Moscow lawmaker proposes medical marijuana bill

By Ben Botkin
 Times-News writer

BOISE — Janine Milar's last 15 years have been filled with chronic pain. She has fibromyalgia and a herniated disc in her lower back. Traditional medication has only done so much. She's gone from doctor to doctor in search of help, but hasn't escaped the pain. The 47-year-old Boise resident who grew up in Twin Falls found an answer when she went to Oregon, one of 15 states where marijuana use for medical purposes is legal. There, she tried medicinal marijuana. "I've used it and I know it works," Milar said. "The side effects are so much less." Milar wants medicinal marijuana to be legalized in Idaho. Rep. Tom Trail, R-Moscow, agrees and is sponsoring a bill that would allow its use. Trail has heard from constituents dealing with chronic pain and seeking relief. He says a medicinal marijuana law can exist with the appropriate safeguards, adding that it's the compassionate thing to do for Idaho residents in dire straits. "Here are the poorest and most suffering of our citizenry having to live in the shadows, being afraid of being picked up and arrested and possibly fined and jailed," Trail said. "I think a good question to ask is: 'How would Christ have approached this?'" Trail also points to safeguards in his proposal: licensing would be required by the state, along with background checks of all who come into contact with medicinal marijuana, including any designated caregivers who handle the pot. A doctor's recommendation would be required to receive a prescription, which would be limited to two ounces every 28 days. John Coulthard, director of Idahoans for Medical Marijuana, said the proposal does a good job of balancing patients' needs with necessary safeguards. "There's got to be a lot of checks," he said. "It's built in up front, which is the way to do it." See MARIJUANA, Main 2

Wind farm project to seek support of Twin Falls City Council

Times-News

A China Mountain Wind Project representative will look for Twin Falls City Council support Monday for a 30,000-acre wind farm on greater sage grouse habitat land.

It will be one of the first items on the agenda for the council's 5 p.m. meeting Monday. It will meet at the Twin Falls City Council Chamber, 305 Third Ave. E., Twin Falls.

The wind farm is proposed to be primarily on public Bureau of Land Management land, though Renewable Energy Systems Americas, the lead group on the project, which has also made agreements with ranchers and farmers in southern Twin Falls County for use of their land.

The farm would include up to 200 wind turbines producing up to 400 megawatts of power, according to an RES Americas fact sheet, mostly to sell to Las Vegas. And while the project will be developed on about 30,000 acres of land, the project's footprint will be closer to 900 acres, 700 of which are temporary and will be restored after construction, according to the fact sheet.

But the project is drawing some concern for how it may impact the greater sage grouse population. The sage grouse has been named a candidate species for federal protection because of its struggling population.

Few studies exist on how wind farms affect sage grouse, limiting scientific predictions of the impact. But many scientists say it will be detrimental, and some environmental groups want development stopped at least until more is known.

Also on the agenda Monday:
 • Consideration of a contract between the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality and the city of Twin Falls for the city to create wetlands for waste removal. New sewage limits would have required a $5 million investment into the treatment plant; the creation of wetlands would meet the new requirements at an estimate of less than 10 percent of that cost.

One wetland would be near the police firing range and the other to the west of Auger Falls.

• A request from the Twin Falls Highway District for the city to waive $11,578.87 in building fees for the district's planned maintenance facility. The highway district commissioners wrote in a letter to the city that they "appreciate the good working relationship" between the two and that the district always waives fees for city projects.

Enabling an athlete

Andrew Pike talks Friday about the Paralympics as welding student Ross Wickham makes a new chair at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls. The chair will allow Pike to participate in throwing competitions. The Kimberly soldier was paralyzed at the waist when he was shot while serving with the Army in Iraq in 2007.

CSI students build Iraq vet special chair for Paralympics

By Amy Huddleston
 Times-News writer

Andrew Pike's new dream is to throw the javelin or shot put at the U.S. Track and Field Nationals.

He already has the determination. In a few weeks he'll have a customized training schedule. All he's waiting on is his new chair.

A sniper's bullet took Pike's legs and abdominal muscles when it hit the Army specialist during a 2007 patrol in Iraq. A former Kimberly High School football and baseball player, Pike, 25, hadn't seen himself as an athlete who would compete on the national stage.

But big dreams grew from the blood-stained ground from which Pike rose. The Purple Heart recipient now sets his sights on competing in the Paralympics, one of the highest levels of athletic competition in the world.

"It was a hobby. Now it's like a job," Pike said of his athletic ambitions. "It's going to be a lot of hard work and dedication to get to that level."

He approached the College of Southern Idaho's welding program in July to see if students could build a special aluminum chair for him to use in Paralympic track and field events as he readies for the June nationals. He's used other people's chairs while attending five competitions in the past year, but said having his own would make it easier to train and compete across the nation.

CSI welding instructor Jon Hardesty said Pike's new chair began as one person's project but expanded into something everyone could work on. Aluminum was donated by Pacific Steel and Recycling.

Hardesty said the project will be completed next week.

The chair's base rides 27.5 inches from the ground and supports two poles where a backrest will eventually be placed. Its front features an upward-angled pole Pike will use to create leverage when he throws the javelin and shot.

College students not learning much, study says

By Eric Gorski
 Associated Press

A new study provides disturbing answers to questions about how much students actually learn in college — for many, not much — and has inflamed a debate about the value of an American higher education.

The research of more than 2,300 undergraduates found 45 percent of students show no significant improvement in the key measures of critical thinking, complex reasoning and writing by the end of their sophomore years.

One problem is that students just aren't asked to do much, according to findings in a new book, "Academically Adrift: Limited Learning on College Campuses." Half of students did not take a single course requiring 20 pages of writing during their prior semester, and one-third did not take a single course requiring even 40 pages of reading per week.

That kind of light load sounded familiar to University of Missouri freshman Julia Rheinecker, who said her first semester of college largely duplicated the work she completed back home in southern Illinois.

"I'm not going to lie," she said. "Most of what I learned this year I already had in high school. It was almost easier my first semester (in college)."

Three of the five classes she took at Missouri were in massive lecture halls with several hundred students. And Rheinecker said she was required to complete at least 20 pages of writing in only one of those classes.

"I love the environment, don't get me wrong," she said. "I just haven't found myself pushing as much as I expected."

The study, an unusually large-scale effort to track student learning over time, comes as the federal government, reformers and others argue that the U.S. must produce more college graduates to remain competitive globally. But if students aren't learning much that calls into question whether boosting graduation rates will provide that edge.

"It's not the case that giving out more credentials is going to make the U.S. more economically competitive," Richard Arum of New York University, who co-authored the book with Josipa Roksa of the University of Virginia, said in an interview. "It requires academic rigor ... You can't just get it through osmosis at these institutions."

College

The book is based on information from 24 schools, meant to be a representative sample, which provided Collegiate Learning Assessment data on students who took the standardized test in their first semester in fall 2005 and at the end of their sophomore years in spring 2007. The schools took part on the condition that their institutions not be identified.

The Collegiate Learning Assessment has its share of critics who say it doesn't capture learning in specialized majors or isn't a reliable measure of college performance because so many factors are beyond their control.

The research found an average-scoring student in fall 2005 scored seven percentage points higher in spring of 2007 on the assessment. In other words, those who entered college in the 50th percentile would rise to the equivalent of the 57th after their sophomore years.

Among the findings outlined in the book and report, which tracked college students for four years:

- Overall, the picture doesn't brighten much over four years. After four years, 36 percent of students did not demonstrate significant improvement, compared to 45 percent after two.

- Students who studied alone, read and wrote more, attended more selective schools and majored in traditional arts and sciences majors posted greater learning gains.

- Social engagement generally does not help student performance. Students who spent more time studying with peers showed diminishing growth and students who spent more time in the Greek system had decreased learning rates, while activities such as working off campus, participating in campus clubs and volunteering did not affect learning.

- Students from families with different levels of parental education enter college with different learning levels but learn at about the same rates while attending college. The racial gap between black and white students going in, however, widens: Black students improve their assessment scores at lower levels than whites.

Arum and Roksa spread the blame, pointing to students who don't study much and seek easy courses and a culture at colleges and universities that values research over good teaching.

Yahya Fahimuddin, a sixth-year computer science student at the University of California Los Angeles, endorsed the latter finding, saying professors do seem more concerned with research. He said he can't remember the last time he wrote a paper longer than three pages, double-spaced. He feels little connection to his professors and gets the sense that mastering material is not as important as the drudge work of meeting goals and getting through material on schedule.

"Honestly, you can get by with Wikipedia and pass just about anything," he said.

So what to do? The report warns that federally mandated fixes similar to "No Child Left Behind" in K-12 education would be "counterproductive," partly because researchers are still learning to measure learning. But it does make clear that accountability should be emphasized more at the institutional level, starting with college presidents.

Some colleges and universities are taking steps. The University of Charleston, in West Virginia, has beefed up writing assignments in disciplines such as nursing and biology to improve learning. President Edwin Welch is among more than 70 college and university presidents pledging to take steps to improve student learning, use evidence to improve instruction and publicize results.

Medicinal marijuana first became legal in the U.S. when California voters approved a 1996 measure to legalize it. Since then, 14 more states and the District of Columbia have followed suit, including Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Montana.

Though medicinal marijuana began in California, its idea is gradually gaining acceptance in a more politically diverse range of states, said Keith Stroup, legal counsel for the Washington, D.C.-based National Organization for the Relief of Marijuana Laws.

Still, Trail said getting the legislation passed in conservative Idaho will be a challenge.

Regardless, Milar will be watching what the Legislature does.

On Friday, welding students made finishing touches to the white chair with a brown, padded seat. Four spikes were crafted so Pike could secure the chair with straps to the ground during competitions and training.

Pike said a similar chair would normally cost about $2,500, but Hardesty said it wasn't a hard project for students to work on.

"They went so far to machine a handle so I have more grab," Pike said, pointing at the grooves in the metal. "They went above and beyond with this project"

Pike will start training with his new chair in the coming weeks and looks forward to upcoming competitions. He plans to be at nationals in June, where he has ambitions of being named to the U.S. National Team.

While the training will be important, Pike said spending time with his 3-year-old daughter, Brynlee, is something he cherishes. He also looks forward to finishing his associate degree in

McAuliffe remains vivid to still-grieving hometown

By Kathy McCormack
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — In the 25 years since the Challenger exploded on liftoff, Felicia Brown has gone to college, become a psychologist, gotten married and had kids. Fresh in her mind, though, is the memory of Christa McAuliffe, a teacher at her high school and family friend who was to be the first teacher in space.

"I know how important her field trip into space was to her and how much she hoped to learn and share with students everywhere," said the Concord High School graduate, who at 43 is now older than McAuliffe was when she died at age 37. "I wouldn't want her sincerity to get lost in a textbook."

A whole generation — including McAuliffe's own students — has grown up since McAuliffe and six other astronauts perished on live TV on Jan. 28, 1986, a quarter century ago this Friday. Now the former schoolchildren who loved her are making sure that people who weren't even born then know about McAuliffe and her dream of going into space.

Students who didn't know her now will when they attend a new school named in her honor.

Concord, a city of about 42,000 where the popular McAuliffe taught social studies, carries her legacy as a source of both fierce pride and painful memory. Some locals had mixed feelings when the name of space pioneer Alan Shepard, a New Hampshire native, was added to a planetarium originally named just for McAuliffe. Some people still tear up at the mention of her name.

