Idaho schools,
Medicaid face
$100M more in cuts

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — State lawmakers wrestling with an ever-changing budget deficit have been told to identify new cuts to public schools and Department of Health and Welfare programs that could top $100 million.

Rep. Maxine Bell and Sen. Dean Cameron, the budget committee heads, gave the leaders of the House and Senate education and health and welfare committees the bad news in a letter Thursday.

Even though a projected $185 million revenue shortfall has been trimmed to an estimated $137 million, the two biggest agencies by taxpayer dollars are likely suspects when it comes to bearing the burden of balancing the books.

Cameron and Bell have targeted a range of between $50 million to $81 million in cuts to the no-growth schools budget Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter proposed Jan. 10. And they think the current plan to slash $25 million from Medicaid funding may have to be doubled.

The governor’s budget “was too optimistic considering the recent news that we have received about revenues,” wrote Bell and Cameron, both Republicans. “It would be most helpful if your committee could prioritize your recommended cuts in order of importance.”

Bill would ban assisted suicide

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Some state legislators believe Idaho needs a ban on assisted suicide.

The legislation, introduced Friday in the Senate State Affairs Committee, would prevent people from assisting in another’s suicide, or attempted suicide, and make such help a felony.

The legislation comes amid a national push by proponents of physician-assisted suicide to make it a right, said the bill’s sponsor, Sen. Russ Fulcher, R-Meridian.

Idaho has been targeted by proponents as a state where that could happen, and the issue also has cropped up in Montana, Oregon and Washington, Fulcher said. Idaho lacks a law that makes assisted suicide a crime, he said, citing an opinion from the Idaho Attorney General’s office.

“We figured that it was wise to try to clarify that in code,” Fulcher said, adding that it’s crucial to have a law in place that prevents physician-assisted suicide.

WENDELL LANDMARK NEARS ITS END

Photos by ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Peter Dargt tears down a wall on the Wendell Milling and Elevator Co. building Friday in Wendell. A crew dismantled the 60-foot-tall elevator earlier in the week and work to dismantle the warehouses will continue in the weeks to come. The grain elevator had stood in Wendell since 1927.

Nearly century-old grain elevator being torn down for land sale

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Like Siamese twins, the two buildings stand joined by their interior wall. They’re all that’s left of the Wendell grain elevator and surrounding warehouses that have stood by the Union Pacific railroad since around 1917.

Piece by piece, the buildings are being dismantled; their bones lie on the frozen ground outside. The care put into salvaging each usable board, window and metal strip is apparent in the organized yard. Some of the wood will go to families to heat their homes during the winter, the big beams will be installed in a cabin and other large, well-hewn wood pieces will be shipped anywhere from Chicago to California.

Ray Strolberg, a friend of the family that owns the land that the Wendell Milling and Elevator Co. stands on, is leading the process of preparing the land to sell.

While the buildings were constructed somewhere around 1917, the 60-foot-tall grain elevator was erected in 1927 for the Wendell Milling and Elevator Co. Seeds from the elevator’s boom days are scattered in a colorful row inside one of the buildings. The white, pink, red and pinto beans weren’t the only crops coming through the buildings that functioned up until last July. Wheat, grain, barley and potatoes all spent time in the facility.

Ray Strolberg, a former insurance agent and friend of the family that owns the land, is overseeing the facility’s dismantling.

“If only these walls could talk, they would have so many interesting stories,” he said on Friday as he walked through one building built with a kit from Sears in the 1930s.

Strolberg pointed out seed cleaners with patents from the 1800s and the strong wood that makes up the interior and elevator compartments. The roof needs repair, he said, but it would cost too much to fix it. The elevator building isn’t conducive to the large farming equipment used now and so everything must go.

T.F. 4-H takes title of biggest in state

Almost 1,000 kids make development program

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The 4-H program in Twin Falls County took the crown of biggest in the state this year, despite the county having less than half the population of former champ Canyon County.

Not that it’s a competition, of course: University of Idaho Extension officials who operate the Twin Falls club jokingly call their 991 members, as compared to Canyon County’s 800, bragging rights.

“Maybe this will never happen again, so we need to make sure everyone knows,” 4-H program coordinator Teresa Tverdy said, letting out a laugh.

But it’s also in how the numbers are measured, said Tina Holmquist, Tverdy’s equal in Canyon County. Counting day camp and afterschool members put Canyon County participation into the 2,700 range, Holmquist said. Not that she’s counting — she touted the size of other counties’ participation as easily as Canyon’s.

Neither director could pinpoint why Twin Falls surged past Canyon, or even why numbers have steadily grown over the past several years. Tverdy and Twin Falls County 4-H director Rhea Lanting said the 200 members they gained over the past eight years could be from word-of-mouth or their expanding of 4-H projects into science and technology.

“There isn’t a day that goes by that I don’t have that gut-wrenching frustration over this,” Strolberg said, pausing by a window with a view of a red train car with Union Pacific stamped on its side. “The people of Wendell have been so wonderful in giving us guidance and although it’s sad to see it go, they are now excited about the demise because it will expose the city of Wendell to the freeway and may bring in an interested party because of the railroad,” he said. Strolberg plans April 1 as the final day of preparing to sell the 3.22 acres the facility sits on. He said workers started tearing the facility down in December, after he helped liquidate everything possible. The view from the second floor of one building overlooks the spot where the elevator once stood. The dirt is a mix of brown and black — remnants from a fire in the 1930s that left P.F. Ahlquist, owner of the elevators, with $250,000 in property damage. With each board and nail removed, a history rich in agriculture and Wendell culture is taken away. But much of it will live on in the pieces sold for homes that haven’t been built and historical societies awaiting more treasures of the past. Strolberg points to a strip of metal being torn from the wood. “There are 30 nails in a section,” he said with a chuckle. “We think they were paid by the nail back then.”

Blaine GOP to meet sheriff candidates

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Blaine County Republican Central Committee met Thursday to set the process for choosing nominees to replace retiring Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling until the 2012 election. “We’re going to invite the candidates to come to a meeting (in about two weeks),” said Ed Terrazas, committee chairman. The meeting will be open only to committee members. “We will interview each of them, let them present themselves to us, ask our questions.” Following the presentations and questions, the committee will vote for three candidates to forward to the Blaine County commissioners, who will choose an interim sheriff from those three. “We have a pretty solid list of people to look at,” Terrazas said. Femling is set to retire March 1, so the committee doesn’t want to hurry the process, he said. “We have time, so we want to make sure we’re doing the right thing.” The law requires that the sheriff must be at least 21 years old, a Blaine County resident for at least one year, and a U.S. citizen. The men who put themselves up for nomination are: Larry Clark, 49, who served 20 years with the Navy, then spent four years with the Sun Valley Police Department. Most recently, he has served with the Hailey Police Department for four years. Charles Cox, 26, who has been a Hailey police officer for six years. Brent Diehl, 48, who owns a Wood River Valley construction company. Steve England, 35, who served two years with the Navy. He started his law enforcement career with three years with the Bellevue Police Department, and has spent the past decade with the Hailey Police Department. Phil English, 60, moved to the Wood River Valley a few years ago after 34 years in law enforcement in Texas. Frank Hall, 68, flew helicopters in Vietnam and is a commercial pilot. He spent 30 years as an FBI special agent and still does consulting for the agency. Aaron Hughston, 41, who owns sporting goods store Tamarack Sports and has some law enforcement experience. Gene Ramsey, 61, chief deputy with the Blaine County Sheriff’s Office. He began his career as an Air Force military police officer, and has spent 33 years in law enforcement.

Tverdy said her program’s projects are still about 60 percent animal-related, be it raising dairy cows or rabbits. But the other 40 percent involve science and technology, with notable projects including backyard rockets or a replica windmill that demonstrates how the real thing works. “(Participation is) gradually going up and up with the science and technology,” Tverdy said. Lanting said Twin Falls’ project-in-a-day programs, which allow 4-H’ers to do things such as make bread or sew, bring folks in and pique child interest.

4-H VOLUNTEER AND MEMBERSHIP

Local 4-H clubs always want more adult volunteers and youth members. Adult volunteers must pass a background check; prior 4-H experience is not required. To volunteer or join up, contact your local University of Idaho Extension office.

“A lot of kids are able to get in, and then they want to do more in 4-H and beg their parents to let them,” Lanting said. Other 4-H clubs in the ag-centered Magic Valley are branching out as well, planning a wider variety of offerings while preserving their ag roots. Cassia County’s program has stayed within about 50 people of its current 550 membership total for the past few years, said Rosie Davids, program coordinator. She’s working on plans to recruit more urban children — through a possible archery tournament with other counties, for example. Minidoka County also stays fairly stable at about 350 kids each year. But 4-H coordinator Jeni Bywater said she’s happy with that, given the economic challenges her county has faced. Her program now offers

Idaho’s revenue picture is so volatile, some are comparing it to the ozone hole above Antarctica: It gets bigger, it shrinks a little, seemingly of its own volition. On Jan. 10, Otter spoke of a $35 million shortfall, which is painful but manageable. Just last Friday, the talk was of a $185 million shortfall, as the state was buffeted by unexpected news like potential rebates for wind farms. A week later, it has dropped by about $50 million, since the Legislature is unlikely to adopt what could have been expensive changes to the state tax code to conform to new federal laws Congress passed in December. What’s more, preliminary figures for tax revenue in January alone were $15 million above expectations, a trend that — if it holds — could further mitigate the need for austerity measures. The problem is, lawmakers who likely will start setting the budget the middle of this month won’t have the benefit of waiting to see how tax revenue fares through April, by far the biggest period for receipts. And uncertainty breeds caution. “We need to start setting budgets in two weeks,” said

Sen. Shawn Keough, R-Sandpoint and co-chairwoman of the budget writing committee. “As things are today, we need to cut to balance the budget.” There’s little robust discussion among dominant Republicans of raising revenue as an alternative to filling the gap, especially after this week. A $1.50 increase on fees for convicted criminals to help make up dwindling revenue at the Idaho state police academy was killed in the House, a clear sign that GOP hawks have their talons out. Instead, lawmakers, especially in the House, are talking more and more about tapping a portion of the $128.5 million in sales tax revenue that Idaho sent counties and cities in 2010. House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, says he hasn’t signed onto the idea just yet — it’s causing serious consternation among local government officials — but said he’s hearing more than whispers in his chamber. “There’s a perception out there that because their (county) budgets aren’t declining as rapidly because of the property tax, that maybe they ought to participate in backfilling schools,” Moyle said. Dan Chadwick, Idaho Association of Counties, didn’t immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

“There is a threat that if we don’t clarify it, that could be established as a right and I, for one, don’t want to see that happen,” he said. The bill doesn’t impact living wills, Fulcher said, and is solely tied to motive. “So if someone were to be charged under this bill then motive would have to be established that it was an assisted suicide,” Fulcher said. Susie Pouliot, chief executive officer of the Idaho

Medical Association, said in an interview that her organization supports the legislation, adding that it makes a strong distinction that protects health care professionals who are providing appropriate end-of-life care. The IMA does not support physician-assisted suicide, she said. Those who see it differently already have a presence in Idaho. Compassion & Choices, a Denver-based organization that advocates what it calls the “aid-in-dying movement” has an Idaho chapter formed in 2004 in Coeur d’Alene after meetings started in the mid-nineties. Bob Brown, the state chapter’s president, avoids using the term “physician-assisted suicide” and describes it in terms of cancer-stricken, suffering people who are dying and want to take medication to end it all, often while surrounded by family members. He takes exception to how opponents frame the issue. “It’s always described in terms that make it sound like we’re going to kill grandma and collect her money,” he said, adding that that’s not the intent. Fulcher’s bill, which has six co-sponsors, is modeled after Kentucky law in place since 1994. About 30 states already have bans against assisted suicide. Jury acquits taxi driver in rape case

Times-News

A Twin Falls County jury found Randolph King not guilty of rape Thursday, taking barely two hours to deliberate the case.

