Reform nullification draws crowd

After testimony, vote postponed

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — More than 200 people crowded into the Idaho Capitol on Wednesday for a hearing on a bill to void President Barack Obama's health care overhaul, an effort that invokes the spirit of a 200-year-old states' rights doctrine championed by federal government foes but found unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The measure being pushed by conservative Republicans would forbid Idaho agencies from putting the 2009 federal law into effect — a declaration of state sovereignty over what the bill's advocates call a federal power grab. It could mean returning money that Idaho has received to enact some aspects of the federal law.

Dozens at the House State Affairs Committee wore yellow "Yes Nullify!" stickers on their shirts or jackets. Many were tea party adherents; some included small-business owners and citizens who fear the law will not only limit their rights but also increase their health insurance costs and expand the power of the Internal Revenue Service.

"Not only is it unconstitutional, but common sense shows the federal government is overreaching. And if Idaho does not set precedent in stopping this, the federal powers will continue to usurp 'We the people,'" said Mike Chism, a member of the Oath Keepers group whose members vow to resist what they believe are unconstitutional federal mandates.

'BOT BROTHERHOOD

T.F. teens take robot to state competition

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

They call themselves "Newton's Brothers" in honor of the famed scientist Isaac Newton.

The team of six teenage boys has used Newton's accomplishments as inspiration over the four months they've spent tackling their biggest scientific challenge yet. Their boxy metal robot stands 18 inches tall and finally received a name on Tuesday night, when the boys gathered for the last time before they take their creation to the University of Idaho in Moscow for a robotics competition on Saturday.

"Prism?" Twin Falls High School junior Mark Sneddon asked his teammates.

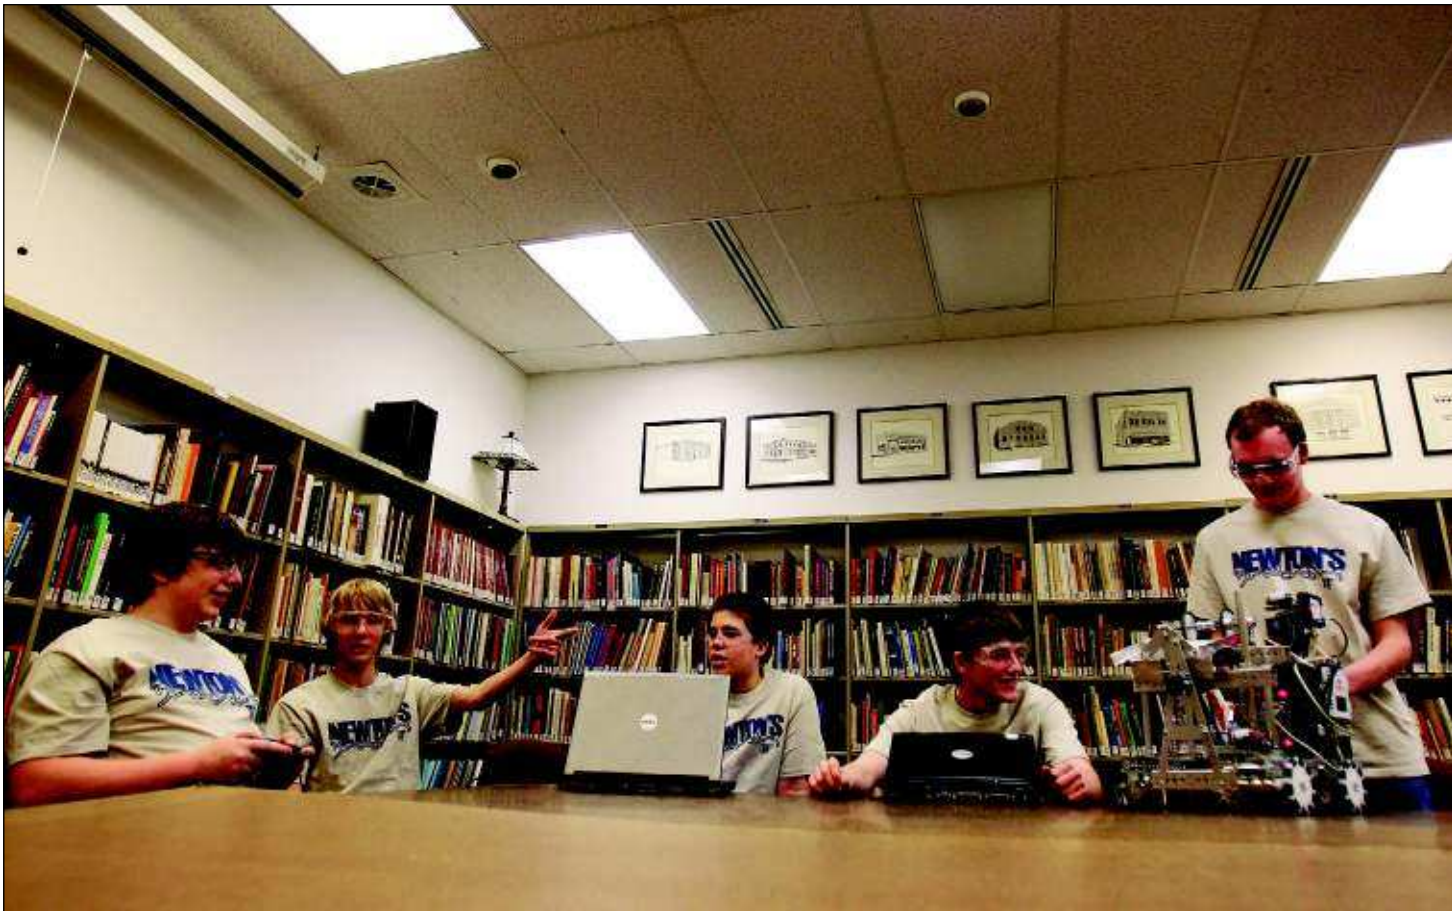

"Yeah, Newton discovered the prism and light," said Roman Terry, another TFHS junior. "Out comes the rainbow."

The teens aren't terribly opposed to the descriptor "nerd" and a few throw out words usually relegated to the deep recesses of the dictionary. But the six well-spoken sophomores and juniors are quick to point out their involvement in high school sports, two contrasting pursuits that share some terminology.

"It was a bit difficult at first. We had a big learning curve to get over because we are a rookie team," Sneddon said of the robot project. "But everyone has stepped up to work together."

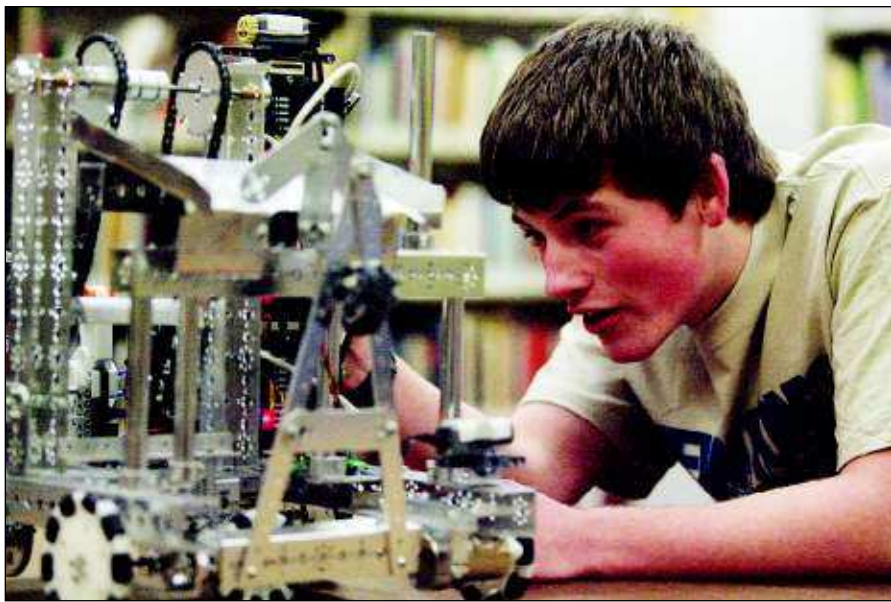

Sneddon said some of the crew volunteered at a LEGO robot competition at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science in November and learned about the First Tech Challenge, a robotics competition for high school students. Sneddon has acted as the project manager — his team includes Terry, Dakotah Doshier,

Rep. Patrick proposes reducing sportsmen's fees for injured vets

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Disabled veterans from across the U.S. may be given one more reason to visit the Gem State for hunting excursions.

Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, introduced legislation Wednesday to reduce the fees vets from outside Idaho pay for sportsman licenses and tags in Idaho. Ultimately, Patrick's proposal to the House Resources and Conservation Committee would provide hundreds of dollars of savings for each veteran's trip and enhance the financial ability of nonprofit groups that want to give vets a taste of Idaho hunting.

The bill would give the same rates to non-Idaho veterans that Idaho's disabled veterans receive. To receive the discount, veterans would need to participate in a hunt sponsored by a qualified nonprofit organization that works with disabled veterans.

Patrick has worked on the issue with Monte Bruhn of Buhl, who last year started Doug Bridges Memorial Hunts, an organization

CSI streamlines transfer process

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

College of Idaho and College of Southern Idaho leadership met Wednesday to sign an agreement that will allow CSI students to easily transfer to the four-year private university in Caldwell.

The agreement is a one-page document — simple in its text to signify the seamless transition for students who earn a CSI associate degree and now will be granted junior standing with up to 70 transfer credits at C of I.

The College of Idaho revamped its liberal arts curriculum and launched its new PEAK curriculum last fall to provide flexible, broad education. PEAK requires students to earn one major and three undergraduate minors in four years with specialization in multiple areas. CSI transfers will be required to earn one PEAK major and one minor to earn a bachelor's degree from the liberal arts school.

"It's very simple. It's exciting new curriculum. It's bold and it's unique," C of I President Marv Henberg said. "We say you climb four peaks and you graduate. It gives students maximum choice."

While the percentage of CSI students who transfer to C of I is currently low, CSI Dean of Students Graydon Stanley said the agreement opens more doors for students and will likely increase the number of transfers to C of I.

"We have so much in common it's amazing," Stanley said. "The way we serve students and care about students' success and the way we deliver it is the same. They are known as one of the best liberal arts schools in the country."

Former CSI student John Micah Heinemann will graduate from the College of Idaho in May and plans to attend law school. He said he wished the agreement had been in place when he transferred schools.

"It was a big shift. The student body has a different feel to it," Heinemann said. "I had a good, solid base at CSI. It's great they are making the program accessible."

CSI President Jerry Beck said the agreement makes the transition smoother. While CSI has worked with C of I for many years, he said, it is the second community college to sign an articulation agreement with the college since the PEAK curriculum was put in place.

T.F. man qualifies to run northern Nevada brothel

By Rishi Daulat
Elko Daily Free Press writer

ELKO — After being thrice rejected in his quest to open a northern Nevada brothel, George Tate might have given up.

But the Twin Falls man kept returning to Elko, Nev., to prove his finances were legitimate, and finally Police Chief Don Zumwalt and city councilmen approved his brothel license application late Tuesday night.

“City code is clear about the qualifications of a brothel license applicant,” Zumwalt said. “You can’t have a felony record, history of drug use, extortion or any other bad things. Another reason for refusal can be if the applicant or their spouse is financially insolvent.”

Zumwalt said Tate’s criminal background is basically “squeaky clean” and added that city officials only questioned his finances. When Tate first visited Zumwalt nearly four months ago, he carried “loads of cash,” the police chief said, to prove his financial solvency.

“I kind of took it at face value and we kept tabling (his request),” Zumwalt said. “I told him we want legitimate business owners, not guys coming in here with just cash.”

Zumwalt said Tate’s only income was from Social Security payments and an Idaho liquor license, and he wasn’t initially aware of how much Idaho’s limited state-issued liquor licenses can be rented out to other businesses for.

“I told him to come back with more legitimate financial records,” Zumwalt said. “We want to make sure brothel owners’ finances are intact so that they don’t start forming partnerships and start laundering money.”

Tate then involved his certified public accountant to review and send his financial records to the Elko City Council and Zumwalt. That, apparently, did the trick.

“Tate’s an older gentleman who has worked hard to save his money,” Zumwalt said. “We were able to verify all of his financing after seeing his certified financial records and that was the only question we ever had with him.”

Tate plans to buy Sue’s Fantasy Club in Elko.

In June 2010, a San Francisco couple sought a license so they could purchase the brothel. Zumwalt denied their application and didn’t give them a second chance.

“The difference between that couple and Tate is night and day,” Zumwalt said. “The couple from San Francisco had unlawful businesses in California and Washington. They owned massage parlors that were fronts for illegal prostitution.”

Gooding questions zoning definition

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The Gooding City Council, minus absent Councilman Mel Magnelli, ran into an issue with county policy at its meeting Monday.

Wendell resident Joe Hults brought his plan to install a corn dryer at the corner of Gooding’s Montana Street and U.S. Highway 26 to the council for its opinion. The corner is in the city’s area of impact in Gooding County and is zoned commercial by the county, which would be in charge of permitting the project.

But the city would prefer Hults’ dryer be set up elsewhere.

“We were thinking more a standard commercial — doctor’s office, things like that. So there is a confusion, concern over what commercial means,” Mayor Duke Morton said. “This is kind of like our front door. So I’m simply saying that we did not anticipate that someone would think a drying plant appropriate.”

Hults said he first began thinking of the project in September. As the year wore on, it became more pressing. Usually, Hults is able to harvest his corn before Thanksgiving. This year, he’s still waiting for it to dry out.

“I just got too many acres out there just sitting. I got to do something,” Hults said.

Installing a dryer would allow Hults to extract the necessary moisture out of the corn so he could transport it.

The Gooding City Council originally worked with the county to draw up zoning codes, but has disagreed on what commercial zoning entails.

City Clerk Carmen Korsen said a similar conflict arose when North Valley Academy originally wanted to move into the same general area as Hults’ dryer.

“Until something happens, you don’t really realize that you’re not talking about the same thing,” Korsen said.

The academy ended up choosing another location.

The county Planning and Zoning Commission has already approved Hults’ plan and the dryer is slated to be delivered Feb. 20. But the council plans to meet with the county to clear up the ordinance issues.

“I share the mayor’s concern with this as well. This is not the first time we’ve been at loggerheads with the county over it either,” Councilman Vern France said. “I’m just sorry citizens get caught up in the middle of it.”

Hults said if the city does get its wish, he knows of no other place where there is enough room or access to natural gas for his dryer.

“It was determined to be appropriate (by the county),” said Hults’ wife, Kay, who was also at the meeting. “It’s not a doctor’s office, though.”

In other business, the council approved purchasing a new sanitation truck for $215,209. Public Works Director Todd Bunn said he thought the budget could absorb the cost.

“I don’t anticipate me needing to go out and raise rates. The fund is doing well. We’ll have to monitor it over the next few years, but I think it will be OK,” Bunn said.

The council also rescheduled its next meeting to Feb. 24 to avoid conflicting with President’s Day.

Nick Flechsig, Briten Perron and Derek Withers — and each teen chipped in to lend his talents to build the robot. They’ve met three times a week since November in the Herrett Center library.

Surrounded by books about science and art, the team had to quickly master the arts of computer language and teambuilding.

“We each have different specialties,” Sneddon said. “Roman did the gears. Nick worked on the structure, I helped with the electrical. Dakotah and Derek were in charge of programming and Briten came up with the ideas.”

Hearing

testimony, a vote on the bill was postponed until at least Thursday.

Alabama, Kansas, Maine, Missouri, Montana, Oregon, Nebraska, Texas and Wyoming also are considering so-called “nullification” measures. The provisions are an expression of broad concern over the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, especially its requirement that residents buy insurance or face fines after 2014.