But in ways both quiet and public, the city she left behind is making sure she lives on where her husband still resides, her children grew up and her remains are buried.

Brown didn't have McAuliffe as a teacher, but was a family friend and baby-sat for her children. Last spring, when her third-grade daughter had to work on a Concord history project, she encouraged her to devote it to McAuliffe.

Brown's mother, Carol Berry, was watching in person at Cape Canaveral, Fla., when the Challenger blew up. She headed the children's division at the Concord Public Library and worked with McAuliffe on a space-related reading program and had kept a scrapbook of the events leading to the shuttle launch and afterward. She helped with the project and talked to her granddaughter's class.

"It's difficult to have it all brought back to the forefront in my mind again," said Berry, 71. "Every year, I think about it again. I just feel so badly; it took away a lot of talent and what could've been a really wonderful project, experience."

Keeping McAuliffe's memory alive is also important to Holly Merrow, who graduated from Concord High in 1986 and now teaches in Portland, Maine. Merrow, taught by McAuliffe in a class about women in history, recalled that she made lessons fun, interesting and real — and she tries to do the same.

Merrow teaches third grade but for several years taught a lesson about McAuliffe and the Challenger to students in the fifth grade and in middle school. She showed them a scrapbook full of NASA stickers, as well as articles on the explosion and McAuliffe's selection by NASA, in which she was chosen from more than 11,000 applicants in a contest to be the first civilian teacher on a space flight.

"I teach with teachers who weren't even alive then," she said. She admits it's been hard going back in time to give those lessons, saying, "I just well up sometimes."

Republicans press for Senate vote on health care

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans want to box majority Democrats into allowing a health care repeal vote even if GOP lawmakers expect to be on the losing side.

"We need to have a vote on it because we promised the people we would," Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said Sunday on "Face the Nation" on CBS. "We have to have a vote on repeal so that everybody is on record whether they want to repeal."

Republicans took control of the House after November's elections and last week voted, as promised, to repeal the health care law. Only three Democrats joined all Republicans in the 245-189 vote to scrap the law.

In the Senate, Democrats retained majority control, even though the 53-47 split is narrower than the advantage they held before November. Two of those votes come from independents who caucus with the Democrats and support the health care law overall. Moreover, Senate measures usually require a 60-vote majority to advance.

While Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., who controls the Senate agenda, has said such a bill won't come to a vote, Republican leader Mitch McConnell repeated his promise that a repeal vote will indeed take place.

"I'm not going to discuss how we'll do it from a parliamentary point of view here," McConnell said on "Fox News Sunday."

"If that does not pass, and I don't think anyone is optimistic that it will, we intend to go after this health care bill in every way that we can. It's the single worst piece of legislation that's been passed in my time in the Senate," McConnell said.

One route to a repeal vote could be through an amendment brought to the Senate floor, according to Sen. Dick Durbin of Illinois, the No. 2 Democrat.

"If some Republican senator wants to offer it as an amendment at some point, it's possible they will. It's possible we'll face that vote," Durbin said on Fox. "But having spoken to my members in the Democratic caucus, with Sen. Reid, we feel there's still strong support for health care reform."

Cantor: I believe Obama is a citizen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Republican House majority leader says he doesn't think questions about President Barack Obama's citizenship should play a role in the discussion of policy matters.

Two years into the Obama administration, so-called birthers continue to argue that Obama isn't a natural-born citizen and that he hasn't proved he's constitutionally qualified to be president. Birth records in Hawaii haven't dissuaded them.

House Majority Leader Eric Cantor says he believes Obama is a citizen and that most Americans are beyond that question.

"I don't think it's an issue that we need to address at all. It is not an issue that even needs to be on the policy-making table right now whatsoever," he said.

Appearing Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press," Cantor refused to call people who question Obama's citizenship "crazy."

"I don't think it's nice to call anyone crazy," Cantor said.

Cantor says he believes that Obama wants what's best for the country and that there are honest disagreements over how to achieve that.

Birthers say there's no proof he was born in the United States; many of these skeptics question whether he was actually born in Kenya, his father's home country.

Hawaii's health director said in 2008 and 2009 that she had seen and verified Obama's original vital records, and birth notices in two Honolulu newspapers were published within days of Obama's birth at Kapiolani Maternity and Gynecological Hospital in Honolulu.

Health Department spokeswoman Janice Okubo again confirmed on Friday that Obama's name is found in its alphabetical list of names of people born in Hawaii, maintained in bound copies available for public view.

The event was capped off Saturday with a snowmobile parade, awards presentation and fireworks.

State of the Union is first test of Obama's centrist shift, GOP says

By Michael A. Memoli
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Tuesday's State of the Union address will be the first test of whether President Barack Obama's post-election shift to a more centrist course is more than symbolic, Republicans said Sunday in the lead-up to his speech.

"We're going to find out beginning next week how much of this he really means," Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said in an interview on "Fox News Sunday." "It is kind of a trust-but-verify moment. Let's see if he's really willing to do it, and if he is, I think he'll find a lot of help among Republicans in Congress."

After an electoral "shelacking" in November, Obama embraced a compromise that extended the Bush-era tax cuts, retooled his West Wing to include more moderate voices — such as his new chief of staff, William Daley — and made new overtures to the business community.

His polls have rebounded as well on the eve of his second State of the Union address, passing the 50 percent threshold in a series of major surveys.

Addressing supporters in a video message released Saturday night, Obama said his speech Tuesday would focus on creating jobs and American competitiveness, as well as the nation's deficit challenges.

Though calling for some budget cuts, Obama also is expected to call for additional spending on infrastructure and education. That raised red flags among Republicans.

"This is not a time to be looking at pumping up government spending in very many areas,"

McConnell said.

"When the president talks about competitiveness, sure, we want America to be competitive," U.S. Rep. Eric Cantor, R-Va., said on "Meet the Press."

"We want to cut and grow. When we hear invest from anyone in Washington, to me that means more spending."

Cantor, leader of the new House Republican majority, said Republicans will press for serious spending cuts in response to the expected vote this spring on raising the nation's debt limit.

Thursday, a group of conservative House Republicans and Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C., unveiled a spending plan that would cut $2.5 trillion from the federal ledger. Republicans more broadly campaigned in 2010 on returning spending to 2008 levels, a proposal that will be debated this week in the House.

Tea partiers say defense in mix for budget cuts

By Donna Cassata
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Back home, tea partiers clamoring for the debt-ridden government to slash spending say nothing should be off limits. Tea party-backed lawmakers echo that argument, and they're not exempting the military's multibillion-dollar budget in a time of war.

That demand is creating hard choices for the newest members of Congress, especially Republicans who owe their elections and solid House majority to the influential grass-roots movement. Cutting defense and canceling weapons could mean deep spending reductions and high marks from tea partiers as the nation wrestles with a $1.3 trillion deficit. Yet it also could jeopardize thousands of jobs when unemployment is running high.

Proponents of the cuts could face criticism that they're trying to weaken national security in a post-Sept. 11 world.

House Republican leaders specifically exempted defense, homeland security and veterans' programs from spending cuts in their party's "Pledge to America" campaign manifesto last fall. But the House's new majority leader, Rep. Eric Cantor, R-Va., has said defense programs could join others on the cutting board.

The defense budget is about $700 billion annually. Few in Congress have been willing to make cuts as U.S. troops fight in Afghanistan and finish the operation in Iraq.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates, in a recent pre-emptive move, proposed $78 billion in spending cuts and an additional $100 billion in cost-saving moves. While that amounts to $13 billion less than the Pentagon wanted to spend in the coming year, it still stands as 3 percent growth after inflation is taken into account.

That's why tea party groups say if the government is going to cut spending, the military's budget needs to be part of the mix.

"The widely held sentiment among Tea Party Patriot members is that every item in the budget, including military spending and foreign aid, must be on the table," said Mark Meckler, co-founder of the Tea Party Patriots. "It is time to get serious about preserving the country for our posterity. The mentality that certain programs are 'off the table' must be taken off the table."

Former House Majority Leader Dick Armey and Matt Kibbe, leaders of the group FreedomWorks, recently wrote in a Wall Street Journal editorial that "defense spending should not be exempt from scrutiny." On Gates' proposed savings of $145 billion over five years, they said, "That's a start."

Just about all Republicans — and plenty of Democrats, too — favor paring back spending. But when it comes to specific cuts — eliminating money for schools, parks, hospitals, highways and everything else — the decisions get difficult. Every government expenditure has its advocate and no one wants his or her program cut.

Fault lines have emerged within the Republican ranks over how deep to cut and where to whittle. In the coming weeks, lawmakers will feel the pressure from constituents and colleagues.

"Everything is ultimately on the table," said Rep. Jon Runyan of New Jersey, a freshman Republican and a tea party favorite.

That view could produce a rough tenure for the 6-foot-7 former football player, who just earned a coveted spot on the House Armed Services Committee, a fierce protector of military interests. The congressman's district is home to Fort Dix, which merged with neighboring McGuire Air Force Base and Lakehurst Naval Air Engineering Station to make the military's first three-branch base.

Runyan expects a committee fight over Gates' proposal to cancel a $14 billion program to develop the Expeditionary Fighting Vehicle for the Marines and use that money to buy additional ships, F-18 jets and new electronic jammers. Already, several members of the panel, including the chairman, Rep. Buck McKeon, R-Calif., have signaled they will challenge Gates' move.

Runyan says he will decide after he's heard arguments from both sides.

FBI: Woman who raised stolen NY baby held in Conn.

By Stephen Singer
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — A North Carolina woman who raised a child kidnapped 23 years ago from a New York hospital surrendered to authorities on a probation violation charge Sunday, days after a widely publicized reunion between the biological mother and the daughter taken from her as a baby.

Ann Pettway surrendered Sunday morning to the FBI and Bridgeport police on a warrant from North Carolina, where she's on probation because of a conviction for attempted embezzlement, FBI supervisory special agent William Reiner said.

Pettway received two years of probation last June after she took items from a store where she worked, which is considered embezzlement under North Carolina law, state correction spokeswoman Pamela Walker said. Under terms of her probation, she wasn't allowed to leave the state.

Department of Correction officials there tried repeatedly to contact her after finding out investigators wanted to question her in the 1987 abduction of Carlina White.

North Carolina officials said Friday they believed Pettway was on the run from authorities. They said Sunday they would seek her extradition.

Carlina was just 19 days old when her parents took her to Harlem Hospital in the middle of the night with high fever. Joy White and Carl Tyson said a woman who looked like a nurse had comforted them. The couple left the hospital to rest, but their baby was missing when they went back. No suspects were identified.

Carlina is now 23 and has been living under the name Nejdra Nance in Connecticut and in the Atlanta area. She said she had long suspected Pettway wasn't her biological mother because she could never provide her with a birth certificate and because she didn't look like anyone else in Pettway's family.

She periodically checked the website of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and while looking through New York photos early this month found one that looked nearly identical to her own baby picture. She contacted Joy White through the center.

White and Carlina met in New York before DNA tests were complete, confident they were mother and daughter. After the test results confirmed it Wednesday, Carlina returned from Atlanta to be with White again.

Pettway remained in custody Sunday and couldn't be reached for comment. Nobody answered when a reporter on Friday knocked on the door of a house where Pettway lived in Raleigh, N.C. A woman who answered the phone at a Pettway relative's home in Bridgeport refused to comment on her surrender.

