By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is considering paying an outside agent to monitor Idaho's wolf population.

Possible candidates include the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, which used to serve as Fish and Wildlife's designated agent until Idaho's governor ended the practice in October.

USFWS State Supervisor Brian Kelly has launched a handful of meetings to discuss potential responsibilities with agencies qualified in wolf management: Fish and Game, the Nez Perce Tribe, the Idaho Governor's Office of Species Conservation and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wildlife Services.

management in Idaho after Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter objected to using state dollars to pay for the work as the agency's designated agent. That objection came after a judge returned Idaho's wolves to the endangered species list earlier in the year.

"Back in late November, we made a decision that the tribe would take over through February, a critical time to count wolves," Kelly said. "Now we're looking at what makes the most sense longer-term."

M.V. cities wary of sales tax whispers

With $100M shortfall, state may keep revenue for cities, counties

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The idea of raiding sales tax dollars tabbed for cities and counties is quietly floating in the halls of the Idaho Legislature, and it's causing some concern among the stewards of the municipalities.

"We run a pretty tight ship at our level of government, so dipping into any (sales tax) will cause some kind of issues, and the greater the number, the greater the consequences will be," Twin Falls Mayor Don Hall said. "I'm not going to push a panic button in any way, but we as an organization are looking at the possible consequences and directions to take if that were to take place."

The state sent $128.5 million in sales tax revenue to cities and counties in 2010. Now, the idea of using some of that cash to cover the state's 2011 deficit of likely more than $100 million is echoing in whispers through the chamber, though no bill has been written.

Lawmakers are careful to stress that at this point, it's only an idea and that everything needs to be considered.

"When we say everything's on the table, that's part of everything," said House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley and a member of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

He stressed that he would be opposed to such a proposal if the result would mean a shift to higher property taxes. Bedke's committee is where any bill regarding the sales tax would begin.

"We're exploring the possibility at this time," said Rep. Ken Roberts, R-Donnelly and also a member of the committee.

Nonetheless, Hall and Jerome City Administrator Ben Marchant said they are watching the issue carefully.

"The state's budget is a concern to everyone," Marchant said. "But if it further puts a strain on local governments to make up for cuts they have in their programs, and they try to push it down to the local level without the funding mechanisms for it, it will just be another unfunded mandate."

Marchant and Hall said their cities rely on the sales tax revenue to help pay for vital infrastructure, such as their fire and police departments. Marchant warned about impending cuts to those and other city services if sales tax is dipped into in any meaningful way. The Legislature's existing limits on how municipalities can

School folds cranes in memory of child

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

It is often said that folding 1,000 origami cranes can make a wish come true.

Their wishes won't bring 3-year-old Thomas Coleman back, but students at Xavier Charter School in Twin Falls hope the cranes they fold in Thomas' memory will comfort his older brother, Michael, when he returns to school on Monday.

Thomas Coleman died in a Sunday farming accident, and Xavier students and staff have turned to the hundreds of small, colorful gestures to show their thoughts and support are with his family. Third-grade teacher Melissa Owings said many Xavier classes have dedicated hours to folding the cranes and on Thursday, she counted around 500 completed cranes.

Michael, an Xavier third-grader, has a strong interest in origami. Owings said she attended Thomas' funeral on Thursday and told Michael about the crane project.

"I told him that we are all thinking about him and we are folding 1,000 cranes," Owings said. "His eyes just popped. We wanted to do something for him but we didn't know how."

T.F. traffic commission OKs rewriting of city U-turn law

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

When it comes to U-turns at light-controlled intersections, the city of Twin Falls Traffic Safety Commission found it better to change the law than to follow it.

The commission voted 6-0 Thursday morning to recommend repealing the current city law — a 30- and 50-year-old segment of complicated code — and replacing it with state code. The state code allows for U-turns except where they would interfere with oncoming traffic, would occur within 200 feet of a hill crest or would be otherwise prohibited.

"We use the state code all over, well, the state, and it works great," said Idaho State Police Capt. Rob Storm, co-chairman of the commission.

The current city code prohibits U-turns at light-controlled intersections, although the city now allows them at some Pole Line Road West intersections. Police Staff Sgt. Dennis Pullin, the city's liaison to the commission, said he will ask the city attorney to write up a new ordinance, which he and City Engineer Jackie Fields will then take to the City Council.

The commission also voted unanimously to say that a proposed zip line in the Snake River Canyon east of the golf course won't tremendously add to the traffic on Canyon Springs Road. Increased traffic flow — and the increased danger it could present to the common pedestrians walking the road — was a point of argument against the zip line at Tuesday's city Planning and Zoning meeting.

The Planning and Zoning Commission, by a split vote, shot down Magic Valley Flight Simulation LLC's request for the line, though the business' spokeswoman, Jody Tatum, said it would appeal the ruling to the Twin Falls City Council.

Fields, who presented the issue to the Traffic Safety Commission,

Man injured in apparent fall off rim

Times-News

The Jerome County Sheriff’s Office is investigating how a man apparently fell 40 feet off of the Snake River Canyon rim Thursday.
Sheriff’s deputies found the man after an off-duty deputy golfing at the Jerome Country Club noticed a car parked on the golf course. On-duty deputies called to the scene found the man lying near the edge of the rim, said Sheriff’s Capt. Jack Johnson.

It’s not at all clear how the man fell off the edge, Johnson said — whether it was an accident, related to a medical condition or something intentional, the man didn’t remember a thing. But the man apparently fell, injured his head and then crawled back up to the top of the rim on his own, Johnson said.

The man’s name and other personal information were not publicly released Thursday.
Deputies called in an ambulance and the man was taken to St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center, where he may have then been taken by air ambulance to a Boise hospital — Johnson wasn’t sure Thursday evening if the latter happened. The investigation will now turn to figuring out what happened and getting the man whatever help he needs, Johnson said.

“If it was an attempt to end his life, then definitely we’ll be dealing with that side of it. If it was accidental it was accidental,” Johnson said.

Cranes

On Thursday, Lisa Thompson’s sixth-grade class combined forces with the third grade to fold cranes. The older students sat on the floor near the younger students’ desks and together they folded the paper — creating bird after bird out of simple, colorful squares.
The 500 finished cranes dangled in colorful chains from the classroom’s ceiling. Once students finished with their cranes, they tossed them into a cardboard box in the back of the room.
Ethan Hodges, 12, wrote a poem on his crane.
“I thought it would be good and kind of relay what happened,” Hodges said.
“No one knows what happens tomorrow, no one knows what is to come ...” he wrote.
While Michael’s classmates are aware of the loss he is experiencing, most of the students focused Thursday on the joy of creating his welcome-back present.
“I’ve folded over 10, I think,” said Emma Davis, 8. “It’s really fun.”
Owings said parents and teachers will hang the cranes today and Saturday in the lobby of the school. They’ll stay up through the school’s upcoming art gala.
Some of the cranes will go to the Coleman family, while the rest will be sent to the Children’s Peace Monument in Hiroshima, Japan.

“I hope he feels comforted by this,” Owings said. “This is my first year teaching and I found these kids really reach out to each other.”

possibly tighter budget down the road.
In December, Congress extended the budget of the U.S. Interior Department, which oversees Fish and Wildlife, through March 4. With Republicans proposing deep cuts for everything but Social Security and the military, Interior is already looking at how to trim expenses.
Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, now the chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee that handles Interior’s budget, previously told the Times-News that he may force the return of wolf management to Idaho via the appropriations bill.

Jim Holyen, a wildlife biologist with the Nez Perce Tribe Wolf Program who was present at one of the USFWS meetings, said the tribe is ready and able to continue the work it has been doing and more, as long as it has the money. The federal agency has funded aerial monitoring for the tribe during this interim period.
Holyen said Kelly asked the tribe and Fish and Game to submit budget proposals for their work.
“We have dollars that came through that are appropriated for wolf management in Idaho,” Kelly said. “But I don’t think it’s an appropriate use of taxpayer dollars if the FWS built a huge staff if that capacity already exists in the state.”

Ed Bangs, USFWS wolf recovery coordinator, said that even though IDFG withdrew as designated agent, it could still agree to carry out federally funded monitoring activities. It would act kind of like a contractor, Bangs said.
IDFG Wildlife Bureau Chief Jeff Gould denied that the department had any interest in monitoring.
“When wolves are delisted, then the state will redesign its wolf plan and conduct monitoring,” he said.

Gould said Idaho is still tracking wolf movements in the Lolo and Sawtooth elk management areas to support its request to manage wolves in those areas. USFWS just released for comment a draft environmental assessment on wolf management in the Lolo area.
But Gould said that should not be confused with monitoring.
Calls for comment to Otter’s office were not returned Thursday afternoon.
Kelly said Fish and Wildlife could make a decision within the next couple of weeks.

raise cash, such as through property taxes, further hurts their ability to maintain services, he said.
Hall echoed that for the city of Twin Falls, saying any greater percentage of sales tax taken by the state would mean a greater percentage of service cuts for folks in the city. And while no one ever likes taxes, he pointed to the still-fragile economy as one more reason against raising them in Twin Falls.

Marchant is hopeful that the issue won’t be pursued because of his city’s close relationship with its state representatives: those include Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, and Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, the co-chairs of the budget-setting Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Hall said he knows the Association of Idaho Cities is keeping an eye on the matter, as are other city officials. He added he learned long ago to never try to predict anything in the Legislature.

said the zip line company would expect at most between 30 and 40 cars daily down the road, which is between a 4.5 percent and 6 percent increase to the road’s use.
The Traffic Safety Commission also asked city engineers to look at moving a “no right turn on red light” sign at the intersection of Filer Avenue and Locust Street.
Commission Chairman Dave Snelson acknowledged his interest in that sign was selfish: His wife recently got a ticket for turning on that road, and when she went to pay it, the clerk told her not to feel bad because lots of folks get tickets there.

“The fact that you’re writing so many citations means

(the sign’s location) is a safety issue,” Snelson said. “I do not believe most people drive through the sign on purpose.”
The red-and-white sign on Locust is on a telephone pole and near a red-and-white “no parking” sign. Snelson said, and the commission seemed to agree, that it was hard to see. Snelson recommended moving it to the cross-arm of the traffic signal.

Blaine school board holds off on hire

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County School Board has deferred a decision on hiring a new communications director.

Trustees declined to vote Tuesday on whether to hire Heather Crocker, who currently heads up the Blaine County Education Foundation, for the new $78,000 position.

The school board approved creating a communications specialist position by a 3-2 vote in November, on the advice of a communications audit, to fix what patrons have said is a weak link.

But funding it has continued to draw fire from some district residents who say such a position shouldn't be created when Idaho school districts are being forced to make cuts. Hemingway Elementary School teachers, concerned that paraprofessional jobs might be cut, suggested training current staff to communicate better rather than hiring a specialist.

Patrons also complain that the job was posted only on the district website.

Crocker — one of 22 applicants — was selected by a 14-member hiring committee.

Several Blaine County residents spoke out for and against the position at Tuesday night's board meeting.

Sherry Thomas said she was "absolutely against" having a communications director because most districts with such positions encompass 20 schools compared with Blaine County's seven.

"As I see it, we're placing the superintendent's needs over students," she said.

Lyman Drake countered that the top district managers have very demanding jobs and communication doesn't always get the attention it deserves.

"You can't tell (Superintendent Lonnie Barber) that he can't hire the communications specialist he needs, then blame him for not communicating," Drake said.

Michael Beck called the $78,000 salary and its accompanying benefits a waste of taxpayer money.

But Alex Sundali pointed out that no one seems to have trouble with paying the new International Baccalaureate director $72,000.

In other news:

- The school board approved Sawtooth Construction and Ruscitto/Latham/Blanton architects to remodel the Community Campus Auditorium.

District Finance Manager Chatterton said the design team will come up with a plan in the next couple of months.

- Chatterton said that the district was able to take money it saved on drop ceilings and other budgeted projects at Bellevue Elementary School to fix gas leaks, repair mold, change radon fans and circuitry, build a new teacher break room and three new offices, and add fire alarms, among other projects.

The drop ceilings were budgeted for $358,000 but only cost $79,000, he said.

The work included the inclusion of an emergency generator that can enable the school to be used as a community evacuation shelter in case of a long-lasting power outage.

- The school district received an incentive check for $58,526 from Idaho Power Co. as a result of its improvements to Bellevue Elementary. Chatterton said it exceeded the amount the district expected.

- Assistant Superintendent John Blackman said the district is soliciting people to serve on hiring committees. The district also will begin posting job openings in a minimum of four locations, including its website, to avoid the controversy that arose with the posting of the communications specialist opening.

Hansen's own Juan Moreno chasing a Grammy

Just 5 percent of Hansen's 1,051 residents are Latino, but the Twin Falls County community has a major Tejano star on its hands.

Juan P. Moreno, a 45-year-old Twin Falls native who grew up in Hansen, has been nominated for a Grammy Award for his album "Sabes Bien," which he recorded with his band, The Renegades. The Grammys will be handed out Sunday night in Los Angeles; CBS — Channel 11 in south-central Idaho — will broadcast it live, starting at 7 p.m.

Tejano — in Spanish, "Texan" — is a rhythmic mix of Mariachi, Mexican folk music and American country-western that's dominated the Rio Grande borderlands for half a century. It became something more than a regional phenomenon in 1995, when a young Texan named Selena — one of the stars of Tejano — was gunned down by the president of her fan club, inspiring a Jennifer Lopez movie and a cult following.

Tejano has been part of Moreno's life for as long as he can remember. His father, a former Mariachi musician who lost an arm in an accident, made sure his children learned music.

"I was in band all through school," the younger Moreno said. "I was never first chair, but I got to be second or third chair."

His instrument of choice at the time was drums, but he was playing bajo sexto in his uncle's band by the age of 14, besides moving irrigation pipe for Cummins Farms in Murtaugh.

The bajo is a 10-stringed cousin of the guitar that emits a heavier, more resonant sound. The instrument's distinctive voice is central to the Tejano vibe, and accomplished bajo players are highly prized.

Moreno is among the best. He's recorded 17 albums, and "Sabes Bien" is his sixth solo effort.

"I just think it's a real good CD, one of the best I've recorded," Moreno told the San Antonio Express-News. "We're really happy with it. It just came out good. I don't know. This is what I've heard — 'You deserve it.'"

In 1982 — just before his senior year at Hansen High — Moreno's family moved to the south Texas town of Alice (population 20,961). After high school, he hooked up with Los Chamacos and spent the next 7 1/2 years building a reputation as a top bajo hand and backup vocalist before he was fired from the group in 1991 over a salary dispute. Almost immediately, he joined up with another band, David Garza y Los Musicales, and spent two years playing bajo and backing up lead vocalist Jay Perez.

In 1994, Moreno organized his own band — now with two of his brothers. And he's back to living in a small town: Beeville, Texas. Population: 13,129.

Kimberly not sold on URA idea

All new water meters installed, recording data

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Kimberly is the latest rural Twin Falls County city to receive a pitch to establish a urban renewal agency. But City Council members weren't sold on the idea at a Tuesday meeting.

Larry Hall, coordinator for Southern Idaho Rural Development, suggested Kimberly take the first steps to create a URA by identifying the area the agency would try to revitalize.

"The structure is you form an agency. Then you draw lines around the city and establish an urban renewal district," Hall said.

The council would need to declare an area as "deteriorating." Then Mayor Dave Overacre would appoint three to nine members to a URA board. The board would then fund developer incentives by taking 10 percent of any property tax increase for taxing entities within the district.

Long an economic tool in Idaho, criticism of urban renewal entities has built enough in recent years that no fewer than eight bills to reform the system are now before the Legislature. Kimberly officials had concerns as well.