Constitutional scholars and the Idaho attorney general have said legislative attempts to nullify the law are unlikely to survive legal challenges. They say Idaho is better off pursuing the case in court, where a federal judge in Florida has already ruled against the overhaul even as other courts have ruled more favorably. It’s likely bound for U.S. Supreme Court review.

David Gray Adler, a constitutional scholar who directs the University of Idaho’s McClure Center for Public Policy Research, has said there’s nothing in the U.S. Constitution to support that nullification is a lawful means of opposing the federal government. Idaho Assistant Chief Deputy Attorney General Brian Kane has written that states can’t “pick and choose” which federal laws to follow.

Other lawyers agreed.

“You’re essentially tilting at a windmill here that will get you nowhere,” Bruce Bistline, a lawyer from Boise, told the committee Wednesday.

Even the bill’s sponsors disagree about what the final effect of the measure will be, should it pass the House and Senate and win Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s signature.

For instance, Rep. Vito Barbieri, R-Dalton Gardens, said Idaho would likely have to conform to the health care law should the U.S. Supreme Court eventually rule it is constitutional.

“The only alternative would be troops on the border,” Barbieri said following the meeting. “Ultimately, the state is going to comply.”

But Sen. Monty Pearce, R-New Plymouth, said Idaho, not the nation’s high court, would have the final say.

Rep. Erik Simpson, R-Idaho Falls and a member of the State Affairs Committee, believes it’s the courts that will decide if the Idaho Legislature has overstepped its boundaries.

Idaho’s bill declaring the health care law “void and of no effect” in Idaho is based on an idea that future President Thomas Jefferson broached in 1798 when he argued states were the final arbiter of constitutionality.

In a resolution passed by Kentucky, Jefferson wrote that the “rightful remedy” was nullification, a doctrine he created to express his disgust with the Alien and Sedition Acts enacted by then-President John Adams during an undeclared naval war with France.

Despite Jefferson’s views, however, the U.S. Supreme Court has shot down such efforts, including in the 1950s when Arkansas tried to block desegregation of its public schools, and in the 1850s when Wisconsin sought to block laws requiring Northern states to return escaped slaves to their owners in the South.

Even so, proponents of the Idaho bill called on state lawmakers to “erect barriers” against federal expansion, calling the health care law a further step in America’s march into socialism. High court justices appointed by the president can’t be trusted, Leah Southwell told the panel.

“If we allow the Supreme Court to be the final arbiter in this, we are not a republic — we are an oligarchy,” said Southwell, from Coeur d’Alene. “Our founding fathers would be disgusted with us, if we were to allow that to happen.”

“It really makes a difference when they feel and know that somebody out there cares about veterans and is willing to share part of their life with them,” Bruhn said.

The savings will be particularly helpful for veterans with limited budgets, Bruhn said.

For example, under the legislation, a bear tag would cost just $5 instead of the $184.25 rate for non-Idahoans. A deer tag would cost $9 instead of $300, and an elk tag would cost $14.75 instead of $415.

A combination hunting and fishing license would cost $3.25 instead of $238.25.

Bruhn said it’s important to remember that veterans from other states were injured fighting for everyone’s rights, including those of Idahoans.

Dialing back public kindergarten a dumb idea

In 2007 — at taxpayer expense — state Rep. Steve Thayne, R-Emmett, spent five months chairing an interim task force of the Idaho House of Representatives on family issues.

Its recommendations — which were mostly Thayne’s, not his committee’s — were so far-fetched that House Republican leaders stripped them from the panel’s final reports to lawmakers.

So it’s no surprise that Thayne is the author of the silliest notion so far put forward in the 61st Legislature: cutting two-thirds of the $50 million the state now appropriates to kindergartens, and leaving $17 million to be used to prepare at-risk students to enter first grade. School districts now receiving money for 36 weeks of kindergarten would only get enough money for about 12 weeks, under the plan.

Our view: Cutting kindergarten is an ironclad formula for increasing Idaho’s dropout rate and assuring that many more public school students will fail.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

By slashing funding for kindergarten, Thayne says the state could save $30 million that could then be used to plug holes in the state education budget for grades one through 12.

But if the Legislature follows his suggestion, there will be many other holes to fill.

Our state is already shamefully neglectful of early childhood education. Idaho is one of only 12 states that doesn’t provide state funding for pre-kindergarten classes.

While federal dollars are available for pre-kindergarten classes with special-needs children, there’s nothing in place for all youngsters under 5.

Study after study has shown that kids who go to pre-school and kindergarten do better in school later, earn more money when they grow up, and are less likely to get into trouble with the law than those who don’t.

The scheme to cut kindergarten comes just weeks after Idaho lawmakers adopted the Common Core Standards which includes about 90 skills kindergarten pupils are expected to master — including the ability to read grade level texts independently and be able to count to 100 — before moving on to first grade.

Opponents of state-funded early childhood education cling to the Father Knows Best argument that early education is the responsibility of parents, not taxpayers.

Maybe in 1951, but not in 2011. There are 74,179 single-parent households in Idaho. Fifty-one percent of kids under 6 live in a home where the parents work, and 18 percent of Idaho children under 6 live below the federally defined poverty level.

That’s about $22,350 a year for a family of four. We’d love to know how those moms and dads are supposed to pay for private schools, if they want their children to attend kindergarten. Or for the additional child-care expenses that gutting public kindergarten programs would require.

It boils down to this: Idaho can pay for early childhood education now, or it can pay much more for prisons and remedial education in college later.

Stop blaming Apple, start parenting

Sometimes I despair for these United States of America. Apparently, we live in a country where — according to a story on the front page of Tuesday’s Washington Post — parents are upset because their children are racking up huge fees at the Apple app store from purchasing Smurfberries and other virtual tchotchkes.

John Kelly

Rather than seeing this as a teachable moment — actions have consequences; it’s never too early to accumulate credit card debt — the parents are crying foul, blaming Apple and the video game companies, not their own Smurfberry-hungry offspring.

Wake up, Mr. and Mrs. America. You really think the problem is that it’s too easy for your toddler to download apps and purchase digital goblin gold and not that you’re the kind of parent who hasn’t vetted the game before sharing your iPad or iPhone with Junior?

What’s he doing with the iPad, anyway? It’s shiny and colorful and Steve Jobs says it’s great for children and so you just handed it over? Rather than criticizing Apple, you should be thanking it. You’ve found out something about your kid — at best he’s gullible; at worst, conniving — and about yourself: You have lost the skeptical edge that has kept humans alive for millennia. Let us imagine there really is something called a Smurfberry, a luscious, brightly colored fruit growing in boreal forests. One day, you are hiking through just such a forest and, feeling peckish, you pluck a Smurfberry from a bush and pop it in your mouth. Bad news: It’s poisonous.

You’ve learned a valuable lesson — or would have if you hadn’t been dead before you hit the ground: Don’t go sticking strange fruit in your mouth. Gain a little knowledge about your environment before you go all Survivorman.

I don’t expect us to know our killer mushrooms from our healthy ones anymore — we’ve traded our forests for the World Wide Web — but I do think we should be a bit more reluctant to embrace whatever virtual treat is placed in front of us. Especially when it comes to our kids.

From The Washington Post story, it looks as if the parents got one-time refunds for the charges. I wonder how they explained their anger to their children. Did they blame the game companies and Apple? Or did they admit that Mommy and Daddy hadn’t read the fine print?

One expression we hear a lot these days is “media literacy.” Given the dizzying array of online offerings, we all have to be smarter consumers. Is every company going to try to trick you into spending more money? No, and not every berry in the forest is going to kill you. But it’s probably healthier to start from a position that assumes the worst, not the best. And so here’s how those parents should have delivered their own media literacy lesson: Companies exist to make money. Some are kind of sneaky about how they do that. We should have been more careful about letting you play these games, and we will be in the future. In the meantime, here’s a book.

John Kelly is a columnist for The Washington Post.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

An appeal for less violent entertainment

Gun control isn’t the answer to mass murder! Changing our culture is!

Our children are subjected to violent TV programming, violent movies and violent video games, then we are shocked when a not-so-stable person commits mass murder. I appeal to the people responsible for entertainment in America to be responsible and quit making such violence as part of everyday life in America.

The money you make from this type of entertainment isn’t worth it if your loved one becomes a victim of a violent act of mass murder.

We can’t continue to help the whole world

There are more Irish in this country than there are in Ireland. There are more Britons than there are in England, Wales and Scotland combined. We have more blacks than many African countries. More of Germanic descent live here than fill Germany; enough Italians to make pizzas to surround the world and spaghetti to tie them together. Most of them paid their own travel, came in legally and took near starvation paying jobs. They didn’t drain the Welfare, ADC and Social Security system nor overburden the medical community.

All you who think we can absorb all those Chinese dissatisfied with their country’s policies and disgruntled Russians who let communism ruin their own country, raise your hand. Every one of you who think our coasts can hold the Central and South American millions, stand up.

The rest of you who know that our economy, our ability to house, feed and clothe our own population is already at the breaking point, sit quietly and say nothing. Nobody’s listening to you anyhow. You’ll only give yourself a heart attack, stroke or high blood pressure and Obamacare doesn’t.

Unjust accusations won’t change anything

I am also a parent who lost a son in a traffic-related accident at age 21. Hearing that devastating news is something parents fear always as their kids are growing up. One also knows as a parent, most kids go through a phase of living on the edge, rather than partying, drinking, driving fast or whatever.

In reading the recent letters to the editor about the Sept 12 accident, it seems unjust to accuse one party over the other for the cause of the accident. We all realize poor judgment is used when alcohol is involved. This was a very unfortunate incident, and my heart goes out to the families of those young men; however, blaming someone else is not going to change God’s plan he chose for those young men.

Parents should pay for child’s education

Like Mr. Paoli, I, too, am going to be very unpopular (Sunday, Feb. 6).

I have family members who are employees of the school district and I have friends with children in school who complain every year about the cost of getting those children enrolled. They aren’t going to like what I’m about to say.

I agree with Mr. Paoli’s opinion regarding not giving the schools any more money from property taxes. In America, children are guaranteed a “free” education which is in no way free. Our tax dollars pay for it. I have no problem with that. I do, however, have a problem with my property taxes being raised again and again to make up for the budget deficits caused by our current recession. Like many others, my property value has gone down and I am on a fixed income.

I have a suggestion how the schools can get more money. This is where I make a lot of people very angry but here goes:

Get it from the parents of the students.

Every parent knows that they are responsible for making sure their children receive an education. If you, as a parent, cannot afford to educate your children, then my best advice to you is don’t have three or four or more children. (I also support China’s One Child Policy, but this isn’t the time or place to go into that.)

I will say, however that as a childless-by-choice person, I resent being forced to support a school system in which I have no children taking part. Parents choose to have their children. They need to be the ones making sure the schools have what they need to educate those children.

Kudos for retiring Cassia Co. police officer

I am writing this letter to thank my sister, Sgt. Peggy Marizza, for all of her diligent years of service as a police officer for the Cassia County Sheriff’s office.

After 25 years of service, she has decided to retire from duty. She has always performed her duties as an officer of the law with dedication, integrity, honesty and compassion. She built herself a reputation that has been, will be and is admired and respected. No one will ever do it just like my sister.

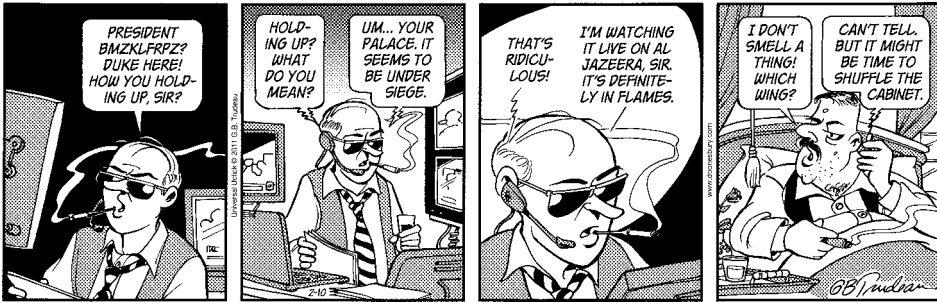

As a little girl, Peggy always loved playing with her toy guns, wanting to be able to scuba dive and ride her bike really fast. I can say that she took her childhood dreams and made them a reality.

So thanks, sis, for being so wonderful on the job and for the years of hard work and dedicated service to your community. I love and respect you.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... locking up the Big Wood

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

The inaction of decades has come home to roost in Ketchum.

The Big Wood River, which was once a playground open to all, is today a virtually private amenity available mostly to wealthy riverside homeowners.

The public is being denied use of most of the stretch of the Big Wood River that runs through Ketchum even though people have a right under state law to access the river by walking its banks up to the high water mark.

Although the city has river-protection ordinances as well, it's failed to enforce them. They limit removal of stream-bank vegetation, stream alterations and permanent structures on river-banks.

But the city defeated its own good intentions by failing to enforce the ordinances.

The city's enforcement policy — to enforce only when someone complains — has worked to the benefit of property owners who keep the river to themselves.

It's easy to buffalo people looking for nothing more than a summer's stroll, a little splash for the kids or a little fishing.

Lawns at the water's edge, fences that impede passage, and strategically placed lawn chairs strongly signal "Keep Out" and imply that the public is trespassing — even if it's not true.

Combined with the city's failure to clearly designate the points where the public may enter the riverside, the virtual "no trespassing" signs have left a riverside city with very little river at all.

Ketchum Planning and Zoning Commissioner Rich Fabiano ... showed the P&Z photographic evidence of flagrant violations and said he's making it his mission to stop encroachments on the 8.5 miles of stream banks in the city ...

It will be little surprise if the mayor and council members who lent support to the development of the Fourth Street and Town Plaza projects, which were intended to eventually "reconnect" the city with the river, end up stuttering and stammering when asked to enforce river-protection ordinances.

But they should find a way — even if it's difficult and homeowners resist ...

... time for school reform

Couer d'Alene Press

... Since Superintendent Tom Luna and Gov. Butch Otter kicked off the 2011 legislative session with proposals that would bring massive change to public education in Idaho, those entrenched in continuing to do things the same way as always have pushed back vigorously. These are almost all members of the current educational fraternity. They either don't know how to do their jobs better or they don't want to, and either way, our students lose. We all lose.

It's our hope that as the Senate Education Committee considers the Students Come First legislation this week, emphasis is placed on helping willing and capable educators do better. We believe the great majority do want their students to improve and are willing to change to make that happen. Incentives for teachers whose students improve performance are important, but they're not the whole answer ...

Rather than firing across adversarial lines, we hope the education community will come together to support change. They need to not just for themselves and the kids, but for the future of every Idahoan.

Idaho public education's staunchest supporter, the J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation — an organization that has invested more than $400 million in Idaho's students, educators and schools over the past 15 years — declared in a full-page ad ... that Students Come First is essential ...

The foundation's research shows that only one in four high school graduates is deemed college ready; that Idaho is in the bottom 10 states for college-going rates and dead last in the nation for our postsecondary retention rates; that in the future, most jobs will be for either highly skilled workers or the low-skilled working poor and that Idaho is preparing its students for the latter; and that by 2018, 61 percent of jobs in Idaho will require postsecondary credentials — and we're not on track to be able to fill the 146,000 skilled jobs that will be waiting.

May cooperation kindle the flame of change, and may determination see it through.

... Hart trouble

Idaho Statesman, Boise

In the equivalent of an out-of-court settlement,

Rep. Phil Hart traded away a committee vice chairmanship to make two ethics complaints go away.