Carlina told the New York Post in an interview posted Thursday that reuniting with her family was like a dream.

"I'm so happy," she said. "At the same time, it's a funny feeling because everything's brand new. It's like being born again."

SUPER BOWL BOUND

leads Pack past Bears to take NFC titleBy Chris Jenkins
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — There was one Monster of the Midway in the NFC championship game and his name was Aaron Rodgers.

He wasn't even at his best and, still, he was better than the first, the second and the third quarterback used in vain by the Chicago Bears against their bitter rivals.

Rodgers ran for a score and made a TD-saving tackle in leading the Green Bay Packers into the Super Bowl with a bone-jarring 21-14 victory Sunday over Chicago.

"It's an incredible feeling," Rodgers said. "I'm at a loss for words."

Rodgers played well enough to keep the Bears off balance all afternoon, Green Bay punter Tim Masthay kept Devin Hester under wraps and the Packers' superb defense took care of the rest in knocking the Bears out of the playoffs.

It was the 182nd meeting in the league's most historic feud, and the stakes had never been bigger.

Now the Packers (13-6) are headed to Dallas. And no matter what happens in the Super Bowl on Feb. 6, the Packers and their fans hold ultimate bragging rights over their foes to the south. Green Bay will play the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We made a play to win the game and that's all that matters," Packers linebacker Clay Matthews said. "Keep playing defense the way we know how, and it's going to be tough for teams to beat us."

All Jay Cutler could do was watch, having left the game with a knee injury early in the third quarter. Even before the injury, Cutler was having trouble moving the ball. Worse, he was getting booed by the home fans.

Primary backup Todd Collins replaced Cutler and was jeered even worse. Then little-known backup Caleb Hanie and the Bears (12-6) actually made it a game.

Chicago's third-string quarterback rallied the Bears for a touchdown drive to cut the lead to 14-7 after Chester Taylor's 1-yard touchdown

PITTSBURGH — The New York Jets were quiet all week.

Not much changed once the game started. By the time they made some noise, it was simply too late.

Rex Ryan's big-mouthed bunch was shut down and shut up in the first half by Pittsburgh on Sunday night, as the Jets' defense was dominated by Ben Roethlisberger, Rashard Mendenhall and the Super Bowl-bound Steelers 24-19.

After a loud run through the postseason that had the Jets in the AFC championship game for the second straight year, New York couldn't get anything until a second-half comeback attempt fell short.

And it was because of a slow start that lacked the intensity of the Jets' first two playoff victories.

Ryan's aggressive defense was leaky from the beginning, allowing Pittsburgh gain after big gain as the Steelers jumped out to a 24-0 lead that the Jets couldn't recover from.

"They made plays when they had to," Ryan said, "and that's why they're moving on."

Ryan said all season he thought his team was going to win the Super Bowl, even boldly scribbling "Soon To Be Champs" on an ESPN bus during training camp. On Friday, he reiterated that he wanted to see green and white confetti fall, wanted the celebratory hats and T-shirts and to raise the trophy as AFC champions.

It wasn't to be. Again.

Two trips to the AFC championship game, and two disappointing walks off the field by Ryan and the Jets.

"I would change the outcome of this game and that's the only thing I would change," Ryan said. "We don't need to apologize to anybody. We'll be back, you'll see."

Ryan called the Jets' first-round playoff game against Indianapolis "personal" against Peyton Manning, and the defense bottled up the Colts' Pro Bowl quarterback.

The next week, Ryan said it was between him and the

No. 4 Soderling upset by Dolgopopolov in 4th round

By John Pye
Associated Press writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — French Open finalist Robin Soderling is out of the Australian Open following the biggest upset to date in the year's first major.

Alexandr Dolgopopolov stopped Soderling's eight-match winning streak with a 1-6, 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2 victory Monday, reaching the quarterfinals in his first trip to Melbourne Park.

The fourth-seeded Soderling hadn't dropped a set during his surge that started with his run to the final at the Brisbane tuneup event. He dominated the opening set but couldn't keep it up against the 22-year-old Ukrainian, making his fourth appearance in a major.

Dolgopopolov's cross-court backhand to bring up his first match point was typical of the 50 winners he hit against a stunned Soderling, the highest of the seeded players knocked out of the men's draw.

Soderling saved three match points, but his run came to an end with another unforced error, his 51st. He was a win away from completing a set of quarterfinals appearances at all four majors.

Dolgopopolov earned nine breaks, including three times after conceding a break himself in the fifth set. The 26-year-old Soderling had dropped his serve only twice this year.

"I'm trying to get his weak side and play uncomfortable for him — then if I have chances to make winners, that's my game," Dolgopopolov said. "He has one of the hardest balls on tour but I was able to read his serve pretty well."

He next plays either 2010 finalist Andy Murray of Britain or No. 11 Jurgen Melzer.

Dolgopopolov said his father worked as a coach for the likes of Andrei Medvedev, so he sometimes hit with the players when they were practicing.

No. 2-ranked Vera Zvonareva continued her roll toward a third consecutive Grand Slam final with a 6-4, 6-1 win over Iveta Benesova.

Andy Roddick's fourth-round 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 loss to 19th-seeded Stanislas Wawrinka on Sunday night means there's no Americans in the men's or women's quarterfinals.

The eighth-seeded Roddick was the last American man standing. The women were out before the third round ended.

"Obviously wasn't the showing that we wanted, you know, but I'm doing what I can."

Roddick's ouster came on a day when Roger Federer equaled Jimmy Connors' Open era mark by reaching his 27th straight quarterfinal at a major, and Francesca Schiavone won the longest women's match in Grand Slam history — a 6-4, 1-6, 16-14 victory over Svetlana Kuznetsova that took 4 hours, 44 minutes.

No. 3 Novak Djokovic and No. 6 Tomas Berdych also won in the fourth round. Among the women, No. 1

Jhonattan Vegas wins Hope Classic in playoff

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Jhonattan Vegas made a 13-foot par putt on the second playoff hole to win the Bob Hope Classic on Sunday, holding off Gary Woodland for his first PGA Tour victory.

The first Venezuelan to win a PGA Tour event, the rookie won in just his fifth tour start despite hitting his tee shot in the water on the 92nd hole of the five-day tournament. Vegas capitalized when Woodland made two poor chip shots, pumping his fist in celebration after his putt fell.

"It's a dream come true," said Vegas, the first rookie to win the 52-year-old Hope. "It's something you dream about, but you have to make it happen."

Vegas and Woodland eliminated defending champion Bill Haas with birdies on the first playoff hole after all three finished the final round at 27-under 333. Vegas is the third straight player to get his first PGA Tour victory at the Hope, joining Pat Perez and Haas.

Vegas' victory should give a boost to his desire to revive the sport in his native country, where it's largely unpopular and criticized by President Hugo Chavez. Vegas left home at 17, moving to Houston to study golf and English before playing at the University of Texas.

"I hope they know about the story, and that it is possible to get to the PGA Tour and win," Vegas said. "I hope people realize that all over the world."

Playing one group apart, Haas and Vegas both missed short putts on the final regulation hole. A few minutes after Haas botched a 6-footer for birdie, Vegas couldn't connect from 9 feet, making his only bogey of the final day.

COOK WINS SEASON-OPENING MITSUBISHI

KAUPULEHU-KONA,

Hawaii — John Cook birdied five straight holes after the turn to win the Champions Tour's season-opening Mitsubishi Electric Championship on Sunday, shooting a second straight 8-under 64 for a two-stroke victory over Tom Lehman.

The 53-year-old Cook had eight birdies in his bogey-free round for a 22-under 194 total and his second straight victory. He finished last season with a successful title defense in the Charles Schwab Cup Championship.

After two birdies on the front side, Cook scorched the back nine, dropping putt after putt. He birdied six holes during a seven-hole stretch to take home $305,000 and the hook-shaped trophy.

The win was Cook's sixth on the 50-and-over circuit.

Lehman, who closed with a 64, had an eagle, eight birdies and two bogeys. Defending champion Tom Watson shot a 68 to finish third at 19 under.

KAYMER PASSES WOODS FOR NO. 2 RANKING

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — Martin Kaymer overtook Tiger Woods for the No. 2 ranking in the world Sunday, winning the Abu Dhabi Golf Championship by eight shots after shooting a 6-under 66.

Kaymer earned his third win in four years in Abu Dhabi with a 24-under total of 264. Rory McIlroy of Northern Ireland finished second after a 69, while Retief Goosen and Graeme McDowell were another two shots back in third.

It was the biggest winning margin and lowest total score in tournament's history. Kaymer had been third in the rankings and now trails only Lee Westwood.

Anthony leads Nuggets past Pacers, 121-107

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press writer

DENVER — Carmelo Anthony gave the home crowd nothing to boo about Sunday night, scoring 36 points in the Denver Nuggets' 121-107 victory over the Indiana Pacers, who lost their fifth straight.

Anthony had been subjected to jeers by the home crowd as trade talk intensified last week, but on this night, the Denver fans showed him plenty of love, especially when he was raining 3s from all over the court as he put on a spectacular 23-point show in the third quarter.

Anthony's career-best six 3-pointers all came in the third period as the Nuggets turned a close game into a laugher — a reversal of their game in November when the Pacers made their first 20 shots of the third quarter and rolled to a 144-113 win in Indianapolis.

Anthony's previous high was five 3-pointers back in 2003, his rookie season.

Nene added 15 points and 10 rebounds for the Nuggets, who led by 25 and improved to 20-5 at the Pepsi Center, where they haven't lost consecutive games all season. Tyler Hansbrough had 27 points and 10 rebounds for Indiana, which trailed 59-51 at halftime.

After a chaotic week in which the New Jersey Nets scuttled talks on a proposed blockbuster trade for Anthony, the weekend was quiet in Denver with no new reports, rumors or revelations in this Melo Drama that began last summer when the All-Star forward refused to sign a $65 million extension through 2014-15.

Nuggets coach George Karl acknowledged over the weekend that the drama has weighed on his weary team.

"It's hard. I would say we all realize there's a little bit of heaviness to getting our jobs done. It doesn't mean we can't get it done," Karl said. "Actually, the performance has been pretty first class. The little things and the details of preparation and details of practice, I see a little heaviness to it."

Karl has dealt with the drama by keeping a sense of humor and harboring an amusing atmosphere when he can.

"I think most of the time, we've had some levity and some fun with it. When we've gotten hit in the head a couple of times, we seem like we've communicated through (it) and gotten into a better place," Karl said. "As I told Chauncey and a few of the guys today, 'This is going to be an important stretch. This is an important stretch to solidify to everybody that we're a playoff team and we're going to figure this out.'"

The Pepsi Center fans let Anthony have it while he was getting interviewed by the team's TV network following his 35-point performance against Oklahoma City on Wednesday night, hours after the Nets pulled out of their latest round of trade talks.

That drew a rebuke from Lakers star Kobe Bryant. Before and after Los Angeles' win here Friday night, Bryant called the boo-birds idiots and suggested they were foolish because the fans' hostile reaction might just push Anthony out of town if he were at all waffling about wanting to play somewhere else.

The Melo Drama hits the road for a five-game Eastern swing starting Tuesday night in Washington before stops in Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia and New Jersey.

