Pine beetle control effort paying off, forest service says

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Douglas fir beetles — these insects attack evergreen trees, burrowing in, eating away, eventually leaving the tree a red-needled husk of itself.

The U.S. Forest Service has been working to limit this damage near populated places like campgrounds, summer cabins and the Ketchum-Sun Valley area. They used pheromone-infused plastic flakes, hung from trees in pouches and aerially distributed, on Bald Mountain last June. So far, those efforts seem to be working.

“The flakes did successfully reduce the Doug fir tree mortality when the right dosage was applied,” said Kurt Nelson, district ranger at the Forest Service’s Ketchum ranger district. “It’s something we recognize can’t be done in a broad scale across all the forest that may be affected, but in certain high-value areas or important visual areas it could have some application.”

The Forest Service anticipates that the pheromones will need to be reapplied annually for between one and four more years in those areas, unless the beetle populations fall off naturally.

“Overall in this area, (the mountain pine beetles have) been outbreaking since around 2000, going on 11 years,” said Laura Lazarus, a forest entomologist with the Forest Service’s Forest Health Protection office in Boise. The mountain pine outbreaks typically subside in an average of 12 years.

Lazarus acknowledged that the visual impact of the beetle kill — the hillsides full of dead, red-needled trees — looks bad to the untrained eye. However, because the beetles only target trees of a certain size, there are plenty remaining to repopulate the forest over time.

Regional History Librarian Sandra Hofferber says one of The Community Library’s former librarians rescued more than 6,000 Union Pacific Railroad negatives from the trash nearly 30 years ago. The negatives are kept in the library’s vault, along with other fragile material.

From mining cabin to Sun Valley treasure

Ketchum library marks 56th year

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — On Wednesday, a petite Japanese woman saddled with briefcases made her way to the regional history department of The Community Library, to thumb through its Ernest Hemingway collection for a story for a men’s magazine in Japan.

Next Tuesday, a Swedish interviewer has scheduled an appointment to interview librarian Sandra Hofferber regarding the man whom some regard as America’s most famous author.

Neither might have ever made their way to the area had it not been for 17 women who decided Sun Valley was one page short of paradise without a library.

On Wednesday, hundreds of people flocked to the library to raise a toast to the women who founded it 56 years ago, and tour the facility for Founders’ Day.

The story of the library began on Sun Valley’s golf links — hole No. 7, to be exact — when three women bemoaned the fact that they had nothing to read, with neither a bookstore nor a library in Ketchum.

A few months later, in January 1955, the women enlisted 14 others and each put up a dollar to rent a miner’s cabin with no heat, electricity or running water. Then they plumbed the town’s closets to start a thrift store, hoping they could make $40 a month to buy a couple of books here and there.

The first day, they made $101, with one customer even buying an ashtray on the counter that had not been for sale, recalled the late Clara Spiegel, according to an oral history the library recorded. A visitor from Kalamazoo, Mich., talked Yale University into donating 400 duplicate books from its collection, and a library was born.

“The offspring of mothers of the library couldn’t even wear clothes out or fully grow into them before they were whipped off and taken straight down to the thrift shop,” recalled Ketchum resident Michael Engl.

Today the library is considered one of the premiere private libraries in the Northwest, according to Executive Director Colleen Daly.

It boasts the regional history department with more than 10,000 historical photos, the largest collection of ski instructional and historical books in the Intermountain West, mine inspector reports dating back to the 1800s, Ketchum freight company ledgers, and more than 6,000 negatives that former librarian Dottie Taylor rescued from the wastebaskets of the Union Pacific Railroad museum in Omaha, Neb., in 1982.

Student growth is on fast track in Shoshone

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

The Shoshone School District will extend its school weeks by two hours to allow for more intensive learning as it pushes for improved standardized test scores and overall student achievement.

The school was mandated by the state to increase student achievement due to low test scores and $100,000 in start-up money was given to the district by the Idaho State Department of Education to provide longer school days and all-day kindergarten.

Students will start the new semester Wednesday, and after the normal school day is over, elementary and middle school students will be directed to different classes based on their Idaho State Achievement Test scores.

Monday through Thursday, students will dedicate a half-hour to remedial work and enrichment activities, depending on their academic needs.

“The (program) will definitely give students an extra boost,” said Michael Perry, secondary social studies teacher.

Shoshone School District Superintendent Rob Waite said teachers will be looking at data to see what is best for the student. He said students may not be with their classroom teachers in order to give students a fresh look at the basics like math and reading.

For students who did well on the ISAT tests, extended time will also include enrichment activities. Waite said they will be two-week units and could include activities like reading a higher level novel or taking on a more advanced science project.

“We are using research based practices that work and using data to drive our decision making,” Waite said. “Our teachers have been real leaders in this.”

Waite said the school district was given the start-up grant a month ago so details to the three year plan are still being worked out.

“I really think we’re ready though,” he said.

Computer opponent could make two ‘Jeopardy!’ champs deep blue

By Jim Fitzgerald and David R. Martin
Associated Press

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS, N.Y. — The clue: It’s the size of 10 refrigerators, has access to the equivalent of 200 million pages of information and knows how to answer in the form of a question.

The correct response: “What is the computer IBM developed to become a ‘Jeopardy!’ whiz?”

Watson, which IBM claims as a profound advance in artificial intelligence, edged out game-show champions Ken Jennings and Brad Rutter on Thursday in its first public test, a short practice round ahead of a million-dollar tournament that will be televised next month.

Computer

Later, the human contestants made jokes about the “Terminator” movies and robots from the future. Indeed, four questions into the round you had to wonder if the rise of the machines was already upon us — in a trivial sense at least.

Watson tore through a category about female archaeologists, repeatedly activating a mechanical button before either Ken Jennings or Brad Rutter could buzz in, then nailing the questions: “What is Jericho?” “What is Crete?”

Its gentle male voice even scored a laugh when it said, “Let’s finish ‘Chicks Dig Me.’” Jennings, who won a record 74 consecutive “Jeopardy!” games in 2004-05, then salvaged the category, winning $1,000 by identifying the prehistoric human skeleton Dorothy Garrod found in Israel: “What is Neanderthal?”

He and Rutter, who won a record of nearly $3.3 million in prize money, had more success on questions about children’s books and the initials “M.C.,” though Watson knew about “Harold and the Purple Crayon” and that it was Maurice Chevalier who sang “Thank Heaven for Little Girls” in the film “Gigi.” The computer pulled in $4,400 in the practice round, compared with $3,400 for Jennings and $1,200 for Rutter.

Watson is powered by 10 racks of IBM servers running the Linux operating system. It’s not connected to the Internet but has digested encyclopedias, dictionaries, books, news, movie scripts and more.

The system is the result of four years of work by IBM researchers around the globe, and although it was designed to compete on “Jeopardy!” the technology has applications well beyond the game, said John Kelly III, IBM director of research. He said the technology could help doctors sift through massive amounts of information to draw conclusions for patient care, and could aid professionals in a wide array of other fields.

“What Watson does and has demonstrated is the ability to advance the field of artificial intelligence by miles,” he said.

Watson, named for IBM founder Thomas J. Watson, is reminiscent of IBM’s famous Deep Blue computer, which defeated chess champion Garry Kasparov in 1997. But while chess is well-defined and mathematical, “Jeopardy!” presents a more open-ended challenge involving troves of information and complexities of human language that would confound a normal computer.

“Language is ambiguous; it’s contextual; it’s implicit,” said IBM scientist David Ferrucci, a leader of the Watson team. Sorting out the context — especially in a game show filled with hints and jokes — is an enormous job for the computer, which also must analyze how certain it is of an answer and whether it should risk a guess, he said.

The massive computer was not behind its podium between Jennings and Rutter; instead it was represented by an IBM Smart Planet icon on an LCD screen.

The practice round was played on a stage at an IBM research center in Yorktown Heights, 38 miles north of Manhattan and across the country from the game show’s home in Culver City, Calif. A real contest among the three, to be televised Feb. 14-16, was to be played at IBM on Friday.

The winner of the televised match will be awarded $1 million. Second place gets $300,000, third place $200,000. IBM, which has headquarters in Armonk, said it would give its winnings to charity while Jennings and Rutter said they would give away half theirs.

In a question-and-answer session with reporters after the practice round, Rutter and Jennings made joking reference to the jump in technology Watson represents.

“When Watson’s progeny comes back to kill me from the future,” Rutter said, “I have my escape route planned just in case.”

Jennings said someone suggested his challenge was like the legend of John Henry, the 19th-century laborer who beat a steam drill in a contest but died in the effort. Jennings prefers a comparison to “Terminator,” where the hero was a little more resilient.

Storm brings flood threat to Wash., Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A Pacific storm sweeping through the Northwest brought heavy rain to Washington state and Oregon over the weekend, causing multiple landslides that shut down roads across the region and threatening to top rivers already swollen with snowmelt.

Oregon transportation officials on Sunday closed U.S. Highway 20, also called Santiam Highway, near Cascadia in central Oregon after a landslide brought about 150 cubic yards of mud, rock and debris into the road. Landslides also closed sections of three southwest Washington highways, including State Route 14 near Cape Horn, State Route 411 near Hazel Dell Road in Kelso and State Route 508 at Bear Canyon.

Kyle Foreman, Grant County’s public information officer, said two people were injured when their cars were struck by a rockslide about two miles north of Soap Lake in Washington state. The rockslide also forced the closure of State Highway 17.

Forecasters said numerous mudslides were reported in the north Oregon coast, including two near Tillamook, and in the Cascade Range.

The rain threatened to push some rivers and streams over their banks at a time when many waterways were rising because of warming temperatures and melting snow. Some rivers in Washington and Oregon had reached flood stage, and more were expected to rise above that level through Tuesday.

