Presidential fortunes
turn on economy.

By Ben Feller

WASHINGTON — Pleading for unity in a newly divided government, President Barack Obama implored Democratic and Republican lawmakers to rally behind his vision of economic revival for an anxious nation, declaring in his State of the Union address Tuesday night: "We will move forward together or not at all."

To a television audience in the millions, Obama addressed a Congress sobered by the assassination attempt against one if its own members, Rep. Gabrielle Giffords. Her seat sat empty, and many lawmakers of competing parties sat together in a show of support and civility. Yet differences were still evident, as when Democrats stood to applaud his comments on health care and tax cuts while Republicans next to them sat mute.

In his best chance of the year to connect with the country, Obama devoted most of his hour-long prime-time address to the economy, the issue that dominates concern in a nation still reeling from a monster recession — and

CSI eyes tuition changes amid down economy

BOISE — Tuition may change for students at the College of Southern Idaho as officials prepare for less state funding.

Among the options, the college may decide to charge full-time students per credit they take rather than a flat rate, CSI President Jerry Beck said Tuesday in a presentation to the House Education Committee.

Under the current system, students pay $105 per credit until they reach 12 credits. For those taking 12 to 16 credits, tuition is a flat $1,260 per semester.

If that changed, those students would pay based on how many credits they take.

"You would pay for exactly what you're taking," Beck said.

Beck stressed that CSI's board of trustees hasn't made any final decision, and the trustees still need to talk about the issue and see what budget actions the Legislature makes.

"The sense I get right now from the board is they do not want to raise tuition and fees from $105," Beck said in an interview.

Trustees will talk about the issue in a work session Friday in Twin Falls.

Under Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's proposed budget, CSI faces a drop of 1.7 percent, or $183,800, in state funding.

CSI's cost-savings steps include leaving vacant positions open for at least 90 days, with department heads required to justify refilling them. The college also will cut a $50,000 budget for special faculty projects, and has larger class sizes.

On top of the state cut, CSI faces another $811,400 in shortfalls and needs. That amount includes the loss of federal stimulus funds, professional-technical equipment needs, utility and inflation increases, and the end of grants that have covered staff salaries in nursing, dental hygiene and wind energy programs.

"We do not plan to cut any entire programs that are successful — and I stress successful," Beck said. "We're doing program reviews across the campus."

His presentation wasn't all about the budget.

Beck also highlighted CSI's accomplishments, including a $4.4 million federal grant announced last week for a building for renewable energy programs

Legislation would ease way for geothermal geothermal lease.

BOISE — Geothermal developers would have more reasons to locate and start projects on state-owned lands in Idaho, under legislation introduced Tuesday in the House Resources and Conservation Committee.

The legislation consists of four bills, all aimed at making the state's endowment lands a more attractive and realistic option to geothermal developers. The legislation is supported by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and fits within his plans for alternative energy, said Kathy Opp, deputy director of the Idaho Department of Lands, in her presentation.

Here's what the legislation would do:

- Eliminate the existing

640-acre limit of a geothermal lease, with the state land board deciding a lease area. A geothermal area can span several thousand acres, which means that under the current system, multiple leases are needed for the same project.

- Eliminate the 10-year limit on lease durations, expanding the length to up to 49 years. Currently, 10 years simply isn't enough time for developers to make the investment and recoup costs, Opp said.

- Add more flexibility so that the land board can negotiate royalties for geothermal burst of spending on education, research, technology and transportation to make the nation more competitive, alongside pledges, in the strongest terms of his presidency, to cut the deficit and smack down spending deemed wasteful to America.

Yet he never explained how he'd pull that off or what specifically would be cut.

Obama did pledge to veto any bill with earmarks, the term used for lawmakers' pet projects. Boehner and other Republicans applauded.

But Obama's promise drew a rebuke from his own party even before he spoke, as Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said the president had "enough power already" and that plans to ban earmarks were "a lot of pretty talk."

Obama's proposals Tuesday night included cutting the corporate tax, providing wireless services for almost the whole nation, consolidating government agencies and freezing most discretionary federal spending for the next five years. In the overarching theme of his speech, the president told the lawmakers: "The future is ours to win."

Yet, Republicans have dismissed his "investment" proposals as merely new spending.

Republican Rep. Paul Ryan of Wisconsin, giving the GOP's response, said the nation was at a tipping point leading to a dire future if federal deficits aren't trimmed. Ryan promoted budget cuts as essential to responsible governing, speaking from the hearing room of the House Budget Committee, which he now chairs.

Obama entered the House chamber to prolonged applause, and to the unusual sight of Republicans and Democrats seated next to one another rather than on different sides of the center aisle. And he began with a political grace note, taking a moment to congratulate Boehner, the new Republican speaker of the House.

Calling for a new day of cooperation, Obama said: "What comes of this moment will be determined not by whether we can sit together tonight but whether we can work together tomorrow." On a night typically known for its political theater, the lawmakers sometimes seemed subdued, as if still in the shadow of the Arizona shootings.

Many in both parties wore black-and-white lapel ribbons, signifying the deaths in Tucson and the hopes of the survivors. Giffords' husband was watching the speech from her bedside, as he held her hand. At times, Obama delivered lighter comments, seeming to surprise his audience with the way he lampooned what he suggested was the government's illogical regulation of salmon.

Halfway through his term, Obama stepped into this moment on the upswing, with a series of recent legislative wins in his pocket and praise from all corners for the way he responded to the shooting rampage in Arizona. But he confronts the political reality that he must lead a divided government for the first time, with more than half of all Americans disapproving of the way he is handling the economy.

Over his shoulder a reminder of the shift in power on Capitol Hill: Boehner, in the seat that had been held by Democratic Speaker Nancy Pelosi.

Geothermal company eyes land

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

U.S. Geothermal may get a new neighbor if the U.S. Bureau of Land Management approves a Cassia County land lease.

On Friday, the BLM announced a possible geothermal lease on 760 acres about 12 miles south of Malta along the Raft River. The lease nomination is now up for public comment until Feb. 25, after which the BLM will decide whether to allow a lease, and if so, whether any stipulations should be added.

As required by the Energy Policy Act of 2005, the BLM and the U.S. Forest Service have identified appropriate federal lands and streamlined the process for geothermal development in the West.

The acreage, scattered throughout four sections, was identified for development as part of that study. The document was released at the end of 2008, and an unidentified company filed for the Cassia County lease a month later. BLM spokeswoman Heather Feeney said the company's identity will be made public if it gets the lease.

The application has been delayed because the company is the first to use the new lease process, she said. If the land is approved for lease, Feeney said, it will go up for auction by July. Federal lease rates and royalties are already set amounts, so companies propose bonus bids to win leases at auction.

The initial 10-year lease would cost about $2,300 a year, and initial royalties are less than 2 percent of gross electricity sales.

Feeney said the lease does not include permission to drill anything other than test wells. Companies subsequently must submit a development plan and get proper permits before the BLM grants the right to drill and produce power, which may be subject to additional terms and limitations.

The basic lease would last 10 years with some opportunity for extension, but Feeney said the leasing company would have to eventually develop the resource.

"They have to do something with it because we don't want people leasing land just for speculation," she said.

The BLM parcel is a few miles northeast of a 12-square-mile area already being developed by U.S. Geothermal. CEO Dan Kunz said his company did not initiate the nomination and would probably not participate in the auction.

Kunz said his Raft River Project 1, begun in 2008, is going well with five mile-deep wells in production and a new well installed at a second site.

"We've got the core area pretty well covered," Kunz said. "Our engineers say where we are, we've got a 90 percent probability of being able to get 10 megawatts per square mile."

deputies and several others from the sheriff's office, including former Sheriff Jim Weaver, were carrying out a search warrant for illegal drugs that Williams allegedly sold. A small amount of marijuana, some paraphernalia and scales were found in the home.

Williams shot Moulson and Anderson as they entered his home. The officers returned fire, killing Williams. Williams' family filed a lawsuit arguing the sheriff recklessly created the situation that led to the shootout, but it was dismissed without going to a jury trial.

"It was a devastating tragedy that happened," Jerome County Sheriff's Capt. Jack Johnson said. "They'll always be remembered here. It's a constant reminder to the deputies to always be safe and vigilant in what they do."

It's a tragedy that has been projects on state lands based on the uniqueness of each project. Under existing law, royalties must be at least 10 percent of the value of the resource produced. This bill eliminates that 10 percent minimum.

- Clarifies the bonding requirements for geothermal projects so the bonds don't duplicate those already required by the Idaho Department of Water Resources for well closures.

Magic Valley legislators

welcomed the proposals, saying the measures are needed to attract development to state lands.

"In order to get a company to come in, it's just nearly impossible the way our law is now," said Rep. Bert Stevenson, R-Rupert and the committee chairman. "We've got to make these changes to encourage that geothermal development."

House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said the legislation will make the state's endowed lands more competitive, be a source of future revenues and align the state with industry standards.

Geothermal also has an important role because it's a base load energy source that is constant, said Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, unlike wind energy.

"If the wind doesn't blow, the energy isn't there," he said.

Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, said geothermal development on state lands would be a good source of future revenue, though it won't happen soon enough for this year's budget.

Power developer U.S. Geothermal, which runs a geothermal plant near Raft River, had a representative at the committee hearing. CEO Dan Kunz said he was pleased with the support for geothermal energy, but had different ideas about what royalties should be like.

"They should adopt the structure of the federal programs, where all fees and royalties are set," Kunz said. "The set-up is tried and true, and that's what we're suggesting."

Crash injures one, closes road

Times-News

A head-on collision on U.S. Highway 93 shut down a stretch of the two-lane highway for about two hours on Tuesday afternoon.

Idaho State Police responded to the crash at 3:43 p.m. at milepost 57, near the highway's intersection with East 200 South, according to a news release. Shanon Harbaugh, 37, of Twin Falls, had been northbound on U.S. 93 in a silver Chrysler PT Cruiser and driving recklessly when, for unknown reasons, she crossed into oncoming traffic, the release states.

Harbaugh's vehicle struck a semi-trailer driven by Jose Carrillo-Serna, 25, of American Falls. According to ISP, it hit the rear dual tires of the semi cab, traveled down the side of the trailer, hit the dual tires on the trailer and spun around, coming to rest facing north in a field.

The release states Harbaugh was trapped inside and had to be extricated from the vehicle. She was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls with minor injuries. She was no longer a patient there as of Tuesday evening, according to hospital staff.

Carrillo-Serna was not injured and remained on scene with mechanics to repair the tires, according to ISP.

Investigators weren't sure yet Tuesday evening if either driver wore a seat belt or if alcohol or drugs were a factor in the crash. The incident remains under investigation.

He also took questions from lawmakers. Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, asked Beck if he would support placing some of the costs of student remediation on high schools whose graduates need math and English assistance before taking college-level courses.

Beck said he would have a hard time supporting that because it's a complex situation that involves societal issues, not just high schools.

"Not all high schools are created equally," he said. "Not all school districts are created equally. Not all areas of the state are created equally."

T.F. man pleads guilty to stabbing

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls man avoided a jury trial after pleading guilty to aggravated battery. Wesley J. Firpo, 40, was accused of stabbing Christopher Lee Lewis in September after Lewis, 26, allegedly found Firpo breaking into the car of a friend while they were at the 360 Main St. Bistro & Lounge in downtown Twin Falls.

Firpo initially pleaded not guilty and was set to face trial this week. He signed a plea agreement last week.

Firpo and Lewis fought hand-to-hand before Firpo used a knife to stab Lewis in the stomach. Firpo pleaded guilty to the aggravated battery charge as part of a plea deal that dismissed a charge of burglary.

The deal includes a possible prison sentence of two to 10 years, which will run concurrently to a re-imposed sentence from a 2006 conviction. Firpo was found guilty of receiving or transferring stolen vehicles and received a suspended sentence of three to five years. His probationary period, which began in 2007, was set for three years.

Sentencing for Firpo's latest conviction is set for March 21, with 5th District Judge Randy Stoker presiding.

VanWert back in court on new charges

Patrick R. VanWert Jr., recently arrested and sentenced after fleeing Twin Falls police who were looking for another man, faces new charges in Twin Falls County.

On Jan. 6, the state filed a complaint of theft by receiving, possessing or disposing of stolen property, alleging that VanWert is responsible for the theft of 25 brass flower vases from Sunset Memorial Park last fall.

According to the police report, VanWert sold the vases, worth more than $6,000, for scrap.

He was arraigned in magistrate court on Jan. 12 and later waived his Jan. 21 preliminary hearing. He is set to be arraigned in district court on Monday.

The 42-year-old Twin Falls man was sentenced in late December to jail time and fines for possession of burglary tools and resisting or obstructing officers. He was arrested in December after he fled from police who were looking for someone else.

ATF, Wood River police offer reward in car fires

Times-News

The U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives is now lending its expertise to investigation of two law-enforcement vehicles set ablaze last month.

The ATF, the Ketchum and Hailey police departments and the Blaine County Sheriff's Office announced Tuesday a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for the arsons.

Vehicles belonging to the sheriff's office and Ketchum police were set on fire on Dec. 27 and 28 at the Hailey homes of their drivers.

The ATF's Seattle Field Division and the three Wood River Valley agencies have formed a task force to investigate the arsons, with the ATF offering use of its federal forensics labs and its expertise in fire investigations.

"(We) have reason to believe someone has information about this fire. We encourage them to please call us," Ketchum Police Chief Steve Harkins stated in a press release.

Anyone with information about the fires is encouraged to call the sheriff's office at 788-5555 and ask to speak with a detective, or text the information to 847411 (TIP411). Callers can also contact the ATF Boise Office at 334-1160 or the Arson Alarm Tip-Line at 800-55-ARSON, or ATF's toll-free, 24-hour tip line at 800-ATF-FIRE (800-283-3473). Callers can remain anonymous.

It's an interesting crowd out there on Interstate 84 these days. Utahns, Oregonians, Washingtonians, long-haul truckers, motorhomes the size of Mount Rushmore, slow-moving vehicles from Gooding County (is there any other kind?), airmen on a pass trying to make it from Mountain Home to Boise in 10 minutes.

I've driven back and forth to Boise every week for five years now, and concluded that drivers on I-84 — all of them — fall into more or less two categories: Folks who can pass you and those who can't.

The former class is self-explanatory, but the latter is a breed I have rarely encountered elsewhere.

They come roaring up from behind, pull over into the left lane next to your rear fender — and stay there. For miles.

Mostly, they drive venerable full-size cars — Impalas or Crown Victorias — or pickups with camper shells, nearly all bearing bumper stickers that read "We're spending our children's inheritance." They're from Payette County or Boise County or Washington County, they drive squinting through the windshield with their noses up over their steering wheels — and just can't quite make themselves go faster than 75 mph.

So they don't, and traffic backs up behind them.

And on those rare occasions when these motorists do manage to get past you, they cut you off and force you to slam on your brakes.

I talked with such a driver one day at the Boise Stage Stop. He and I had been driving side by side all the way from Glens Ferry, and I was curious why he didn't pass.