Leuer, No. 18 Wisconsin top Northwestern 78-46

EVANSTON, Ill. — Wisconsin freshman Josh Gasser had 10 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists for the first triple-double in school history, leading the 19th-ranked Badgers to a 78-46 victory over Northwestern.

Jon Leuer scored 19 points, Keaton Nankivil had 16 and Jordan Taylor 14 as the Badgers (15-4, 5-2 Big Ten) won their third straight game.

John Shurna and Luka Mirkovic scored 13 points apiece for the Wildcats (13-6, 3-5).

Gasser's baseline 3-point-er at the 13-minute mark snapped a tie and sparked the Badgers to a 15-4 run over the next 5:10. Wisconsin opened its biggest lead at 45-26 just before the half when Gasser picked up the ball in a scramble under the basket and put it in.

Leuer had just two points in the first half, but scored 15 of Wisconsin's first 20 in the second half as the lead grew to 65-30.

The 32-point loss was Northwestern's largest of the season.

NO. 21 WEST VIRGINIA 56, SOUTH FLORIDA 46

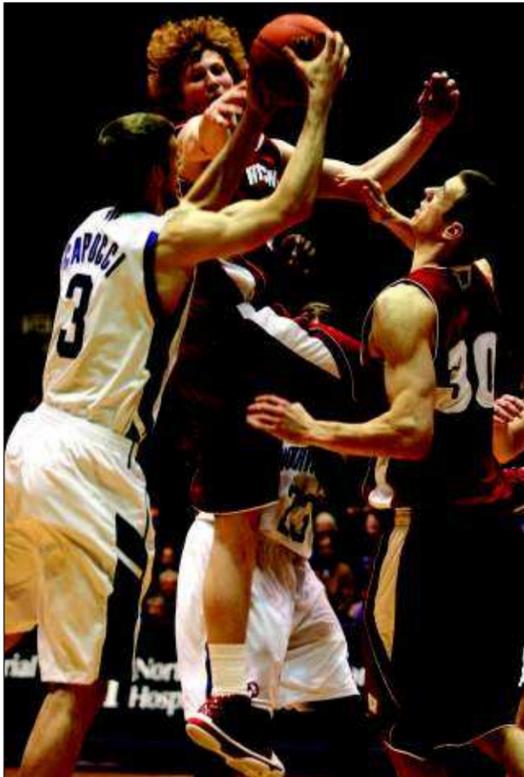

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Casey Mitchell had 13 points and 14 rebounds to power West Virginia to the conference win.

John Flowers and Kevin Jones added 13 points apiece for West Virginia (13-5, 4-2 Big East). The Mountaineers bounced back from a 75-71 loss to Marshall on Wednesday after entering the Top 25 for the first time this season.

Augustus Gilchrist had his third straight double-double with 20 points and 10 rebounds for South Florida (7-14, 1-7). The Bulls lost for the 11th time in 13 games and remain winless in nine road games.

Despite a solid defensive effort, West Virginia's 56 points were well below its season average of 75 and eight fewer than its previous low for the season, a 64-61 win at Duquesne on Dec. 12.

run early in the fourth quarter.

Hanie had a chance to tie the game after the Bears' defense finally got a few stops, but threw a ball straight to Packers defensive lineman B.J. Raji, who lumbered 18 yards into the end zone for a touchdown to give the Packers a 21-7 lead.

But Hanie wasn't finished. He threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Earl Bennett to again cut the lead to seven points with 4:43 left.

The Bears forced a punt and got the ball back with under 3 minutes left. Hanie drove the Bears to the Green Bay 29-yard line, then threw a fourth-down interception to Sam Shields — the rookie's second of the game.

Now all those Pro Bowl voters who didn't think Rodgers was worthy can relax. They're off the hook. Rodgers will be headed to the Super Bowl instead.

Rodgers proved ready for the biggest day of his brief but impressive career as the successor to Brett Favre, even if his final stat line didn't look impressive after an ugly, hard-fought game.

He threw for 244 yards with two interceptions — a disappointment, given how well he had played lately. But his play in the first half was good enough to put the Bears in a two-touchdown hole, boggling a good defense that suddenly seemed to fall for every play-action fake.

Chicago was ready for a championship party under sunny skies and 20-degree temperatures, and went wild from the national anthem on. But Rodgers quieted them down quickly, marching the Packers on an opening drive then ended with Rodgers scrambling for a score.

The Bears went with a heavy dose of running back Matt Forte early on, with limited success.

Early in the second quarter, Brandon Jackson faked Brian Urlacher out for a long gain on a screen pass, and Rodgers' pass to Jordy Nelson set up James Starks' 4-yard touchdown run to give Green Bay a 14-0 lead.

It was the latest in a series of big moments for Rodgers, who has earned near-universal praise for the way he has played this season — especially since sitting out the Packers' Dec. 19 loss at New England because of a concussion.

Rodgers has been on a hot streak ever since, and doing it under pressure. The Packers would have been out of the playoffs with a loss in either of their last two regular-season games, including the regular season finale against Chicago.

With the Packers leading 14-0 at halftime, Green Bay's defense forced a three-and-out to begin the second half, and Rodgers went back to marching the Packers down the field.

With the Packers poised to put the game away, Rodgers instead tossed the ball to Urlacher on third-and-goal. He took off and ran down the Bears linebacker near midfield, barely preventing him from running it back for a touchdown when he grabbed him.

"I don't think he saw me," Urlacher said. "He threw it to me — then he tackled me."

Rodgers' play almost certainly saved a score and might have saved the game.

"I don't get paid to tackle, but that was probably one of my better plays of the game," Rodgers said.

Urlacher, who said earlier in the week that he voted for Rodgers for the Pro Bowl, walked away impressed.

"Great quarterback, no doubt about that," Urlacher said.

But after Urlacher's interception, the Bears couldn't make anything happen with Collins in for Cutler, and appeared to be headed for a blowout until Hanie took over.

Bears coach Lovie Smith grew testy after being asked several questions about Cutler's injury.

"He hurt his knee and he was out, all right?" Smith said. "There's nothing else for me to tell you on that. I don't know exactly when it happened, he couldn't go and that was that."

Patriots' Bill Belichick, saying he needed to outcoach his counterpart.

Cornerback Antonio Cromartie fired things up by calling Tom Brady an expletive, and the trash talk escalated from there.

Then, the Jets backed up all the big talk by stunning the Patriots 28-21. In a postgame television interview, Scott went into a rant that became a viral hit on the Internet. When a reporter said he'd see him in Pittsburgh, Scott growled: "Can't wait!"

It became a catch phrase for Jets fans, and even his teammates teased him about it.

But things took a silent turn last week when Ryan heaped praise on Steelers coach Mike Tomlin, using words such as "respect" and "like," and his players followed suit.

Turns out, the Jets needed to keep that mean streak going. Maybe they left it all out on the field at Foxborough, a game against bitter division rivals.

It certainly appeared that way from the start, as the Jets couldn't get the Steelers offense off the field. Missed tackles, bad decisions and sub-par performances put New York in a 24-3 halftime hole. Pittsburgh held the ball for more than 21 minutes, out-gained New York 231-50 and outrushed the Jets 135-1 in the opening half.

After a solid second half, New York's defense needed to make one more stand to give the Jets a chance at a late comeback. But Antonio Brown caught a pass on third down to allow the Steelers to run out the clock.

Ryan then slammed down his headset, knowing his team's season again ended one win short of where he told everyone it would.

Tennis

Caroline Wozniacki and No. 9 Li Na advanced, while No. 14 Maria Sharapova lost to No. 30 Andrea Petkovic.

Roddick's departure leaves Murray as the only player from any of the Grand Slam host countries in the tournament. All the French and the Australian players were already beaten by the end of the third round. There's two Swiss, but only one can reach the semifinals.

Wawrinka advanced to the first all-Swiss quarterfinal at a major in the Open era, where he'll run into defending champion Federer.

Federer beat Tommy Robredo 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2 to reach the quarterfinals for the 27th major in a row. Connors' mark came between 1973 and 1983 — although he didn't play every major because he was hurt or didn't travel to Australia.

Schiavone, the French Open champion, saved six match points, then converted on her third match point in the longest women's match at a major in terms of time in the Open era. The longest previous record was set in Australia last year when Barbara Zahlavova-Strycova beat Regina Kulikova 7-6 (5), 6-7 (10), 6-3 in 4:19.

The 30-year-old Italian will next meet Wozniacki, who reached the quarterfinals in Australia for the first time with a 6-3, 6-4 win over Anastasija Sevastova. She then caused a bit of stir at her news conference with a tale about being scratched by a kangaroo.

She later returned to Melbourne Park to clarify she'd made up the story and to apologize, saying she didn't think anyone would believe it.

QUOTE

“She’s a very gentle person and her personality is coming out with her touches ... and I am very luck to know her.”
 — Tracy Culbert, a nurse who accompanied Gabrielle Giffords on a flight from Arizona to a rehabilitation hospital in Houston on Friday

EDITORIAL

The long shadow of cuts at Health and Welfare

It turns out Idahoans aren’t quite the self-reliant, rugged individualists we thought we were.

One in three Idaho residents received help from the state Division of Welfare in 2010, ranging from food stamps to Medicaid to Aid to the Aged, Blind and Disabled.

That’s a half million people. Division Administrator Russ Barron told the Legislature’s Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee last week that because of high unemployment, more Idahoans are looking for help who have never sought public assistance before.

Our view: More Idahoans than you think depend on government-funded services. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Caseloads have jumped, but the agency’s personnel budget was cut by $1 million in state general funds, $2 million in total funds.

So the Department of Health and Welfare has eliminated services and programs that weren’t required by the federal government. That means people who apply for food stamps no longer are forced to comply with child support services as a condition of receiving food stamps. Aggressive efforts to locate non-paying parents for child support also have been dropped. Job assistance for food-stamp recipients aged 18-50 who don’t have children and aren’t disabled has been cut off. And 1,400 recipients have been booted off the Aid to the Aged, Blind and Disabled program, while another 600 had their benefits reduced.

All of which underscores what legislators are going to hear often in the next few weeks: Simple decisions can have complex consequences.

Idaho’s Medicaid program has seen a 21 percent jump in enrollment from fiscal year 2007 to today; there are now 223,198 Idahoans — 15 percent of the population — on Medicaid. But legislators will almost certainly trim $25 million in state Medicaid spending.

And because state spending is matched by federal funds, that will eliminate a total of $84 million in Medicaid services.

Ninety-seven percent of state Medicaid spending goes to payments to providers, which means that some of them will go out of business.

State Rep. John Rusche, D-Lewiston, a physician, estimates a $450 million to $500 million loss to Idaho’s health care industry, or 4,000 to 5,000 jobs.

That may overstate the impact, but major cuts the Legislature makes from here on out — be they in Health and Welfare, public schools or higher education — are likely to have a domino effect.

As for the rest of Idahoans, maybe the lesson is that we’re more dependent on the government — and each other — than we’d like to think.

Sarah Palin and the media need a timeout

In every twisted, wretched, ruinous relationship, there are moments so grim, flare-ups so appalling, that they offer both parties a chance to step back, take inventory, and realize that it’s time — far past time, in fact — to go their separate ways.

For the American media and Sarah Palin, that kind of a moment arrived earlier this month.