The trial, which began with jury selection on Tuesday, finished a day ahead of schedule. The 47-year-old Twin Falls man was accused of raping a female passenger of a King Allen Cab taxi he was driving in January 2010. Charges were filed in June, and King pleaded not guilty in September.

Jerome man accused of dragging woman

A 21-year-old Jerome man faces a charge of aggravated battery, accused of dragging a woman from a moving vehicle in December.

Zachary W. Dudley was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court Wednesday and faces a preliminary hearing on the charge on Feb. 14.

According to the police report, Twin Falls police arrived at the 400 block of Harrison Street on Dec. 26 to find Regina Richardson badly injured. She later told police that while inside her residence she heard the sound of breaking glass. When she went to check, she observed a man breaking windows out of a vehicle in the driveway. Upon being sighted, the man ran to a pickup truck waiting in the roadway.

Richardson ran after the truck and tried to grab the man, who got in on the passenger side. She said the man grabbed her wrist and held it while she was dragged for up to five seconds. The report noted that she received numerous abrasions and suffered a broken wrist.

Richardson identified one of the truck passengers and later identified Dudley from a photo lineup as the man who grabbed her wrist.

Rupert man gets 6 years for beating toddler

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Neither retained jurisdiction nor probation was granted for Nathan Mort. Just prison.

When it was time for the 31-year-old Rupert man to make a statement Friday in Twin Falls County 5th Judicial District Court, he stood and turned to face the family of the 3-year-old girl he beat into a coma and nearly to death.

"There's nothing I can say or do to minimize what I've done," he said. "I pray she'll forgive me for what I've done."

After, Judge Randy Stoker, who said that the crime "warrants punishment for punishment's sake," pronounced the sentence: six to 15 years in state prison for aggravated battery. Stoker also levied a $5,000 fine and $210,085.87 in restitution. Mort will receive credit for the nearly one year he's already served in Twin Falls County Jail.

Prior to sentencing, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs reviewed the events of the morning of Feb. 19, 2010, including witness testimony from Dr. Michael Sexton, who works as a child abuse pediatrician at St. Luke's Boise Medical Center.

Sexton said the child was in a coma and in danger of dying when she was brought to Boise via air ambulance that day.

Emergency personnel responded to an apartment at 2026 Elizabeth Blvd. in Twin Falls for a report that a child had fallen down some stairs. The child, who is the daughter of Mort's then-girlfriend, was rushed to the hospital with massive internal injuries. Investigators and doctors didn't believe her injuries were the result of a spill down the stairs, which was Mort's initial story.

Within hours, Mort changed that story, admitting that he punched the child multiple times in the abdomen. Mort was arrested and charged with aggravated battery and felony injury to a child. He pleaded not guilty in May, then changed his plea the next month, admitting to the battery charge. The injury to a child charge was dropped.

Loebs, who described the crime as "a particularly savage beating," asked the court for the full 15 years of prison it could give Mort. He noted that on Feb. 19, he spent hours on the phone with law enforcement as many believed the child would die.

"Because of the doctors, we're not here for a murder sentencing," Loebs said.

Defense counsel William Hollifield argued for probation, or at least a 180-day retained jurisdiction program.

Glen Schorzman, 65, of Marsing, Idaho, passed away on Feb. 3, 2011, following a brief illness.

Glen was born in and raised on a farm in Burley, Idaho. He graduated as salutatorian of his high school class, joined Delta Chi fraternity, and earned a Bachelor of Science degree in chemical engineering from the University of Idaho. Glen retired from Texaco after 35 years in Washington and Texas, returning to his beloved Idaho in 2003.

Glen spent the past several years living his dream, tending his grapes on the Snake River, learning the art of wine making, participating in local politics, playing softball, bowling and doting on his grandchildren.

Glen was preceded in death by his parents, Walter and Della Schorzman. Glen is survived by the love of his life, Valerie Schorzman; a son, Bryan, his wife, Emmy, their children, Evan, Eva and Eamon; a daughter, Elyse, her husband, Ben, their children, Grace, Graham and Declan. He is also survived by his sister, Jeanie Hobbs, her husband Ben, their children, Ryanne and Amber; his sister, Mary Hammond, her husband Lou; and his brother, Fred.

A viewing will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 6, 2011, at Alsip and Persons Funeral Chapel, 404 10th Ave. S., Nampa, Idaho.

A funeral service will be held at 10 a.m. Monday, Feb. 7, 2011, at Trinity Lutheran Church, 8 S. Midland Boulevard, Nampa, Idaho, followed immediately by a graveside service at Hillcrest Memorial Gardens, 15862 S. Indiana Ave., Caldwell, Idaho.

Thomas Bennett Cserepes, born Feb. 14, 1950, in Ketchikan, Alaska, died Feb. 3, 2011, surrounded by family and friends.

Preceded in death by wife, Wendy Cserepes; sons, Tommy Cserepes and Kristopher Cserepes. Survived by son, Donald Boman-Cserepes (Jennifer), Tumwater, Wash.; grandchildren, John Boman, Twin Falls, Idaho; Nicole (Nick) Fackrell, Camp LeJeune, N.C.; Tommy, Ellie and Brayden Cserepes, Twin Falls; and Robbie Boman, Idaho Falls, Idaho; great-grandchildren, Tyrell, Adam and Katrina Fackrell, Camp LeJeune, N.C.; parents, Jean and Mike Cserepes, Tacoma, Wash.; siblings: Jerry Cserepes, Bend, Ore.; Steve (Debbie) Cserepes, Kanab, Utah; David (Marilou) Cserepes, Philippines; Janice (Merv) Henderson Seattle, Wash.; Debbie (Roger) Schrottenboer, Sunnyside, Wash.; Carolyn (Greg) Enbusk, Edmonds, Wash.; Susan (Martin) Beisley, Pt. Orchard, Wash.; Cheryl (Tracy) Hansen, Twin Falls. Nieces and nephews: great-nieces and -nephews: more than 50.

Tom was a decorated Vietnam veteran, awarded the Bronze Star for heroism, Purple Heart after being wounded in the line of duty, as well as other medals for his service to his country.

He spent his career as a long haul truck driver. In his free time he enjoyed the outdoors, especially riding motorcycles and four-wheeling. His constant companion was his dog and "copilot," Scooter. More than anything he loved spending time with his grandchildren who were the lights of his life.

A memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 6 at Hove Robertson Funeral Home, Jerome, Idaho.

Anna Josephine Hansen

Anna Josephine Hansen, 91, of Twin Falls, passed away on Feb. 2, 2011, at River Ridge Care Center in Twin Falls. She was born on Oct. 19, 1919, in Calloway, Neb., the daughter of Charles Edward and Katherine Marie Ryun Whaley.

In 1942, she married Orval C. Hansen. To this union were born three children. Throughout her life she worked as a bookkeeper and secretary. Her career took her to serve with the Internal Revenue Service, the State Auditors Office, the U.S. Attorney's Office, and ended with her retiring from the H.J. Heinz Ore-Ida Plant in Burley in 1977.

Anna loved flowers and gardening. She also enjoyed fishing and spending time with her family.

Surviving are her two children, Rex (Vicki) Hansen of Filer, Kay (Jack) Flavel of Twin Falls; along with six grandchildren and seventeen great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Orval; daughter, June F. Hansen; and one sister, Dorothy Pyle. She will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved her.

Family will receive guests for a visitation from 5 to 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 7, 2011, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road, Twin Falls, Idaho. Graveside services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 8, 2011, at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Services are under the direction of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls. Those who wish may leave condolences at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

USDA approves planting of Roundup Ready sugar beets

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Genetically modified sugar beets designed to withstand the weedkiller Roundup can be planted under strict conditions with no threat to the environment and other plants, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said Friday in a decision anxiously awaited by farmers.

The agency's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said it would partially deregulate so-called Roundup Ready beets, letting farmers plant them while it finished work on a full environmental impact statement.

Last summer, a federal judge in California issued an order last summer halting the planting of genetically modified sugar beets until the USDA completed an environmental impact study on how the beets could affect conventional crops. The ruling had a widespread impact since nearly all the nation's sugar beets come from the genetically altered seed, and farmers had worried the USDA wouldn't finish its work in time for spring planting.

"This is a really big deal," said Mike Moyle, a Republican lawmaker who used to grow sugar beets and still farms west of Boise. "If they hadn't approved this, farmers in Idaho wouldn't have had enough (unmodified) seed."

Sugar beets are planted on more than 1 million acres in 10 states, with Idaho, Minnesota and North Dakota being the top producers. The beets supply half the nation's sugar, and about 95 percent are grown with the Roundup Ready seed developed by St. Louis-based Monsanto Co.

"USDA's decision is a positive step for sugar beet farmers," said Steve Walker, a Monsanto sugar beet representative. "Sugar beet farmers have been busy for spring planting, waiting for USDA's guidance and hoping it would come in time for spring planting."

Walker said Monsanto will carefully review the details of the interim measures.

The USDA website lists 18 requirements for farmers planting genetically modified sugar beets. They include restrictions on planting in California and several counties in Washington; maintaining a 4-mile distance between the male plants and all other commercial crops; properly cleaning cultivation and harvesting equipment to prevent modified seeds from being mixed with unmodified ones; and a labeling system to identify genetically modified seeds throughout the production process.

Paul Atchitoff, of Earthjustice, the group leading the fight against the USDA over the sugar beet deregulation, said the conditions are "not materially different from the way the industry was growing before."

"And those conditions resulted in contamination and will continue to result in contamination," Atchitoff said.

Ethics complaints dropped against Hart

BOISE — A House ethics committee voted Friday to dismiss two complaints against Rep. Phil Hart after he resigned from his vice chairmanship of the House Transportation Committee.

Republican Rep. Eric Anderson, of Priest Lake, had filed one of the complaints in early November, centering on Hart's removal of state-owned timber in 1996 without payment and questioning if his refusal to pay federal and state income taxes violated his oath of office as a state lawmaker.

Hart told the specially convened, seven-member House panel that he didn't have a "pristine past" but that he hoped voluntarily exiting his transportation committee leadership post would allow him and other legislators to move on with the 2011 session's business without distractions.

"I think the whole body needed to move on," Hart said, following the hearing. "We have work to do."

Lawmakers said Hart's offer to quit leadership, as well as a separate statement he had made Thursday on the House floor expressing remorse at prolonging the ethics-hearing process since it erupted last spring, showed he was accepting responsibility.

County files complaint against ex-prosecutor

BOISE — Canyon County commissioners have filed a complaint in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in an attempt to recover nearly $300,000 from a former prosecutor who the county contends deceived county leaders and engaged in larceny and embezzlement.

The county filed the complaint earlier this week against John Bujak, who resigned as county prosecutor in September.

Bujak sought bankruptcy protection in November with debts of $1.3 million and assets of about $526,000 in a move that could wipe out all of his unsecured debts and distribute any recoverable assets among creditors.

