $343 billion in spending. I'll shoot for one-third of that target, with the added goal of avoiding some of his proposals that would be most likely to lead to wailing in the echoing halls of the Capitol complex.

First, it's finally time to take on farm subsidies, which topped $15.4 billion in 2009, according to the Washington-based Environmental Working Group.

Farm-state lawmakers in both parties, using the Agriculture Committee as their base, have long beaten back efforts to slash direct payments to growers. So why might now be different? Because of the unprecedented power that Boehner is investing in Ryan and the Budget Committee.

Closing the U.S. Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service, would save about $19.5 billion. Not a bad start.

Would Americans really suffer if taxpayer-funded travel by federal employees was slashed? I doubt it. Riedl counts $22.5 billion in savings from that and from cutting in half the cost of maintaining vacant federal properties. (How about selling some of them?)

The easiest cuts are to money not yet spent. There are various competing estimates of how much remains unspent from the great stimulus of 2009. I'll take the most conservative estimate, $12 billion — the biggest chunk of which would go toward high-speed rail, something that we all covet when visiting Europe or Asia but that would require a wholesale transfiguring of the American landscape that the U.S. simply will never do.

We're two-thirds of the way to $100 billion.

Just because we're all tired of hearing about alleged “waste, fraud and abuse” doesn't mean there isn't a lot of it. Riedl estimates that a $5 billion investment in updated computer systems could halve errors in government payments, saving $44 billion. That lifts our spending cuts to $111.8 billion: target achieved, with wiggle room to boot.

Teamwork, not conflict, will improve schools

On Wednesday, State Superintendent Tom Luna unveiled a radical, unproven set of proposals to drastically alter schools and instruction in our state. Throughout its long history, the Idaho Education Association, representing the majority of Idaho teachers, has proudly championed collaborative innovation to improve learning in schools. We're deeply concerned about many aspects of the plan. For starters:

- Mr. Luna presents the Legislature and Idaho families with a false choice: support students or support teachers.

- He proposes elimination of the most basic job security for new teachers, and thereby reduces the ability of administrators, teachers and parents to plan for the future.

- Though Idaho educators readily embrace technology, Mr. Luna proposes to substitute online instruction for face-to-face, hands-on classroom learning.

- Under the Luna plan, class sizes — already among the highest in the nation —

READER COMMENT
Sherri Wood

would grow even more. Idaho students need and deserve individual attention and instruction to compete in the world economy.

- Mr. Luna's proposal to improve starting teacher pay (by $345, to $30,000) falls far short of what is needed to attract and retain the best teachers for Idaho. Already, starting teachers can make far more in our neighboring states than they can here.

- Most concerning of all, the plan was formulated with virtually no input from the dedicated teachers of our state: the real experts on what works in the classroom. And by insisting that only wages and benefits can be bargained, Mr. Luna leaves educators out of the loop in shaping real school reform that will truly put students first.

“Education is a team sport,” state Sen. Edgar Malepeai, D-Pocatello, said at the joint meeting of the Senate and House Education committees. He suggested that teacher and parent input is central to education reform. IEA members agree wholeheartedly.

Although Mr. Luna said the plan was developed by all stakeholders, the blueprint set forth by the Education Alliance of Idaho wasn't yet in a form to be embraced as policy. For that matter, why introduce such a radical restructuring of education policy during an ongoing budget crisis that has placed unprecedented demands on Idaho's children and their teachers?

Mr. Luna frames his proposals as a response to the choice between cannibalizing the current system with more furlough days and fewer textbooks — the conditions we're seeing this school year — or raising taxes to pay for the system we have now: a system that he and Gov. Butch Otter said repeatedly last fall is among the best in the nation.

Idahoans are already stepping up to pay for quality schools in every corner of the state. Since FY 2007, school districts have increased their supplemental levies by $34.8 million, or 44 percent. What Mr. Luna, Gov. Otter and Legislative leadership won't own up to is the massive tax shift that's been going on in Idaho over the past few years.

Teamwork and collaboration, not conflict, will improve Idaho's schools. The interests of teachers and children are inseparable, no matter how hard bureaucrats try to separate them.

We invite concerned Idaho parents, grandparents, and business owners to voice their concerns over the larger class sizes and other radical reforms that Mr. Luna has proposed. Call or email your lawmakers; share your stories of great teachers on the Idaho Parents and Teachers Together page on Facebook; or organize a carpool and speak out at the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee public hearing set for 8-11 a.m. Friday, Jan. 21, at the Statehouse in Boise.

Sherri Wood of Boise is president of the Idaho Education Association.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

By Garry Trudeau

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

Does Constitution guarantee right to bear Glocks?

In 2009, Gabrielle Giffords was holding a “Congress on Your Corner” meeting at a Safeway supermarket in her district when a protester, who was waving a sign that said “Don’t Tread on Me,” waved a little too strenuously. The pistol he was carrying under his armpit fell out of his holster.

“It bounced. That concerned me,” Rudy Ruiz, the father of one of Giffords’s college interns at the time, told me then. He had been at the event and had gotten a larger vision than he had anticipated of what a career in politics entailed. “I just thought, ‘What would happen if it had gone off? Could my daughter have gotten hurt?’”

Giffords brushed off the incident. “When you represent a district — the home of the OK Corral and Tombstone, the town too tough to die — nothing’s a surprise,” she said. At the time, it struck me as an interesting attempt to meld crisis control with a promotion of local tourist attractions.

Now, of course, the district has lost more people in a shooting in a shopping center parking lot than died at the gunfight of the OK Corral, and the story of the dropped pistol has a tragically different cast.

In soft-pedaling that 2009 encounter, Giffords was doing a balancing act that she’d perfected during her political career as a rather progressive Democrat in a increasingly conservative state. She was the spunky Western girl with a populist agenda mixed with down-home values, one of which was opposition to gun control.

But those protesters had been following her around for a while. Her staff members were clearly scared for her, and they put me in touch with Ruiz, who told me the story.

Back then, the amazing thing about the incident in the supermarket parking lot was that the guy with a handgun in his armpit was not arrested. Since then, Arizona has completely eliminated the whole concept of requiring a concealed weapon permit. Last year, it got 2 points out of a possible 100 in the Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence state score card, avoiding a zero only because its Legislature has not — so far — voted to force colleges to let people bring their guns on campuses.

Today, the amazing thing about the reaction to the Giffords shooting is that virtually all the discussion about how to prevent a recurrence has been focusing on improving the tone of our political discourse. That would certainly be great. But you do not hear much about the fact that Jared Loughner came to Giffords’ sweet gathering with a semiautomatic weapon that he was able to buy legally because the law restricting their sale expired in 2004 and Congress did not have the guts to face up to the National Rifle Association and extend it.

If Loughner had gone to the Safeway carrying a regular pistol, the kind most Americans think of when they think of the right to bear arms, Giffords would probably still have been shot and we would still be having that conversation about whether it was a sane idea to put her Congressional district in the cross hairs of a rifle on the Internet.

But we might not have lost a federal judge, a 76-year-old church volunteer, two elderly women, Giffords’ 30-year-old constituent services director and a 9-year-old girl who had recently been elected to the student council at her school and went to the event because she wanted to see how democracy worked.

Loughner’s gun, a 9-millimeter Glock, is extremely easy to fire over and over, and it can carry a 30-bullet clip. It is “not suited for hunting or personal protection,” said Paul Helmke, the president of the Brady Campaign. “What it’s good for is killing and injuring a lot of people quickly.”

America has a long, terrible history of political assassinations and attempts at political assassination. What we did not have until now is a history of attempted political assassination that took the lives of a large number of innocent bystanders. The difference is not about the Second Amendment. It’s about a technology the founding fathers could never have imagined.

“If this was the modern equivalent of what Sirhan Sirhan used to shoot Robert Kennedy or Arthur Bremer used to shoot George Wallace, you’d be talking about one or two victims,” said Helmke.

Giffords represents a pragmatic, interest-balancing form of politics that’s out of fashion. But, in that spirit, we should be able to find a way to accommodate the strong desire in many parts of the country for easy access to firearms with sane regulation of the kinds of weapons that make it easiest for crazy people to create mass slaughter. Most politicians won’t talk about it because they’re afraid of the NRA, whose agenda is driven by the people who sell guns and want the right to sell as many as possible.

Doesn’t it seem like the least we can do?

America’s good food fight

Our holiday table got quite tense. We are a mixed family — Jewish, Christian, Republican, Democrat — but the tension wasn’t from differences over religion or politics. It was about food.

At one end of the table sat my husband’s nephew, who runs a food bank. He’s an earnest man who spends his days seeking nourishment for the hungry, and favors almost anything that increases food’s availability or lowers its price. My husband and I occupied the other end. We operate a pasture-based ranch, and spend much of our time advocating for farming grounded in ecology and stewardship. The food we raise is less readily available and more expensive than most of what’s found at typical grocery stores.

Other family members sat between us. They enjoy eating well but, especially in these tough economic times, want their meals as cheap as possible.

Our family dynamic mirrors an emerging national debate about how America’s food should be produced. The controversy is often framed by agribusiness and food companies, heavily invested in maintaining the status quo, claiming that a globalized, industrialized system is the only way to produce enough food to feed the world’s growing population, and to do so affordably. Reform advocates working to transform the system to one that’s more locally based and isn’t dependent on chemicals, mechanization and cheap fossil fuels are pitted against the world’s poor, working class and hungry.

In other words, the sustainable food movement is characterized as uncaring and elitist.

A recent Newsweek piece titled “What Food Says About Class in America” described “a national phenomenon” of people seeking non-industrial foods because they believe that eating organically and locally helps farmers and farm animals while contributing to the health and well-being of their families and the planet. The author confessed a discomfort with such intense focus on high-quality food while “less than five miles away, some children don’t have enough to eat; others exist almost exclusively on junk food.”

Of course, similar concerns could be voiced regarding cars, housing or healthcare. But more to the point, our experience as ranchers and reform advocates belies the notion that today’s good food movement is either callous or elitist. Making delicious, nutritious, safe food available to all people inspires much of the passion of those laboring to reshape America’s food system. We’ve met them in every region of the country. They are young people setting up diversified farms; chefs dedicated to local sourcing; ordinary citizens establishing farmers markets; mothers and fathers remaking public school lunch programs, and on and on. They come from all walks of life, all incomes and every ethnicity.

Nicolette Hahn Niman

It’s ironic that spokespersons of multinational corporations paint this broad-ranging, truly grass-roots movement as exclusive. Yet the criticism resonates to an extent because sustainably produced foods are often more expensive.

Commodity foods seem cheap by comparison because they’re produced without bearing their true costs, which are passed on in the form of pollution, virulent infectious diseases and animal suffering.

The real challenge now is making good food available to people at every income level. Currently, the financially strapped single mother has a hard time buying local and organic. This is precisely where hunger advocates and good food advocates can and should unite to make whole-some food more accessible.

Individually, farmers and consumers can do little to fix this systemic problem. Collectively, however, we can demand important changes. For starters, our government should immediately stop enabling industrial food producers to shift their environmental and health costs to the public. This means full federal and state enforcement of environmental laws and regulations governing agriculture; federal legislation banning the use of sub-therapeutic antibiotics at agricultural operations; and a redirection of federal farm subsidies away from overproduction of commodity crops and toward environmentally beneficial farming of healthy foods.

Longer-term policy changes should include reinventing government food, farm, education and nutrition programs to make healthy eating easy and affordable.