“Flooding could wind down as early as Monday morning in some areas, but others may not see that until Tuesday,” since it takes time for water to flow through some of the bigger rivers, said Dennis D’Amico, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Seattle.

In Oregon, emergency officials have advised residents of six homes in south Tillamook County to evacuate, the Oregonian reported.

Fire crews in Randle in southwest Washington have been going door-to-door warning residents to watch the rising Cowlitz River and be prepared to evacuate if necessary, Fire Chief Jeff Jaques said Sunday.

The Oregon geology department said people living in or driving through steep areas should be wary of potential landslides and debris flows.

Battle expected over Idaho wind energy tax break

The Associated Press

BOISE — A tax break for producers of alternative energy that’s up for renewal this year will face opposition from a group that says residents near wind farms aren’t being treated fairly.

Idahoans for Responsible Wind Energy want lawmakers this legislative session to make sure residents get adequate notice and fair consideration when it comes to wind farms that influence property values and quality of life.

“It’s not just the visual impact,” said Maureen Finnerty, a spokeswoman for the group. “It’s about the money and whose wallet it’s in.”

The 2005 law that allows a 6 percent sales tax rebate sunsets this year. Developers of renewable energy say the rebate is needed to develop power that creates jobs and brings in tax money for counties and schools.

“This will be one of the big fights of this session,” Roy Eiguren, an Idaho energy lobbyist representing wind developers, told the Idaho Statesman.

Wind energy in Idaho produced about 300 kilowatts in 2005. At the end of this year renewable power generation, mainly from wind, is expected to reach 544 megawatts.

Continuation of the rebate is also backed by groups seeking to develop biomass energy: dairy farmers, the Idaho Cattle Association, the Idaho Farm Bureau and Adams County.

Others wanting to see the rebate remain in place are landfill power developers, solar power developers and Micron’s Transform Solar offshoot.

Seventeen women raised $24,000 in two years in the mid-1950s to build Ketchum’s library on a lot donated by Union Pacific, which founded Sun Valley Resort. The library’s current building opened in 1976.

Library

The library even has a rare collection of drawings from British explorer Capt. James Cook in its reference section.

The library has not taken a single handout from the government in its 56 years, its administrators say, preferring to rely on donations, income from its Gold Mine thrift store and funds raised through its Moveable Feast party and Community Homes Tour.

It does not charge late fees, although occasionally a sheepish patron offers a donation.

“Our 17 founding members were quite forward-thinking, but I don’t think any of them could have dreamed of the visitors, lecturers and computer systems the library now boasts),” said Executive Director Colleen Daly. “And we’re not done. Our goal is to be relentlessly relevant.”

Would the founding mothers have started a library in this day and age when people can punch up a book on a Kindle?

“I’m sure they would have,” said Hofferber. “A book is different than a digital medium. ... When you read something digitally, it doesn’t stick with you like it does on paper where it is unchanged. Those 17 women wanted to enrich the lives of the children in the valley and they saw a library as a way to make that happen.”

Beetle

“It’s very shocking right now, but it’ll be fine in the long-term,” she said. “Really, we’re just left with younger stands of trees. Generally, those trees will grow more vigorously. I don’t always see it as a bad thing.”

However, Lazarus, Nelson and their colleagues are paying close attention to where the beetles are active, in part to know where dead needles and fallen trees are adding to the fuel load for a potential wildfire.

“It does change our fire regimes in terms of how often and how large a fire could occur if the right conditions occur,” Nelson said. “It’s all connected and we need to recognize there are some things we may not be able to control but we can manage in terms of what we might anticipate.”

The mountain pine beetles have also been moving into higher altitudes than they have since the 1930s, Lazarus said. In some places, their lifecycles are sped up as well, so they’re completing it in a single year rather than in two years elsewhere.

This could be linked to warming temperatures, Nelson said, and could have a longer-term impact on the ecosystem because the affected white pines that grow at those higher altitudes take longer to grow and make seed cones than their lower-altitude counterparts.

In coming years, forest users can expect to continue seeing evidence of beetle kill, though less in areas of heavy public use where pheromone treatments have been applied.

AROUND THE VALLEY

City seeks volunteers to study feasibility of Twin Falls rec center

The City of Twin Falls is looking at the viability of a recreation center and wants volunteers for a subcommittee that will examine it.

The subcommittee would explore all aspects of establishing a recreation center, including the need, funding, possible partnerships, size, location and more, according to a city press release.

The city is looking for two residents to sit with two city council members, city staff, a member of a non-profit group, one from the education community and two from the city’s Parks and Recreation Commission on the subcommittee. The first meeting would be at the end of February or beginning of March.

Friday is the application deadline. To apply, send a letter of interest to Dennis J. Bowyer, City of Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Director, City of Twin Falls, P.O. Box 1907, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

For more information, contact Bowyer at 7360-2265 or dbowyer@tfid.org.

Expect delays Tuesday on I-84

Drivers can expect delays on Interstate 84 east of Jerome on Tuesday due to rock blasting near the roadway, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

For the safety of motorists on I-84, a traffic slow-down between the U.S. 93 junction (Exit 173) and the Idaho 50 junction (Exit 182) has been permitted. When crews are prepared for the blast, traffic in both directions will be slowed by pilot vehicles and will remain slow until after the detonation. The blast is expected to take place between 1:30 p.m. and 3 p.m.

Traffic will not come to a complete stop unless debris from the blast reaches the roadway.

After crews ensure the blast left the roadways clear, the pilot vehicles will act as pace cars and return traffic back to highway speeds before exiting at either end of the interstate section.

Crews will be on hand to clear the roadway of debris if needed.

Seubert Excavators Inc., of Cottonwood, is the contractor responsible for the blasting operation taking place in a rock quarry near milepost 176.

Twin Falls council cancels meeting

The Twin Falls City Council will not meet this week.

Its normal Monday meeting was pushed to Tuesday due to the holiday. That meeting was then canceled.

The council will have its next regular meeting on Jan. 24.

Record number of people use traveler information services

Idaho Transportation Department traveler information services have been used more than ever this winter, according to a department release.

The state’s 511 Traveller Information Service, available both by phone and the Internet, has helped 2.28 million users this winter, already surpassing the 2.11 million who used the service in 2008-09.

The system, accessible by dialing 511 or 888-IDA-ROAD, or online at 511.idaho.gov, provides motorists with a variety of services to help them make safe travel decisions. Road and weather condition updates, closure maps and more than 80 online cameras provide travelers with various information.

“We have made a number of significant upgrades to the system since last winter that will give users more options when planning their travel,” said ITD Travel Services Coordinator Tony Ernest.

ITD advises motorists to pull off the highway to dial 511 or access the mobile website, or have passengers retrieve information.

“All of the information our 511 system provides is designed to improve highway safety,” Ernest said. “For that reason, we really want drivers to call or check the website before beginning their trip.”

Heyburn to look into routes for more paved walking paths

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — The Heyburn City Council plans to form a committee to determine where additional walking paths should be placed in the city.

Heyburn resident Roy Belnap suggested during the Wednesday council meeting that the council should work on establishing the routes, which has to be accomplished before any group could apply for grant funding.

“As we talk about growth coming and as we see this coming, if you wait 10 years from now it’ll be too late to make the choice,” Belnap said.

The council has previously expressed a desire to increase the city’s paved walking paths to eventually include linking the Heyburn Riverside paths to the Overland Bridge in north Burley.

“You’ve seen the success that’s already being enjoyed,” Belnap said, referring to the city’s new path system at Riverside Park.

He said that although a discussion has taken place among different groups about the need for the paths, no one has made a move to determine just where the paths should be placed.

“I’ve sat in those meetings where we’re trying to plan for the future and nobody yet can tell me where they’d put them,” Belnap said.

The route has to be established before costs can be determined.

Belnap said there is grant money available that would help cover the costs, including a grant that would put in place paths within a two-mile radius around the elementary school.

A two-mile radius would take paths from the school to 21st Street, south down Villa Drive and east past Greenbrier subdivision, Belnap said.

He said he’d like to see the route traverse a street that is not as busy as 21st Street.

Councilwoman Leann Smith said she would like to move forward with the project.

“I think we should have a committee and pull in citizens on this,” said Councilwoman Joanne Justesen.

The council agreed to collect names that will be submitted to the mayor in order to form a five-member committee.

Laurie Welch may be reached at lwelch@magicvalley.com or at 677-5025.

No. 1 Wozniacki starts Australian Open with win

By John Pye
Associated Press writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Caroline Wozniacki started her first major as the No. 1-ranked woman with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Argentina's Gisela Dulko on Monday in the Australian Open.

It was the 20-year-old Wozniacki's first victory of the year, following a straight-sets loss to Slovakia's Dominika Cibulkova last week in the Sydney International and exhibition losses to No. 2 Vera Zvonareva and Kim Clijsters in Singapore and Hong Kong.

Wozniacki didn't face a break point in the first set and converted her only chance.

Dulko, the top-ranked doubles player, tested Wozniacki in the second set and pulled level at 4-4 with a service break, but the Danish player broke back immediately and served it out on her second match point after a double-fault on her first.

Wozniacki won six tournaments in 2010, including four of her last six, and can retain the top spot by reaching the semifinals.

"My dream when I was a little girl was to reach No. 1 in the world, and that happened last year. But it's a new year, a new start," she said in a courtside interview. "I'm just looking forward to it."

Earlier on center court, Maria Sharapova won for the first time at Melbourne Park since taking the 2008 title, beating Thai veteran Tamarine Tanasugarn 6-1, 6-3.