It's the kind of a deal that doesn't provide a lot of closure on either side.

For those who want to see Hart, R-Hayden, held to account for his habitual transgressions, shuffling a committee assignment isn't going to cut it.

For those who fancy Hart as a principled and persecuted tax protester, even this tepid punishment will be unacceptable.

As less-than-satisfying options go, this is probably about as good as can be expected. And it's better than it could have been. Let's face it: Hart has been granted considerable leeway for wheeling and dealing during this investigation.

Remember last summer, when House Democrats filed a complaint against Hart, who has piled up hundreds of thousands of dollars in unpaid income tax bills, penalties and interest? House Speaker Lawrence Denney took his ethics committee's advice and removed Hart from the House Revenue and Taxation Committee — after Hart gave the move his blessing.

This time, Hart offered to give up his Transportation and Defense Committee vice chairmanship, and apologized on the House floor for the protracted nature of the ethics committee process. And that, ultimately, was good enough for the committee ...

What's in it for Hart? This deal spares him the potential of facing an ethics complaint on the House floor — and having to answer to charges that he used timber from state endowment lands without paying for it ...

What's in this bargain for the House — and, by extension, for the Idahoans they represent? Lawmakers get some of their time back.

There quickly comes a point .... when investigating even an embarrassment of a lawmaker reaches the point of diminishing returns. This Legislature faces a long list of tough issues that will affect the daily lives of Idahoans ...

Fittingly, Kootenai County voters will get the last word ...

Credit Card Debt?

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill
CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

CreditGUARD of America, a non-profit licensed debt management service provider, is making a new program available to lower debt payments and become free of all credit card debt in only three to five years. Consumers need only $2,000 or more in total credit card debt and are falling behind on any account, to cut their payment by 35% to 50%, and reduce or eliminate interest charges altogether.

Over 200,000 families, located throughout the U.S. have regained financial independence with CreditGUARD's licensed, bonded and insured service. CreditGUARD of America has received high marks in consumer surveys showing high consumer satisfaction and confidence. The CreditGUARD debt management program can lower your monthly payments by hundreds and save you thousands!

One such case is Sandra L. who proclaimed "CreditGUARD cut my monthly payment by $656 and saved me over $29,206.53 in interest. They saved my way of life and gave me back my piece of mind! Now I can see myself on my way to becoming debt free." or Jeffrey C. who said "CreditGUARD of America helped me consolidate 3 of my credit cards into one affordable payment. They are now saving me nearly $200 a month. Now I will be debt free in 2 years or less"

Feds say 38 guns found at mob fugitive's rural Idaho hideaway

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press

MARSING — To his neighbors, he was Jay Shaw, the guy with the vaguely New York accent. He was known for fixing computers, buying everything with cash, raising cows and knowing how to handle a gun.

To the FBI, he was a New England mobster who vanished in 1994 after a botched attempt to whack his boss.

On Wednesday, the 42-year-old dark-haired man, dressed in a yellow jumpsuit and his hands cuffed behind his back, strolled into a courtroom in Boise, sat down at a table and spoke calmly to a judge.

“My name is Enrico M. Ponzo,” he said.

After the judge read a long list of charges against him, Ponzo replied: “Not guilty, your honor.”

Ponzo, 42, appeared relaxed during his 40-minute court appearance, at times smiling at a handful of friends nearby and exchanging laughs with his attorney.

To the people who knew him in Marsing, a farming and ranching town southwest of Boise, the news about the man they called by his nickname “Jay” for the past decade pushed them to dig deep into their memories for signs of an elaborate hoax.

“It was probably all just fiction,” rancher Bodie Clapier, 52, whose family owns about 1,000 acres and lived next door.

Authorities said Ponzo had been living in Marsing under the name Jeffrey Shaw, but they declined to say how the FBI discovered him. During his arrest Monday, agents seized 38 firearms, $15,000 and a 100-ounce bar of either gold or silver.

Ponzo faces charges from a 1997 indictment accusing him and 14 others of racketeering, attempted murder and conspiracy to kill rivals. He is also charged in the 1989 attempted murder of Frank Salemme. Known as “Cadillac Frank,” Salemme is the ex-head of the Patriarca Family of La Cosa Nostra.

Ponzo moved into the community at the base of the Owyhee Mountains about a decade ago. He and his girlfriend lived in a two-story green house on a hill in a subdivision, neighbors said.

They knew immediately that he didn’t know anything about farming. He now has a dozen cows, Ponzo said in court.

After he arrived in town, Ponzo told some of his new neighbors that he was from New York. To their ears, he had the accent to prove it. He told others that he was from New Jersey.

Ponzo told people that his parents were killed when he was young, and that he had no other family.

He said he was a graphic designer, and would work on computers for his neighbors. Otherwise, he would work from home.

And he paid for everything in cash. The house wasn’t in his name, but he told some that the house had been paid off.

“It surprised me when he said his house was all paid for, because people struggle out here,” Clapier said.

Eventually he and his girlfriend had two children, a boy and a girl. Now his ex-girlfriend, Cara Lyn Pace, moved out of their home several months ago and is living with her parents in Utah. Pace’s mother declined to comment Wednesday.

From time to time, Ponzo and his neighbors would get to talking about guns.

“He did have an arsenal of guns. I never saw them, I only saw two of them, but he told me about all of his guns. He never said how many he had, but every time I talked about a gun he’d say ‘I’ve got one of those,’” Clapier said.

He and his son went out with Ponzo to shoot guns, and came away impressed.

“It was a lot of fun,” Clapier said. “After we got in the truck and were leaving, (his son) said: ‘Man, that guy knows how to handle a gun.’”

Ponzo also wanted to serve, and wanted to be on a board that regulates the water supply here. The board members held a vote to allow him on because he wasn’t technically a property owner — the house was in his girlfriend’s name.

“We always felt that something was a little strange,” said neighbor Sharie Kinney, whose husband, Jeff, is the board’s president.

On Monday, as children were coming off the school bus outside the subdivision, federal agents arrested Ponzo, neighbors said.

The judge appointed Ponzo a public defender and ordered him held without bail until another hearing Friday.

AROUND THE WEST

IDAHO Rigby woman jailed for forging checks

BOISE — A Rigby woman has been ordered to serve 30 months in prison for writing counterfeit checks during a four-year span, costing her former employer more than $364,000.

Kimberly Lords, 45, was sentenced Monday in federal court for counterfeiting checks from Golden West Irrigation Co.

The former secretary pleaded guilty in September to writing numerous checks from 2006 through 2010 to a vendor she claimed was her son.

An investigation showed those checks were forged with the signature and Social Security number of the company’s general manager, then deposited into Lords’ personal checking account. Most checks were for less than $2,500 to avoid scrutiny by the company’s bank.

An accountant noticed the suspicious activity and alerted company executives last February.

Shoshone woman dies in farm mishap

KETCHUM — A 62-year-old Shoshone woman has been killed in an agricultural accident.

The Idaho Mountain Express reports Susan Shoup died shortly after 2 p.m. on Feb. 3 after she fell from a mechanized stacking machine at a ranch south of Bellevue.

Bellevue Marshal Bryan Carpita says Shoup and her husband had hauled a load of hay to a ranch and were unloading it when the accident occurred. Carpita says Shoup had crawled up on the stacker to move some bales and was coming back down when she fell and hit her head on the fender of the stacker.

Man indicted in slaying of mother

BOISE — A 24-year-old Meridian man accused in a violent crime spree that ended with the stabbing death of his mother on Jan. 4 has been indicted on multiple charges including first-degree murder.

The Ada County grand jury also found probable cause to indict Michael James Lee on Wednesday on other charges, including second-degree kidnapping, aggravated assault and battery.

Prosecutors allege Lee assaulted his wife, tied her up and put her in the trunk of his car and drove to his mother’s house in Eagle. Court records say Lee ate dinner with 46-year-old Lynn Blake, argued with her and stabbed her 22 times.

Lee’s wife was able to escape the trunk and run to a neighboring house for help.

WASHINGTON STATE Boy suffocated by packing peanuts

SEATTLE — The King County Medical Examiner’s Office said a 10-year-old Shoreline, Wash., boy died from “positional asphyxia” after he got stuck headfirst in a box of packing peanuts.

The boy’s weight and the position of his head restricted him from breathing and he suffocated, according to the medical examiner’s office.

Sgt. John Urquhart, spokesman for the King County Sheriff’s Office, said the boy, Daniel Gocus, and a friend were playing hide-and-seek Jan. 28 when Daniel went into a closet, closed the door and climbed into an approximately 40-inch-tall box that was about two-thirds filled with packing peanuts.

The packing peanuts are believed to have contributed to his death by restricting his ability to move, Urquhart said.

Urquhart said the boy was found in the locked closet by his father about an hour after the game began.

Car care center sets up shop in Burley

Mini-Cassia Lube & Wash opens at former Royce & Sons location

By Judy Albertson
Times News writer

A Mini-Cassia man is boosting Burley's economy by bringing an empty buildinging back to life.

Jody Furniss has opened Mini-Cassia Lube & Wash in the former Royce & Sons Car Wash, 535 Minidoka Ave., in Burley, next to Century Cinema.

Furniss does custom farming, but decided to purchase the building in November.

"I wanted an alternate avenue. The building sat empty for two years and I thought about it for a year. People had told me what a good car wash it was and I thought 'What the heck, let's try it,'" Furniss said.

Lube service can be by appointment although walk-ins are accepted.

The lube includes cleaning the dash, vacuuming the interior, cleaning windows (inside and out) and topping off transmission, differential, transfer cases, radiator, power steering and washer fluids.

They'll also check and clean your battery, check belts and hoses, air filters, windshield wipers and grease the chassis. In addition, you can get a half price car wash with any lube. And if you can't get away from work to take your car in, give them a call. They have free pick up and delivery for a lube.

The car wash is touchless and includes a prewash and towel dry.

But if you're going to wait for your vehicle, you can do it in a warm and spacious waiting room.

"This is just like walking into your living room. You can read, watch TV, whatever you want," Furniss said.

Friday is Ladies Day at Mini-Cassia Lube & Wash.

"Any lady purchasing a lube on Friday gets a free $10 car wash," Furniss said.

For those who are reluctant to drive through a car wash, they will take care of that, too.

They also do auto details – basic to complete.

"We do the inside as well as bumper to bumper and engine," Furniss said.

Furniss' wife, Sarah, is licensed to do nails and pedicures and she has a shop, Nails by Sarah, in the same building. Ladies can have their nails done while their car is being serviced.

"Although it will take you a heck of a lot longer for the nails than for the lube," Furniss joked.

Republicans grill Bernanke over inflation

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress sharply questioned Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke Wednesday over whether the Fed's policies are raising the risk of higher inflation in the months ahead.

House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, R-Wis., said he is concerned that the Fed won't be able to detect inflation until "the cow is out of the barn" and inflation is already spreading dangerously through the economy.

Bernanke acknowledged that inflation is surging in emerging economies. But he downplayed the risks to the U.S. economy, even as lawmakers expressed concerns about rising gasoline and food prices.

Inflation in the United States remains "quite low," Bernanke said. He blamed higher prices on strong demand from fast-growing countries such as China—not the Fed's policies to stimulate the economy, including buying $600 billion worth of Treasury debt.

Bernanke's remarks suggest the Fed will stick with the bond-buying plan through June, as scheduled. The program is aimed at invigorating the economy by lowering rates on loans and boosting prices on stocks.

It was Bernanke's first appearance before the House since Republicans took control last month. He faced tough questions from them, despite being a member of the party.

Ryan worries that the Fed's

The New York Times

Ben Bernanke, the Federal Reserve chairman, testifies before the House Budget Committee on Capitol Hill in Washington on Wednesday.

stimulus policies, including the debt purchases, could trigger inflation or fuel speculative buying of stocks or other assets.

"Many of us fear monetary policy is on a difficult track," Ryan said.

Rep. Todd Rokita, R-Ind., seemed skeptical of the Fed's ability to fend off inflation before it gets out of hand. In the Fed's history, when did the Fed "get it right?" Rokita asked.

Bernanke said former Fed Chairman Paul Volcker brought down double-digit inflation during the 1980s by pushing up interest rates to levels not seen since the Civil War.

The Fed chief said he was confident the Fed has the political will to boost interest rates and snuff out inflationary forces before they take hold.

GROCERY COSTS CLIMB

High food prices ahead as corn reserves sink

The Associated Press

Americans should brace for higher food prices this year now that demand for corn has pushed U.S. supplies to their lowest point in 15 years.

Higher projected orders from the ethanol industry sent corn futures soaring Wednesday, as corn supplies became the latest commodity to plummet. Low levels of wheat, coffee, soybeans and other food staples have already sent prices surging on the global market.

As those reserves decline, U.S. food companies are warning of retail price increases.

The ethanol industry's projected corn orders this year have risen 8 percent, to 13 billion bushels, after record-high production in December and January, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

That means the United States will have a reserve of 675 million bushels left over in late August when this year's harvest begins. That's roughly 5 percent of all corn that will be consumed, the lowest surplus level since 1996.

The USDA report measures global supply and demand for grains, oilseeds and other crops. The department said its projections for wheat and soybean reserves remained unchanged at historically low levels.

The price of corn affects most food products in supermarkets. It's used to feed the cattle, hogs and chickens that fill the meat aisle. It is the main ingredient in Cap'n Crunch and Doritos. Turned into corn syrup, it sweetens most soft drinks.

The decline in reserves caused corn futures to surge, with prices rising 3 percent to settle at $6.98. Corn prices have already doubled in the last six months, rising from $3.50 a bushel to nearly $7 a bushel. Analysts expect the price increases to continue in coming months.

"I think we have a chance to test the all-time high" price of $7.65 a bushel, said Telvent DTN analyst John Sanow. The tight level of reserves leaves little margin for error if there are production problems this year, which could send prices higher quickly, he said.

Major food makers and some restaurants have already said they'll be raising prices this year because they're paying more for corn, wheat, sugar, coffee and chocolate, all of which are at historically high prices. Weather, such as flooding in Australia and droughts elsewhere, has affected many crops this year.

A severe drought in China, the world's largest wheat grower, could force prices even higher. The U.N.'s food agency has warned that the drought is driving up the country's wheat prices, and now the focus is on whether China

Gov. Otter names new Idaho human resources head

BOISE — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter named Vicki Tokita to head up his Division of Human Resources.

Tokita has been deputy administrator since August 2010, where she served under Wayne Hammon.

Hammon has had dual roles since 2009, working as acting head of that agency as well as the Division of Financial Management administrator.

Hammon became the center of controversy when he assumed both posts, because the previous human resources administrator received a $72,781 pension fund payment after she agreed to retire eight months early.

The Legislature later banned such payments, calling them sweetheart deals.

With Tokita's new role, Hammon will remain at the Division of Financial Management.

Otter says Tokita is "trusted and highly capable," with 34 years as a state government employee and half that time spent in human resources.

Allstate's net income falls

NEW YORK— Auto and home insurer Allstate says its net income fell sharply in the fourth quarter as an Arizona hailstorm caused it to pay out far more in catastrophe losses.

In the final three months of last year, the company earned $296 million, or 55 cents per share. That's down from $518 million, or 96 cents per share, in the year-ago period.

Not including one-time items, the company's operating income was $271 million, or 50 cents per share. By that measure, analysts on average expected a profit of 91 cents per share, according to FactSet.

Catastrophe losses surged to $537 million in the latest quarter, up from $328 million last year. Allstate said the spike was largely the result of the Arizona hailstorm.

Ameristar reports year-end revenue

Ameristar Casinos, which owns and operates Cactus

Petes Resort & Casino and the Horseshu, both in Jackpot, Nev. announced Wednesday its net income was $10.9 million for the three-month period ending Dec. 31, coming to 18 cents a share.