Nicolette Hahn Niman is a rancher and the author of “Righteous Porkchop: Finding a Life and Good Food Beyond Factory Farms.” She wrote this commentary for the Los Angeles Times.

Obama’s speech inspires comfort amid mayhem

Dallas Morning News

President Obama was superb in his comfort of Americans on Wednesday night during a time of mayhem. He did so by solemnly recalling the particularity of each individual slain or wounded Saturday in Tucson while eloquently calling on every American to embrace a larger national purpose.

The strength of Obama’s remarks lay in his effort to bring America to Tucson to create a sense of a shared national grieving. He reminded Tucsonans that Americans were with them, mourning with them and adding our faith to theirs.

Obama focused on the families — and the many Americans — who are trying to find purpose after young Jared Loughner killed six Arizonans and wounded 14 others at a “Congress on the Corner” event that Democratic Rep. Gabrielle Giffords was holding at a supermarket last weekend.

The president described the people whose lives were twisted forever that fateful morning.

By putting a story behind each name, Obama helped the rest of us realize that these victims were more than names in the paper, more than public figures.

They were human beings who shared particular moments with their families, particular challenges with their colleagues and particular episodes in their journeys.

Their stories remind us of what gave each of them significance. That knowledge makes their deaths and wounds even more painful to consider, almost impossible to absorb. Our hearts are broken, as the president said.

But he also pointed a way forward, reminding us that hope doesn’t die when we are touched by evil.

... As we go forward, debating what must be done to stop massacres like this from recurring, let our discussions be worthy of those we have lost.

It would be a national sin to let this tragedy “become one more example of where we turn on each other.”

Let us then renew our willingness to debate with dignity, understanding that those who differ from us are our fellow Americans, not our enemies.

IVORY COAST Mobs, security forces attack U.N. vehicles

ABIDJAN — Mobs and security forces allied to Ivory Coast leader Laurent Gbagbo attacked at least six U.N. vehicles Thursday, setting some ablaze and injuring two people in the latest round of violence sparked by this West African nation's disputed election.

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon strongly condemned the attacks by loyalists of Gbagbo, who the U.N. says lost the Nov. 28 poll to longtime opposition leader Alassane Ouattara.

Ban said the attacks by "regular and irregular forces" constituted crimes under international law, and warned that those responsible would be held accountable. Other officials with the global body sounded an alarm, warning they were being prevented from protecting civilians.

Gbagbo has refused to accept the outcome of the November poll and has ordered the U.N.'s 9,000-strong peacekeeping mission to leave. The U.N. has refused, and its troops have increasingly come under attack, including earlier this week when gunmen wounded three peacekeepers after their car crashed, said spokesman Kenneth Blackman.

TUNISIA Tunisian leader says he'll resign in 2014

TUNIS — Tunisia's autocratic president, struggling to contain deadly riots that have destabilized his authority, made sweeping pledges for political and media freedom and said he will leave the presidency — but not until his term ends in 2014.

Facing the worst unrest in his 23 years in power, an unusually contrite President Zine El Abidine Ben Ali ordered prices on sugar, milk and bread slashed. Buoyant crowds spilled into the streets after his speech, many cheering his price cuts but some questioning his commitment to real change.

His bold pledges appeared aimed at quelling public anger while allowing him to cling to power in Tunisia, a country long cherished by European tourists for its Mediterranean beaches and its stability, and seen as an ally against terrorism.

It remained to be seen whether Ben Ali's speech will mean an end to violence that has left at least 23 dead and perhaps dozens more. Unions plan a general strike today in Tunis and some other regions.

Calling for a "cease-fire," Ben Ali told his nation in a televised speech, "I have understood you."

"I have understood the demands about unemployment, the demands about necessities, and the political demands for more freedoms," he said.

AUSTRALIA 'Heartache and grief' over flood damage

BRISBANE — Parts of Australia's third-largest city reopened today as deadly floodwaters that had swamped entire neighborhoods receded, revealing streets and thousands of homes covered in a thick layer of putrid sludge.

Garbage trucks moved through Brisbane's muddy streets and some residents dragged ruined furniture out of their homes as the massive cleanup began following one of Australia's worst natural disasters.

In towns upstream of Brisbane, soldiers picked their way through debris looking for more victims. Weeks of flooding across Australia's northeast have caused 25 deaths, and 55 people were still missing.

"There is a lot of heartache and grief as people start to see for the first time what has happened to their homes and their streets," Queensland state Premier Anna Bligh said. "In some cases, we have street after street after street where every home has been inundated to the roof level."

The muddy waters from the Brisbane River swamped 30,000 homes and businesses in Brisbane. One man drowned Thursday when he was sucked into a storm drain as he tried to check on his father's home in an inundated neighborhood of the city. Officials expected to find more bodies farther upstream as they finally got access to hamlets struck by flash flooding on Monday.

Most of the people still unaccounted for are from around Toowoomba, a city west of Brisbane in the Lockyer Valley where a sudden downpour caused a flash flood likened to an inland tsunami. Police Commissioner Bob Atkinson said today that officials may never be able to find everyone swept away by the raging torrent.

WASHINGTON Early T. Rex ancestor found in S. America

Back at the dawn of the dinosaur era, a quick-moving predator set the stage for the famous and fearsome giants that followed in its footsteps, according to new research.

"It was a little dinosaur, but it carried a big evolutionary stick," said Paul C. Sereno of the University of Chicago, a leader of the team that discovered Eodromaeus.

The 4-foot-long hunter lived

230 million years ago in what is now South America and appears to be the ancestor of such creatures as Tyrannosaurus rex.

"It is stunning," Sereno said of the find, reported in Friday's edition of the journal Science.

Its features, such as a balancing tail and air pockets in the skull, show it was closely related to T. rex, he said. But while it stood on two feet like T. rex, Eodromaeus was a lightweight at just 10 to 15 pounds.

"This is a very exciting find indeed," said Oliver W. M. Rauhut, a curator at the Bavarian State Collection for Palaeontology and Geology in Munich, Germany.

"The origin and early diversification of dinosaurs is still poorly understood," said Rauhut, who was not on the research team.

Nick Longrich of the department of geology and geophysics at Yale University agreed: "It's very significant, because it helps give us a better idea of what the ancestor of carnivorous dinosaurs ... would have looked like."

2011 to surpass 2010 foreclosure record

By Janna Herron
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK— The bleak-est year in the foreclosure crisis has only just begun. Lenders are poised to take back more homes this year than any other since the U.S. housing meltdown began in 2006. About 5 million borrowers are at least two months behind on their mortgages and industry experts say more people will miss payments because of job losses and loans exceed the value of the homes they are living in. “2011 is going to be the peak,” said Rick Sharga, a senior vice president at fore-closure tracker RealtyTrac Inc. The firm predicts 1.2 million homes will be repossessed this year. The company tracks notices for defaults, scheduled home auctions and home repos-sessions — warnings that can lead up to a home eventually being lost to foreclosure. The blistering pace of foreclosures this year will top 2010, when a record 1 million homes were lost, RealtyTrac said Thursday. One in every 45 U.S. households received a fore-closure filing last year, a record 2.9 million of them. That’s up 1.67 percent from 2009. According to the company, one in every 309 Idaho homes received a foreclosure filing in December. On Thursday, Freddie Mac reported that fixed mortgage rates dipped this week for the second straight time, extending a sliver of hope for some home owners. The average rate on the 30-year mortgage dropped to 4.71 percent from 4.77 percent the previous week. The rate on the 15-year loan, a popular refinance choice, slipped to 4.08 percent from 4.13 percent. But both are a half-point higher than the lows they reached in November. The 30-year loan rate hit a 40-year low of 4.17 percent and the 15-year mortgage rate fell to 3.57 percent, the lowest level on record, start-ing in 1991. The dip has led more bor-rowers to apply for a refi-nance, but would-be buyers remain hesitant, according to Wednesday’s mortgage indexes from the Mortgage Bankers Association. It will take more than low mortgage rates to jumpstart a housing market plagued by high unemployment, falling prices and tighter credit standards. The glut of foreclosures has compounded the prob-lem and while the pace mod-erated in the final months of 2010, that isn’t expected to last. Foreclosures are expected to remain elevated through-out the year, pushing home prices down another 5 per-cent nationally before finally bottoming out. Dead celebrity dealmaker

buys Marilyn Monroe name

NEW YORK — Dealmaker Jamie Salter, who already markets Bob Marley-themed merchandise, has agreed to acquire the rights to another dead celebrity: Marilyn Monroe. Salter’s New York-based firm Authentic Brands Group and media company Neca Inc. are buying Marilyn Monroe LLC from the late star’s estate, Salter said. Anna Strasberg, who is the administrator of the estate, will be a minority partner in the venture, which will control, among other things, the actress’s name and images of her lips and eyes, he said. Authentic brands, which is backed by Leonard Green & Partners, is shopping a real-ity show based on Monroe, who has been dead almost 50 years, and plans to sell makeup, lin-gerie and other products that carry her name, Salter said. “Every female celebrity has tried to emulate her in some way,” said Salter, who declined to say how much his firm paid for the name. “Marilyn Monroe is the brand.” Dead stars and their associated business generated $2.25 billion in North American revenue in 2009, says Ira Mayer, who runs The Licensing Letter, which tracks licensing deals. UBS, PSA Peugeot Citroen and Cie. Financiere Richemont’s Montblanc have all hitched their brands to dead icons. “The interest in dead celebrities by brands is only growing because it’s a known quanti-ty,” said David Reeder, vice president at GreenLight, a unit of Corbis Corp. that rep-resents the estates of Steve McQueen, Johnny Cash and Andy Warhol. “There’s a lot of pri-vate-equity money looking to buy entertain-ment properties.” Marilyn Monroe is the latest dead celebrity

PREPARED TO PAY?

Seniors may have to pay for Medicare home health

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldívar
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON— Medicare recipients could see a sizable new out-of-pocket charge for home health visits if Congress follows through on a recom-mendation issued Thursday by its own advisory panel. Until now, home health visits from nurses and other providers have been free of charge to patients. But the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission says a copayment is needed to discourage overuse of a service whose cost to tax-payers is nearing $20 billion a year amid concerns that fraud-sters are also taking advantage. The panel did not prescribe an amount, but its staff has suggested the charge be $150 for a series of related visits. Medicare requires copays for many other services, so home health has been the exception, not the rule. Defying opposition by AARP, the seniors’ lobby, the congres-sionally appointed commission voted 13-1 to recommend that lawmakers impose the new charge. Two commissioners abstained and one was absent. “At the extreme, this benefit can turn into a long-term care social support system,” said commission chairman Glenn Hackbarth. “A modest copay-ment is one tool to help deal with that problem.” The advice comes as law-makers face a tough budget year. A sluggish economy and tax cuts are draining revenue while deficits soar to ranges widely seen as unsustainable. Republicans won control of the House on a promise to curb spending, yet there’s little hope of that unless Congress and the president can agree on ways to See MEDICARE, Business 2

BOISE — Idaho is getting $750,000 from a pair of drug companies after settling alle-gations they engaged in illegal pricing. Warrick Pharmaceuticals Corporation and Schering-Plough Corp., which has become part of Merck & Co., will pay the money after the state said they improperly set prices for drugs including Warrick’s Albuterol. Attorney General Lawrence Wasden says where published prices are false or misleading, the taxpayers are significantly harmed by excessive Medicaid reimbursements. This settlement is just the latest in now eight cases since 2005 where Idaho and drug companies have come to agreements over allegations of improper pricing. That’s recovered approximately $9.4 million for taxpayers. Warrick and Schering admitted no liability or wrong-doing. Idaho continues to pursue claims against 21 other drug makers.