Councilman Brandon Hoobler worried that funds diverted to a URA would adversely affect the city's budget. He said he viewed property appreciation as occurring in line with rising costs for the city.

"If you could show me how the numbers don't affect the city of Kimberly, I could see the benefit theoretically, but I'm worried," Hoobler said.

Hall said the 10 percent wouldn't harm the city.

Hoobler also cited problems with URAs in Jerome and Twin Falls as reasons he was hesitant to support the idea.

"They certainly don't seem to like the URAs for some reason," Hoobler said.

Hall, a board member of the Twin Falls URA, noted actions of both URAs that could be considered "questionable" — referring in Twin Falls to a consultant-produced development plan published in 2001. He said that the city of Kimberly could set up stricter guidelines as it established its URA.

Overacre then opened the issue up for public comment.

Kimberly resident Jim Eisenhower said he researched URAs before the meeting and wanted the council to wait before starting one.

"As a taxpayer, this scares the living daylights out of me," he said.

Eisenhower said he disliked that URAs do not have to put bonds to a city zen vote and have little city and public oversight.

Lance Godfrey, president of the Kimberly Business Owners Association, said he needed to do more research on URAs in particular, but that something is needed to boost Kimberly's business community.

"We're better than average on a lot of things, but what we're not above average on is our business. We stink. Our business hub needs help," Godfrey said.

The council asked Hall to prepare another presentation more specific to Kimberly and held off on making any other decisions.

In other business, Public Works Superintendent Rob Wright said all the water meters in Kimberly are installed and recording data, but his department is still being trained on the ins and outs of the administrative software.

Sales are booming for clinical strength diet pill

Participants in clinical study lost an average of 5 times more weight without additional exercise or diets; 48-hour time limit now in place

By K. Tedeschi
Universal Media Syndicate

(UMS) – Over 10 million doses have been shipped to dieters so far, and sales continue to climb every day for the diet supplement called Apatrim®.

“We knew we had a great product, but it’s even exceeded our expectations,” said Ken Geis, Manager of Call Center Operations for PatentHEALTH the company that developed the clinically tested weight loss supplement.

“People just keep placing orders, it’s been pretty amazing,” he said.

But a closer look at this weight loss sensation suggests that maybe the company shouldn’t have been caught off guard by its success.

There are some very good reasons for Apatrim’s surging popularity.

To begin with, the clinical test results were very impressive. Participants taking Apatrim’s active ingredient as directed lost an average of 400% more weight than those taking a placebo during the 4-week U.S. clinical study. These remarkable results were achieved without additional exercise or diets.<sup>1*</sup>

Apatrim comes from a natural edible plant source. It’s safe, as well as easy to use. This weight loss supplement can actually begin working the very first day. And since researchers believe Apatrim works to suppress appetite, most people can eat what they want and still lose weight.*

“By suppressing their appetite, most people will consume fewer calories which can lead to weight loss,” said Dr. Joseph Dietz, Director of Health Science, Research & Development for PatentHEALTH. “Consumers should always keep in mind that there is no substitute for proper diet and exercise when it comes to losing weight.”*

Impressive clinical results

Apatrim’s active ingredient has a known ability to help control hunger pangs. This allows people to eat the foods they want and always seem to be craving because they’ll just want to eat less.*

The U.S. clinical study was conducted in Los Angeles. The study included healthy, overweight individuals between the ages of 31 and 73. The caloric intake and level of exercise was not disclosed.

The participants were instructed not to change the food they were eating and not to add any exercise. Specifically, no changes to their daily routine; just take the recommended dosage 30 minutes before lunch and dinner.

While we all know that no diet pill works for everyone, a remarkable 100% of the participants taking Apatrim as directed either lost weight or inches off of their waistline during the 4 week clinical study. Those losing weight lost an average of 5 times more than study participants who were taking the placebo pills.<sup>2*</sup>

Some participants experienced fabulous results, losing as much as 8 lbs and up to 2 inches off their waistline. These amazing results were achieved without changes in lifestyle. All they did was take the pills as instructed.<sup>2*</sup>

Professional support

Industry trends along with professional’s support in the weight loss and fitness industries indicate that Apatrim is the real thing. This amazing pill is being recommended to companies and clients across the country.

Mark Loy, a personal trainer has had some of his clients use Apatrim with great success.<sup>3</sup>

“When I’m working with my clients I can control what they’re eating,” said Loy. “But when they leave they’re on their own and that’s when the tendency to cheat comes into play,” he continued.

“I heard about Apatrim so I checked out the facts then decided to try it as a part of my training program,” Loy said.

“It’s really helped some of my clients to control their eating. I’ve watched people get some amazing results while taking Apatrim,” said Loy. “Sign me up, I’m a believer.”<sup>2</sup>

Dr. Joseph Dietz was impressed with the quality of the clinical trials as well as the U.S. patent (#7,060,308). This patent protects the proprietary method of extracting the active ingredient. This process is what the developing scientists believe is the key to the active ingredient’s effectiveness.

“When I read the clinical results, the U.S. patent and all of the other scientific support I immediately knew we needed to use this weight loss compound,” said Dietz.

“The results are real; Apatrim is a great product that’s been shown to help people lose weight.”*

Where to get it

All of the national retail pharmacies including Walgreens have placed orders for Apatrim.

There have been some reports of out-of-stocks, so to make it easier for people to get it right away a Regional Health Hotline has been put in place for the next 48 hours.

Starting at 8:00am today, all consumers have to do is call 1-866-964-2349 and ask for Dept. AP11118; orders will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis.

“For those people who call the hotline to have Apatrim shipped directly to their homes, we guarantee they’ll get product and they can also qualify for a direct-to-home discount,” said Ken Geis. “But this discount is only available through the hotline for the next 48 hours,” he said.

So for those who choose not to call or miss the deadline you may have to pay more for Apatrim or possibly run the risk of not finding it at the drug store. ■

Here’s how to guarantee you get it:

To make it easy for people to get Apatrim quickly, the company has set up a Regional Health Hotline. Follow the instructions listed below to have Apatrim shipped directly to your home or you can check your local drug store to see if they have it in stock. # Drug stores load up with powerful joint pill

Sales skyrocketing; news of its amazing results spread across the U.S.

By G.W. Napier
Universal Media Syndicate

UMS - Consumers can’t seem to get enough of it and drug stores are selling it as fast as they can get it.

“Unbelievable, that’s all I can say,” said Darla Miller, Operations Manager for PatentHEALTH the company that developed the breakthrough joint supplement.

Miller was referring to the fact that in just one day a drug store chain sold 2,000 bottles of the powerful joint health supplement called Trigosamine®.

“We’ve already shipped over 500,000 bottles of Trigosamine and sales just keep growing, it’s been crazy,” said Miller.

Scientists have developed this amazing oral tablet that doesn’t require a prescription and is taken only once a day.

It’s so impressive that one key ingredient has the ability to retain fluid up to 1000 times its own weight; this helps increase lubrication for the joints allowing them to move with ease.*

Trigosamine’s key ingredient is Hyaluronate also called HA-13 which is the building block of “natural joint fluid,” medically known as synovial fluid.

This joint fluid reduces friction in the joints allowing for effortless motion. It not only lubricates the joints, but it also acts as a comfortable shock absorber.

“As we age, the body’s natural production of this fluid declines and this can force the bones in our joints to grind together which can result in nagging discomfort,” said Dr. Joseph Dietz.<sup>1</sup>

“Using Trigosamine is like taking a can of oil and applying it directly to your joints,” said Dr. Dietz.*

Trigosamine combines HA-13 with the essential blend of glucosamine and chondroitin which have been clinically shown to help build healthy cartilage in the joints allowing for increased flexibility and range of motion.*

A clinical study conducted by the United States government found that glucosamine and chondroitin, similar to those found in Trigosamine, had a 79.2% effective rate for those with moderate to severe joint discomfort.<sup>2*</sup>

But it’s the results that make this joint supplement so impressive.

“We get messages from consumers all the time telling us how great Trigosamine works for them,” said Miller.

“Everybody wants it,” added Miller.

“CVS/pharmacy, Rite Aid and Walgreens were one of the first ones to order Trigosamine and they’ve loaded up their shelves. We’ve received reports that show they have some inventory left,” said Miller.

“And to make it easier for people who can’t find Trigosamine or don’t want to go to the store, we’ve set up a National Order Hotline so they can have it delivered directly to their home,” said Miller.

“We’ll be offering a direct delivery discount for the next 72 hours, and consumers should know they can’t get this discount at drug stores,” she added.

Otherwise those living in the local area that miss the deadline won’t be able get the discount. They’ll have to go to their local drug store to try and get Trigosamine and may be hard pressed to find it. ■

■ HEALTHY JOINTS: X-rays reveal joints that have the proper amounts of synovial fluid to lubricate the joints. HA-13, one of Trigosamine’s key ingredients is a component of synovial fluid.

Idaho panel OKs nullification

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Nullification in Idaho is going to the full House, despite constitutional scholars' warnings the measure is illegal.

The House State Affairs Committee voted 14-5 Thursday to declare President Barack Obama's health care overhaul null and void. All 14 supporters were Republicans.

The majority joined with residents who invoked the spirit of Patrick Henry and the Bible's King Solomon during two days of hearings urging them to pass a doctrine dating back to the 18th century to defend Idaho's sovereignty and stand against federal government encroachment.

"We already know that the (Obama) administration has decided to go full steam ahead with this law," said Rep. Vito Barbieri, R-Dalton Gardens. "At some point the state must stand and make a determination as to whether this tyranny is going to continue, or at least be objected to."

A U.S. District Court judge in Florida has ruled the federal law is illegal in a lawsuit brought by 27 states, including Idaho. Other federal courts have ruled more favorably for health care reform. It's likely the law will be reviewed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

In the meantime, at least 11 states — Maine, Montana, Idaho, North Dakota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming — are considering nullification measures, according to the 10th Amendment Center, a Los Angeles-based states' rights group pushing such bills.

One GOP lawmaker, Rep. Eric Anderson of Priest Lake, joined four Democrats in opposing the bill Thursday. Anderson said he believes the 2009 federal health care law should be dumped.

But he was swayed by a state attorney general's opinion — as well as constitutional arguments from scholars — that Idaho has no legal standing to nullify federal laws.

"It's an outright defiance of the law," Anderson said. "If we vacate that rule of law, we simply become nothing but a collection of states that decide among themselves that they're going to nullify everything that's inconvenient to them."

Idaho's bill declares the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act unconstitutional and forbids enforcement of penalties against residents. It also prohibits the state and local governments from enforcing the federal law and bars them from taking federal money — or using their own resources — to put the measure into effect.

Idaho has already been granted at least $1 million under the health care law, according to state figures provided to The Associated Press, with $730,000 going to the Department of Health and Welfare to help establish health insurance exchanges.

Additional Medicaid funding could also be jeopardized by passage of the nullification bill, according to the Idaho attorney general's office.

"This could create a situation where individuals presently covered would no longer be covered, yet still require medical treatment, which likely would be required to be provided for and paid for through some non-federal means," wrote Assistant Chief Deputy Attorney General Brian Kane. "This situation, in turn, could create an intense burden on the State's budget."

Feds give early OK to limited wolf kill

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Federal wildlife officials have signaled their preliminary approval for Idaho's petition to kill up to 60 endangered gray wolves from packs that have been preying heavily on big game herds in the upper Clearwater River Basin.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service published a draft environmental review Thursday in which it proposed to approve a wolf hunt plan in the Lolo zone that had been submitted last August by Idaho Fish and Game. A similar petition from Montana — to remove 12 wolves in the Bitterroot Range — remains pending.

Wolves in the Northern Rockies are listed as an endangered species under a federal court order, but state and federal officials have been looking for ways to curb their population.

The Idaho and Montana hunt proposals stem from a 2008 rule change by the Fish and Wildlife Service that allows states to remove wolves if they are harming deer or elk herds. Federal officials must sign off on the any proposed hunts following a scientific review.

The rule is under a court challenge by wildlife advocates. A hearing in the case is set for next month in Missoula, before U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife officials stressed Thursday that a final decision on Idaho's plan has not been made. But the federal agency's Idaho supervisor, Brian Kelly said state officials "seem to have provided pretty good data that wolves are a factor" behind declining elk populations in an area known as the Lolo zone.

The environmental review published Thursday opens a 30-day comment period.

Nullification bill puts Idaho Medicaid dollars in jeopardy

Cast your mind ahead a couple of years. Let’s say Obamacare, in some form, has survived court challenges and outright repeal by the Republicans. And the director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare receives a certified letter from Washington, D.C.

“Dear Sir,” it reads, “as a purely voluntary program, Idaho’s refusal to comply with the expanded provisions with the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010 means that the state will no longer be eligible for federal Medicaid matching funds.”

That’s likely to be more than $1 billion — an amount equivalent to two-fifths of Idaho’s current budget.

Idaho’s Assistant Chief Deputy Attorney General Brian Kane put it this way in a legal opinion about the latest Obamacare nullification bill working its way through the Idaho House of Representatives:

“(House Bill 117) could create a situation where individuals presently covered would no longer be covered, yet still require medical treatment, which likely would be required to be provided for and paid for through some non-federal means. This situation, in turn, could create an intense burden on the state’s budget ... the Legislature may wish to consider whether its adoption has the practical and legal effect of opting Idaho out of Medicaid and its attendant federal funding.”

That’s an excellent suggestion, but one that a significant number of legislators seem hell bent on ignoring.

This isn’t just a debating exercise: 223,198 Idahoans — the state’s poorest, sickest and oldest citizens — stand to lose benefits.

That in turn would jeopardize a Medicaid provider network responsible for at least 25,000 jobs from Bonners Ferry to Preston.

From the Legislature’s standpoint, the lost Medicaid matching funds would be the equivalent of cutting the public school budget by 85 percent.

There’s a smarter way to change Obamacare, and Idaho is doing it by joining two dozen other states in challenging the law’s constitutionality. A federal judge in Florida has declared the national health care law unconstitutional, but the U.S. Supreme Court will have the final say.

Until it does, measures such as HB117 are self-destructive political self-indulgence.

State Rep. Erik Anderson, R-Priest Lake, an opponent of HB117, got it right when he said, “We already are in the middle of a nullification, and that nullification is going through ... the proper channels of the court system. We are appealing. We are winning ...”

So why in the world should the Legislature put its Medicaid recipients in jeopardy?

Rx for jobs: Fewer government regulations, lower corporate taxes

The next two years will feature divided government, with Democrats controlling the White House and Senate and Republicans controlling the House of Representatives.

Nick Schulz

As such, hopes might seem slim that bold, serious steps designed to get the American job machine humming will emerge from Pennsylvania Avenue. That is too bad; there’s a lot Washington could do to foster job creation.

Here are a few ideas chosen in part for their potential to gain bipartisan support.

The first is to rein in the nation’s regulatory state, which has become increasingly unaccountable and burdensome.

First up for reform should be the Environmental Protection Agency. At the beginning of this year, new EPA rules regulating greenhouse gases went into effect. The rules are modest at first. But over time the scope of the rules will grow to apply to more industries and commercial enterprises.

The EPA rules were described by Time magazine as possibly “the most far-reaching environmental regulatory scheme in American history.” The cost of such regulations is difficult to estimate, but rest assured they won’t come cheap. The rules amount to a tax on business activity, one that will result in job losses or shipping jobs overseas to countries without a zealous EPA.

It’s worth recalling that Congress recently considered and rejected curbs on greenhouse gas emissions, in part because of concerns about the effect on jobs.

Most Americans are surprised to learn that the United States has one of the world’s highest corporate tax rates. In fact ... if Japan cuts its corporate tax rate this year as planned, the United States will have the highest corporate levy in the world. A smart move would be to lower the rate to 25 percent or even eliminate it ...