The county's filing attempts to separate the money it is owed from that process because it was part of a contract Bujak had to handle misdemeanor cases in Nampa.

Bujak has declined to comment since resigning.

Officials put bison slaughter on hold

BILLINGS — Federal officials halted plans Friday to ship bison to slaughter from Yellowstone National Park after saying they first had to review a court challenge filed by wildlife advocates.

Almost 400 of the animals were being held in corrals inside the park for testing to see if they have been exposed to the disease brucellosis.

Officials had planned to begin this week sending to slaughter those bison that test positive.

But environmental and American Indian groups are seeking a restraining order from a federal judge in Helena to block the shipments. No shipments are expected while the legal challenge is reviewed by the Park Service, Yellowstone spokesman Al Nash said.

Obama: China not currency manipulator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Obama administration on Friday declined to cite China for manipulating its currency to gain trade advantages against the United States.

The Treasury Department noted that China last June said it would begin allowing its currency to rise against the dollar. The agency said the pace of revaluation has been too slow since and more rapid appreciation is needed.

Treasury’s finding came in a report it must submit to Congress every six months determining whether other countries are manipulating their currencies. American manufacturers have been pushing for China to be cited. That could result in penalty tariffs being imposed on Chinese imports.

In refusing to cite China, Treasury said Chinese President Hu Jintao had assured President Barack Obama during a visit to Washington last month that China would intensify its efforts to “further enhance exchange rate stability.”

Treasury said that the pace of revaluation had accelerated in recent months and the movement was being aided by different rates of inflation in the two countries.

The report said that the Chinese currency, the renminbi, had risen in value by 3.7 percent against the dollar since China announced in June that it would resume allowing the currency to appreciate.

But because inflation in China is much higher currently than it is in the United States, the Chinese currency has risen on an inflation-adjusted basis at an annual rate of about 10 percent, Treasury said in its new report.

Astronaut’s choice

Husband: Giffords would embrace flight decision

By Marcia Dunn and Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — The astronaut husband of Rep. Gabrielle Giffords said Friday his wounded wife would embrace his decision to rocket into space in two months and he expects her to be well enough to be at his launch.

Space shuttle commander Mark Kelly refused to say whether the congresswoman took part in his decision and declined to go into details about her condition or whether she can communicate.

“I know her very well and she would be very comfortable with the decision that I made,” Kelly told reporters.

His decision, announced Friday, comes just four weeks after Giffords was shot in the head outside a Tucson, Ariz., supermarket. His choice to lead space shuttle Endeavour’s final voyage was made easier, he said, by his wife’s rapid progress in rehab.

The 46-year-old astronaut said he never imagined in the immediate aftermath of the shooting that he would ever fly the two-week mission. He immediately quit training after the Jan. 8 shooting.

Kelly said he told her mother there was no way he’d leave Giffords’ side. Gloria Giffords responded, “What, are you kidding me?”

Within two weeks, Giffords was transferred to TIRR Memorial Hermann hospital in Houston, and that’s when he started reconsidering. He weighed how much time he could spend with her, and how much he needed to be with his crew at Johnson Space Center on the outskirts of Houston.

“So that’s a debate I had with myself,” he said. The fact that she’s busy all day in rehab was key, he added.

Kelly said their parents, siblings and his teenage daughters were “completely unanimous.”

“Everybody felt that this was the right thing for me to do,” he said.

Kelly said any critics of his decision don’t know his wife.

“She is a big supporter of my career, a big supporter of NASA,” he said.

Giffords’ bullet wound was devastating. Though doctors described her early progress as remarkable, they have said very little about her condition. Houston doctors are not giving updates.

In the first several days after the shooting, she gave a thumbs up and was able to stand with help. She massaged her husband’s neck, picked out colors on an iPad and playfully took the ring off a nurse’s finger. Friends and Kelly described her as able to understand them.

But rehab experts say her progress will be slow, and the head of the hospital where she’s staying said doctors will help her reach “a new normal.”

No one has yet reported that Giffords has spoken or made sounds. She can swallow and breathe on her own and follows commands to lift an arm or a leg.

Kelly said a doctor told him she’s doing better than 99 percent of other people with this type of injury. He said he’s not providing any updates on her condition to avoid speculation by strangers.

“It’s not something I feel comfortable talking about,” he said.

When asked if Giffords might be well enough to attend his launch, he replied: “Absolutely. I have every intention that she’ll be there for the launch. I’ve already talked to her doctors about it.”

Giffords, 40, was meeting with constituents when she was gunned down. Six people were killed and 13 were injured in the rampage; a 22-year-old suspect is in custody.

Kelly’s space mission will be Endeavour’s final flight and the fourth for him. He will lead a veteran, all-male crew to the International Space Station.

A Navy captain, he entered the astronaut corps in 1996, along with his identical twin Scott, who’s currently circling the planet as the space station commander.

Two astronauts now in management positions sat at Kelly’s side during the 47-minute news conference, televised live on NASA TV. They had chosen a backup commander just in case.

Cop saves man trapped in snow

NEWFANE, Vt. (AP) — A Vermont man buried up to his neck in snow that fell off his roof has been saved by a trooper who spotted his head and gloved hand.

Police say 52-year-old Jean Butler of Newfane was raking snow off his house Friday when the snow toppled from the roof, trapping him for about two hours.

A neighbor heard his pleas for help and went to his house but didn’t find anyone. She then called police, who found Butler.

U.S. puts pressure on Mubarak for quick exit

CAIRO (AP) — A new rally Friday by nearly 100,000 protesters in Cairo and behind-the-scenes diplomacy from the Obama administration piled more pressure on President Hosni Mubarak to make a swift exit and allow a temporary government to embark on an immediate path toward democracy.

Two days of wild clashes between protesters and regime supporters that killed 11 people this week seemed to have pushed the United States to the conclusion that an Egypt with Mubarak at the helm is potentially more unstable than one without him.

For the first time in the 11-day wave of protests, varying scenarios were being put forward by two opposing camps in Egypt and by the United States on how to usher the country into a post-Mubarak era after nearly 30 years of his authoritarian rule.

President Barack Obama said that discussions have begun in Egypt on a turnover of the government and he called for “a transition period that begins now.”

“We want to see this moment of turmoil turned into a moment of opportunity,” Obama said in Washington, though he did not explicitly call for Mubarak to step down immediately.

However, U.S. officials said the administration has made a judgment that Mubarak has to go soon if the crisis is to end peacefully.

Idaho House won’t raise cost of breaking the law

JEERS: A majority of the Idaho House of Representatives this week couldn’t bring itself to raise taxes on criminals. By a 35-31 vote Tuesday the House decided not to charge felons and other offenders more in order to bolster funding for the Peace Officers Standards and Training academy, the organization that teaches cops how to do their jobs in Idaho. Under state law, anyone convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, traffic, Fish and Game or ordinance violation pays $10, which accounts for about 72 percent of POST’s total revenue — a percentage that has declined in recent years. A bill, sponsored by House Judiciary Committee Chairman Rich Willis, R-Glenns Ferry, would have raised that fee to $11.50. Opponents said that since not all state agencies can raise user fees, none should be able to. That’s tortured logic.

on beer sales, I bet we’ll make $50, $60 or $70 grand more overall,” board member Eric Lee said. Board member Jim Barker, who also voted for the beer garden, said he hasn’t seen fights at fairs with beer. If folks did get drunk, he said, fair security would quickly and quietly escort them out. The Fair Board limited alcohol sales to specific areas in the arena and prohibited it from leaving those areas. Beer wouldn’t be allowed in the carnival area of the fair, meaning general attendees won’t be able to buy it. Further, alcohol would only be sold between 6 and 10 p.m. and during arena events, such as the rodeo or a concert. Those are sensible rules that mean fairgoers who don’t want to be around alcohol won’t have to be. CHEERS: To state Rep. Maxine Bell, state Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, and other members of a legislative task force for taking one look at Tuesday’s House vote on raising Peace Officers Standards and Training fees and doing what they had to do: Restoring funding that the Idaho State Police receives from the state’s 25-cent-per-gallon gas tax. “Politics is the art of the possible,” Cameron told the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash., referring to arguments by opponents of the POST funding bill in the House that they would raise no taxes. “For now, we can’t proceed in the direction we wanted to proceed.”

That spelled the end of a session-ending deal from two years ago, in which lawmakers and the governor came up with a last-minute plan to shift $21.2 million in gas tax funds that now go to help fund ISP and state parks trails programs over to road work. Neither worked out, and lawmakers already had acknowledged that the shift of the trail money — which reflects the amount of gas burned in off-road vehicles, snowmobiles and boats — was a mistake and agreed to permanently reverse it. Now, they’re moving to permanently reverse the other piece as well. The seven-member joint task force, which included state Rep. Rich Willis, R-Glenns Ferry, met five times over the past two years, and received extensive documentation and much testimony as it mulled how best to fund the two programs in the face of the proposed gas tax shift.

Symphony League appreciated donations

The Magic Valley Symphony League would like to thank the following donors for items to use in our raffle at our recent luncheon and card party: Rocket Car Wash, Dan Barsness, Jan Mitleiter, Paula Dodd, Canyon Crest, Rudy’s, Paula Sinclair and Addison Photography gave items that had willing bidders who contributed to our gaining more than $1,000 for league support of the symphony.

Thanks to those who freed stuck motorists

On Thursday, Jan. 27, I attended the Rotary’s Death by Chocolate at the Canyon Crest Event Center. The actual event was fantastic. However the parking left a lot to be desired. The event center’s parking is way too small for an event, and a lot of us attending parked in a field next to the center. It caused several of us to get stuck in the mud. My main point for this letter is to thank the people that helped so many of us get unstuck, and I am sure continued to help long after we were able to get on our way. To you that helped, thank you so much; you showed that even on a cold winter night that chivalry is not dead. Thank you.

Local business donated organs for education

I would like to express my appreciation for Independent Meat’s support of local education. I recently requested hearts which were to be used for dissection in my seventh grade life science class. Originally, the representative quoted me a very reasonable rate for the organs. When I picked them up, the only repayment requested was to “teach our kids well.”

In a time when support for education is at a premium, it’s nice that a local business is still thinking about the kids.

Helpers thank numerous Christmas basket donors

The Valley Community Helpers would like to thank the people in the Eden and Hazelton communities for their continued support of cash, toys and/or food donations for the annual Christmas baskets. We would also like to thank the Valley School District; kindergarten through eighth grade for its canned food drive; Mrs. Elorrieta and the FCCLA kids for the wrapped presents; Mr. Hardy, Mr. Ayers and the young men that hauled the tables and food; Neil Cross and kids for gleaning potatoes; the Silver and Gold Senior Center for the use of its building; Valley Service Convenience Store; Jerome Walmart; United Dairymen of Idaho; Intermountain Beef (Cevin Jones); Trinidad Benham Conida Seed Co.; Meadow Gold Dairy Products; Black Oil Co.; Grant and Hagan Inc.; Kathy Kent; Douglas Farm Store; Helping Hands Thrift Store; Friendship Club; our local churches for all their support and everyone that donated cash, food and toys. Thank you all so very much. With your support, we were able to assist 77 families and give toys and gifts to 146 children. A big thank you to all of our volunteers for their tireless help. Without you, we would not be able to do this year after year. Thanks to Leann and Sandy at SCCAPCS for all of the behind the scene work that they do. Thank you very much.