Postal rates going up but not most letters

WASHINGTON — Postal rates will go up in April, but the cost of sending the basic letter will remain the same. The Postal Service said Thursday most rates will go up on April 17 under a formula that allows the agency to increase prices within the rate of infla-tion. The post office said the 44-cent price of a first-class stamp and Express Mail and Priority Mail rates will remain unchanged, but heavier letters will cost more. The basic rate is for the first ounce, and the price for each extra ounce will rise from 17 cents to 20 cents. The Postal Service lost $8.5 billion last year despite deep cuts of more than 100,000 jobs and other reductions in recent years. The agency has lost consider-able business to the Internet in recent years and the post office last summer sought an increase that would have exceeded infla-tion, citing the unusual business conditions of the recession. That was rejected by the independent Postal Regulatory Commission. The post office has appealed that turnaround, but in the mean-time is moving to increase rates within the legal limit. There are a variety of price changes for other mailing serv-ices. For more information visit www.usps.com/prices

Idaho Power wants to renew agreement with hydro project

Idaho Power Company is seeking regulatory approval of an energy sales agreement to buy power from the 8.1-megawatt Hazelton A Hydroelectric Project near Jerome. The Idaho Public Utilities Commission is taking comments on the proposal through Jan. 31. The project has been gener-ating power and its developer, SE Hazelton of Andover, Mass, has been working under an agreement with Idaho Power since 1989 but that agreement expired December 31. Even though the facility will continue to use its existing interconnection and transmis-sion facilities and capacity, Idaho Power will require com-pletion of a Generator Interconnection Agreement and Transmission Service Requests in order to bring the facility up to date with Idaho Power’s current tariffs and processes. The project is a qualified Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act (PURPA) facility . PURPA requires electric util-ities purchase energy produced by small power operators. The proposed agreement is for 15 years with a scheduled operation date of Jan. 1, 2011. In 2011, the agreement’s pro-posed rate for normal load hours during normal seasons of the year is $60.06 per megawatt-hour, escalating to $103.76 per MW in 2025. Comments are accepted via e-mail through Jan. 31 by accessing the commission’s home page at www.puc.idaho.gov and click-ing on “Comments & Questions About a Case.” Fill in the case number (IPC-E-10-45) and enter your comments. Comments can also be mailed to P.O. Box 83720, Boise, ID 83720-0074 or faxed to (208) 334-3762.

Cause of watery eye hard to find

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 65-year-old female in good health, other than the type 2 diabetes I've had since 1992. I have used insulin since 2002, and my diabetes is in good control with an A1C of 6.5.

I have had a watery eye for four months now. Initially, I threw away two tubes of mascara, thinking they may be causing my eye to be infected. The water is clear, and there is no pain in my eye. I used allergy eyedrops and took an allergy pill with an antihistamine in it. Neither helped my eye. I visited my dentist and learned I needed some dental work done on the upper right side of my mouth. I asked if this could cause my eye to water, and he didn't think so. I later had the dental work completed, and my eye still watered.

ASK DR. GOTT

I visited my ophthalmologist, and he gave me a thorough eye exam, including irrigation of the tear duct. The water flowed through to my throat. He could not find a reason for my eye to be watering. So I visited my family doctor, and she referred me to another ophthalmologist for a second opinion. The second one did a thorough eye exam, including irrigating the tear duct again. The second irrigation was VERY painful, leading me to believe that the needle was not placed in the proper position. When the doctor released the water, it ran down my cheek so the second doctor believes there may be a tear-duct blockage. She wanted to refer me to a surgeon. I don't believe the second procedure was done correctly so I don't wish to see a surgeon. She further suggested I use eyedrops up to four times a day and hold hot compresses to that eye twice a day. After a week, the eye is still watering.

Do you have any suggestions? Or is this just a part of the aging process and something I am going to have to live with?

DEAR READER: I certainly hope not. Tearing occurs when the body makes more tears than are lost through natural drainage or evaporation.

Obvious causes include exposure to cold, wind, allergies and infection or, as both ophthalmologists attempted to determine, a blocked tear duct. Other less common possibilities include irritation, an ingrown eyelash, dry eye, eyelid abnormalities, eye-strain and blepharitis (overgrowth of normal skin bacteria). Keep in mind that some medications such as antihistamines, diuretics, pain relievers, sleeping pills and beta-blockers might be the culprit. As we age, we commonly have dry eyes (decreased production of tears) and a relaxation of the muscles that hold the inner portion of the eyelid tightly against the eye.

Treatment will obviously depend on the cause. Blocked ducts can be repaired by creating a new channel from the sac to the inside of the nose. Narrowed (but not blocked) drainage channels can be widened with the use of a probe. Allergic conjunctivitis will respond to antihistamines. Infective conjunctivitis might ultimately require an antibiotic. Perhaps you are unknowingly on a medication that could be causing the tearing.

I cannot comment on the second irrigation treatment, but I can recommend you make an appointment with your primary-care physician so he or she can ask relevant questions, perform some simple testing, and zero in on or rule out some of the possibilities I mentioned. Good luck.

Readers who would like to contact Dr. Gott, they may send their mail to Dr. Gott c/o United Media, 200 Madison Ave., 4th fl., New York, NY 10016.

Rescue workers remove a rabbit as they search for survivors inside a home destroyed by a landslide in Teresopolis, Rio de Janeiro state, Brazil, Thursday.

464 die in Brazil slides, survivors relate horrors

The Associated Press

TERESOPOLIS, Brazil — The power was out, but lightning flashes illuminated the horror as villagers watched neighbors' homes vanish under a wall of mud and water, turning neighborhoods into graveyards. Survivors dug at the earth barehanded Thursday, but all they found were bodies.

It was a scene of muddy destruction in mountain towns north of Rio, where at least 464 people were killed when torrential rains unleashed mudslides in the pre-dawn hours Wednesday, burying people alive as they slept. Officials would not venture guesses on how many people were missing — but fears were high that the death toll could sharply rise.

In the remote Campo Grande neighborhood of Teresopolis, now accessible only by a perilous five-mile hike through mud-slicked jungle, family members pulled the lifeless bodies of loved ones from the muck. They carefully laid the corpses on dry ground, covering them with blankets.

A young boy cried out as his father's body was found: "I want to see my dad! I want to see my dad!"

Flooding and mudslides are common in Brazil when the summer rains come, but this week's slides were among the worst in recent memory. The disasters unduly punish the poor, who often live in rickety shacks perched perilously on steep hillsides with little or no foundations. But even the rich did not escape the damage in Teresopolis, where large homes were washed away.

"I have friends still lost in all of this mud," said Carols Eurico, a resident of the city's Campo Grande neighborhood, as he motioned to a sea of destruction behind him. "It's all gone. It's all over now. We're putting ourselves in the hands of God."

In the same area, Nilson Martins, 35, carefully held the only thing pulled out alive since dawn: a pet rabbit that had somehow remained pristinely white despite the mud.

"We're just digging around, there is no way of knowing where to look," he said. "There are three more bodies under the rubble over there. One seems to be a girl, no more than 16, dead, buried under that mud."

"Children — cry only tears of joy for the Lord is my keeper and He has called me home" (Cindy Easterday).

FILER — Boyd Tipton, 77, of Filer, loving dad, grandpa and great-grandpa, was reunited with the Lord on Tuesday, Jan. 11, 2011, after a courageous battle with cancer.

He was born Dec. 16, 1933, at home in West Plains, Mo., son of Adam and Thelma Tipton. At the age of 7, they moved to Mesa, Ariz., where the family worked in the citrus orchards. When his dad was drafted into the Navy, the family moved to Pasco, Wash.

While Boyd was in the sixth grade, they moved to Castleford, Idaho, and eventually made their home in Filer, Idaho. He graduated eighth grade at Moroa School and attended Filer High School, where he was a member of "Who's Who of High School Athletes (Western States)." He graduated high school in 1952 with a basketball scholarship but chose a different road. In 1953, he enlisted in the U.S. Air Force, where he was a teletype and encrypto mechanic. He spent 15 months stationed in Alaska.

Christmas Day 1956, he married the love of his life, Wilma Edwards. Their first home was in Gene Autrey, Okla., near the Ardmore Air Force base. He was discharged from service in September 1957. They moved back to Filer. There he worked first at Bean Growers, and then at ACME Manufacturing for 30 years. He was a member of the Baptist Church. He enjoyed hunting, fishing and camping, but his greatest joy of all was spending time with his family — his children, grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

He is survived by his wife of 54 years, Wilma; son, Sol (Sally) Tipton of Richfield; daughters, Deborah (Gerald) Haye and Susan (Clayton) Depew, both of Filer, and Kelli (Tim) Shetler and Teresa (Janard L.) Jones, both of Twin Falls; 11 grandchildren, 16 1/4 great-grandchildren; two sisters, Irene (Wayne) Easterday of Castleford, Idaho, and Nolena (Beryl) Percy, of Goldbar, Wash. He was preceded in death by his parents, two brothers, one granddaughter, and one great-grandson.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 17, 2011, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. Friends may call from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 16, at the funeral home.

Robert Ives

BURLEY — Robert Ives, age 54, passed away peacefully Tuesday, Jan. 11, 2011, with his loving wife, Pam, at his side, ending his valiant 15-month battle with cancer.

Bob led a life that others could only dream about. He worked for 25 years as a celebrity photographer in Hollywood, Calif., meeting almost every star of the time and taking fabulous photos. While in Los Angeles, he also worked as a stand-up comedian and actor. His sense of humor was unbounded. He always had a smile for everyone and stories to tell of the celebrities he'd met.

Bob was so well liked, talented and respected as a photographer that stars would often ask him to their homes to shoot personal parties and family photos. If he thought a celebrity photo would raise someone's spirits, he would find the best shot of that person's favorite star and give it to them, usually bringing smiles. That was what Bob was all about — doing anything he could to brighten someone's day.

Robert Joseph Ives was born in Teaneck, N.J., on Sept. 21, 1956. He spent his boyhood years there. He was active in sports and loved trips to New York City with his dad to see his beloved Yankees play. He moved to Florida in high school and began his stand-up comedy career. After winning a comedy contest, he used the money to move to Los Angeles to pursue his career. His entry into celebrity photography was completely by accident, but he loved rubbing shoulders and talking to some of the biggest names in Hollywood.

He moved to Idaho and settled in Pocatello. He met Pam Roach in January of 2008, and they were married on Oct. 10, 2009, in St. Paul, Minn. They made their home in Burley. He often said that she was "the love of his life."

He was preceded in death by his father, Robert Eugene Ives. He is survived by his wife, Pamela; his mother, Bette Ives of Tampa, Fla.; a brother, Joseph (Christina), and a nephew, Josh, all of Tampa, Fla.; Pam's children, Jonathan Roach (Christa) of Minneapolis, Minn., Wendy Curtis (Jeff) of St. Paul, Minn., and Kristen Roach of Chicago, Ill.; and his grandchildren, Austin Roach, and Genevieve and Logan Curtis, all of Minnesota.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Monday, Jan. 17, at the Zion Lutheran Church, 2410 Miller Ave. in Burley, with the Rev. Joel Pike officiating. Burial will be held at a later date in Tampa, Fla. Friends and family may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 16, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from noon until 12:45 p.m. Monday at the church.