That the EPA would now impose curbs after they were rejected by the elected representatives of the American people gives some sense of how unaccountable EPA has become.

Bipartisan regulatory reform is possible. In the late 1970s, faced with an anemic economy and high unemployment, liberal Democrats joined conservative Republicans to push regulatory reform in airlines and transport, among other areas. Those efforts helped power a twenty year economic boom.

Today’s weak economy offers another chance for both parties to come together. Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C., and Rep. Geoff Davis, R-Ky., are pushing a regulatory reform proposal called Regulations from the Executive in Need of Scrutiny — or REINS Act. Sen. Mark Warner, D-Va., has also developed a promising regulatory overhaul. Clearly there is bipartisan recognition of the problem. Now it’s time for both parties to act.

Congress should also pass a corporate income tax cut. A high tax rate here encourages business activity — and resultant job creation — to move to more tax friendly regions such as Asia.

Most Americans are surprised to learn that the United States has one of the world’s highest corporate tax rates. In fact, as American Enterprise Institute economist Kevin Hassett has pointed out, if Japan cuts its corporate tax rate this year as planned, the United States will have the highest corporate levy in the world. A smart move would be to lower the rate to 25 percent or even eliminate it altogether.

Last, the creation of new companies is vital to economic growth and job creation. Research from the Kauffman Foundation in Kansas City shows that start-up and young companies are responsible for all net job creation over time.

To encourage more start-ups, Congress should make new companies exempt from payroll taxes for their first five years. This will encourage new firm creation and hiring.

This process can be speeded up by issuing so-called “start-up visas” for high-skilled immigrants who want to come to the United States and found companies. This is win-win for the country — America imports brains and talent from abroad to start companies that will yield jobs for native-born Americans.

Americans aren’t used to persistently high unemployment. They’re understandably frustrated. Taking these steps will help get Americans back to work.

Nick Schulz, a fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, wrote this for McClatchy-Tribune Newspapers.

Twin Falls urban renewal is about jobs

There has been great concern about how to fund the wide variety of Idaho’s government programs this year in this legislative session. General revenue funds are short and programs need to be funded.

One of the surefire ways to generate new income is by creating new jobs. That is exactly what we’ve been able to do with projects approved by the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency.

The TFURA’s board is in the second year of its five-year strategic plan. By all measures 2010, our first year of implementation of that plan, actions we have taken have created new business, new jobs and created strong momentum for our community. As most of you know, we were able to have the grand opening of C3 in late October where 900 jobs were created. This is just the largest of the successes we had over the first year of the implementation of our five-year plan. These jobs create tens of thousands of dollars in general fund revenues through the state income tax and sales tax. And these jobs were created as a direct result of TFURA board projects. As a citizen board we appreciate the public input and the ability to share our decisions and discussions in an open forum every month.

READER COMMENT

As a produce wholesaler and a business owner, I know how difficult and challenging the marketplace can be. I also know the kinds of impacts these jobs have on our city, our region and our state. Our rural business partners throughout the Magic Valley area also know how strong these connections are when it comes to regional, national, and even international economies. Most of the agricultural products raised in our region are sold either somewhere else in the United States or to overseas markets. The flow of products, services, jobs, and value-added companies abound in our area, so we know that whenever something happens to one of our neighbors like Buhl, it can affect Twin Falls, Boise or the larger domestic and international markets.

The same is true when we create a new job in Twin Falls through one of our TFURA projects. People who are working in the city of Twin Falls at one of these new jobs can affect the region in many positive ways. A recent story in the Times-News highlighted one of these families from Glens Ferry that had a complete turnaround in their lives because they were now employed at one of the new jobs at C3.

There are many steps we will be taking this year with one of our partners, Brix and Co., to enhance the infrastructure for the business community and also to help create jobs in Twin Falls. We will do so recognizing the that there is an ongoing recession that creates challenges, the realities of the marketplace, looking for and developing realistic expectations in the business community and rebuilding the older areas to make them more attractive for business.

All of the steps we have taken and projects we have moved on will help either create the infrastructure for jobs, or actually create jobs for the market. All of these steps have been taken in our public meetings each month with a thorough discussion of each decision. In turn, these decisions and projects create jobs that help generate the general fund revenue necessary to help pull our state out of its budget shortfall.

Gary Garnand is the owner of Garnand Marketing and the chairman of the board of the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency.

Supermarkets: Stop selling endangered fish

I am a local resident concerned about the state of the oceans. I am concerned because the fish stock is rapidly depleting. Every year, $16 billion of seafood is sold to the United States and half of that is sold to the grocery stores. Some fish species are more in trouble than others, like the Chilean sea bass, orange roughy, ahi tuna and others.

If the grocery stores continue to sell this endangered or “red list” fish, their populations may disappear or become so expensive we are not going to be able to afford them, like the bluefin tuna which can reach $30,000 per fish in Japanese markets.

Today, 21 fish are on the “red list.” I found these endangered species, like Alaska pollock, at Winco, Costco, Smith’s and Albertson’s. I found tropical shrimp at all the Twin Falls stores; Atlantic salmon at Costco, Smith’s and Fred Meyer; red snapper at Fred Meyer; ahi tuna at Costco, Albertson’s and Fred Meyer; and orange roughy at Smith’s, Albertson’s and Fred Meyer.

We are asking the grocery stores to take this endangered fish out of their shelves until their populations recuperate. If you want to know more about this topic, please Google “Greenpeace Red List Fish.”

Palin in 2012? Oh well, world's ending anyway

Sal Russo knows a money-making opportunity when he sees one. After starting the Tea Party, he and his wife charged the party $4 million for services rendered as political advisers. They got the money and their spokedidiot, Sarah Palin, got the publicity.

Sarah’s a foxy publicity hound. Get it? Foxy, Fox News, Fox Network — never mind.

She wants to be president in 2012. Oh well, the world’s supposed to end then anyway. On the other hand, she’s a quitter. Ask any Alaskan. She was their governor until Bridge to Nowhere Syndrome set in. She not only has it, but she’s also a carrier.

When queried about running for president in 2012, Palin responded by wondering if the nation is ready for someone different who operates outside the box. Yes, she’s extremely different, and John McCain’s responsible for letting her out of that box. Ever see the movie, Fatal Attraction? She’s the sequel. Ask any Republican congressman.

Ever wonder why she doesn’t appear on Meet the Press or Face the Nation? Probably because they ask questions and Sarah doesn’t perform well under those circumstances. Ask Katie Couric.

Republicans, including John McCain and the Tea Party candidates she campaigned for, compliment her but always stop short of a presidential endorsement, even when specifically asked.

She portrays herself as the great Alaskan huntress, yet she keeps shooting herself in the foot.

Palin’s born-again virgin daughter, Bristol, is now Wasilla’s spokesperson for abstinence after the fact. She has a catchy slogan: “Kids, don’t try this at home while your mom’s out on the porch looking for Russia.”

Polls have Palin’s popularity at 18 percent. Deduct her relatives and it drops to 11 percent. Deduct her intelligent supporters and it drips to 10.97 percent. Deduct her — oh, who cares?

Fairgrounds beer sales: What could go wrong?

In the Times-News today (Feb. 5), a particular editorial “cheer” (“Cheers and Jeers”) grabbed my attention. “To the Twin Falls County Fair Board ... in allowing the sale of beer ... [I]t just makes sense.”

Really? Tell teen-agers that drugs are harmful but beer makes sense? Especially if money can be made! “... $50, $60 or $70 grand, more overall.” At least one board member was honest in stating it’s primarily about the cash. Cheers to him! Public safety must be secondary. According to Capt. Robert Storm of the Idaho State Police, District 4, “In their mind it’s legal, so it’s safe ... that’s not true.”

The aforementioned quote was featured in the Times-News earlier in the week. He was speaking of synthetic marijuana, but the comments equally apply to beer. The message: “Spice bad. Beer good.” At least to an impressionable mind. (I am nearly 50 years old and still impressionable.)

Let’s read, again, Article III, Section 24, of the Constitution of State of Idaho. “The first concern of all good government is the virtue and sobriety of the people ... and should further all wise and well-directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality.”

If the citizens and its government choose to push the drug, alcohol, then each of us needs to understand the realities that Capt. Storm raises before we condemn abusers. “In their mind it’s legal, so it’s safe ... that’s not true.” Best of luck to those ISP officers and Twin Falls County Sheriff’s deputies and the city of Filer Police department in catching drunk drivers turning out of the fairgrounds next fall.

Beer sales at the fair! What could possibly go wrong?

Is all our recycling going to landfill?

Two weeks ago, we received our recycle container. The wife and I went about to save the world.

For the last two weeks, we have rinsed cans, flattened boxes and crushed plastic containers. I was surprised at how much we were able to recycle. We had one little sack of garbage for two weeks and almost a full container to be recycled.

As I wheeled the two containers to the curb, I was as happy as a dad having one-each twins.

The trash man pulled up and dumped old blue top, but to my horror, he proceeded to dump the recycle trash on top of the garbage.

Remind me to call PSI and have them come and pick up their orange-top tub.

Cassia schools in need of 'home improvements'

We would like to thank all those in the community who have donated of their time and money in pursuit of the Cassia Joint School District bond issue. We have noticed as people have come to the many meetings that have been held, that many people get their questions answered and are able to see and learn of the real needs that are in all areas of our school district.

It is similar to having a home. Periodically, things wear out and need to be repaired or replaced. Sometimes your family grows or your needs change and adjustments need to be made. You make a change, add onto your home or move into something a bit larger.

Our school district has experienced the same changes and are feeling the need to make some “home improvements” and, in some cases where there is overcrowding, to grow.

Increased needs due to a growing elementary population, aging buildings with structural and mechanical issues and obsolete heating and ventilation systems, and the increased requirements in math and science classes have lead the district to ask for this bond.

We are so proud to live in a community that is so involved and forward thinking in growing itself and building a strong future.

We would also like to ask whoever is taking down our signs and materials to please stop. These items cost money and require a great deal of time and effort.

All taxpayers should pay for POST academy

In your “Cheers and Jeers” opinion section Feb. 5, you chastised legislators for not adding another ornament on the Christmas tree of court costs to provide additional funding for the Police Officer Standards and Training academy. The criticism was not justified.

As an attorney, I spend a lot of time in the courthouses in Cassia and Minidoka counties. I see who is paying court costs and why. Many of the defendants have been cited for offenses which occur because of their financial problems, such as failure to register, failure to maintain insurance and faulty equipment on their vehicles. Others are pleading guilty for convictions they might have avoided if they could afford an attorney.

Prior to adoption of the magistrate system and the statutes defining infractions, sentences were handed down by justices of the peace, police judges and probate judges who could take into account the financial circumstances of the defendant in assessing the fines and costs.

We now have a cash register system in which our costs are assessed automatically from a schedule, regardless of the impact on the defendant. For failure to display a license plate, the fine is $10.50, but the costs are $51.50 for a total of $62. All citizens benefit from the POST academy. It should be funded from the general fund by all taxpayers, not on the backs of people whose offense is that they are poor.

It is easy for legislators to tell voters they have not raised taxes by relying on the subterfuge of tacking on costs for classes of citizens who are not yet identified. Courts should promote the ideal of equal justice for all. Using the courts to raise money from the disadvantaged to shield other citizens from the true cost of government is an abuse of the judicial system. I hope you will re-evaluate your opinion.

OTHER VIEWS

The following editorial appeared in the Philadelphia Inquirer on Wednesday:

History rewritten

Former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld will visit the National Constitution Center in Philadelphia on Wednesday, though he may try to deny it afterward.

Living in a state of denial seems reflexive these days for Rumsfeld, who is promoting his new memoir, “Known and Unknown.” The book offers an unapologetic, self-serving defense of his role in the costly and tragically misguided Iraq war.

You might be reluctant to examine your past decisions, too, if they had led to a war that cost 4,400 American lives and at least $700 billion. So, readers won’t get soul-searching from Rumsfeld about Saddam Hussein’s nonexistent WMDs, or the lack of an Iraqi link to the 9/11 terrorist attacks, the Bush administration’s main arguments for going to war.

Now that history has proved him wrong, the best Rumsfeld can muster is the mantra that the world is better off without Hussein. He knew at the time that was not a good enough reason to invade Iraq.

If there were mistakes, Rumsfeld lays the blame on others in the Bush administration — former Secretary of State Colin Powell, former National Security Council director Condoleezza Rice, former CIA director George Tenet. Anybody but Rummy.

Donald M. Cox

FAIRFIELD — Donald M. Cox, 93, of Fairfield, passed away Saturday, Feb. 5, 2011, at his home in Fairfield.

Donald was born Oct. 2, 1917, in the little town of Egin, Idaho, 10 miles west of St. Anthony. Donald was the fifth of 13 children born to Bert and Jennie Cox. Raised in a home with an open door for family, friends or anyone who might just be in need of a hot meal, Donald spoke often of the hobos who would ride the rails into Fairfield and how quickly news would travel of his family's generosity. His mother always had chores to exchange for a hot meal for those staying in Fairfield's "hobo jungle" located next to the family's home. Donald carried these values all of his life, whether it was a new dress for his sister, train tickets to bring family members home or giving his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren money for HIS birthday.

Donald was drafted to the Army in February 1941, stationed in Fort Lewis, Wash., a member of the 41st Infantry, Sunset Division. Serving his country in World War II on June 7, 1944, he and the other 11 members of his squad were wounded on Biak Island, Dutch, New Guinea. After 12 days in the trenches, he made his way to the beach's amphibious landing site. With his injuries, he spent more than five months in the hospital and the better part of a year to recover. Donald returned home to his family in 1945, calling Alf Baldwin at Fairfield's telephone switchboard, to get a message to his family that he had arrived in Gooding. His brother, Howard, only 17 years old at the time, did not recognize him when he scanned the patrons of the Pastime Bar. Donald was awarded a Purple Heart and Bronze Battle Star for his participation in the New Guinea Campaign.

Donald met his future bride at the Leavell's Rodeo in 1947. With plans of marriage, Donald bought the old Daniel's schoolhouse and moved it to Fairfield, beginning what would be their home for their married life. Donald married Doris Hobbey on July 16, 1948, at the old Methodist parsonage in Fairfield. To the marriage, they brought five children, Ken, Linda, Gary, Steve and Janet. In 1953 with a growing family, Donald went to work for Camas County Road and Bridge. Donald was known for his ability to operate any type of heavy equipment with expertise. During his time with Camas County, Donald made many lasting friendships with the residents he proudly served. After 29 years, he retired and enjoyed every snowstorm from his armchair. His retirement years were spent helping with many building projects for himself and Doris, all of his children and anyone else who might need a hand. His grandson, Joey, would say, "My Grandpa doesn't work, he just builds."

A quiet man, Donald loved his family, spending many hours making sure the Cox Family Reunion was held every August, a time for family togetherness. His grandchildren and great-grandchildren were very important to him; he loved every one of them.

Donald is survived by his wife of 62 years; his sons, Ken of Fairfield, Gary (Carma) of Kuna and Steve (Bobbie) of Fairfield; his daughters, Linda Thomas and Janet (Matt) Croner, both of Fairfield; along with 13 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren (with many more who called him "Grandpa"). Also surviving Donald is his sister, Jennie Thompson of Orem, Utah; his brother, Howard (Marge) Cox of Salem, Ore.; and numerous nieces and nephews.

In lieu of flowers and memorial donations, the family wishes that you honor Donald's memory by lending a hand to someone in need or a random deed of kindness. Do these and remember the Cox Family and their generosity and family values.

A viewing will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 11, at Demaray's Gooding Chapel. A graveside service for Donald will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 12, at the Mountain View Cemetery north of Fairfield. The family invites you to join them in a celebration of Donald's life "Cox Style" with a meal and stories of remembrance at the American Legion Hall in Fairfield immediately following the service.