Sharapova, the former top-ranked player who missed the 2009 tournament because of a shoulder injury and was ousted in the first round last year by fellow Russian Maria Kirilenko, struggled with her serve and was inconsistent in the second set. After losing the opening service game at love, Sharapova won seven straight games to take a 6-1, 1-0 lead.

The 33-year-old Tamarine, clearly not in peak physical condition, rallied and had a game point on serve for a 4-1 lead, but 14th-seeded Sharapova broke back and regained momentum, winning the last five games.

Even when she was winning, though, Sharapova had trouble finding range with her serve. She had 10 double-faults and five aces.

Nerves had a role in that. "I definitely felt that in the beginning. I knew I had an early exit last year and didn't want that to happen this

SO LONG SEAHAWKS

Chicago outs
Seattle 35-24,
Packers next

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Football's oldest rivalry has a grand new prize: a spot in the Super Bowl.

Maybe even with an anniversary reprise of the "Super Bowl Shuffle" if the Chicago Bears can get past the Green Bay Packers.

"It's a big deal. We have a lot of history with them," Bears star linebacker Brian Urlacher said after a 35-24 victory over Seattle set up an NFC championship game matchup with Green Bay. "We don't like them, they don't like us."

Jay Cutler ran for two touchdowns and threw for two as Chicago (12-5) pounded the Seahawks from the outset. The Bears' built a 28-0 lead, but it was against the first division winner with a losing record, making it difficult to measure how good they are. The NFL will find out next week against the Packers (12-6), who have beaten third-seeded Philadelphia and top-seeded Atlanta on the road this month.

The last time Chicago won the NFL title, Walter Payton, Jim McMahon and Mike Singletary did the "Super Bowl Shuffle" all over their opponents. That was 25 years ago, and to compare these Bears with the wild bunch that won Chicago's only Super Bowl 25 years ago is a stretch.

But next Sunday's matchup is fitting if only for the history: It will be the biggest game in Chicago's 90-year series with the Packers. They will play for the 182nd time next Sunday, but it's their first meeting for the NFC title.

Chicago Bears running back Matt Forte (22) dives just short of the goal line during the first half of an NFL divisional playoff football game against the Seattle Seahawks, Sunday in Chicago.

"Now that we have beaten the Seahawks, it just doesn't get any better, as I see it, than for the NFC championship coming down to the Packers coming down on our turf this time," Bears coach Lovie Smith said. "The Packers and Bears to finish it up."

Cutler made it possible as much as anybody. And he did it with nimble feet as well as precise throws, running for 6 and 9-yard TDs.

"It was fun," he said with a smile. "That first one was called. Second one was kind of improv."

There was nothing improvisational about the way the Bears' defense shut down an offense that scored 41 points against New Orleans last week, but that gained only 111 through three quarters at Soldier Field, where Seattle managed a 23-20 victory in October. The Seahawks' points all came with the outcome decided.

"Now we're back, playing together, hopefully peaking at the right time," Urlacher said.

Cutler, in his first postseason game, showed none of the wild swings that often have marked his five-year

Jets shocker: Ryan's boys back up talk, win 28-21

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press writer

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — So the Jets weren't all talk — trash talk — after all.

Now Rex Ryan's rowdy bunch is headed to its second straight AFC championship game after New York backed up its coach's boasts with a 28-21 win Sunday over the New England Patriots — the team with the best record in the NFL.

Mark Sanchez threw three touchdown passes and the Jets sacked Tom Brady five times in the most-hyped of the weekend's four postseason games following a week of verbal potshots from both teams.

New York led its fierce rival 14-3 at halftime before Brady's 2-yard touchdown pass to Alge Crumpler and Sammy Morris' run for a 2-point conversion made it 14-11 late in the third quarter. But Sanchez came right back with a 7-yard scoring pass to Antonio Holmes and New York finished the upset with Shonn Greene's 16-yard touchdown run.

The Jets (13-5) kept

Ryan's prediction of a Super Bowl appearance alive. The Patriots (14-3) lost their third straight postseason game.

"Maybe everybody else never believed, but we believed," Ryan said. "We're moving on. Same old Jets, back to the AFC championship. The only difference is this time we plan on winning."

They lost last season to Indianapolis 30-17, but now have another chance for their first Super Bowl berth since 1969 when another loudmouth, "Broadway Joe" Namath, backed up his guarantee with a 16-9 win over the Baltimore Colts.

Ryan has said many times that the Jets are a Super Bowl-caliber team, and has irritated fans, opposing players and media with his bold remarks. Last week he said the game was a contest between him and Patriots coach Bill Belichick. Then, after Antonio Cromartie called Brady an expletive on Tuesday, Ryan said he wouldn't punish his cornerback.

Mark Wilson ranked 239th in the world, claims the Sony Open title

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

HONOLULU — Mark Wilson made it through a 36-hole marathon Sunday without a bogey and held on for a two-shot victory in the Sony Open that will take him to the Masters for the first time.

Wilson shot a 5-under 65 in the morning to take a one-shot lead into the afternoon round. He stretched his lead to four shots at the turn, then had to hang on when Tim Clark and Steve Marino made late runs on different sides of Waialae.

Clark, who started the final round five shots behind, birdied three of his last four holes. He narrowly missed an eagle putt on the ninth hole and settled for a 64. Then came Marino with two late birdies and one incredible shot that at least gave him hope.

Two shots behind on the par-5 18th, with his feet in the bunker and his ball about chest-high on the side of a hill, Marino blasted a fairway metal from 234 yards away that landed on the front of the green and rolled 40 feet away. His eagle putt narrowly missed, giving him a 68.

Wilson made one last birdie he didn't need, giving him a 67 for his third career victory.

"It was nice to go right to the tee and not have to think about it," Wilson said of having only a few minutes before the third and fourth rounds. "I'm thankful it's over now."

Wilson, who finished at 16-under 264, played his final 40 holes without a bogey. That proved significant at a couple of points in the final round. He got into trouble on the eighth hole and was 150 yards out in the fairway playing his third shot, sure to lose some of his two-shot lead. But he stuffed it to 7 feet for par, then birdied the ninth to expand his lead to four.

Even bigger was his par on the 17th, even though Wilson didn't realize it.

Clark had already finished at 14-under 266. Marino was starting to charge with back-to-back birdies to get to 14 under, while playing in the same group with Wilson.

Wilson hit into a bunker and blasted out some 12 feet past the hole. But his par putt caught enough of the lip to fall, and he clutched his fist. Only later did Wilson reveal that he didn't look at a leaderboard, not wanting to think about anything but making birdies.

He asked his caddie as they walked toward the 18th green where they stood, and the caddied told him, "Just get it up-and-down." Wilson obeyed, pitching to 4 feet. The putt became easier when Marino missed his eagle.

The victory, worth $990,000, was important to Wilson for a couple of reasons. He is in the last year of his exemption from winning in Mexico in 2009, and he is coming off a poor season in which he had only two top 10s.

And then there's the Masters.

Augusta National did not invite winners of most PGA Tour events until 2007, a month after Wilson won the Honda Classic. His win in Mexico didn't count because it was an opposite-field tournament, the same week as the Match Play Championship.

Jimmy Walker closed with a 68 to finish alone in fourth, while Matt Kuchar and Matt Bettencourt were another shot back. Stuart Appleby and Shigeki Maruyama, who started Sunday tied for the 36-hole lead, never got going. Maruyama had rounds of 70-69 to tie for seventh, his first top 10 on the PGA Tour in two years. Appleby didn't make a birdie until the final hole of the last round and shot 72.

From top to bottom, 56 players were separated by only seven shots going into the final 36 holes, a recipe for anyone winning from anywhere. But on a quiet day near the shores of Waikiki, there was little movement.

Wilson chipped in from behind the third green for birdie and kept bogeys off his card a 65, the best score of

Surging Clippers end Lakers' 7-game win streak

LOS ANGELES — Eric Gordon scored 30 points, Blake Griffin had 18 points and 15 rebounds after a foul-plagued start, and the Los Angeles Clippers snapped the Los Angeles Lakers' seven-game winning streak with a 99-92 victory Sunday.

Four players were ejected from this crosstown rivalry game after a scuffle under the basket with 5.7 seconds to play.

After Lamar Odom grabbed Griffin's jersey while fighting for a rebound, Baron Davis intervened and shoved Odom firmly in the chest, leading to more shoves. Odom, Griffin, Davis and Ron Artest all were ejected after the officials conferenced, a decision that visibly baffled Griffin and Artest.

Kobe Bryant had 27 points and nine rebounds, and Andrew Bynum added 18 points and 13 rebounds for the Lakers, who couldn't keep up with the young Clippers in the fourth quarter.

Davis had 14 points and eight assists as the surging Clippers won for the fourth time in five games with yet another strong performance against the NBA's elite. Four days after beating Miami, the Clippers trailed by 12 points late in the third quarter before making a 16-3 run in the final minutes, taking the lead with 4:09 left on Griffin's layup while getting fouled.

The Clippers limited Pau

Gasol to 13 points and eight rebounds before he fouled out, stopping the Lakers' roll toward their second eight-game winning streak of the season. The Lakers lost for just the second time in 11 games since Bynum returned to their starting lineup.

The Staples Center crowd largely favored the Lakers, as usual when the clubs meet in their shared arena. But the Clippers still thrived in the final minutes for their ninth win in 13 games since a 5-21 start to the season.

SPURS 110, NUGGETS 97

SAN ANTONIO — Tony Parker scored 30 points for San Antonio, Carmelo Anthony labored through a rough game as rumors of an imminent trade slightly cooled, and the Spurs beat the Denver Nuggets 110-97 on Sunday night.