The family expresses their sincere appreciation to the doctors and nurses at Mountain States Tumor Institute in Twin Falls. You are all marvelous.

Because of the impression that was made on Bob by Danny Thomas, memorials will be given to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Conway James DeLange

Conway James DeLange, infant son of Kelly and Jennifer DeLange of Twin Falls, was silently born Sunday, Jan. 9, 2011, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Conway James DeLange went to be with his Heavenly Father surrounded by his family; he will be loved and missed forever.

Conway is survived by his parents; brothers, Wyatt and Dawson DeLange; grandmothers, Sallee DeLange and Patricia Jensen; greatgrandmothers, Beverly Harrington and Jean Ecklund; and uncles, Tracy DeLange and Chris Jensen. He was preceded in death by his grandfather, Gary DeLange; and great-grandfather, Del Harrington.

The funeral for Conway James will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 15, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. Interment will be held following the service at the Twin Falls Cemetery in Twin Falls.

"This is not a funeral, it is my translation. I thank the Lord 100 percent for giving me wonderful, dedicated parents; a faithful wife; beautiful, caring family; all the students throughout my career; the skills to achieve what I have done and all those who helped me do this. With their help and support as my backfield in motion, I've prayed for these things that have begun and will continue to further progress to their achievement. I love my Savior, Jesus Christ, and everybody I've come in contact within my life. Jesus welcomed me saying, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant ... enter thou into the joy of thy Lord' (Matthew 25:31)" (George E. MacDonald).

Big band singer Margaret Whiting dies at 86

The Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — Margaret Whiting, the sweet-voiced singer who sold millions of records in the 1940s and '50s with sentimental ballads such as "Moonlight in Vermont" and "It Might as Well Be Spring," has died at age 86.

She died Monday at the Lillian Booth Actors' Home in Englewood, N.J., home administrator Jordan Strohl said. She had lived in New York City for many years before moving to the home in March.

Whiting grew up with the music business. She was the daughter of Richard Whiting, a prolific composer of such hits as "My Ideal," "Sleepy Time Gal" and "Beyond the Blue Horizon." Her family's home in the posh Bel-Air community in Los Angeles was a gathering place for such songwriters as George and Ira Gershwin, Frank Loesser, Jerome Kern, Harold Arlen and Johnny Mercer.

It was Mercer, her father's lyricist and close friend, who inspired the young Whiting to take years of vocal training when he told her following an early audition, "Grow up and learn to sing."

After Whiting's father died in 1938, Mercer remained close to the family. When he became a founding partner in Capitol Records in 1942, 18-year-old Whiting was the first singer he put under contract.

Fifty-five years later, Whiting and her fourth husband, Jack Wrangler, honored Mercer with a musical tribute called "Dream," which ran for 133 performances on Broadway.

It was Mercer who had coached the teenage Whiting through her first recording, of her father's "My Ideal," and although Maurice Chevalier and Frank Sinatra had already recorded the tune, her version sold well.

'Buckskin and Beads'

Exhibit opens Tuesday at Herrett Center

Herrett Center collections manager Phyllis Oppenheim secures a cradleboard to a back support in order to place it on the wall for an upcoming exhibit Tuesday afternoon. The cradleboard is in a style which the Shoshone-Paiute tribe used.

Times-News writer

Ever wonder what the American Indians in south-central Idaho wore in weather this cold? You're in luck.

On Tuesday, the Herrett Center for Arts and Science is opening its new exhibit, "Buckskin and Beads." It features clothing from Lemhi-Shoshone, Shoshone-Paiute and Shoshone-Bannock tribes, plus a collection of jewelry donated by the King family in Burley.

The late Bill Studebaker procured the clothing in the mid-1990s using an anonymous grant, said Herrett Center exhibits manager Joey Heck. Studebaker took advantage of his connections with the Lemhi-Shoshone, on whose reservation he spent time as a child, to buy contemporary clothes, moccasins and cradleboards.

"His request was that they be made in the traditional way with traditional designs," said collections manager Phyllis Oppenheim.

Although the clothes were made in the mid-1990s and put together with modern thread instead of sinew, the designs are what people would have worn hundreds of years ago, Heck said.

"It's all very accurate and authentic," he said.

Before contact with the Europeans, the Shoshone used bones and quills along with shells traded with coastal tribes, Oppenheim said. Only after European traders and explorers came through in the early 19th century did the Shoshone designs feature colorful beads.

The clothes' basic structures were the same, and most used buckskin, but bead designs and colors varied from tribe to tribe. And depending on the tribe's location, its clothing and styles were influenced by the Great Plains

Indians or the Nez Perce.

"The Shoshone actually covered quite a large area," Heck said.

Also on display: the King jewelry collection, which Tom King gave to the Herrett Center. From 1883 to 1894, E.A. Doud and his family, including daughter Edith, lived on the Fort Hall reservation.

"Edith became very good friends with the Shoshone children," Oppenheim said. One of her best friends was Jeannette Pocatello, Chief Pocatello's daughter.

When the family moved off the reservation, the Shoshone gave Edith a large jewelry collection. Edith later married M.H. King, founder of the King stores.

The jewelry is standard Shoshone, Oppenheim said, and, like the clothes, it shows the white man's influence on designs.

Wise-cracking whodunit takes Buhl thespians to psychiatric ward

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Keegan Felton is no newbie when it comes to Buhl High School's annual dinner theater. The sophomore has been in three plays and helped with three more. But this year, there's something unusual to contend with.

"About 18 seconds into the play, (my character) dies and gets poisoned," Felton said. "It is very tough for me not to laugh when I'm laying a dead guy. Especially when I'm moved around like a puppet in a few scenes."

That death in a psychiatric rest home starts off the action in "Murder's Bad But Monday Can Kill You" by Pat Cook, in which all the characters have a couple of extra people in their heads to complicate the investigation.

"They think three people

The humorous mayhem is a marriage of tradition and innovation.

Tonight's opening of "Murder" on a Buhl stage marks the thespians' return to performing a comical murder mystery for their dinner theater production. Last year, the cast took a break from the 13-year tradition and performed "The Iliad, The Odyssey and all of Greek Mythology in 99 Minutes or Less."

But stepping back into the role of detectives and murderers isn't a step into a comfort zone. For the first time in six years, the cast is performing in a new location — the Immaculate Conception Church Hall — instead of the West End senior center.

"It's been nice because we're used to the space. This year I decided to give us a little challenge," director David Blaszkiewicz said.

Hailey illustrator follows scientists to ocean depths

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Karen Jacobsen is known around Sun Valley for her plein air paintings of Redfish Lake and other local landmarks.

But to underwater explorers, the Hailey woman is known for her plein eau (water) illustrations of “eyeless” shrimp and Kiwa hirsute that she paints from the studio of a miniature research submarine.

Jacobsen has toted her sketchbooks and paintbrushes to the bottom of the Pacific Ocean, the North Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico to offer the world detailed likenesses of newly discovered animal species like the yeti crab.

“She’s so talented. And she’s able to provide us with an opportunity to glimpse a world that 99 percent of us will never see since she gets to go down in a submersible,” said Courtney Gilbert, who is curating a new exhibit showing Jacobsen’s work at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts in Ketchum. “We think we live in an age where we know everything. But you look at Karen’s work and you quickly learn there’s a lot we don’t know lying at the bottom of the ocean.”

Jacobsen’s artist mother taught her to draw from life, not photos. That talent found its match in a scientific illustration class Jacobsen took at the University of California-Santa Cruz, where she studied art.

“I felt as if I was born to be an expedition illustrator,” she said. “I’m not an abstract painter — someone who has to put my emotions on canvas. I want to paint what I see.”

The trick, however, was to find work as a scientific illustrator in a world where demand peaked a couple of hundred years ago.

To prove her worth, Jacobsen illustrated archaeological digs in Petra, Jordan, and other exotic locales. Then, in 1991, she was introduced to Cindy Van Dover, an oceanographer from the Duke University Marine Laboratory and a Navy-certified submarine pilot.

To date, Jacobsen has gone on more than a dozen deep-sea trips and cruises, painting at the bottom of a 6-foot

Artist Karen Jacobsen shows a detailed sketch of tubeworms next to a more life-sized illustration of the underwater phenomenon. She sometimes paints subjects under a microscope; at other times, looking out the window of a miniature submarine.

LEARN TO SEE BY LEARNING TO DRAW

Scientific illustrating can help kids visualize science, Karen Jacobsen says.

“A lot of kids are visually oriented. And illustrating things, rather than simply taking a photograph of something, forces them to slow down and really look at things,” she said.

Illustrating helps the drawer recognize similarities and differences in shapes and other factors. It teaches spatial relationships. And it helps the drawer remember details, she added.

“When you take the time to draw something, you don’t ever forget it,” Jacobsen said. “I still remember things I drew in my invertebrate class in college 30 years ago.”

To get started:

Isolate the subject matter.

Don’t try to draw everything; rather, pick out what’s important.

Don’t be afraid to make mistakes; few people draw things exactly right the first time.

Want to know more?

Jacobsen will offer a workshop, “Combining Art and Science: An Introduction to Scientific Illustration,” from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Jan. 25-27 at The Center in Hailey.

Cost is $200 for Sun Valley Center for the Arts members and $20 for others, with a $25 supply fee. Register: 726-9491.

Jacobsen will also offer a teen workshop, “An Introduction to Scientific Illustration,” from noon to 4 p.m. Feb. 12 at The Center in Hailey. Cost is $10. Registration deadline is Jan. 28 at 726-9491.

sphere or bowl on the submersible as Van Dover and other scientists discover life in places that were once believed to be void of life.

Like Captain Nemo and Jules Verne’s fictional crew of the Nautilus, they and their miniature submarine named Alvin dive under the sea to explore hot springs on the ocean bottom that Jacobsen likens to Old Faithful erupting out of a chimney. They’ve found giant red plumed tubeworm pillars up to 30 meters tall that feed on bacteria in a place where there is no sunlight and no photosynthesis. And marine worms that feed on whale skeletons.

Their finds could shed light on the origins of life on Earth and the rest of the universe, Jacobsen said. And they could also help humans adapt to living in outer space should they need to vacate this planet one day to survive as a species.

“It’s unbelievable how many new species they find,” she said. “And it’s exciting because if there’s life in places we didn’t think possible, where else could life exist?”

Jacobsen, who creates her work while looking out onto the blue palette of the ocean, can convey subtleties not evident in photographs while leaving out distracting details, said David Nateman, former director of the North Carolina Maritime Museum.

“Karen is able to highlight features not seen in photographs,” he said.

“Everybody takes photographs. But illustrations have always been used to catalog zoological uniqueness,” added Jacobsen. “And I can arrange things differently than you might get if you took a photograph, so it’s more helpful to those looking at the picture.”

The work of Jacobsen and Van Dover is being spotlighted in a traveling exhibit titled “Beyond the Edge of the Sea: Diversity of Life in the Deep-Ocean Wilderness,” currently showing at the National Science Foundation headquarters in Arlington, Va.

Some of Jacobsen’s watercolor illustrations, which might seem the stuff of science fiction, are also part of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts’ new exhibition, “Creatures: From Bigfoot to the Yeti Crab,” which runs through March 12 in the center at 191 Fifth St. E. in Ketchum.