Revenue at Ameristar's eight casinos in seven regional markets grew 1 percent to $294.1 million.

‘Guitar Hero’ video game gets the ax

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — These days, guns are more popular than guitars, at least when it comes to video games. The company behind “Guitar Hero” said Wednesday that it is pulling the plug on one of the most influential video game titles of the new century.

Activision Blizzard Inc., which also produces the “Call of Duty” series, is ending the “Guitar Hero” franchise after a run of more than five years. The move follows Viacom Inc.’s decision in November to sell its money-losing unit behind the “Rock Band” video games. Harmonix was sold to an investment firm for an undisclosed sum. Harmonix, incidentally, was behind the first “Guitar Hero” game.

Game industry analysts have long lamented the “weakness in the music genre,” as they call it — that is, the inability of game makers to drum up demand for the products after an initial surge in popularity in the mid-2000s. Music games are often more expensive than your typical shoot-em up game because they require guitars, microphones and other musical equipment. While extra songs can be purchased for download, this hasn’t been enough to keep the games profitable.

Activision’s shares tumbled after the announcement, but investors appear more concerned with the company’s disappointing revenue forecast than the demise of the rocker game. As far as investors go, discontinuing an unprofitable product isn’t the end of the world, even if “Guitar Hero” fans disagree.

Activision did better than expected in the fourth quarter, which ended in December, but that already was anticipated. After all, it launched “Call of Duty: Black Ops” in November. That game, which is mostly set during the Vietnam War, made $1 billion after just six weeks in stores. Its latest “World of Warcraft” game has also been doing well.

Activision said Wednesday it lost $233 million, or 20 cents per share, in the latest quarter, compared with a loss of $286 million, or 23 cents per share, in the same period a year earlier. Net revenue fell to $1.43 billion from $1.56 billion.

the nation’s biggest meat company, says it is aiming to cut $200 million in operational costs to offset higher corn and soybean costs. CEO Donnie Smith calls that the “new normal” price range. Tyson said chicken, beef and pork prices are expect to rise, if only slightly, this year as producers seek to cover costs.

$12 at many markets.

It’s not just playing out in the grocery store. McDonald’s Corp. said last month that it may raise prices this year as its own food tab rises. The company already raised prices in some markets, including the United Kingdom.

Rising grain costs hit meat producers first. Tyson Foods, will buy more from the global market, where prices have already risen about 35 percent since mid-November.

Consumers will likely see price hikes as early as three months from now, though most of the impact won’t be felt for another six months, said Scott Irwin an agriculture economics professor at the University of Illinois. Chicken prices are among the first to rise because the bird’s life span is so short that higher feed costs get factored in quickly, he said. Price hikes for hogs take about a year and cattle two years, while packaged foods take six or seven months to start rising.

Some food makers already began selectively raising prices within the past few quarters.

Those higher prices are filtering into stores. Supermarkets have resisted price increases for some time, hoping to hold onto their cost-conscious customers in the tough economy. But chains such as Kroger now also say higher prices are coming.

Cereal maker Kellogg Co. said last week it plans to raise prices by 3 to 4 percentage points. Sara Lee Corp. said Tuesday it will continue its price increases as it copes with higher commodity costs.

And J.M. Smucker Co. said Tuesday that it would raise prices again on Folgers and Dunkin Donuts coffee for the third time this year, by 10 percent on average. A large can of Folgers is already going for around Bernanke did acknowledge that rising gas prices are a threat to the economy. Prices have been around $3 a gallon nationally. If they were to go above $4 a gallon, that would “take a significant amount of disposable income away from people,” he said.

Still, Bernanke defended the bond-purchase program. He said it is needed to ease high unemployment and credited all the Fed’s stimulus policies with creating or saving 3 million jobs over the past several years.

The unemployment rate was 9 percent in January after the fastest two-month decline in 53 years. Bernanke said the drop is encouraging but cautioned that it will take four or five years for hiring to return to normal — around 5 percent or 6 percent. He said the economic recovery won’t be assured until companies step up hiring on a consistent basis.

Ryan and Bernanke agreed that Congress and the White House must have a plan to reduce the government’s $1 trillion-plus deficits.

Ryan favors budget cuts to get the deficits under control.

Bernanke didn’t endorse any specific policies on deficit-cutting. He said lawmakers should hold off on spending cuts or tax increases until the economy is in better shape.

Second blizzard howls through Okla., Ark.

By Tim Talley
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Another powerful blizzard howled through the nation's midsection Wednesday, piling up to 2 feet of new snow on parts of Oklahoma and Arkansas still struggling to clean up from last week's epic storm.

The blowing snow brought traffic to a halt, and the National Guard was summoned to rescue stranded motorists. Subzero wind chills forced ranchers to work desperately to protect their herds.

As the storm barreled out of the Plains, it took aim at the Deep South, which was expected to get up to five inches of snow. At least two traffic deaths were blamed on the system.

About 200 truck drivers sought shelter at a truck stop at the intersection of Interstate 44 and U.S. Highway 69, about 60 miles northeast of Tulsa.

"We have a 20-acre parking lot," said owner Katrina Franks. "But it's just utter chaos trying to get them started and keep them moving."

Truck driver Mike Mallory was hauling chemicals from Houston to Iowa when he pulled into the Big Cabin Travel Plaza as the weather worsened.

"It was a rude awakening when I got up this morning," Mallory said. "I can't even see the tollway from the parking lot."

The heaviest snow was concentrated in the northeast corner of the state, where the towns of Colcord and Spavinaw got 22 and 23 inches, respectively. The deepest snow was reported near the village of Jay, with 25 inches.

The fresh snow was especially troublesome in Tulsa, where many roads were still impassable from last week's record 14-inch snowfall. The previous storm kept students out of school for at least six days. Mail, bus and trash service were only recently restored.

Five more inches of snow fell Wednesday in Tulsa, according to the National Weather Service. That raised the city's total for the winter to 25.9 inches, breaking the previous seasonal record of 25.6 inches, set during the winter of 1923-24.

More than 275 National Guard soldiers were deployed in Humvees from armories across the state to search for stranded motorists.

"A Humvee can get through a lot, but we have some snow drifts that are 5 to 6 feet high," said state Emergency Management spokeswoman Michelann Ooten.

As the storm intensified late Tuesday, about 50 Greyhound passengers were dropped off at a shelter set up by a Tulsa church. Company spokesman Timothy Stokes said they were given the option of staying at the bus terminal or the shelter, and that they would be picked up to continue the trip when it's safe to travel.

One passenger, Dean Guay, 23, was travelling from New York to California for a job. "Everything was going fine until Oklahoma, then it went crazy," Guay said Wednesday. He hoped to make it to California by Saturday.

In Springfield, Mo., a 31-year-old woman was killed when she lost control of her vehicle after passing a car and veered off a snow-covered road into a ditch. Two young children survived the crash with minor injuries. An Arkansas motorist was reported dead in a tractor-trailer crash just east of Little Rock, police said.

Oklahoma ranchers struggled to keep their herds well fed and hydrated as wind chills fell well below zero.

In Beaver County, where overnight wind chills dropped to minus 19, Danny Engelman spent Wednesday tending to more than 300 head of cattle.

"If the temperatures get down to zero, with wind chills of 20 below zero, you've got a good chance of losing a calf," Engelman said. "Sometimes you've got to put them in the pickup and get some heat on them. But once that baby calf gets some milk in his stomach, he's good to go."

MOONLIGHTING

Correspondent tries snowshoeing in the dark

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The moon was beginning to peek over the bald foothills that stand guard over Trail Creek as I turned my Subaru into the parking lot of the Sun Valley Nordic Center.

Already, about three dozen people were massed outside the luxurious Sun Valley Club helping one another strap snowshoes over their Sorel boots.

I loaded my classic cross-country skis and boots and my snowshoes and Sorels into my arms and trudged over, unsure of which I would end up using.

“Come with us,” encouraged a snowshoer. “The more the merrier.”

Looking around, I didn’t see any Nordic skiers. It had rained a little the day before, making tracks a little icy and presumably scaring the skiers off. So I strapped on my snowshoes and joined one of the groups heading out on what was the Sun Valley Nordic Center’s first Full Moon Ski and Snowshoe Tour.

By now the full moon was hanging in the northeast, its shadowed volcanic craters casting purplish-blue mosaic images.

Our group of 10 was led by Dan Daigh, a longtime ski instructor at Sun Valley’s Nordic Center. He moved to Sun Valley from Driggs years ago for the more accessible mountain biking and backcountry skiing that Sun Valley could provide and never left.

“Alright group, we’re moving right along,” said Daigh.

We made our way past the antique clock standing outside the Gun Club, past trees wrapped in white Christmas lights as we prepared to step into the blackness.

Only it wasn’t black. The moon bathed us in light, so much that we could see one another’s faces.

Baldy stood in the distance, its ski runs illuminated by the rising moon.

“Sure is bright out here,” remarked one snowshoer.

With temperatures in the 20s it didn’t feel the least bit cold. If it had, all we had to do was walk a little harder and we would have warmed right up.

“Whoops! Skiers coming through,” cautioned another as five Nordic skiers using the skate lane intersected our trail.

We headed into a tunnel of trees, Daigh’s Petzl headlamp providing a welcome source of illumination as it bobbed up and down.

We clambered along, our snowshoes making a clacking noise as we moved along the packed, flat trail.

“I absolutely love this,” said Boisean Gwen Drake, as her husband John tried to take a picture of the moon. “We moved back for the four seasons, for fresh air like this. And this couldn’t be more perfect.”

Andrea Piersall and Kyla Brown — two young women in their 20s — tried stepping off the trail, sinking up to their knees in powder.

“We’ve never done this before so we thought we’d try it,” said Piersall, a part-time Sun Valley homeowner with a home in San Francisco.

Wanting to experience the silence of a Sun Valley winter evening, the two hung back from the group for a few minutes watching the lights of the snow groomers move up and down Baldy’s slopes.

“It’s amazing how different things look out here in the moonlight,” marveled Piersall. “Look at the hills across from the clubhouse — you’d think you were

Fishing tourney will heat up Magic Reservoir

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

If you know anglers, they’re a tough breed who don’t let snow and ice hinder their sport. Some prefer the ice.

Whether rain, snow or sunshine, come next week you’ll be able to find a number of these savvy sportsmen on Magic Reservoir participating in an ice fishing tournament.

The event is 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Feb. 19 and 20.

It’s been several years since Magic held a fishing tournament, said Don Hartman, owner of West Magic Resort. He decided to restart it as a way to promote fishing in south-central Idaho. It’s one of the few times a year, he said, when the reservoir looks like a scene out of the movie “Grumpy Old Men.”

“What the heck,” Hartman said about his decision to restart the tournament. “As long as it took for the reservoir to freeze this year, everybody has cabin fever.”

The tournament will be a good way to help cure them of that, he said.

Anglers may participate in two categories for perch and trout: longest and heaviest, Hartman said. Not quantity. Cash prizes will be awarded and, if they wish, anglers can donate their catch to a fish fry held Sunday afternoon.

Anglers also will be able to learn from representatives of Sportsman’s Warehouse and the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, who’ll be on hand to give tips about ice safety and fishing techniques.

Doug Megargle, regional fisheries manager for Fish and Game, said since Hartman had planned the fishing tournament it was a good time for the department to hold a concurrent event.

“It’s a unique opportunity to come out and have a good time,” he said. “We’re going to be up there helping new anglers.”

Scott Stanton, regional fisheries biologist, will be available from 9 a.m. to noon Feb. 19. An auger and a limited number of fishing rods will be available to beginners who might need them, he said.

“I’ll be there to give people a hand and do some ice fishing,” Stanton said.

Season in review

A number of perch and trout lie on the frozen surface of Magic Reservoir.

IF YOU FISH

Magic Reservoir’s ice fishing tournament will be held 8 a.m.-1 p.m. Feb. 19 and 20. Registration starts at 7 a.m. both days. Includes cash prizes, raffles and fish fry. There’s a $3 entry fee per species each day. Information: 487-2571 or www.westmagicresort.com sent snow and cold temperatures throughout the season followed by periods of warm weather, has done little to spark good ice fishing this year.

“Ice fishing in general has been struggling this year,” Megargle said, noting that above-freezing temperatures have made it difficult for anglers to access the ice.

“What happens is that the shoreline tends to open up,” he said.

Fishing has been decent in at least a few places. Salmon Falls and Lake Walcott, in particular, have been doing well.

“We’ve watched the snowpack drop slowly because we haven’t gotten a whole lot of big precipitation storms in the mountains since early season,” Megargle said. “We’d love to see more snow in the mountains.”

Magic, which didn’t freeze until New Year’s Day, has been doing better than usual for trout, with perch picking up in the narrows. Hartman said he expects good fishing through the month.

Weekends at the reservoir have been busy lately as anglers and their shanties dot the icy surface.

Jarret Wetzel, of Bellevue, poses with some of the fish he caught at Magic Reservoir. The reservoir will hold an ice fishing tournament, something it hasn’t done for several years, on Feb. 19-20.

Safety on ice

Remember these safety tips, offered by a number of savvy anglers over the years, before going onto the ice:

- Never venture onto ice less than 4 inches thick
- Stay away from milky-colored ice; clear ice is strongest
- Drill as you go to check ice thickness
- Carry ice picks, which, if you were to fall into the water, can be used to pierce the ice and give you something to hold onto as you climb out
- Bring rope in case you need to help someone out of the water, or if they need to help you
- Make sure you have good ventilation in heated fishing shanties to avoid carbon monoxide poisoning
- Avoid going onto ice if it has broken away from shore; this is a sign that melting is under way
- Be mindful of weather patterns and your surroundings
- If you plan to fish by yourself, be sure to tell a family member or friend where you are going and when you’ll be home

County, Forest Service to fix road in Jarbidge

By Julie Wootton
Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO, Nev. — Elko County Commissioners agreed Thursday to work with the U.S. Forest Service to repair part of the Deer Creek Grade Road in Jarbidge.

The cost of repairing a segment of the road will be split between the Forest Service and Elko County. Commissioners voted unanimously to enter into a cooperating agreement with the Forest Service and the county will spend up to $40,000 on repairs.

Warren Russell, chairman of the Board of County Highway Commissioners, said the road is a hazard for large vehicles, but total road failure hasn't occurred.

Commissioners also voted unanimously to have the highway department put up signs indicating that the road is county owned, but not maintained, so motorists should travel at their own risk.

Elko County highway

supervisor Otis Tipton said damage to the steep and narrow road was likely caused by seismic activity.

Several Jarbidge residents said they want to see the road repaired.

Former Elko County Commissioner Roberta Skelton, a Jarbidge resident, said the road serves as an access point out of the canyon for emergency purposes.

It's also used by people hunting and recreating, she said.

Commissioner Jeff Williams agreed that the road needs to be repaired because it's a public safety issue in its current condition.

The project would also include repairing a retaining wall that was destroyed by a boulder.

Tipton said there aren't affordable facilities where workers could stay in Jarbidge. However, Jarbidge resident Jane Smith offered to help make arrangements to have workers stay with local families and receive meals.

Climate outlook grim for wolverines in western states

By Mead Gruver
Associated Press writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — New computer modeling reinforces that climate change could spell trouble for another high-elevation species, the wolverine.

A warmer climate could reduce the winter and spring mountain snowfall that helps protect wolverine young, Synte Peacock, a scientist with the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo., said Tuesday.

Snow insulates wolverine dens and shields wolverine kits from predators. In some mountainous areas of the West, average spring snow depth could decline by as much as fourfold by the end of this century.