Anthony may have more games in a Nuggets uniform yet. Coach George Karl said before tip-off he wasn't aware of any drastic changes, and New Jersey Nets coach Avery Johnson also tried quieting rumors of an upcoming deal.

Talks of a blockbuster trade that would ship Anthony to the Nets have lately intensified. Pressed about the possibility Sunday, Johnson said the Nets' roster won't budge between now and Friday, The Star-Ledger of Newark reported.

Anthony, upbeat before the game, scored 12 points on just 5-of-17 shooting.

Los Angeles Lakers center Andrew Bynum gets a hand to face by Los Angeles Clippers guard Baron Davis (5) as he battles to the basket in the first half of an NBA basketball game, Sunday.

The NBA-best Spurs (35-6) won their sixth in a row.

Manu Ginobili added 18 points for San Antonio, which beat Denver for a third time and reached the season's midway mark tied for the third-best first half in NBA history. dter finish in mind.

Jones leads West Virginia past No. 8 Purdue, 68-64

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — West Virginia coach Bob Huggins threw everything he could defensively at No. 8 Purdue until the Mountaineers finally found a rhythm on offense.

Kevin Jones scored nine of his 17 points during a late 18-6 run and West Virginia held off the Boilermakers 68-64 on Sunday.

West Virginia (12-4) has won a season-high four straight, following its most prolific offensive showing of the season in a 93-63 win over Providence on Thursday night with a scrappy defense against the Boilermakers.

John Flowers added 15 points, Truck Bryant scored 12 and Joe Mazzulla had 10 for West Virginia, which lost in a blowout to the Boilermakers last season.

West Virginia shot 14 of 27 (52 percent) from the floor after halftime and was able to overcome another strong effort from JaJuan Johnson, who scored 26 points and kept the Boilermakers in the game until the final seconds.

The Boilermakers (15-3) now have their first losing streak of the season after also falling 70-67 at Minnesota on Thursday night. Purdue lost despite

ST. JOHN'S 72, NO. 9 NOTRE DAME 54

NEW YORK — D.J. Kennedy and Malik Boothe both scored 14 points to help the Red Storm reverse the outcome of their game against the Fighting Irish eight days ago.

St. John's (11-5, 4-2 Big East) lost 76-61 at Notre Dame last Saturday, shooting just 38.2 percent from the field while the Fighting Irish (14-4, 3-3) shot 51 percent.

The Red Storm held the Irish, who entered shooting 36.9 percent from beyond the arc, to 3 for 15 (20 percent) for the game.

Ben Hansbrough, who had a career-high 26 points in the first meeting, led Notre Dame with 18 points.

IOWA 69, NO. 25 MINNESOTA 59

MINNEAPOLIS — Trevor Mbakwe had 16 points and 12 rebounds and Ralph Sampson III matched his career high with seven blocked shots to help Minnesota beat Iowa 69-59 on Sunday night.

Sampson scored 11 points with six rebounds and four assists for the Gophers (14-4, 3-3 Big Ten), who survived some lapses and avoided a costly defeat at home against one of the conference's few struggling teams. Al Nolen had 13 points and eight rebounds, including two critical 3-pointers in the second half and a 7-for-8 performance at the free-throw line.

Melsahn Basabe led the Hawkeyes (7-10, 0-5) with 20 points and 13 rebounds, and Eric May added 16 points. Matt Gatens finished with 13 points, including a 3-pointer at the 2-minute mark that brought Iowa within 62-55, but the junior guard was 5 for 21 from the field — 3 for 10 from behind the arc.

year,” said Sharapova, who has the goal in Australia of “staying aggressive and little by little trying to get my game better, maybe to where it was a few years ago and maybe better than that.”

French Open champion Francesca Schiavone had a couple of stutters before advancing with a 6-7 (4), 6-2, 6-4 victory over Arantxa Parra Santonja of Spain

The sixth-seeded Schiavone had a chance to serve for the match at 5-3 in the third but was broken. The Italian player recovered quickly, breaking Parra Santonja's service in the next game to take the match.

In other women's matches, No. 20 Kaia Kanepi of Estonia beat Slovakia's Magdalena Rybarikova 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 and No. 29 Dominika Cibulkova of Slovakia advanced 6-2, 6-7 (4), 6-4 over Germany's Angelique Kerber.

No. 18 Sam Querrey was the first of the men's seeded players eliminated, losing 5-7, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 8-6 to Poland's Lukasz Kubot, while No. 12 Gael Monfils rallied from two sets and a break down to beat former world junior champion Thiemo De Bakker.

De Bakker served for the match in the third set but made a series of unforced errors on key points and Monfils capitalized, winning 6-7 (5), 2-6, 7-5, 6-2, 6-1.

No. 26 Juan Monaco of Argentina advanced in straight sets over Simon Gruel, who got a spot in the main draw earlier Monday when Julien Benneteau of France withdrew because of an infected finger on his playing hand.

Defending champion Roger Federer was to play Lukas Lacko of Slovakia in the third match on Rod Laver Arena, where he has won four previous Australian titles.

Federer and top-ranked Rafael Nadal were behaving like best mates at Rod Laver Arena — high-fiving, hugging, shaking hands and laughing at each other's jokes on Sunday night in the exhibition “Rally for Relief” fundraiser for victims of the fatal floods in Australia's northeastern Queensland state. It'll be a completely different story if they're back on the same court in two weeks.

Nadal has won the three Grand Slam titles since Federer's victory here in Australia and is aiming to become the first man since Laver in 1969 to win four straight majors. It's being dubbed the “Rafa Slam.”

The pair played on opposite sides of the net, and then played together against Kim Clijsters and Sam Stosur in front of a capacity crowd of 15,000 that paid to watch a host of tennis stars in the fundraiser. Novak Djokovic and Andy Roddick wore microphones and joked with the crowd, playing alongside and against the likes of Caroline Wozniacki and Victoria Azarenka in the celebrity hit-and-giggle exhibition.

Third-seeded Djokovic, the 2008 champion, plays Spaniard Marcel Granollers in the main night match Monday.

Andy Roddick plays Jan Hajek of the Czech Republic on the second showcourt. Following Roddick on Hisense Arena will be fourth-seeded Venus Williams against Italy's Sara Errani, and seven-time Grand Slam winner Justine Henin against Indian qualifier Sania Mirza.

The first round of the Australian open was not finished at time of publication.

the third round. It gave him a one-shot lead over Marino, who had a 66, but certainly not much room for error.

Kuchar pulled within one shot early in the fourth round, then dropped out with two straight bogeys. Marino stayed in the picture until a bogey on the eighth, failing to birdie the easy par-5 ninth, and hitting two poor wedges for a bogey on the short 10th.

The big move came from Clark, and he was on the other side of the course.

Because of the 36-hole final — forced by a washout in the first round Thursday — players did not change groups for the afternoon. Clark started the day six shots out of the lead, shot 66 in the morning and made his move on the front nine — his last nine holes. His birdie on No. 6 took him to 12 under, then he nearly made an ace on the par-3 seventh for a tap-in birdie and gave him two good looks at the end.

A 10-foot birdie putt on No. 8 caught the left lip, and his 15-foot eagle on the ninth never had a chance.

“I kind of figured if you could get it going around here, I might still have a chance, even though we were on different nines,” Clark said. “This back nine, I kind of got it going there with some iron shots. A few putts would have helped, but very pleased.”

career. His shifty moves on a 6-yard run made it 21-0, essentially turning everyone's attention to next weekend.

“We're both familiar with each other, so nothing's going to be new,” Cutler said. “We have our hands full.”

Not much was expected of the Bears when the season began, but they've improved mightily since falling to 4-3 heading into their bye week. They clinched a playoff berth with two games remaining, grabbing their first NFC North championship since 2006 — when they lost to Indianapolis in the Super Bowl.

Unlike Atlanta and Pittsburgh on Saturday, they showed no rust from having a bye in dominating Seattle. Then again, the Seahawks showed none of the surging emotions or big-play abilities they sprung on the Saints at home. It was merely a one-week reprieve, and they went even flatter after tight end John Carlson was carted off with a head injury in the first quarter following a nasty spill; Carlson landed on the side of his helmet and his shoulder, but had movement in his extremities.

Seattle lost cornerback Marcus Trufant to a head injury in the third quarter when he collided with Kellen Davis' knee while trying to make a tackle. Trufant also was carted off, but he also had feeling in his extremities.

Coach Pete Carroll said both players were hospitalized and were expected to stay overnight for observation. He said “all indications are that they are OK.”

Chicago put away the game with touchdowns on three of its first four possessions, by which time Urlacher, Julius Peppers and the rest of the defense had taken charge.

Greg Olsen, showing impressive speed for a tight end, streaked past safety Lawyer Milloy for a 58-yard TD reception on Chicago's third offensive play. Chester Taylor added a 1-yard TD run and Cutler's 6-yarder built an insurmountable lead.

Cutler liked using his feet so much he added a 9-yard sprint in the third quarter to make it 28-0. He even threw in a 21-yard scramble in the fourth quarter and finished with a career-best 43 yards rushing, 9 more than the Seahawks.

“Jay's a very athletic quarterback,” Seahawks linebacker Will Herring said. “So we have to account for that. He really hurt us with his feet.”

Olindo Mare's 30-yard field goal got the first points for Seattle, which will get mixed reviews in Carroll's first season as coach. The Seahawks went 7-9, hardly what they had in mind when they hired Carroll away from Southern Cal. Still, they won the weak NFC West, and they eliminated the defending Super Bowl champions in the wild-card round.

“It took a long time for them to ... fight and compete and do the things we want them to do,” Carroll said. “I would have loved to have got this game today that so many people didn't think we could. I see where we're going and I'm proud of that.”