"As long as I'm doing the speed limit, I can dang well drive in the left lane if I want to," he explained.

That's bold talk, especially since tailgaters are drawn to such drivers like Homer Simpson to doughnuts.

I've seen tricked-out, high-performance trucks 12 feet tall tailing El Dorados by no more than 12 inches, and eventually having to pass them on the right. It takes a stout heart to hang in there, doing 65 with two wheels on each lane, while there's a mountain of chrome with eight headlights virtually in your backseat.

Yet a Left-runner — my term for He Who Will Not Pass — isn't swayed by popular opinion, or even law enforcement officers. I watched an Idaho State Police cruiser — flashing its headlights — tail an ancient LTD doing 60 mph in the passing lane for almost 20 minutes before the officer squeezed past.

I suppose the cop could have pulled the motorist over, but who knows how long — and how many miles — that would have taken.

But I did see an Escalante get stopped recently on the way back from Boise. I'm not sure what the seventysomething driver did, but I did get a glimpse of his bumper sticker as I drove past:

"You're damned right I'm lost, but I'm making good time anyway."

Idaho schools relying more on levies to pay the bills

BOISE (AP) — Financial data from the Idaho Department of Education shows more school districts across the state have been relying on temporary, supplemental levies approved by local voters to help pay bills during the economic downturn.

Statewide, about 73 percent of Idaho’s public school districts, or 84 of 115 districts, are using money approved in supplemental levies.

Idaho School Board Association Executive Director Karen Echeverria said districts are operating this year with about $30 million in cash coming from levies than the previous year. She and others expect that total to escalate as districts look to fill budget holes created by a decrease in state funding and other revenue sources.

Some districts, such as Moscow and Boise, have been operating on permanent levies for several years, according to the Idaho Business Review. But many others around the state are using one- or two-year levies that voters approve at different times of the year.

The state constitution requires that every child receive an equal education, but the growing use of levies to pay for education could raise questions about equality, according to Frank Gallant, professor of education finance at the University of Idaho.

In a normal year, Gallant says about 50 percent of all districts ask voters to approve a levy. But this year, more supplemental levies are being used to make ends meet than any other time in recent history, he said.

As levies become more widespread, the disparity between the wealthy districts and the districts with fewer resources really widens, said Gallant, a former superintendent at Idaho City schools.

While levies are not a perfect system for making up a loss in state or federal dollars, money approved locally tends to give administrators fewer restrictions on how to spend it.

“Do we want all the funds to come from the Legislature, or do we want some local control?” Echeverria said. “When you pass a supplemental levy you have much more control over those funds.”

So far, there is no official tally for districts seeking voter approval of supplemental levies in 2011. Superintendents say they are waiting to see what kind of funding package is approved by lawmakers this session.

It’s not yet known how many districts will ask voters to approve a levy in the coming year. Many superintendents said they are waiting to see what kind of funding package comes out of the legislative session.

Echeverria said she had heard from about half a dozen superintendents in districts planning levy votes March 8, the first date a levy could be floated.

Police on Oregon coast comb forested peninsula for shooter

By Nigel Duara
Associated Press writer

WALDPOR, Ore. — A picturesque town along the Oregon coast spent a second anxious day under a near lockdown as rifle-toting, camouflaged police searched for a man accused of shooting an officer before fleeing into the woods.

On the peninsula where authorities focused their search, no one locks their doors; most of the houses are rentals or second homes that are unoccupied during the gray and gusty winter. Now, as a 25-man search party combs the woods and goes door-to-door, people are afraid to go home.

“I’m not going in there without a police escort, for sure,” said Michelle Denison, who has been staying at a hotel in nearby Newport.

The manhunt began when a man believed to be David Anthony Durham, 43, of Portland, fled a police chase and escaped into the woods near Denison’s neighborhood on the peninsula that juts into the Alsea Bay, stretching for about a mile at its widest point. The manhunt has created a scene befitting the first “Rambo” movie as lawmen scoured the small Pacific Northwest town for a long-haired suspect.

The Lincoln County district attorney has charged Durham with attempted aggravated murder, attempted murder, first-degree assault and eluding police officers, Oregon State Police Lt. Gregg Hastings said Tuesday.

Newport police Chief Mark Miranda said Durham is considered armed and dangerous and may be accompanied by his 40-pound, black and white dog named Huckleberry.

“He’s out there hiding somewhere,” said Waldport city manager Nancy Leonard. “There’s a lot of forested area, it’s very easy to lose yourself.”

Meanwhile, the Lincoln City officer shot, Steven Dodds, was in critical condition at a Portland hospital but Hastings said he is showing alertness. Police have video from his patrol car camera of the Sunday night attack and describe how Dodds pulled over the pickup owned by the suspect because the driver was speeding. But they haven’t described the circumstances that led to the officer being shot multiple times.

Half an hour after the attack, other officers caught up with the truck and stopped it with spike strips in Waldport, population 2,145. The suspect fired shots at police, ran into a wooded area and also shot at a crab fisherman on a boat in Alsea Bay.

Utah lawmakers propose M1911 as official state gun

By Josh Loftin
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — State lawmakers are debating whether to designate a semiautomatic pistol as the official gun of Utah, despite protests from people who believe it’s inappropriate because of recent mass shootings.

The bill to make the Browning M1911 the official gun breezed through a committee hearing this week and is scheduled to be debated by the full House as early as Wednesday.

Republican Rep. Carl Wimmer said the state should have the gun as one of its state symbols to honor John Browning, a Utah native who invented it in 1911.

“He invented a firearm that has defended American values and the traditions of this country for 100 years,” Wimmer told the House Political Subdivisions Committee.

Utah has 24 state symbols recognizing the history, geography and culture of the state. They include a state cooking pot, a state tree, a state hymn and a state folk dance.

Idaho law student sues university over firearms restriction

MOSCOW (AP) — A law student at the University of Idaho has filed a lawsuit challenging the school's rules that prohibit him from storing firearms in his on-campus apartment.

Aaron Tribble, 36, contends the university's policy is unconstitutional and last week filed a civil suit in Idaho's 2nd District Court.

The university bans firearms on campus, but students are allowed to store and check out their guns at a police substation on the Moscow campus in northern Idaho.

Tribble, a second-year law student who lives in campus housing designated for students who are married or have children, wants to store his guns in his apartment.

Tribble claims the university is exercising power it doesn't have over the U.S. Constitution's 2nd Amendment right to bear arms. In an effort to keep his legal case streamlined, he is asking a judge to block the university from enforcing the weapons rule in his apartment complex only.

"Once you dig into it, you really discover that there's just too many issues to have to argue when it comes to possession of guns anywhere on campus or in other residence halls or dorms," he told the Moscow-Pullman

Daily News.

University spokeswoman Joni Kirk confirmed Monday that the university had received a copy of the lawsuit and was reviewing the complaint.

Judge John Stegner has scheduled an initial court hearing in the case for July 20.

Tribble said he intends to act as his own attorney in the case.

AROUND THE WEST

IDAHO AG: Efforts to nullify health reform illegal

BOISE — The Idaho attorney general has concluded that efforts to reject federal health care reform through the 18th-century doctrine of nullification are unconstitutional.

Some Idaho Republicans are pushing this idea, something Thomas Jefferson espoused in 1799 to argue that states could reject federal laws they found to violate the U.S. Constitution.

But a Democratic legislator asked the AG's office for its opinion on the theory.

In a four-page letter obtained by the Idaho Statesman, however, Assistant Chief Deputy Attorney General Brian Kane wrote that the Constitution doesn't allow states to "pick and choose" which federal laws to follow.

Proponents of the legislation, due out Wednesday, were undaunted, saying Kane hadn't seen their specific bill.

Republican Sen. Monty Pearce says the bill will go ahead, as planned, in the House State Affairs Committee.

Idaho seeks to stop food stamp fraud

BOISE — State officials hope a tweak an Idaho law will help them better crack down on people who defraud the food stamp program, which is helping 220,000 residents buy groceries.

Steve Bellomy heads the state Department of Health and Welfare's investigations bureau and told lawmakers Tuesday that complaints over welfare fraud are on the rise this year.

Bellomy says some courts have refused to prosecute cases of suspected food stamp fraud because of the way Idaho law makes reference to the unauthorized use of "food stamps."

Bellomy says technically, "food stamps" no longer exist because the assistance is now distributed electronically. A bill introduced Tuesday would update Idaho law to include the term "food stamp benefits."

Vailas: ISU budget trimmed to the bone

BOISE — Idaho State University president Arthur Vailas says there's few areas of spending left to cut at his school after three years of declines in higher education funding.

On Tuesday, Vailas told lawmakers: "We're way down at the bone."

Vailas says frustrations abound at the eastern Idaho university, where faculty are carrying bigger workloads as vacant positions are left unfilled.

Idaho's public universities are testifying this week to lawmakers preparing to write the state budget.

The schools want $260 million in state general funds for the next fiscal year, up from $217.5 million this year. But the state's portion would drop to $214.6 million and the universities would have to bring in more dedicated funds, which include tuition and fees, under the governor's budget recommendation.

Grandmother enters plea in neglect case

COEUR D'ALENE — The grandmother of twin 2-year-old girls found with injuries and living in filthy conditions has reached a plea in the neglect case.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reports 55-year-old Ruth K. Cassidy entered an Alford plea to one count of felony injury to a child. Prosecutors agreed to drop a second count. In an Alford plea, a defendant does not admit guilt but acknowledges prosecutors have enough evidence to get a conviction.

District Judge John Luster scheduled Cassidy's sentencing for April 13.

Kootenai County deputy prosecutor Donna Gardner says 26-year-old Elisabeth Crossley is likely to be arraigned next week. She is also charged with two counts of felony injury to a child after her children were found in a bedroom with no clothes and dried feces caked on their bodies.

Former deputy pleads not guilty to theft

POCATELLO — A former Bannock County sheriff's deputy accused of embezzling at least $1,000 from the sheriff's union has pleaded not guilty.

The Idaho State Journal reports Amber Spencer entered her plea to felony grand theft on Monday before 6th District Judge David Nye. An April 5 trial date was set.

The suspected theft was investigated by Pocatello police, and Minidoka County is prosecuting the case.

Spencer's attorney, Keith Zollinger, says Spencer is charged with taking at least $1,000 from the Bannock County Deputy Sheriff's Association between Nov. 1, 2009 and Nov. 30, 2010.

Backers of human rights bill to rally

BOISE — Supporters of a bill to ban discrimination in Idaho based on sexual orientation or gender identity are expected to rally at the Capitol this weekend.

Idaho's Human Rights Act now forbids workplace and housing discrimination based on race, sex, religion, color, national origin and mental or physical disabilities.

Senate Minority Leader Edgar Malepeai, D-Pocatello, has introduced a measure to also ban discrimination based on sexual orientation or gender identity.

Supporters of the bill plan to rally Saturday on the steps of the Capitol.

Bill would create 'Fly Idaho' license plate

BOISE — Aviation enthusiasts would be the latest group to get their own specialty license plate in Idaho under a bill introduced in the state Legislature.

The "Fly Idaho" plate, which would raise money to maintain, upgrade and develop airstrips in the Idaho backcountry and at recreational airports.

Each plate costs $35, and, of that amount, $22 would go to the Idaho Aviation Foundation. Renewals would be $25, with $12 going to the foundation.

CALIFORNIA Surfer hit by giant wave in fair condition

SAN FRANCISCO — A surfer who nearly drowned after being pummeled and washed through rocks by a big wave in Northern California is expected to recover, hospital officials said Tuesday.

A Stanford Hospital spokesman said 30-year-old Jacob Trette was in fair condition three days after he nearly drowned while attempting to surf Mavericks, a famous break about 20 miles south of San Francisco that has claimed a number of lives over the years.

Trette was rescued on Saturday by an Australian firefighter, Russell Ord, who was on a personal watercraft taking photographs of the surfers when a large "freak set" caught a pack of them too close to shore.

Fern B. Thompson

DECLO – Fern Beatrice Thompson, age 88, of Declo, died Sunday, Jan. 23, 2011, at the Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

Fern was born Dec. 17, 1922, in Declo, Idaho, to Heber Olof and Florence Leora Ingram Christopher-son. She grew up in Declo, graduating from Declo High School. Fern enjoyed horse-back riding, swimming and roller-skating. After graduation, Fern traveled to California, where she attended a trade school to become a waitress. She later traveled to Kansas, where she met her husband, Lawrence Charles Thompson. Fern told the story of how he would always sit in her section of the café where she was waitressing. They soon started to date and, after her family’s approval, they were married Dec. 12, 1941, in Junction City, Kan.

Fern was a hard worker and spent her time working inside the home as well as doing the more strenuous jobs out on the farm. She talked of picking produce, to riding the hay baler to tie the wires, to thinning the sugar beets. Later, the family got jobs off the family farm. Fern worked at JC Penney, the Declo High School lunch room as a cook and Deseret Industries as a cook and clerk. She also spent several years as a foster grandparent for the local elementary school, which she loved.

She is a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Declo 1st Ward. She has served several positions in the church, including Relief Society, Scouting, Young Women and Primary. She loved being around her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 29, at the Declo LDS Stake Center, 213 W. Main St., with Bishop Garth Searle officiating. Burial will be in the Declo Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 28, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 1 until 1:45 p.m. Saturday at the church.

Illinois’ high court to take up Emanuel’s Chicago mayoral bid

Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO – The Illinois Supreme Court granted a reprieve to Rahm Emanuel on Tuesday, keeping his name on the Chicago mayoral ballot temporarily as justices hurry to decide whether it should remain there permanently.

About 300,000 ballots without Emanuel’s name already had been printed when word came that the justices were stepping in, leaving city election officials to call their printer with the message: “Stop the presses.”

The developments capped a whirlwind 24 hours in the mayor’s race that started when an appellate court issued the stunning decision Monday booting Emanuel from the ballot. The ruling sent Emanuel’s legal team scrambling to save his candidacy for Chicago’s top office as opponents rushed to pick off potential supporters.

Team Emanuel won an early round Tuesday as the state’s high court chose to intervene by ordering that his name must appear on ballots printed for the Feb. 22 election and agreeing to take up the case challenging Emanuel’s residency.

Now Emanuel’s mayoral bid rests squarely in the hands of seven justices who will deliver what is widely expected to be the final word on whether Emanuel meets the statutory requirement that candidates for office in a municipality live there for one year prior to an election.

In interview, Gingrich calls for replacing EPA

The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa – Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich called Tuesday for the elimination of the Environmental Protection Agency, which he wants to replace with a new organization that would work more closely with businesses and be more aggressive in using science and technology.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Gingrich said the EPA was rarely innovative and focused only on issuing regulations and litigation.

“What you have is a very expensive bureaucracy that across the board makes it harder to solve problems, slows down the development of new innovations,” Gingrich said.

Gingrich, who has acknowledged that he’s mulling a run for the Republican presidential nomination, was in Iowa to talk to the Iowa Renewable Fuels Association. He also met privately with Republican legislators, often a sign in Iowa that people are laying the groundwork for a campaign. The state has the nation’s first presidential caucuses.