For smaller government, elect shorter lawmakers

The Republican majority in the House is promising to cut $100 billion from domestic spending this year. The Tea Party caucus’s response? I’ll see your $100 billion and raise you $2.4 trillion over 10 years. Both groups are barking up the wrong tree or, to use a more appropriate animal analogy, putting the cart before the horse. The road to real deficit reduction runs through term limits. If Americans are truly interested in shrinking the size of government — one of the takeaways from the 2010 midterm election — they can start by limiting the amount of time lawmakers are allowed to serve. This would require a constitutional amendment (see U.S. Term Limits, Inc. v. Thornton, 1995), no mean feat, requiring as it does approval by a two-thirds majority in Congress. But not impossible either. Recent events in the Middle East demonstrate just how potent people power can be. Would it surprise you to learn that newbies in Congress (those who have served six years or less in the House and 12 or less in the Senate) are more likely to vote for fiscal restraint than veteran lawmakers? Or that this finding was based on votes taken from 1995 through 1998, when Republicans controlled both houses of Congress? Even Newt Gingrich’s class of ’94, determined to shrink the size and scope of government, couldn’t buck the Old Guard, according to the results of this Cato Institute study. In the last two years, the spending increases in bills proposed by freshman House Democrats were 60 percent lower than those sponsored by their more senior colleagues, according to Peter Sepp, vice president for communications at the National Taxpayers’ Union. The GOP freshmen proposed 15 percent more cuts in spending than the old-timers. It turns out the old adage is true: The longer they stay, the more they spend. It’s what political scientist James L. Payne calls The Culture of Spending, the title of his 1991 book. “What goes on is a socialization process: a nicer way of saying indoctrination,” Payne said. “One is surrounded by people who have a biased reason for arguing that federal spending is good, necessary, wise and proper. There’s no reason for anyone to enter this process if he believes it’s unwise or unethical.” Clearly the Paul family, father Ron and son Rand, stands out as an exception. Payne, an independent researcher in Sandpoint, Idaho, challenged my premise that spending is the surest route to re-election. If spending were motivated by an attempt to buy votes, then lawmakers who announce they’re retiring 18 months before the election would demonstrate a pattern of greater fiscal restraint, according to Payne.

“They don’t,” he said. “The election does not drive spending,” which is why long-serving congressmen from electorally safe districts are profligate spenders as well. While Payne upended my notion that lawmakers’ spending is driven by a desire to ingratiate themselves with key constituencies, I’m happy to report his research supports my conclusion. Term limits would ensure a regular flow of new blood. New blood is less tainted when it comes to the culture of spending. From 1964 to 2008, the incumbency rate in the House of Representatives averaged 93 percent, according to the Center for Responsive Politics, a non-partisan independent research group tracking money in politics. Even in a wave election like the 2010 midterms, where the GOP picked up 63 House seats, the re-election rate was 86 percent, the lowest since 1948. So yes, we have created a permanent ruling class, something the Founders feared. James Madison worried that without term limits, legislators would serve their narrow self-interest at the expense of the national interest. He was right. Whether Payne is correct and the culture of Washington drives spending, or Baum’s theory of pay-to-play is operative, term limits are the solution. As it stands, the only lawmakers who self-limit their term of office are ones who support term limits. That leaves us with lifers and losers. Caroline Baum is a Bloomberg News columnist.

Don't steal that lost animal

Q: This week I thought I'd answer a question I hear, not a lot, but every so often. Can somebody get into trouble for not reporting a lost dog or animal that he or she had found and kept?

A: The answer is simple: "only if you get caught." I know that sounds like a dumb answer, but the truth is that if nobody knew then you would most likely not get into trouble.

That, of course, does not make it right.

The right thing to do if you find a lost animal is to first get ahold of the local police or animal shelter to see if anybody has lost an animal. If you don't want to keep the animal, then your local animal shelter or animal rescue might take it and try to locate the owner or somebody else who might want to own the animal. If you are hoping to keep the animal, then you can put a notice in the newspaper and if it is not claimed within three months of the date of publication then you are entitled to the animal. A clearer answer can be found in Idaho Code 55-405.

POLICEMAN DAN

If you find an animal and know the owner but refuse to tell the owner or report that you have the animal, then you could be charged with theft. I know true animal lovers would want to file kidnapping charges but animals are considered property under Idaho law. If the animal is valued at more than $1,500, then the charge could be grand theft. Proving the animal is valued at more than that figure takes more than just word-of-mouth.

You might wonder what would happen if a pet was held for ransom. The charge would again be theft, and would once again need some kind of valid proof of value to be changed to grand theft.

I would add that any property found that is valued at more than $100 must be reported to either your county clerk or sheriff's office. Failing to report found property could lead to a charge of theft on the finder's part.

Finally, speaking of lost animals, I'm asking on a friend's behalf that if you live in the Oakley area and have seen or picked up a lost basset hound who answers to the name "Charlie," to please call Rose at 650-0909 and help him get back home, because he is sorely missed. You could also e-mail me with your contact information.

Could medication be to blame for insomnia?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I not only read but have scrap-books full of your articles. For more than a year now, I have had insomnia nightly for two or more hours; dry mouth (for which I use Biotene, which helps a little); night sweats that cause me to change my bed-clothes every night and sometimes twice; muscle discomfort from my elbow to my shoulder when my arms are out or above my head; gas (for which I use Beano, which only prevents gas when taken just before eating); and constipation, missing a day or two of evacuation on occasion.

For my dry mouth, my doctor thought Allegra could be the cause. I stopped taking the Allegra, but it didn't help.

I have osteoarthritis, RA, diverticulitis, a hiatal hernia, GERD, gastritis and microvascular ischemic disease. My medications include prednisone, methotrexate, Synthroid,

ASK DR. GOTT

Dr. Peter Gott

Prilosec, Lipitor, folic acid, senna S, Viactin and calcium with vitamins D and K2. I have a morphine pain pump and still have 10 Ambien left from a 2009 prescription. I'm allergic to niacin and cortisone and cannot take aspirin or aspirin products because of the methotrexate. All medications except the morphine have been taken for years, and during periods of insomnia, I have something to eat.

My primary doctor does extensive fasting lab work every six months. My rheumatologist orders lab testing every eight weeks, and my pain consultant says the morphine can be causing the gas but doesn't believe it has anything to do with my other problems. All lab work has always come back normal. Please help!

DEAR READER: Let's start at the beginning. Insomnia can be the result of a chemical imbalance in the brain such as depression, stress and/or anxiety; medical conditions such as pain, arthritis, GERD, an overactive thyroid; nicotine and eating too much too late in the evening; medications to include antidepressants, allergy medications, antihistamines, decongestants; and, finally, simply bad sleeping habits. You already qualify for a number of the causes. Beyond that, you may be unaware that you have sleep apnea or restless-legs syndrome, which can interfere with sleep patterns. Testing to rule out these conditions can be performed at a sleep center if necessary.

Dry mouth is often a side effect of medication, specifically blood-pressure reducers, muscle relaxants, antidepressants, antihistamines and anti-anxiety drugs. The use of tobacco can also cause or contribute to the problem. Use a fluoride rinse or brush a fluoride gel onto your teeth before bedtime. Don't use alcohol-containing mouthwashes. Avoid foods that are high in acid or sugar. Limit your intake of caffeine, and try an over-the-counter saliva substitute. You say you are using Biotene but don't mention which type (mouthwash, toothpaste, gum, balancing gel, etc.). This product can cause excess gas.

Night sweats can be caused by hormone therapy, antidepressants, leukemia, hyperthyroidism, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, damage to the autonomic nerves and a number of other conditions.

Muscle discomfort of the upper extremities may result from nerve impingement, a correctable problem. Constipation may be due to an excess of calcium and vitamin D. I question your morphine pain pump because it is usually for temporary use; therefore, it could be the cause of a great deal of your problems.

Gas can be caused by foods high in fiber, such as whole grains, legumes, and fruits and vegetables. Beyond that, we swallow air every time we eat or drink, eat too fast, or drink through a straw. Most lower-intestinal gas is produced when bacteria in the colon ferments carbohydrates that fail to be digested in the small intestine. Gas can also be caused by the use of laxatives, diverticulitis, Crohn's disease, constipation and food additives. Try drinking peppermint tea, eating slowly, and chewing your food thoroughly. Experiment with "grazing": eating five or six smaller meals throughout the day instead of a few larger ones.

Discontinue eating when you awaken in the middle of the night. Eliminate fried foods, reduce dairy products, and keep meticulous records of what triggers attacks. Stop napping during the day if you currently do so. Make your sleeping area conducive to sleep by being quiet and dark. Then seek the assistance of your prescribing physician(s) to determine whether you can successfully discontinue or reduce the dosage of any of drugs. This can be accomplished with only one or two medications at a time. To hit the entire regimen at once will not provide the information you are seeking.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Sleep/Wake Disorders" and "Consumer Tips on Medicine."

Celebrants use candles to light the words to the prayers and songs being used during Taize service at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Sun Valley.

Taize services find home in Sun Valley

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The silence speaks volumes at the mid-week Taize services at St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

Interspersed between hymns and chants, the periods of silence offer the two or three dozen celebrants a chance for prayer, meditation and reflection.

“Sometimes we read a scripture. Then we have a moment of quiet,” said Jeanne Cassell. “When we read that same scripture again, I often find it has become much more profound. It’s as if you think you’ve heard what it’s saying. Then when you hear it again after you’ve reflected in silence, it takes on a deeper or more profound meaning.”

Taize — pronounced Tie-zay — was founded by a man known simply as Brother Roger in 1940. Brother Roger, who spent a lot of his time as a boy meditating while recovering from tuberculosis, was helping refugees just prior to World War II when he founded a monastery in St. Thomas Church holds Taize services from 5:30 to 6 p.m. each Wednesday beginning in December and continuing through mid-March each year. For more information: 726-5349.

If you go

Georgia Stewart hangs the Taize banner at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Sun Valley. Taize services, held each Wednesday at the church, offer celebrants a chance for meditation and prayer.

Burgundy, France, in hopes of drawing men of different faiths to teach community and reconciliation.

His desire: to inspire peace and forgiveness among different churches, even nations.

The men called themselves brothers but they didn’t belong to a denomination. Over the years, they have worked with the poor in Calcutta, even Hell’s Kitchen in New York City.

Today up to 10,000 people flock to the monastery each summer to share in prayer and song. And many more meet for services like the one at St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

St. Thomas began holding Taize services several years ago, greeting the dark of each winter and the Advent season with Taize candles.

Each celebrant enters the darkened church, candle in hand.

“The candle itself is part of the magic,” said Penny Monger. “And as I settle in I find myself ‘in the zone,’ hypnotized by the guitar music.”

Typically, the service consists of a few short readings of the “Psalms” and other biblical passages interspersed with silence. Different voices chime in with short intercessory prayers alternated with musical chants — “Come fill our hearts with peace.” Celebrants finish with The Lord’s Prayer.

“I love the music and I love the silence,” said Georgia Stewart. “I’ve done quiet prayer for years. And the music is so simple everyone can sing it. It’s very appealing.”

“When I chant it’s almost like a vibration I feel in my whole body,” said Marcia Liebich. “But the aspect I love most is the silence — it almost gets to the point where it gets uncomfortable. But, coming in the middle of the week as it does, I find it’s very relaxing.”

Obama talks about faith at prayer breakfast

By Julie Pace
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama said Thursday that his faith has deepened during his two years in the White House, and he urged lawmakers to rely on their own faith to build a spirit of civility in Washington following the shooting of a congresswoman.