Some places could become wetter, so the problem wouldn't necessarily be less precipitation.

"The main shift is from a lot of snowfall to temperatures causing that snow to fall as rain," said Peacock, an oceanographer who published her findings last month in the journal Environmental Research Letters.

Summertime high temperatures could meanwhile rise above what the animals can tolerate, she said.

Her paper examined three scenarios based on worldwide efforts to reduce greenhouse emissions. Only the scenario that required significant work to curb carbon dioxide emissions didn't result in significantly less snowfall.

Wolverines are the largest member of the weasel family. They resemble small bears with bushy tails and are famously ferocious predators, known to take on sick caribou and other species several times their size.

Scientists also have warned in recent years that climate change could harm the lynx, an elusive cat, and pika, a high country rodent.

Climate change was a significant concern when the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced in December that wolverines in the West deserve federal protection that for now will go to other species facing more urgent threats.

The NCAR study appears to be good science that reinforces the finding, said Shawn Sartorius, the Fish and Wildlife lead biologist for wolverines.

The computer modeling isn't detailed enough to allow conclusions about what will happen to wolverine habitat in specific mountain ranges, he said.

"It's premature to conclude when wolverine habitat might be gone, or how much it would be reduced, from a paper like this," Sartorius said. "But the impacts are real."

Canada is home to perhaps 15,000-20,000 wolverines but no more than a few hundred exist in the lower 48 states, where predator control in the last century all but wiped them out. Most wolverines in the lower 48 states are in Wyoming, Idaho, Montana and the northern Cascades in Washington state.

Lone, wandering wolverines have been documented in recent years in Colorado and California's Sierra Nevada. Recently Colorado has been taking another look at reintroducing wolverine populations.

Things you should know about ATV legislation and hunting

Q: "What's this new four-wheeler legislation I'm hearing about and what are the issues with Fish and Game?"

A: I will explain the Fish and Game issues and then the proposed legislation. This issue has developed a political life of its own with what appears to be a lot of misunderstanding.

The department has the motorized vehicle hunting rule. In effect, it prohibits both motorized cross-country travel and use of motorized vehicles on trails while hunting. Exceptions to this rule were made for mobility-impaired sportsmen, game retrieval, hunters using motorized vehicles to pack in camps and hunting on private property.

The MVR was developed in 2002 in response to complaints and conflicts between hunters using motorized vehicles off-road and hunters on foot or horseback. Since then, the technology of motorized vehicles has improved, allowing more hunters to access previously secured big-game habitats rarely visited by sportsmen. This improved access by motorized vehicles to secure areas has resulted in increased vulnerability of big game animals to hunter harvest. The loss of security areas for animals roughly translates into fewer mature bucks and bulls available to hunters, and has created a continuing conflict between motorized and non-motorized sportsmen.

ASK THE OFFICER

Fish and Game's rule is designed to restrict off-road motorized vehicle use for hunting and only applies to those who are in the act of hunting. The definition of "hunting" is thoroughly defined by state law and it requires more than simply carrying a firearm on an OHV. Non-hunting motorized vehicle users are not affected by this law and this rule in no way creates "defacto wilderness" or affects an individual's Second Amendment right to bear arms.

The Fish and Game Commission has implemented the MVR in 31 big-game management units south of the Salmon River. In the Magic Valley big game management units 45, 47, 49, 52, 52A, 53 and 56 are included in the MVR. About 50 percent of hunters contacted at department check stations in the fall utilize an off-highway vehicle. The majority of hunters generally support restrictions on the use of OHVs for hunting as long as they are allowed for game retrieval.

Some ATV enthusiasts view the Commission's rule to regulate the use of motorized vehicles as an aid to hunting as intrusive to all ATV riders. Others say the rule is discriminatory.

In a way, many hunting and fishing rules do discriminate. For example, seniors, juniors, handicapped and military personnel are treated differently from the rank and file sportsmen because they are given a break on the cost of licenses and tags. Non-residents are required to pay a substantially higher price for licenses and tags. Hunters with a handicapped vehicle permit are one of the groups exempt from the MVR. Many other rules restrict firearms, archery equipment, and muzzle loaders as well as hunting hours and seasons.

Non-motorized sportsmen call the MVR rule a "blessing," enabling them to find places to hunt away from roads without the nearby hum of vehicle activity. They quote research on how motorized vehicle restrictions help facilitate movement by big animals back into areas with roads, thus allowing more animals to stay nearer roaded areas and thereby available to sportsmen hunting by foot.

The proposed legislation would prohibit Fish and Game from recognizing vehicle use as an aid to hunting, thereby nullifying the department's motorized-vehicle hunting rule.

For the Fish and Game

Commission to maintain general big game hunting with relatively abundant big game herds, significant restrictions on season length and changes in timing would be required to avoid over-harvesting populations. If off-road vehicle use degraded habitat suitability and availability, the future could also include a steady transition to more restricted hunting opportunities such as controlled hunts.

Unrestricted motorized vehicle use by hunters would also likely result in a deepened conflict between motorized and non-motorized sportsmen.

The proposed legislation would allow all properly licensed OHVs to travel off-road throughout most of the lands managed by the Idaho Department of Lands and the Bureau of Land Management. This is because most of these areas have no restrictions for off-road vehicle use. The Sawtooth and Boise national forests have both implemented travel plans that designate roads and trails open or closed to motorized vehicles.

For questions about areas open to motorized travel on the Sawtooth or Boise national forests, contact your nearest U.S. Forest Service office.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: To save money, my wife and I filed our own Chapter 7 bankruptcy and now the bankruptcy trustee wants to seize my daughter's car because my name is on the title. Is this legal?

Answer: In Idaho, it is well established that if your name is on the title to a car, then you have an ownership interest in that car. When you file a bankruptcy, all the assets you have an ownership interest in become part of your bankruptcy estate and can be liquidated for the benefit of your creditors UNLESS THE ASSET IS EXEMPT under state law. Idaho law provides a generous list of exemptions to protect the common types of property items most people own. However, you and your wife are entitled to only one automobile exemption each. Apparently, you used the exemptions on the cars you and your wife drive, leaving your daughter's car unprotected. Even at this late stage, it might be possible to realign your exemptions to protect all or a portion of the value of your daughter's car. If that is not possible, there are other options including (1) negotiating a cash payment with the trustee in lieu of seizure, and (2) conversion of your case to a case under Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code. You should call an experienced bankruptcy attorney right away.

Filer students jump rope for heart health

JOHN E. SWAYZE/For the Times-News

Filer School District physical education teacher Jodi Ferrell, center, and elementary and intermediate students raised money for the American Heart Association on Friday through a jump-rope fundraiser.

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Improving your health and finding a cure for cardiovascular disease may be as simple as jumping rope. Students at Filer Elementary School and Filer Intermediate School took this lesson to heart Friday by participating in a Jump Rope for Heart fundraiser.

“Jump Rope for Heart is a community service outreach and we hope it will become a tradition,” said Jodi Ferrell, a physical education teacher for the school district.

“We don’t know how much (was raised) right now, but all the kids got sponsors and all money raised goes to the American Heart Association.”

Over three weeks, students in first through sixth grade at both schools learned about the importance of heart health and prepared for 30 minutes of jump rope activity that took place on Friday. The event included six four-minute rotating stations with bouncy-ball hopscotch, a turning jump-rope tire formation course, a standing long jump, a free jump, a long rope jump and a station with water and apples.

“This week we’ve had a cowboy day, red and white day, fruit day and then today was a celebration of everything they’ve done,” Ferrell said on Friday. “We’ve been really promoting kids getting fit.”

Local students honored at WSU

Leigh V. Castillo of Twin Falls and Haley Suzanne Ramseyer of Filer were named to Washington State University’s president’s honor roll list for the 2010 fall semester.

The president’s honor roll recognizes students who stand above the rest with excellent academic performance. To be eligible, undergraduate students must be enrolled in a minimum of nine graded hours in a single term at WSU and earn a 3.75 grade-point average or a 3.50 cumulative GPA, based on 15 cumulative hours of graded work.

Any healthy person age 17 or older and weighing at least 110 pounds may be eligible to donate blood. Valid identification is required for all blood donations.

Schedule an appointment by calling Marie Hansen, Rupert Blood Drive chairwoman, 436-0360, or the American Red Cross at 800-RED-CROSS or redcross-blood.org.

Nominations accepted now for citizen service awards

The Congressional Medal of Honor Society and Foundation are looking for citizen heroes for the Citizen Service Before Self Honors. The awards recognize and honor those ordinary Americans who have clearly demonstrated a willingness to sacrifice for others — whether through a single act of extraordinary heroism at risk to one’s life or through a prolonged series of selfless acts.

Nominations close Feb.18. They can be made online through www.CitizenServiceBeforeSelfHonors.org.

A panel including Medal of Honor recipient representation will select national finalists from the nominations. Those finalists will be announced March 7. A second panel of Medal of Honor recipients will then select three people from the finalists for the award, naming them March 21. The three will be recognized in a March 25 ceremony near the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va.

Idaho state finalists have included Jeremiah Yates of Kimberly, who was recognized last year for trying to rescue and helping calm two women trapped inside a demolished and burning vehicle on Dec. 11, 2009, on Interstate 84 near Jerome.

Hope for victims of granuloma annulare

DEAR DR. GOTT: I would like to know of any effective treatment for granuloma annulare.

DEAR READER: This is a chronic skin condition that presents with raised red or flesh-colored lumps that generally appear on the hands, feet, knees and elbows. The lesions often disappear within two years without treatment; however, they may reappear at a later time, and the cycle will repeat itself. The skin may itch, but this is uncommon. When the condition becomes widespread, ring-like patterns may appear over the body and itching becomes more common.

Your primary-care physician or a dermatologist can often diagnose the condition through visual examination. When questions remain, a skin biopsy for examination under a microscope might be done, or a KOH test might be considered. This simply involves scraping the skin onto a glass slide for the purpose of collecting dead cells that will ultimately be mixed with potassium hydroxide (KOH) to identify or rule out fungal infection.

ASK

Should you choose to treat your granuloma annulare, this might be accomplished through corticosteroid creams, ointments or injections, cryotherapy (freezing) or light therapy. For generalized granuloma annulare, some physicians prescribe topical calcineurin inhibitors. System treatments include hydroxychloroquine, isotretinoin or dapson. Speak with your physician to determine which treatment might be best. Good luck.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For years, I thought I was suffering from narcolepsy. I can barely stay awake at work, and when I’m home, I do nothing but sleep. This has gotten progressively worse over the past three or four years. I just recently found out that my B12 level is at 149, and my primary-care physician thinks that is the cause of the hypersomnia. I’m getting B12 shots every other week for two months and then will get shots once a month. After three shots, I feel no better. I’m missing out on life because I’m just too tired to do anything.

Walgreens carries a sublingual B12 supplement, which I am tempted to take. Do you think it will help? Is there some other factor that could be causing me to feel this way? Any suggestions you can give me would be greatly appreciated.

DEAR READER: Vitamin B12 deficiency would cause a number of significant signs, including fatigue, before it would cause true narcolepsy, a chronic sleep disorder. People suffer daytime drowsiness and drop off to sleep at inappropriate times without warning. They may awaken feeling refreshed, fall asleep again, and repeat the pattern. Sleep paralysis may occur, accompanied with vivid dreams and an inability to speak or move during falling asleep or waking.

Diagnosis might be accomplished through polysomnography at a sleep center, a sleep latency test that determines how long it takes a person to fall asleep, detailed sleep records and a sleep history presented to your doctor.

Vitamin B12 deficiency is relatively rare because the body stores several years worth at a time and a healthful diet to include seafood, milk, cheese and eggs is readily available; however, those with pernicious or megaloblastic anemia, Crohn’s, celiac or Grave’s disease, lupus and excessive alcohol consumption, as well as vegetarians, vegans and the elderly, may be at increased risk.

Oral B12 tablets are reported to contain more of the vitamin than is available through injection; however, they are not absorbed as well as the injectable form. I recommend you speak with your primary-care physician to be assured this method is appropriate for you. You should also undergo routine lab testing and perhaps X-rays to rule out other conditions to explain your fatigue. Only then can you get to the bottom of the issue.

Hallie Carmen Carlson

Hallie Carmen Carlson, 102, died Sunday, Feb. 6, 2011, from natural causes at Lincoln County Care Center in Shoshone, Idaho.

She had been a housewife, mother and, most of her life, enjoyed playing the piano and reading the Bible.

Hallie was born Dec. 5, 1908, in Willow Township, Iowa, the daughter of Lydia and Carl Sterner. She graduated from Kimberly High School in 1925. She attended Albion Normal School from 1926 until her graduation in 1928. She taught school from 1929 until 1930. After a few months of courtship, she married Marion Carlson on Nov. 11, 1931, in Oregon City, Ore. The family became three with the birth of a son, Boyd Marion Carlson, on Aug. 8, 1932. At that time, they lived on a ranch near Darlington, Idaho. Hallie and her family ended up in Twin Falls, where she attended the First Baptist Church. She taught some classes, played the piano and participated in church activities. She was very strong in the Christian faith and kept that faith in Jesus her entire life. One phrase she always used was "Trust in the Lord" until Alzheimer's Disease rendered her into quietness.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Marion L. Carlson; and a brother, Paul Sterner. Hallie is survived by her son, Boyd M. (Kathleen) Carlson of Las Vegas, Nev.; and her grandchildren, Gregg Carlson, Karen Fisher and Thomas Carlson. She also leaves her great-grandchildren, Jessica Fisher, Kyle Fisher, Erik Carlson and Ty Carlson.

A graveside celebration of Hallie's life will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 10, at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Services are under the direction of White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

Debra Jean Garza

BUHL — Debra Jean Garza, age 56, died peacefully at home with family beside her Friday, Feb. 4, 2011, after a strong and courageous battle with cancer.

Debbie was born in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Dec. 8, 1954, to Paul and Marcella Povalawski. Debbie came into this world having to struggle and went out much the same way. She was a strong and beautiful person. She grew up in Buhl, Idaho, along with her three brothers and two sisters. She graduated in 1973 from high school. She then started her working career by working at Pet Milk Inc. After the closure of that facility, she was given the opportunity to go back to school, where she completed the certified medical assistant program at CSI. She graduated in 1997 with top honors.

Debbie had many hobbies: she liked to read a good book, to go fishing and camping, and to sew for her children and grandchildren. She was a great story teller and those stories were shared with family and friends. Debbie had two children and then later met and married Robert Garza on Aug. 17, 1990, and they had three children together.

Debbie is survived by her husband, Robert of Buhl; her

NY congressman resigns after shirtless photo story

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

CLARENCE, N.Y. — A married New York congressman accused of sending a shirtless photo of himself to a woman abruptly resigned Wednesday, saying he regretted actions that had hurt his family and others.

The gossip website Gawker reported Wednesday that Rep. Christopher Lee, a two-term Republican with a young son, had e-mailed the photo to a woman he met on the Craigslist classified-ads website.

Lee said in an e-mailed statement that his resignation was effective immediately. The statement offered no confirmation or details of a Craigslist posting.

"I regret the harm that my actions have caused my family, my staff and my constituents," Lee said in a statement posted on his congressional website. "I deeply and sincerely apologize to them all. I have made profound mistakes and I promise to work as hard as I can to seek their forgiveness."

Lee said the challenges faced in western New York, where he serves the 26th Congressional District, and across the country are "too serious for me to allow this distraction to continue, so I am announcing that I have resigned my seat in Congress effective immediately."