Iva Lou Johnson

BURLEY — Marjorie "Iva Lou" Johnson, age 86, of Burley, passed away Wednesday, Feb. 9, 2011, at the Parke View Rehabilitation and Care Center in Burley, with her daughters by her side.

She was born July 2, 1924, in Kimberly, Idaho, the daughter of John and Mabel Steelsmith. She graduated from Hazelton High School in 1942 and continued her education at the Albion State Normal School, where she received her teaching certificate. She married Earl E. Johnson on July 11, 1946, in Twin Falls. Together, they had two daughters, Kay and Karla.

Iva Lou taught several years in the Hazelton School District. She was a wonderful and loving wife, mother, grandmother and friend. She enjoyed crocheting, sewing and quilting and especially loved spending time with her family and friends.

She is survived by her daughters, Kay (Gary) Buerkle of Heyburn and Karla (Don) Utt of Eden; three grandchildren, Ranee (Dan) May, Kody Buerkle and Brian Utt; and two great-grandchildren, Braxton May and Alexis May. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Earl, who died in 1992; and a sister, Olive Fern Arbaugh.

A graveside service will be held at 1 p.m. Monday, Feb. 14, at Sunset Memorial Park, 2296 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A visitation for family and friends will be held from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 13, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley.

The family suggests memorials be directed to Intermountain Home Care and Hospice.

Butte woman shot in Idaho was wanted for forgery

BUTTE, Mont. (AP) — The Montana woman shot and killed by an Idaho State Police trooper earlier this week was wanted on a felony forgery charge, according to a newspaper report.

Christie A. Little, 40, of Butte didn't show up for a pretrial hearing on Oct. 12 and District Judge Brad Newman issued a warrant for her arrest, The Montana Standard said.

On Monday evening, an ISP trooper stopped a vehicle for speeding in northern Idaho. Officials say Mark Maykopet, 24, led police on a chase after they discovered he was wanted for walking away from a Helena pre-release center in October. Little, who according to court records was Maykopet's common-law wife, was his passenger.

Sometime during the chase, Maykopet rammed the patrol car and the officer fired shots at the vehicle, killing Little. KREM-TV of Spokane, Wash., reports investigators have not explained what prompted the trooper to use his weapon. The officer's name has not been released.

Lawmakers to rework public education overhaul

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Lawmakers sent public schools chief Tom Luna and his plan to overhaul the K-12 education system back to the drawing board for a small rewrite Thursday, after three days of listening to testimony from teachers, administrators, parents, and students.

Supporters and foes of the plan remain deeply divided and the public hearings were, at times, heated over the proposal to restructure how Idaho's scarce education dollars are spent.

Luna unveiled the plan to lawmakers in January calling for the state to beef up technology in the classroom and arm high school students with laptops, requiring them to take online courses. Class sizes would increase slightly to help pay for the reforms and the state would shed an estimated 770 teaching jobs.

The biggest rewrite to Idaho's public education system in recent memory came first to the Senate Education Committee in the form of two pieces of legislation, Senate Bill 1068 and Senate Bill 1069. The committee, chaired by Sen. John Goedde, was scheduled to vote on the bills after a final day of public testimony on Thursday.

"There are enough small corrections needed in S1068 and S1068 that they should not be held for a vote in committee as they are currently written," Goedde said in a letter Thursday, hours before the public hearing was expected to begin.

Luna will bring two revised drafts of the legislation to the committee on Monday, Goedde said.

The Idaho Education Association has condemned parts of the plan that would reduce teaching jobs, increase class sizes and require educators to forgo coveted job security. After it was introduced, the union criticized Luna for "hijacking" an important debate over funding for Idaho public schools with a plan to "radically alter the way Idaho schools do business."

Public schools in Idaho have lost roughly $200 million in funding during the past two years amid the economic downturn.

Luna argues that the current system is not sustainable and contends no other education stakeholders have presented a plan to reform education in Idaho. He has chastised the teachers union for spreading "misinformation" about the Republican-backed proposal that was introduced with Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's support.

Some 300 parents and their children rallied on the south steps of the Capitol building as lawmakers started public hearings on Luna's plan earlier this week.

They held signs aloft that read "Raise my taxes for education" and "What a Luna-tic," while listening to speakers suggest how to address education reforms. One woman told her son: "If you're in a class of 45 kids, nobody will know your name."

Forest Service eyes rules to increase control

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — Hoping to break a legal logjam that has stymied logging as well as ecosystem restoration, the U.S. Forest Service said Thursday it was revising its planning rules to take more control over national forests and find more common ground between industry and conservation groups.

The old rules, dating back to the Reagan administration, designated certain animal species that must be protected to assure ecosystems are healthy. However, the system became the basis of numerous lawsuits that sharply cut back logging to protect habitat for fish and wildlife.

The new rules call for monitoring a broader range of species, including plants, while giving forest supervisors greater discretion to decide what science to apply and which species to protect, depending on local conditions.

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack said from Washington, D.C., that it's in everyone's best interest to have forests that stay healthy amid climate change and economic demands.

"Rather than responding to the political pressure of the time, it would be much better to say to the scientists, 'What is the best way to make this forest the most resilient it can be,'" Vilsack told The Associated Press.

The conservation group that forced the revision by persuading a federal judge to throw out the last one said the proposal represents a dangerous rollback of mandatory protections and gives too much discretion to forest supervisors.

"This flies in the face of the principal that has been in place, that the Forest Service's job is to keep common species common," said Rodger Schlickeisen, president of Defenders of Wildlife.

The 155 national forests and grasslands managed by the agency cover 193 million acres in 42 states and Puerto Rico. Balance between industry and conservation in those areas has been tough to find since the existing rules went into effect in 1982.

One revision of the rules by the Clinton administration and two by the Bush administration were thrown out by federal courts.

Lawsuits to protect habitat for threatened and endangered species have cut national forest logging levels to a quarter of their peak. Meanwhile, the timber industry continues to clamor for more logs, and conservation groups keep challenging timber sales, drilling and mining projects.

State may get bigger role in siting animal feedlots

Stevenson bill would give more power to ISDA

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Counties could more easily get state help when determining suitable sites for proposed confined-animal feeding operations under legislation introduced Thursday by Rep. Bert Stevenson, R-Rupert.

The bill would give the state the authority to provide an analysis of a proposed CAFO site to a county when requested — even for newer types of operations such as poultry. This would be done by expanding the definition of a CAFO in existing state law for site reviews to include any project considered a CAFO under local county ordinances.

In his presentation to the House Agricultural Affairs Committee, Stevenson said the legislation is the result of challenges that county officials in the Magic Valley have had in getting site assistance for CAFO-related proposals, including for poultry.

“It was determined at that time because the (Idaho State Department of Agriculture) does not regulate poultry or swine, they were not in a position to help with the siting program,” he said.

During site reviews, officials of the ISDA, the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality and the Idaho Department of Water Resources act in an advisory role, providing an analysis of environmental risks and giving the information to counties.

“All of the counties have their zoning ordinances that are so different that we had to make something that when the county made their request, then if it complied with their ordinance that’s the condition under which they are sited,” Stevenson said.

Stevenson

The bill also allows counties to charge applicants a CAFO site suitability fee of $1,200, plus the mileage costs of state officials traveling from Boise to the CAFO site.

Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, said the site review process is helpful because it provides necessary information to local officials who make the final call.

“That’s the way you help planning and zoning people make their decisions,” she said.

That wasn’t the only agriculture-related proposal Thursday from a Magic Valley lawmaker.

Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, introduced a bill about animal care to clarify and define the roles of law enforcement officers and ISDA. In the bill, agriculture officials enforce the animal care laws pertaining to production animals, while law enforcement officials enforce the animal care laws concerning companion animals like domestic dogs, cats, rabbits, birds, and equines that aren’t used in the production of food or fiber.

“The main goal is just to spell out who is responsible for what,” Patrick said.

Tony Ramos, owner of Ava Nursery, stands among a field of podocarpus shrubs at one of his nurseries in Pierson, Fla. Ramos is among the growing number of Hispanic farm workers turned farm owner.

Hispanics claim highest rate of new farmers in U.S.

By Eloisa Ruano Gonzalez
The Orlando Sentinel

PIERSON, Fla. — Benito Baca and Tony Ramos worked in Pierson’s ferneries since they were 5. Children of Mexican immigrants, the boys worked after school, cutting foliage used in flower bouquets.

If one fell behind cutting leaves, the other pitched in so they could make baseball practice, said Baca, who still recalls working in cold, damp clothes after Florida’s heavy rains. During summers, he says, the black shades that protect ferns from the sun intensified the humidity underneath.

“It was so humid, you immediately started to sweat. It was so hard to breathe,” Baca, 31, said.

These days, the men’s sweat is plowed into their own agricultural businesses. Baca and Ramos are among a growing number of Hispanics in the U.S. who have gone from field hand to farm operator. Baca started a business more than a year ago setting up irrigation systems at local nurseries and new subdivisions.

In 2005, Ramos, 31, started a small nursery in Pierson, where he sells hedges and shrubs to landscaping companies and wholesalers.

“There are a lot more (Hispanic owners) out there than people realize,” said Ramos, who last fall unsuccessfully ran for Pierson Town Council — historically populated by white fernery owners.

Hispanics claim the highest rate of new farmers in the nation, followed by Asians, said Tirso Moreno, general coordinator for the Farmworker Association of Florida.

The number of Hispanic farms likely increased because of an increase in the Hispanic population, said Sterling Ivey, spokesman for the Florida Department of Agriculture. In Florida, for example, Hispanics make up about 21 percent of the population, compared with 15 percent a decade ago.

Many immigrant families, especially from Central America and Mexico, have strong farming roots, which likely has contributed to the increase in Hispanic-owned farms, Moreno said.

Meanwhile, the number of Florida’s white farmers who traditionally controlled the agriculture industry declined by 10 percent from 2002 to 2007 — many retiring or selling their businesses to large corporations. Their children no longer want to carry on the family business and instead are moving to urban areas to attend college and get higher-paying jobs.

“That’s opened an opportunity for Hispanic immigrants,” Moreno said.

Kitchens heating up

Restaurant group expects sales surge in Idaho this year

BOISE (AP) — After three years of dismal sales, restaurant owners across Idaho could be seeing busier kitchens and a healthier bottom line in 2011.

The National Restaurant Association is predicting a 4 percent increase in sales among Idaho eateries this year and revenue projected at $1.8 billion, up from $1.7 billion last year.

That level of growth ties Idaho with Virginia in second place for the highest growth rate in restaurant sales this year, with both states trailing North Carolina.

Pam Eaton, director of the Idaho Lodging and Restaurant Association, said she’s noticed another positive trend among restaurateurs across the state: Openings of new restaurants are outpacing the number of those shutting down the last three years.

A big factor contributing to that trend is the better deals restaurateurs are finding for renting, leasing or buying property.

Andrea Maricich, co-owner of Salt Tears Coffeehouse and Noshery, said a calming recession is lowering real estate prices and encouraging prospective business-starters to enter the market.

“I think that a lot of people, property owners, wouldn’t have even considered that five years ago,” Maricich told the Idaho Statesman. Maricich also used to own Boise’s The Milky Way.

The National Restaurant Association also argues that the economic downturn has created an increase in “pent-up demand,” or growing interest in dining out. The group’s latest data shows consumers spend on the average half their food budget in restaurants.

Idahoans have traditionally eaten meals at home, but changing habits and an influx of out-of-state residents coming to the state may also contribute to more robust restaurant sales this year, Eaton said.

Credit card companies figure out a way to spin straw into gold

Credit card companies are amazing. Not only do they now offer cards with no annual fees and low teaser rates, they even give you a rebate for 1 percent of everything you buy. Get an American Express card through Fidelity and you can get 2 percent of your purchases rebated to your investment account. Discover offers 5 percent on selected categories of purchases — groceries, gasoline, travel, clothing — depending on the month and the season. Can 7 percent be far behind?

Of course, you may be wondering, as I did, where the credit card companies come up with all the money for these rewards and rebates, which are now a feature on half of all credit cards in active use. At first blush, the money appears to be coming from retail merchants, who are paying ever-escalating fees for the privilege of swiping your credit card through their registers. But according to a wide range of government and private economists, ultimately it’s you, the consumer, who is paying for those rebates, as merchants raise their prices to cover those additional costs. When all is said and done, all that’s really happening is that the credit card companies are taking money out of your left pocket, setting aside a hefty fee for themselves and putting what’s remains back in your right pocket.

Only it’s worse than that. Because while everyone pays the higher retail prices necessary to cover the “swipe fees,” only those with rich rewards cards actually get the kickback. In effect, they are subsidized by those who pay those higher retail prices with cash, debit cards or standard-issue credit cards.

To understand how we got to this point, you need to understand the unique economics of the credit card business.

Credit cards are a “network” business, one in which everyone benefits when there are more customers using the same network.

Cardholders prefer cards that are accepted by more merchants, and merchants prefer to take the cards that have the largest number of cardholders. So once one card company begins to get

Hispanics are playing an important role in strengthening and diversifying the country's farm sector, said Mickie Swisher, an associate professor in the Sustainable Agriculture Department at the University of Florida. Hispanic farmers are providing American consumers with alternatives to mega-supermarkets and fueling food cooperatives, community-supported farms and farmers markets, Swisher said.

"It's part of the American tradition, having many choices," she said.

Minority farmers have even introduced new fruits and vegetables to the U.S. market. For example, Hispanic and Caribbean farmers provide red turnips and different varieties of chili peppers and greens, Swisher said.

Swisher, director of the University of Florida's Center for Organic Agriculture, conducted a study for the U.S. Department of Agriculture on small-scale Hispanic farmers and ranchers and their needs. It focused on California, Florida, New Mexico, Texas and Puerto Rico, which have the highest number of Hispanic farmers. While the farmers were mostly second-generation Hispanics and spoke English, Swisher said, they were unaware of grants and other government resources available.

Several programs are available for Hispanic farmers, Ivey said, including the Hispanic American Outreach Program run by the USDA Farm Service Agency to help farmers and ranchers with disaster recovery and loan opportunities.

a lead, it's difficult for the others to catch up or enter the fray. The result is that, in most network industries, all the business winds up in the hands of very few companies, at least until some new disruptive technology comes along. Certainly that's the case with credit cards. Visa, MasterCard and American Express now account for more than 90 percent of the market. With that much concentration comes the power to charge higher prices than would be possible in a more competitive market.

The other unusual characteristic of credit cards is that it is what economists call a "two-sided market," where firms compete both for merchants and cardholders. In the industry's early years, more of the revenue came from cardholders as companies competed to get more retailers into their networks. Keeping merchant fees low was an essential part of that strategy, and card companies made up for that by charging card holders annual fees and high interest rates on unpaid balances.

Over time, however, the competitive dynamic changed. Once consumers began using credit cards to make a majority of their big purchases, merchants realized that they simply couldn't stay in business if they didn't accept all the major credit cards. At that point, the credit card companies had the upper hand, allowing them to push through fee increases with relatively little drop-off in merchant participation.

Card companies now face a competitive landscape where the price sensitivity of their merchant customers is so low, and the price sensitivity of their cardholders is so high, that the winning strategy is to push merchant fees ever higher and use the money to offer ever more lavish rewards and cash rebates to win new cardholders and get them to use their cards to make more of their purchases.

What makes this strategy so effective is that the costs are largely hidden. Although the merchant fees eventually translate into higher retail prices, consumers can't really see that. What they can see, on the other hand, is that those wonderful card companies are giving them a 5 percent kickback every time they go to the supermarket.