Jets

Belichick wasn't as kind to Wes Welker.

The wide receiver was benched for the Patriots first series for subtle remarks apparently directed at Ryan. Welker made several references to feet in his news conference Thursday, interpreted by some as a dig at recent foot-fetish reports involving Ryan.

“I didn't think anything about it. I'm just waiting for the opportunity to go out and play,” Welker said. “I respect the New York Jets. I respect Rex Ryan.” Belichick refused to comment on why Welker missed the first series.

When the game ended, Belichick walked slowly to midfield where he met Ryan, patted his conqueror on the back with his left hand and shared some words.

“We just didn't do enough things well today,” Belichick said. “It's obvious.”

Sanchez completed 16 of 25 passes for 194 yards and touchdowns to LaDainian Tomlinson, Braylon Edwards and Holmes. Brady, who played poorly for his second straight postseason game, was 29-for-45 for 299 yards, two touchdowns and one interception.

“I don't even know what to say right now,” Tomlinson said. “What an unbelievable win for our team.”

After Greene scored the Jets last touchdown, he put the ball on the ground like a pillow and rested his head on it. A quiet climax to a loud week.

Now Sanchez gets a chance to beat one of the NFL's best quarterbacks for the third straight week when he faces Ben Roethlisberger after knocking off Peyton Manning, who won the NFL's last two MVP awards and Brady, who is a favorite to win his second in four years.

“He's just now getting better and better and better,” Ryan said.

And the trash talk just keeps coming.

“Big Ben, he's next on our list,” Edwards said.

The Steelers have been installed as 3-point favorites.

In one of their worst halves of the season, the Patriots looked more like the ragged group that went 5-11 in Belichick's first season in 2000 than the steamrolling machine that led the NFL this season with a 14-2 record and 32.4 points per game.

Fifty minutes before the game, a pumped-up Brady ran onto the field, jumping and clapping as he headed for the end where a couple of Jets were tossing the ball. It was the closest he would come to their end zone for nearly three quarters.

The fans had little to cheer about early in the game.

The Patriots frustration showed when left guard Logan Mankins drew an unnecessary roughness penalty when he shoved Marquice Cole after the whistle. Brady took a knee on the next play, ending the half.

Why is Idaho taxing apples, tomatoes and potatoes?

An Idaho legislator wants to give you a break at the checkout counter for eating healthy. Rep. Lynn Luker, R-Boise, is sponsoring legislation that would exempt fruits and vegetables from the state’s 6 percent sales tax. He would pay for it by capping the grocery tax credit at $90, instead of $100.

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter proposed delaying an increase this year in the grocery tax credit, which is now $70 for the lowest-earning Idahoans and $50 for everyone else. Otter said freezing it would save $15 million, helping fill the hole in the state’s budget.

Idaho is one of only 14 states to tax food, and at 6 percent the rate is the second-highest rate in the nation behind Mississippi.

For years, lawmakers have talked about exempting different grocery items — or food altogether — from the sales tax.

In 2006, the Legislature — at the behest of then-Gov. Jim Risch — cut property taxes by $260 million and raised $200 million more by increasing the sales tax from 5 percent to 6 percent.

Thereafter, the tax burden fell heaviest on the poorest Idahoans.

Risch and some legislators advocated taking the sales tax off food.

But in 2007 Idaho’s economy began to falter and the Republicans lost their nerve. The sales tax on food amounts to nearly $190 million a year. A less expensive alternative, GOP leaders determined, was to increase Idaho’s grocery tax credit.

Lawmakers passed a plan that would immediately boost the $20 per person credit on state income tax returns and keep boosting everyone’s credit by $10 per year until it hits $100.

Trouble is, many Idahoans who need relief most earn too little to file income tax returns.

And the sales tax rate remains the same for bananas as it is for Doritos.

Luker’s proposal would be a good first step toward rationalizing Idaho’s sales tax on food and might eventually lead to its repeal.

Which would be healthier for everyone.

The liberal empire strikes back

The Left apparently has taken to heart the admonition of former White House Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel to “never let a serious crisis go to waste.”

In the aftermath of the Tucson tragedy that killed six and wounded 14 others, the Left has attacked talk radio, Fox News, Sarah Palin and anyone else it can smear. Never mind there is not a shred of evidence that the accused gunman, the mentally disturbed Jared Lee Loughner, ever watched Glenn Beck or listened to Rush Limbaugh.

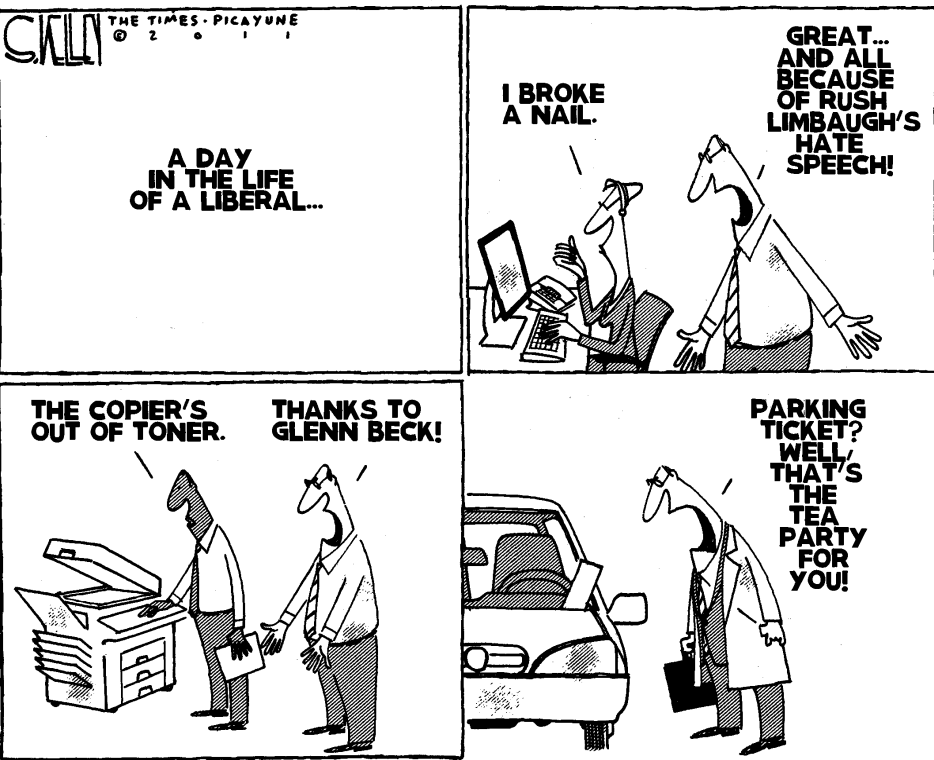

Cal Thomas

Even if Loughner had watched and listened to conservative media, what does that prove? Millions do, but they don’t go on a shooting rampage. What do other murderers and terrorists watch on TV or listen to on the radio? Why isn’t the media they consume a matter of interest? Answer: Because it doesn’t further the Left’s agenda.

Since the Left lost its monopoly of the U.S. media, it has repeatedly tried to suppress speech it doesn’t like. Thus, we hear calls by Democratic Rep. James Clyburn of South Carolina for the resurrection of the Fairness Doctrine. Rep. Robert Brady, Pennsylvania Democrat, reportedly plans to introduce legislation that would make it a federal crime to use language or symbols that could be perceived as threatening or that incites violence against a federal official or member of Congress. Who would police that and based on what standard?

In the 1980s, when conservative groups tried to “clean up” the bad language, sexual references and violence on TV, the Left cried “censorship.” When conservatives campaigned against pornography and “music” that encouraged violence against women and racial epithets, they were told a healthy First Amendment required that even the most offensive speech be tolerated. It was the same argument used to allow the burning of the American flag at political protests. But the Left is intolerant of speech it disagrees with and so wishes to censor what it cannot overcome with superior argument.

Eric Burns wrote a book titled Infamous Scribblers: The Founding Fathers and the Rowdy Beginnings of American Journalism.

Compared to 18th-century journalism in America, today’s media are tame. Burns writes of the Gazette of the United States (born on April 15, 1789, while the Constitution was being ratified) that its editor, John Fenno, was an ardent supporter of the federalism represented by George Washington and Alexander Hamilton. Fenno’s newspaper served as a counter-weight to the Republican slant of the National Gazette.

Burns sums up Fenno’s journalistic philosophy: “He would cajole his readers, deceive them when necessary, rile them when advisable; he would praise public officials and other newspaper editors who agreed with his positions and drub those who did not, assailing their intelligence, their character, their patriotism; and he would publish the records of legislative proceedings that advanced the federalist agenda while either ignoring or deriding or sometimes even falsifying documents to the contrary.”

Such things were to be found on the “news” pages, not the opinion page. Entire newspapers were opinion pages. To have a page designated “opinion” would have been redundant.

The 1790s were, according to historian John Ferling, “one of America’s most passionate decades.” The nation’s journalism, notes Burns, could not help but reflect the heat.

One paper, named the Philadelphia Aurora, engaged in what Burns describes as “journalistic savagery ... not caring about accuracy or even the illusion of it.” The Aurora published a series of letters supposedly written by George Washington while he was encamped at Valley Forge during the winter of 1777-1778. The letters “portrayed Washington as a lukewarm patriot at best, a loyal subject of George III at worst, and at least a skeptic concerning independence.”

It would have been a great story if true, but Washington wrote no such letters. That didn’t bother Benjamin Franklin Bache (Ben Franklin’s grandson and the owner of the Aurora), who was not about to retract something that served his anti-Washington political ends.