Speaking at the annual National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, Obama said that at a time of bitter partisanship, lawmakers must find a way to be open to the ideas of others, while staying true to their core principles.

“I pray that God will show me and all of us the limits of our understanding and open our ears and our hearts to our brothers and sisters with different points of view, that such reminders of our shared hopes and our shared dreams and our shared limitations as children of God will reveal a way forward that we can travel together,” he said.

Obama’s remarks Thursday built on his calls for civility in the days after last month’s shooting rampage in Arizona, which left six dead. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords was shot in the head, and is recovering at a rehab center in Houston.

Giffords’s husband, Mark Kelly, attended Thursday’s breakfast.

“We are with them for the long haul, and God is with them for the long haul,” Obama said of Giffords and Kelly.

The president said he also prayed that “a better day will dawn” over Egypt, where violence has erupted between supporters and opponents of President Hosni Mubarak.

“We pray that violence in Egypt will end, and the rights and aspirations of the Egyptian people will be realized,” Obama said.

The president also directly addressed questions about his religion Thursday, saying his Christianity has been a “sustaining force” during times when he and his family’s faith has been questioned.

“We are reminded that ultimately what matters is not what other people say about us, but whether we’re being true to our conscience and true to our God,” Obama said.

Some conservatives and political opponents have questioned Obama’s Christian faith. In fact, a Pew Research Center poll in August found that 18 percent of people wrongly believe Obama is Muslim — up from 11 percent who said so in March 2009. Just 34 percent said they thought Obama is Christian.

First lady Michelle Obama, Vice President Joe Biden and several lawmakers also attended the annual breakfast, which every president since Dwight Eisenhower has participated in.

Obama said he had prayed for God’s intervention on any number of occasions, not always on the weightiest issues of the day.

At one point, the president said he has prayed, “Lord, give me patience as I watch Malia go to her first dance, where there will be boys. Lord, let her skirt get longer as she travels to that place.” Twelve-year-old Malia is the older of his two daughters. Sasha is 9.

Poll: Religious enjoy better sense of well-being than non-religious

Times-News

A recent public survey has found that those who are most religious enjoy better well-being than do their non-religious counterparts.

“The current results confirm that this same pattern persists within all major faith groups, including those who have no formal religious identity,” according to the Jan. 6 Gallup poll. Life Evaluation and Healthy Behaviors were two indexes

GALLUP POLL

To view the survey:

by which groups were assessed.

Gallup conducted three previous surveys, each focusing on aspects of religiosity and well-being. The most recent survey concludes that Jews have the highest sense of well-being of any of the faith groups in the analysis, scoring particularly high on the Life Evaluation and Healthy Behaviors indexes.

Mormons came in a close second, while Protestants scored lowest.

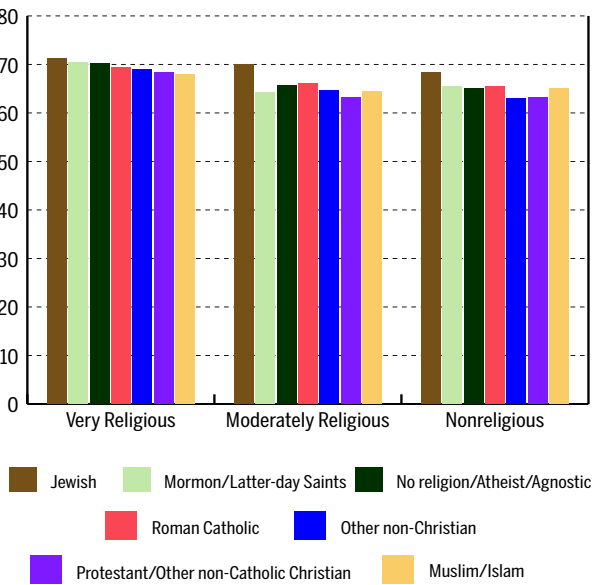

Mormons scored highest as being the most religious, followed by Protestants. Jews scored fairly low on religious intensity. Perhaps surprisingly, atheists also notably made the list.

“Interestingly, those without a religious identity, a group that includes atheists and agnostics, also appear to reap the positive wellbeing effect of religiosity,” the survey reads.

This “does not contradict that the most religious within any given identity group have superior wellbeing compared with those who are moderately religious or are nonreligious. Instead, it reinforces the evidence that religiosity matters to wellbeing regardless of religious identity.”

Enduring what others enjoy

At our house there are basically three classifications of Super Bowl party attendees.

First are those actually interested in the game. In a sad bit of irony, it is generally true that those who are most interested in the Super Bowl game are the least interesting — and generally, most obnoxious — people at the Super Bowl party.

The second classification of Super Bowl revelers at our house is those who are primarily interested in watching the incredibly expensive — and sometimes incredibly entertaining — Super Bowl television commercials. These folks seem to be only marginally aware that there is a football game going on but their attention is riveted to the screen during commercial breaks.

And finally there are those who are there for the food. There is nothing quite like Super Bowl food — and for that our arteries and organs are profoundly thankful. Pizza, nachos, wings, burgers, potato skins, chili dogs, Swedish meatballs — stop me if I mention anything that is in any way healthy — ribs, mozzarella sticks, sloppy Joes and this year's favorite (in honor of the Green Bay Packers): brats, will all be consumed in mind-boggling and cholesterol-inflating quantities.

And then at halftime, we'll bring out the desserts.

So that's what you'll see at our house on Super Bowl Sunday — I mean, besides the game. We'll go to church first, but then we'll take our places in the living room and assume our roles as game watchers, commercial critics and eaters — or some combination of the three.

And then there's my wife, Anita. She'll be there, but she'll be occupying her own classification all by herself. Truth be told, if she had her way there would be no football on our TV on any Sunday — including the Super one. Not that she's opposed to football. She's a big fan of our local college team and enjoys attending Saturday games or watching them on TV. It's just that she's of the opinion that Sundays should be devoted to more pious pursuits, and she prefers the gentle sound of hymns and religious music to the blowing of whistles, the cheering of fans and the clatter of the TV remote being thrown against the wall when the wrong team scores.

So we've struck a compromise. The boys and I can watch the game on TV, but we leave the sound down so she can listen to her Sunday music. For the most part it works well, although it does occasionally present some interesting juxtapositions (there's something almost spiritual about watching a wide receiver do his touchdown dance to the strains of "How Great Thou Art").

But on Super Sunday, with family members gathering to do the things people in the above named classifications do, our compromise doesn't really work. So Anita smiles, prepares all kinds of food she doesn't really care for and sits there with family and bravely endures what the rest of us enjoy.

When I asked her why she doesn't just go to another part of the house to savor a little Sunday serenity, she smiled and shook her head. "I don't care about the football or the commercials," she said, "but I do care about spending time with the people I love."

Her words brought to mind the number of times I manage to disappear when the rest of the family is playing a game that I'm not particularly fond of. Or the times I head downstairs to watch sports when my granddaughter Sami is watching cartoons upstairs. Or the times I've come up with projects that needed my attention when everyone else in the family was going to a movie in which I had no real interest. Anita's example underscored this profound truth: what families do together doesn't matter nearly as much as the simple fact that they do it together.

Even if that happens to put one of you in a classification by yourself.

1,500-year-old church unearthed near Jerusalem

By Matti Friedman

Associated Press writer

HIRBET MADRAS, Israel — Israeli archaeologists presented a newly uncovered 1,500-year-old church in the Judean hills on Wednesday, including an unusually well-preserved mosaic floor with images of lions, foxes, fish and peacocks.

The Byzantine church located southwest of Jerusalem, excavated over the last two months, will be visible only for another week before archaeologists cover it again with soil for its own protection.

The small basilica with an exquisitely decorated floor was active between the fifth and seventh centuries A.D., said the dig's leader, Amir Ganor of the Israel Antiquities Authority. He said the floor was "one of the most beautiful mosaics to be uncovered in Israel in recent years."

"It is unique in its craftsmanship and level of preservation," he said.

Archaeologists began digging at the site, known as Hirbet Madras, in December. The Antiquities Authority discovered several months earlier that antiquities thieves had begun plundering the ruins, which sit on an uninhabited hill not far from an Israeli farming community.

Though an initial survey suggested the building was a synagogue, the excavation revealed stones carved with crosses, identifying it as a church. The building had been built atop another structure around 500 years older, dating to Roman times, when scholars believe the settlement was inhabited by Jews.

Hewn into the rock underneath that structure is a network of tunnels that archaeologists believe were used by Jewish rebels fighting Roman armies in the second century A.D.

Stone steps lead down from the floor of the church to a small burial cave, which scholars suggest might have been venerated as the burial place of the Old Testament prophet Zecharia.

Ganor said the church would remain covered until funding was obtained to open it as a tourist site.

Israel boasts an exceptionally high concentration of archaeological sites, including Crusader, Islamic, Byzantine, Roman, ancient Jewish and prehistoric ruins.

Montana inmate suing state over lack of kosher food

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A Montana Women's Prison inmate has filed a lawsuit claiming state corrections officials are violating her religious freedoms by not providing her with kosher foods.

Shelley Tischler filed the complaint in U.S. District Court in Billings against the Department of Corrections, the Montana Women's Prison, Warden Jo Acton and others.

Tischler, 57, is serving a 20-year prison term for a fatal drunken driving crash in Ravalli County. She has been held both at the prison in Billings and at the Montana State Hospital in Warm Springs.

The lawsuit said Tischler has been able to buy her own kosher foods for observance of Jewish holy days at the women's prison, but administrators at the state hospital denied her the ability to have or order kosher food when she was there from September 2009 through March 2010, saying "this accommodation is not occurring at other DOC facilities."

Her lawsuit said that officials said at one point that foods could be prepared in a "kosher manner" at the women's prison, but Tischler said that was not an acceptable alternative.

She is seeking a jury trial, punitive damages and an injunction requiring the defendants to provide her and other Jewish inmates with kosher foods, at a minimum on holy days, and more frequently, if wanted.

State Department of Corrections spokesman Bob Anez said the agency could not comment because it had not seen the lawsuit. He said the department would respond to the allegations in court.

Making plans to re-energize county fair

Jerome Chamber, county fair partner for business exposure, growth

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

JEROME — Although its fair is still months away, the Jerome County Fair Board is partnering with the Jerome Chamber of Commerce to prepare for the event already.

In addition to moving the fair from the first week of August to Aug. 6-13, the fair board is recommitting its partnership with the chamber to reinvigorate the local business community's fair participation.

The fair draws about 25,000 visitors yearly and is the community's largest multi-day event, said Gary Warr, chamber board and fair board president.

"This isn't a new partnership but rather a reconnection of both organizations to create mutually beneficial opportunities for both the fair — which is highly dependent on business sponsorship — and the business community represented by the chamber," Warr said.

Chamber Executive Director Jon Melone said the chamber will work closely with the fair board to promote the event and educate its members about the benefits of supporting the fair.

"As local businesses support and get involved with the Jerome County Fair, it boosts the recognition of each of those businesses, Melone said. "Because this is a small community, people within the community know the business owners of local businesses and they will continue to shop locally at those businesses."

Melone said the partnership will also help bolster the chamber's reputation within the community.

"It's exciting, because we just got this new idea going and we're already receiving a tremendous amount of positive support from Jerome County's business community," said Kathleen Diederich, Jerome County Fair manager. "We've heard from many businesses that haven't sponsored the fair in the past that are interested in sponsoring this year."