Lee's resignation comes almost a year after Democrat Eric Massa resigned his seat in western New York's 29th Congressional District amid an investigation into whether he sexually harassed male staffers. Massa gave contradictory explanations for his behavior, acknowledging he groped and tickled a staffer in a nonsexual way and wrestled with others at his 50th birthday party but then denying any groping occurred.

In Lee's case, a woman described as a 34-year-old Maryland resident and government employee provided Gawker with e-mails she said were an exchange between her and Lee in response to an ad she placed last month in the "Women Seeking Men" section of Craigslist.

Gawker reported that Lee identified himself as a divorced lobbyist and sent a photo of himself posing shirtless in front of a mirror. It said the woman eventually broke off the contact with Lee after becoming suspicious that he had misrepresented himself.

Lee served on the House Ways and Means Committee and was active on economic revitalization issues.

He has a business background stemming from his family's manufacturing enterprises.

Lee has been very involved with pushing flight safety since a plane crashed into a house in Clarence, part of his Buffalo-area district, on Feb. 12, 2009, killing 49 people aboard the plane and the home's owner.

Scott Maurer, whose daughter was one of those who died in the crash, was at a news conference on flight safety with Lee in Washington on Tuesday. He said Lee was "a hard worker and a good guy" who "loved and cared for" his community.

"He was 100 percent professional with us, 100 percent supportive and seriously was considerate and concerned with aviation safety, so to hear that he's resigned is a huge loss of support for our efforts," Maurer said Wednesday night.

House GOP proposes sweeping cuts in Obama's budget priorities

By Andrew Taylor and David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pushed by rebellious conservatives, House Republican leaders scrambled Wednesday night to find deeper cuts, officials said, hours after laying out a plan to save $35 billion by eliminating at least 60 federal programs and cutting back hundreds of others.

Republican officials said one possibility was to add across-the-board cuts to supplement the targeted reductions spelled out earlier in the day at a closed-door meeting for the rank and file.

The original plan targeting education and the environment, food safety and law enforcement presents a blunt challenge to President Barack Obama.

It calls for eliminating a high-speed rail program the administration has ticketed for a multibillion-dollar expansion and recommends ending federal support for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, family planning services and AmeriCorps.

The government's principal nutrition program for pregnant women would be cut 6 percent below last year's level.

The proposal marks an initial attempt by newly empowered Republicans to cut spending and reduce the size of the federal government. Yet it sets the stage for weeks of political combat as Democrats seek to blunt the cuts while tea party-backed conservatives demand more of them.

Republicans are "keeping our pledge to the American people that we will cut spending," House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said after details were outlined for the rank and file at a closed-door meeting.

Preliminary details of the plan emerged just before Obama hosted Boehner and his two top lieutenants at a White House lunch.

Reacting mildly to the recommended cuts, White House press secretary Robert Gibbs cited a "broad agreement that we have to change the way Washington works, particularly as it relates to spending."

At the same time, Gibbs said, "We have to do so in a way that protects the important investments so that we can win the future," signaling the president will fight to protect his own priorities.

But some conservatives told the Republican leadership at the closed-door meeting that they want deeper cuts to fulfill campaign pledges to reduce spending to levels in effect in 2008.

Republicans withheld many of the details of their proposal, which officials said was undergoing final changes before legislation is filed. Officials described the effort on condition of anonymity to discuss the private discussions.

Still unclear, officials said, is whether the draft measure will try to ban the Environmental Protection Agency from regulating greenhouse gases under the Clean Air Act. Alternatively, a prohibition to that effect could be added when the bill reaches the House floor next week.

Other GOP priorities, including a ban on using federal money to implement the new health care law, are expected to be added, as well.

According to material presented by Rep. Harold Rogers, R-Ky., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, the cuts would stretch across a vast range of domestic programs, from the EPA to housing, the weather service, food safety and inspection and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Community Development Block Grant, which provides funding for municipalities, would also be cut.

Rep. Giffords speaks for first time since shooting

HOUSTON — Rep. Gabrielle Giffords is able to speak: She asked for toast at breakfast one recent morning.

Her ability to say even just a word, a month after being shot in the head, pleased her family, friends and doctors. It may also provide valuable clues about the condition of her injured brain.

"We're elated at this," said her spokesman C.J. Karamargin, who added that she is speaking "more and more." "We always knew Gabby is a fighter and that she's not going to let this thing win. And you know, every day is proof of that."

Few details have emerged about her recovery since she began intensive rehabilitation at TIRR Memorial Hermann hospital late last month. But doctors not involved in her care said her simple request for toast could indicate higher level cognition.

Government warns protesters as unrest grows

CAIRO — Egypt's government and protesters edged closer to violent confrontation Wednesday as demonstrators escalated their tactics and the vice president warned of a coup if the unrest continued, saying protests must end or "the dark bats of the night" would emerge to terrorize the nation.

Labor unrest continued to plague the nation for a second day, threatening to merge the political goals of the opposition with the more focused economic issues that have long plagued Egypt. And violence spread to a normally peaceful desert oasis 500 miles southwest of Cairo, where police killed four people.

Protesters in the central square, re-energized by massive crowds Tuesday after turnout began to flag on Monday, promised the biggest demonstrations yet on Friday, this time nationwide as well as in multiple locations in Cairo. On Wednesday, they defied the Egyptian army by occupying the street in front of parliament, creating a second front in downtown Cairo.

Egyptian Vice President Omar Suleiman, in comments to Egyptian newspaper editors published Wednesday, warned sharply that demonstrations could not continue.

Lohan pleads not guilty to felony theft charge

LOS ANGELES — Lindsay Lohan pleaded not guilty Wednesday to felony grand theft of a $2,500 necklace — the most serious charge yet filed against the troubled starlet who has wrestled with drug and alcohol abuse for years.

"You're in a different situation now that a felony has been filed," Superior Court Judge Keith Schwartz scolded Lohan after she entered the plea through her attorney. "Everybody else has to follow the law. You're no different than anyone else. So please, don't push your luck."

Saying it appeared Lohan had violated her probation in a 2007 drunken driving case, Schwartz set bail at $40,000 and warned that if she was accused of breaking the law while free, he would have her held without bail.

Lohan, 24, posted bail and was released about an hour after the hearing. She spoke little during the arraignment, except to acknowledge her name and that she understood the charge and possible consequences.

Lohan could face up to three years in state prison if eventually convicted of stealing the necklace in January from a Venice Beach store.

The "Mean Girls" star has remained in the spotlight throughout her legal problems. Wednesday, she was met by a swarm of photographers and TV cameras when she arrived at the courthouse in a white dress and sunglasses.

Study shows strokes are rising fast among young, middle-aged

By Marilyn Marchione
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Strokes are rising dramatically among young and middle-aged Americans while dropping in older people, a sign that the obesity epidemic may be starting to shift the age burden of the disease.

The numbers, reported Wednesday at an American Stroke Association conference, come from the first large nationwide study of stroke hospitalizations by age. Government researchers compared hospitalizations in 1994 and 1995 with ones in 2006 and 2007.

The sharpest increase — 51 percent — was among men 15 through 34. Strokes rose among women in this age group, too, but not as fast — 17 percent.

"It's definitely alarming," said Dr. Ralph Sacco, American Heart Association president and a neurologist at the University of Miami. "We have worried for a while that the increased prevalence of obesity in children and young adults may take its toll in cardiovascular disease and stroke," and that appears to be happening, he said.

Stroke still takes its highest toll on older people. For those over 65, there were nearly 300 stroke cases among 10,000 hospitalizations in the more recent period studied. For males 15 to 34, there were about 15 stroke cases per 10,000, and for girls and women in that age group there were about 4 per 10,000.

Several small studies had recently suggested an ominous rise among the young and among middle-aged women.

"We were interested in whether we could pick that up in a much larger, nationwide dataset," said Dr. Mary George, a stroke researcher at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The researchers examined federal records from a sample of hospitals in 41 states, covering about 8 million cases each year. They looked at the percentage of all hospitalizations for stroke by gender and in six age groups.

For every 10,000 hospitalizations in 1994-95 compared with 2006-07, strokes rose:

- 51 percent, from 9.8 to 14.8, among males 15 to 34 years old
- 17 percent, from 3.6 to 4.2, in females 15 to 34
- 47 percent, from 36 to 52.9, in males 35 to 44
- 36 percent, from 21.9 to 30, in females 35 to 44

"The increases seen in children are very modest, but they are more so in the young adult age groups, and we feel that deserves further study," George said.

Minico rallies past Jerome Spartans wrap up perfect GBC mark

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minico finished running the table in the Great Basin Conference's regular season with a 57-48 victory over Jerome on Wednesday.
But the Tigers gave plenty of reason to believe the upcoming District IV boys basketball tournament won't be a one-horse race.
Jerome led 39-34 heading into the fourth quarter before Minico buckled down and outscored the Tigers 23-9 in the final period.

"That's what makes Minico a great team — in the fourth quarter they found a way to win," said Jerome coach Joe Messick. "Bottom line is, Minico is one of the best teams in the state, if not the best. I was extremely please with our effort. Hopefully this gives our kids some confidence going into the tournament."
Kade Miller scored 20 points and Casey Christiansen had 14 points and nine rebounds for Minico, which improved to 18-1 overall and 10-0 in league play.

Jerome (13-6, 7-3) got balanced scoring with Spencer Parker, Jake Hollifield and Riley Parrish each netting eight points. Austin Leavitt hit four 3-pointers for 12 points.
Despite the win, Minico coach Mike Graefe wasn't entirely pleased.
"That's probably the worst we've played all year long as far as offensive selfishness and just not trusting each other. We need to get that straightened out," Graefe said. "Give credit to Jerome because they played hard and did what they had to do."

"The defensive end was definitely as bad as we've played all year. Maybe it's because Jerome's that good, or maybe it's because we're not focused. I hate to take credit away from Jerome because I know they're a good team, but I know we can play better."
The first half belonged to Miller. The senior forward showed his versatility by posting up, stepping outside for 3-pointers and crashing the offensive glass for put-backs. He scored 14 first-half points on 6-for-9 shooting.

"We're finding ways to win, which is good because winning builds more confidence, but we need to start coming out playing hard for a whole game," said Miller. "We haven't played a full game all year and we need to start doing that."

CSI's Parai hopes to rediscover lost form

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

It was an all too familiar sight early this season: Freshman guard Kyler Parai snatching a steal and racing down the floor for a fast-break bucket.
But this one didn't end with two points for the College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team. Instead, the play resulted in Parai grimacing in pain on the court, her ankle badly sprained.
Her season hasn't been the same since.
The Hamilton, New Zealand, product burst onto the scene for the Golden Eagles, averaging 13.5 points, 4.0 rebounds and 3.4 steals through the first eight games of the season.
But since suffering the ankle sprain Dec. 2 against Lethbridge (Alberta) College, Parai's productivity has suffered, her current season averages dipping to 8.0 points, 2.6 rebounds and 2.3 steals.
"I definitely wish that I could go back to that, that I could keep playing like that because it's getting close to regionals," said Parai.
But trusting the ankle, which she reinjured last week, hasn't been easy.
"My injury has definitely played a big part," she Parai. "I'm a little cautious now with the things that I do. I've got to snap out of that because the season's nearly over now."
CSI coach Randy Rogers said the difference in Parai's game is notable since her injury.
"She's lost a little bit of her quickness," he said. "The biggest thing for Kyler and why she was scoring is she's such a good shooter. You want balance in that shot and she doesn't seem to ever be really comfortable on that ankle to get balance."
The numbers don't lie: Parai shot 44 percent before the injury and 30 percent since.
While the ankle is not 100 percent, don't expect to find Parai on

By Stephen Meyers

This is the Filer team coach Kody Ketterling has been talking about all season.

Well, he must have felt something, because the Wildcats shocked the Bulldogs, winning 44-42 on Wednesday to set up a second title game tonight in Filer.
"We showed up tonight. We executed the game plan we had put in place. We've been getting better every day and it was a total team effort tonight," said the first-year head coach. "It was an intense game. That's what you want in a championship game right?"

"Kimberly is the team to beat. Even though we beat them, they're still the team to beat and we'll have to come out (tonight) with the same intensity."

State bracket gives meaning to Twin Falls, Wood River rematch

Don't bother telling Twin Falls and Wood River that tonight's Class 4A District IV championship game is basically meaningless.
Each team's state tournament prospects hang on the fate of what happens tonight (and tomorrow, if necessary).
Both teams have qualified for state, Twin Falls for the third time in four seasons and Wood River for just the second time ever, the first since 2004. In that sense, the two schools squaring off again in Hailey, where the Wolverines picked up their third win this season over the Bruins less than a week ago, defies logic to an extent. Injuries, fatigue, you name it. A lot can go wrong.

But two things can go right, and that's what will have both teams chomping at the bit to claim victory.
Wood River sits 32 minutes from the second district championship in school history. Twin Falls sits 64, if it can force a second title match on Friday, from its second district title in four years. One or the other will earn its first district title at the 4A level.

That same amount of time separates each team from a position in the state tournament field that will see it favored to reach the state championship game.

Richfield girls upset Dietrich for title

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

DIETRICH — Richfield just reestablished itself as the team to beat in the upcoming Class 1A Division II state girls basketball tournament. The Tigers have Mirian Rivas to thank.
Rivas scored 19 of her game-high 25 points in the second half as Richfield smashed a halftime tie and cruised to a 55-43 win Wednesday to clinch the District IV championship.
The win came on Dietrich's home floor and put the Tigers (17-5) in prime position to make a run at their third straight state title and fourth in five years.
"It's always great to have a big win," said Rivas, who also had 11 rebounds, four assists and three steals. "We'd been struggling to play as a team this season, but I think it finally came together tonight."
Rivas keyed an 11-1 third-quarter run that turned a 19-19 halftime deadlock into a 30-20 Richfield lead. When Dietrich (19-2) pulled back within six at the third-quarter horn courtesy of Shayla Porter's 3-pointer, Rivas went back to work, scoring 10 in the final period to ensure the district trophy would head back across Lincoln County.
"I just told my teammates that (the Blue Devils) were the ones who had to pressure, who had to get back into the game," said Rivas. "All we had to do was stay calm and make our shots. Last time here we let down, but we didn't do that tonight."
Kylee Exon scored nine points and hauled in 10 rebounds for Richfield, which outboarded Dietrich 34-27. Porter led Dietrich with 11 points and seven rebounds.
Dietrich tried to channel the heroics of earlier this season, when the Blue Devils rallied from a seven-point deficit after three quarters to stun Richfield in overtime. But

The result (4-15, 3-7) leaves the Bobcats and Riverhawks tied for fourth in the Great Basin standings. Canyon Ridge will take the No. 4 seed and hosting rights for the teams' district tournament matchup on Tuesday, by virtue of splitting a season series against Century, which swept Burley.

Burley finishes up the regular season at Pocatello on Friday, while Canyon Ridge hosts Rigby.

Duke rallies to beat UNC

DURHAM, N.C. — Nolan Smith scored 22 of his career-high 34 points in the second half, and the fifth-ranked Duke Blue Devils rallied from 16 points down to beat rival North Carolina 79-73 on Wednesday.

Seth Curry added a season-high 22 points for Duke (22-2, 9-1 Atlantic Coast Conference), which trailed by 14 at halftime before outscoring the No. 20 Tar Heels 50-30 in the final 20 minutes.

Tyler Zeller had 24 points and 13 rebounds for UNC (17-6, 7-2), which snapped a five-game overall win streak and lost its third straight in college basketball's fiercest rivalry.

NO. 3 TEXAS 68, OKLAHOMA 52
NORMAN, Okla. — Jordan Hamilton scored 20 points, Gary Johnson added 14 and the Longhorns continued their perfect run through Big 12 play. Texas (21-3) is off to a 9-0 start in league play for the first time since doing it in the Southwest Conference 23 years ago. All nine of the wins have been by double figures, the first time Texas has been so dominant to start conference play since the 1921-22 season.