Journalism survived, even displaying responsibility on occasion. The public can sort out the good from the bad and ugly. They don’t need politicians doing it for them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mexico's freedom needs to be fought for

Lorenzo Munoz gives reason why the Mexican people can’t go back: Absolutely no huevos in that article. No wonder Mexico’s in such a mess.

I say this: The Mexican people should go back, but not as rejected transplants. Go back as victors. Form an army. Start with one brigade per border state to start. Assist initially in closing the border while petitioning the American government for assistance, training and leadership. What better time than now. Go after these scumbags. Kick those low-life drug thugs out of your country. They’re killing your nation and your people.

There are 15 million illegals in the United States. Any population can mobilize roughly 10 percent of its people. That’s roughly 1.5 million soldiers you can throw into the fray.

Get with it. Lose your fear. Clean house. I’m sure you’ll have plenty of support. What better cause is there than to free your nation. What better fight is there than the fight for freedom and justice? The Mexican people are big on respect. What better way to earn the world’s respect.

In the end, it’s really your fight. Now, what are you going to do? The only other alternative is for the United States to seize Mexico and make it a protectorate; then it won’t be your country.

Ariz. tragedy brings out hypocrisy from the left

I am personally sick of all of the attacks from the left, Saul Alinsky-style. You should really read and post this article from Michelle Malkin: <http://michellemalkin.com/2011/01/10/the-progressive-climate-of-hate-an-illustrated-primer-2000-2010/>

It is rather lengthy but clearly shows the hypocrisy from the left. Full disclosure: I am a conservative independent and usually vote (but not always) Republican. However, if this idiot that shot Giffords in Tuscon, Ariz., is a “right wing” guy, he should be fully prosecuted and given the death penalty for what he did.

I don’t agree with what Giffords stands for, but she was elected in her district and has every right to be where she is at. I pray that she recovers fully and can return as a congresswoman and represent her district without fear.

Gabrielle Giffords, God bless you and your family.

Law is no substitute for good parenting

It appears someone needs to be the voice of the “silent majority” for Twin Falls. I am positive I am not the only person to read the several letters to the editor about the proposed bicycle helmet law and think to themselves, “Whatever happened to our freedoms in this country?”

We have people that feel they need to control the lives of everyone else. If there is an accident that injures a member of a family, that family seems to not be able to grieve well unless they can pass another law to make everyone else never have to grieve.

The reality is you can pass laws that will not make someone else wear a helmet. How many parents will put a helmet on their child and as soon as the child is out of sight, he will take it off? Or the child stops to play and doesn’t put the helmet back on to ride home? So we are going to penalize the parent or, at a future point, are we going to jail the kid for not wearing a helmet?

If you want to have your child wear a helmet, shoes, a coat, then it is your responsibility to teach the child to do so. We seem to think government can replace parenting. Good intentions are what take away many of our freedoms. At some point, we have to take responsibility for ourselves.

U.S. Rep. Giffords' condition improves

By Amanda Lee Myers and Bob Christie
Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — In yet another sign of significant recovery during a remarkable week, the gravely wounded U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords was upgraded from critical to serious condition Sunday after a procedure to remove her from a ventilator was successful.

Doctors have been positive, and at time almost giddy, in describing her progress since she was shot point blank in the head Jan. 8.

Giffords responded from the moment she arrived at the emergency room, at first just squeezing a doctor's hand. Then she raised two fingers. She opened her unbandaged eye shortly after President Barack Obama's bedside visit Wednesday. Then, more milestones — which doctors said were all indicative of higher cognitive function — were achieved, all with her husband, astronaut Mark Kelly, at her side.

Kelly asked her to give him a thumbs-up if she could hear him. She did more than that. She slowly raised her left arm. By the end of the week, she had moved her legs and arms.

At the hospital, more than 100 people were gathered amid the sea of get-well balloons and cards when the University of Arizona put out a statement upgrading her condition.

"Oh, that's great news," said Jean Emrick, a 50-year resident of Tucson, as a violinist played in the background.

Her eyes watering, Emrick said: "Tucson is such a special place and she represents what's the best of southern Arizona."

As night fell, candles at the makeshift memorial began to flicker. A mariachi band played the "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Doctors decided to upgrade her condition because the tracheotomy done a day earlier was uneventful, hospital spokeswoman Katie Riley said. A feeding tube was also put in Saturday, and doctors speculated that they might soon know if she could speak.

Few people survive a bullet to the brain — just 10 percent — and some who do end up in a vegetative state. It is even more rare for people with gunshot wounds to the head to regain all of their abilities, and doctors have cautioned that the full extent of Giffords' recovery remains uncertain.

Giffords and 18 others were shot when a gunman opened fire at a meet-and-greet she was hosting outside a supermarket in her own hometown. Six people died, including Giffords' popular community outreach director, Gabe Zimmerman.

At funeral services for Zimmerman Sunday, Kelly told the some 700 people gathered that his wife was inspired by Zimmerman's idealism and warmth, according to the Arizona Republic.

"Gabby and I spoke often about Gabe. She loved him like a younger brother," Kelly said. "I know someday she'll get to tell you herself how she felt about Gabe."

Meanwhile, a week after the Tucson supermarket massacre, more details emerged about one of shooting victims who police said became distraught and was arrested during a televised town hall meeting.

James Eric Fuller, a self-described liberal and military veteran, started ranting at the end of the program Saturday. He took a picture of a local tea party leader and yelled "you're dead" before calling others in the church a bunch of "whores," authorities said.

Deputies called a doctor and decided he should be taken to a hospital for a mental evaluation, said Pima County sheriff's spokesman Jason Ogan said.

Richard James Costa

Ricky was born on Dec. 26, 1960, in Oakland, Calif., to Elliot James and Barbara Joyce Leite Costa. He was full of life and loved by all that had the pleasure of truly knowing him. He lived life to the fullest until the end. Ricky made sure he lived life his way. He loved to work on cars and was able to pass that love on to his son.

Ricky is survived by the love of his life, his wife of twelve years, Carrie Costa; his daughter, Amanda Costa; his son, Jonathan Costa, all of Twin Falls; his mother and stepfather, Barbara (Larry) Brown of Sun Valley, Nev.; his mother-in-law and father-in-law, Cathy (Billy) Bishop; a brother, Michael Costa of Reno, Nev., and a sister, Vicky deNejs of Antioch, Calif.

He was preceded in death by his father, Elliot Costa, a brother, Patrick "Nicki" Costa, and a sister, Patricia "Trish" Costa.

The family requests that donations may be made at any Key Bank branch in Jonathan Costa's name.

No services will be held at this time. Cremation is under the direction of Serenity Funeral Chapel, Twin Falls.

Poll: Opposition to health care law eases

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldívar and Jennifer Agiesta
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As lawmakers shaken by the shooting of a colleague return to the health care debate, an Associated Press-GfK poll finds raw feelings over President Barack Obama's overhaul have subsided.

Ahead of a vote on repeal in the GOP-led House this week, strong opposition to the law stands at 30 percent, close to the lowest level registered in AP-GfK surveys dating to September 2009.

The nation is divided over the law, but the strength and intensity of the opposition appear diminished. The law expands coverage to more than 30 million uninsured, and would require, for the first time, that most people in the United States carry health insurance.

The poll finds that 40 percent of those surveyed said they support the law, while 41 percent oppose it. Just after the November congressional elections, opposition stood at 47 percent and support was 38 percent.

As for repeal, only about one in four say they want to do away with the law completely. Among Republicans support for repeal has dropped sharply, from 61 percent after the elections to 49 percent now.

Also, 43 percent say they want the law changed so it does more to re-engineer the health care system. Fewer than one in five say it should be left as it is.

"Overall, it didn't go as far as I would have liked," said Joshua Smith, 46, a sales consultant to manufacturers who lives in Herndon, Va. "In a perfect world, I'd like to see them change it to make it more encompassing, but judging by how hard it was to get it passed, they had to take whatever they could get."

His extended family has benefited from the law. A sister-in-law in her early 20s, previously uninsured, was able to get on her father's policy. "She's starting out as a real estate agent, and there's no health care for that," said Smith. The law allows young adults to stay on a parent's plan until they turn 26.

Congress stepped back last week to honor victims of the rampage in Tucson, Ariz., that left Rep. Gabrielle Giffords, D-Ariz., facing a long and uncertain recovery from a bullet through her brain.

There's no evidence the gunman who targeted Giffords was motivated by politics, but the aftermath left many people concerned about the venom in public life. A conservative Democrat, Giffords had been harshly criticized for voting in favor of the health overhaul, and won re-election by a narrow margin.

House Republican leaders say they're working to keep this week's debate — and expected vote Wednesday — from degenerating into a shouting match, but it depends on the Democrats, too. Republicans want a thoughtful discussion about substantive policy differences, said Brad Dayspring, a spokesman for Rep. Eric Cantor, the No. 2 GOP leader. The AP-GfK poll was under way when the attack in Tucson took place Jan. 8.

Opposition to the law remains strongest among Republicans. Seventy-one percent of them say they're against it, as compared with 35 percent of independents and 19 percent of Democrats.

'Social Network' walks away with four top prizes at Golden Globes

By David German
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The Facebook tale "The Social Network" won top honors Sunday at the Golden Globes with four prizes, including best drama and director, solidifying its prospects as an Academy Awards favorite.

Winning the dramatic lead-acting prizes were Colin Firth for the British monarchy saga "The King's Speech" and Natalie Portman for the psychosexual thriller "Black Swan."

Lead-acting honors for the Globes' musical or comedy categories went to Annette Bening for the lesbian-family story "The Kids Are All Right" and Paul Giamatti for the curmudgeon tale "Barney's Version."

The boxing drama "The Fighter" earned both supporting acting Globes, for Christian Bale and Melissa Leo.