Ross Douthat

It began just hours after the tragedy in Tucson, with a tweet from Markos “Daily Kos” Moulitsas, the éminence grise of the liberal blogosphere. “Mission Accomplished, Sarah Palin,” he wrote, linking to a map that Palin’s PAC had put up last fall, placing targets on various Democratic districts, Gabrielle Giffords’s included. It didn’t take long for the media to seize on his attack and run with it. Forget a nation’s grief and Giffords’s struggle to survive: What America really needed, the nation’s pundits and TV producers decided, was a noisy debate about the possible link between Jared Lee Loughner’s crime and Palin’s martial campaign rhetoric.

Given how little connection Loughner seems to have to any kind of right-wing politics, this conversation looked increasingly ridiculous, and even a little bit obscene. But instead of letting the frenzy die away, Palin decided that what the country really needed was for her to use the day set aside for mourning Loughner’s victims to make a speech complaining about her own victimization. (Or as she put it, rather more pungently, the “blood libel” being leveled by her critics.) Which, needless to say, gave the press exactly the excuse it needed to continue its wall-to-wall Palin coverage for another 48 hours — and beyond, perhaps, given that she’s slated to appear on Sean Hannity’s show.

The whole business felt less like an episode in American political history than a scene from a particularly toxic marriage — more Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? than The Making of the President. The press and Palin have been at war with each other almost from the first, but their mutual antipathy looks increasingly like co-dependency: they can’t get along, but they can’t live without each other either.

For their part, the media manage to be consistently unfair to the former Alaska governor — gossipy and hostile in their reportage, hysterical and condescending in their commentary — even as they follow her every move with a fascination bordering on obsession. (MSNBC, in particular, should just change its name to “Palin 24/7” and get it over with.) When commentators aren’t denouncing her, they’re busy building up her legend — exaggerating her political acumen, over-praising her communications strategy, covering her every tweet as if she were the Viceroy of Red America, and spinning out outlandish scenarios in which she captures the White House in 2012.

Palin, meanwhile, officially despises the “lamestream” media. But press coverage — good, bad, whatever — is clearly the oxygen she craves. She supposedly hates having her privacy invaded, yet her family keeps showing up on reality TV. She thinks the political class is clueless and out-of-touch, but she can’t resist responding to its every provocation. Her public rhetoric, from “death panels” to “blood libel,” is obviously crafted to maximize coverage and controversy, and generate more heat than light. And her Twitter account reads like a constant plea for the most superficial sort of media attention.

It’s a grim spectacle on both sides, and this month’s pointless controversy was a particularly low point. So let me play the relationship counselor. To the media: Cover Sarah Palin if you want, but stop acting as if she’s the most important conservative politician in America. Stop pretending that she has a plausible path to the presidency in 2012. (She doesn’t.) Stop suggesting that she’s the front-runner for the Republican nomination. (She isn’t.) And every time you’re tempted to parse her tweets for some secret code or crucial dog whistle, stop and think, this woman has fewer Twitter followers than Ben Stiller, and then go write about something else instead.

To Palin: You were an actual politician once (remember that?), but you’re becoming the kind of caricature that your enemies have always tried to make of you. So maybe it’s time to turn off your iPad for a while, and take a break from Facebook and Fox News. The world won’t end if you don’t respond to every criticism, and you might even win a few more admirers if you cultivated a lighter touch and a more above-the-fray persona. Oh, and when that reality-TV producer sends you a pitch for “Sarah Plus Five Plus Kate Plus Eight,” just say no.

Breaking up is hard to do, of course. But for the majority of Americans who are neither Palinolacs nor Palinistas, here’s the good news: If the press (including this columnist!) and Sarah Palin can’t quit each other, you can still quit us.

We should get more informed on wind turbines

Beware: Wind turbines may sprout near you soon.

In 2006, my husband and I purchased 15 acres of land in the country. We built a home we love in a peaceful location with beautiful and expansive scenic views.

When we built, installing industrial wind turbines near us was not allowed by the county ordinances and our serene setting was protected into the future. Since then, the ordinances were changed with almost no public awareness. Now there is a proposal to construct nearly 100 wind turbines on the agricultural lands directly across the street from our property.

“So what,” you say. Wind turbines are industrial, not agricultural. They produce energy at best part time, and what little energy they intermittently produce is mostly going to other states like Nevada and California.

Wake up Idahoans! Look at their economics and how erecting wind turbines will dramatically increase your monthly electric bills. Research the possible health, noise, ecological and property value effects that wind turbines will have on you, your family and your neighbors for generations.

We are seeing hundreds of these mammoth monstrosities go up across our Idaho skylines and letting it happen. And there are many, many more wind turbine projects pending throughout the state.

Get informed. Be responsible. Don’t let what is happening to us happen to you! Contact your local county planning and zoning department and your Idaho State congressmen and let your voice be heard.

For more information on how wind turbines could affect you, visit www.eastidahowindaction.org.

Dealing with China could endanger our freedom

Are Gov. Otter and the Idaho Commerce Department allowing a Communist Party Chinese “Trojan Horse” in Idaho supposedly for economic gain? Idaho and other states are planning and are already allowing Communist Party-controlled Chinese companies into foreign trade zones. In Idaho, the communist company would have access to our international Boise airport. Customs and Border Patrol who “manage” foreign trade zones admit they only randomly inspect goods in foreign trade zone warehouses. Anything could be held in those warehouses. Also they would bring in their own workforce under the EB-5 Visa law that Congress must change.

China hates us and considers the United States its No. 1 enemy! By allowing them into foreign trade zones, we are greatly endangering our freedom. This madness must be stopped!

Congress must audit the Federal Reserve System which has never been audited and is fueling inflation by printing more unbacked money. This is leading to sharp increases in fuel, food, medical care, education and a huge $14 trillion debt.

Congress must repeal Obamacare and stop Environmental Protection Agency control over carbon dioxide, which is not causing climate change. Many companies are leaving the United States and food production and higher energy costs are coming due to EPA’s unscientific regulations.

The START Treaty is basically a plan to disarm the United States! Congress must pass H.R. 140 to prevent illegal alien children born in the United States from receiving automatic U.S. citizenship!

My sympathy goes out to the victims of the murderer in Arizona. According to his friends, he is a liberal, left-wing drug user. Yet, the liberal media is trying to blame the shootings on patriotic Americans. Most all of the refugees that continue to pour into Twin Falls come from countries where guns were confiscated. Remember, when guns are outlawed, only outlaws will have guns!

Forest Service weary of underage drivers in Idaho

Agency says some roads could be closed to off-road vehicles

LEWISTON (AP) — U.S. Forest Service officials are considering altering forest roads in Idaho for safety reasons following a 2009 decision by Idaho lawmakers that opened the roads to drivers younger than 16 operating off-highway vehicles without a state-issued driver's license.

"While responsible OHV (off-highway vehicle) recreation is welcome on national forest system roads, safe operation of motor vehicles on national forest roads is compromised because unlicensed and untrained drivers are now sharing roads designed and maintained for passenger cars and commercial truck traffic," said Harv Forsgren, regional forester of the Intermountain Region based in Ogden, Utah.

The agency said more than 2,500 miles of roads Forest Service roads in Idaho are "roads of concern" that could be dangerous for unlicensed drivers. The Forest Service is taking public comments through Feb. 22 about roads in the eight national forests in the state.

After reviewing comments, the agency said it will consider actions that could include reducing speed limits, removing brush for better visibility, adding speed bumps, and putting in warning signs.

The agency said some roads could be closed to off-road vehicle use.

"In cases where risks are unacceptable, OHV use may be restricted," Forsgren said. "However, for each road of concern, restricting OHV use will be considered as a last resort when no other reasonable and effective safety measures can be implemented."

Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian, sponsored the 2009 law that was aimed at changing registration and insurance for off-road vehicles. But a clause allowed drivers younger than 16 to ride off-highway vehicles without a driver's license on federal or state land where the road is not part of the state or local highway system. The young drivers must be supervised by a licensed adult.

Andy Brunelle, a Forest Service spokesman, said the agency can only close roads to specific types of vehicles, not just to young drivers.

"We can't distinguish between operators," he said. "We only have the ability to deal with the vehicle, which is why we are working hard with OHV groups to have training in place for underage operators."

Idaho licenses getting a high-tech makeover

BOISE — The Idaho driver's license is getting a high-tech makeover.

State transportation officials announced last week the new licenses to be issued starting in July will sport a new look and features designed to reduce counterfeiting and identity theft.

Agency Spokesman Jeff Stratton told the Lewiston Tribune it's been more than 10 years since the state last revamped its driver's license.

The need for enhanced security became apparent after agency employees ordered a fake identification from an online source and were unable to tell the real one from the fake.

Stratton says the new versions will have several layers of security, including ghost imaging, laser perforation and micro-printing.

Forest Service wants to move N. Idaho creek

LEWISTON — U.S. Forest Service officials in northern Idaho are proposing moving a stream out of a mining tunnel and back to its historic channel to open about 15 miles of upstream habitat to federally protected bull trout and steelhead.

Clearwater National Forest officials said the project involves rerouting Musselshell Creek east of Weippe.

"It's really a fish-passage project," Forest Service hydrologist Anne Connor told the Lewiston Tribune. "Currently the tunnel blocks access to quite a bit of habitat for fish that can't get through the tunnel."

Connor said about 500 feet of the 540 Road that was built in the original stream bed would have to be moved into an adjacent hillside.

The creek currently flows through 200 feet of mining tunnel cut through solid rock that is impassable to fish.

"It's a complete barrier," Connor said. Officials say the tunnel, locally called the Chinese Tunnel, was originally a hard-rock mining shaft believed to have been built in the 1880s.

Retired Forest Service engineer Norm Steadman said the creek didn't flow into the tunnel when he first arrived in the 1950s.

"I think it just naturally found it," he said.

The Forest Service is taking public comments through Feb. 16 and then plans to conduct an environmental analysis.

Shooting victim wants tougher charges filed

IDAHO FALLS — A 35-year-old eastern Idaho man who lost his right lung and most of the use of his right arm after being mistakenly shot during hunting season last fall says he's frustrated the shooter is only facing a misdemeanor.

Korby Hansen of Rexburg says his medical bills are close to $400,000 and that he expects those to increase after being hit with a 12-gauge shotgun slug fired by 57-year-old Mark Later of Rigby in October.

Later faces a misdemeanor charge of injuring another by careless handling and discharge of a firearm. Hansen wants Later charged with felony aggravated battery, punishable by up to 15 years in prison.

Hansen tells the Post Register that insurance is covering medical bills except his maximum yearly out-of-pocket expense of about $3,500.

Giffords shooting case may take years

By Jacques Billeaud
Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Investigators have been poring over surveillance video, interviewing witnesses and analyzing items seized from Jared Loughner's home as they build a case in the assassination attempt against Rep. Gabrielle Giffords.

It's a case that likely will take years to play out as it goes through the many phases of the criminal justice system: prosecutions by both federal and state authorities, proceedings over whether to move the case to a different venue, a possible insanity defense by Loughner and prosecutors' likely push for the death penalty.

The next step is an arraignment scheduled Monday afternoon in Phoenix for Loughner, who is accused of opening fire on a Giffords political event two weeks ago in a rampage that wounded 13 people and killed six others, including a federal judge and a 9-year-old girl born on Sept. 11, 2001.