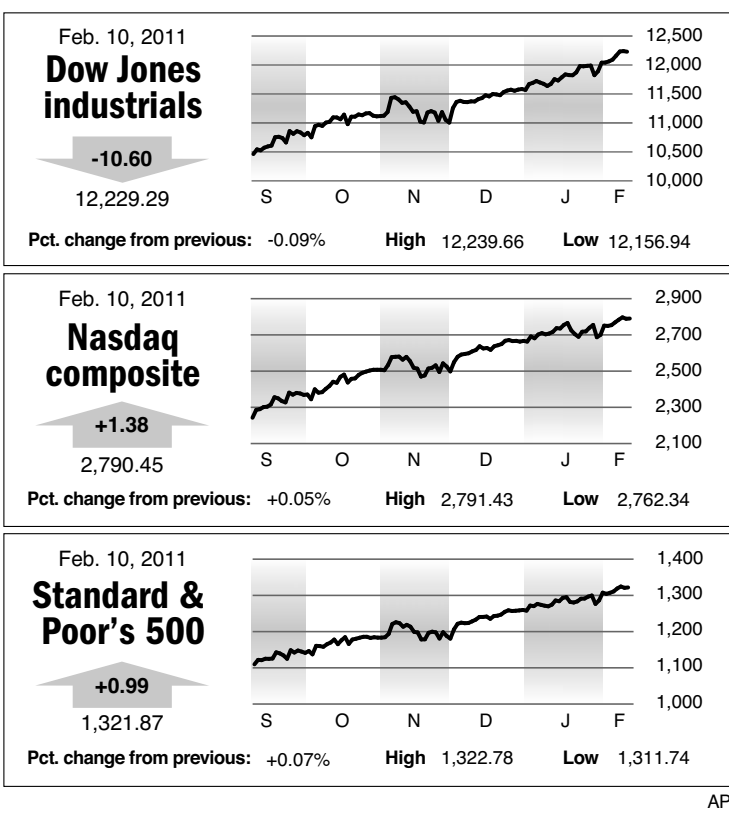

The credit card companies, you won't be surprised to learn, dismiss this analysis, claiming that rewards programs are a win for consumers, a win for merchants and a win for their shareholders. How can that be? Because, the argument goes, credit cards have brought so much efficiency to retail operations that they have actually lowered retail prices, not raised them. The credit card companies have figured a way to spin straw into gold!

This argument is not as fanciful as it might sound. The widespread use of credit cards by consumers and retailers probably has made the payments process less costly and more efficient, particularly once those clunky mechanical systems were replaced with easy swipes of the card. But those efficiencies were pretty much realized a decade ago, when most retailers adopted the latest technology. It's hard to see how there could have been enough additional efficiencies since then to justify the big jump in typical merchant fees since 2005. The Government Accountability Office found that not only have fees for transactions with standard cards increased about 25 percent but also that there has been a significant jump in merchant

Elk gone wild: Irked residents go on hunt

STONEY FORK, Ky. (AP) — Bringing the majestic elk back to the Appalachian hills and hollows where they once roamed has become a nightmare.

Rogues from a herd that numbers in the thousands are trampling gardens, flat-tening fences and marring yards with manure in the southeastern Kentucky town of Stoney Fork. They have made the roads dangerous, causing dozens of car crashes.

Some residents have had enough. With the state's OK, they headed out into the woods to kill elk. They killed 13 of them.

"They're dangerous. Somebody's going to get killed if they don't do something," said Stoney Fork resident Nelson Short, a 73-year-old resident with a flowing white beard that gleams like Santa's.

Short joined about 35 neighbors in a hunt one recent day. With a black 7mm Ruger slung across his shoulder, he boasted that one he caught trespassing on his land wound up in his freezer, sliced into steaks.

"When they started bringing them in here, I thought it would be a good thing," Short said. "It wasn't."

Elk had disappeared from Kentucky around the time of the Civil War, mainly because of overhunting.

Wildlife managers began bringing elk into the state in 1997 from several western states in what was heralded as an important ecology and tourism program. A group of about 1,500 elk released into 14 counties has grown to more than 10,000.

Officials expected the elk would thrive on the man-made meadows left behind after coal companies removed towering ridgetops in a controversial mining method known as mountaintop removal. Some of the elk, however, preferred the tender sprouts growing in the yards couched between steep mountains along a state road that passes through Stoney Fork.

The state has received hundreds of complaints about elk intruding on neighborhoods. And they have become a threat on the roads.

More than 100 elk have been killed in collisions with vehicles since 2005, and no human deaths, according to state wildlife records obtained by The Associated Press. Because that only includes crashes reported to wildlife officials, residents say the total could be ten times that.

"I feel like they don't need to be here," said Melissa Jones, who has earned a celebrity status in Stoney Fork because she survived a spectacular crash which left an angry bull elk thrashing and kicking in the front seat of her Geo Metro.

Protesters fight Mubarak's plan to stay

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt's Hosni Mubarak refused to step down or leave the country and instead handed most of his powers to his vice president Thursday, enraging protesters who warned the country could explode in violence and pleaded for the military to take action to push him out.

The rapidly moving events raised the question of whether a rift had opened between Mubarak and the military command over the spiraling mass uprising demanding the president go. Hours earlier, a council of the military's top generals announced it had stepped in to secure the country, and a senior commander announced to protesters in Tahrir Square that all their demands would soon be met, raising cries of victory that Mubarak was on his way out.

Several hundred thousand had packed into Tahrir Square, ecstatic with expectation that Mubarak would announce his resignation in his nighttime address. Instead, they watched in shocked silence as he spoke, holding their foreheads in anger and disbelief. Some broke into tears. Others waved their shoes in the air in contempt.

An Egyptian boy dressed as an army colonel sits on his father's shoulders in Tahrir Square in Cairo, Egypt, Thursday. The paper reads 'I came to give my blessings to the revolution and tell Mubarak to go.'

After the speech, they broke into chants of "Leave, leave, leave."

Organizers called for even larger protests today. After Mubarak's speech, around 2,000 marched on the state television headquarters several blocks away from Tahrir, guarded by the military with barbed wire and tanks. "They are the liars," the crowd shouted, pointing at the building, chanting, "We won't leave, they will leave."

Hundreds more massed outside Mubarak's main administrative palace, Oruba, miles away from Tahrir in the Cairo district of Heliopolis, the first time line."

Hours before Mubarak's speech, the military made moves that had all the markings of a coup.

The military's Supreme Council, headed by Defense Minister Field Marshal Hussein Tantawi, announced on state TV that it was in permanent session, a status that it takes only in times of war.

It said it was exploring "what measures and arrangements could be made to safeguard the nation, its achievements and the ambitions of its great people." That suggested Tantawi and his generals were now in charge of the country.

The statement was labeled "Communique No. 1," language that also suggests a military coup.

Footage on state TV showed Tantawi chairing the council with his chief of state Gen. Sami Anan and around two dozen of his top-most generals, sitting stern-faced around a table. Mubarak and Suleiman, a former army general and intelligence chief named to his post after the protests erupted Jan. 25, were not present, the strongest indication during the day of a rift.

Bank standoff ends after police kill armed suspect

CARY, N.C. (AP) — A three-hour standoff at a North Carolina bank ended abruptly Thursday when police shot and killed the armed suspect after he led a hostage through the parking lot with a gun to her head.

Television footage broadcast live during the dinner hour showed the man crumple to the ground after five officers fired on him outside a Wachovia bank in Cary, a suburb about 10 miles west of Raleigh.

"This is not how we wanted this to end," Cary Police Chief Pat Bazemore said.

None of the seven hostages, including one who stayed hidden from the gunman and relayed information to police, nor the dozens of officers who surrounded the bank were injured, Bazemore said.

The standoff began around 3 p.m. when the man came inside the Wachovia and tried to rob the bank, authorities said.

Police arrived within two minutes and the man took hostages.

Pint-sized PAINTERS

Twin Falls Center for the Arts debuts kid art classes

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

The second-floor classroom at Twin Falls Center for the Arts was quiet Saturday morning, as young artists filed in and got ready to paint.

You're going to be a Picasso, one mom said as she dropped off her daughter.

"Picasso's next week," chimed in art teacher Kim Cooper.

In late January, the Twin Falls Center for the Arts launched youth classes called "Art of the Masters." The five sessions are the first art classes in the new arts center at the north end of town.

The series, geared for first- through fifth-graders, couldn't have come at a better time, Cooper said. Public schoolteachers have little time or resources for art, and when they do, the projects are more crafty than artistic, said Cooper, who teaches second grade at Lincoln Elementary School in Twin Falls.

Baumgartner, executive director of Magic Valley Art Council.

"It's something that we've wanted to do for a very long time," Baumgartner said. Now that the new arts center has opened, the council has the space. "Before, when we had to rent a space to hold classes, it made the cost of classes prohibitive, we felt."

Saturday's class at the center started off with a quick lesson on Michelangelo, the artist of the week. The students returned to their tables to paint the clay sculptures they had made during the previous week's lesson about sculptor Auguste Rodin. The students had full reign over their work — Ashilee Reagan of Gooding had crafted a bowl, and Owen Jackson of Buhl made an intricate mask using paper clips as carving tools.

As they painted, Cooper filled plastic foam takeout containers with wet plaster and let it set up. While it was mostly set, but still wet, they would paint pictures on it — just like Michelangelo did in the Sistine Chapel, she told the students.

Twin Falls mom Kristy Buffington, who stayed during the class to watch 8-year-old daughter Gracy work, was impressed.

"It's just fun to watch the kids," she said.

And the children enjoyed the opportunity to play with the paint.

"I've always loved art, and I enjoy doing it," said 10-year-old Grace Solomon of Kimberly.

Cost is $10 per class for Twin Falls Center for the Arts members and $12.50 per class for non-members. Each class is for grades one to five and is restricted to 15 children. "Mommy and Me" art classes are 10:30-11:30 a.m. Fridays, Feb. 18 to March 18. Cost is $10 per class for members and $12.50 per class for non-members. The classes are for ages 3 to 5, and students must be accompanied by an adult. Class size is restricted to 15 pairs. Twin Falls Center for the Arts is at 195 River Vista Place. 'And so I guess these classes would help to supplement that.'

Crossover artist Matthew West brings real stories to song

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

For his latest album, Christian singer-songwriter Matthew West didn't look to his own life, or to those of his family and friends, for inspiration.

"I pulled from stories that came from all ages, all different walks of life," West said. The stories were sent to him through Facebook, e-mail and old-fashioned letters, after he put the word out that he wanted to hear from fans.

The Nashville artist received more than 10,000 stories from across the U.S. and the world, and spent a month sequestered in a remote cabin going through them and translating them into lyrics. During part of the songwriting process, he had help from his friend Jason Houser, who grew up in Twin Falls and moved his family

"He has a masterful, beautiful way of telling people's story. It's almost like a combination of short stories; it's captured in song but the emotion really speaks," Houser said from Nashville, Tenn., where he was recording. "There are stories of joy and victory, and also sadness and brokenness. One of the themes for the whole record became about healing, that there's hope in even the darkest of situations."

Houser assisted West on the "Family Tree" track and the culminating song of the record, "The Healing Has Begun," furthering a songwriting relationship they built when they first met in Nashville.

"When you have trust in somebody like that, it makes it easier, because you know your hearts are going in the same direction," West said. He said it was difficult to read many of the stories that were sent, because they were often about people's worst moments in life.

"One of the biggest topics I received, and it kind of shocked me to be honest with you, one of every four dealt with the topic of abuse," West said. Many women's stories inspired the song "Broken Girl." "It talks to somebody who has been the victim of abuse, says you don't have to stay the broken girl, you can stand up and be healed."

During the Twin Falls concert, West will play the entire "The Story of Your Life" album in

Film festival deals with women's issues

Times-News

For the fourth year, Americans for UNFPA will present The Family of Woman Film Festival in Ketchum, to educate the public about the work of the United Nations Population Fund, which provides women's health care and promotes the rights of women in more than 150 countries.

The festival will begin with a presentation by Robert Engelman, director of programs for The Worldwatch Institute, at 6 p.m. Thursday at Ketchum's Community Library. Engelman, a specialist in issues of population, reproductive health, global public health, climate change and food security, will speak on "Helping Women Help the Planet."

"Since deepest prehistory, women, their cooperative working style, and their

'Divorce, Iranian Style,' which explores the difficulties women face in courts in Tehran, will show Feb. 20 in Ketchum as part of The Family of Woman Film Festival.

strategies on reproduction and childraising have sustained the human species in a precarious world," Engelman said in a film festival announcement. "The connection between women and the planet is more important than ever today — and deserves our attention and support as we move toward environmentally sustainable societies."

"Voices Unveiled: Turkish Women Who Dare," which explores the clash between East and West through the lives of three modern Muslim women, will inaugurate the film schedule at 7 p.m. Feb. 18, at the NexStage Theatre in Ketchum. Filmmaker Jill Lutz will answer questions about her film, exploring the cultural and religious conflicts facing Turkish women.

"Sisters on the Planet," exploring the steps individual women have taken to address climate change, will be presented at 3 p.m. Feb. 19. Aimee Christensen, CEO of Christensen Global Strategies, will answer questions after the film. Christensen has worked on issues of environment, development and human rights for such entities as the Clinton Global Initiative, the UN Development Program and the U.S. Department of Energy.

Also in that 3 p.m. session will be "Sun Come Up," recently nominated for an Oscar in the documentary short category. The film, directed by Jennifer Redfearn, follows the relocation of some of the world's first environmental refugees, the Carteret Islanders, a community living on an island chain in the South Pacific Ocean threatened by rising seas.

At 4:30 p.m. Feb. 19, Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest, one of the film festival's sponsors, will host a public reception at Cornerstone Grill.

The 7 p.m. feature that day, "Climate Refugees," will be presented by filmmakers Michael Nash and Justin Hogan. It's a documentary about populations seeking to escape environmental calamities. "In any refugee situation, it is women and children who suffer the most," Hogan said in the festival announcement. The filmmakers will be joined afterward by Engelman and Christensen for a discussion and question period.

The Feb. 20 program will feature two documentaries by British filmmaker Kim Longinotto, "Divorce, Iranian Style" at 3 p.m., offering a look inside Sharia courts in Tehran, and, at 7 p.m., "Pink Saris," a new film following the life of an Untouchable woman in northern India helping women in arranged marriages.

Tickets to the festival are $15 for each film and can be purchased at Chapter One, Iconoclast Books or the NexStage Theatre. All films will be shown at NexStage.

Stanley plans crazy fun in the snow

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

Need a cabin fever reliever? You may find it in the tiny mountain hamlet of Stanley this weekend.

The town is staging its Second Annual Stanley-Sawtooth Winterfest on Saturday and Sunday.

It kicks off with the Second Annual Ace of Diamonds Drag Race at noon Saturday. And we're not talking motorized drag races — rather, men dressed in tutus and the like running down the street in snowshoes.

The Outhouse Race follows at 1:30 p.m. Outhouses must be mounted on skis and manned by a pilot with pants down around his or her ankles. A two-man crew propels each craft down Ace of Diamonds avenue to the finish line.

The Second Annual Blind Snow Machine Race will start at 1 p.m. Sunday behind the picnic shelter on Airport Road. The driver will be blindfolded while the passenger directs the driver verbally or by pressure through a groomed figure-eight course.

And the inaugural Big Air Snowboard Contest will begin at 11 a.m. Sunday with two runs per person from the top of the airport hill to the bottom, ending at about 3 p.m. The contest is sponsored by Newt & Harolds, a snowboard/skateboard shop in Boise; Red Bull; and Nocturnal Designs, an illustration and design studio in Boise. Riders must register at 10 a.m. at the check-in tent, and helmets will be required. Information: Gino Jackson at 908-8987.

Throughout the weekend, you'll see snowman/snow-woman/snow-creature building on all the main corners in town.