Gingrich, who has made several visits to Iowa recently, said the EPA was founded on sound ideas but has become a traditional Washington bureaucracy.

Loss of farm research hurts Magic Valley’s economy

How much agriculture research does the state of Idaho need? More than it has now. John Hammel, dean of the University of Idaho’s Agricultural Research and Extension Service, told the Legislature’s budget-writing Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee this week that the university has seen its base budget cut by 20 percent in the past two years, plus another $7.5 million cut in one-time funds.

“Expertise lost through budget-cutting will most probably never be regained,” he said, so the service has trimmed graduate assistantships by

Our view: The decline in the University of Idaho’s Agricultural Research and Extension directly affects the way agriculture in south-central Idaho makes a living.

50 percent and cut 70 positions while reorganizing and merging offices. The positions cut were mostly classified staff; nearly two-thirds were on the Moscow campus, while the other third were in research and extension offices around the state.

The governor’s proposed budget for the agency for next year is flat; he didn’t call for additional reductions in its base budget. But Hammel said there are more than a dozen vacant faculty positions that are considered “at risk,” because the program is underfunded. Just an additional 5 percent budget cut would slash those key faculty positions by 50 percent, he said; he emphasized that it’s the faculty positions that generate external funds, and if they go, so do the other funds.

What does all of this matter to south-central Idaho?

Simply this: U of I ag research is an important part of the way we make a living in this area. From the Kimberly Research and Extension Center to the Hagerman Fish Culture Experiment Station to the proposed dairy research center, U of I ag research is worth millions of dollars annually to the south-central Idaho economy.

The decline of agricultural research and Extension means significant erosion in the services that Magic Valley ag uses to make everyday decisions about production and strategic planning.

There are a hundred aspects of the state budget that have been dialed back in the past few years to the detriment of south-central Idaho. But nowhere more than ag research.

Reforming the reform

Last week, the Republican Party proved that it has the votes to repeal health care reform — but only in the House of Representatives. (Unfortunately for conservatives, the Senate and the White House also have a say in the matter.) The House vote on Wednesday may be remembered as a first step toward actual repeal, or as a futile exercise in fist-shaking. It all depends on whether Republicans can find a strategy for undoing the health care legislation that doesn’t involve an immediate frontal assault.

One option is for congressional Republicans to hold hearings, stage more symbolic votes, and hope that the 2012 election delivers them a Senate majority, a new occupant in the White House and a chance at full repeal. But of course there’s no guarantee that Obama will be defeated — and even if he is, by 2013 health care reform may be more entrenched, and the Democratic Party more united than ever in its determination to defend it. (The filibuster, lately a Republican weapon, could become the means by which supporters of Obamacare ensure that it endures.)

Another option would be to attack the law piecemeal by going after its least popular provisions — the new taxes, the Medicare cuts and the fine for Americans who don’t buy insurance. This strategy might be good short-term politics but would do little to lay the groundwork for an actual conservative alternative. Worse, in the unlikely event that the piecemeal attacks succeeded, Obamacare would be transformed from a notionally deficit-neutral bill into a straightforward budget-buster. And heightening a program’s contradictions in the hopes that it falls apart is an approach better suited to Marxists than conservatives.

What Republicans need is a different kind of incremental approach, one that uses the strongest conservative critiques of the health care bill as a framework for a reform of the reform. If Obama is defeated in 2012, this framework could easily be adapted into a full scale repeal-and-replace effort. But in the event that he’s re-elected, it would offer a Republican Congress a blueprint for improving the law without doing away with it entirely.

Here are three such conservative critiques: first, that Obamacare entrenches the very model of health care financing that drove costs sky-high to begin with — a model in which every insurance plan has to be comprehensive, every significant payment is made by a third party, and consumers have no idea what their treatments actually cost.

Second, the new subsidies for the uninsured are so expansive that they may encourage employers to stop offering insurance altogether, offloading their employees into the new health care exchanges and swiftly overwhelming the federal budget.

Third, the mandate to buy health insurance infringes on American liberties: never before has Washington required that private citizens purchase a particular product from a particular set of private companies.

To address the first problem, Republicans should work to deregulate the new health care exchanges, so that high-deductible, catastrophic coverage can be purchased as easily as comprehensive plans. To address the second, they should propose capping the subsidies for the uninsured, so that they don’t dramatically exceed the value of the existing tax subsidy for employer-provided insurance.

The mandate is a harder puzzle, since it works in tandem with the requirement — popular enough to have many Republican supporters — that insurers cease denying coverage to customers with pre-existing conditions. If you repealed the mandate without repealing that requirement, people could simply wait until they were sick to buy insurance, driving everyone’s prices up.

But Republicans could propose dealing with the same problem in a less coercive way. One alternative would establish limited enrollment periods (every two years, for instance) when people with pre-existing conditions could buy into the new exchanges without being denied coverage. Anyone who failed to take advantage wouldn’t be able to get coverage for a pre-existing condition until the next enrollment period arrived. This would reduce the incentive to game the system, without directly penalizing Americans who decline to buy insurance.

None of these changes would be as sweeping and satisfying as repealing the health care bill outright. And many conservatives are loath to send President Obama anything that he might actually sign, lest he use the cover of bipartisanship to evade responsibility for health care reform’s unpopularity.

But in the unlikely event that the president did embrace a reform of the reform, conservatives would have an opportunity to transform Obamacare from within. With the right changes, the new health care law could expand access to insurance in a more cost-effective, less coercive and more market-oriented way. Which is to say, it could become the kind of reform that conservatives claim to have been looking for all along.

Jack LaLanne’s legacy of fitness

Fitness pioneer Jack LaLanne often joked that dying would wreck his image. LaLanne died this weekend at age 96, but it is our image we should be concerned about. Without him and all the exercise gurus he inspired, this flabby nation would be a lot fatter.

He warned us a half century ago that we were wrecking ourselves physically. In one of those grainy black and white clips from his television show, he walked over to an American flag and asked viewers if they ever stopped to think about what made the flag possible. He said it was “the tremendous thought, the sacrifice, the lives lost, the toil, the fitness that went into it.” LaLanne then added, “But now that we have too much of everything in this great land of ours, too many things are being done for us, we have become soft mentally and physically . . . We are going to be losing our place very suddenly — like as a first-class power if something isn’t done radically to make the people

Tying fitness to patriotism was a stretch for an America still trying to understand the science of fitness. As retold in the New York Times obituary, LaLanne said, “People thought I was a charlatan and a nut. The doctors were against me — they said that working out with weights would give people heart attacks.” As recounted in a Los Angeles Times obituary, “When I first started out, I was considered a crackpot. The doctors used to say, ‘Don’t go to that Jack LaLanne, you’ll get hemorrhoids, you won’t get an erection, you women will look like men.’”

We still have not tied fitness to patriotism, even though Michelle Obama proudly lifts weights, runs on a treadmill, and works out in general every day. If anything, we went the other way. As the softening America slipped in global education rankings, the focus on standardized testing resulted in the elimination of minimum physical education requirements around the nation, including Massachusetts 15 years ago. According to a report last year from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, only 57 percent of all school districts required elementary schools to have regularly scheduled recess.

“When children and adolescents participate in at least 60 minutes of physical activity every day, multiple benefits accrue,” the report said.

LaLanne was a living testimony to those benefits. When he was 15, he was the type of kid too many American youth sadly are today. He was a junk-food junkie, often ill, and possessing a violent temper. His mother took him to a nutrition lecture where LaLanne was asked what he ate for breakfast, lunch, and dinner. When he responded that all he ate was cake, pie, and ice cream, nutritionist Paul Bragg told LaLanne, “You are a walking garbage can.”

LaLanne listened to Bragg and the rest was history, as far as LaLanne’s personal fitness industry goes. But in the last half-century of his life, the percentage of obese Americans has dramatically increased. In 1985, there was no U.S. state above 14 percent in obesity. Today, nine states are 30 percent obese or more.

The former sugar junkie did not sugar coat the work it requires to stay fit. On his 90th birthday LaLanne told the San Luis Obispo Tribune, “I hate to work out. I’d rather take a beating. To leave a hot bed and a hot woman to go into a cold gym at five in the morning — that takes discipline. But I like the results.”

Dying at 96 did not wreck Jack LaLanne’s image. He remains an inspiration to rebuild ours.

Don't kids shovel snow anymore?

Where, asked ancient French poet Francois Villon, are the snows of yesteryear?

Excusez-moi, Francois, but I think you got the question wrong. Those snows arrive with regularity here in New England. But then, who could be expected to keep accurate snowfall records back in the pre-tape-measure time of the 15th century, particularly since the rascally poet's schedule was jammed with bouts of brawling and stabbing and thieving?

The real question is less lyrical but more practical: Where are the snow shovelers of yesteryear?

When I was a kid in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, a snowstorm was a great entrepreneurial opportunity. As soon as the flakes tailed off, you grabbed your shovel and headed out. You'd ring a doorbell, hope for an older person, and offer to clear the walk for a couple of bucks. The driveway might earn you another five or so.

In a good afternoon of shoveling, you could pocket more than a paperboy made in a month. It was one reason I loved winter. (The other was hooky-bobbing, a should-be Olympic sport where you crept up behind when a car stopped at the corner, grabbed the bumper, and vied for the longest shoe-sled ride along the snowy streets.)

Many decades later, I've arrived at the age where paying someone to shovel seems like a justifiable investment in preventive health care. So where are the earnest young guys eager to make a buck? As far as I can tell, they are all on Facebook or busy texting their pals.

Shovel snow? RUS? G1. LOLLOLOL. ROFL!

Indeed, during my nearly three decades in Boston, exactly one kid has come by seeking a shoveling job. He worked for about 20 minutes on freeing my car from the snowplowed ridge that held it captive, whittling the wintry berm down to the point where you might possibly have extracted the vehicle if, say, you had a mammoth fork-lift at your disposal.

When I noted same, he said he'd settle for half the agreed-on fee — and left me to finish the job.

If you're, um, lucky enough to have some Gen Y-ers in your neighborhood, you can find yourself wondering if they are even aware of what that exotic cold-weather implement with the wooden shaft and wide metal blade is for, let alone know how to use one themselves.

A couple years back, when frigid weather transformed the untended sidewalk next door into a slip-and-fall no man's land, I asked the guys renting there if they'd like to borrow my shovel. Or even my prized ice-piercing spade.

No thanks, one shrugged. We can make it through OK.

As the winter wore on, I started clearing a narrow path through their snow, in the hope of sending a not-so-subtle message. A message was indeed sent, but hardly the one I'd intended. A year or two later, another next-door resident — this one, I hasten to add, a terrific neighbor — confided that during her first winter there, she'd assumed the three-condo building had hired someone to do the shoveling.

The recent college grads a few doors down labor under a similar misconception, or at least they did until last week's storm. When my wife gently noted that they risked a citation if they didn't clear their walk, the young woman seemed shocked. She'd always thought city workers did that, she said. (Future mayoral hopefuls, take note.)

So how to cope with the dearth of shovelers-for-hire?

Personally, I lower myself to the breakfast table with that slow and awkward motion that lets you suggest, without ever asserting as much, that you are suffering from a sore back, in the hopes that Marcia will tackle the job herself.

Misleading? Well, perhaps, but after shoveling, one's back very well could be sore, so is it really so wrong to be prematurely anti-spastic?

Still, life would be much simpler if a platoon of eager shovelers patrolled the neighborhood. But the fact that the snow falls doesn't mean the doorbell will ring, as a proverb might put it. Might, that is, if today's proverb-penners weren't worn out from shoveling.

The myth of competiton

Meet the new buzzword, same as the old buzzword. The President's Economic Recovery Advisory Board has been renamed the President's Council on Jobs and Competitiveness.

This may be smart politics. Arguably, Obama has enlisted an old cliché on behalf of a good cause, as a way to sell a much-needed increase in public investment to a public thoroughly indoctrinated in the view that government spending is a bad thing.

But let's not kid ourselves: Talking about "competitiveness" as a goal is fundamentally misleading. At best, it's a misdiagnosis of our problems. At worst, it could lead to policies based on the false idea that what's good for corporations is good for America.

Paul Krugman

What sense does it make to view our current woes as stemming from lack of competitiveness?

It's true that we'd have more jobs if we exported more and imported less. But the same is true of Europe and Japan, which also have depressed economies. And we can't all export more while importing less, unless we can find another planet to sell to.

Furthermore, while America is running a trade deficit, this deficit is smaller than it was before the Great Recession began. It would help if we could make it smaller still. But ultimately, we're in a mess because we had a financial crisis, not because American companies have lost their ability to compete with foreign rivals.

But isn't it at least somewhat useful to think of our nation as if it were America Inc., competing in the global marketplace? No.

Consider: A corporate leader who increases profits by slashing his work force is thought to be successful. Well, that's more or less what has happened in America recently: employment is way down, but profits are hitting new records. Who, exactly, considers this economic success?

Still, you might say that talk of competitiveness helps Mr. Obama quiet claims that he's anti-business. That's fine, as long as he realizes that the interests of nominally "American" corporations and the interests of the nation, which were never the same, are now less aligned than ever before.

Take the case of General Electric, whose chief executive, Jeffrey Immelt, has just been appointed to head that renamed advisory board. I have nothing against either GE or Immelt. But with fewer than half its workers based in the United States and less than half its revenues coming from U.S. operations, G.E.'s fortunes have very little to do with U.S. prosperity.

By the way, some have praised Immelt's appointment on the grounds that at least he represents a company that actually makes things, rather than being yet another financial wheeler-dealer. Sorry to burst this bubble, but these days G.E. derives more revenue from its financial operations than it does from manufacturing — indeed, GE Capital, which received a government guarantee for its debt, was a major beneficiary of the Wall Street bailout.

So what does the administration's embrace of the rhetoric of competitiveness mean for economic policy?

The favorable interpretation, as I said, is that it's just packaging for an economic strategy centered on public investment, investment that's actually about creating jobs now while promoting longer-term growth. The unfavorable interpretation is that Mr. Obama and his advisers really believe that the economy is ailing because they've been too tough on business, and that what America needs now is corporate tax cuts and across-the-board deregulation.

My guess is that we're mainly talking about packaging here. And if the president does propose a serious increase in spending on

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

We need a new approach in dealing with criminals

I am concerned why men develop criminal minds that destroy families, corrupt governments and see the values of complete societies crumble. Studies of human motivation suggest a man's motives do not consist only in seeking food when hungry, safety when frightened and shelter when cold but also include a search for meaning that sometimes takes him outside the boundaries of law and order.

We all have a better chance at survival when we face our problems together. What one man cannot do or learn to do, his distant brother often can — and it is in such differences of giftedness among humanity that we build our hope for survival.

It is believed that abused and neglected children are more likely to be delinquent and to exhibit criminal behavior as adults. The resilience of children often surprises us with complete recovery from abuse and victimization.

The factors occurring during adolescence that lead to future criminal behavior are social misfitting, anger and emotional control (or lack thereof) and socioeconomic status. The common misfit has few or no friends and other people bully or make fun of him.