Another big change is a contract signed with a new carnival company, Brown's Amusements, of Mesa, Ariz.

The fair will continue to offer free general admission.

Diederich said that while visitor and vendor numbers increased, the fair was challenged with a "pretty small carnival last year."

"That was the reason we decided to move the week of the fair because we were competing with over 40 other fairs in the region," Diederich said.

Moving the event allowed the fair to negotiate better terms with interested carnivals.

Instead of taking home around 20 percent of carnival commissions, like it did in the past, Diederich said the fair was able to negotiate a much higher return this year.

Dealing with a down economy

Bartering brings flexibility when cash is tight

By Eve Mitchell
Contra Costa Times

OAKLAND, Calif. — When Oakland restaurateur Henry Vortriede needs to get some more bread for his eatery, he doesn't have to spend cash to buy it. Instead, he turns to barter, an ancient form of commerce that is attracting new converts during a struggling economy.

But Vortriede isn't restricted to bartering directly with a baker down the street in exchange for providing free meals at his Montclair Bistro. That's because the restaurant is among businesses that belong to fee-based online barter networks that make it possible to trade with many businesses.

"I'd rather cater a holiday party, and get a couple of thousand of BizX dollars, and then spend that on our bread, coffee, wine, and plumbers and electricians," said Vortriede, who belongs to BizX.com, a Washington state-based barter network operated by BizXchange. He has also used BizXchange dollars to cover construction costs for adding a banquet room.

The advantage to bartering for businesses is that it allows them to pay for goods and services with trade dollars instead of using cash, to get rid of excess inventory and find new customers through a network. Barter networks can also provide qualified members with a line of credit that can be an alternative to a conventional loan. A downside is that goods and services obtained are typically not discounted as they might be in the non-barter marketplace.

Hnery Vortriede, chef and owner of the Montclair Bistro in Oakland, Calif., has used trade dollars at www.bizx.com to make purchases for his restaurant.

TAXES ON BARTERING

Income tax rules for bartering require that the fair market value of the goods and services exchanged must be reported as income by both parties. This is true for both informal, one-on-one barterers between individuals or businesses or for barterers that take place on third-party basis through a barter exchange company. If you are operating a viable bartering business, you may be entitled to deduct business expenses related to the goods or services you provide. Barter exchange companies are required to issue Form 1099-B, Proceeds from Broker and Barter Exchange Transactions, annually to their clients or members and to the Internal Revenue Service.

It's not just small- and medium-sized business that turn to the barter economy. Fortune 500 companies also barter. Businesses can use their trade dollars — which amount to an internal currency recognized only within the network — to buy goods and services from other members. Some barter networks are regional, while others are national or international.

There is neither an advantage nor disadvantage to using barter instead of cash for business expenses. That's because taxes still have to be paid on barter transactions.

Tony Cassara, owner of Cassara's Fine Men's Wear in Dublin, Calif., is a member of IMSbarter.com, a Wisconsin-based barter network run by International Monetary Systems Ltd. He has used trade dollars to help manage excess inventory and pay for business expenses.

"Barter is better for business. It is not cash," said Cassara.

When a purchase is made, trade dollars are deducted from the buyer's online account and added to the seller's online account. Debits and credits of trade dollars are done electronically.

Barter networks can free a business from having to spend cash, but they are not free to use. For example, there is a one-time cost of $795 to join BizXchange, along with a monthly $30 membership fee,

House votes to partially align Idaho code to IRS

The House voted to bring just part of Idaho's tax code in line with new federal rules.

The 65-0 vote Friday will cost the state $20 million but will shield its fragile budget from an additional $50 million hit through 2012.

The House agreed to adopt a provision enabling farmers and small business owners to immediately write off investments up to $500,000, instead of over several years.

Not adopting a federal provision also aimed at accelerated depreciation for bigger companies, however, bolsters Idaho coffers by some $50 million combined over two years.

Rep. Dennis Lake of Blackfoot said doing that would have created a budget hole that would have been very difficult to overcome.

And businesses told him they could live without it.

The measure now goes to the Senate.

Unemployment falls to 9 percent, nearly 2-year low

WASHINGTON— The unemployment rate is sinking at the fastest pace in half a century because a surprisingly large number of people say they're finding work.

The decline conflicts with a survey of businesses that showed weak job growth last month. But that survey doesn't count the self-employed and likely undercounts the nation's smallest businesses. Also, harsh weather disrupted business payrolls in January.

The unemployment rate dropped sharply last month to 9 percent, based on a government survey that found that more than a half-million people found work. A separate Labor Department survey of company payrolls showed 36,000 net jobs created — barely a quarter of the number needed to keep pace with population growth.

OSHA training offered through CSI

The College of Southern Idaho Community Education and Small Business Development Centers are offering a non-credit OSHA 10-hour General Industry Training Course, taught by authorized OSHA instructor, Kent Parish.

The 10-hour program has been created to provide education to general industry workers on the basics of occupational safety and health and is of primary benefit to entry level employees or any employee who has not recently taken the course.

The training provides safety instruction in OSHA compliance, including requirements for safety, health and hazard recognition, and prevention

Businesses deal with snow, employee issues

NEW YORK — The winter weather has been unrelenting in parts of the country, and small-business owners are having to deal with employee issues along with the snow.

Some staffers may live in areas that have gotten very heavy snow, and they can't get to work, sometimes for days, even when the business is open. Others may have to stay home with their children because schools are closed. And not everyone can get their work done via telecommuting.

Rob Wilson, president of Employco, a Chicago-based

SMALL

Rosenberg

human resources outsourcing company, says he's been fielding questions from small business clients about how to handle problems that come up during a snowstorm like the one that hit Chicago on Tuesday. A big concern that many have: Do you pay someone who's snowed in and can't work? The answer, as with many other snow-related employee issues, will be a mixture of policy and goodwill.

PAY SNOWED-IN STAFFERS?

Small businesses still rebuilding from the recession worry about having to pay staffers when they can't do any work. Companies aren't required to pay hourly employees, but those on salary by law cannot have their pay docked, says Rick Gibbs, a senior HR specialist with Administaff, a Houston-based company that provides HR outsourcing.

Owners need to balance their economic needs against the fact that not paying someone can be a morale buster. Wilson noted that many people are going to be looking for jobs this year as the economy improves. Docking someone's pay during a snowstorm will give many staffers another incentive to leave. Wilson's suggestion: Lean on the side of goodwill.

That's especially the case if the company is forced to shut down. "If the business can afford it, we recommend that they pay," he says.

It gets tricky when you have plus a 6 percent transaction fee on every purchase and sale.

At IMSbarter.com, there is one-time cost of $695 to join, along with a monthly $12 membership fee, plus a 6 percent transaction fee on every purchase and sale.

The fees charged by barter networks cover the cost of providing a bartering platform, the services of barter account executives who work with members, and acting as a third-party to send out paperwork required under Internal Revenue Service rules.

Barter exchanges also extend lines of credit to qualified members so they can make purchases before they have made sales. The lines of credit are paid back in the form of trade dollars made

Want to barter?

Here's a partial list of barter networks:

from sales to other members. (Interest charged on lines of credit goes into a special fund to cover lines of credit that are not repaid.)

Barter networks tend to get more popular during a rough economy, said Chris Haddawy, founder and chief operating officer of BizXchange.

By joining a barter network, that dentist could sell those unused five hours to members, then use the trade dollars to help pay for business expenses, explained Haddawy.

“It becomes much more interesting to people and they react much more positively when business is slower, as it has been in the last couple years,” he said.

Trade transactions at BizXchange have gone from $30.6 million in 2006 to $63.8 million in 2009, the last year figures were available.

Worldwide, barter networks accounted for about $12 billion in transactions among members in 2010, according to the International Reciprocal Trade Association.

KEEPER IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SISTER'S KEEP-ER: I can think of two ways. The first is to not allow your sister's mental disorder — because that is what you are describing — to keep you from going to college and having a life. Your sister has your parents, so she won't be all alone. The second is to write a letter to her therapist explaining your concerns. If anyone can help your sister, it is her therapist.

— WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: It's probably because your friend's curfew ends at midnight or a little after, and her mother hasn't given her permission to attend all-night sleepovers. But if you want to be sure — have your mother ask her mother.

“Mommy! Isn’t it time for PJ to take a nap?”

Today is Saturday, Feb. 5, the 36th day of 2011. There are 329 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Feb. 5, 1811, George, the Prince of Wales, was named Prince Regent due to the mental illness of his father, Britain's King George III.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1631, the co-founder of Rhode Island, Roger Williams, and his wife, Mary, arrived in Boston from England.

In 1783, Sweden recognized the independence of the United States.

In 1887, Verdi's opera "Otello" premiered at La Scala.

In 1911, Missouri's second Capitol building in Jefferson City burned down after being struck by lightning. Opera singer Jussi Bjorling was born in Borlange, Dalarna, Sweden.

In 1917, Congress passed, over President Woodrow Wilson's veto, an immigration act severely curtailing the influx of Asians. Mexico's constitution was adopted.

In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proposed increasing the number of Supreme Court justices; critics accused Roosevelt of attempting to "pack" the court. (The proposal failed in Congress.)

In 1940, Glenn Miller and his orchestra recorded "Tuxedo Junction" for RCA Victor's Bluebird label.

In 1958, Gamal Abdel Nasser was formally nominated to become the first president of the new United Arab Republic (a union of Syria and Egypt).

In 1971, Apollo 14 astronauts Alan Shepard and Edgar Mitchell stepped onto the surface of the moon in the first of two lunar excursions.

In 1989, the Soviet Union announced that all but a small rear-guard contingent of its troops had left Afghanistan.

Ten years ago: Four disciples of Osama bin Laden went on trial in New York in the 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa. (The four were convicted and sentenced to life in prison without parole.) Flanked by a jumbo refund-check stage prop, President George W. Bush asked Americans to get behind his proposed tax cuts. A disgruntled former factory worker killed five people, including himself, at an engine plant near Chicago.

Five years ago: Jacob Robida, suspected of an attack at a Massachusetts gay bar, the killing of an Arkansas officer and the slaying of a mother of three, was mortally wounded in a shootout with authorities. Thousands of protesters in Beirut, Lebanon, enraged over Danish caricatures of the prophet Muhammad, torched the Danish mission. Iran ended all voluntary cooperation with the International Atomic Energy Agency. The Pittsburgh Steelers won a record-tying fifth Super Bowl with a 21-10 win over the Seattle Seahawks. Actor Franklin Cover ("The Jeffersons") died in Englewood, N.J., at age 77.

One year ago: Toyota's president, Akio Toyoda, emerged from seclusion to apologize and address criticism that the automaker had mishandled a crisis over sticking gas pedals.

RYAN HOWE/
Times-News

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Coming off what they described as an “embarrassing” loss to Jerome on Wednesday, the Twin Falls Bruins continued their lackluster play in the first half against Burley on Friday.

“It was really gut-check time for us,” said Bruin senior Ryan Fuchs.

Twin Falls rallied from a seven-point halftime deficit and controlled the final two quarters to beat Burley 47-33.

“After the Jerome game

everybody was embarrassed and disappointed,” Fuchs said. “Basically we just looked at ourselves and said, ‘What can we do to get better?’”

Eric Harr scored a game-high 14 points and the Bruins came out much more aggressive in the second half, improving their record to 14-4 overall and 6-3 in Great Basin Conference play.