And the Second Annual Stanley Cup Pond Hockey tournament will take place Saturday and Sunday.

Organizers also hope to have a towing system for tubers and sledders at the Sled and Tube hill across from the Community Building on the east side of Airport Road.

Cross-country skiing will be available at the elementary school.

Information will be provided at The Community Building, along with free hot chocolate and snacks.

Local businesses will have snow machines and snowshoes for rent.

Health system CEO speaks on reform law

Times-News

Dr. David Pate, president and chief executive officer of the St. Luke's Health System, will be the speaker at the next Herrett Forum, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science.

His topic: "Health Care Reform Has Passed. Now What?"

Admission is free and doesn't require tickets, and the lecture is open to the public.

Before coming to Idaho, Pate managed the St. Luke's Episcopal Health System in Houston, a 915-bed tertiary care center located in the Texas Medical Center that employs 4,500 people, a College of Southern Idaho announcement said.

The Herrett Forum is a monthly lecture series held during the school year. The Herrett Center is on the north side of the CSI campus at the North College Road entrance.

sequence, but he also plans to perform some of his previous hits, play videos and mention some of the letters sent to him from Idahoans.

Houser said he expects the concert to be a thrill, but also meaningful.

"It's going to be a fun night, but you'll come away from it changed," he said. He said the final song, "The Healing Has Begun," encompasses the hopeful theme of the record. "It's very powerful, and to get to experience that live, it's one of those songs that connects to people's hearts."

Michelle Yeager, community impact director at 88.1 FM KTFY, which is helping bring the concert to Twin Falls, said West's work is in the tradition of Steven Curtis Chapman or Michael W. Smith, but that his songwriting sets him apart. "You're able to experience what the people on the songs went through, and I think that makes him different," she said.

West said even people who are not usually fans of Christian music would likely enjoy the performance. "It's like a movie, you laugh and you cry and you cheer," he said. "Hopefully you walk out of the concert feeling uplifted and make the most of your own story."

Artists' Sun Valley festival applications due Feb. 28

Times-News

Artists may apply this month to sell their work at the 2011 Sun Valley Center Arts & Crafts Festival, to be held Aug. 12-14 in Ketchum. Applications are available online at www.zapplication.org, or go to www.sunvalleycenter.org and follow the links under the "Events" tab.

Applications are due at midnight Feb. 28.

Local artists who need help with the application may call or e-mail Sarah Kolash at 726-9491, ext. 21, or skolash@sunvalleycenter.org.

Now in its 43rd year, the Sun Valley festival ranks as one of the top 100 outdoor juried festivals in the nation, organizers say. More than 12,000 people attended the festival last year in Ketchum's Atkinson Park.

WHERE YOU MIGHT HAVE HEARD HIM

Matthew West has released four albums: "Happy," 2003; "History," 2005; "Something to Say," 2008; and his most recent, "The Story of Your Life."

His promoters say he was the most-played artist on Christian radio in 2009, and his debut single, "More," was the most-played Christian song in 2003. He has been nominated for numerous Dove Awards, and nominated for a 2009 Grammy Award (Best Gospel Song) for "The Motions."

West has also written songs for country artists, including Billy Ray Cyrus, Rascal Flatts and Diamond Rio. He said he is in talks to have one of his songs played on the television show "The Vampire Diaries." "It's totally not a show I'd watch, but that just opens up another door for the message of that music to get out to another audience," West said. "I don't feel any need to put labels or limitations on where music can go."

Hailey troupe offers up ‘trippy, wild poetic fantasy’

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The incessant ringing of a cell phone becomes the catalyst for an odyssey into a new life. And it forces one woman to confront her own ideas about weighty subjects like morality in “Dead Man’s Cell Phone,” which opens Wednesday at the Company of Fools’ Liberty Theatre in Hailey.

Irked that the stranger slumped next to her at a coffee shop won’t answer his cell phone, Jean answers it — a move that ends up getting her a date with the man’s lonely brother, a drinking binge with his estranged wife and a rendezvous with his dangerous, mysterious mistress.

She even takes a message for the stranger, whom she realizes by now is dead, to call his haughty mother.

Pretty soon, she’s spun a fantastical life on behalf of the man she never met, hoping to bring some peace to his loved ones. And, by the time she’s done, she feels as if she knew him.

Cast member Suzanne Gerlits rehearses for 'Dead Man's Cell Phone,' which opens Wednesday.

modern technology. It’s a trippy, wild poetic fantasy,” said director Denise Simone. The contemporary satire is by Sarah Ruhl, whom Simone calls “one of the freshest and brightest playwrights on the scene.” It premiered in Washington, D.C., in 2007 and was awarded the Charles MacArthur award for outstanding new play at the Helen Hayes Awards.

Now, it seems, every theater company in the country wants to do it — from the Hippodrome in Gainesville, Fla., to ArtsWest in Seattle.

Joel Vilinsky, who supplies the voice of the dead man, likened the play to going down the rabbit hole in “Alice in Wonderland.”

“It asks aggressive questions we don’t normally ask,” he said.

The play is also full of fun twists and turns, from a girl fight to a “fabulous” drunk scene, said Jennifer Jacoby Rush, who plays the other woman. And there’s even an organ extraction going on.

“Who wouldn’t want to see a play like this?” Simone said.

The production also features Duke LaFoon, Beth Hilles and Christine Leslie.

This weekend, you’ve got plenty of entertainment choices for a romantic evening date.

If you’re starting your Valentine’s Day observance tonight, claim seats for two at pianist Juli Draney’s free Gershwin and Brahms recital in Twin Falls. Formerly of Filer, she’ll be a stage pianist with Ballet Idaho later this month.

If Saturday’s your special night, spend it together at Twin Falls Center for the Arts, where soprano Leslie Mauldin, baritone Robert Newman and tenor John Mauldin will sing “A Broadway Valentine Serenade.” Or in Ketchum, where Taiwan champion cellist Ben Hong and pianist Peter Henderson will perform lovely classical pieces for a Sun Valley Artist Series concert.

On Monday night in Twin Falls, two RAT Players will present A.R. Gurney’s Pulitzer-nominated “Love Letters,” a play chronicling a friendship and romance through two people’s lifelong correspondence.

Don’t have a date this weekend? You don’t need one to enjoy “Schultze Gets the Blues,” the Thursday installment in College of Southern Idaho’s film series. It’s a quietly engaging tale of a retired German salt miner who plays polkas for years before he and his accordion discover Cajun music, surprising travels and a future less bleak than it seemed.

More in the mood for contemporary satire? Turn to the Company of Fools production of Sarah Ruhl’s “Dead Man’s Cell Phone,” which opens Wednesday in Hailey. The Fools call it a wild poetic fantasy, but one that asks aggressive questions in a technology-obsessed world.

Get your art onto Wagon Days poster

Times-News

Wagon Days organizers are requesting submissions for the 2011 Wagon Days poster.

The posters are souvenirs of the annual Wagon Days parade in Ketchum, and many have become collectors’ items over the years, organizers say. Posters have featured photographs, collages, pastels, watercolors and oil paintings. All art submissions are welcome, including preliminary sketches. The artist for the winning submission will receive a small stipend and have the opportunity to ride in the Wagon Days parade.

Submissions are due by March 7. Artists should call Sun Valley Events at 720-4535 to get directions for submitting their work.

Spend Valentine’s Day with the RAT Players

Times-News

Random Acts of Theatre Players plan a one-night performance of “Love Letters,” a Pulitzer-nominated play by A.R. Gurney, on Valentine’s Day.

Starring Camille Barigar and Tony Mannen, the play is set for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the new Twin Falls Center for the Arts. Tickets are $10, from Magic Valley Arts Council or the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts box office.

“Love Letters” chronicles the relationship between a man and a woman through their lifelong correspondence. It celebrates the ritual, the fantasy, the dignity, the intimacy and the sensual pleasure of old-fashioned longhand letter writing, while recording the lives of a pair of correspondents, said RAT Players’ press release. Andrew Makepeace Ladd and Melissa Gardner’s poignantly funny friendship takes them from second grade through adolescence, maturity and into middle age. Their letters trace their on-again, off-again romance, their process of growing apart and growing together and ultimately becoming themselves.

A RAT founding member, Barigar has taken part in numerous productions for RAT, Magic Valley Little Theater and Dilettantes. Some of her roles: “A Streetcar Named Desire” (Blanche), “Little Shop of Horrors” (Audrey), “The Sound of Music” (the countess), “The Vagina Monologues,” “Into the Woods” (Cinderella), “Side Man” (Patsy), “The Nerd” (Tansy), “The Odd Couple” (one of the Pigeon sisters) and a terrifying stint at short-form improv.

The RAT Players’ production of ‘Love Letters’ stars Tony Mannen and Camille Barigar. Their characters sit side by side and read the letters in which, over nearly 50 years, they discuss their hopes and ambitions, dreams and disappointments.

Mannen is a professor of theater at CSI. His most recent shows include acting as Willy Loman in “Death of a Salesman” and directing the upcoming production of “Ten Little Indians” at CSI. Information: Barigar, 731-3729.

Take your valentine to Wood River Valley for an adventure-for-two

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — You can say “I love you” this Valentine’s Day with some creative new ideas Sun Valley organizations have come up with.

Sun Valley Nordic Center is hosting a Nordic Sweetheart Relay at 11 a.m. Sunday. Partners alternate by skiing six 1-kilometer loops around the Nordic Center’s Practice Loop. They must kiss to tag off. Pink and red costumes are encouraged — particularly those with valentine motifs. There will be a kids race category, as well. Information: 622-2250.

“Most Nordic centers do something fun for Valentine’s, so we thought, ‘why not?’” said center director Ivana Radlova. “Entry fee will be $10 per couple, and there will be something for everyone. It’s flat and easy, so anybody can do it. In fact, you can snow-shoe it if you like.”

Galena Lodge is hosting a five-course Valentine’s Dinner at 6:30 p.m. Monday at the lodge 24 miles north of Ketchum on Idaho Highway 75. Cost is $50 per person, not including alcohol or gratuity. Reservations: 726-4010.

Expedition Inspiration is hosting its sixth annual Starlight Snowshoe Dinner and Auction on Saturday night at the Valley Club near Hailey to help fund breast cancer research, said co-organizer Suzanne Pere Mullenos.

The optional snowshoe trek starts at 5 p.m. on snowshoes provided by The Elephant’s Perch, with an effervescent Bubble Bar boasting flutes of champagne waiting at the end. Cocktails and wine, hors d’oeuvres and a full-course dinner prepared by chef Mike Diem will await trekkers back at the clubhouse.

The Expedition Inspiration event, sponsored by Sun Valley Auto Club, will include a silent auction and a live auction presided over by auctioneer Larry Flynn.

Tickets are $90, at www.expeditioninspiration.org or 726-6456.

The biannual Inga-Lami Women’s Fun Nordic Event will be at 11 a.m. Feb. 26 at Quigley Nordic just east of Hailey, with registration starting at 10 a.m. Organizers hope participants will dress in Norwegian costume, whether in knee-high socks and Norwegian sweaters or as Viking ships, as some have in the past, said organizer Muffy Ritz.

Participants will get raffle tickets for every loop they ski; the more raffle tickets they collect the more they can enter into a drawing for prizes. Cost is $10 with the money going to Advocates for Survivors of Domestic Violence.

The Inga-Lami will be followed by the Farkenbeiner, an afternoon of crazy, zany games on the snow involving hula hoops and more. Information: Blaine County Recreation District, 788-2117.

‘Fast Food Nation’ author turns to nuclear weapon risks

Eric Schlosser lectures in Ketchum

Times-News

Eric Schlosser, bestselling author of “Fast Food Nation” and executive producer of the Oscar-nominated “Food, Inc.,” has now trained his investigative powers on the risks of nuclear weapons.

Schlosser will address what he calls America’s growing susceptibility to a catastrophic nuclear disaster at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 24 in Ketchum as part of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts’ 2010-11 Lecture Series. He has also added the food industry and Idaho’s local food movement to his planned topics for the lecture, the center said this week.

“Eric is an excellent reporter and writer and a compelling speaker, and I am sure that everyone who attends will be talking about this lecture for days, if not longer,” the center’s Britt Udesen said in a press release.

Schlosser’s newest book, “Command and Control,” will be published in May. The book blends a minute-by-minute account of an H-bomb accident in the Cold War days with an assessment of the threat we currently face from nuclear weapons, the release said. The book takes the reader into nuclear weapons laboratories, missile silos and the cockpits of B-52 bombers to show how close we have come to disaster.

“Schlosser does not offer a simplistic condemnation of military hawks or irresponsible leadership,” the center’s release said. “Indeed, he finds much to admire in the men and women who risked their lives — and sometimes lost them — to keep America safe in the nuclear age.”

As an investigative journalist, Schlosser has followed the harvest with migrant farmworkers in California, spent time with meatpackers in Texas and Colorado, told the stories of marijuana growers and the victims of violent crime, gone on duty with the New York Police Department bomb squad and visited prisons throughout the U.S. His work has earned praise not only from liberal publications like the Nation, but also from Fortune, the Financial Times and the National Review.

A graduate of Princeton University, Schlosser has been a contributor to the Atlantic Monthly since the mid-1990s. In addition to “Fast Food Nation” (2001), which was on the New York Times bestseller list for nearly two years, he is the author of “Reefer Madness” (2003) and “Chew on This” (2006), co-written with Charles Wilson, which addressed the health effects of fast food and the workings of industrial agriculture.

Schlosser also was an executive producer and co-wrote the feature film “Fast Food Nation” (2006), was an executive producer of “There Will Be Blood” (2008) and was a co-producer of the documentary

“Food, Inc.”

Tickets to Schlosser’s lecture — which will be at the Church of the Big Wood — are $25 for Sun Valley Center members and $35 for others, at www.sunvalleycenter.org or 726-9491, ext. 10.

During hard times, feel-good pop music rules

By Jon Bream
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

MINNEAPOLIS — Look at Billboard’s Hot 100, listen to hit radio or watch the Grammys on Sunday night. Pop rules.

From Katy Perry’s “Firework” to Ke$ha’s “Tik Tok,” pop with a big dance beat and a short, simple refrain is what’s hot right now. Teens love to dance to it. Pep bands enjoy playing it. The cast of “Glee” relishes singing it. Even moms can’t resist it.

“People want a bright voice and a great beat and to feel good,” said Grammy-winning Minneapolis songwriter Dan Wilson, who has recently written for Josh Groban, Adele and John Legend. “People are less in a mood to wallow in negativity. Feel-good dance music is almost like a salve against hard times.”

History shows that. Dance music has dominated during tough times, whether it was swing during the Depression or disco in the late 1970s when gas was rationed and U.S. hostages were held in Iran.

With high unemployment, $3-plus gasoline and our soldiers still fighting in Afghanistan and Iraq, Americans want escape, relief and release. Say goodbye to hip-hop with its harsh sounds, abrasive tone and oversexed lyrics (though we still like a little Eminem and Jay-Z, refashioned with melodic, sung choruses). Say hello to vibrant, catchy dance pop.

“The attitude I see is so much in contrast from 10 years ago,” Wilson said. “People are not wallowing in problems and crises of identity and hatred of parents. Now people are excited, enthusiastic, ‘Gee whiz, this is great.’”

Think of it as the collision of Facebook and the dance floor. People want to click the “Like” button.

Forget about ballads, too.

“When you listen to radio now, it’s all so much about tempo,” Barry Weiss, CEO of RCA/Jive Label Group (home to Ke$ha, Usher and Pink), told Billboard magazine.