David Fincher, directing winner for "The Social Network," said he thought it was strange when "The Social Network" script came to him, since he usually makes dark character studies about misanthropes or films about serial killers.

Natalie Portman holds the award that she won for Best Performance by an Actress in a Motion Picture — Drama for her role in 'Black Swan,' at the Golden Globe Awards Sunday in Beverly Hills, Calif.

His films include the murder tales "Seven" and "Zodiac."

"I'm personally loath to acknowledge the kind of wonderful response this film has received for fear of becoming addicted to it, so suffice it to say, it's been really nice," said Fincher, whose film also won the Globes for screenplay for Aaron Sorkin and musical score for Trent Reznor and Atticus Ross.

Sorkin, creator of TV's "The West Wing," had kind words for Facebook founder

Mark Zuckerberg, played by Jesse Eisenberg in "The Social Network."

"Mark Zuckerberg, if you're watching, Rooney Mara makes a prediction at the beginning of the movie. She was wrong. You turned out to be a great entrepreneur, a great visionary and an incredible altruist," Sorkin said.

While "The Social Network" dominated, it was a night with something for almost everybody, as most key films came away with prizes. The main snub was for the sci-fi blockbuster "Inception," a best-drama contender that had four nominations but lost them all. Johnny Depp, who had two nominations for best musical or comedy actor, also left empty-handed.

The win by Portman as a ballerina coming unhinged amid a production of "Swan Lake" sets her up for a two-woman showdown for best actress at the Feb. 27 Oscars with Bening, who won for her role as a stern lesbian mom in "The Kids Are All Right," which also was named best musical or comedy film.

Portman thanked the film's choreographer, her fiancé Benjamin Millepied, with whom she's expecting a child. He also appears in the movie, and his character doesn't want to sleep with hers.

"He's the best actor! It's not true, he totally wants to sleep with me," Portman said, giggling.

"Barney's Version" follows the many loves in his life: his three wives, played by Rachelle Lefevre, Minnie Driver and Rosamund Pike, whom Giamatti described as "a trifecta of hotties."

IRAN
Rights group decries ‘execution binge’

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Iranian authorities have unleashed an “execution binge” with an average rate of one person hanged every eight hours since the beginning of the year, a rights group monitoring the Islamic Republic said Sunday.

“The Iranian Judiciary is on an execution binge orchestrated by the intelligence and security agencies,” stated Aaron Rhodes, a spokesman for the International Campaign for Human Rights in Iran.

A statement by the New York-based group said at least 47 prisoners have been hanged since Jan. 1, including a reported Kurdish activist accused of fighting against the state. It said other jailed Kurds also are at risk of facing the gallows for alleged links to a groups battling for greater rights for Iran’s Kurdish minority.

Most of the others executed were convicted of violent crimes such as murder.

The group said the actual number of people put to death this year could be higher because Iranian authorities may not make public all executions.

Rights groups and media reports say at least 179 people were executed in Iran last year.

Housing sought for survivors of deadly mudslides

TERESOPOLIS — Days after mudslides wiped out whole neighborhoods, many residents continued to live in homes in threatened areas, unwilling to join the thousands crowded into shelters despite the ever-present danger to their lives.

Rali Oliveira da Silva, 35, spent several years building a home for his family in Cascata do Imbui, saving little by little for the cement, the bricks, the paint. The house was still standing Sunday, but its cement patio now hung precariously over a yawning precipice, the empty space left by a slide that killed most of his downhill neighbors.

Oliveira da Silva knows his home could be next. But he said he has no money to rent another place, much less buy land elsewhere and start over, so he’s staying put for now.

“There is no financing for someone like me, and I can’t afford to buy a home in town,” he said. “What am I supposed to do? Move my family to a shelter? And then what?”

Survivors who lost everything and those clinging to homes on unstable ground face an uncertain future as they try to rebuild lives torn apart by the landslides that struck mountain towns outside Rio de Janeiro and killed at least 626 — a death toll that rises every day as more bodies are pulled from the mud.

Municipal, state and federal officials were responding Sunday, setting up a center to register missing persons; distributing 35,000 free cell phones donated by a telecommunications company; and announcing immediate plans to relocate some 2,500 people housed at a packed gymnasium to 18 smaller, better organized shelters at churches, warehouses and other spaces.

Mayor Jorge Mario Sedlacek of Teresopolis, one of the hardest-hit cities, said more than 2,000 tents are being brought in, each capable of sheltering up to 10 people. Teresopolis has more than 3,000 people who were left homeless by the slides.

TUNISIA
Former government figures arrested

TUNIS — Heavy gunfire erupted in the heart of Tunisia’s capital Sunday as the army appeared to be closing in on stalwarts of the regime driven from power last week and the interim government prepared to name a new Cabinet free of any major figures linked to deposed President Zine el Abidine Ben Ali.

Former Interior Minister Rafik Belhaj Kassim was taken into custody in his hometown of Beja, about 60 miles west of Tunis, a day after the arrest of Ali Seriati, former chief of the presidential guard, state television reported. Both men led security apparatuses seen as tools of repression under the former regime.

Ben Ali led this North African country for 23 years before he was ousted in an uprising driven by disaffected youths clamoring for economic opportunities and political freedom.

Talks between former opponents of the regime and the interim government led by Fouad Mebazaa yielded an agreement that no major figure from the former ruling party would be included in the temporary Cabinet overseeing the state’s affairs until elections are held in 60 days, said Mahmoud ben Romdhane, a leader of Renewal, an opposition party.

“It’s finished,” he said of Ben Ali’s Constitutional Democratic Rally party, or RCD. “The RCD is completely destroyed.”

The Reuters news agency cited anonymous sources as saying only that the old regime’s foreign minister, Kamel Morjane, and interior minister, Ahmad Friaa, would retain their posts. Both men are respected as technocrats. Morjane is a career diplomat who served for years as deputy chief at the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. Friaa was named to his post by Ben Ali last week in a scramble to placate Tunisians angry over heavy-handed police violence against protesters.

HAITI
Ex-dictator ‘Baby Doc’ Duvalier makes surprise return

PORT-AU-PRINCE — Jean-Claude Duvalier, the once-reviled dictator of Haiti known as “Baby Doc,” made a surprise return to this country Sunday evening, ending almost a quarter-century of exile and sending out shockwaves of speculation over his motives and intentions.

He arrives at a critical moment for a country still struggling to recover from last year’s catastrophic earthquake, and now locked in a political crisis that has left it unable to elect a new president.

It was not clear whether Duvalier, who has been living in Paris, plans to try to step into the political void. Though the former dictator was widely scorned when forced into exile in 1986 — a transition hailed as the end to the ruthless dynastic rule of the Duvalier family — a small group of supporters has recently sought to rehabilitate his image and revive his National Unity political party. Duvalier could attempt to capitalize on Haiti’s current misery by emphasizing the relative stability of the dictatorship years.

Leslie Kaiser works out with a key tag that records her exercise information Friday morning at Curves in Twin Falls. Kaiser is getting in shape so she can kayak on a trip to Hawaii in March.

T.F. women team up to get fit

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Ever bought a gym membership and didn't use it? You're not alone. According to The International Health, Racquet & Sportsclub Association, only 23 percent of Americans with health club memberships are frequent users, or people who go to the gym 100 or more days a year.

These women are trying to avoid that trap. The Times-News spoke to three new Curves members who are teaming up with friends or family members to get fit.

Whether they're trying to lose weight or tone up for an upcoming vacation, the women have all decided to work out with another person to keep them motivated.

We'll check in with them in two months to see if their goals have stuck.

Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or mdavlin@magicvalley.com.

Helen Iverson works out on Thursday morning at Curves in Twin Falls. Iverson joined the gym with her friend to maintain her health.

Helen Iverson, 67

Twin Falls

Goal: Avoid gaining weight. "If I don't do something like that, I just gain weight," Iverson said. "That's a piece of it. Plus, simply, it's good for you."

Fitness history: Iverson belonged to another gym for four years, but rarely went. "I, frankly, like to walk outside," she said. "I have about a five-mile route that I do." But in the winter months, Iverson found herself staying inside, especially when the wind kicked up or the temperatures dropped into single digits. She needed an indoor alternative to keep her moving.

Plan: Alternate Curves routine with her walking regimen.

So far, so good: Iverson joined with friend Cheryl Leforgee last week after seeing a Curves ad in "Today's Deal" in the Times-News. She is still learning about the Curves system and hopes to supplement it with activities like snow shoeing.

Kaiser

Leslie Kaiser, 63

Twin Falls

Goal: "I want to tone up. I am going to Hawaii in March, so I wanted to be able to kayak"

Fitness history: Kaiser has lost 42 pounds in the past nine months and hopes to lose another 40 in the next year. She was a Curves member a few years ago, then left.

Plan: Go to Curves three times a week.

So far, so good: After joining in November, she has made it at least two times every week, except for early January when she injured her shoulder.

Cheryl Leforgee, 64

Twin Falls

Goal: "I think just to maintain fitness, just to maintain health standards. I need to lose weight, but that's not high on my list."

Fitness history: Leforgee was a Curves member before, but quit in April so she could travel.

Plan: Go to Curves three to four times a week.

So far, so good: Leforgee rejoined last week with friend Helen Iverson. It was Iverson's idea to join, and it gave Leforgee the push she needed to get back to the gym. "Today was the first day back for quite a while," she said Wednesday.

A public struggle: Twin Falls woman faces scrutiny, finds support after appearing on documentary

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

If you turn on MTV in the next few weeks, you might see a familiar face.

After appearing on "True Life: I'm Addicted To Food," Alisha Neal is learning about life after reality shows. While not all of the feedback has been positive, the 19-year-old Twin Falls woman said she is glad she appeared on the program.