Jacobsen spends about four weeks at a time on expeditions, including travel time to and from ships. She says she can’t make a living strictly on the scientific illustrations, especially considering she’s joined a few expeditions for no more than the airfare to get to the ship.

But she wouldn’t trade the experience for all the money in the world.

“One of these days I’ll be famous, but I won’t be rich,” she said. “I’m pretty much the only artist who has seen as much as I have.”

Magic Valley’s winter theater season is in full swing, with plays this weekend in Buhl, Bliss and Twin Falls. Perennial local directors Tony Mannen and Lori Henson are in leading roles this time in RAT Players’ “Death of a Salesman,” and the reporter I sent to a rehearsal came back saying that their on-stage chemistry is fantastic. If all of this theater awakens your own urge to perform, give it a shot with Dilettante Group, whose auditions for “The Secret Garden” start Sunday afternoon.

The Herrett Center’s new exhibit on Shoshoni clothing made our Entertainment headlines, but this week’s calendar uncovered a couple of other gems for history fans: Bill Rossiter’s stories and songs of the Western railroad, Saturday in Jerome, and Elizabeth Giraud’s lecture on early Twin Falls architecture, Wednesday in Twin Falls. Giraud is the architectural historian who submitted about 1,200 buildings in Twin Falls County to the National Register of Historic Places, so she knows what she’s talking about.

The BYU Young Ambassadors will likely find a devoted audience when they dance and sing pop and Broadway numbers in Twin Falls on Saturday. But Magic Valley loves its country music, too, and Gary Braun’s new band is starting to pepper the calendar with Twin Falls gigs. Gary, one of the original Braun Brothers, used to perform with his brother Muzzie. Now Gary and his wife, Cindy, have created a five-piece, country-swing dance band with fellow Twin Falls and Kimberly musicians. Catch Gary and Cindy tonight, and their new Braun Band on Jan. 21-22.

For event details, see the full calendar in today’s Entertainment section.

CSI film series chooses emotional, classic films for discussion

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

With a mix of modern and historic films on their docket, film lovers in Magic Valley are hoping to reignite interest in movie discussion.

“One thing we really wanted to bring to CSI was an opportunity for people to get together to talk about films,” said Shelley McEuen, on the film festival committee at College of Southern Idaho. She recalled a less formal group who met about a decade ago at the former Lamphouse Theater for a similar purpose. “It’s something a lot of people miss. We’re attempting to bring our own version of that to the campus.”

For those who participated in the Lamphouse discussions, the idea of resurrecting that concept is exciting.

“These are for people who seek out and are really serious about films, so there’s a wonderful reverence and camaraderie,” said Pat Marcantonio of Twin Falls, a movie buff and former Times-News employee who has also written and produced short films. “A lot of people watch them as entertainment — and some movies are just entertainment — but with a really good film you can talk about it for hours because there are so many aspects to the structure, the characters, the dialogue, the imagery.”

Among film fans, discussing the technical elements of a movie and its emotional impact also can create a shared language that extends beyond the flicker of the silver screen.

“It’s the opportunity to create community venues for people to share ideas, develop community and appreciate art in ways that it’s just missing right now,” said Jeff Fox of Twin Falls, another film fan. “I’m glad to see it back and glad the college is a part of it.”

The CSI series includes three classics and three movies from the past decade, each with elements that will appeal to film lovers:

“Sunset Boulevard,” (1950) starring Gloria Swanson and William Holden, directed by Billy Wilder.

Swanson plays a faded silent-movie star and Holden an unsuccessful screenwriter, and the film follows the story of Swanson’s attempts to return to the screen in talkies.

On the American Film Institute’s 100 best American films of the 20th century, and winner of three Academy Awards.

A one-credit general education course is also available from CSI, which will include more in-depth discussion and a required paper.

premiered, silent films were familiar, and the stars who populated them were household names.

“Glamour and beauty and the titillation of sexual innuendo, they were there on the screen,” Fox said, describing how the story was relevant to two generations of film lovers but also pointed out the sad side of a Hollywood life. “On so many levels it’s a story that’s a timeless one. We see this all the time in literature and art, that struggle to maintain the glory days.”

The acting is particularly excellent in “Sunset,” he said, and the actors are helped by a script that allows them to believably express pathos. “The sense of understanding the characters and figuring out a way to let them live on the screen in such convincing fashion, it’s a complete story.”

Marcantonio acknowledged the iconic image of Swanson descending the stairs in her empty mansion, but said the scene that sticks with her is the one of Holden floating in the swimming pool: “this forlorn, sad body,” she said.

• • •

“The Station Agent,” (2003) starring Peter Dinklage, Bobby Cannavale, Patricia Clarkson and Michelle Williams, directed by Thomas McCarthy.

Dinklage plays a man with dwarfism who loves trains and railroads, and moves into an abandoned rail depot for solitude but quickly becomes enmeshed in his neighbors’ lives.

Winner of the Sundance Film Festival Audience Award (Dramatic) and Independent Spirit Award for Best First Screenplay.

The storyline stands out in this film, Marcantonio said, for its examination of differences between people and how they treat each other.

“In this one, the action is really in the emotions, and that’s where the real fireworks happen,” she said. “In independent films, the story is really taking place in people’s lives, and this is a wonderful example of that.”

Although she enjoys action films, Marcantonio said quiet, character-driven movies like this one allow the stars to shine; especially Clarkson and Williams, who have carved out careers for themselves that include many independent features.

“I like films about misfits, and you have a great group of misfits, people who have a gap in their lives, coming together,” she said. “It’s a different love story, not man to woman, but among friends.”

“The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari,” (1920), starring Werner Krauss and Conrad Veidt, directed by Robert Wiene.

In one of the earliest examples of a frame story, a narrated flashback follows the fantastic tale of a carnival doctor and his sleepwalking, prophetic patient who are connected to a series of murders. Often cited as introducing the “twist” ending, the movie reveals that the plot is actually the delusion of a mental patient.

A seminal movie in many ways, Fox said, “Caligari” was made during the early migration of international film directors to Hollywood.

The movies they produced are often full of experimentation — because there were few prior examples to learn from — yet have become part of the DNA of modern filmmaking.

“We tend to think these (modern) directors came up with this stuff, but any film director of note, they all go back and learn from the masters,” Fox said. And films like “Caligari” are where the masters learned their trade. “They’re not jaded yet; this is new and strange. They didn’t have a sense of pandering to a popular audience yet — this is art.”

Actors at that time learned on the stage, so films of the era are full of the grandiose gestures that read well from the back of a playhouse but look foreign closer up, yet directors are beginning to realize they can take advantage of their ability to change the audience’s perspective.

“It’s not a pretty film, in terms of cinematography,” Fox said. “We start seeing some of the filmic approach to things, where you zoom in to frame a face, have stark contrast between black and white.”

• • •

Told from students’ perspectives, it examines how the fading art of ballroom dancing brings culturally diverse children together and shows their surprising and blossoming maturity. Winner of the Audience Award at the Philadelphia Film Festival.

Don’t be fooled by the title, said Filer film fan Betty Slifer. “I thought before I saw it that it was going to be some passionate romance,” she said with a chuckle.

For Slifer, the perspective of this documentary is one of its strengths.

“It ... shows the children having conversations among themselves, and they’re talking about problems in their lives,” she said, noting the film’s fly-on-the-wall approach. She said she was impressed with how it documented the personal benefit of having the arts in their schools.

“Even for children of that age to hold hands with the opposite sex, that’s something they’re not inclined to do,” Slifer said, recalling their increasing maturity. “It gives them more confidence and more ability to deal with those problems in their lives. ... It shows the value of having such activity in the schools, and it’s a delightful movie because of the children’s personalities.”

“Schultzze Gets the Blues” (2003), starring Horst Krause and Karl Fred Muller, directed by Michael Schorr.

In German, with subtitles, the film tells the story of a recently retired salt miner who becomes interested in Cajun culture. He plays zydeco music on his accordion despite his friends’ skepticism, and eventually travels to Louisiana to explore the culture further.

Perhaps the least known of the films in the series, “Schultzze” was a movie McEuen advocated because of its unusual storyline.

“It represents a different coming of age. He’s older, yet he’s coming into his own in perhaps his early 70s,” she said. “We don’t see a lot of films that have an older protagonist in that way.”

It also shows realistic relationships between men — in this case, older men — that are not often depicted in film, she said (notable examples might include “The Hangover,” but that movie features young characters).

Some filmgoers may be turned off by subtitles, but McEuen said they are often preferable to dubbing, especially for a movie as music-oriented as “Schultzze.”

“If people are put off by the fact that they have to read a film, that’s not a horrible thing every once in a while, being pushed that way,” she said. “There is nothing that gets in the way of the passion of the music; you walk away wanting to listen to more.”

• • •

“Chinatown” (1974), starring Jack Nicholson, Faye Dunaway and John Huston, directed by Roman Polanski.

This resurrection of the film noir genre is part mystery and part psychological drama, set in 1937 Los Angeles.

Winner of an Academy Award for Best Original Screenplay, and Best Drama at the Golden Globes, and on the American Film Institute’s 100 best American movies of the 20th century.

A classic often cited as one of the best American movies ever made, “Chinatown” is called neo-noir because it owes so much to the noir films that preceded it, such as “Casablanca” and “The Maltese Falcon.”

“Even though it’s in color, it harkens back to the genre,” Fox said, describing the rain-slick nighttime shots that exemplify the look.

Nicholson and Dunaway were hot box-office draws when it premiered, and Fox lauds their choice to be in a picture that was unlike anything else out at the time.

“It’s an interesting exercise that they would step back into a genre like this and try to create characters that would fit into it,” he said.

The film’s writing and direction also show a firm grasp on the genre and a reinvention of it for more modern eyes. “You begin to see the evolution of a screenplay, and that’s really the beauty of Polanski’s film,” Fox said. “Almost every scene is an amazing piece.”

High auditorium, which is also where the traditional dress rehearsal for the actors’ classmates will be. The backdrops and other scenery were made transportable so they can be set up in the church tonight.

“We have to make sure the set we made will actually fit there,” Blaszkiewicz said.

Buhl’s dinner theater has become a big part of the community.

For the two-night production, Blaszkiewicz estimates he’ll have about 85 reservations.

“We still get people at the door and calling, up to curtain time,” he said.

The dinner theater is also the way the department earns money to keep putting on plays, singing in musicals and murdering classmates on stage.

“I’m proud of the idea that we raise all of our funds,” Blaszkiewicz said.

For the actors who’ve been around for a while, appearing in the dinner theater is tradition.

ward to. It’s what keeps me going in the winter months, pushing forward to spring,” said senior Emily Plew, who plays a bespectacled psychiatrist.

But old hands aren’t the only ones under suspicion for Felton’s murder. Senior Evan Wray, who spent his high school career as a football player, steps on the stage for the first time.

With football over, his curiosity about drama led him to give it a go.

“I was figuring normal high school stereotype, everybody looking at me like, ‘What is a football player doing here?’ That was like the first day and then I hopped right in,” Wray said.

The experience gave Wray, who depicts one of the only characters with a single personality, a new outlook on drama students.

“I know how they pictured these people and how I used to picture these people,” he said. “It’s stupid high school stereotypes.”

Two Magic Valley hip hop artists produce solo albums

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Get ready to pump up the bass.