Once a person slides into criminal behavior, there is still hope of recovery, but we as a society need to change as well. Society could do more to help change the individual with a criminal past but instead uses the downfallen to promote sales of every possible item. Movie companies reek profits on criminal-related movies. Anything that glorifies criminality helps turn society into a monster.

As we link childhood occurrences with future criminal behavior, we can slowly solve the problem of crime before it starts. We help the criminal change his behavior by helping him see himself realistically and develop responsible patterns of thought.

12 nods for 'King's Speech' stirs up Oscar race

By Nicole Sperling
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The race is on.

In the weeks leading up to Oscar nomination day, David Fincher's Facebook movie "The Social Network" had all but been anointed the winner of this year's best picture Academy Award, racking up nearly every critic's prize across the country, in addition to taking the top Golden Globe. But Tuesday morning the race heated up significantly with the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences handing the British drama "The King's Speech" 12 nominations — the most of any film this year.

Joel and Ethan Coen's PG-13 Western "True Grit" landed 10 nominations while "Social Network" and "Inception" each walked away with eight.

"It seems like an extremely even playing field," said Scott Rudin, who with "The Social Network" and "True Grit" became the first producer since 1974 to have two films in the best picture race. "I don't think it's a two-horse race, I don't think it's even a three-horse race. I think it's going to be a very fun and interesting month."

The rest of the films in the best picture category include director David O. Russell's "The Fighter," which earned seven nods; the James Franco-starring "127 Hours," which landed six; and "Black Swan" with five; plus "Toy Story 3," "The Kids Are All Right" and "Winter's Bone."

Leaving aside "Toy Story 3," all of the nine other best-picture nominees are adult-oriented dramas, most of which have done exceedingly well at the box office. "Inception," "True Grit" and "The Social Network" all passed the $100 million mark, and "Black Swan" is on track to do so. "These are all grown-up, sophisticated movies that are mostly big hits in a genre that people thought was finished," added Rudin.

This crop of films also serves as a reinforcement for the academy's decision to expand the best-picture category from five films to 10 last year as a way to better reflect the most popular movies (especially in comparison to the 2010 race, in which top-grossing "Avatar" was nominated but the little-seen indie "The Hurt Locker" won the top prize).

Now the teams behind the nominated films and actors will enter the final leg of their marketing campaigns, with four weeks remaining to get their movies seen and admired by all academy voters before ballots are due on Feb. 22. The awards will be handed out Feb. 27.

"I do not believe that of the 6,000-plus Oscar members, that everybody saw the movie," said Harvey Weinstein, whose Weinstein Co. distributed "The King's Speech," echoing the sentiments of most Oscar campaigners. "We have to get them all to see the movie."

In the top acting categories, the boxing drama "The Fighter" rivaled "The King's Speech" for the most nominations, with three each. Melissa Leo, Christian Bale and Amy Adams were all selected for their portrayals of characters in the real-life Lowell, Mass., family surrounding boxing champion Micky Ward (played by Mark Wahlberg, who was not nominated for his performance).

"We are here because of all these actors and their performances," said Russell, who also walked away with a best director nomination along with Darren Aronofsky ("Black Swan"), Tom Hooper ("The King's Speech"), Fincher ("The Social Network") and the Coen brothers ("True Grit"). "It's been very emotional for me and my family. I'm so frickin' grateful."

The one striking omission in the directing category was Christopher Nolan, whose mind-bending thriller "Inception" landed eight other nominations.

As for "The King's

Speech," Colin Firth and Helena Bonham Carter were recognized for their portrayal of British royalty, while Geoffrey Rush was rewarded for his role as speech therapist Lionel Logue in the period drama about friendship and loyalty. "It's a simple thing," said Weinstein. "The reason the movie got that many nominations is a tribute to this cast. Our actors are our special effects on this movie."

Taco Bell defends its meat mixture

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Taco Bell officials on Tuesday rejected claims made in a lawsuit that the meat in their tacos, burritos and other products is not all beef.

Taco Bell President Greg Creed said in a statement that the lawyers who filed the lawsuit got their facts wrong and that Taco Bell plans to take legal action against those making the allegations. He did not explain specifically what type of legal action Taco Bell might take.

"At Taco Bell, we buy our beef from the same trusted brands you find in the supermarket," Creed said. "We start with 100 percent USDA-inspected beef. Then we simmer it in our proprietary blend of seasonings and spices to give our seasoned beef its signature Taco Bell taste and texture."

The class action lawsuit filed Friday in federal court in California by the Montgomery law firm Beasley, Allen, Crow, Methvin, Portis & Miles claims the Taco Bell meat mixture contains binders and fillers.

An attorney for the law firm, Dee Miles, said Taco Bell saves money by adding fillers because the beef is the most expensive part of their products.

"It's giving them a competitive edge. It's an economic edge" over other companies that sell Mexican-style food, Miles said.

Miles said he wasn't concerned with Taco Bell's threat of legal action.

"We stand on the absolute facts as stated in the complaint filed in the Federal Court in California," he said.

Creed said Taco Bell is proud of the quality of its beef and identifies the seasoning and spice ingredients on its website.

According to that Web site, ingredients used to season the Taco Bell meat include salt, chili pepper, onion powder, tomato powder, oats, soy lecitithin, sugar, soybean oil, garlic powder, yeast extract, citric acid and cocoa powder.

Bridgeview Estates kitchen uses recipes of 98-year-old resident

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Even in the dining room at Bridgeview Estates, Irma Haley can taste the flavors of friends' and family members' recipes.

When the 98-year-old former home economics teacher moved into Bridgeview three years ago, she gave copies of cookbooks she had written to the Twin Falls assisted living facility's dietary director, Kathy Schroeder. Schroeder adapted some of those recipes for the dining room menu.

Haley — who has lived in Castleford, Rupert and Buhl — published her three "Unbearably Delicious" cookbooks in the '80s and early '90s, collecting recipes from her friends and family.

"I had recipes all over the house, and I just wanted to get them organized," Haley said.

Some of those recipes date to the 19th century, like Haley's grandmother's mincemeat. The book also has her mother's recipes, like chicken and dumplings, and recipes that Haley developed herself.

The books are out of print, but Haley had some extras that she gave to Schroeder when she moved into Bridgeview Estates. Schroeder decided to put some of them into Bridgeview's menu rotation, which changes twice a year.

When deciding which recipes to adapt for the menu, Schroeder considered what the residents like. Not many are adventurous eaters, she said, and they all have a set idea of what they like to eat.

"We try to make it like home," she said.

So she settled on dishes like biscuits and gravy, chicken and dumplings and sour cream chicken enchiladas. They're a hit, Schroeder said — even the chicken and dumplings, which residents left untouched when the kitchen used a different recipe.

"This is the first time everybody eats them," Schroeder said.

Haley's not surprised.

Irma Haley, 98, shares a laugh last week at Bridgeview Estates in Twin Falls as she talks about her favorite recipes. Haley hasn't lit a stove since she and her husband moved into Bridgeview three years ago, but the facility's kitchen has adopted some of her recipes.

Cookbooks written by Irma Haley, who retired from teaching home economics in 1976 in Castleford.

"I've never had much of my cooking turned down," she said.

Reporter Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or mdavlin@magicvalley.com.

Irma Haley, 98, checks to see when she wrote her first cookbook, as she talks about the books she published over the years with recipes dating back to her grandparents' time. The answer: Haley wrote her first in the early 1980s.

Recipes from Irma

SOUR CREAM ENCHILADAS

Irma Haley got this recipe from one of her former students, Karen Garrison. This recipe is one that Bridgeview Estates in Twin Falls adapted for its menus.

- 1 pint sour cream
- 1 cup cooked chicken, cubed, or 1 (5-ounce) can boned chicken
- 1 can cream of chicken soup
- 1 (4-ounce) can diced green chilies
- 2 or 3 green onions, finely chopped
- 1 (4-ounce) jar sliced pimientos
- 8 ounces Monterey Jack cheese, grated
- 1/4 pound cheddar cheese, grated
- 12 corn tortillas

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Mix together sour cream, chicken, chicken soup, chilies, green onions, pimientos and three-fourths of the combined cheeses. Soften tortillas in hot oil. Place large spoonful of mixture on each tortilla. Roll and place in flat baking dish. Pour rest of mixture over the enchiladas and sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes.

DILLY DIP

Haley developed this recipe for her dill pickle-loving family. "The more garlic, the better," she wrote in a cookbook.

- 8 ounces cream cheese, softened
- 1 pint small-curd cottage cheese
- 1/2 cup chopped dill pickles
- 1/4 cup dill pickle juice
- 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon garlic salt

Blend cream cheese and cottage cheese together until smooth. Add chopped pickle, juice and garlic salt. Mix well. Chill and serve with chips.

Restaurateur devoted to fresh ingredients ditches takeout

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Jim Funk couldn't have chosen a more apropos name than Desperado's for his restaurant.

It seems as though he's always bucking the trends.

When he opened his Baja-style restaurant in 1983, Idaho lacked the style of fresh Mexican food he wanted. So he had to get his fresh red and green chilies, fresh tortillas, queso fresco cheese and spices from friends coming up from California. He was one of the first to insist on fresh food, including fresh fish in landlocked Idaho.

And just recently he turned his restaurant business upside down when he banned takeout to save money and help the environment.

"We immediately saw a downturn in business; we had been serving a hundred takeouts an evening during summer. But it was really a shame to put a nice piece of beef or fish into a packaged container," he said.

Desperado's, which Funk shortened to Despo's when he tossed takeout, had its genesis in the fresh Mexican cuisine that Funk ate in southern California and Baja Mexico as a boy growing up in San Diego.

His menu's mainstays include tortilla soup made from fresh chicken stock, chilies, guajillo peppers and charbroiled chicken breast served with sliced avocado, diced onion, cilantro, tomato and tortilla croutons. And carnitas made with slow-roasted pork, chicken breast or charbroiled steak served with sliced tomato, onion, avocado and cilantro with tortillas, rice and beans.

His restaurant was recognized in Sunset Magazine's Hunt for the Best Burrito article this summer.

"It's literally the food I grew up with. Mom would make homemade chili rellenos, carne asada, enchiladas for us five kids. And everywhere you ate, it was fresh," he said.

But Funk isn't content to stop with the tried and true. Three days a week the reader board offers new specials, such as Shrimp Diablo, Chipotle Shrimp, Mahi Mahi Tostada, Jalapeno Soup and Zucchini Burritos that Funk has tasted during fly-fishing trips to Mexico and tested out of his home in Bellevue.

"That's my motto," he said, nodding toward a quote he taped up in the middle of the kitchen: "A good restaurant is like a shark. If it doesn't stop moving forward, it dies. The message: Evolve or die."

DESPO'S SALAD DRESSING

From Ketchum restaurateur Jim Funk.

- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon white pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon fresh ground black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard

- 2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
- Garlic cloves, crushed, or 1 teaspoon granulated garlic
- 5 tablespoons good-quality white wine vinegar
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup 2 percent milk

Put all ingredients in a jar in the order written above. Shake and refrigerate.

CARNE ASADA MARINADE

From Ketchum restaurateur Jim Funk.

- 1 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 1 cup fresh lime juice (from limes, not a bottle)
- 6 garlic cloves
- 1 teaspoon salt

- 1 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 bunch cilantro, chopped fine
- 1 white onion, chopped fine

Combine all ingredients. Use the marinade on flank skirt or skirt steak overnight. Throw the meat on a hot 400-degree barbecue. Don't cook to more than medium.

Alcohol industry grapples with nutrition labeling

By Michelle Locke
For The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Pick up just about any beverage on store shelves and on the back of the packaging you'll find a numerical rundown of calories, carbs, etc.

Unless, that is, the beverage is alcohol.

Some folks want to change that.

"In the year 2011, it's sort of bizarre that alcohol's the only consumable product sold in the United States that you can't tell what's inside the bottle," says Guy L. Smith, executive vice president in North America for Diageo, the world's leading distilled spirits, beer and wine company.

Diageo is supporting a proposal presently before the federal Tax and Trade Bureau — the agency with authority over alcohol labels — to list nutrition information such as calories, carbohydrates, serving size and alcohol per serving.

But not everyone in the industry is as enthusiastic.

At the Beer Institute, a trade association based in Washington, D.C., officials support listing calories, carbs, protein and fat content, as well as alcohol by volume. But they oppose the idea of defining serving size by fluid ounces of pure alcohol, or as 12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine or 1.5 ounces of 80-proof liquor, on the grounds that you may get more than 1.5 ounces of liquor in a cocktail depending on what else is in the drink and the accuracy of the bartender.

But Smith says consumers know when they're getting a large martini. The point is, he says, to give them a point of reference so they can generally know what to expect.

At the San Francisco-based Wine Institute, officials are asking that the labeling requirements be on a voluntary basis only. (Diageo also supports voluntary compliance.)

If labeling is made mandatory, then the Wine Institute is asking for accommodations, such as being allowed to generalize the calorie and carb counts on wine, rather than needing to have each vintage of each variety analyzed. Additionally, they want the option of choosing the style of label, perhaps putting the information on a thin strip-style label rather than the more traditional (and much larger) box format that appears on other foods and drinks.

"There shouldn't be a significant cost impact on wineries," says Wendell Lee, general counsel for the institute.

It's unclear when federal officials might rule. Agency spokesman Tom Hogue said the Tax and Trade Bureau is working on the issue, but it's a complicated one that doesn't lend itself to a quick solution.

The current push for nutrition information was started in late 2003 by a coalition of consumer and public health advocates. Diageo announced its support for the move at the time and last December issued a statement calling on officials to rule.

The Distilled Spirits Council, based in Washington, also supports putting serving information on bottles.

Current labeling law is complicated.

Wine, beer and liquor manufacturers don't have to list ingredients — and the nutritional labeling proposals being considered don't require them to start doing that. However, they must list substances people might be sensitive to, such as sulfites, FD&C Yellow No. 5 and aspartame.

Wines containing 14 percent or more alcohol by volume must list alcohol content. Wines that are 7 percent to 14 percent alcohol by volume may list alcohol content or put "light" or "table" wine on the label. (Most wines in that category, however, do list alcohol by volume.)

"Light" beers must list calorie and carbohydrate content only. Liquor must list alcohol content by volume and may also list proof.

In 2009 Funk turned his restaurant into the first and only one in Idaho certified as green by the Green Restaurant Association, a national organization set up in 1990 to help restaurants be more environmentally sustainable. The organization has been featured on NPR, the New York Times, CNN, NBC Nightly News and other national media.

"The restaurant industry is hard on resources. Restaurants use an excessive amount of gas and electricity, and they create a huge amount of waste. And I got tired of all that," Funk recounted.

Funk bought a dishwasher that uses 1.3 gallons versus 7 gallons of water per wash, using less electricity to heat the water in the process. He went to green chemicals. He bought an ultra-efficient gas fryer. He replaced incandescent light bulbs with carbon fluoride lights and fluorescent tubing. He switched to a programmable thermostat, Energy Star freezers and ice machine, reusable linen napkins and a certified green laundry service. He offered more vegetarian selections than ever.