NO. 7 BYU 90, AIR FORCE 52
AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Jimmer Fredette scored 25 points and BYU used runs of 16-0 and 14-0 to beat Air Force for the 12th straight time.

Fredette, the nation's leading scorer, reached the 20-point mark for the 10th straight game for the Cougars (23-2, 9-1 Mountain West).

NO. 8 NOTRE DAME 89, NO. 16 LOUISVILLE 79
SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Ben Hansbrough scored 25 points and Carleton Scott had nine of his 16 points in overtime for the Fighting Irish.

RUTGERS 77, NO. 9 VILLANOVA 76
PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Jonathan Mitchell's four-point play with less than a second remaining capped a career-high 25-point performance and gave Rutgers a 77-76 victory over No. 9 Villanova.

Mitchell, who was coming off a career-best 24 points in a loss to Notre Dame, hit a 3-point shot from about 25 feet and was fouled by Corey Fisher. After a Villanova timeout, Mitchell, a 74 percent free throw shooter, hit the tiebreaker.

Fisher had 23 points, went 5 of 7 from 3-point range and had 10 assists and five steals, but he had a miserable final 7 seconds.

NO. 11 GEORGETOWN 64, NO. 12 SYRACUSE 56

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Austin Freeman had 14 points to lead four Georgetown players in double figures, and the Hoyas won their seventh straight game.

Georgetown (19-5, 8-4 Big East) gave coach John Thompson III his first win in the Carrier Dome in six tries. It was the third straight home loss for Syracuse (20-5, 7-5), only the third time that's happened in coach Jim Boheim's 35 years.

NO. 13 WISCONSIN 62, IOWA 59, OT
IOWA CITY, Iowa — Jon Leuer scored 19 points, Jordan Taylor added 16 to help Wisconsin to its sixth win in seven games.

Keaton Nankivil added 10 points for the Badgers, who tuned up for their showdown with top-ranked Ohio State on Saturday by barely surviving a road test against the Big Ten's worst team.

NO. 17 FLORIDA 79, SOUTH CAROLINA 60
COLUMBIA, S.C. — Erving Walker scored a season-high 25 points and No. 17 Florida used a quick start and some hot shooting to put away South Carolina.

The Gators (19-5, 8-2 Southeastern Conference) led 9-0, were up by 11 at the half and shot better than 55 percent, their best showing since November. They maintained their large lead after the SEC Eastern and gave Billy Donovan his 350th victory as the school's coach.

NO. 22 TEXAS A&M 73, COLORADO 70, OT

BOULDER, Colo. — Nathan Walkup scored 18 points and B.J. Holmes added 13 for the Aggies, including a 3-pointer with 1.9 seconds remaining to send the game into overtime.

Once in overtime, Texas A&M (18-5, 5-4 Big 12) took control early, scoring the first six points to snap a three-game losing streak.

NO. 24 TEMPLE 77, FORDHAM 66
PHILADELPHIA — Ramon Moore scored 22 points to lead Temple to its fifth straight win.

Scottie Randall and Micheal Eric each added 12 points for the Owls (18-2, 8-2 Atlantic 10), who forced 17 turnovers and had a 49-36 rebounding edge.

Greenwood, Trojans outlast Indians for state berth

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — Wynter Holtman delivered early and Hailey Greenwood was clutch late as Raft River outlasted Shoshone 57-53 to claim the second state berth from the Class 1A Division I District IV-V-VI tournament.

Holtman controlled the paint in the first half, scoring 12 of her 17 points to put Raft River up 31-22 at intermission.

An energized Shoshone team fought back in the third quarter, closing the gap to four points at 39-35 before taking the lead briefly in the final period.

But Raft River's Hailey Greenwood capped her 24-point night by going 7-of-8 at the foul line in the fourth quarter to keep Shoshone at bay.

"They had their inside game going early," said Shoshone coach Tim Chapman. "But once we adjusted, we did okay. But then we needed to do a better job on (Hailey) Greenwood. They were smart to keep the ball in her hands because when we fouled her, she made her free throws. She really understands the game."

With six minutes remaining in the game, Shoshone senior Jennica Kerner drove to the hoop and scored to tie the game at 39-39. At the four-minute mark, Shoshone took its only lead at 44-43 on a Kylee Stein basket. But a basket by Kassie Ottley put Raft River ahead to stay.

"We have really meshed as a team, but tonight we just couldn't get it done," said Kerner, who led the Indians with 16 points and seven rebounds. Greenwood dished out four assists to go with her clutch free throws.

"I work hard on free throws at practice which helps take the stress off in a game like this," said Greenwood. "We have good chemistry and we play really well as a team. We knew this would be a tough game."

Kelcie Hutchins and Stein also scored in double figures for Shoshone with 13 and 11 points, respectively, with Stein snatching four steals.

Shoshone ends the season at 19-6.

"We ran our offense and took care of the ball and had lots of open shots," said Raft River coach Garth Stead. "Shoshone is a really good team that we don't want to face again. They kept fighting back and didn't give up." Raft River (18-6) will travel to Columbia High School in Nampa for the state tournament Feb. 17-19.

Filer

Filer (8-13) led most of the game, pushing the lead to as much as seven on an Audrey Croy layup with 2:14 remaining in the fourth quarter.

The Bulldogs (14-5) pulled to within three at 41-38 on a Whitney Carlton 3-pointer in the corner with 44 seconds remaining. They weren't done there either.

Nellie Makings scored her first points of the game on a 3-pointer to cut the Wildcats' lead to one with 31 seconds remaining. But Filer nailed its free throws and didn't allow the Bulldogs another clean shot in their ensuing possessions.

"We weren't really nervous when they hit those 3-pointers," Croy said. "I think there was some anxiety, but it was more like, 'Let's go out there, lay it on the line and get this win.'"

Croy put the team on her back in the final, frantic quarter.

The post scored seven of her 14 points in the last eight minutes, including two crucial free throws in the closing minute.

"I'm just so proud of the teammates I have. It was a lot of fun tonight and they did a great job with passing the ball and giving everything they had," Croy said.

The Wildcats especially gave everything they had on the defensive side of the ball. Twice they held Kimberly to four points in a quarter and limiting Makings, Kimberly's leading scorer, to only four points. Shyanne Hatch led the Bulldogs with nine points.

"I thought we were stagnant on offense," said Kimberly coach Rich Bishop. "We didn't move without the ball. Give Filer credit. They played hard and did a great job on the defensive end."

Kimberly also shot only 9-for-24 from the free-throw line.

"That's a way to lose a two-point game," Bishop said.

Jessica Tews led Filer with 16 points, including two momentum-shifting 3-pointers in the second quarter with Kimberly threatening to take the lead.

The two teams square off again at 7 p.m. today with the winner advancing to the Class 3A state tournament next week.

"This is really exciting. We're still alive and have a shot at getting to state. Kimberly has been the best team all season and nobody said we could beat them. Now we're going to prove them wrong," Croy said.

there wasn't enough magic left in the tank, nor was Rivas about to let it happen.

"She was pretty tough to guard tonight. She was a little bit faster than we were tonight, and she's a great passer of the ball," said Dietrich coach Acey Shaw. "We've just got to move on from this one and get ready for Camas County (tonight). Anything can happen so we've got to be ready."

Dietrich faces Camas County tonight for the district's second berth to the state tournament, with the loser going into a Saturday play-in game. Richfield plays in the 6:15 p.m. game next Thursday at Nampa High School, against the District III runner-up.

CAMAS COUNTY 54, CAREY 49

Stephanie Moore scored 18 to lead three Camas County players in double figures as the Mushers shocked Carey 54-49 to earn at least a state play-in opportunity.

Katelyn Peterson scored 12 and Sierra Sabin added 11 for Camas County (8-13), which will face Dietrich today for an automatic berth to state.

"This was just a desire game," said Mushers coach Jennifer Hulme. "It's huge for our confidence. We haven't beaten Carey in years ... the girls are learning to handle the big pressure moments."

Micaela Adamson scored a game-high 19 for Carey, which ends its season at 11-11.

Cavaliers lose 26th, match pro sports' longest skid

CLEVELAND — Forget the NBA record, the Cavaliers are officially as bad as any team in any pro sport.

Cleveland's losing streak reached 26, matching the 1976-77 Tampa Bay Buccaneers' record for consecutive incompetence on Wednesday night with a 103-94 loss to the Detroit Pistons, who were supposedly a beatable opponent for the bottom-dwelling Cavs.

Instead, Cleveland's season slipped further into shame.

The Cavs (8-45) remain winless since Dec. 18 and have now dropped 36 of 37. Their next chance to end the unimaginable slide will be on Friday against the Los Angeles Clippers. After that comes a home game against the road-winless Washington Wizards on Sunday.

Rodney Stuckey scored 22 to pace the Pistons, who didn't want to be remembered as the team that let the Cavs get off the mat.

BULLS 91, JAZZ 87

SALT LAKE CITY — Derrick Rose scored 29 points and former Jazz players Kyle Korver and Ronnie Brewer made key plays late Wednesday night to lift the Chicago Bulls to a 91-87 victory over Utah in a game that marked the return of Carlos Boozer to Salt Lake City.

Boozer, who played five seasons for the Jazz but signed as a free agent with Chicago after last season, finished with 14 points and six rebounds for Chicago.

Korver sank a 3-pointer with 2:17 remaining to give the Bulls an 87-83 lead. The Jazz cut it to 87-86 on free throws by Al Jefferson and Andrei Kirilenko, but Rose sank two more free throws to put Chicago ahead by three again with 13 seconds left.

NETS 103, HORNETS 101, OT

NEWARK, N.J. — Brook

Lopez hit two go-ahead free throws with 24.3 seconds to play in overtime and New Jersey snapped a three-game losing streak and extended New Orleans' slide to four.

Former Auburn signee to join CSI men

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team will likely get a new addition in March.

Former Auburn signee Luke Cothron is expected to arrive in Twin Falls in early March and enroll in late-start classes at CSI. If everthing comes together, he'll be eligible to play for the Golden Eagles in the 2011-12 season.

A 6-foot-8, 215-pound forward, Cothron was considered one of the nation's top power forwards in the 2010 class.

"He's a guy we've been working on for a long time," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar.

A Huntsville, Ala., native, Cothron signed with Auburn out of North Carolina's Flora MacDonald Academy, but didn't qualify academically. He enrolled at the University of Massachusetts but reportedly grew homesick and returned to Huntsville.

According to the Birmingham (Ala.) News, Cothron enrolled at the University of New Orleans where he believed he could play right away and then transfer to another NCAA Division I program when UNO drops to a lower division next season.

He played in one game, scoring two points in a Dec. 14 loss to Tulane, before leaving New Orleans.

With none of his plans panning out, he turned to CSI assistant coach Josh Dees, who had known Cothron since his freshman year of high school when Dees, then headed to Colorado State as a graduate assistant, offered the young forward a scholarship.

"When everything fell through, he called Josh and said, 'Hey, are you still interested?'" said Gosar.

Gosar said the first priority with Cothron is to get him on track academically. As for what he could bring to next season's roster, Gosar said, "I think he's got a lot of potential, but still needs some work."

Fans are suing the NFL, the Dallas Cowboys and team owner Jerry Jones after they didn't get the seats they were expecting to watch the Green Bay Packers, including quarterback Aaron Rodgers (12) and Glens Ferry native Korey Hall (35), take on the Pittsburgh Steelers in Super Bowl XLV Sunday in Arlington, Texas.

Suit filed in Dallas over Super Bowl seat problems

DALLAS — Ticket-holding football fans who ended up with no seats or what they considered bad views of the Super Bowl have filed a class-action lawsuit against the NFL, the Dallas Cowboys and team owner Jerry Jones.

The federal lawsuit filed Tuesday in Dallas — just two days after the big game — alleges breach of contract, fraud and deceptive sales practices on behalf of people who ended up watching the game on TV at Cowboys Stadium in Arlington, or had seats the lawsuit labeled "illegitimate."

The NFL had announced just hours before the Green Bay Packers played the Pittsburgh Steelers on Sunday that about 1,250 temporary seats were deemed unsafe, and the league scrambled to find new seats for about 850 people. The remaining 400 were forced to watch from standing-room locations around the stadium.

One plaintiff is a Steelers fan from Pennsylvania who was among the 400 with a ticket but no seat. The other is a Cowboys season ticket holder who claims many of Jones' biggest-spending fans were stuck in metal folding chairs without a view of the stadium's giant video board.

Spokesmen for the Cowboys and the NFL had no comment Wednesday.

Los Angeles-based attorney Michael J. Avenatti said he expects the suit to cover about 1,000 people.

"No one is attempting to get rich from this," he said. "People are merely interested in being compensated for what happened (at the stadium) and the cost that goes with that."

CARDINALS HIRE HORTON AS DEFENSIVE COORDINATOR

TEMPE, Ariz. — Arizona Cardinals coach Ken Whisenhunt has returned to his Pittsburgh Steelers connections to hire Ray Horton as defensive coordinator.

Horton has coached in the NFL for 17 seasons and has been with the Steelers for seven years, the last four as defensive backs coach.

Horton, who played in the NFL for 10 seasons, becomes the Cardinals' third defensive coordinator in Whisenhunt's four years in Arizona. He replaces Bill Davis, who was fired after two seasons on the job.

Whisenhunt was the Steelers offensive coordinator when he was hired as Arizona head coach in 2007. With the Cardinals, he retained Clancy Pendergast as defensive coordinator but fired him following the team's run to the Super Bowl in the 2008 season.

LEAGUE, UNION MEET IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON — The NFL and players union representatives met for much of the afternoon in Washington to discuss a new collective bargaining agreement.

It was the second session in five days, the previous negotiations taking place in Dallas on Saturday. Another session is set for Thursday.

Neither side would comment on what was discussed or how fruitful the talks were.

Team owners opted out of the CBA in 2008 and the current contract expires March 3. NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell heavily emphasized the need to get a deal done soon during his Super Bowl news conference last week.

CLEVELAND BROWNS CUT SHAUN ROGERS, 5 OTHERS

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Browns are cleaning house.

On Wednesday, the team terminated the contracts of some big-name players, including their biggest player — enormous nose tackle Shaun Rogers.

In addition, the Browns, who are rebuilding once again under new coach Pat Shurmur, also released veteran linebackers Eric Barton and David Bowens, defensive end Kenyon Coleman, tight end Robert Royal and right offensive tackle John St. Clair.

All six of the players are over age 30, and the moves will save the Browns nearly $19 million in base salaries.

the sideline as the No. 23 Golden Eagles (19-6) head down the stretch, including Friday's game at Snow College and Saturday's visit to No. 15 Salt Lake Community College.

"We're down to three weeks so you either rest it and take a chance of her coming back at the region tournament or you play through it," said Rogers, adding that Parai and CSI will go with the latter.

Despite her ankle issues, Parai's presence has been a blessing for the Eagles. She joined the team late in the recruiting process when CSI lost two recruits to Dixie State College and another was dismissed from the team.

Parai's aunt Tyler Wilkinson, her longtime coach in New Zealand, brought a traveling team to Seattle last summer where she met Rogers. Rogers asked if Wilkinson knew of any players who might fit well for CSI. Wilkinson mentioned her niece.

Parai, 23, was home attending school and working. She jumped at the chance to come to Idaho.

"I really love it here. The basketball's good, I've made some really good friends and I've really enjoyed it," said Parai.

And soon, she hopes to rediscover the type of play she displayed in November and help CSI win the Region 18 Tournament and advance to the NJCAA Tournament.