Investigators have said Loughner was mentally disturbed and acting increasingly erratic in the weeks leading up to the shooting. If he pleads not guilty by reason of insanity and is successful, he could avoid the death penalty and be sent to a mental health facility instead of prison.

Paul Charlton, who worked as Arizona's U.S. attorney from 2001 to 2007 and isn't involved in the Loughner case, believes Loughner will likely mount an insanity defense. "Given what we know, that's going to be a defense," Charlton said.

Broadcast television trucks park outside TIRR Memorial Hermann Rehabilitation Hospital on Saturday in Houston. U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords arrived Friday at the Texas Medical Center, where she is expected to spend a few days in intensive care before moving to the hospital.

"I don't see a lot of other viable defenses," said Michael Piccarreta, a Tucson lawyer who has practiced criminal defense in federal court for 30 years. "It appears the actual guilt or innocent of the shooting will not be difficult to prove, and his pre-shooting behavior seems to be a history of erratic behavior — issues of pre-existing mental illness."

Before the case even gets to trial, the court would have to decide whether Loughner is mentally competent to stand trial. If he isn't, he would be sent to a federal facility for a minimum of four months to see if they can restore his competency. It could be up to a two-month wait just to get him into one of those facilities.

"It could take a year, it could take a year and a half. It could take longer," Heather Williams, the first assistant federal public defender in Arizona, said of the time it will take to bring the case to trial. Her office didn't take the Loughner case because it had conflicts of interest.

One area that will help the pace of the case is the fact that it's a relatively simple investigation. While other high-profile cases have required a lengthy investigation to chase down leads and co-conspirators, authorities have said Loughner acted alone. Dozens of people witnessed the shooting and surveillance cameras captured it on tape.

Investigators say they have also seized writings from Loughner in which he used words like "I planned ahead," "My assassination" and "Giffords."

Loughner will face two cases — federal and state. The federal charges will cover the killing and attempted killings of U.S. government employees such as the judge and Giffords, while the state case will deal with the other victims, including the 9-year-old girl. Federal prosecutors are going first, as charges have yet to be filed in the state case.

Pima County Attorney Barbara LaWall has the discretion to decide whether to seek the death penalty against Loughner in the state case, while the federal decision on whether to seek the death penalty rests with Arizona U.S. Attorney Dennis Burke and Attorney General Eric Holder, Charlton said.

In Montana, a plan to empower sheriffs against the government

By Matt Volz
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. — The line of people stretched out the door of the committee room, all waiting for their turn to condemn or express their fears about the federal government.

Most identified themselves as ordinary Montana citizens or tea party supporters united by the belief that the government is chipping away at their rights and abusing the constitutions of the state and the nation.

They'd arrived for a public hearing on the so-called "Sheriffs First Act," a Montana senator's proposal to make sheriffs the supreme authorities in their counties. Federal agents would be required to obtain written permission from a sheriff before conducting a search, seizure or arrest in a county.

"I've come to the point where I don't trust the federal government to protect us," Helena resident Lisa Wamsley told the panel Friday. "I urge you to support this bill to regain what is rightfully ours as citizens of Montana."

Whether the worries of Wamsley or others at the hearing would be quelled if the bill is approved is murky territory. It would still need to survive likely intense legal scrutiny over whether it violates the U.S. Constitution.

Jessica Fehr, spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney in Montana, declined to comment on whether such a bill is enforceable or how it might affect federal operations in Montana. But, prompted by a lawmaker's question, Gallatin County attorney Marty Lambert suggested there are questions over whether the bill violates the supremacy clause, which says the Constitution and federal law is "the supreme law of the land." "Yes, I think there are supremacy clause issues in this legislation," Lambert said.

American Civil Liberties Union representative Niki Zupanic warned the bill's passage could also hurt federal enforcement of civil rights laws, such as religious freedom, voting rights and discrimination.

Similar plans in Montana were popular in the mid-1990s with the rampant anti-government angst following the sieges in Waco and Ruby Ridge — one such bill went to the governor at the time, who vetoed it. The bill's current incarnation is being debated in a state with a long-standing libertarian streak, and amid resurgent fears of the federal government and success of the tea party movement.

Several law enforcement officials, including sheriffs and sheriff representatives, spoke against Senate Bill 114, saying it is misguided, politically motivated and could harm criminal investigations and jeopardize interagency cooperation.

They were outnumbered by the line of people with a completely different view on the role of government.

Some said their sheriffs would protect them against episodes such as the 1993 federal raid on Branch Davidian complex in Waco, Texas, or the deadly siege by government law enforcement agents at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, in 1992.

Others cited the confiscation of private citizens' guns during Hurricane Katrina as a justification to keep the federal government in check — even though it was the New Orleans Police Department, not the federal government, that confiscated those guns.

One man said something must be done to stop the march toward a stateless world government. Another said this bill would protect him from having to defend himself by force against federal government abuses by having the sheriff do it.

The bill's sponsor, Republican Sen. Greg Hinkle of Thompson Falls, said the measure is in response to a growing concern among citizens nationwide of abuses by federal officers while the government looks the other way.

Gary Marbut, president of the Montana Shooting Sports Association, who said he wrote Hinkle's bill, is the man behind a recently dismissed lawsuit by gun rights advocates and states seeking freedom from federal gun laws. He called the "Sheriffs First" bill his Plan B to implementing the firearms lawsuit, even if the appeal of the suit fails.

Pirate-fighting tactics may change after two daring raids

By Tom Odula
Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — Two daring commando raids by two nations in one day against Somali pirates show that some naval forces are taking a harder line, perhaps because nothing else they've tried has stopped the rise of lawlessness off the east coast of Africa.

The raids by South Korea and Malaysia on Friday could be a sign of more aggressive tactics to come — both by navies and by pirates responding to them. Experts say pirates could increasingly use hostages as human shields by pirates if raids become more common.

The European Union's naval force refuses to raid hijacked ships out of concern for the safety of hostages, but frustration is rising. Despite patrols by an international flotilla of modern warships, drones patrolling the Indian Ocean off the east African coast and Arabian Gulf and diverse strategies employed including the sinking of pirate boats, Somali pirates have been relentless.

They captured a record 1,016 hostages in 2010 and currently hold 32 vessels and 746 crew members of various nationalities after hijacking another six ships so far this year, according to a recent report by the International Maritime Bureau.

Eight crew members died and 13 were wounded in Somali pirate incidents in 2010, up from four dead and 10 wounded in 2009. There were no pirate killings elsewhere in the world in 2010.

The bureau said Somali pirates are operating more broadly than ever, from Oman on the Arabian Peninsula to Mozambique, more than 2,500 miles away in southeastern Africa. It also said navies have been more reluctant to intervene because pirates are using hijacked vessels to catch new prey.

Somalia's long lawless coastline snakes around the Horn of Africa and provides the perfect base for pirate dens. The country has not had a functioning government since a socialist dictatorship collapsed in 1991, plunging the nation into clan-based civil war.

South Korean commandos raided a cargo ship in the Arabian Sea before dawn Friday, killing eight Somali pirates and capturing five as they rescued all 21 crew members. The only crew member injured was the captain, who was shot in the stomach by a pirate; South Korea's military said his condition was not life-threatening.

A 4 1/2-minute video released Sunday by South Korea's military shows commandos in a small boat readying to climb onto the freighter amid gunshots. Later the commandos are seen trying to enter a door and then bringing out some hostages, with a navy helicopter shining searchlights on the vessel.

The video also shows several captured Somali pirates kneeling on the ship as South Korean soldiers carrying rifles stand nearby. The video, taken by a nearby South Korean destroyer, shows the 1,500-ton chemical carrier Samho Jewelry pockmarked with bullet holes.

Their success came on the same day that Malaysia's navy successfully rescued a chemical tanker and its 23 crew members from Somali pirates in the Gulf of Aden. No one in the rescue team or the ship's crew was injured and seven pirates were apprehended.

Alan Cole, the head of the U.N.'s anti-piracy program at the U.N. Office on Drugs and Crime, said the South Korean and Malaysian navies may have resorted to using the commando raids out of frustration that other strategies employed to tackle piracy were not working.

"There is a good chance that navies will increase the numbers of patrols and step up military activity to try and deal with this problem," he said.

Four police shot in Detroit precinct; gunman killed

Detroit Free Press

DETROIT — It was just before 2:30 p.m. MST Sunday when the gunman came into the police station and started shooting

A female sergeant in a hallway was hit first. Commander Brian Davis raced out of his office, exchanged fire with the gunman and got shot in the back.

Then the gunman rushed the horseshoe-shaped front desk with his pistol grip shotgun. Sgt. Ray Saati and Officer David Anderson also were shot before the gunman was killed.

That's how terror unfolded in the Detroit Police Department's Northwestern District, according to interviews with police sources.

Police were not releasing many details Sunday night. All of the officers are expected to survive and were at Sinai Grace Hospital, according to Police Chief Ralph Godbee Jr.

Godbee did not release the names, but the Detroit Free Press obtained them from sources, including people who worked inside the building.

Davis underwent surgery for his wound and was in critical condition, but Godbee says his prognosis is very good.

The female sergeant was hit in the chest, but her bullet-proof vest protected her. She was treated and released, Godbee said.

Anderson had a graze wound on his head and was in temporary serious condition Sunday night. He was alert and talking, but will be kept in the hospital for observation, Godbee said.

Walmart shooting leaves 2 dead, 2 deputies hurt

PORT ORCHARD, Wash. (AP) — A shootout in front of a Walmart in Washington state left two people dead and two sheriff's deputies wounded Sunday afternoon, a sheriff's spokesman said.

One of the dead was a man who shot at deputies, said Scott Wilson of the Kitsap County Sheriff's Office. The other victim was a young woman who died after she was taken to a Tacoma hospital, he said.

Sheriff's officials said the deputies' wounds weren't expected to be life-threatening.

Wilson said details were sketchy, but the sheriff's office received a call about a suspicious person at the store in Port Orchard. He said the man ran and started shooting when three deputies tried to talk to him. The deputies, including the two who were wounded, returned fire.

Witness Victor Meyers told KOMO-TV that the first shot was followed by six more in rapid succession.

"I heard one shot, which I thought was a car backfiring, and then several more reported back, which I knew to be gunfire," Meyers said.

He said he saw a female deputy running toward a victim on the ground before he and other witnesses were hustled from the scene.

The store was immediately locked down, and customers weren't being allowed to leave.

"No one is allowed in or out until further notice by police," customer Mike Lambert told KIRO-TV by phone from inside the store.

Portuguese President Anibal Cavaco Silva receives a hug from his wife Maria after winning Portugal's presidential election for a second term Sunday in Lisbon.

Portugal's president easily wins re-election

Deutsche Presse-Agentur GmbH

LISBON — Portuguese President Anibal Cavaco Silva sailed to a landslide re-election in Sunday's presidential vote, which was overshadowed by the country's economic woes. Final results gave the conservative Cavaco Silva 52.9 percent of the vote, against 19.8 percent for his main challenger, leftist poet Manuel Alegre.

The elections improved Cavaco Silva's 2006 result of 50.6 percent of the vote, allowing him to again win in the first round. However, his victory was watered down by voter turnout of only 47 percent.

Cavaco Silva thanked the Portuguese for giving him such an "expressive" victory, while Prime Minister Jose Socrates said they had chosen "stability."