And he ditched the takeout containers in a resort community where takeout was king.

"Industrywide, takeout averages 4 to 5 percent of business, but it was 18 percent of my overall business," he said. "I was spending $30,000 a year in packaging that was basically wasted, not recycled. There was a lot of animosity when I stopped; people didn't like stopping the convenience. But I'm getting a new batch of loyal customers — in part, because of what I did."

Among Funk's supporters is Geri Herbert.

"They got a lot of static for it, but they would not compromise. I think we should be applauding them for it, not criticizing them for it," the Ketchum woman said. "And I like the fact that he was one of the first to stop using lard and go to green cleaning solutions. I love his food, too. He works hard at new recipes. He'll spread cookbooks all over and experiment until he gets it right."

Ketchum resident Lynne Stone said it's the restaurant's commitment to fresh that keeps her going back a couple of times a week for cheese enchiladas and big salads.

She winked. "And I bring my own to-go box

Diana Kennedy's latest book is 'Oaxaca al Gusto: An Infinite Gastronomy.' It is a big, fat cookbook, but more than anything a statement about how a resourceful people created a cuisine. She is shown here in Washington in 2008.

Oaxaca, with rigor

By William Booth
The Washington Post

ZITACUARO, Mexico — If the grand dame of Mexican cooking were a foodstuff, Diana Kennedy might be a pickled pepper. Absolutely indispensable at the table. But be careful. A little chili habanero goes a long way.

Three hours west of Mexico City, we pass happily up the cobblestone drive of her home tucked into a forested hill outside a sleepy little pueblo in the wilds of Michoacan. But when Kennedy spots an unexpected guest, a fellow reporter just along for the ride, she recoils in fury, points, and demands, “What is she?”

“I am very, very annoyed,” Kennedy says, and turns on her heel.

There is a difference between hospitality and gastronomy, and Kennedy is much more about the latter and is famous for her tart tongue, quick temper and withering appraisals of competitors.

But so what? The “Julia Child of Mexican Cuisine” is not a celebrity television chef, or a restaurateur with customers to pamper, or, actually, our friend. It is not necessary to be nice. She is instead a dogged, obsessive pop anthropologist who has spent the past 50 years traveling to some of the most remote corners of “my Mexico,” as she calls it, wrangling home cooks to reveal their secrets to this British expat with the imperial attitude.

Omnipresent Chicago chef, author and Obama pal Rick Bayless might have made us forget, but Kennedy was the game changer who in 1972 introduced “The Cuisines of Mexico” cookbook, and our understanding of Mexican food was never the same. Forgotten (but not gone!) was the beloved Number Three Combo at Tex-Mex joints inevitably called El Rancho — the sad enchilada, the weary beans, the useless rice, all hidden beneath a yellow glop of nuclear cheese — after Kennedy turned so many gringos on to the life-affirming pozole stew of Jalisco and the killer mole sauces made in Oaxaca.

In her lovely, airy, tiled kitchen, a member of her household staff, who is never introduced, is standing in front of a burner, roasting and grinding coffee beans. The serf keeps to his task, eyes down.

Kennedy grows the beans herself in her experimental garden. She serves a few cups. It has a rich, earthy aroma. “These aren’t super beans,” Kennedy says. “It’s not the right climate.” Actually, the coffee is muddy, but we all sip and yum, faking ambrosia.

On a sunny kitchen shelf sit glass jars of vinegars with pineapples, wines, rich green sprigs of something. A wooden bowl filled with fat limes. A pair of binoculars and “A Field Guide to Mexican Birds.” Outside, hummingbirds. Above a curtain rod, straw baskets with herbs. Atop the tile counters, traditional warm red charred clay pots.

“I’ve had some of these since I moved to Mexico,” Kennedy says, more than 50 years ago, when she arrived with her husband, Paul P. Kennedy, a correspondent for the New York Times, whose colleague Craig Claiborne persuaded her to publish her first cookbook.

She complains that reviewers have complained about the organization of her latest and likely last book (“I’m 87 years old; be serious, I’m not going to live forever”), called “Oaxaca al Gusto: An Infinite Gastronomy.” Instead of the traditional progression — appetizers to salads to soups to entrees, etc. — Kennedy divided the project into the 11 regions of the state.

Published by the University of Texas Press and on sale for $50, the Oaxaca book is academic-tome-meets-sociological-study (with chapters about the religious, ritual importance of chocolate, chilies and corn). It is a big, fat cookbook — 452 pages — but more than anything a statement about how a resourceful people created a cuisine.

“Trying to record the ethnic foods as well as the more sophisticated recipes of the urban centers presented an enormous challenge and responsibility,” Kennedy writes in the introduction. “I am sure that if I had known what it would entail to travel almost constantly through the year, and often uncomfortably, to research, record, photograph and then cook and eat over three hundred recipes, I might never have had the courage to start the project in the first place.”

Kennedy took her first trip to Oaxaca in 1965. She often sleeps in her old Nissan truck. “I carry a shovel to dig us out of the mud,” she says.

With the coffee down the hatch, Kennedy tends to the tamales. As she tells the chefs who make the pilgrimage to her Mexican cooking “boot camp” (her phrase) a million times, tamales are all about the masa, the corn dough. She steams a few Veracruzanos. The masa is fluffy, puffy and creamy white, not the yellow brick of lard that is often peddled in Los Angeles. Inside is just the perfect thimble of pork, flavored with smoky chili ancho.

The crummy coffee is forgotten.

As we natter away, she begins to prepare a soup of squash blossoms. The onion? Always white. Chopped fine. A little garlic. Shoot yourself if you own a garlic press. Later the poblano peppers. “The oil doesn’t need to be too hot,” Kennedy says. “You want the flavors.” Together we chop a big bunch of the yellow, musky flowers and toss them into the pot to steam. In a few minutes, they are done. “You see? I like my food a little shiny, not greasy. Do you see how bright the food looks?” We do.

In her Oaxaca book, Kennedy includes not only the classic fare — the red, green, black moles — but also the recipes of indigenous women who live hard lives and cook with wild plants and make meals with ingredients that city folks might find exotic and inaccessible, like a wasp’s nest sauce or turtle eggs in broth or iguana tamales.

So if you want to try making beef brains with jalapenos and garlic, this is the book for you.

Kennedy maintains that the new generation of explorers must acquaint themselves with the kitchen: “All anthropologists and botanists, they ought to learn to cook,” she says. “I am suggesting that all the syllabi for would-be biologists include classes in cooking, or they will miss the whole point, of how the culture and plants and food come together.”

We put the blossoms, onions and chicken broth into the Osterizer. “All Mexican cooks use blenders,” Kennedy says. The soup is thick, a little more lumpy than the master likes, so she thins it a bit, pronounces it ready and able. It is just right: The rich blossoms say hello to a pop of chili in the savory homemade broth.

Dinner in 35 minutes: Chicken and cabbage

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

This is a healthful stir-fry with good texture and color, plus vitamins A, C and K.

To make it a vegetarian dish, omit the chicken, and be sure to include the edamame and bean sprouts.

Serve with brown basmati rice or instant brown rice.

Adapted from “Restorative Recipes: A Mindful Path to the Essential You,” by Teri Cochrane (Healing Paths, 2010).

CHINESE CHICKEN AND CABBAGE STIR-FRY

4 to 6 servings

1 medium yellow onion
4 medium carrots
1/2 head or 1 small head green cabbage
4 collard green leaves (may substitute kale)
1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (may substitute skinless chicken tenders)
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/4 teaspoon sea salt
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup tamari (may substitute low-sodium soy sauce)
1 cup shelled edamame (optional; can add straight from the freezer)
1 cup fresh bean sprouts (optional)

onion, then cut it into chunks. Trim and peel the carrots, then cut into very thin strips (julienne). Discard any outer cabbage leaves that are wilted or discolored; cut the cabbage in half, core it, then cut what’s left into 1/2-inch strips. Rinse the collard greens, then cut out and discard the tough ribs. Cut the remaining leaves crosswise into 1/2-inch strips. Cut the chicken into 1 1/2- or 2-inch chunks.

Add a tablespoon of the oil to the skillet or wok; swirl to coat the surface. Add the onion and chicken; sprinkle with the salt. Stir-fry for 6 to 8 minutes or until the chicken looks almost cooked through and the onions have softened and picked up a little color. Transfer to a plate.

Add the honey, tamari, carrots and edamame, if using, to the skillet or wok. Stir-fry for about 3 minutes, then add the cabbage and stir-fry for 1 or 2 minutes. Add the collards and the remaining tablespoon of oil; stir-fry for 1 minute or until the collard greens are slightly wilted and the carrots are crisp-tender.

Return the onion and chicken to the skillet or wok. Reduce the heat to medium; cook for 2 minutes so the chicken is heated and cooked through. Add the bean sprouts, if using. Stir-fry for 30 seconds, then immediately divide among individual plates.

What’s this cooked egg doing in my cookie?

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q: A recipe for a spritz cookie made in a cookie press called for a cooked egg yolk. Is that a mistake?

A: It’s no mistake. Some spritz doughs use raw egg, but older, more traditional versions use cooked egg yolk. I asked Geoff Blount, the baking and pastry instructor at Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte, N.C., to explain why.

“The answer is kind of threefold,” he said. First, eggs contain protein. Protein gives a cookie a light, airy structure. Cooking the egg beforehand keeps it from developing more protein, resulting in the denser texture that is typical of a spritz.

Second, cooking the yolk removes moisture. So the cooked yolk absorbs moisture from the dough, making a stiffer mixture that is easier to pipe and holds the pattern better.

The moisture in a raw egg also creates a little bit of steam, creating a cookie that rises a little as it bakes. That’s great for a cookie with a light texture, but not for a denser cookie like a spritz.

“The mouth-feel is more compact and creamy, like a butter cookie should be,” says Blount. “You bite in and it feels kind of crunchy, but all of a sudden, it just melts in your mouth.”

Spritz cookie dough also has a lot of butter, making it a little fatty. The drier texture from the cooked egg yolk balances that.

Using a cooked egg yolk is not uncommon in European-style cookies, says Blount, such as the Parisian pate sable.

“In America, we think all cookies are ‘cream the butter and sugar, beat in a raw egg and stir in flour.’ But in Europe, they look at ingredients for what effect they want. Using a cooked yolk allows you to have the egg you need for structure with no moisture added. It’s all about knowing how to use your ingredients to get what you want.”

Shrimp fried rice that doesn't come in a box

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

Fried rice doesn't have to be greasy and come in a folded cardboard box.

When you've got the craving for salty-crispy rice studded with bits of vegetables, egg, and meat, make your own. It's no more complex than making a stir fry.

And if shrimp doesn't strike your fancy, substitute any cooked meat, tofu, or just stick with veggies. It's important that the rice be cold; leftovers work great. For a healthier, albeit untraditional, version substitute brown rice.

SHRIMP FRIED RICE

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 6.

AP photo

When you've got the craving for fried rice, make your own.

4 tablespoons vegetable or canola oil, divided
1 clove garlic, minced
2 teaspoons minced fresh ginger
6 ounces shiitake mushrooms, stems removed, sliced

1 cup snow peas, sliced into strips

15-ounce can baby corn, drained

2 eggs, beaten

8 ounces small cooked shrimp, peeled and deveined

3 cups cooked white rice, chilled

1/4 cup soy sauce

1 bunch scallions, thinly sliced

In a wok or a large, deep skillet over medium-high, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Add the garlic and ginger and saute for 1 minute. Add the mushrooms and cook for 4 to 5 minutes, or until tender. Add the snow peas and the baby corn and saute for 1 minute.

Push the ingredients to the sides of the pan, then add the egg and stir to break up while it cooks. Add the shrimp and the remaining 3 tablespoons of oil. Cook until heated through, about 1 minute more. Add the rice and cook until slightly browned and crispy, about 5 minutes. Stir in the soy sauce and the scallions.

Idaho grocer scouting sites in Arizona

MESA, Ariz. — An Idaho-based grocery store chain continues to sign leases for store sites in the competitive Phoenix market.

The East Valley Tribune reports WinCo has scouted out locations in Gilbert, Phoenix and signed leases on store sites in east Mesa and Glendale in late 2010.

WinCo operates a store in Twin Falls. WinCo isn't saying much about its future plans. A company vice president says it's clear WinCo is interested in the Phoenix market, but adds the company has actually scaled back expansion plans due to the economy.

The Tribune reports WinCo's stores are larger than traditional grocery stores at about 90,000 square feet. The chain is owned by its employees and keeps prices down by having customers bag their own groceries and keeping the store décor simple.

Shoppers can choose between 10 grocery stores chains in the Phoenix-area.

Idaho board: No action in Walgreens complaint

BOISE — The Idaho Board of Pharmacy says it has no basis to start proceedings against Walgreens in a complaint that alleged one of the drug store chain's pharmacists in Nampa improperly refused to fill a prescription.

A Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest nurse practitioner contended the pharmacist in November abused the state's 2010 conscience law after balking at filling a prescription for a drug that helps control bleeding after childbirth or abortions.

According to a letter obtained by The Associated Press on Tuesday, pharmacy board executive director Mark Johnston told Planned Parenthood that the panel concluded the pharmacist didn't violate patient confidentiality laws by inquiring if the woman had an abortion.

In addition, Johnston said there was no requirement in the Idaho Pharmacy Act for a pharmacist to fill a prescription.

The investigation is being closed "without further action," he said.

Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest officials say the board's decision is disheartening but motivational for seeking legislative changes or an outright repeal of the law.

"We're disappointed. We're not surprised," Kristen Glundberg-Prossor, spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest, told the Idaho Press Tribune. "This decision confirms that, in Idaho, a pharmacist has no duty to fill any prescription for any reason. Right now, there is no protection under Idaho law for patients to receive treatment if a pharmacist refuses to provide it."

Planned Parenthood officials had also complained that the pharmacist inquired if the patient needed the drug for post-abortion care. The nurse refused to answer the question based on confidentiality of health information.

"If these refusals keep happening for whatever reason, people are not going to get the health care they deserve," Glundberg-Prossor said.

The bill was overwhelmingly approved by the Republican majority in the Idaho House and Senate last year, then signed by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter. The intent was to shield nurses and pharmacists opposed to providing treatment for end-of-life care, abortions, emergency contraception and stem-cell therapy.

President Barack Obama greets invited guests at Albany International Airport in Colonie, N.Y. Facing high unemployment and lukewarm public approval, President Barack Obama can take heart from history.

My, how presidential fortunes do turn on economic twists

By Paul Wiseman
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Facing high unemployment and lukewarm public approval, President Barack Obama can take heart from history: At the same point in his presidency 28 years ago, Ronald Reagan was saddled with an approval rating much lower than Obama's is now. And the unemployment rate then was a full percentage point higher.