Magic Valley hip hop artists Yung Skillz and Joey Bravo of Los Filthy Hooligans have each come out with solo albums. One is beat-driven, one lyrical and old school, and both will impress fans of any hip hop genre.

Bravo's music is as varied as his life.

The Twin Falls rapper, whose real name is Jose Garcia, is also a DJ, radio personality, event promoter and manager. He starts his day in business clothes for marketing meetings and ends them in band T-shirts that show off his tattoos.

And his music? It ranges from old school hip hop with in-your-face lyrics to love songs to comedy tracks with cats meowing in the background. On his new album, "Vocally Vicious," Bravo incorporates all these genres into an album he hopes will inspire listeners to roll down the windows and crank up the stereo.

"It's got low-rider appeal to it," he said.

Not all the tracks are meant to make your head bop. Two comedy tracks sample Justin Timberlake's "Sexy Back," replacing the vocals with meows. Another track talks about picking up ugly women when drunk.

"If I was sober, I wouldn't even talk to her," he and guest artist Chew Gums rap in "Beer Goggles."

Other songs are sweetly romantic. When writing these lyrics, Bravo thought of his wife, he said. The entire album is "like a roller coaster of emotions."

In addition to Chew Gums, Bravo features other Latin hip hop artists on "Vocally Vicious." P Shorty, Brown Ecstasy, KT Munee and Untouchable all make appearances on tracks throughout the CD. The varied voices and styles bring texture and complexity to his songs, he said. He was especially excited about collaborating with 2mex, a DJ from Los Angeles, on the track "Traditional."

"I've always been a fan of his," he said.

Yung Skillz's music is fundamentally different than Bravo's, using more electric beats and bass to get bodies moving on the dance floor.

a new CD in December, called "Slyz the Limit," but is pumping out new tracks and videos weekly. Even more new tracks, called "New Era: The Mini Mix Tape," were released in early January. He regularly updates his Facebook to tell fans about upcoming shows and to let them know what town he's in that day so they can hit him up for CDs.

His new music is deeper and more mature than previous solo ventures, Skillz said.

"I show a lot of growth," the Jerome rapper said. "The overall feel of the project is probably way different than everything else I've done before."

His mix tracks sample parts of other hip hop songs, like Jay-Z's "On To The Next One" on his track called "On 2 The Next."

You won't find his music in stores. Skillz likes to sell his CDs directly to his fans and often gives his music for free online.

"I like to do like the hand-to-hand thing," Skillz said. He keeps in close touch with his fans, posting daily on his Facebook account.

Bravo had nothing but praise for Skillz.

"He's evolved to become a very, very versatile artist," Bravo said. At 20 years old, Skillz "has accomplished so much."

Because Skillz is producing so much solo music and Bravo has other projects in the work, you won't be hearing much from Los Filthy Hooligans for a while. Bravo is managing Skillz, hoping to promote him as a solo artist.

"I have a very strong feeling that he's going to do something big," Bravo said. "I make music because I love to make music. But Skillz could make it."

Arts council brings '50s-style singers from Mini-Cassia to new Twin Falls arts center

Times-News

For one of its first shows in the newly opened Twin Falls Center for the Arts, the Magic Valley Arts Council has lined up a quartet of '50s-style singers who are regular performers throughout Mini-Cassia.

The Taffetas will sing at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 29 at Twin Falls Center for the Arts. Tickets are $15, at 734-2787.

This scenario sets the framework for an evening of '50s hits: It's 1950-something, and Kaye, Peggy, Cheryl and Donna, four singing sisters from Muncie, Ind., are making their national TV singing debut on "Spotlight on Music." The Taffetas pay tribute to the sounds of The McGuire Sisters, The Fontaine Sisters and The Chordettes, and help audiences remember what Sunday-night television was like on a 12-inch black-and-white TV screen.

The performers are Cheri Hamilton, Peggy Harris, Kim Christensen and Julene Thurston, with musical direction and piano by Alan Hale, Deana Christensen on bass and Brandon Cook on drums. Costumes are by Eva Meline and the cast, with sound by Chad Harris and lights by Adam Cook.

Wood River hang with Minico in 49-33 loss

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Walking into the Minico locker room after the Spartans' 49-33 win over Wood River on Thursday night was like entering a hospital waiting room right after a family had received news that grandpa had passed away.

On the other side of the gym, the Wood River players walked out smiling and with their heads held high after giving the Spartans all they could handle.

The winless Wolverines, led by Stone Sutton's 18 points, played No. 2-ranked Minico closer than any other Great Basin Conference team has this season.

"Overall we're really happy and excited with how we played tonight," Sutton said. "It's good to be able to play this close to a team that's ranked so high in the state."

Although they felt disappointed with their lackluster performance, the Spartans moved to 11-1 overall and remained unbeaten in conference play at 4-0 while extending

Harr and Burley's cold shooting lift Twin Falls

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

Too much Eric Harr and a night of cold shooting by Burley lifted the Twin Falls Bruins to a 55-45 Great Basin Conference home win over the Bobcats at Baun Gymnasium in a game that was rarely in doubt.

The Bruins never trailed and the closest the Bobcats came was 14-13 at the end of the first quarter.

"Our strategy was to shutdown Harr and hold him under 15 points," said Burley coach Jack Bagley. "He had 15 at the half but we did a better job and held him to five in the second half. The game basically came down to too many missed shots and turnovers. We just dug ourselves into a hole."

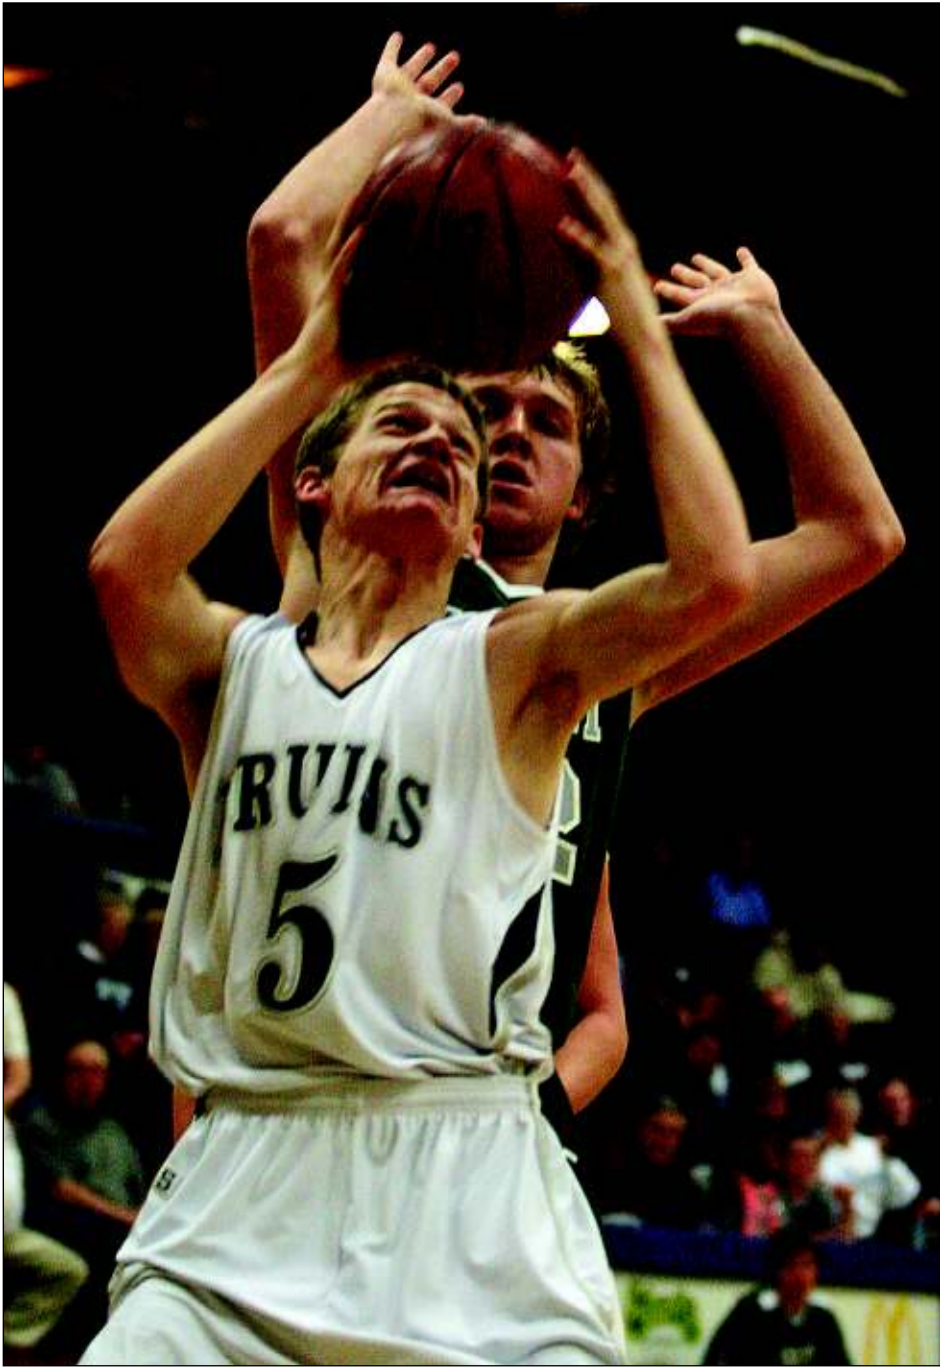

The best battle of the game was the fierce inside play between Colton Stott of Twin Falls and Aaron Tolman of Burley. Tolman did manage to grab a team-high 13 points and six rebounds but the points were anything but easy to come by.

"It was a tough workout," said Stott who tossed in six points and claimed six boards. "Trying to block him out takes a lot of determination and doing the right fundamentals. He is tough to guard."

Tyler Wolters and Robert Sanchez followed Harr's 20 with nine points a piece for the Bruins (8-2, 3-1).

"Our team needs to finish games better and play for four quarters," said Stott. "And be ready when we go on the court and be mentally tough and prepared no matter who we are playing."

Even in losing, Bagley

Golden Eagles shred CNCC

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

The reward for reading like an Eagle? Watching the Eagles put on a pretty good show.

The 12th-ranked College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team delighted a crowd featuring more than 200 elementary school students from Twin Falls with a dominating 127-58 win Thursday over Colorado Northwestern Community College.

The students, who got in free as part of CSI's Read Like an Eagle Program, were treated to arguably CSI's best performance of the season.

CSI head coach Steve Gosar was worried about his team looking past CNCC to Saturday's matchup with No. 25 Eastern Utah. But that changed when the Golden Eagles came out for warm-ups and saw the stands filled with kids.

"I think those kids and the energy they brought to the gym really helped our guys get excited and come out and take care of business," said Gosar.

The Golden Eagles (17-2, 3-1 Scenic West Athletic Conference) shot 56 percent from the field and dished out a season-high 36 assists, playing like a cohesive unit on both ends.

"We were clicking on all cylinders, defense and offense," said Issiah Grayson, who had a team-high seven assists.

Pierre Jackson scored a game-high 27 points, including 17 in the first half on 7-for-7 shooting. Jackson went 4-for-5 from 3-point range as CSI went 13 of 26 on the night.

"It felt good," said Jackson, who had six assists and was one of seven Golden Eagles in double-figure scoring.

Jerrold Brooks hit four treys and scored 21 for CSI, while Mitch Bruneel had 18. Terrance Lafayette and Gerson Santo each netted 12, while Chris Patton and Fabyon Harris chipped in 10.