The tempo of choice seems to be 125 to 145 beats

Bruno Mars appears at the 2011 MTV Networks Upfront in New York City. Mars could be a poster boy for the new wave of pop. As a singer, songwriter and producer, he’s nominated for seven Grammys and will perform on Sunday’s Grammys show, too.

per minute (that’s DJ talk) or so-called house music. Booming dance beats married to simple lyrics have broad appeal — even in countries where English is not a first language. Perry’s “Teenage Dream” and Lady Gaga’s “Bad Romance” resonate in France as much as in Fargo.

It’s the sound of global pop, pioneered in the 1970s by Sweden’s Abba with the infectious “Mamma Mia,” “SOS” and “Fernando.” That sound has continued abroad for years, elevating the likes of Kylie Minogue and Robyn to international superstar status — except in the States.

Many of today’s young stars grew up in other cultures and understand the global sensibility of a catchy chorus that anyone can sing along to. Witness the worldwide hits “I Like It” by Enrique Iglesias (born in Spain), “Dynamite” by Taio Cruz (of Nigerian/Brazilian heritage) and “Only Girl (in the World)” by Rihanna (from Barbados).

The ultimate international popsters of the moment are an American multi-culti group, the Black Eyed Peas. They have gone global in the past two years with a series of super-simple, super-danceable hits including “Boom Boom Pow,” “I Gotta Feeling” and “This Time (Dirty Bit)” — a hit parade that landed the Peas the halftime show at last Sunday’s Super Bowl.

The Peas proved that it’s about driving beats and simple buzzwords that can appeal to many cultures. Or as songwriter Wilson explains it: It’s the musical equivalent of blockbuster movies that are not about subtle verbal messages but rather about the boom-boom-pow of special effects and crashes.

That’s what Bruno Mars is aiming for: “I want my songs to just kind of smack you,” he told Rolling Stone magazine.

A Hawaiian of Puerto Rican and Filipino descent, Mars could be a poster boy for the new wave of pop. As a singer, songwriter and producer, he’s nominated for seven Grammys, and will perform on Sunday’s show, too. That’s his voice you hear on the chorus of record-of-the-year nominee “Nothin’ on You”:

*Beautiful girls all over the world, I could be chasing
But my time would be wasted.*

They got nothing on you, baby.

Sweet melody? Check. Easy-to-understand lyric? Check. A chorus even your mother could love? Double check. As Rolling Stone put it, “Mars excels at no-brainers.”

Capsule reviews of feature films

The Philadelphia Inquirer

BLACK SWAN 4 stars. Natalie Portman in the performance of her career, as a fiercely disciplined prima ballerina struggling with the dual roles of “Swan Lake,” and with a newly recruited dancer (Mila Kunis) threatening to steal her part. Vincent Cassell, Barbara Hershey, and Winona Ryder are on board for this thrilling, nutty psychodrama, from “The Wrestler’s” Darren Aronofsky. 1 hr. 43 R (sex, nudity, drugs, physical torment, profanity, adult themes)

COUNTRY STRONG 2 1/2 stars. Gwyneth Paltrow stars in this Nashville romantic quadrangle set at the fork between the roads to redemption and ruin. With the Heath Ledgerish Garrett Hedlund, Taylor Swiftly Leighton Meester and Tim McGraw, a complete cipher. 1 hr. 51 PG-13 (sexual candor, alcohol abuse)

THE DILEMMA 1 1/2 stars. Vince Vaughn and Kevin James are best buds, Jennifer Connelly and Winona Ryder the respective girlfriend and wife, in this Ron Howard-directed infidelity comedy distinguished by its resounding unfunniness and emotional dishonesty. 1 hr. 58 PG-13 (profanity, violence, adult themes)

THE FIGHTER 3 1/2 stars. Based on the real-life career, and comeback, of welterweight champ “Irish” Micky Ward and the relationship with his wacko half-brother, erstwhile prizefighter Dicky Eklund, this roiling, colorful film is great in the ring, and great outside the ring, too. Mark Wahlberg and Christian Bale are the pugilist sibs, Melissa Leo their mom, Amy Adams is Micky’s bareknuckle barkeep girlfriend. 1 hr. 5 R (violence, profanity, drugs, sex, adult themes)

THE GREEN HORNET 1 1/2 stars. Seth Rogen co-wrote and co-stars in this superhero spoof that aims or irreverence and settles for irrelevance. Director Michel Gondry fails to put his surrealist stamp on the material. Only Jay Chou, as the Hornet’s sidekick who is really his superior, emerges with any personality. PG-13

THE KING’S SPEECH 4 stars. Colin Firth and Geoffrey Rush star in this rousing Odd Couple comedy, drawn from real life, about King George VI, a stutterer, and his speech therapist. 1 hr. 51 R (profanity, but otherwise family-friendly for those 12 and over)

LITTLE FOCKERS 2 stars. Robert De Niro and Ben Stiller return as the suspicious father-in-law who places unreasonable expectations on his daughter’s spouse. Sporadically funny, with Viagra jokes that don’t so much provoke laughs as cringes. 1 hr. 38 PG-13 (sexual candor)

THE MECHANIC 2 stars. Terse, tough Jason Statham and twitchy, angsty Ben Foster star in this solemn remake of the 1973 Charles Bronson B, about an ace assassin and the protege he reluctantly takes on. Lots of things go kaboom. 1 hr. 40 R (violence, sex, profanity, adult themes)

NO STRINGS ATTACHED 3 stars. Affable comedy with Ashton Kutcher and Natalie Portman as friends with benefits. She’d like to keep the arrangement strictly physical, but his emotions keep getting in the way. 1 hr. 48 R (sexual content, profanity, drugs)

127 HOURS 3 1/2 stars. Danny Boyle’s blunt, mythic and gutwrenching account of Aron Ralston (James Franco), the outdoorsman whose right hand and forearm are pinned to a canyon wall by a falling boulder, and his Sisyphean struggle to survive. Not for the squeamish. 1 hr. 33 R

THE RITE 2 1/2 stars. A young American priest experiences a crisis of faith and then goes to Rome to study under a highly unorthodox Catholic exorcist in this half-classy, half-loony supernatural thriller starring Anthony Hopkins. 1 hr. 53 PG-13 (violence, disturbing images, theologicalisms, adult themes)

THE ROOMMATE 1 1/2 stars. Thriller about a college student who becomes obsessed with her new roommate. Stars Leighton Meester and Minka Kelly lack the acting chops to create the tension that makes a quality thriller. 1 hr. 33 PG-13 (adult themes, violence, mild sexuality, murdered kitten)

SANCTUM 2 1/2 stars. An elimination-round spelunking nightmare, shot with James Cameron’s “Avatar” cameras and set in “the mother of all caves” in Papua New Guinea. Trapped underwater in an unexplored cave system, a band of hearty adventurers face one daunting disaster after another. With a cast of Aussies and Brits — two-dimensional cutouts in a 3-D tableau. 1 hr. 49 R (intense action, graphic images, profanity, violence, adult themes)

SEASON OF THE WITCH 1 1/2 stars. Nicolas Cage is a knight of the Crusades, on the lam with fellow deserter Ron Perlman, when they’re recruited to escort a girl accused of witchcraft to her trial. Swordplay, sorcery and anachronistic dialog ensues. 1 hr. 35 PG-13 (violence, pestilence, adult themes)

TANGLED 3 stars. A fractured fairy tale in the spirit of “Enchanted?” “Tangled” is a boy-friendly version of “Rapunzel,” more of a hair-raising adventure than a yearning romance. 1 hr. 32 PG (mild violence)

4 stars: Excellent; 3 stars: Good; 2 stars: Fair; 1 star: Poor

Cellist Ben Hong (pictured) and pianist Peter Henderson, 7 p.m. at Presbyterian Church of the Big Wood at Warm Springs and Saddle roads, as part of the Sun Valley Artist Series' winter concert series. Santo's shooting touch, defensive progress lifting CSI men

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

If Gerson Santo's jump shot was a novel, it'd be pretty anticlimactic — you know how it's going to end the minute it begins.

"He's almost automatic from 15 to 17 feet," said College of Southern Idaho head coach Steve Gosar. "I feel like there's things I've become accustomed to seeing in my life: the sun coming up, the sun going down and Gerson knocking it down from 15 feet."

ing up, the sun going down and Gerson knocking it down from 15 feet."

Pretty good praise for someone who has only played basketball for five years.

Born in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Santo grew up in Valencia, Brazil, where his sporting exploits were focused on soccer, swimming and karate. But at age 14, he discovered basketball.

That's when the 6-foot-10 CSI freshman began mastering a shooting touch that few big men can match.

"My first coach was good to teach me that," said Santo, whose full name is Gerson do Espirito Santo. "We practiced a lot. When everybody leaves the gym, before practice, days we don't have practice, we were still there."

PARTY TIME IN HAILEY

Twin Falls High School's Alyssa Soloaga (21) fights through the Wood River defense provided by Cheyenne Swanson (44) and Kaitana Martinez (21) during their matchup Thursday night in Hailey.

Wood River girls edge Twin Falls for district title

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

HAILEY — This wasn't a win just for the Wood River girl's basketball team.

It was a win for the student body which so passionately cheered for the Wolverines. A win for the community of Hailey which hasn't had a lot to rally around athletically. And a win for the third-year coach who has turned this program around this program and built a winning culture.

It took nearly an hour for the team to leave the gym after beating Twin Falls 43-42 in the Class 4A District IV tournament championship game — they had too many hugs, photos, handshakes and trophy presentations to take part in.

"This is a win for the entire community," said Kaitana Martinez, who scored 14 points. "We had such great support from our student section and the entire town of Hailey. We wanted to give back. We've been striving for this for so long."

The "this" is a Great Basin Conference title — the first in school history.

"This feels like everything I thought it would feel," said forward Cheyenne Swanson.

Filer girls shock Kimberly again, crash state tournament party

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

FILER — Anything can happen in the district tournament. "Anything" paid a second visit to the Class 3A District IV Tournament on Thursday.

Jessica Tews' runner with 9 seconds left gave Filer the lead it had already blown once, and the Wildcats didn't make a second mistake as they held on for a 53-50 win over Kimberly, stunning the favored Bulldogs for the second straight night and claiming the district's only berth in next week's 3A state tournament.

Tews prefers to go to her right, but the Bulldogs forced her left, where she saw a lane and knifed to the basket, banking in a scoop shot from close range to give Filer a 51-50 lead. It earned her some redemption after missing two free throws and committing a foul on the rebound to allow

Tews

Kimberly to take its only lead of the game.

"My team played awesome, and I just saw an opening and decided to take it. Luckily for me it went in," said Tews, who scored a game-high 19 to go with seven rebounds. "We know that basketball is a game of ups and downs, and fortunately we had the last up."

Filer (9-13) led by 15 as late as 5:45 to go in the game, before Kimberly unleashed a 25-8 run to take a 50-48 lead. Nellie Makings drilled a 3-pointer to tie it, then hit the two foul shots after Tews' foul.

The lead lasted all of 30 seconds, as Whitney Carlton missed two free throws at the Kimberly end and Sierra Koyle hit one of two for Filer. Koyle missed the second one but the ball went out of bounds to Filer, setting up Tews' heroics.

No. 7 CSI men aim for sweep on road

The Golden Eagles' final road trip of the regular season is about one thing: getting wins.

"We're trying to win a conference championship," said College of Southern Idaho men's basketball coach Steve Gosar. "We've got to have every single one that we can get."

Seventh-ranked CSI (22-3, 8-2 Scenic West Athletic Conference) faces four of the top six scorers in the conference this weekend as it visits Snow College (15-10, 4-6 SWAC) at 7:30 p.m. today and No. 20 Salt Lake Community College (20-5, 6-4) at 5 p.m. Saturday. Both games can be heard live on 1450 AM KEZJ.

Snow is led by DeShawn Mitchell (23.3 ppg) and Travis Wilkins (16.6 ppg), while Salt Lake is paced by Alfonzo Hubbard (16.8 ppg) and Patrick McCollum (16.8 ppg). But CSI handled both teams at home in January, beating the two squads by an average of 17 points.

"I thought we played these teams well up at our place," said Gosar, whose team holds a one-game lead over No. 25 Eastern Utah (20-5, 7-3) in the conference race. "I think we get a chance to go down there and hopefully we can build on that momentum that we built up here."

Utah Jazz coach Jerry Sloan announces his resignation during a news conference in Salt Lake City, Utah, Thursday.

Sloan steps down as Jazz head coach

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Hall of Famer Jerry Sloan stepped down Thursday after 23 seasons and 1,127 wins as head coach of the Utah Jazz.

Longtime assistant Phil Johnson, who also was in his 23rd season with the Jazz, also resigned.

Sloan said during a news conference that stepping down was his decision and that the team had tried to talk him out of it. But he said it's time to move on.

Jazz assistant Tyrone Corbin will be the next coach.

The moves come on the heels of an emotional 91-86 loss Wednesday night to the Chicago Bulls, Utah's 10th in the last 14 games.

Sloan, the longest-tenured coach in the four major professional sports, hinted that something was in the works after delaying his postgame press conference Wednesday night for more than 30 minutes because of what he said was a meeting with Jazz general manager Kevin O'Connor.

Sloan said he made his decision to leave early Thursday.

Sloan just recently signed a one-year contract extension to carry him through the 2011-12 season, but he also indicated that he would not make anything official until after the current season.

The team started 15-5 but fell to 31-23 after the loss to Chicago, the only other team Sloan has coached (he was 94-121 in nearly three seasons with the Bulls). The Chicago loss was the third straight at home, where the Jazz are only 17-11 this season.

Sloan was asked after Wednesday's game if there was need for a shake-up.

"I don't think there's any great need for panic," he said. "Kevin is always evaluating what we can do or what someone wants to do with another team and that's part of the business. Every day that's part of his job."

Though Sloan has been with the Jazz since 1983, first as a scout, he knows how tenacious professional sports can be.

Even before Wednesday's game he made that clear.

He has made a habit of conducting his pre-game news conferences next to a large plastic garbage receptacle in the concourse at EnergySolutions Arena rather than from behind a podium.

"You never know when you might be in it," he quipped Wednesday. "It's why I stand here. You take what you get."

Sloan began working for the Jazz as a scout in 1983, became assistant to coach Frank Layden on Nov. 19, 1984, and was named the sixth coach in franchise history on Dec. 9, 1988, when Layden resigned.

NFL, players' union cancel 2nd day of talks in D.C.

WASHINGTON — Negotiations to prevent an NFL lockout took a grim turn Thursday with the cancellation of the second day of a planned two-day bargaining session.

"We wish we were negotiating today," NFL Players Association spokesman George Atallah said. "That's all I can say."

There are just three weeks to go before the collective bargaining agreement expires on March 3.

The NFL confirmed that Commissioner Roger Goodell has canceled an owners' meeting scheduled for next Tuesday in Philadelphia, where labor was expected to be a topic.

"Despite the inaccurate characterizations of (Wednesday's) meeting, out of respect to the collective bargaining process and our negotiating partner, we are going to continue to conduct negotiations with the union in private," league spokesman Greg Aiello told The Associated Press via e-mail, "and not engage in a point-counterpoint on the specifics of either side's proposals or the meeting process. Instead, we will work as hard as possible to reach a fair agreement by March 4. We are fully focused on that goal."

The collapse of the talks came as a surprise. The two sides got together

Wednesday for the second time in five days, the previous negotiations taking place in Dallas on Saturday before the Super Bowl. Neither Atallah nor NFLPA executive director DeMaurice Smith would comment on why Thursday's session was called off.

NO SUPER SEATS FOR RELATIVE OF 1ST PACKERS EXEC

NEW YORK — A granddaughter of the first president of the Green Bay Packers was among the 400 ticketholders forced out of the stands at the Super Bowl because their seats weren't safe.

In a letter sent to the NFL, which she provided to The Associated Press, Peggy Beisel-McIlwaine said Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones should never be allowed to host another Super Bowl. She called her experience at Cowboys Stadium a "total disaster."