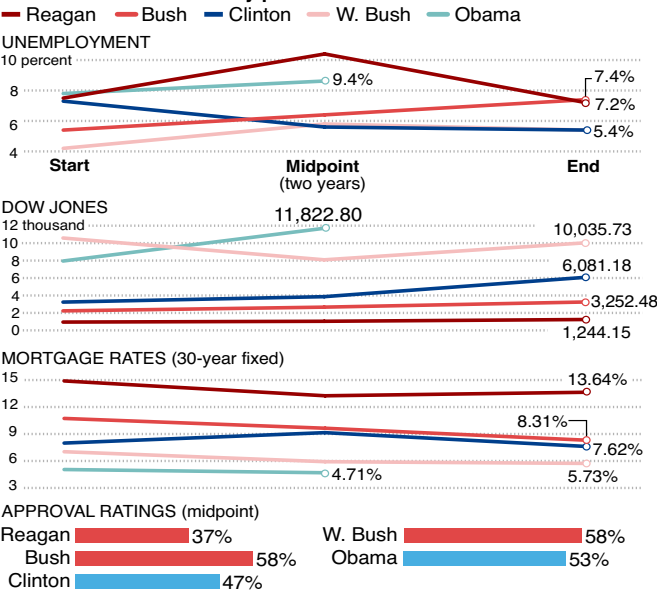

For Reagan, the economy recovered quickly and strongly, carrying him to re-election in 1984, one of the biggest land-slides in U.S. history. It's possible Obama could benefit from an equally robust economic revival before Election Day 2012. But expectations are lower this time, because the government has already used up most of its tools to boost the economy.

Recent history suggests a president's fortunes can turn dramatically, for better or worse, on economic swings from the halfway mark of his first term to the next Election Day. Here are some examples:

Presidents and first terms indicators

A look at recent history shows that a president's fortunes in office can turn dramatically - for better or worse - depending on the ups and downs in the economy.

First term measures at key points:

PRESIDENT RONALD REAGAN

Midway through his first term, Reagan's approval rating was 37 percent. No wonder. When Reagan delivered his State of the Union address in January 1983, the unemployment rate was at 10.4 percent — nearly 3 percentage points higher than when he took office.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker had pushed interest rates as high as 20 percent to slow the economy and snuff out inflation. He succeeded. But the result was the deepest recession since the Great Depression. Political pundits wrote Reagan off as a one-term president.

Yet once he whipped inflation, Volcker reversed course and lowered interest rates. Reagan's tax cuts also jolted the economy. By Election Day 1984, the unemployment rate had fallen to 7.2 percent and was still dropping. Proclaiming the arrival of "Morning in America," Reagan won another four years in the White House, defeating Walter Mondale.

PRESIDENT GEORGE H.W. BUSH

A little more than two years into his presidency, George H.W. Bush looked invincible. His approval rating had hit 89 percent after the U.S. military drove

GM nips at Toyota's heels in sales race

By Tom Krisher
Associated Press writer

FLINT, Mich. — General Motors has a shot at being No. 1 again.

The resurgent automaker reported Monday that its worldwide sales last year came within 30,000 of beating Japanese rival Toyota, which took a big hit because of safety recalls.

GM is hiring, producing more and basking in a better reputation for quality. It expects to sell even more cars and trucks this year, putting it within reach of the title of biggest in the world — an honor it held for 76 years before losing it in 2008.

Regaining the global lead means a lot to workers on the assembly line in Flint, a town devastated by years of auto industry job losses. Just two years ago, they didn't know if their factory or even their company would survive.

here, called overtaking Toyota the Heisman Trophy of the auto business.

"We're going to take Toyota on, and the people in Flint are going to be a part of that," he said. "This is the birthplace of General Motors. We kind of take it a little more seriously than maybe some other towns."

GM executives say they are focused on keeping customers happy, not on the title. They remember the company's disastrous recent history, when it sold cars at a loss just to hold on to market share.

"Satisfying and retaining our customers and delivering world-class products is pretty much the fundamental business that we're in," GM North America President Mark Reuss said Monday.

New website offers apprenticeship info

Students, counselors, employers and job seekers have a new source of detailed information on apprenticeships available throughout Idaho on the internet.

Apprenticeships in Idaho, developed by the Idaho Department of Labor, provides details on the dozens of businesses, schools and other organizations that have apprenticeship programs along with links to more than a half dozen other information sources.

"Apprenticeships combine on-the-job learning, related instruction and paid work experience that prepares Idaho workers to meet future industry demands," Labor Director Roger B. Madsen said in a press release. "Over 250 Idaho employers, associations and labor unions have implemented apprenticeship programs that are boosting their profitability and providing more than 1,200 Idahoans good jobs that enable them to take full advantage of the quality of life our state has to offer."

Egyptians denounce Mubarak, clash with riot police

By Sherine Bayoumi and Leila Fadel
The Washington Post

CAIRO — In the largest protest in Egypt in years, thousands of anti-government demonstrators on Tuesday called for the end of President Hosni Mubarak's 30-year rule, a cry inspired by the fall of an Arab dictator in Tunisia.

By late Tuesday night, some 15,000 protesters were encamped in Cairo's Tahrir Square, saying they had no plans to leave, as supporters brought blankets, food and water to sustain them. Among their demands, posted online and circulated by activists on Twitter, were a call for Mubarak's immediate "abdication of power."

According to the Associated Press, a large security force moved in around 1 a.m. Wednesday, arresting people, beating some, chasing others into side streets and filling the square with clouds of tear gas in an effort to clear the square.

Many of the protesters said they were publicly denouncing Mubarak's rule for the first time, inspired by the images of young people in Tunisia effecting change in a region where most Arab countries are led by autocratic rulers and freedom of speech is limited.

"Freedom, oh freedom; Mubarak's regime is standing between us and you," the demonstrators chanted in downtown Cairo.

The day's protests began downtown and spread to the port city of Alexandria and on to the northeastern city of Suez, where violent clashes with police left two demonstrators dead. An Egyptian policeman was killed in Cairo, where Arabic satellite news channels broadcast images of police dragging demonstrators through the streets.

For much of the day, Egyptian authorities had demonstrated unusual tolerance in allowing the demonstrations to take place. Organizers said they were seeking to emulate the events in Tunisia, where a popular revolt over unemployment, lack of opportunity and hopelessness in young people ended the rule of Zine el-Abidine Ben Ali.

Similar discontent has long pervaded Egypt, a country of 86 million, where a small, wealthy elite has thrived under the autocratic government headed by Mubarak since 1981, but where nearly half the population lives at or under the United Nations poverty line.

The mood turned sour in Cairo late Tuesday when demonstrators clashed with police outside of the Egyptian Museum, throwing rocks and bringing down a police kiosk before backing away with appeals for non-violence. Later, police attacked the crowd with water cannons and tear gas and, in some cases, beat protesters after demonstrators hurled stones, the Associated Press reported.

Apart from Mubarak's ouster, the demonstrators called for the removal of the government headed by Ahmed Nazif and the disbanding of Egypt's parliament.

People put flowers at the site of Monday's blast at Domodedovo Airport near Moscow, as others wait to go through a security check to enter the airport on Tuesday.

Russian leaders fault airport after bombing

By Will Englund and Kathy Lally
The Washington Post

MOSCOW — Assigning blame in the wake of the suicide bombing at Domodedovo Airport, Russian leaders Tuesday drew a clear line between those responsible for security at the airport and those whose job it is to fight terrorism nationally.

Russian President Dmitry Medvedev described airport security as "chaos," and a criminal investigation that could target Domodedovo's management was launched. But when Medvedev later met with leaders of the Federal Security Service (FSB), which is charged with preventing terrorism, he made no mention in his public remarks of the agency's inability to stop Monday's attack. Instead, he praised its record.

Thirty-five people were killed at the airport when a suicide bomber detonated explosives in a reception area where drivers and others wait for incoming passengers on international flights. Between 110 and 125 people were hospitalized; government agencies continued to disagree on the exact number.

One report said there were two bombers, a man and a woman, but others described a lone man. Sources told Russian wire agencies that the FSB had been on the lookout for a terrorist attack at an airport, but because it was expecting women to be the perpetrators, it missed the bomber.

Prime Minister Vladimir

Putin is a veteran of the FSB and its predecessor, the KGB, and under him the agency has achieved unparalleled clout within the government. Critics say it has grown so powerful that it is beyond reproach and now beyond even the Kremlin's control.

Medvedev met with top officials of the FSB on Tuesday morning and sounded a tough line — but not toward the agency. "You cannot be too soft with bandits. It was another and very cruel challenge to our society and the state in general," he said. "We have to do everything toward finding, exposing and prosecuting the bandits who committed this crime, and the dens of these bandits, no matter how well they are hidden, should be eliminated."

"The FSB and law enforcement bodies have sufficient experience in such operations. We must act."

Putin said Tuesday that "retribution is inevitable" for the attack. "I have no doubt that this crime will be resolved."

Both men have said these sorts of things after previous terrorist acts, even as the number of attacks in Russia, many of which attract little attention, has been increasing sharply.

Each major attack brings a strengthening of central authority, said Ilya Yashin, the leader of the youth wing of Solidarity, an opposition party. "And yet we have bombs in the center of Russia," he said. "Not a single Russian has a feeling of security."

Guantanamo detainee gets life sentence in embassy bomb plot

By Tom Hays and Larry Neumeister
Associated Press writers

NEW YORK — The first, and possibly the last, Guantanamo detainee to have a U.S. civilian trial was sentenced to life in prison Tuesday for his role in the 1998 U.S. embassy bombings in Africa, a case that nearly unraveled when the defendant was convicted on just one of more than 280 counts.

Ahmed Ghailani, who served as Osama bin Laden's cook and bodyguard after the bombings in Tanzania and Kenya, sought leniency, claiming he was tortured at a secret CIA detention site after his arrest in Pakistan seven years ago. But U.S. District Judge Lewis A. Kaplan imposed the maximum sentence, saying that whatever Ghailani suffered "pales in comparison to the suffering and the horror" caused by the nearly simultaneous attacks, which killed 224 people and injured thousands more.

Ghailani, 36, was convicted last month of conspiring to destroy government buildings. Prosecutors said he bought a truck used in the Tanzanian attack, stored and concealed detonators, sheltered an al-Qaida fugitive and delivered hundreds of pounds of TNT to the African terror cell.

His trial at a lower Manhattan courthouse had been viewed as a test for President Barack Obama's aim of putting other terror detainees — including self-professed Sept. 11 mastermind Khalid Sheikh Mohammed — on trial on U.S. soil. His hands are tied, however — at least in the short term — because lawmakers have prohibited the Pentagon from transferring detainees to the U.S.

The prosecution of Ghailani is considered a success by supporters of civilian trials for detainees at the prison on the U.S. Navy base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Critics, however, say it showed that such trials are too risky.

Attorney General Eric Holder said the sentencing "shows yet again the strength of the American justice system in holding terrorists accountable for their actions."

But House Judiciary Committee Chairman Lamar Smith, R-Texas, called the case "a near disaster" because Ghailani was only convicted of one of 285 counts.

Guantanamo once held nearly 800 detainees, mostly suspected militants captured in and around Afghanistan. Most have been released to other countries but about 170 remain. Five detainees have been convicted at Guantanamo through military tribunals.

Ghailani, wearing a blue dress shirt and showing no emotion, chose not to speak in the packed courtroom Tuesday. Before sentencing he bowed his head, closed his eyes and gripped the edge of the defense table with both hands as survivors and victims' loved ones spoke behind him — some in tears, many asking the judge to show no mercy.

"The pain is with me every day," said Sue Bartley, who lost her husband, Julian Leotis Bartley Sr., then U.S. consul general to Kenya, and her son, Julian "Jay" Bartley Jr. They were among 12 Americans killed in the bombings.

James Ndeda, a Kenyan who suffered a skull fracture and chronic eye and back problems in that country's bombing, said he "would sentence Ghailani to hell." As an alternative, he told Kaplan, "I believe one year for each death is a fair sentence."

In seeking a life sentence, prosecutors cited confessions — none heard by jurors — that Ghailani gave following his arrest in Pakistan in 2004 as proof he was a fixer for the al-Qaida cell that hatched the plot.

The defense said a harsh sentence would be unfair because Ghailani had been traumatized by the CIA's "enhanced interrogation techniques."

Drug Free Workplace • EOE

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 26, the 26th day of 2011. There are 339 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Jan. 26, 1861, Louisiana passed an Ordinance of Secession, 113-17, at the state capitol in Baton Rouge, becoming the sixth state to break free from the United States.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1788, the first European settlers in Australia, led by Capt. Arthur Phillip, landed in present-day Sydney.

In 1837, Michigan became the 26th state.

In 1841, Britain formally occupied Hong Kong, which the Chinese had ceded to the British.

In 1870, Virginia rejoined the Union.

In 1911, the Richard Strauss opera “Der Rosenkavalier” (The Cavalier of the Rose) premiered in Dresden, Germany.

In 1942, the first American expeditionary force to go to Europe during World War II went ashore in Northern Ireland.

In 1950, India officially proclaimed itself a republic as Rajendra Prasad took the oath of office as president.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy appointed Dr. Janet G. Travell to be his personal physician; she was the first woman to hold the job.

In 1979, former Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller died in New York at age 70.

In 1996, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton testified before a grand jury connected to the Whitewater probe.

Ten years ago: Lacrosse coach Diane Whipple, 33, was attacked and killed by two huge dogs belonging to neighbors outside her apartment in San Francisco. (One of the dogs’ owners, Marjorie Knoller, is serving 15 years to life in prison for second-degree murder; her husband, Robert Noel, served just over two years for involuntary manslaughter.) A devastating earthquake hit the Indian sub-continent, killing some 20,000 people. Joseph Kabila was sworn in as Congo’s president, following the assassination of his father, Laurent Kabila.

Five years ago: Saudi Arabia recalled its ambassador from Denmark to protest caricatures of the prophet Muhammad published in a Danish newspaper. (Protests spread across the Muslim world for weeks, and dozens of people were killed.) Confronted by Oprah Winfrey on her syndicated talk show, author James Frey acknowledged lies in his addiction memoir “A Million Little Pieces.”

One year ago: Toyota suspended U.S. sales of several popular vehicle models to fix sticking accelerator pedals; the suspension was on top of a recall of 23 million vehicles. Louis Auchincloss, 92, a prolific author of fiction and non-fiction, died in New York.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"There is not enough time to do all the nothing we want to do."

— Bill Watterson

At no-trump, declarer normally attacks his longest suit, because that is where he rates to establish more tricks than anywhere else. One reason for not doing so might be that he doesn't have time to do everything he needs to do. One such example was submitted by Pedro Paulo Assumpcao of Brazil as an entry to the BOLS bridge-prize competition.

Playing three no-trump, you must develop five tricks in the minors, but you have only one heart stopper left, so you can let the defenders in just once. If you attack clubs and lose the lead to East, a heart will come back. Even though you can now establish the clubs, you have only eight tricks. You don't have enough tempos to establish your ninth trick in diamonds, because West will step up with the ace and cash the setting tricks in hearts.