“The biggest thing is we had guys getting on the floor,” Fuchs said. “Whenever we have people hustling to get rebounds that the other team should get, but we get because we’re hustling, that really brings everybody into it.”

Twin Falls outrebounded Burley 32-27, including 15 offensive rebounds that led to 17 second-chance points.

Burley saw its seven-point lead turn into a seven-point deficit midway through the third quarter. Fuchs was instrumental in the game-changing sequence. He sank two free throws, followed by a 3-pointer. Next time down the floor, he stole the ball, which led to a Colton Stott layup.

“After halftime we came out flat,” said Burley senior Aaron Tolman. “It was more effort than it was trouble executing. We came out playing not to lose the lead, rather than playing to win.”

Twin Falls ended the game on a 13-0 run, highlighted by a pair of driving layups and a 3-pointer by Robert Sanchez.

“I decided I was just going to play my game in the fourth quarter,” Sanchez said. “When I came off the on-ball (screen) I saw it was open and I just took it to the hole. My shots fell, so it was good.”

Burley (3-14, 2-7) got 10

Eastern Utah men halt CSI win streak

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho men’s basketball team had a chance to take complete control of the Scenic West Athletic Conference race.

Instead, sixth-ranked CSI had its eight-game win streak halted with an 82-72 loss to the College of Eastern Utah Friday night in Price, Utah.

“It’s never easy on the road in the Scenic West,” CSI head coach Steve Gosar told 1450 AM KEZJ after his team fell to 21-3 overall and 7-2 in SWAC play.

Eastern Utah (19-5, 6-3 SWAC), which crept within a game of CSI in the league standings, had four players in double figures, led by James Kinney’s 19 points. Jonathan Mills had 14 points and 11 rebounds and scored four points during a 9-2 run that turned a 57-56 CEU lead into a 66-58 cushion.

CSI got within two at 66-64, but committed several turnovers in the late going as Eastern Utah pulled away. CEU also beat CSI 15-4 on the offensive glass.

“You can’t make the mistakes that we made tonight,” said Gosar.

Jackson

CSI started the game strong, building a 24-14 lead midway through the first half behind 10 points from Jerrold Brooks. The lead was 26-17 when Eastern Utah hit back-to-back treys to ignite an 18-2 run. That put CEU up 35-28.

“We got greedy at the start,” said Gosar. “The shots were falling for us early, but when they stopped falling, we forced up a couple of bad shots and those led to easy baskets for them and fueled their run.”

CSI guard Pierre Jackson played just 4 minutes in the first half after picking up two early fouls. He finished with 21 points, going 13-for-13 at the line after intermission. He gave CSI its final lead at 50-49 before a 6-0 Eastern Utah spurt.

Brooks added 15 points and seven boards, while Kenny Buckner had 12 points and nine rebounds. “Buckner really battled inside,” said Gosar. “He was a warrior in there.”

But the 6-foot-8 sophomore sustained a cut to his head and had to leave the game twice in the final minutes to stop the bleeding.

Tayllor Gipson took a shot to the mouth during shoot-around and a hit to the head when she entered the game.

From there, she dealt out the shots, scoring a season-high 16 points to lead the College of Southern Idaho women’s basketball team to a 77-53 win over the College of Eastern Utah Friday in Price, Utah.

Gipson helped CSI control the tempo as the No. 23 Golden Eagles (18-6, 5-4 Scenic West Athletic Conference) routed CEU (8-14, 3-6) from the opening tip.

“I thought we got the ball down the floor and got some easy shots in transition,” CSI head coach Randy Rogers told 1450 AM KEZJ after his team jumped to leads of 11-3 and 35-21 in the first half.

Hot-shooting Jerome claws past CRHS

By Stephen Meyers

After a huge, emotional win, it’s not uncommon for a team to come out uninspired in its next game.

Not Jerome.

Two days after handing Twin Falls its worst loss in 59 years in the cross-bridge rivalry, Jerome walked into Canyon Ridge High School and beat the Riverhawks 57-

48 in a Great Basin Conference matchup Friday night.

“Coach (Joe) Messick had been telling us that some of the greatest teams in history, after a huge win, come back the next game lazy and tired and not ready to play,” said Jake Hollifield. “We were just motivated to play tonight and come out hard. I’ve tried to let go of the high of the Twin Falls game and move on.”

Added Messick: “Anytime you have a big, emotional win like we had, you’re afraid of how the team will respond. You could tell that we didn’t have our legs under us and were a little tired, but we hung in there and got a great win over a good Canyon Ridge team.”

Hollifield scored 16 points and grabbed four rebounds in a super-efficient offensive game for the Tigers. Jerome shot 57 percent from the field, including a ridiculous 67 percent in the second half.

Once again, it’s Dietrich, Richfield and Carey

1A Div. II district tourney tips off today

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

They split Class 1A into two divisions. Teams came and went. Then 1A Division II’s District IV split into two divisions.

Still, nothing seems to be able to derail Richfield, Dietrich and Carey.

As the eight Northside Conference teams enter today’s opening day of the District IV Tournament, the three North Division rivals appear poised to emerge from the tournament for the third straight season.

Though all have seemingly straightforward opening-round games, you won’t find them looking ahead.

“At tournament time it’s a whole different deal. There are three different seasons: Before Christmas, after Christmas and then postseason,” said Dietrich coach Acey Shaw. “The first two seasons are practice and the third one is real, and everyone comes with more energy and adrenaline. We’ve got to play every one of these it like it’s our last game.”

Winner of 12 in a row and tournament host, Dietrich ran the table in the division season, going 8-0. With two wins over both Richfield and Carey this season, the Blue Devils are heavy favorites to repeat as district champions and make their 12th state appearance in the last 15 seasons.

Richfield has qualified for the last seven tournaments and Carey the last three. The Tigers beat the Panthers twice this season, putting them on the opposite side of the bracket from both Dietrich and Carey.

The anticipated matchup for Wednesday’s championship game is Dietrich-Richfield III. But Carey may have something to say about that.

Two-sport signee: CRHS senior headed to Great Falls

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Jayd Wartluft will be one busy freshman this fall. The Canyon Ridge High School senior recently signed with the University of Great Falls (Mont.) to participate in both women's soccer and rodeo. "I'm very excited," said Wartluft. Wartluft will head to Montana in July and begin soccer preparations. But when rodeo practice kicks off in September, the sports will overlap. She also plans to pursue a Biology major, which means she'll have a heavy workload in the classroom. "I'm excited to try it," she said. "But I'm a little bit nervous. ... It's definitely going to be hard." Her soccer coach at Canyon Ridge, Christa Tackett, is confident Wartluft will succeed. "She's a great player, a great leader," said Tackett. "She is an extremely hard worker. She's going to work for what she wants." Wartluft was a two-year captain for the CRHS soccer team and helped the Riverhawks to an 8-13 record, earning second-team all-Great Basin Conference honors as the team's goalkeeper.

She'll play that same spot this fall for a Great Falls team that went 3-13 last season. Great Falls soccer coach Brian Clarke said Wartluft is "an excellent student who has a great passion for the game of soccer. We know that she will bring a positive attitude and a great work ethic as soon as she arrives next fall."

Wartluft is also anxious to join coach Dick Lyman's rodeo program after competing in District VI goat tying, barrel racing and pole bending at the high school level. "The people up there are very nice and the coach is amazing," she said. "I'm very excited to start up there and get more experience."

CSI softball keeps up winning ways

Times-News

Winning five in a row was a lot more fun than losing six straight. Those were the words of College of Southern Idaho softball coach Nick Baumert after his 15th-ranked Golden Eagles polished off a three-game sweep of Friday action at the Arizona Western Shootout in Yuma, Ariz., upping their win streak to five after losing six in a row to start the season. CSI (5-6) beat California's Golden West College 12-4, Central Arizona College 14-1, and El Paso Community College of Texas 10-2. All three were completed in five innings due to the eight-run mercy rule.

CSI's pitching was sound, allowing 15 hits over the three games — all singles.

"We looked a lot better, working ahead in counts and getting a lot of balls in play," said Baumert. "We're playing good defense behind them. We really limited what the other teams did because we threw more strikes."

Kelsey Bryant doubled and homered twice on the day and Mikkel Griffin added two doubles and a round-tripper. Jerome High graduate T.J. Surrage doubled and homered on the day. Marina Groenewegen doubled twice and there were also doubles for Latieshia Webster, Kelsie Webster, Jessica Albertson and Marie Williams. CSI concludes its trip with two games this morning, against Eastern Arizona College and Phoenix College.

came in the paint on slashing cuts to the baskets and post-up moves by Hollifield and Riley Parish, who added eight points. "They just take such good care of the basketball. They didn't beat themselves and shot incredibly well tonight," said Canyon Ridge coach Mike Ridgeway. If not for a 3-point barrage by the Riverhawks, the game would have been a rout. Go-to scorer Grant Jones scored 19 points, making three of his team's seven from downtown, including one with two minutes remaining to pull the Riverhawks within six. But Jerome took care of the ball and sank its free throws down the stretch to seal the win. Canyon Ridge junior Chase Petty almost spoiled the night for the Tigers, making the other four Riverhawks' 3-pointers to score 13 points in his varsity debut. "This is what we've been waiting for. We were guard heavy at the beginning of the season, so we thought we'd let Petty play full-time down at JV and get some experience," Ridgeway said. "But with a couple of our guys down tonight sick (Alex Ridgeway and Garren Moreno), it was great to get this production from him." The Riverhawks (7-11, 3-6 GBC) wrap up conference play at Burley on Wednesday. Jerome (13-5, 7-2), sitting second in the GBC standings, has its eyes set on Minico, which they face on Wednesday. "Oh we're stoked," said Austin Leavitt, who scored 11 points. "It's going to take tough defense and on-ball pressure. We can't wait to get a shot at them."

Yanks' Pettitte retires, 'hunger' is not there

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Pettitte kept putting off a final decision, until his wife told him in late January that it was time. "I was starting to get a little irritable," he said. "And so she basically booted me and said, 'Go figure this out.'"

So he drove four hours from his home in Deer Park, Texas, to his ranch near the Mexican border. "I'm going to play," he remembered thinking. "The fans, the Yankees need me to play. I'm going to play. My wife supports it. My kids support it." And then he thought some more. "When I digged deep down in and I did some soul-searching — I don't even know how to explain," he said. "It wasn't there. It wasn't there like I wanted it to be there."

He returned home, then took his family to the ranch, waiting to make sure there was no more wavering. On Tuesday night, he called Brian Cashman to give the general manager the verdict: One of the most accomplished pitching careers in Yankees history was over. Pettitte was retiring after 16 major league seasons, 13 in pinstripes and five of those ending with World Series titles.

With his wife, Laura, sitting by his side in the Yankee Stadium press room, Pettitte spent nearly two hours Friday talking in his Texas twang about the pressure he felt to return, of a "tremendous obligation" he felt after Cliff Lee spurned the Yankees for Philadelphia. Just like the fans, the left-hander knows his retirement leaves New York with a rotation of CC Sabathia, Phil Hughes, A.J. Burnett and two question marks.

Cavs losing skid reaches record proportions

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The Cleveland Cavaliers matched the longest single-season losing streak in NBA history, dropping their 23rd straight with a 112-105 loss to the Memphis Grizzlies on Friday night.

The Cavaliers tied the 1995-96 Grizzlies, then in Vancouver, and the 1997-98 Denver Nuggets. They can equal their own overall mark for futility with a loss in Saturday night's game at home against the Portland Trail Blazers.