Beisel-McIlwaine wrote that it took several hours — and miles of walking — before stadium and league officials finally led her and other displaced fans from their upper deck seats to a field level bar area behind the Pittsburgh Steelers bench — with no view of the field.

The 55-year-old woman from Michigan told the AP she received a call Wednesday from the NFL, and will be going to the league office Friday in New York to meet with a person who is handling her situation.

"I hope we can get this remedied quickly," she wrote.

PANEL VOTES TO REPLACE SNOW-DAMAGED METRODOME ROOF

MINNEAPOLIS — The landlords of the Metrodome voted unanimously Thursday to replace the snow-damaged roof of the venerable stadium, opting for a more time-consuming fix that could disrupt the Minnesota Vikings pre-season schedule.

The Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission approved a recommendation from engineers who said they worried that simply repairing several torn panels of the stadium's Teflon roof wouldn't be enough to prevent another failure.

Commissioners said they hoped the job would be done by Aug. 1 at an estimated cost of $18.3 million, with almost all of it expected to be covered by insurance. The NFL's pre-season schedule hasn't been released, but the typical mid-August start could be affected if the roof work takes longer than the commission hopes.

In a statement, the Vikings said they support the roof replacement but said it "is not a long-term stadium solution" for them. They said they intended to continue pursuing state legislation to pay for and build a new stadium.

NEWTON SHOWS MEDIA HIS WORKOUT ROUTINE

SAN DIEGO — Enjoying the San Diego sunshine and saying that he's "shooting for greatness," Heisman Trophy winner Cam Newton gave the media a glimpse of the workouts he's going through daily as he prepares for the NFL combine and draft.

Wearing gray shorts, a black long-sleeve T-shirt and orange cleats, Newton did agility drills and then threw passes to a handful of receivers for nearly 45 minutes at a suburban high school on Thursday.

Newton has been in San Diego since late January, working six days a week with quarterbacks coach George Whitfield Jr. and receiving advice from Hall of Fame quarterback Warren Moon.

While his passes looked crisp, there's a lot for Newton to work on. Chief among them is taking snaps from under center. He often took snaps in the shotgun formation as he ran the spread offense at Auburn, which he led to the BCS national title.

CSI women hope to speed things up

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Snow College is up first and that's no gimme.

"They're a very dangerous team because they shoot the ball so well," said College of Southern Idaho women's basketball coach Randy Rogers.

But let's be honest. For 23rd-ranked CSI, this week-end's road trip is all about Saturday's 3 p.m. visit to rival Salt Lake Community College.

The No. 15 Bruins (18-4, 8-2 Scenic West Athletic Conference) are 2-0 against the Golden Eagles (19-6, 6-4) this season, including a 60-58 win in Twin Falls Jan. 22.

Rogers has a plan in place that he hopes will give CSI the edge on Saturday.

"We're just going to try to speed up the game a little bit if we can," he said.

While CSI prefers a score in the high 70s, SLCC like to keep things in the 50s and 60s.

If the Eagles can control the tempo, they may just control the game. The plan is to play fast and rotate players to stay fresh, with all 13 members of the CSI roster expected to see action.

"We're just trying to see how they react to a few different things," said Rogers, who added that if the plan backfires, "we could get beat by 40."

While CSI is 0-4 this season against conference co-leaders Salt Lake and No. 10 North Idaho College (21-2, 8-2), Rogers is still upbeat about his team's prospects for winning the Region 18 Tournament, which will be held March 3-5 in Twin Falls.

"I do like our chances at home," he said.

But first, the Eagles face their final road trip of the regular season. It begins with today's 5:30 p.m. game in Ephraim, Utah, against the Badgers. Snow played without injured starters Alle Finch and Dani Lockhart in a 79-52 loss at CSI in January, but Finch is back to run the point for the Badgers. She averages 16.7 points per game, while freshman Erica Martinez scored 17.0 a game.

CSI counters with a balanced lineup that has seven players scoring between 6.6 and 10.8 points. That balance is a two-edged sword for the Eagles. On one hand, Rogers said it makes his team tougher to scout with different players stepping up each game.

The flipside? "I'm not sure who our go-to person would be," said Rogers.

Maybe he'll find out Saturday afternoon in Salt Lake City.

Snow handed CSI one of its two league losses in Ephraim, Utah, on Dec. 11, with a 105-86 romp. It's a result CSI is determined to reverse tonight.

"We've just got to come to play," said sophomore guard Pierre Jackson. "Last time we didn't come to play, we all thought we were just going to go there and win. So we just need to go in there with the right mindset.

"And Salt Lake, that's always a tough environment there. We've just got to stick together and play hard and we should get the win."

CSI concludes the regular season with three straight home games before hosting the Region 18 Tournament March 3-5.

Santo

Santo worked tirelessly to get his form perfect, everything from his knees to his hands combining for the ideal shot.

CSI is the beneficiary as the Brazilian power forward is scoring 9.1 points per game while shooting 53 percent from the field.

"If you ask him, he likes Kevin Garnett and they have similar games," said sophomore guard Pierre Jackson. "He doesn't have the emotion like Kevin Garnett, but the jump shot resembles Garnett."

Santo especially brings up shades of the Boston Celtics star when he posts up and hits a fade-away jumper.

"That little shimmy shake he does, that's KG all the way," said Jackson.

And when he takes a charge, Santo emits Garnett-like emotion, letting out a yell while pumping his fists. It's a sight seen often as Santo leads the No. 7 Golden Eagles in charges taken.

"He's probably excited about getting a turnover on the other team, but probably really excited about getting a nice new cushy pair of socks for practice the next week," said Gosar, who awards players with a new pair of socks for every charge taken.

Keeping teammates away from his sock stockpile is another challenge, said Santo, who interviewed with the Times-News with translation help from CSI volleyball player Barbara Alcantara, a fellow Brazilian, as he continues to learn English.

The language is just one thing Santo's had to learn in Twin Falls. He told Gosar he'd never taken a charge before coming to CSI. It's just one aspect of his much-improved defensive play.

"Early on in the year, that wasn't in his bag of tricks," said Gosar. "Now he's made such an improvement defensively that he sees the play coming — he's a pass ahead of the play."

While defense is a work in progress, there's no doubting Santo's shooting touch, one Gosar called the best of any big man he's coached.

"I just feel like he has so much confidence that he can shoot that shot with his eyes closed," said Gosar. "When I see him square up, the last thing I want him to do is drive it and pass it. I want him to shoot it."

league — 13 alone by the Los Angeles Clippers, and five current NBA teams (Charlotte, Memphis, Toronto, Orlando and Minnesota) did not even exist when Sloan took the helm in Utah.

He ranks third all-time in NBA wins (1,221) behind Don Nelson (1,335) and Lenny Wilkens (1,332).

McIlroy's leads, Woods six back

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Rory McIlroy upstaged the world's top three golfers with a 7-under 65 Thursday to take the first-round lead at the Dubai Desert Classic, four shots better than No. 1 Lee Westwood and Martin Kaymer and six ahead of an inconsistent Tiger Woods.

McIlroy, whose only European Tour win came in Dubai two years ago, had eight birdies to go with one bogey at the Emirates Golf Club. The seventh-ranked McIlroy took the early lead and held it. Sergio Garcia (67) and Thomas Aiken (67) trailed by two shots in windy conditions.

"I really had a lot of iron shots and got away with a couple of drives that I was quite fortunate to make birdies from," the 21-year-old McIlroy said. "I had a putt for a 64 on the last that didn't quite go in. But I'll take 65 in these conditions any day."

Woods shot a 71 and had problems early in the day, twice going to 2 over. But he eagled the 18th hole after hitting a 3-wood about 250 yards to the green.

Tiger Woods reacts on the No. 18 hole during the first round of the Dubai Desert Classic golf tournament at the Emirates Golf Club in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, Thursday.

"I struggled today with ball flight," he said. "My trajectory wasn't what I wanted on a lot of shots, and consequently, I could never get a ball pin high especially when the wind is blowing this hard."

Much of the buzz coming into the opening round centered on the grouping of the top three golfers. Westwood made several putts en route to four birdies. But he faltered toward the end, three-putting on 17 to miss out on another birdie and scoring a lone bogey on the 18th when his approach shot fell short of the green and nearly rolled into the water.

"I played solidly. I didn't make too many mistakes," Westwood said. "It was disappointing to shoot 1 over for the last two holes. One under would have been nice. All in all, 69 was a pretty good score."

MARINO, POINTS ATOP THE LEADERBOARD AT PEBBLE

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Steve Marino and D.A. Points shared the lead Thursday in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am despite having different scores in an entirely different atmosphere.

Marino birdied his last two holes for a 7-under 65 at Spyglass Hill in a relatively quiet round except for the woman behind the ninth green who shrieked when his wedge stopped inside a foot from the hole.

Points played at Monterey Peninsula before the largest crowds, mainly because that's where the celebrities played the opening round. Points, who had Bill Murray as his amateur partner, shot a 7-under 63.

One shot behind was Alex Cejka, who began his round by holing out his second shot on the par-5 10th at Monterey Peninsula. It was the first time a player started a PGA Tour round with an albatross since at least 1982.

CSI baseball clubs Phoenix College

Times-News

It's only seven games into the season, but the signs are already promising.

The College of Southern Idaho baseball team got a complete performance Thursday, beating Phoenix College 8-2 in the third-to-last game of the Golden Eagles' stay in Arizona.

CSI ace southpaw Michael Renner struck out eight and walked two, scattering five hits and two runs in six innings of work. He was staked to a 2-0 lead before he even threw a pitch and left with a 6-2 advantage. Chris Kerns, Cody White and Travis Huber each tossed an inning of relief in a straightforward effort from the bullpen.

"That's what we were hoping to have," CSI coach Boomer Walker said of the pitching effort. "It doesn't happen the way you plan it very often, but we got it to work today."

The Golden Eagles (4-3) also banged out 18 hits, led by a 5-for-5 effort from No. 7 hitter Chase Harris, who drove in three runs.

CSI got nine hits from the bottom third of its order — Blake Lively had two hits and Christian Snuffer added two more and drove in a couple of runs.

"The hitting has been pretty consistent," Walker said. "We've seen some good pitching and some of those guys have handled it a little bit, but we haven't been dominated. Even (in Wednesday's loss to Paradise Valley) we didn't have a lot of timely hits but we had a lot of hits."

CSI and Phoenix College will play a doubleheader on Saturday to round out the nine-game road trip.

CSI softball splits against Southern Nevada

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho softball team dealt well with its first taste of Scenic West Athletic Conference adversity.

Fifteenth-ranked CSI dropped the opening game of a SWAC doubleheader with Southern Nevada on Thursday, falling 5-3 in St. George, Utah. But the Golden Eagles bounced back to hammer the Coyotes 13-3 in five innings to salvage a split.

"We came out a little bit flat and we thought they'd lay down and die (after Wednesday's sweep), and we were never able to make a run after we got behind," said CSI coach Nick Baumert. "I don't know if losses are good, but we bounced back."

Southern Nevada held a 5-1 lead in the opener when Mikkel Griffin hit a two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the seventh to make things interesting. But Marina Groenewegen lined out immediately after to end the game.

Groenewegen more than made up for it in the nightcap, though, as she homered twice and drove in seven in a 4-for-4 effort at the plate.

Her first home run was a grand slam to key an eight-run third inning that put CSI (9-8, 3-1 SWAC) firmly in control of the game. She followed that with a two-run shot in the fourth to push the lead to 10.

"The pitchers worked around (Griffin) quite a bit, so it's important for us to have Marina hitting like that when they're pitching around Griff," Baumert said.

CSI plays Colorado Northwestern today in St. George, in the first of two doubleheaders in as many days between the squads.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 13, and one of my best friends attempted suicide. "Greg" always seemed so happy that this has come as a shock to all of us. We're thankful he is alive, but we don't know how to behave around him.

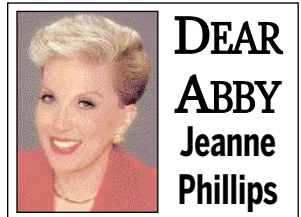

When Greg returns to school, what should we talk about and how can we (his friends) support him?

— GIVEN A SECOND CHANCE

DEAR GIVEN: Greg is lucky to have such caring friends as you. When you see him, tell him you're glad to see him and were concerned about him. Do NOT pump him for details. If he wants to talk about what happened, let him do it in his own time.

As to what to talk about with him, talk about the things you always have and include him in all the activities you have in the past. Knowing his friends care about him is very important.

If you have further concerns, discuss them with a guidance counselor at school or contact the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline. Its phone number is (800) 273-8255 and its website is www.suicideline.org.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Before I married my wife, I told her I didn't want a housewife and she agreed she would never be out of work. Two months after tying the knot, she said she got fired from her job, but I think she quit.

She's asking me for money to do things I thought were dumb when we were dating. We dated for three years before getting married and she had the same job the whole time. She has now been out of work for a year.

I feel like I have been tricked. I have never seen her look in the newspaper or search online for work. I think she was a better girlfriend than she is a wife. How do I fix this situation?

— UNHAPPILY MARRIED

DEAR UNHAPPILY MARRIED: Remind your wife of the agreement you had before you were married — that you would be a working couple. Because you feel you are being taken advantage of, offer your wife the option of marriage counseling. However, if that doesn't heal the breach in your relationship, talk to a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: I have a question regarding grocery store self-scan checkouts. Many grocery stores and supermarkets usually have four machines in one lane, two on each side. If they are all being used, are customers supposed to form one line — and the customer in front goes whenever a machine opens up? Or does each machine have its own individual line?

I, along with most other people, wait in the middle in one lane. But many times someone will walk right past and stand behind someone checking out!

I never see signs posted and no employees ever say anything. Hopefully, you could clear this up for us.

— FRUSTRATED SHOPPER IN TENN.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: This is a question that should be addressed to the manager of the grocery store where you are shopping. If most of the customers are forming a single line and someone cuts in, the folks in line usually have no hesitation telling the offender, "The line starts here!" But because there is some confusion, and the self-checkout technology is still new, it makes sense that the management of the store would post a sign telling customers what is preferred.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Dangers by being despised grow great."

— Edmund Burke

Today's deal exemplifies one of my favorite themes, which crops up here in two variations. No more clues — plan the play in four spades as South when West leads the heart two to East's king.

The extra trick you could make by winning the ace and establishing the heart 10 is an illusion, because when West takes his heart queen, he will play a diamond through dummy's king and put you back on what is at best a diamond guess. As the cards lie today, you cannot guess right.

However, you can in fact guarantee your game if you can keep West off lead. Duck the heart lead and win the continuation. That is necessary, but not sufficient. If you play the trump suit in mundane fashion (low to the jack, then the ace), West will regain the lead prematurely by ruffing the third club and can then deal you a mortal blow by shifting to diamonds to establish a fourth winner for his side.

The secret of the deal lies in making an avoidance play in both hearts and spades. Having ducked the first heart and won the second, you must run the spade queen from hand. West will cover, of course, and if either the nine or 10 falls from East, you cross back to hand with a heart ruff and play a spade to dummy's eight, insuring you can keep West off lead for the duration of the hand.

Today this line yields an over-trick — a nice reward for your care and attention.

For details of Bobby Wolff's autobiography, "The Lone Wolff," contact kay19072 @aol.com. If you would like to contact Bobby Wolff, e-mail him at bobbywolff@mind-spring.com.

ANSWER: The double of three diamonds suggests extras and no clear bid. (North rates to be strong and balanced without a good diamond stop, or to have long clubs.) Since you have a few extras and a diamond guard, it looks logical to bid three no-trump and take it from there. Partner can bid again if he has an unusual hand-type.