What you must do is lead a low diamond at trick two. Now if West ducks, you win the king, cross to the spade king, and run the club nine, which loses to the queen. Back comes a heart, which you win, and now you run the club eight. When that holds, you have your nine tricks: four clubs, two hearts, two spades and one diamond.

If West rises with the diamond ace at trick two and clears hearts, you can take four diamond tricks so long as the suit breaks 3-3 or the J-10 is doubleton. In either case you will need only one club trick for the contract.

SOUTH		AK
♠ K 8 6	♥ A K	♦ Q 9 8 5 3	♣ 9 8 2

Vulnerable: East-West

The bidding:

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds:

♠ A 7 4	♥ 7 5 4	♦ K 6	♣ A J 10 6 5

South	West	North	East
1♣	1♥	1♠	Pass
2♠	Pass	3♣	Pass

ANSWER: The three-club call is a try for game, not an attempt to improve the partscore, and is forcing. The one-spade bid promised five (with four he would have doubled instead), so the fact that you have only three trumps is not critical. Rather than signing off or jumping to game, you might bid three diamonds, suggesting an in-between hand for your partner, with a diamond feature, to let him decide what to do.

DEAR ABBY: I have an issue that has me concerned, and I need some expertise. I have a problem with anger. I don't know what triggers it. It happens out of the blue sometimes.

I have never struck out in anger toward another person, but people have witnessed my outbursts and seemed taken aback by the behavior. The instances occur every month or two.

I'm a nice guy. I would bend over backward to help someone if I could. My verbal explosions contradict who I am inside. Do you have any suggestions on what I can do to control my temper in these situations?

— HOTHEAD

IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR HOTHEAD: Anger is a normal emotion. Everyone has experienced it at one time or another. When primitive men and women were faced with a potential threat, they reacted instinctively with either fear or anger. It was nature's way of enabling us to run away or fight back. Even infants display anger by screaming or holding their breath until they turn red. And we've all seen older children throw tantrums, holler and throw things.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Whatever is causing your angry outbursts, it is important to analyze what has been triggering them. Being out of work, unable to pay one's bills or feeling unfairly treated can arouse feelings of anger. Being hurt emotionally by someone can cause it, too. People have been known to become angry if their beliefs or values are questioned or threatened.

Low self-esteem can also cause people to feel easily threatened. Many people who suffer from chronic low self-esteem feel they must continually prove themselves. To compensate for their feelings of inadequacy, they are driven to "win every battle," whether at sports or in an argument.

People who are overly tired have been known to lash out without real provocation. Being physically ill can have the same effect. (You can break that cycle by simply explaining that you're not feeling well and ask for patience because your temper is short at such times.)

Depression, drugs and alcohol abuse have long been known to cause people to lose control of their emotions and say — and do — things they later regret. I publish a booklet, "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It" that was created to help people learn to control their anger. For people of all ages, it is a kind of survival guide to help them understand their anger and appropriately deal with it. It can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus a check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds), to Dear Abby — Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price.

Most of us have been trained from early childhood to suppress anger. But it is even more important to learn to express it in ways that are constructive rather than destructive. Anger can be a positive emotion if it is channeled in the right direction. Uncontrolled, it can be a killer.

Now that we have become somewhat — one hopes — civilized adults, the challenge we face when something angers us is how to deal with it effectively and constructively, rather than thoughtlessly reacting.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF JANUARY 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: When you want something, you are willing to work like a dog until you have it. In the year ahead, you may be more ambitious than usual and more astute about business matters. April may be a particularly good month in which to make important connections in the business world or to obtain recognition within a group, club or organization. You can be inspired to do bigger and better things in August, but may feel less pressured to pursue your aspirations, so that may be a good time to take a well-deserved vacation. November is an excellent time for significant financial or career decisions.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Step up to the starting gate or risk falling to the back of the pack. It's time to roll up your sleeves and get down to business. Aggression is the key to your success, as resting on your laurels will get you nowhere.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Kind words can only take you so far. You've found a situation where flattery will come off as phony, so your only hope of success is to just be honest and sincere. Do all in your power to honor deadlines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A treadmill is wonderful exercise, but it doesn't really get you anywhere. Break away from routines and use abstract ideas to find the solutions to today's problems. Put your keen eye for detail to good use.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The most complex problems often have the simplest solutions. If you feel overwhelmed, it may be best to take a few laps around the block and return to your task with a clear head. Make sure that essential purchases really are essential.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may not be able to touch bottom in the deep ocean, but you can at least tread water. A project may make you feel like you're in over your head. All you can do is your best and try to stay afloat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Too much of anything is not healthy. You may be confident in your professional abilities, but everyone needs to take a break once in awhile. Take a step back from tedious projects just to get your bearings, and then finish the job.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your eyes open, especially when someone tries to pull the wool over them. A romantic interest may be taking you for a ride and it may be time to lay down the law. Keep your head out of the clouds and into your work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can't change horses in the middle of the race. Don't let anyone change your opinions, no matter how persuasive their arguments may be. Agree to disagree. If you haven't caught the carrot dangling in front of your nose by now, you're not going to.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take things as they come. When faced with multiple tasks, prioritize them from most to least importance and proceed accordingly. Remember that the tortoise beat the hare by being slow but steady.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be all business. Some people are immune to friendly chitchat and the only way to get through to them is by being a consummate professional. Being consistent and diligent always pays off in the end.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Listen to the little voices. If you feel doubt about a situation, it may be wise to postpone or just call the whole thing off. Don't forget about obligations or promises, as others are depending on you to come through for them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stay within the budget. Frivolous spending defeats the whole purpose of a budget, so, as painful as it may be, leave the piggy bank alone. An investment seems enticing, but there's no point in taking a chance with your financial security.

WOLVERINE WIN

Wood River girls trip up Twin Falls

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The road to the Class 4A state girls basketball tournament runs through Hailey.

Wood River made sure of that Tuesday, using tenacious defense, patient offense and unrelenting will to knock off Twin Falls 47-36 at Baun Gymnasium.

The Wolverines (15-2, 8-2 Great Basin) clinched a share of the conference title with Twin Falls (15-4, 8-2), but earned the top seed for next week's district tournament by virtue of completing the season sweep of the Bruins.

"We stuck to our game plan a lot better than we have in some of our games," said Wood River forward Haylee Thompson, who scored a game-high 16 in the win. "Things didn't always work offensively but as long as stopped them we were happy. Coach always says defense is the one thing we can control."

Time and again Thompson slipped away from her defender and found open space beneath the basket. Once she collected a fast-break pass from Kaitana Martinez and in one fluid motion caught, pivoted 360 degrees and laid it in.

CSI men crack Top 10

Eagles prepare for road stretch

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

The Golden Eagles are back in the Top 10.

The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team jumped to No. 8 in this week's NJCAA Division I Men's Basketball Poll. The ranking is CSI's highest since being No. 7 on Nov. 7, 2008.

"It's a good compliment for these guys and the hard work they've put in this year," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar.

The 20-2 Golden Eagles (6-1 Scenic West Athletic Conference) are one of only four NJCAA Division I squads with 20 wins and hold a two-game lead in the SWAC standings.

"I think these guys have worked hard and they deserve it," said Gosar. "They've done everything that we need them to do."

Sophomore point guard Darius Smith said seeing Tuesday's rankings "put a smile on my face. It just shows the improvement and growth of our team."

The Eagles are one of the nation's top scoring teams at 98.5 points per game and have eight players averaging 7.1 points or more.

"It might be a different inside guy that carries the load and a different perimeter guy that pair up," said Gosar. "But it just seems like we've got some options to scoring the ball and that's really helped us on nights when our starters aren't shooting the ball so well."

That proved true last Saturday when CSI routed then-No. 13 Salt Lake Community College 97-71 despite its three starting guards shooting a combined 27 percent.

CSI visits No. 13 North Idaho College (19-3, 4-3 SWAC) on Saturday. The Cardinals had won 38 straight regular-season games on their home floor, although that number is no longer valid after NIC was forced to forfeit all victories from the 2008-09 and 2009-10 seasons due to sanctions regarding former player Guy-Marc Michel.

Sophomore Kenny Buckner, center, and the CSI men's basketball team are ranked No. 8.

Minico girls rally, stun Jerome in OT

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — With their team down 19 points at halftime, some Minico fans headed for the exits.

Too bad, because they missed an incredible comeback.

The Minico girls basketball team rallied from a 21-point deficit to beat Jerome 49-43 in overtime.

The outcome created a tie between the Spartans (9-10 overall, 5-5 Great Basin Conference) and Tigers (11-8, 5-5) for the third seed in the Class 4A District IV tournament. The seeding will be decided by a coin flip.

Taylor O'Connell scored 10 of her 15 points in the third quarter to help bring Minico back. O'Connell also nailed a 3-point-er with 32 seconds left in regulation to give her team a two-point lead.

But Jerome's Carrie Thibault, who finished with 15 points, drove the lane for the tying bucket with 15 seconds remaining and the Tigers clamped down defensively to keep Minico from getting a good look on the other end to force overtime.

Minico quickly took control in the extra period as Melinda Martinez and Micaela Merrill hit back-to-back jumpers.

The Spartans' win avenges their 40-36 loss at Jerome on Jan. 6, a game in which Jerome had to rally from an eight-point deficit to win.

Jerome grapplers pin down Canyon Ridge in dual

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

Jerome and Canyon Ridge might be creating a new wrestling rivalry.

Unfortunately for the Riverhawks, the Tigers showed off their impressive depth Tuesday night, winning nine matches to take the dual 45-28.

"They always have a good, big team with tough wrestlers," said Canyon Ridge wrestler Connor Stubblefield. "But I'm pretty sure we could have done better than we did tonight. I think we were nervous and not exactly ready."

Eric Ayala (103), Kaden Loper (119), Nick Thorne (135), Zach Argyle (145), Joe

Carey

Stubblefield

Carey (152), Eric Finley (171), Jade Parsons (215) and Layne Lasike (285) all won for the Tigers, while Joe Maicke (189) won by forfeit.

Carey escaped with a narrow 6-5 win over Braydon Metcalf in a back-and-forth affair.

Carey dominated early, picking Metcalf up in the air and slamming him down on the ground to gain advantage. But Metcalf battled back against a tired Carey in the third period, nearly getting a pin.

"I was really nervous. Metcalf is a good kid. He's really progressed a lot in the past year. I just knew I had to keep my nerves down," Carey said. "I knew as long as he wasn't on his feet, he wasn't going to throw me. I just tried to keep moving on bottom and did what I could to stay off my back."

There were still bright spots for the Riverhawks.

It's been a resurgent and determined season for Perez, who missed the second half of his junior campaign after breaking his arm snowboarding.

"I've definitely learned not to snowboard during the wrestling season," Perez joked.

After successfully healing, Perez trained and wrestled all summer in preparation for his senior year with hopes of placing at state in February.

"Being a senior, everyone looks up to you," Perez said. "This season, we've really emphasized family and there's not a cooler feeling than standing in the ring and having every one on the team cheering for you."

Canyon Ridge also got wins from Stubblefield (112), Alex LeBlanc (125), Riley

McLain (140) and Chase Smith (160).

Stubblefield, sporting a new bleached-blond hair-do after losing a bet with his sister, pinned Shane Baird in the first period. He dominated the entire period and had Baird in his grasp with a near-pin for 30 seconds before finally putting the hammer down.

"The ref kept getting ready (to slap the mat). I was finally able to turn him," Stubblefield said. "I went in with the mindset that I had to win. I've been kind of on a downer lately and losing at tournaments. I just thought, 'I can't keep that up' and went in aggressive and got the win."

It was the first dual between the two schools this season and Parsons, who pinned Siyavash Askari in the 215-pound weight class, said it's fun having another school to build a rivalry with.

"They wrestled well tonight, but I'm proud of the way we wrestled tonight and got the job done," Parsons said. "Now we have another rivalry in Twin Falls."

Jerome 45, Canyon Ridge 28

103 pounds: Eric Ayala, Jerome, pinned Gage Kepner, 3:12; 112: Connor Stubblefield, Canyon Ridge, pinned Shane Baird, 1:38; 119: Kaden Loper, Jerome, pinned Jacob Merkle, 1:39; 125: Alex LeBlanc, Canyon Ridge, pinned Brandon Hall, 1:19; 130: Johnny Perez, Canyon Ridge, pinned Tanner Couch, 1:22; 135: Nick Thorne, Jerome, pinned Bruce Busch, 1:54; 140: Riley McLain, Canyon Ridge, won by T-Fall Edgar; Lora, 21-8; 145: Zach Argyle, Jerome, dec. Kaleb Price, 8-5; 152: Joe Carey, Jerome, dec. Braydon Metcalf, 6-5; 160: Chase Smith, Canyon Ridge, pinned Kolton Parsons, 2:47; 171: Eric Finley, Jerome, maj. dec. CRHS girls top Burley

Times-News

Canyon Ridge ended its Great Basin Conference schedule on a high-note, beating Burley 42-26 and creating a logjam in the conference's girls basketball standings heading into the district tournament next week.

"This a huge conference win for us going into the tournament. We took care of the ball tonight and were patient on the offensive side of the ball and did a good job making our free throws, which we didn't do well last time we played them," said Canyon Ridge coach Kim Wray.

Breyanna Burk led the Riverhawks with 11 points and Colleen Joslin added eight. Kaci Carpenter led Burley (3-16) with 15 points.

Canyon Ridge (7-12) finishes the regular season at undefeated Rigby on Thursday.

The Riverhawks and Bobcats are now tied at 2-8 in the conference and await a coin flip this morning between Jerome and Minico, which are both at 5-5, that will settle both ties for district tournament seeding.

Celtics rip hapless Cavs

BOSTON — Paul Pierce scored 24 and Kendrick Perkins returned for the first time since injuring his knee in the NBA finals to help the Boston Celtics beat Cleveland 112-95 on Tuesday night and send the Cavaliers to their 18th consecutive loss.

Perkins, who had offseason surgery to repair his anterior cruciate ligament, had seven points and six rebounds in 16 minutes.

Ray Allen scored 18 points and Rajon Rondo had 10 assists for Boston, which bounced back from a loss to the lowly Washington Wizards.

It was the Cavs' first time back in Boston since losing Game 6 of the Eastern Conference semi-finals to end the LeBron James era in Cleveland. That was the second time in three years the Celtics knocked the Cavaliers out of the playoffs.

NUGGETS 120, WIZARDS 109

WASHINGTON — Carmelo Anthony scored 23 points, Nene and Al Harrington each scored 21 and the Nuggets beat the Wizards.

It was the sixth win in the last eight games for Denver, which began a five-game road trip with a strong performance that comes amid continued trade talk surrounding Anthony.

Anthony shot just 8 for 20, but six Nuggets scored in double figures. Arron Afflalo had 18 points, Ty Lawson added 17 and Chauncey Billups finished with 15.

MAVERICKS 112, CLIPPERS 105

DALLAS — Jason Terry scored a season-high 28 points and J.J. Barea added 25, lifting the Mavericks to the victory.