For that to happen, Rogers said Parai's revival is a must.

"Before it's all over, we still need her," said Rogers.

the top of the bracket, along with the District I-II champion, the runner up from District III and either the third-place team from District III or the District VI runner-up.

Barring an upset in the District III championship game tonight, the Wood River-Twin Falls winner will be a clear favorite to reach the title game. The loser, however, looks to have an uphill task from the outset.

That's because Preston, owner of a 20-2 record and the No. 3 ranking in the final media poll, awaits in the opening round. Win or lose, barring the aforementioned District III upset, co-No. 1s Rigby (22-0) or Middleton (20-2 as of Wednesday) await the next day.

Should Middleton beat Bishop Kelly for the District III title as expected, the top three — and four of the five — ranked teams will sit in the same half of the bracket. You can argue the media poll means next to nothing, but it doesn't take a bunch of sports writers from around the state to tell you it's as loaded a half-bracket as they come.

You can argue that a state tournament needs to be seeded rather than pre-bracketed. If the powers that be want equal representation, the tournament can still be seeded. It's done in wrestling, track and field, and tennis. Surely it's easier to seed eight basketball teams than it is 32 wrestlers or a bazillion runners or throwers.

For the record, I endorse that position. But for now, it is what it is. The bracket is set — one half favorable, the other formidable.

And that's why tonight's game, while carrying next to no importance, means everything.

CSI baseball falls to Paradise Valley

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho baseball team fell to 3-3 on its nine-game swing through sunny Arizona, falling 4-3 to Paradise Valley on Wednesday afternoon.

The Golden Eagles overcame deficits to tie the game at 1-1 and 3-3 and got the tying and go-ahead runs on in the ninth inning before Ryan Cooperstone hit into a fielder's choice to end the game.

Paradise Valley, ranked No. 4 in the NJCAA Division II preseason poll, finished fifth at Division II JUCO World Series last spring and gave the Eagles a tough contest.

Tyle Duffin took the loss for CSI, which put four different arms on the mound in the loss. Blake Lively singled in the third and came home on Chase Harris' RBI single, while Andre Ashton had a two-run single for CSI in the seventh to knot the score at 3-3.

CSI faces Phoenix College at 5 p.m. today. The same two teams meet for a doubleheader on Saturday to conclude the Eagles' trip. CSI plays its first home game Feb. 24, hosting Prairie Baseball Academy.

CSI softball records sweep to open conference play

Times-News

That brutal opening to the season seems to have set the College of Southern Idaho softball team off on the right foot in Scenic West Athletic Conference play.

The Golden Eagles swept Southern Nevada 9-1 and 6-3 in St. George, Utah, Wednesday in their first SWAC games of the season, crawling above the .500 mark for the first time in 2011.

Jessi Duncan scattered two hits, one an infield single, while striking out six in the opener.

Latieshia Webster doubled, homered and drove in three runs, while Lyndi Miller homered and drove in two.

CSI (8-7, 2-0 SWAC) scored six times in the bottom of the fourth, and Miller's two-run blast an inning later ended it on the mercy rule.

Marina Groenewegen homered and drove in three as part of a 4-for-4 effort in the nightcap, giving Jyl Eckstein plenty of run support as she worked through trouble early on before settling down for the complete-game win.

"Jyl got herself through some tight spots, where in the first couple of weekends she might not have wriggled off the hook. She made some nice pitches," said CSI coach Nick Baumert.

CSI, which opened the season 0-6, squares off with Southern Nevada again today for a noon doubleheader.

ORDINANCE NO. 576
AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF KIMBERLY, IDAHO, A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION OF THE STATE OF IDAHO, AMENDING THE KIMBERLY CITY ZONING ORDINANCE, TITLE 17.11 BY ADDING PARAGRAPH 17.11.015 BUILDING REQUIREMENTS FOR COMMERCIAL BUILDINGS AND PROVIDING FOR AN EFFECTIVE DATE.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MAYOR AND THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF KIMBERLY, IDAHO, THAT:

Section 1. Title 17.11 entitled “REQUIRED IMPROVEMENTS” is hereby amended by adding Title 17.11.015 entitled “BUILDING REQUIREMENTS FOR COMMERCIAL BUILDINGS”.

Section 2. Title 17.11.015 of the Kimberly Municipal Code should be added in its entirety and the following inserted:
17.11.015.

1. EXTERIOR APPEARANCE OF BUILDINGS AND STRUCTURES

A. Primary exterior materials shall conform to the requirements found in this Chapter.

B. Secondary materials used on the façade of a building are those that comprise less than ten (10) percent of an elevation area. Permitted secondary materials are all primary materials, aluminum or other metal, cedar or similar quality decorative wood, stucco, EIFS, or other materials as approved by the Planning and Zoning Administrator or his/her designee.

C. All buildings with a footprint of less than ten thousand (10,000) square feet shall incorporate a pitched, gabled, mansard, hipped, or otherwise sloped roof. All sloped roofs shall have a three (3) in twelve (12) inch minimum slope. Wood shingles are prohibited.

D. All buildings with a footprint of ten thousand (10,000) square feet and greater shall incorporate sloped roof elements including, but not limited to pitched roofs on towers or arcades, sloped awnings, or sloped parapets. The sloped elements shall be provided along a minimum of sixty (60) percent of each wall's length. All sloped roof elements shall have a three (3) in twelve (12) inch minimum slope. Wood shingles are prohibited.

E. In the CG, CI, CB, and RP Zoning Districts, an articulated parapet wall or cornice may be used in place of the sloped roof as required in Section 17.11.015 (C) and (D) above.

F. All buildings shall be designed to incorporate a form of architectural articulation every thirty (30) feet, both horizontally along each wall's length and vertically along each wall's height. Acceptable articulation may include the following:

- Canopies, awnings, or porticos;
- Recesses/projections;
- Arcades;
- Arches;
- Windows will follow the IBC Section 2406.3 which will require safety/tempered glazing for most windows within 18½ of the floor.
- Architectural details (such as tile work and moldings) integrated into the building facade;
- Articulated ground floor levels or base;
- Articulated cornice line;
- Integrated planters or wing walls that incorporate landscape and sitting areas;
- Offsets, reveals or projecting rib used to express architectural or structural bays;
- Accent materials (minimum fifteen (15) percent of exterior facade);
- Varied roof heights; or
- Or other architectural features approved by the Director of Planning, or his/her designee.

G. All buildings shall be architecturally finished on all three sides with the same materials, detailing, and features. The wall which faces the opposite (rear) a public right-of-way of a building, may be architecturally finished to match the remainder of the building in color only. (See definition of “Front” in Zoning Ordinance)

H. Windows shall have a maximum exterior visible reflectivity of twenty (20) percent, unless otherwise approved by the Planning and Zoning Administrator or his/her designee. The intent of this provision is to prevent the safety hazard of light reflecting from the windows on to adjacent roadways.

I. All retail/commercial buildings with facades greater than two hundred (200) feet in length shall incorporate wall plane projections or recesses that are at least six (6) feet deep. Projections/recesses must be at least twenty five (25) percent of the length of the facade. No uninterrupted length of facade may exceed one hundred (100) feet in length. This requirement does not apply to buildings developed and occupied entirely for office uses.

J. All buildings within a common development, as shown on a Concept Plan or Preliminary Site Plan, shall have similar architectural styles, materials, and colors.

1. Conceptual facade plans and sample boards shall be submitted with the Preliminary Site Plan application for all non-residential uses. The purpose of the conceptual facade plan is to ensure consistency and compatibility for all buildings within a single development. Facade plans will be used only to ensure minimum standards are met.

2. A final facade plan and sample boards shall be submitted with the Final Site Plan application for all non-residential uses. Facade plans will be used only to ensure minimum standards are met.

L. All primary exterior materials shall be of natural texture and earth toned colors.

M. Corporate identities that conflict with the building design criteria shall be reviewed on a case-by-case basis and approved by the Planning and Zoning Administrator or his/her designee. The applicant may appeal the decision to the Planning & Zoning Commission and City Council using the appeal procedure in Chapter 17, Section 17.13.010.6 of this Ordinance.

Exposed conduit, ladders, utility boxes, and drain spouts shall be painted to match the color of the building or an accent color. Natural metal finishes (patina) are an acceptable alternative to paint.

A- The exterior facades of a main building or structure, excluding glass windows and doors, in the CG, CI, CB and RP Zoning Districts shall be constructed of one hundred (100) percent masonry, unless otherwise specified in this Ordinance. Cementitious fiberboard is considered masonry, but may only constitute fifty (50) percent of stories other than the first story. Cementitious fiber board may also be used for architectural features, including window box-outs, bay windows, roof dormers, garage door headers, columns, chimneys not part of an exterior wall, or other architectural features approved by the Plan Reviewer. Wood roof shingles are prohibited.

B. Metal buildings are permitted in the RP Zoning District upon review by the Planning & Zoning Commission and approval by the City Council subject to:

1. The maximum height of metal buildings is thirty five (35) feet;
2. The lot on which the building is constructed must have frontage only on streets with fifty (50) feet of right-of-way or greater;

If an expansion or an addition to an existing metal building is not greater than ten (10) percent or seven thousand (7,000) square feet, whichever is greater, the masonry requirements shall not apply to the expansion or addition to the existing metal building.

DEAR ABBY: You assured “Overwhelmed in Ohio” (Dec. 18) that fellow student “Dan” will “move on and start building a life” after high school is over. On what base might he build? Because “Overwhelmed” says Dan is an “outcast” whom everyone treats as invisible, and he has attached himself to the one person who has befriended him, it appears he has completely missed the normal teen social-learning process. How, then, is he supposed to have acquired the social skills necessary for building connections later in life?

There’s a difference between being unpopular and being ostracized. An unpopular kid can participate in social situations with similar kids. A kid who is shunned cannot. Unfortunately, Dan may be on a path toward lifelong social illiteracy and isolation.

What needs to happen before “Overwhelmed” pulls away is for the adults in charge of this school to figure out why Dan has been ostracized, and develop an effective remedy for the situation — one that gets Dan into normal relationships with other people. And there should also be lessons about empathy provided to the students who are shunning him.

— KNOWS FROM EXPERIENCE

DEAR KNOWS: Thank you for your insight. You are by no means the only reader who felt compelled to chime in on this sad situation. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: High school can be a cruel time for many young people, especially those deemed “outcasts” by their peers. I had a friend in high school who truly suffered. I made it my mission to make sure he felt he had a friend and wasn’t completely alone. I hung out with him at lunch, at the library on weekends, and tried to include him in activities I was involved in. I defended him to those who called him names, and although I was younger than he, I felt like his protector.

Now, eight years later and living in different states, we are still friends. He told me recently that I was the only reason he didn’t attempt suicide in high school. He said I had saved his life by just taking a few moments out of my day to say hello or hang out with him. At the time I didn’t realize the lifeline I was extending.

— LUCY IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My teenage son was similarly “invisible” to most of his classmates and it led to deep depression and anxiety. He is now at a school with other kids who have social learning disorders — a broad class that includes Asperger’s syndrome and a general failure to observe and respond to social cues.

If Dan falls into this category, he needs the help of both the adults and teens in his life. There is also effective therapy available for social learning disorders, and a decent school counselor should be able to help Dan and his parents find it.

— MOM OF A FORMERLY INVISIBLE TEEN

DEAR ABBY: Dan might be autistic, which could explain his behavior. I have an autistic son who is high functioning. His social skills seem immature and he appears “geeky.” People have shunned and teased him because of it.

After managing to develop some friendships in band (which, by the way, has some of the best geeky kids who accept others) and a church high school group, his social skills improved. But he needs those kids who overlook his quirkiness and befriend him to help him build confidence. They do exist; you just have to sometimes search for them. If Dan starts feeling more accepted by others, it may lessen his dependence on “Overwhelmed.”

IF FEBRUARY 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your year ahead is likely to be serene and pleasant. You may have the best success in the world of commerce or finance during the next three weeks because you are hard-nosed and businesslike. Enjoy new contacts and forming friendships with people who share your interests between now and the end of the month. Accumulate experience in the professional world, travel, or begin a serious study in June when your optimism and enthusiasm may help you make successful new beginnings. Your career could hit a standstill in October, so don't interview for jobs or make major business decisions. Between September and November, you will need to keep your nose to the grindstone and work hard to earn your wings.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take it to the top. Those who prefer to snuggle up to money and power appear more attractive than usual. Your passions and a desire for intimacy might easily be played out in a public arena rather than in private.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get it while it's hot. You may have an opportunity to spend quality time with someone you know and love. Don't pass up an invitation to join forces for some delicious smooching and cuddling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your social activities could lead to an important new friendship. First impressions mean a lot. Play spin doctor to create a good impression when making public appearances or dealing with career matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The best choice is the obvious one. You are driven to achieve financial success, but a significant other may have other schemes in mind. Put business moves on the back burner and concentrate on amore.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You'll get by with a little help from your friends. A knack for making new connections quickly and skill in sustaining existing friendships could be the best asset in your pile of tricks today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A new friend might brighten your life. If you must rely upon someone else's appraisal or valuation, it is wise to hold off on major purchases or significant changes that could impact your financial situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may learn what it means to be the object of someone's desires. There may be a hidden trip wire that will throw you out of balance if you argue over religion or philosophies. Concentrate on being agreeable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An obsession with worldly success may sidetrack your social life. A fleeting attraction will be outmaneuvered by your lust for financial triumph. Learning about new methods for investments is fascinating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Scratch the itch. Do the pleasurable thing first and get it out of the way. You may have an obsessive attraction for someone or something but don't be sidetracked from important commitments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Love is like war: easy to begin, but hard to stop. If someone has set sights on you as the target of Cupid's arrows, you will find it difficult to escape. Once you give in, you are a goner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Rudolph the red-nosed reindeer didn't fit in, but had superior and useful skills. Just like Rudolph, the unlikely candidate can save the day. Don't overlook someone who doesn't fit the conventional mold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): When you are the center of attention, it should be for all the right reasons. If you pretend to be able to do more than you really can, you might feel as though you landed on the set of Fringe without a script.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The sunbeams are my shafts, with which I kill Deceit ...."
— Percy Bysshe Shelley

Today's hand, from the 2006 Bonn teams tournament, illuminates a brilliant and imaginative defense by Tom Townsend, a regular on the English team.

At one table Colin Simpson received a club lead and had no difficulty in bringing home his three-no-trump contract, given the kindly lie of the opponents' major-suit cards. He unblocked hearts, then led a spade toward the dummy. When West won his king and returned a low club, that allowed declarer an easy route to nine tricks, Townsend, at the other table, also led a club against the no-trump game. Declarer unblocked the hearts, then led a spade toward dummy. Winning perforce, Townsend appreciated that declarer held most, if not all, of the hidden high-card points. So he switched to the diamond jack. This ruse needed his partner, David Gold, to hold the 10, but without that card, there would have been no defense.

Declarer, reading West for the diamond J-10 and East for the ace, was not inclined to smell a rat. He won in hand with the king, then played another spade toward dummy. Back on lead, Townsend saw his plan through by leading the diamond three. The eight from dummy lost to Gold's 10, and Gold returned a diamond to Townsend's ace.

West now fixed declarer firmly in dummy by returning his last heart, and Gold took the setting trick with the spade jack — from a hand that at the outset looked unlikely to take even one trick, let alone two.

ANSWER: The simple answer is to raise to three spades, with invitational values and four trumps. Not unreasonable, but in my view your scattered queens and singleton in partner's first suit are not worth more than a raise to two spades. Conversely, had my partner opened one diamond instead of one club, I would jump to three spades, expecting to have a more useful hand for my partner.