Cleveland lost 24 straight games over the 1981-82 and 1982-83 seasons.

THUNDER 111, SUNS 107
PHOENIX — Jeff Green scored 28 points and Serge Ibaka added 18 on 9-of-10 shooting to help the Oklahoma City Thunder escape with a 111-107 victory over the Phoenix Suns on Friday night.

Kevin Durant, who had at least 40 points in three of his previous four games, added 24 in the Thunder's fourth victory in five games. Russell Westbrook scored 19, including an 11-footer that put Oklahoma City up 107-103 with 34 seconds to go.

MAVERICKS 101, CELTICS 97
BOSTON — Jason Kidd made a 3-pointer with 2.5 seconds left, putting Dallas ahead and leading the Mavericks to their seventh straight win.

The Celtics led 97-91, but the Mavericks scored the final 10 points. After Kevin Garnett missed an 18-foot jumper with 15 seconds to go, the Mavericks tried to go inside, but Dirk Nowitzki had trouble handling the ball and threw it to Kidd, who made his second 3-pointer of the game.

Goodell wants to get deal done in 'next few weeks'

DALLAS (AP) — Roger Goodell recognized the questioner, even kidded him.

Chad Ochocinco was in no joking mood.

The Bengals receiver, reporting for his own OCN network, stood up at Goodell's annual Super Bowl news conference Friday and asked the NFL commissioner how close the league and players union were to a new contract that would avoid a potential lockout.

"I can tell you the commitment on behalf of the ownership is on getting an agreement," Goodell said. "This is the window of opportunity to get this done right. Otherwise, uncertainty is going to seep into all of our operations. ... I say, let's get to work, let's get an agreement that works for everybody."

Goodell and union officials were to meet Saturday in Dallas, the first formal bargaining session since November. Two more sessions have been scheduled for next week, at an undisclosed location.

Goodell said it was imperative to have a deal before the collective bargaining agreement expires in a month.

"I frequently have said that I think March 4 is a very critical date," Goodell said. "A lot of different strategies will take place if we're not successful in getting an agreement by that time."

"We need to have intensive, round-the-clock negotiations to address the issues and find solutions. I can assure you that I have that sense of urgency and I believe both sides do."

Asked whether the owners will lock out the players, Goodell replied: "We have not made any determination with what will happen on March 4."

The union has said it expects to be locked out if there is no agreement.

"Status quo is not acceptable," Goodell said. "We have to address these issues going forward. ... The pendulum has shifted too far in one direction."

In the owners' view, the shift is toward the players. So they opted out of the agreement in 2008, two years after it was reached.

The major issues are how to divide about $9 billion in annual revenues; the owners' push to expand the regular season to 18 games and reduce the preseason by two games; a rookie wage scale; and benefits for retired players.

Goodell added: "There are no deal-breakers."

That includes the league's desire to expand the regular season to 18 games. Goodell said fans repeatedly tell him the quality of preseason games doesn't meet NFL standards.

"That was one of the basis at which we started to look at the 18-2 concept," he said. "I feel an obligation to do the best we can to present the highest quality. If we can't do it right, we won't do it."

Goodell knows his reputation — and his paycheck — would take a hit without a deal. Goodell has vowed to drop his salary from nearly $10 million, including bonuses, to $1 if there is a work stoppage.

"I don't want my salary to go to a dollar. My wife doesn't want my salary to go to a dollar," he said, drawing laughs. "But it's a collective sacrifice if we're not able to get an agreement. It should affect everyone in the league. ... We should avoid it to get something done as soon as possible."

Rams QB Bradford top offensive rookie

DALLAS — Top draft choice, top rookie.

St. Louis Rams quarterback Sam Bradford won The Associated Press 2010 NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year award on Friday.

The first overall selection in last year's draft, Bradford guided the Rams from the embarrassment of a 1-15 record to a 7-9 mark. In the weak NFC West, that was good enough to contend for the division title; St. Louis lost out on a tiebreaker to Seattle.

"I think the more I'm out there, the more comfortable I become," Bradford said. "It's been like that all year. There's been some ups, there's been some downs, but I feel like for the most part I've learned from my mistakes each week."

The voters certainly were comfortable with Bradford's passing and leadership.

He earned 44 votes from a nationwide panel of 50 media members who regularly cover the league. Only two other rookies received votes: Tampa Bay wide receiver Mike Williams earned four, and Pittsburgh center Maurkice Pouncey had two.

LIONS' SUH EASY CHOICE FOR DEFENSIVE ROOKIE AWARD

DALLAS — When Ndamukong Suh heard people call him the best player available in the draft, he didn't gloat. He took it as a challenge.

"It was something to live up to," Suh said.

Did he ever.

The Detroit Lions tackle won The Associated Press 2010 NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year award on Friday.

The only rookie on the All-Pro team, Suh validated Detroit selecting him second overall in last April's draft. He earned 48 votes from a nationwide panel of media members who regularly cover the league. New England cornerback Devin McCourty drew the other two votes.

Detroit won its final four games to finish 6-10, triple the number of victories the Lions managed in the previous two seasons combined. Suh was a major reason with 10 sacks, the most at the position, veteran or rookie, and 66 tackles.

REDSKINS' HAYNESWORTH ACCUSED OF ROAD RAGE ASSAULT

FAIRFAX, Va. — Redskins defensive lineman Albert Haynesworth has been accused of assault in what police said was a case of road rage.

Fairfax County police spokeswoman Shelley Broderick said a 38-year-old man told investigators he was driving a Honda Civic in suburban Washington when he saw a pickup truck tailgating him and made a hand gesture.

The driver of the truck, later identified as Haynesworth, got out of his car when the two vehicles stopped and reportedly assaulted the other driver.

Haynesworth has not been formally charged in the case.

But a warrant has been issued in the case, and police have been in touch with Haynesworth's attorney, Broderick said. Arrangements have been made for Haynesworth to meet with officers, and he will appear in Fairfax County General District Court at a later date.

REDSKINS' SNYDER SPEAKS ABOUT SUING NEWSPAPER

DALLAS — Redskins owner Daniel Snyder defended his decision to sue Washington City Paper, saying a column and doctored picture of him "crossed the line; it's that simple."

"Enough is enough," said Snyder, who often has come under criticism during his ownership of Washington's NFL team.

He spoke to reporters Friday in Dallas, where the Super Bowl will be played Sunday, and made his first public comments about the lawsuit filed against the weekly paper and its parent company, Atalaya Capital management LP, in New York State Supreme Court on Wednesday. The suit seeks at least $1 million in damages for each of the two causes of action, plus punitive damages.

The suit says the story entitled "The Cranky Redskins Fan's Guide to Dan Snyder" defamed him and an accompanying altered photo — with horns and a beard drawn in pen — had anti-Semitic references.

Tommy Gainey hits his tee shot on the No. 16 hole during the second round of the Phoenix Open PGA golf tournament Friday in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Gainey, Wilson lead frosty Phoenix Open

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — At the frosty Phoenix Open, it was fitting that a guy called "Tommy Two Gloves" had a share of the lead.

Not that Tommy Gainey thinks the extra glove really helps in cold conditions.

"I don't necessarily think it's an advantage when it's real cold, and I'll tell you why, because when the temperature started dropping, I mean, my hands, even though I had the gloves on, they were still freezing," Gainey said. "I didn't have much feel in my hands at that time. Wearing a glove or not, it's still freezing, and your hands are feeling kind of numb. And that's the way my hands were feeling, kind of numb."

Gainey and Mark Wilson reached 11 under Friday before second-round play was suspended because of darkness in the frost-delayed tournament that will finish Monday.

Wilson played 14 holes in the second round, and Gainey finished nine.

Frost delayed play until just after 11 a.m. — 94 minutes after the scheduled start that was already nearly two hours later than normal. Only half the field finished the first round Thursday after a four-hour morning delay.

The delays — costing a total of 7 hours, 24 minutes of playing time — pushed more than half of the second round to Saturday. In announcing the Monday finish, PGA Tour officials said the cut will remain at the top 70 and ties.

"In a perfect world, probably finish Monday, maybe four or five holes, best-case scenario," said Slugger White, the PGA Tour's vice president of rules. "So much depends on tomorrow morning and Sunday morning. ... It's unbelievable how frozen these greens get and they just don't thaw out."

On the sunny day, the temperature was 42 when play started, reached 52 and was 48 when play was suspended a little after 6 p.m. If the players started a hole before the suspension, they had the option of finishing it.

Only six players finished the second round and 64 — the entire early wave from the first round — didn't get on the course Friday.

The temperature was expected to fall into the mid 30s overnight, cold enough to force another frost delay. It is supposed to be warmer the next three days, with highs of 65 Saturday, 68 Sunday and 73 Monday.

NO. 1 WESTWOOD MISSES CUT, BRIER LEADS IN QATAR

DOHA, Qatar — Lee Westwood shot a 3-over 75 to miss the cut at the Qatar Masters on Friday, opening the door for Martin Kaymer to replace him at the top of the rankings.

Austria's Markus Brier had a 66 to take a one-shot lead over South Africa's Darren Fichardt (68) after the second round.

Westwood, who finished 4 over, replaced Tiger Woods at the top of the rankings in October. Kaymer could advance to No. 1 with a second-place finish. He shot a 70 and is 10 shots back.

Westwood's struggles in Qatar follows a 64th-place finish in last month's European Tour event in Abu Dhabi.

"I think we're in a good spot. We're very young but the girls have improved a lot this year. I see moments where I think we could make some upsets, and so hopefully that happens," said Carey coach Lane Durtschi, who has led his team to the last three state tournaments. "The good thing is we're very young, we've got lots of sophomores who are playing lots and juniors who are playing. If we start clicking we could get going."

Two teams will qualify for the state tournament automatically, while the third-place team gets a play-in date a week from today in American Falls against the runner-up from District V-VI. If all three reach Nampa High School, they'll have a chance to finish off their third straight 1-2-3 state tournament finish.

The road will be harder, though, with North Gem, two quality District III teams and the champ from District II as well. But there's one great place to be in the bracket.

"Being the one seed (from the district) at state is huge," said Steve Kent, who's coached Richfield to the last two state championships and the last seven state tournaments. "If we're the one seed we're probably going to have North Gem and Dietrich on the other side of the bracket, and if Dietrich's the top seed they'll have us and North Gem on the other side."

Dietrich opens the tournament at 3 p.m. today against the Community School, with Carey vs. Lighthouse Christian to follow. After that it's Richfield against Murtaugh, with Castleford vs. Camas County — the most even game of the day on paper — to close it out.

Each game poses its own pitfalls, but the matchup everyone wants to see Wednesday — Dietrich vs. Richfield — is hardly a secret.

"That's what we're hoping for. If we do get to see Richfield it's going to be a great game," Shaw said. "They're not going to let us have it. We're going to have to go get it."

led by as much as 30 in the second half.

Fanny Cavallo chipped in 12 points, while Tina Fakahafua scored 10 and Chakala Carthen added nine.

"It was a pretty good effort overall," said Rogers.

Eastern Utah got 25 points from Bruna Deichmann and 13 from Priscila Santos, but that duo got little help.

"We got better record-wise and tempo-wise," said Rogers.

The win helped CSI avoid falling into a fifth-place tie with CEU.

"This was a really important one for us," said Gipson. CSI visits Colorado Northwestern Community College at 3 p.m. today.