CSI outrebounded CNCC 64-21, led by Patton (11 boards) and Lafayette (10).

CSI women come away with win against CNCC

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Mercifully, the final buzzer sounded.

"It felt like three games in one. It felt like it would never end," College of Southern Idaho women's basketball coach Randy Rogers said after his team slogged its way to a 77-55 win over Colorado Northwestern Community College Thursday night.

The No. 25 Golden Eagles shot 34 percent from the field, went 23-for-41 at the foul line and struggled to stop the Spartans from slicing to the lane and getting offensive boards.

"So many critical errors, especially defensively," said Rogers. "I don't think we're on the same page. Our communication wasn't very good so we were confused defensively. We reached a lot because they were always going by us and we were chasing."

CSI trailed 13-12 after a four-point play by CNCC's Tamekia Hunt, but responded with a 10-0 run en route to a 39-19 halftime lead. The Spartans actually outscored the Eagles for much of the second half, using runs of 8-0 and 7-0 to get within 12 on two occasions before CSI put the game away on consecutive treys by Kyler Parai.

Defensive effort lifts Hagerman past No. 1 Shoshone

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — In the midst of a defensive struggle that was crying out for a big play, up stepped Ryan Luttmner.

Hagerman's defense held Shoshone to single digits in three quarters and Luttmner hit a back-breaking 3-pointer in the fourth quarter as the Pirates upset the top-ranked Indians 53-45 on Thursday night.

Luttmner, who finished with a game-high 14 points, had been held scoreless in the second half until Ryan Arnold found him wide open on the perimeter and the sharp-shooting Hagerman senior made no mistake to give his team a 48-41 lead, and vital breathing space, with just a couple of minutes left to play.

"I was just taking shots when I was open, doing what my coaches want me to do," said Luttmner, who hit four treys on the night. "I wasn't sure it was going in when it left my hand, but when it did I knew it was a big shot."

Bigger was the Pirates' defensive effort, after a first quarter in which Shoshone (9-2, 2-1 Snake River North) did essentially whatever it wanted in racing out to a 11-2 lead early in the game and a 19-13 edge at the end of the quarter.

After that it was nine points, nine and eight in the final three periods, while the Indians fired their own defensive bullets in one burst, holding Hagerman (7-4, 3-0) to four points in the third just to get back into the game.

"It was just about taking care of our business," said Hagerman point guard Zac Reid, who finished with seven points, 10 rebounds and four assists. "We hadn't been playing at a level we were happy with, so we all needed to step up. Tonight was great team-wise, we played as well as we have all season."

Garret Sant led Shoshone with 11 points, while Thomas Lanham added 10 and 10 rebounds. But Lanham, one of Shoshone's top players, was held scoreless after halftime as Hagerman clamped down on the defensive end.

"Their defense killed us, and got us out of what we wanted to do offensively," said Sant. "We hustled, and I thought we played decently, but they played really well. We're rivals in a way and we always step things up against each other. Hopefully we'll do better when they come to our place."

Hagerman visits Grace on Saturday, while Shoshone hosts Wendell tonight.

Thunder edge Magic, 125-124

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Durant scored 36 points, Russell Westbrook added 32 in his fourth career triple-double and the Oklahoma City Thunder fought off the Orlando Magic 125-124 Thursday night for their fourth straight win.

Westbrook also had 13 assists and 10 rebounds in Oklahoma City's highest-scoring game of the season. It was the second straight game the Thunder set a season high for points in regulation, and this time they even surpassed their output in a triple-overtime win against New Jersey.

Dwight Howard led Orlando with 39 points and 18 rebounds, and J.J. Redick made four 3-pointers and scored 18 points while leading a failed fourth-quarter comeback.

The Magic, who had been surging following those blockbuster trades that overhauled the roster, lost their second straight after a nine-game winning streak.

TIMBERWOLVES 109, WIZARDS 97

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Love had 35 points and 11 rebounds and Darko Milicic had 14 points and 11 rebounds to keep the Washington Wizards winless on the road in Minnesota's 109-97 victory on Thursday night.

John Wall had 14 points and 10 assists for the Wizards, who fell to 0-19 on the road. They are the only team in the NBA that has yet to win away from home this season.

The Timberwolves trailed by four with 5:46 to play, but closed the game with a 19-1 surge to snap a five-game losing streak. Love scored eight points during the run, making up for the absence of Michael Beasley, who was out with a sprained left ankle.

Utah State outlasts Boise State

BOISE — Brokeith Pane had 19 points and eight rebounds at Utah State handed Boise State its first Western Athletic Conference loss, 68-59 on Thursday.

The Broncos (11-6, 4-1 WAC) got a game-high 20 points from Robert Arnold, but shot just 32 percent from the field in the loss.

Guard Brian Green made five 3-pointers and scored 16 for the Aggies (15-2, 4-0 WAC).

NORTHERN COLORADO 57, IDAHO STATE 37

GREELEY, Colo. — Elliott Lloyd scored 11 points and Northern Colorado dealt Idaho State its 19th consecutive road loss, winning 57-37 on Thursday night.

Kenny McGowen had 12 points for Idaho State (5-11, 1-3). Leading scorer Broderick Gilchrest went scoreless and was held out of the second half with a sprained right ankle.

STANFORD 58, NO. 17 WASHINGTON 56.

STANFORD, Calif. — Josh Owens scored the go-ahead basket on a left-handed tip-in with 29 seconds left and Stanford stunned No. 17 Washington 58-56 on Thursday night to stay unbeaten in Maples Pavilion this season.

MINNESOTA 70, NO. 8 PURDUE 67.

MINNEAPOLIS — Blake

Hoffarber's 26 points and Minnesota's improved perimeter defense helped the Gophers outlast eighth-ranked Purdue 70-67 on Thursday night.

Kyle Barone had 13 points and seven rebounds and Luiz Toledo added 11 points and six boards for the Vandals (10-6, 4-1), who won their fourth in a row in WAC play.

Stanford hires David Shaw to replace Jim Harbaugh

STANFORD, Calif. — David Shaw arrived as an assistant on the Stanford coaching staff with Jim Harbaugh four years ago with the task of rebuilding a one-win team.

Shaw was hired Thursday to replace Harbaugh and maintain the Cardinal's place as a national contender following their most successful season in decades.

Shaw won out over fellow assistants Greg Roman and Vic Fangio among others to take over the program less than a week after Harbaugh left to become coach of the San Francisco 49ers.

"David has made a substantial contribution to the recent success of our program and our team has great confidence in him," athletic director Bob Bowlsby said in a statement. "I could not be more excited to work with David and to assist him and his staff in leading our football program to high achievement in the years ahead."

Shaw could have to replace much of the coaching staff as Harbaugh is interested in bringing Fangio, Roman and others with him to the NFL.

The job Shaw inherits is a much more desirable one than Harbaugh took over after Stanford went 1-11 in 2006 under Walt Harris.

Auburn: Cam Newton declares for draft

AUBURN, Ala. — Heisman Trophy winner Cam Newton will skip his senior season and enter the NFL draft.

Auburn released a statement Thursday night announcing the quarterback's decision. Newton led the Tigers to their first national title since 1957 and a 14-0 season with a 22-19 victory over Oregon on Monday night in his lone season.

Newton says Auburn is somewhere he can "always call home." Newton is projected as a first-rounder after winning several national player of the year awards.

AP source: LSU's Crowton heading to Maryland

BATON ROUGE, La. — LSU offensive coordinator Gary Crowton has resigned and a person familiar with his plans says the assistant coach is taking a similar job at Maryland under new Terrapins coach Randy Edsall.

Crowton has been with LSU four seasons, starting in 2007, when the Tigers won a national title. LSU coach Les Miles announced Crowton's resignation on Thursday but is saying only that he'll take a similar job elsewhere.

Crowton has said he recently interviewed at Maryland, and the person who told The Associated Press he'll take that job spoke on condition of anonymity because Maryland has not announced it.

NCAA president: Tougher parent rules needed

SAN ANTONIO — NCAA president Mark Emmert on Thursday called for new rules so parents no longer "sell the athletic services" of their children in the wake of backlash following the investigation into Auburn quarterback Cam Newton.

Emmert didn't mention the Heisman Trophy winner during his first state of the association speech at the NCAA's annual convention. But he said the NCAA could vote on new enforcements early as April.

"It's wrong for parents to sell the athletic services of their student athletes to a university, and we need to make sure that we have rules to stop that problem," Emmert said. "And today we don't. We have to fix that. Student athletes trading on their standing as star student athletes for money or benefits is not acceptable, and we need to address it and make sure it doesn't happen."

Emmert didn't give suggest what new rules might look like. But he said the measures must be clear so that the public understands what's a violation and what isn't.

Emmert, who took over from interim president Jim Isch in October, led his first convention with the NCAA besieged by criticism for its handling of several college football scandals this season.

GOLF Play washed out at Sony Open in Hawaii

HONOLULU — All those rookies ready to start their PGA Tour careers will have to wait another day. The opening round of the Sony Open, the first full-field event of the season, was washed out Thursday because of heavy overnight rain that left too much water on Waialae Country Club. Once the sun came up and officials could see, it was a quick decision. Some fairways and bunkers were filled with large puddles.

"The golf course is under water," PGA Tour tournament director Mark Russell said. "We've got some more rain coming, and we just didn't think that we could get it in tournament condition today."

The plan is to play the opening two rounds on Friday and Saturday, with 36 holes on Sunday. The cut will be the nearest number to 60 players, although everyone in the top 70 will get credit for making the cut and will get paid.

Broncos hire former Panthers coach John Fox

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — John Fox turned around a bumbling team before. The Denver Broncos are counting on him to do it again.

Fox was picked over four other candidates to replace Josh McDaniels, who was fired Dec. 6 amid the Broncos’ worst slide in four decades and the embarrassing Spygate II videotaping scandal.

The last season led to a restructuring of the front office and the return of Hall of Famer John Elway as chief football executive. On Thursday, Elway hired Fox, the 55-year-old former Carolina Panthers coach.

Elway wrote on Twitter in announcing the hiring that Fox “is a dynamic and proven leader who will energize our entire organization.”

“I am very thankful to Pat Bowlen and John Elway for giving me the opportunity to coach a football team with such a proud tradition,” Fox said in a statement. “The Broncos have a culture of winning, and I am excited to continue that legacy. I can’t wait to get to work.”

And his task seems as high and steep as the biggest peaks in the Rocky Mountains.

The Broncos are coming off a franchise-worst 4-12

In this Sept. 26, 2010, photo, then-Carolina Panthers coach John Fox reacts to a call in the first half of an NFL football game against the Cincinnati Bengals in Charlotte, N.C. The Denver Broncos hired Fox on Thursday to resurrect a downtrodden team. Fox's contract wasn't renewed by the Panthers following an NFL-worst 2-14 season.

season, own the second overall pick in the draft and are in need of a major overhaul — much like the Panthers were when Fox arrived in 2002 following a 1-15 season.

He led them to a 7-9 mark in his first year before guiding them to the Super Bowl in his second season.

“I think the rebuild probably is going to require a little bit more on defense than offense but you know, I think I have a blueprint that we executed in Carolina and I don’t see any reason why it wouldn’t work here in Denver,” Fox said before his interview with the Broncos on Wednesday.