"We cannot be satisfied" with the result, the premier said.

Socrates' Socialist Party had backed Alegre, while Cavaco Silva, 71, is a member of the main conservative opposition Social Democratic Party (PSD).

Cavaco Silva's resounding victory was seen as a blow to Socrates' already beleaguered minority government, whose economic policies the president had criticized during the electoral campaign.

There had been concern over possible low turnout after the elections failed to arouse enthusiasm amid an electorate struggling with economic problems and disillusioned with politics.

"All politicians can go to hell," a 53-year-old Lisbon waiter named Nuno said on Sunday.

"Citizens feel increasingly powerless, and there is a dangerous dislike of democracy," movie director Antonio-Pedro Vasconcelos said.

The election campaign was overshadowed by Portugal's economic problems, including weak growth and high debt levels, amid concern that the country may need a bailout from the European Union and International Monetary Fund.

The government has adopted tough austerity measures — including a 5 percent cut in public-sector salaries and increasing value-added taxes — in an attempt to slash the budget deficit from about 7.3 percent in 2010 to 4.6 percent this year.

George Pearson

POCATELLO — George "Richard" Pearson, 76, of Pocatello, passed away Jan. 19, 2011, at the Safe Haven Hospital and Care Center.

Richard was preceded in death by his parents, Sam and Ardis Pearson; his sister, Alice Pearson Thurman; and his in-laws Lloyd and Marie Robinett.

Richard was born April 9, 1934, to Sam and Ardice Pearson in Shelly. He grew up in Shelly, Idaho, and graduated high school there. He married Carla Robinett in Firth, Idaho, Nov. 29, 1952. They lived in Washington for one year while he went to Auto Body School. Richard and Carla also lived in Shelly, Makay, Howe, and Kimberly, Idaho, Twin Bridges, Mont., then in Pocatello.

He worked for the Bill Brockman Ranch, Clint Bitton Ranch, the Hartman ranch and retired from Bradly Life Stock.

His hobbies included riding horses, irrigating, running ranch machinery, fishing and hunting, building fence, spending time with his family and taking naps in his favorite chair.

He is survived by his wife, Carla Pearson; daughter Cathie (Richard) Cardona of Shelly; sons Steve (Reva) Pearson of Twin Falls, Glen Pearson of Jerome, David (Suzie) Pearson of Pocatello; 10 grandchildren and 13 great grandchildren.

Services will be held on Monday, Jan. 24, at 2 p.m. at Colonial Funeral Home, 2005 S. Fourth Ave. in Pocatello. The family will receive friends for one hour prior to the service.

The family will bury his ashes in Dubois in a private service at a later date.

In lieu of flowers the family suggests donations to the Red Cross. Condolences may be sent to the family online at www.Colonial-FuneralHome.com.

THE GOOD, THE BAD

Here's what you can do about antibiotic resistance

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Ugh. It seems everyone knows someone who has a cold or the flu this winter, and there is a lot of coughing and sneezing going on. But go to the store to choose a tissue box, and you'll see a dizzying array of options: aloe-infused, extra-soft, even embedded with antimicrobials.

If you buy that last kind, though, don't think it will take the place of good hygiene, no matter how it's marketed.

"The companies pick out words to make you afraid, and then they use words in their product promotion to make you feel safe," said Trish Heath, an infection prevention nurse with St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. The ads "indicated if they used this, that you were protected if you didn't wash your hands after you sneezed or went to the bathroom. If most people just use general good cleaning practices, they'll be safe from most infections."

Antimicrobials can be found in nearly every kind of cleaning product, but for most people those added ingredients are unnecessary. Unless there's someone in your home with a compromised immune system or active infection, soap and water, bleach, ammonia or whatever product you prefer is just fine.

The same philosophy should extend to the use of antibiotic medications, said Kenny Anderson, PharmD clinical coordinator for St. Luke's. But people ask for antibiotics when they don't need them, and then don't use the medications properly when they get them.

"The bacteria are smart; they get very resistant when they see the same antibiotic over and over," Anderson said. For certain kinds of infections, providers' treatment choices are narrowing because of that resistance. "We're down to just a couple antibiotics that work

AND THE UGLY

WHAT TO REMEMBER

- You probably don't need antibiotics for an ordinary cold or flu, unless you develop a secondary infection, like one in your sinuses or lungs.
- If your doctor prescribes antibiotics, take the entire course, even if you're feeling better. Stopping partway through will decrease your body's ability to use those antibiotics in the future.
- Bacteria are normal in our bodies, and many are good for you and even help you fight infections from bad bacteria. Too many antibiotics can be harmful to these good, normal bacteria.
- Ordinary cleaning products like bleach, ammonia and even soap and water are all that is necessary in most households (aside from those with an individual who is immune-compromised or has an active infection). Good hygiene habits will trump antimicrobial cleaning products any day.
- If you don't see your health care provider wash his or her hands before caring for you, don't be afraid to ask; like anyone else, they sometimes forget.
- Hands that are not visibly soiled can be cleaned with either 20 seconds of soap-and-water scrubbing, or with sanitizing gel that is at least 60 percent alcohol. Dirty hands need more attention.

Amoxicillin, held here by The Drug Store pharmacist Randy Simcoe in Hailey, is just one of many kinds of antibiotics a doctor may prescribe. Because of misuse by patients and other factors, people are becoming increasingly resistant to ordinary antibiotics.

Hand washing — whether 20 seconds with soap and water, or with a 60-percent alcohol sanitizer gel — is one of the best ways to stop the spread of infection, say experts. Preventing bacterial infection is often easier than stopping it with antibiotics.

(for those infections), intravenous medication."

Part of the problem is that recently there haven't been

ANTIMICROBIAL VERSUS ANTIBIOTIC

An antimicrobial fights several kinds of microscopic biological agents — fungus, protozoans and bacteria — and can either kill a living microbe or prevent the growth of microbes. An antibiotic is a drug that fights a bacterial infection in your body.

new classes of antibiotics coming onto the market, because pharmaceutical companies have little incentive to develop drugs that will be used so sparingly.

"For years we had new antimicrobials coming out every year, so we didn't have a problem with resistance," Anderson said. "Drug companies don't make very much money from antibiotics because people are on them for only 10 days at a time."

He said there has been high-level talk of providing the pharmaceutical companies with subsidies or other government encouragement to develop new antibiotics, but that hasn't happened yet.

So it's up to health-care providers to first assess that there really is an infection in a patient who asks for antibiotics, and then to emphasize how important it is to take the full prescription.

"Most people don't finish the course (because) they're feeling better," said pharmacist Randy Simcoe of The Drug Store in Hailey. She said she often gets calls from people feeling ill who ask if they can use an old, half-finished antibiotic prescription they found in their medicine cabinets. That medication probably won't work, because it's for a different kind of infection than the one the patient currently has, she said, and she always reminds the caller, "you shouldn't have any left."

If a course of antibiotics isn't finished, that can lead to additional antibiotic resistance of the bacteria it is intended to fight.

"All you've done is punched it out, stunned it, and next time it comes back stronger," said Stephanie Martin, an infection prevention nurse with St. Luke's.

The easiest thing you can do to help stop this cycle? Yep, simple good hygiene.

Your cupboards needn't be full of products advertising their antibacterial, antimicrobial ingredients.

"There's nothing special about any cleaning product or any (antimicrobial) embedded product as long as you're doing what your mom told you: Wash up after yourself," she said. "Good hand hygiene is the cornerstone of infection prevention; that's something we do in the hospital and you can do at home."

Don't overreact when you think you or someone in your family might have an infection: Trust that your doctor will prescribe you something if you need it, and will send you home with products to ease your symptoms if you don't.

So will it be the tissues with flowers printed on the box, or the pocket-sized packet?

Take care of your feet now, or regret it later

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Sue Mendelsohn wishes someone would have told her how a good orthotic could have prevented her from ruining her feet.

Her flat feet rolled inward for so many years that it eventually felt as if she were walking on her ankle bones.

The Ketchum woman finally found relief two years ago with a total ankle replacement — a new treatment at the time. Then she tapped Brent Hansen of Ski Tek and Hansen Orthotics Lab in Ketchum to build her custom insoles featuring high arches made of soft gel to keep from ruining her ankles again.

"It's a story with a very happy ending. I can walk. I can golf. But I wish I'd known what to do to prevent it before it happened," she said. "Years ago, doctors just told me, 'Some people are right-handed, some are left- and some are flat-footed and there's nothing you can do about it!'"

There are indeed plenty of things people can do to nip foot problems in the bud before they get too serious. And Dr. Randal Wraalstad, an orthopedic surgeon with Twin Falls Orthopedics, would prefer to see people seek help sooner rather than later when surgery is the only option left.

"If you have recurrent pain or continuing pain after three to four weeks, listen to your feet and see a physician," he said.

Hansen concurs. The former speed ski racer got into the business of making feet happy after a hang gliding accident crushed a disc in his back and slightly paralyzed his calves. In order to keep moving, Hansen experimented with different foot inserts, eventually coming up with one made out of leather and soft gel that that would allow him to roll through a gait when walking and have better balance.

Today he's known as a foot wizard in Sun Valley for the way he can fit ski boots for skiers and the way he can alleviate foot pain in others.

"Mostly we see bad footwear — people wearing shoes too tight," said Hansen, a certified pedorthist who has clients from as far as Europe fly to Sun Valley just to have

What to do about your problem feet

Dr. Randal Wraalstad says he's seeing more and more foot problems, largely due to our modern way of living.

"Diabetes is becoming epidemic. The rate of adult onset diabetes is increasing and now the rate of children with diabetes is going up due to lack of exercise and a poor diet with high levels of sweetened and processed foods. In some cases, people's feet can't handle the weight they're asking it to carry," he said.

Here are a few of the more common problems seen by Wraalstad, Brent Hansen and Michael Johnson, who owns OrthoPro in Twin Falls:

Plantar fasciitis

This involves the inflammation of connective tissue running from the heel bone along the sole of the foot toward the toes. It's often an overuse or repetitive injury seen in athletes who over-pronate or who walk or run long distances in footwear that doesn't provide adequate arch support. It's also seen in couch potatoes whose feet can't handle the excess weight.

The majority notice significant pain in the morning when they try to get out of bed because the connective tissue has tightened all night.

Eighty to 90 percent of people can get better with conservative treatment, including rest, massage therapy, anti-inflammatory medications and ice therapy, Wraalstad said.

Stretching is extremely important to prevent and remedy plantar fasciitis.

- Stretch your calf by standing while facing a wall with your hands on the wall at eye level. Put the leg you want to stretch a step behind your other leg. While keeping your back heel on the floor, bend your front knee until you feel a stretch in the back leg.

- Stretch your Achilles tendon by standing on a step, facing in to the steps. Slowly let your heels down over the edge of the step until you feel a stretch on the bottom of your feet.

- Stretch your hamstrings by extending one leg in front of you with your foot flexed. Bend your other knee and lean back slightly until you feel the stretch up the back of your extended leg all the way to

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Brent Hansen takes a plaster cast of a foot in sand. Ski boots are difficult to fit because they're one shape and no two pair of feet are alike. Ski Tek solves that by using hydraulic pressure on the boot shell to make it look like the foot. Hansen then adds Intuition liners and custom-made foot beds. 'I can fix people's old boots up with new liners and foot beds and save them a lot of money,' Hansen says.

your thigh.