The performance by the reserve guards helped Dallas erase an early 15-point deficit. The Mavs turned things around with a 23-6 spurt in the third quarter, then put together a 14-0 run in the fourth.

The Clippers announced during the first half that a wrist injury will sideline Eric Gordon for at least three weeks. He's their leading scorer at 24.1 points, eighth-best in the NBA.

Quick start lifts No. 1 Buckeyes

COLUMBUS, Ohio — If this was a big test, then No. 1 Ohio State aced it.

William Buford had 19 points, Jared Sullinger added 17 and No. 1 Ohio State played almost flawlessly in rolling past No. 12 Purdue 87-64 on Tuesday night.

Jon Diebler had 13 points and a career-high eight rebounds, Deshaun Thomas added 13 points, David Lighty scored 10 points and Aaron Craft had 11 points and six assists for Ohio State (21-0, 8-0 Big Ten), which ran its record to 62-4 all-time when atop the polls.

The Buckeyes and No. 4 San Diego State (20-0) are the only unbeaten teams remaining in Division I.

JaJuan Johnson had 22 points for Purdue (17-4, 6-2).

NO. 5 CONNECTICUT 76, MARQUETTE 68

MILWAUKEE — Freshman Jeremy Lamb had a career-best 24 points and No. 5 Connecticut overcame a tough shooting game from Kemba Walker with a 13-0 run late in the second half to beat Marquette 76-68 on Tuesday night.

Connecticut (17-2, 5-2 Big East) won its third road game in five tries this season after going 2-10 away from home last season. The Huskies proved to be too tough down the stretch, holding Marquette (13-8, 4-4) without a field goal for nearly 10 minutes.

Walker finished with a season-low 14 points on 5-of-16 shooting. The dynamic junior guard came in averaging 25 points per game, second in the nation, but still had a big impact with nine assists and six rebounds.

NO. 6 KANSAS 82, COLORADO 78

BOULDER, Colo. — Freshman Josh Selby scored 17 points and No. 6 Kansas scored its last nine points from the free throw line to hold off Colorado 82-78 on Tuesday night.

The Jayhawks (19-1, 4-1 Big 12) bounced back from their first home loss since Alec Burks had 25 points for Colorado (14-7, 3-3), which had its 14-game home winning streak snapped.

SETON HALL 90, NO. 9 SYRACUSE 68

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Jeremy Hazell led a long-range Seton Hall barrage with 28 points and the Pirates handed Syracuse its third straight loss.

Syracuse (18-3, 5-3 Big East) had lost two straight to top 10 conference foes, on the road at Pittsburgh a week ago and on Saturday at home to Villanova.

NO. 24 FLORIDA 104, GEORGIA 91, 2OT

ATHENS, Ga. — Chandler Parsons scored half of his 18 points in the second overtime for Florida.

Trey Thompkins put back a missed shot just ahead of the buzzer at the end of regulation, capping Georgia's rally from an eight-point deficit in the final 3 minutes. Florida (16-4, 5-1 Southeastern Conference) forced a second overtime when Erving Walker hit a long 3-pointer with 1 second remaining.

fired up. They were playing harder. As we got closer, they lost some of their emotion. We told (the players at Both teams finish the regular season with nonconference home games on Thursday. Minico will play Preston, and Jerome will face Filer.

Wood River

In another instance of things simply going Wood River's way, Thompson rebounded a missed free throw from Martinez and, feeling contact, threw the ball back up blindly toward the basket with her left hand. It banked high off the glass and in.

"I wasn't even looking at the basket," said the right-handed junior. "I just figured I'd chuck it up there, maybe get a foul or something. I didn't even know it had gone in until I heard everyone screaming."

Martinez led from the point and scored 12 points, including six critical ones from the foul line in the final quarter.

Wood River led 35-30 heading into the final quarter, and the score stayed that way for more than 51/2 minutes, until Cheyenne Swanson hit a jumper from the left elbow to push the lead to seven.

Try as they might, the Bruins couldn't get any momentum going and their guests salted away a precious road win, the only thing previous lacking on an impressive season-long resume.

"We knew we had to deal with their ball pressure, and we wanted to make sure we pressured the ball when they had it," said Martinez. "We had a lot of confidence. They're a good team and this is a tough place to play, but the point (lies in) believing you can do it."

Jazlyn Nielsen scored 11 to lead Twin Falls, which led twice and neither time by more than a point.

Each time the Bruins took the lead, Wood River answered almost immediately.

"We just never seemed on the same page," said Nielsen.

Clijsters, Zvonareva into Aussie semis

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Kim Clijsters moved into an Australian Open semifinal showdown with second-ranked Vera Zvonareva, beating Agnieszka Radwanska 6-3, 7-6 (4) today as air force planes flew in formation overhead as part of celebrations for the national holiday.

Cannons went off earlier when Zvonareva started the Australia Day proceedings at Rod Laver Arena with a 6-2, 6-4 win over Petra Kvitova.

Thursday's semifinal will be a rematch of the last U.S. Open final, where Clijsters collected her third Grand Slam title.

Clijsters is the only Grand Slam winner into the women's semis, although she's still seeking her first major title outside of America. No. 1-ranked Caroline Wozniacki and China's Li Na meet in the other half of the draw.

"I hope the experience can help me a little bit," Clijsters said. "But there are some tough players out there, we have Nos. 1, 2, 3 still in and Li Na has been playing really well. So it is going to be really tough.

"I lost to Vera at Wimbledon last year, I beat her in finals of U.S. Open." Zvonareva has lost the last two Grand Slam finals, to Clijsters in New York and Serena Williams at Wimbledon.

Clijsters was up a set and a break before Radwanska rallied, winning three straight games to lead 5-4 with a chance to serve for the second set.

With six Royal Australian

Air Force "Roulettes" flying overhead, Clijsters converted her fourth break-point chance to tie it at 5 and the set went to a tiebreaker.

"I think the planes kind of took me up higher!" joked Clijsters, long a crowd favorite in Australia, where she's still called "Aussie Kim." She also was engaged for a time to former No. 1-ranked Lleyton Hewitt.

"Happy Australia Day everybody," she said in a salute to her supporters.

Clijsters now has reached the semifinals five times in Australia. Her best run remains her trip to the final in 2004, when she lost to fellow Belgian Justine Henin.

On Tuesday, Roger Federer was reluctant to talk about possibly playing Rafael Nadal in the Australian Open final, and with good reason.

After all, he's playing Novak Djokovic in the semi-finals.

Federer and Nadal have dominated the Grand Slam tournaments, winning 21 of the last 23 titles. But Djokovic is dangerous, and Federer knows his one-match-at-a-time mantra is sound strategy.

"He takes it to the opponent," Federer said.

Federer routed Stanislas Wawrinka 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 in the first all-Swiss quarterfinal at a major. Djokovic eliminated Wimbledon finalist Tomas Berdych 6-1, 7-6 (5), 6-1 on Tuesday night.

On the women's side, Wozniacki beat Francesca Schiavone 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 in one quarterfinal, and Li defeated Andrea Petkovic 6-2, 6-4 in the other.

Kim Clijsters reacts after winning a point against Agnieszka Radwanska during their quarterfinal match at the Australian Open tennis championships Wednesday in Melbourne, Australia, Wednesday.

Vick signs endorsement contract

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Vick is back pitching products.

Vick has signed his first endorsement contract since his release from prison. The Philadelphia Eagles' Pro Bowl quarterback inked a two-year contract with Unequal Technologies, a provider of the football pads Vick wore most of last season.

The deal will be announced on Thursday.

"We're real excited about it," chief executive officer Rob Vito said Tuesday. "Michael is good people. He paid his dues. President Obama reached out to him. He deserves an opportunity. This is what makes America so great. He's moved forward. He's a whole other person."

Vito said Vick is the company's first corporate spokesman. Terms of his deal weren't disclosed. But Vito said it's a "sizable" contract.

HORNUNG THINKS FAVRE WILL BE FORGIVEN

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Paul Hornung believes Brett Favre will one day be welcomed back with open arms by the Green Bay faithful. The Hall of Famer just thinks it will take time.

Having the Packers win a Super Bowl with another quarterback while Favre limps into retirement — perhaps for real this time — would help speed up the healing process.

"Then everybody will be over it," Hornung said with a laugh.

The former Green Bay star says Favre's departure from the team three seasons ago was difficult for all involved, but added those days seem like a distant memory now that the Packers are soaring under budding superstar Aaron Rodgers.

"He's getting better every game and he's the best quarterback in the league right now," Hornung said.

Rodgers will get a chance to prove it on the game's biggest stage when he leads Green Bay into the Super Bowl against the Pittsburgh Steelers on Feb. 6.

The 75-year-old Hornung is picking his old team — naturally — to beat the Steelers by a field goal and thinks this could be the start of a dynasty similar to the one he helped the team build in the 1960s, when coach Vince Lombardi led Green Bay to five NFL titles and victories in the first two Super Bowls.

NFL Awards on TV during Super Bowl week

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press NFL Awards for the 2010 season will be announced on NFL Network during Super Bowl week, culminating with the Most Valuable Player award on game day, Sunday, Feb. 6.

This marks the first time the awards will be showcased on a national network. Each one will be distributed by the AP as it is simultaneously announced on TV.

The winners were selected by a 50-member panel of the media covering the league.

The honors start with AP Comeback Player of the Year on Monday, Jan. 31, followed by:

- Offensive Player of the Year, Tuesday, Feb. 1.
- Coach of the Year, Wednesday, Feb. 2.
- Offensive and Defensive Rookie of the Year, Friday, Feb. 4.
- Defensive Player of the Year, Saturday, Feb. 5.

The awards will air all week on NFL Total Access at the Super Bowl, which begins at 7 p.m. EST. The MVP will be announced on NFL GameDay Morning at the Super Bowl pre-game show, which starts at 9 a.m. EST.

"We're elated to announce AP's annual pro football honors on the NFL Network in the run up to the Super Bowl," said Lou Ferrara, AP's vice president and managing editor for sports. "This will provide a showcase for the awards after years of building a strong and credible voting system for picking the winners."

The MVP award dates back to 1961, when Green Bay's Paul Hornung was the winner. The NFC champion Packers have prime contenders for the honor this year in linebacker Clay Matthews and quarterback Aaron Rodgers.

A quarterback has been voted MVP in each of the last three seasons: the Indianapolis Colts' Peyton Manning twice — he holds the overall record with four MVPs — and the New England Patriots' Tom Brady once.

Brady also is considered a front-runner this year, along with Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Michael Vick, Houston Texans running back Arian Foster, Atlanta Falcons wide receiver Roddy White, and two Chicago Bears, defensive end Julius Peppers and linebacker Brian Urlacher.

Brady, Vick, White and Foster figure to be major contenders for top offensive player.

BYU, SDSU showdown features top guards

PROVO, Utah (AP) — BYU's Jimmer Fredette is the small-town East Coast guard groomed by an older brother with help from inmates allowed to compete on prison recreational teams.

San Diego State's D.J. Gay is the ultimate California kid, raised just outside Los Angeles and taught the game by a father who started taking him to his own city rec games when he was 3.

Though their paths wouldn't cross until college, the ninth meeting between two of the nation's best point guards will be key in the biggest regular-season game of their careers.

"It's going to be crazy," Fredette said of tonight's showdown between fourth-ranked San Diego State and ninth-ranked BYU. "If we play well, our crowd will be into it. We need our crowd to rattle them a little bit. But it's going to be a great one."

San Diego State is 20-0. BYU is 19-1. Both are 5-0 in the Mountain West Conference. Bragging rights in the Mountain West are at stake along with perhaps seeding in the NCAA tournament.

As different as Fredette and Gay are, both point guards make their teams go.

"I think it will be a back-and-forth game between the two," said BYU forward Noah Hartsock, who will have his hands full with an SDSU front court that includes Player of the Year candidate Kawhi Leonard, 6-9 Malcolm Thomas and 6-8 Billy White.

"With San Diego State having a great front line, the (media) might overlook D.J., but he's a tremendous player. He's really one of the great team leaders and great energizers."

There's little question this will be a raucous one. The game has been sold out for more than a week, and more than 20 NBA scouts have descended on Provo.

Fredette expects the atmosphere to rival the Jan. 3, 2009, game between the Cougars and Wake Forest. BYU owned the nation's longest home-court winning streak at 53 games, but a few key plays were the difference as Wake Forest rallied for a 94-87 victory.

This will be the first-ever meeting in Provo between a Top 10 BYU team and Top 10 opponent.

While Fredette will do everything he can to keep the pace high, Gay will try to keep it under control.

That's just another difference between the two.

Fredette of Glens Falls, N.Y. — nicknamed Hometown USA — earned preseason All-America honors and made the Midseason Top 30 list for the Wooden Award.

San Diego State coach Steve Fisher admits Gay isn't even the best player on his own team — just the most important one. It's why Fisher named him captain without taking a team vote.

"(Gay) has been the lynchpin," Fisher said of the smallest player (6-0, 170 pounds) on the Aztecs roster. "He's been our point person. ... He keeps a level of composure that permeates throughout our locker room."

Since his days at Poly High in Sun Valley, Calif., Gay has shown he isn't afraid to take the big shots and knows when to elevate his game even if Fisher jokes that "his next dunk will be his first dunk."

Gay scored 30 in The Pit against New Mexico on Jan. 15, 20 against Air Force four days later and is shooting nearly 42 percent from beyond the arc.

He just hasn't quite lit up the scoreboard like the 6-2, 195-pound Fredette, who scored a school-record 49 against Arizona last season and has topped 40 points in two of the last three games.

Even Gay understands the mania Fredette is feeding with all those 3s.

"I'm gaining respect, but Jimmer's all over ESPN right now," Gay said. "You can't miss him."

"It doesn't faze me at all," added Gay, who has played in all 123 games since his arrival at San Diego State. "I congratulate him, but my focus is on doing what I have to do to get this team to win. If I have to score only two points and have eight assists, that's what I'm going to do."

Don't be surprised to see Gay play all 40 minutes even if it means another ice bath afterward to help him recover.

Last year he played all but one minute in the Mountain West Conference tournament.

Gay called that team title his proudest moment as a player.

"That was the first championship I'd ever won. That was a big deal to me," he said.

To get another means going through BYU, which has won nine straight since a Dec. 18 loss at UCLA and all eight at home this season.

"They basically ran us off the court last year," Gay said of BYU's 82-68 victory in Provo.

The NJCAA in December banned NIC from postseason play this season after ruling that Michel was ineligible because he played with a professional team in France prior to coming to Coeur d'Alene.

Michel signed with Indiana, but was ruled permanently ineligible by the NCAA before playing a game for the Hoosiers based on two factors — the professional contract and his enrollment in a French university, which means his NCAA eligibility will expire before he could satisfy the one-season and 10-game suspension that would have been imposed.

North Idaho appealed the ruling and got the postseason ban rescinded last week, but had to yield the wins claimed during Michel's time with the team.

This week's game is the first of five straight on the road for CSI, which won't play at home again until hosting NIC on Feb. 19.