Fox went 78-74 including playoffs in nine seasons with the Panthers, who didn’t renew his contract following an NFL-worst 2-14 season in 2010. Fox led the Panthers to the 2004 Super Bowl.

BROWNS’ HIRE PAT SHURMUR AS NEW COACH

CLEVELAND — Pat Shurmur quickly turned rookie quarterback Sam Bradford into a rising NFL star. Shurmur’s next project will be tougher.

The Cleveland Browns are no easy fix.

Shurmur, St. Louis’ offensive coordinator the past two years, was hired by the Browns on Thursday, ending a search for their fifth coach since 1999 that began when team president Mike Holmgren fired Eric Mangini on Jan. 3 after his second straight 11-loss season.

Shurmur isn’t a big-name hire, and his addition won’t trigger a celebration by Browns fans or a rush of season-ticket requests. But to Holmgren, the 45-year-old’s last name means success.

Shurmur’s late uncle, Fritz, was Holmgren’s defensive coordinator in Green Bay when the Packers won the Super Bowl in 1996. And in hiring a candidate with no head coaching experience, Holmgren is following the same path he took in getting to the top of his profession.

Like Shurmur, Holmgren was a quarterbacks coach and an offensive coordinator before getting the Packers’ job in 1992. When Shurmur, who was the first of three known candidates to be interviewed, sat across the desk from Holmgren, Cleveland’s top football executive may have seen a younger version of himself.

BRETT FAVRE’S SISTER OUT OF JAIL ON METH CHARGES

KILN, Miss. — The sister of Vikings quarterback Brett Favre was released from jail Thursday after a brief appearance in a Mississippi courtroom, a day after she was arrested during a methamphetamine bust.

Brandi Favre, 34, wearing orange prison scrubs and a GAP sweat shirt with her hands cuffed in front of her, was in the courtroom less than 10 minutes. Hancock County Justice Court Judge Tom Carver Sr. agreed to arraign Favre before her co-defendants because of the attention she drew.

Favre had been jailed on $40,000 bond on charges of manufacturing methamphetamine and generating hazardous waste.

Defense attorneys Richard V. Dymond and Chad Favre said she returned home after posting bond Thursday afternoon. Chad Favre said he is a distant cousin and close friend of Brandi Favre.

If convicted, Brandi Favre faces up to $1 million in fines and up to 30 years in prison on each count.

Gosar praised his team’s unselfish play.

“They played awfully well tonight.”

Right to the final horn. Up 122-58 in the final minute, CSI guard Kevin Attila dove on the sideline to save a ball, leading to a Lafayette trey. It was the type of play the Eagles displayed all night.

“I love our momentum,” said Attila. “It just feels like we’re on the right track.”

Bruneel and Jackson threw down consecutive slams to ignite a 21-0 run that turned a 15-15 tie into a 36-15 lead as CSI held CNCC scoreless for more than seven minutes. Bruneel scored 10 in the spurt. The Eagles then ripped off a 13-0 run, capped by a Terrance Lafayette steal and dunk, and took a 59-24 halftime lead on Jackson’s buzzer-beating 3-pointer CNCC (5-11, 0-4 SWAC) was led by Brent Aga’s 19 points.

Notes: CSI center Chris Patton and CNCC forward Kenneth Gilbert got tangled up just before the halftime horn, leading to technical fouls on both players and the ejection of Gilbert.

Felicity Jones led CSI (15-4, 2-2 Scenic West Athletic Conference) with 14 points, while Mechela Barnes and Parai each scored 13. Barnes added five rebounds, four assists and three steals, while Laurel Kearsley grabbed 12 boards, but CSI never found an offensive rhythm.

The Eagles snatched eight offensive rebounds in the game's first five minutes, but wound up winning the rebounding battle just 53-47.

“I think we got caught watching to see if shots went in and not reacting when shots went up,” said Rogers.

CNCC (6-12, 0-4 SWAC) got 13 points and eight rebounds from Hunt, while Da’Niaveia McDade finished with a game-high 15 boards to go with eight points.

Rogers said Parai and fellow guard Guili El-Mir “really make us go when they’re playing well,” but both have struggled since returning from injuries.

CSI is home again Saturday, hosting Eastern Utah in a 3 p.m. SWAC matchup.

Notes: CSI forward Tina Fakahafua sat out the game after having a tooth pulled. Sophomore forward Holly Checketts returned from a five-game absence following December knee surgery and scored two points in five minutes of action.

their winning streak to eight games. Minico has outscored its four conference opponents thus far by an average of 22 points.

Wood River dropped to 0-9 (0-3 GBC), despite an inspired effort.

“We’ve improved a lot since the break, for sure,” Sutton said. “Coach had us in there practicing and we got some new stuff in that’s helped us a lot.”

Minico’s 6-10 center Kevin Jurgensmeier, who is nine inches taller than Wood River’s post players, scored 19 points for the Spartans, who led by one point at halftime and didn’t start to pull away until an 8-0 run in the game’s final three minutes.

“Our kids did a good job of competing for a full 32 minutes. A couple calls here, a couple baskets there...,” said Wood River coach John Radford. “(Minico) is really good, and I was really proud of my kids, they gave it their all.”

Wood River shot the ball more efficiently at 36.8 percent, while holding Minico to 35.4 percent from the field, including 16.6 percent (3 of 18) shooting from beyond the 3-point line.

“Obviously we weren’t ready to play. We’re not shooting the ball real well right now,” said Minico coach Mike Graefe.

Wood River hosts Filer on Saturday. Minico has a week off before it completes the first half of its conference schedule by traveling to Canyon Ridge on Jan. 21.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Biography is a very definite region bounded on the north by history, on the south by fiction, on the east by obituary, and on the west by tedium."

— Philip Guedalla

Few autobiographical bridge books have made much of a stir recently, but one that I enjoyed was "A Bridge Too Far?" by Tom Hanlon with Enda Murphy. It centers on the Irish bridge player Tom Hanlon and his decision to become a full-time bridge professional and poker player. Although there is more narrative than customary in bridge books, this is not necessarily a bad thing. And there are certainly plenty of deals, mostly featuring those (good and bad) played by the Irish team that has established England as the most powerful of the English-speaking countries of Europe.

Today's deal, from the 2004 Schapiro Spring Foursomes, highlights an accurate defense to four hearts. After the spade lead was won in dummy, declarer cashed its second top spade, then played a heart to his king.

It takes card-perfect defense to beat four hearts, and Hanlon's teammate, Adam Mesbur, was up to the task as West. He ducked the heart king, an essential part of the defense, though far from an obvious one, then won the heart continuation. Now came his second master-play, the switch to the only card that could defeat the contract — the diamond king. This locked declarer in dummy.

South knew from the bidding that West held both the club ace and queen, so to draw the last trump, he attempted to come to hand with a diamond. But East, Nick Fitzgibbon, was quick to ruff, then shift to the club that sent the game one down.

ANSWER: After your partner reverses, guaranteeing extra values, your thoughts should turn to slam. But in the short term, emphasize your good hearts by a forcing jump to three hearts, showing a good six-card heart suit. Let partner tell you if he fits hearts, then you can decide how to move forward.

DEAR ABBY: A former student asked me to write a character reference to help her land a teaching job abroad. I agreed, since I thought highly of her potential as a teacher and scholar, and her level of character. However, after she was placed in the classroom, the ministry of education of the nation where she was to teach discovered some inappropriate posting on her social networking site.

Because I had written the recommendation, they contacted me asking if they had a problem and provided me with copies of what they had found. Her posting detailed a history of forging fake IDs to buy alcohol while underage, numerous episodes of binge drinking in high school and college, her marijuana use and several exhibitionistic stunts and sexual activities that I won't mention. I was shocked. None of this matched the person I thought I knew.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

When I tried to contact her to let her know she had been discovered, she rebuffed my inquiries and cut off all contact! Her parents' response was denial and to "kill the messenger." I have been left with the problem of how to respond to the ministry's questions.

Ordinarily I would not want my signature associated with someone with those behaviors and attitudes, but this young woman is in legal jeopardy abroad. I still don't know if what she wrote is true, but I find it highly problematic that she would portray herself as she did.

This situation has so shaken my trust in the character and judgment of the 20-something crowd that I'm now reluctant to write recommendations for any of my students. What do you think I should have done? I'm concerned that too many of these young people, however intelligent, lack integrity, character, judgment and common sense.

— HEARTBROKEN TEACHER, OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: You responded appropriately by trying to contact your former student and her parents. If the information on that social networking site is an accurate reflection of her behavior, she could get herself in real trouble if the country she's in is one with conservative social views.

It is intelligent of you to think twice about giving references to students in the future. It's important that you be careful because there could be liability for you if you knew anything about her antics when you wrote her recommendation. If you are wondering how to respond to the ministry of education, what you need to convey is that you had no knowledge of any social networking sites or postings related to her, and that you were basing your recommendations on your personal interactions with her.

Let this be a lesson to all young people who are using social networking sites. Employers are doing background checks and you will be discovered. Any past communications you have on the Internet are there to stay.

This has been a hot topic in the media. But I'm interested to know what you, my readers, both young and old, think about this. You teach me more than I teach you, and this subject is one of great importance.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby — Keepers Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. (Postage is included in the price.)

IF JANUARY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Sense and sensibility are two words you know well. You won't need to read Jane Austen's book to know how to proceed during the next six weeks. You have a talent for using common sense in everything that is of importance to you. A little extra romance flooding into your life will inspire you to bigger and better things in March. Write down your ideas for future reference, as they may be of value at a later date. A new friend could help you achieve something you have merely dreamed about. In April don't take your friends, or your future, for granted. Do what you are supposed to be doing and all will turn out just fine.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A stiff upper lip can be part of a smile. Just because you are hard working and ethical doesn't mean you don't have time for playfulness. Let a new romance know that you are happy to let good times roll.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Go ahead; let the bullets fly. A sincere apology won't ricochet to knock the wind out of your sails and no one will make fun of genuine expressions of love. People will shower you with kindness.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Play your cards as though you hold a winning hand. Plan to spend time with good friends or loyal romantic partners. You might find an excellent opportunity to hold an intimate discussion about the future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can't fight city hall. Find ways to remain within the guidelines and still achieve a compromise that will honor your viewpoint. Your suspicions might be justified, but not as serious as you thought.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Strive to create a balanced life with many interests. Don't forget to include vitality in your health as well as your career in your to-do list. Keep in mind that any job worth doing is worth doing well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You might think that the surgeon general would be wise to put a warning label on life. Stress could have you up in arms. Plan to take some time out to enjoy simple pleasures with a loving partner tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Taking a hard-nosed stance could result in vindication. Those who have crossed you will be eager to regain your trust. Forget and forgive later this evening. Patch up problems by being tolerant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Save a few pennies and they will add up. You might feel that you don't have enough to buy what you want but if you shave a few cents off here and there, eventually you will attain financial security.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Purr with pleasure in the privacy of your personal palace. Turn your surroundings into a comfortable retreat where you can entertain a romantic partner or entertain friends with ease.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Figure it all out finally and create a finale. The new people who cross your path and offer their hand in friendship may give you cause you to suspect their motives. Find a way to put doubts to rest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hickory, dickory dock. The mouse might run up your clock and trigger an alarm. If you have been sleeping through recent events and are unaware of a change in status, you could receive a wake-up call.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Words of love, so soft and tender. Mama Cass isn't around to croon the song anymore, but you can find someone close to your heart who knows how to hum a few bars and get you in the mood for love.