- Sit down on the floor and wrap a towel around the ball of your foot, pulling the towel toward you while keeping your knee straight.

- Finally, exercise your toes and the muscles in the bottom of your feet by trying to pick up marbles from the floor and dropping them in a cup. You can also alleviate pain and give the bottom of your feet a bit of a workout by rolling an orange juice can around under your foot while sitting down.

Some people can be helped with over-the-counter foot beds. But most people will see greater results with custom foot beds.

"It's a matter of keeping your arch stretched out," said Michael Johnson, owner of OrthoPro in Twin Falls.

Rocker bottom shoes, like the ones the Hailey-based MBT makes, can help some people, as can night splints. But heel splints are not useful, even though some doctors still prescribe them, Wraalstad said.

Wraalstad said some doctors are using a new therapy involving shock treatment. But the treatment is not available in Twin Falls as insurance doesn't cover it.

Some doctors are also using corticosteroids or Botox to numb the pain, which may afford patients the time they need to get better with stretching exercises and the use of orthotics.

Excessive pronation or supination

Rolling your foot excessively inward while walking flattens the foot arch and stretches the muscles, tendons and ligaments underneath the foot, causing damage. Rolling your foot outward strains the muscles and tendons stabilizing the ankle and could result in an ankle sprain or ligament rupture.

Either of these can lead to arch or heel pain; corns and calluses; shin splints; knee, hip or back pain; or tendonitis of the Achilles.

Both are best treated with custom insoles. But pair those insoles with good shoes offering good support; cheap shoes won't do, even with a good orthotic, Wraalstad cautions.

Bunions

This is an enlargement of the joint, usually on the big toe, or the formation of additional bone on the big toe. It can become painful when the bone presses against the shoe.

Blame it on heredity, tight-fitting shoes and things like rheumatoid arthritis and injuries. It can be accommodated with conservative care. Wear wider shoes or sandals to relieve the irritation. Anti-inflammatory medication can help ease inflammation, as can cold packs. And custom insoles can reposition the foot. Some bunion sufferers (ballet dancers, for instance) might do well to stop the activity that seems to be causing them to grow, Wraalstad said.

Worst case scenario: surgery.

Hammertoes

This is a deformity of the second, third or fourth toes which causes them to bend at the middle joint so they resemble a hammer. Left untreated they can become fixed and require surgery to cut and realign the bones.

They often result from shoes that don't fit properly, such as shoes that narrow towards the toes, pushing toes into a bent position. They can also be caused by rheumatoid arthritis, injury and diabetes.

Trade your tight, narrow, high-heeled shoes for shoes with a wide toe box (shoe shops can stretch the toe boxes on some shoes). Using your toes to pick up marbles may also help.

Ingrown toenails

Sometimes nails curve and dig into the skin, creating pain, swelling and occasionally an infection marked by drainage. It can be traced to heredity, trauma, fungal infections, tight shoes and, most often, cutting your nails too short.

Often, Wraalstad says, patients cut a V in the center, but "all that does is screw up socks." Soaking does no good, either, except to help clean the area if it's infected, he said.

If it's red and ingrown, see a doctor who can numb the toe and take out a sliver of the nail in a simple office procedure.

Arthritic feet

Often something as simple as an insert or braces around the ankles to offer support will help, Johnson said.

him work on their shoes and ski boots.

One of the most frequent problems Hansen sees is metatarsalgia, where a flattening of the ball of the foot caused by age leads to the thinning of the fatty pad, leaving older people feeling as though they're walking on bone. The condition can also be caused by footwear with narrow toe boxes or high heels and by participating in high-impact activities without proper footwear.

Hansen has a simple remedy: an insole with a gel that acts like a human fatty pad, cushioning the feet.

The current trend toward barefoot running or running in Vibram FiveFingers footwear, which look like feet, is also starting to result in injuries, he said.

"They're wonderful in sand, grass or soft trails because they utilize all the muscles in the foot. But they're not meant to be used on cement and other hard surfaces, such as rocky trails. You can get just as much support with soft orthotics and cushion your feet at the same time," he said.

Hansen says trail walking is one of the best exercises for feet because it involves walking on multi-angled variable terrain, engaging all the muscles of the feet and bottom legs.

"Walking on flat concrete surfaces like the bike path often lends itself to plantar fasciitis because it lends itself to bad habits," he said.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 140 W. Buhl St., Twin Falls, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Dwayne E. Lewis, Kary L. Lewis, husband and wife, as Grantor(s) with Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc. as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded September 26, 2005, as Instrument No. 2005-021396, in the records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. The Beneficial interest of said Deed of Trust was subsequently assigned to PHH Mortgage Corporation, recorded January 12, 2009, as Instrument No. 2009-000680, in the records of said County.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows:

Monthly payments in the amount of $531.97 for the months of November 2009 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $58,484.41 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 6.107% from October 1, 2009, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation. Dated this 12th day of January, 2011. Tammie Harris Trust Officer for Just Law, Inc.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"There is no safety in numbers, or in anything else."

— James Thurber

Terence Reese is generally considered to have been the master of bridge writing. It is not just that he wrote so beautifully, but that he was the clearest expositor of what had hitherto been uncovered territory. In his book "Master Play," which was published over 50 years ago, he brought many new ideas to the attention of the general public, including the following deal.

When a declarer has to choose between taking a finesse and playing for the drop, his decision is often determined by tactical considerations, rather than by his estimate of how the cards lie. This often happens in the trump suit, when declarer does not mind losing a finesse so long as the trumps are breaking evenly.

Playing in four hearts, South ruffed the diamond lead and led a low heart to dummy's queen. East won with the ace and returned a diamond. South ruffed, played a spade to dummy's king and returned a heart, going up with the king. A club was led to dummy; East won and cashed the good heart jack. Another club had to be lost and South was one down.

The safety play was to finesse the heart 10 on the second round of trumps. If it lost to the jack, then three clubs in dummy could be thrown on spades and the losing club could be ruffed. South was defeated because he allowed East to draw the third trump.

ANSWER: Although hearts are your best suit, partner had the chance to raise them, but did not do so. That makes it relatively unlikely that you can set up and establish the suit. A better bet must be to find your partner with a decent spade suit, so lead a low spade and hope for the best.

FOR SALE BY OWNER SW of Jerome. 3 bdrm, 2 bath, 1741 sq. ft. Open floor plan, family room & sun room, appls. incl. 5+ acres + 5 shares water. $115,000. 208-324-8270

DEAR ABBY: At a recent anniversary celebration for my parents, a well-meaning but thoughtless in-law sent them a gift from my deceased sister, with a card signed with her name. She died of cancer two years ago.

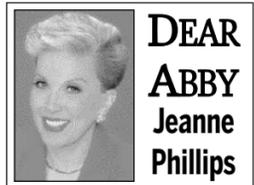

Her loss has been difficult and heartbreaking for all of us, especially my parents. I am furious at this guest for giving such a "gift." My parents were visibly shocked, but thanked the person anyway.

I knew the in-law was planning something like this, and I asked that it not be done at the party. I wish I had just said, "No! Don't do it!" I'm not sure whether I am madder at the gift giver or myself. I feel like the work we have done to recover from the loss has been set back. I could use some good advice.

— SPEECHLESS IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SPEECHLESS: Your parents are extraordinarily gracious people to have handled the situation as tactfully as they did. It must have been devastating for them. The in-law's level of insensitivity is appalling.

Please do not blame yourself for what happened. If you had said, "Don't do it," it probably would have happened anyway. What's done is done, now let it go.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My husband moved out on Feb. 14 of last year. (Yes, Valentine's Day!) Our divorce will be final soon.

My soon-to-be-ex parades his girlfriend all over town and with our friends. He claims it is over between us, yet he still comes over to mow the yard for me and do errands. He also comes here every Sunday to watch TV and visit. He says he wants to remain close friends even after the divorce.

My question is: What gives with him? I don't understand him at all.

— ARE WE DONE YET?

DEAR ARE WE DONE YET?: For a man to move out on Valentine's Day illustrates that he has the emotional sensitivity of a golf shoe. Your ex may be doing these things out of guilt. Whether the two of you are done yet depends upon how you define "done." Your marriage is over. Your romance is, too. What's left to tie you together? If it's masochism on your part, I don't recommend it.

DEAR ABBY: While I was at the grocery store, the woman in front of me said hello like she recognized me. I recognized her, but didn't remember her name or where I knew her from. I asked her some lame questions about art class, but it was obvious I didn't know her from there. It was very embarrassing.

The message I would like to give your readers is, please don't assume that someone can place you immediately. I am 70, and my memory is no longer as good as it used to be. The woman should have made sure I knew who she was, because it could have saved both of us from embarrassment.

— RED-FACED IN LEE'S SUMMITT, MO.

DEAR RED-FACED: I'm pleased to pass along your message. I have always thought the best policy in these situations is honesty. Because you were unable to place the woman, you should have told her you couldn't recall her name and asked her. To do so would not have been a breach of etiquette, and the encounter would have been less embarrassing for both of you.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF JANUARY 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have more than enough energy for constructive work to achieve a key goal or complete an important project in the next six to eight weeks. In June, you might have a tendency to promise more than you can accomplish or to trust too much to luck. Plan to take a fun-filled vacation in late July or early August because you will be much too busy pursuing your ambitions in October and November to get away. That is a good time to put the pedal to the metal and make financial or business dreams a reality.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Help is close at hand. Don't get frustrated if your tasks seem to overwhelm you today. You need only ask for assistance from a colleague and you shall have it. This is a great time for reaching agreements.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let someone else do the driving for a while. Cooperate with others rather than trying to play the leader — and if someone else wants to take charge, then so be it. You'll go further with sugar than salt.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A mind is a terrible thing to waste. Don't let good ideas float away into oblivion. Write them down and then decide later whether they have any merit. You'll be surprised at how many others want to help you make your ideas reality.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't be stingy. Lending a friend a few dollars to make it through the day isn't going to send you to the poorhouse. It's a two-way street, as you can count on them to grant you favors if needed as well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sometimes great things need a little push to get started. You may have doubts as to whether a project was worth starting in the first place. Heed the advice an experienced mentor gives to send you on the right path.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Nothing is impossible, but sometimes a new perspective makes things a little easier. A pesky problem can be solved by thinking outside the box. The wisdom and fair play you display will draw the attention of those in power.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can hold a grudge forever, but really, what's the point? Bury the hatchet with those whom you've previously had disagreements and move toward working together rather than against each other.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't sweat the small stuff. A minor spat with a loved one can become as big or as small as you let it. Kiss and make up and move on. Keep in mind that a higher price does not always mean a better item.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Muster the troops. Bring in those you trust the most for moral support and guidance in your next undertaking. Brainstorm ideas and tweak the blueprints so that the final plans have no chance of failure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Strive to be the best. It's time to raise the bar; just be careful not to set it so high that no one else can follow. Remember that few people can reach the highest mountain peak on their own: It's a team effort.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put your talents on display. Find a forum where you can best show off your most creative thoughts and ideas. Be open to the viewpoints of others. Don't close the lines of communication or you may find yourself out in the cold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Generosity yields its own rewards. Giving someone else the reins for a bit can ease tensions and create a more casual atmosphere. You can strike deals with a reasonable assurance that the other party will honor their end of the deal.