"True Life" is an MTV documentary series that explores real-world dilemmas, like drug addiction, obesity and poverty. Alisha, who had always wanted to be on "True Life," saw a casting call for the food addiction episode last January and sent an inquiry.

She and her mother, Miya Neal, didn't expect to hear anything from the production team and were surprised when it chose Alisha as one of its subjects.

The beginning of the show, which first aired Dec. 27 and is regularly shown as a rerun, opens with Alisha explaining to the camera what an average meal looked like.

"This is what I eat on a normal basis," she says, pointing to a plate of mashed potatoes and three kinds of meat. "And this is plate No. 2." Her third plate has chocolate cake and pizza, and a fourth has more pizza. Alisha said she ate five large meals a day.

The food controlled her life. She preferred sleeping in on food the night before.

"It's everything I ever think about," she says in the episode.

The food wasn't healthy, either: hot dogs, Spaghetti-potato chips. "I don't deal with my problems. I eat my problems," she says.

The documentary crews followed her to nurse practitioner Corinne Slagel's office, where a nurse tells Alisha she weighs 242 pounds. She's at high risk for diabetes and high cholesterol. Alisha and her mother struggle to find healthier food, opting for lower-fat hot dogs and Apple Jacks cereal.

November. The two-person camera crew would come to Twin Falls for a few days every two months, accompanying the Neals everywhere. For shots where the car was pulling into a parking space, the camera crew made the Neals stop the car so the crew could get out, set up their cameras and film them parking.

"It was different, but it was fun," Miya said.

Small breaks from sitting can aid heart health, study says

By Eva von Schaper
Bloomberg News

Taking small breaks from sitting down, such as standing for phone calls or walking to see colleagues, may trim office workers' waistlines and help their heart and metabolic health, a study suggests. The more breaks people took, the smaller their waists and the lower the levels of a blood marker linked to inflammation, the research, published by the European Heart Journal, showed.

The study is the first to look at the effects of remaining sedentary on the heart health of a broad swath of the population. The research tried to capture how much people moved as part of their daily routines, said the lead author, Genevieve Healy, a research fellow at the University of Queensland, Australia.

"What we found was the more sedentary people were, the more sitting and the more reclining people did, the worse off they were in terms of cardio-metabolic function and inflammation, such as waist circumference, blood fats, lower levels of good cholesterol and protein inflammation markers," Healy said. The researchers drew on data from almost 4,800 volunteers outfitted with devices that tracked their activity for seven days as part of the U.S. National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey. The average age of the participants was 46.5 years, and half were men. The participants wore their tracking devices, called accelerometers, for 14.6 hours a day, of which 8.44 hours were inactive and about a third of an hour was used to exercise.

The researchers measured the size of the participants' waists, their blood pressure, cholesterol levels and the concentration of a protein linked to inflammation called C-reactive protein.

The longer people were inactive, the higher their levels of blood fats and markers of insulin resistance. The more breaks they took, even those as short as a minute, the smaller their waists were. The most active quarter had waists that were 1.6 inches smaller than the least active quarter, Healy said.

When the study broke down the results by ethnicity and gender, they found that Mexican-Americans were the most active but had the highest levels of blood fats. Women were more likely to be sedentary but took more breaks and had a more favorable cardio-metabolic profile. While the exact biological mechanism isn't clear, the researchers believe that contracting large posture muscles "flushes out the bad stuff," Healy said.

Small breaks can't replace regular exercise, such as walks at lunchtime, Healy cautioned. "One little break can't cure the world."

Struggle

Continued from Healthy & Fit 1 everything, Alisha said. She went to the YMCA three times a week and hung out with friends. She also participated in last year's Magic Valley Weight Loss Challenge with her mom, who lost 25 pounds.

"I mean, they cut out so much," Alisha said in an interview last week. "It made it appear that all I did for my food addiction was go see a therapist and take a pill and I was better." They also didn't show any of her social life or extracurricular activities. But she knows the 42-minute show could only fit so much, especially because the same episode featured another eating-obsessed woman from New York.

But Alisha said it would have been harder to curb her eating without MTV. The production team set up appointments and paid for treatment, she said, which was a huge help because she doesn't have health insurance.

Some of the feedback Alisha has received has been positive. People have contacted her thanking her for sharing her story and saying they relate.

Other comments haven't for enabling her daughter's eating habits.

One online commenter mocked Alisha when she talked about eating her problems instead of dealing with them.

"Is there anything she didn't eat?" the commenter wrote.

"I think it's kind of amusing. They don't think that I read the comments," Alisha said. "I have and it's kind of crazy to see how upset people are."

Despite the rude remarks, the mother-daughter team are still glad they did the show.

"I thought of it in a helping way," Miya said. "I'm hoping this can help someone else who has the same problem."

For now, Alisha no longer adheres to a specific diet system and stays away from the scale, which she calls discouraging. But she took what she's learned and dropped two pants sizes.

"Now it's just about getting healthy," she said.

And knowing there were people watching helped her stay on track.

"I wanted my show to have a happy ending," she said.

“Excellence In Safety”

DEAR ABBY: I was married at 17 and ran away at 37 when I finally admitted to myself that my husband did not love me. After that, I went through a deep depression that took years to recover from. I have been divorced for 13 years and am happy being unencumbered. I choose to live alone.

I enjoy companionship and am seeing not one, but two, men. They both want a commitment, and I do not.
One knows about the other;
the other doesn't. They know
I have had relationships in the past.

I have already had family,
kids and grandkids. I see no reason to marry again or have a serious commitment to anyone. What is your advice?

— CONTENT IN IOWA

DEAR CONTENT: My advice is to let the gentleman who doesn't know you are seeing someone else in on the secret. Other than that, because you are happy with the status quo, I have no other advice to offer.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Before my mother died a year ago, she told me a secret. She said my middle-aged brother “Donnie” was conceived with a sperm donation rather than my father (also deceased), whose sperm count was low. My brother doesn't know this, and Mom didn't tell him before she died.

Donnie has had numerous emotional problems and has unresolved issues with our parents. Do you think it's important that he know of his “origin,” or is this a secret I should take with me to the grave? I don't want to hurt him with this information, only to help him resolve some of his negative feelings toward our parents. I hate keeping family secrets, but I will remain silent if telling him would do more harm than good.

— HALF-SISTER
IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR HALF-SISTER:
Your half-brother should be told the truth. It may be difficult for him to hear, but on the other hand, it could explain some of the unspoken family dynamics that may have led to his unresolved issues with your parents. It might also help him understand why he felt “different,” or may have felt he was treated differently than you were.

DEAR ABBY: I have a grandchild whose parents are strict, which I don't mind, but when Mom loses her cool, she starts name-calling. She'll say things like, “You're a brat!” etc. in front of whomever, wherever we happen to be. It goes against my grain to call anyone names.

Should I talk to the parents about this or stay out of their business? I don't interfere with the way any of my children raise their kids, but I'm very concerned over this.
What do I do or say? Should I speak up, or hold my peace? I hurt for the grandkids when this happens. It isn't good for their self-esteem.

— UNSURE IN RED WING, MINN.

DEAR UNSURE: I know very few perfect parents, but if your family member does this on a regular basis, you should say something. The problem with labeling a child is that if an adult does it often enough, the child can grow up thinking the label is accurate. A better way to handle the situation would be for Mom to say firmly: “Stop that! When you do that it makes me angry, and if it happens again, you'll: (1) get a time out; (2) we're going outside until you can behave; or (3) I won't bring you here again!”

DEAR READERS: Today
we remember the Rev.
Martin Luther King Jr., who in 1968 was martyred in the cause of civil rights. He was an eloquent man who preached that “love is the only force capable of transforming an enemy into a friend.” His was a voice of reason in a time of insanity, silenced too soon. — ABBY

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Oh yet we trust that somehow good

Will be the final goal of ill.”

— Alfred, Lord Tennyson

• • • • •

Imagine you are in four no-trump today on a heart lead — as happened at quite a few tables at last year’s Bermuda Congress, from which all this week’s deals come.

The safety play in the club suit to ensure the four tricks you need is to lead out the club ace, then cross to dummy with a spade and lead up to the club jack. This way you pick up either defender’s remaining three-card suit for one loser, guaranteed.

The best play for five tricks, while not seriously jeopardizing four tricks, is to cross to a top spade at trick two and lead a club to the jack. This loses only to a singleton club queen in West. And remember that if West has led his long suit at trick one and that appears to be only four cards in length, then HE is more likely to have four clubs than East! You will see (as did rather too many of the declarers in the tournament) that playing a club to the king and a club back to the A-J is an exceedingly bad idea. A diamond shift or continuation would hold you to nine tricks now.

A technical point: Note that on an initial low diamond lead, East should play the eight to the first trick, not the jack. (This is the right play when declarer has a doubleton such as A-K, A-Q, K-Q, K-9, or Q-9, and wrong only when declarer has the diamond A-9.)

ANSWER: Opinions will differ on whether it is better to try to hit partner’s suit by leading a spade, or to go with your own length with a club lead. I might compromise by leading a heart. After all, if partner has a five-card major, wouldn’t you rather it was hearts than spades?

IDAHO'S FORECAST

SUN VALLEY, SURROUNDING MTS.
Expect wet snow throughout the day along with strong winds, causing poor visibilities. Another batch of snow moves in late Tuesday.

BOISE
More showers are expected on Monday. Tuesday looks dry, but there may be snow Tuesday night due to a quick moving cold front.

NORTHERN UTAH
Mixed showers to heavy mountain snow and breezy conditions will make for tough traveling weather on Monday. Tuesday looks drier.
