Minidoka internment camp site to grow by 138 acres

Parks service to add visitors site, restore camp's fire station

By Mitchell Schmidt
Associated Press writer

BOISE — More than 60 years after it was used to detain thousands of Japanese-Americans during World War II, the Minidoka internment camp is being expanded as part of federal preservation efforts.

The National Park Service has purchased 138 acres to add to the existing 300-acre historic site, the federal agency, The Conservation Fund and Idaho's congressional delegation announced Thursday. The camp originally spanned 33,000 acres.

Rick Wagner, realty officer of the parks service, said the acquired land is a fraction of the prison, which once held more than 9,000 people of Japanese descent behind barbed wire for more than three years. The land holds extensive historic value, he added.

"We've got a small piece of a very big picture," he said.

More than 120,000 Japanese-Americans were relocated and sent to detention camps like Minidoka by an executive order signed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1942. Saturday marked the 69th anniversary of the order.

The Conservation Fund purchased the 138 acres in 2008 from a private owner and held it until recent federal legislation allowed the parks service to buy it late last year for $380,000. The federal agency designated the prison as a national monument in 2001.

The new addition includes the site of the camp's original fire station and other outlying buildings. Other former buildings that once stood on the land include a water tower, a military police headquarters and barracks.

Ann Barrett, media relations manager for The Conservation Fund, said a historic barracks building and a camp mess hall have been donated by Jerome County and will eventually be relocated to the site.

The National Parks Service planned to add a visitor site for education purposes, and to restore the fire station and other buildings. A landscape architect was hired to restore some of the sites' historic irrigation systems and waterways.

Wagner said the Conservation Funds involvement made it all possible.

"(The land) would have been sold," he said. "There's absolutely no doubt it would have gone to a private buyer and changed greatly."

John Herrmann acquired the parcel of land when the camp closed. The family notified the service when they planned to sell the property, Wagner said.

"Once we found out they were interested in selling, we put them in touch with the Conservation Fund," he said.

Bill would beef up Right-to-Farm Act

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Rep. Lawrence Denney will introduce a bill this week intended to strengthen Idaho's Right-to-Farm Act and include protections for confined animal feeding operations in all their incarnations.

House Bill 166 would extend the activities that are covered under the definition of "agricultural" and more clearly state that any ordinances that outlaw the defined agricultural activities are void. If any group tried to eliminate an agricultural facility under a "nuisance" claim and it was found the facility was recognized and permitted, the group would be required to pay all legal fees.

As farmland has been developed over the past 30 to 40 years, almost all 50 states have passed right-to-farm laws of varying degrees. The laws were intended to protect family farms from nuisance suits as long as the farms were established before subdivisions were put in place and as long as the farm's activities did not "jeopardize public health and safety."

Spokesman Roger Batt said he didn't want to comment much on the background of the bill until it is introduced, either Tuesday or Thursday. He said the sponsoring group is still contacting county representatives to make sure the bill modifications don't conflict with county regulations.

"The food producers are all on board," Batt said.

Jerome County Commissioner Kathy Romer said she had not been contacted as of midweek so she didn't know why Denney felt the bill needed strengthening. But it definitely has implications for her county.

Romer said commissioners have to maintain a balancing act between all county residents. Since Jerome is an agricultural county, residents have to accept certain conditions that come along with agricultural production but producers also should be good neighbors.

"At its face, this bill appears to be overly broad," Romer said, clarifying it was her opinion. "It may be whittled down by the end of the legislative process."

Idahoans from eight to 81 years old tested their mettle and their minds this weekend at the Idaho Closed State Chess Championship, which wraps up Monday with the final round beginning at 3 p.m.

Participants travelled to the Shilo Inn Suites in Twin Falls from throughout Idaho for the championship, anxious to prove their skills and enjoy the company of other chess fans.

The Idaho Chess Association encouraged players of all experience levels to participate in the championship. This year, 29 people played six rounds, with opponents being matched based on number of wins, or points. One point is awarded for a win, half a point for a draw, and none for a loss. Each round is allotted a six hour time limit. Winners receive plaques or trophies at the close of the event.

"We play mostly for the glory," 16-time Idaho State Champion Larry Parsons of Boise said, smiling. "But really chess is just a great game. It's enjoyable, it's challenging, and costs almost nothing."

Parsons said his average round lasts about four hours. He said he looks for his favorite early-game strategy, the English Opening, as well as the Queens Gambit or Kings Indian Defense. Parsons is a grand master, denoting his expertise and winning record at chess events.

"There have been more books written about chess than all other games," Parsons said. "More countries hold National Chess Championships than any other sport or hobby. It might even be more popular than soccer in a way. It's a great game for kids."

"We've actually found that oftentimes, the younger, the better," Championship Co-Director Barry Eacker added. "Young kids just have more aptitude and ability to learn."

Kitt Connor, a first timer at the Idaho Closed State Chess Championships, started playing in chess events while in high school. Adam Porth, another player at the championship, coached Connor's high school chess club at Wood River High School. He convinced Connor to venture from the College of Idaho for the weekend to join the fun.

"I've actually played one round where I would take my turn, then work on some calculus, play another turn, then go back to calculus," Connor said.

Idaho embarks on 'purest form of political blood sport'

By John Miller
Associated Press

BOISE — Explosive population growth since 2000 in the sprawling farmland-turned-suburbia west of Idaho's capital city means Republican House Majority Leader Mike Moyle now represents more than 80,000 people — twice as many as he should, according to rules used to draw the political boundaries a decade ago.

By contrast, in north central Idaho's District 8, lawmakers there speak for just 36,000 people after Clearwater, Idaho and Lewis counties lost residents.

"... somebody always thinks they've been done wrong in redistricting. I tell my students, it's like painting the kitchen, and you're going to wind up in the corner. In Idaho, you always wind up in a corner."

— Gary Moncrief, political science professor at Boise State University

With the latest U.S. Census figures arriving in March, Idaho's two biggest political parties are gearing up for the bruising process of rebalancing Idaho's legislative districts so one person actually will mean one vote, regardless of whether they live in Grangeville or Star.

Redistricting, as it's called, isn't pretty, and is often plagued by lawsuits and accusations of manipulation.

New power plants would produce energy from trash

BOISE (AP) — A businessman wants to build two trash-powered energy plants in the state using a process called thermal gasification that he says is cleaner and more efficient than incinerating trash to produce energy.

“People say they don’t want an incinerator in their back yard. That’s good, because that’s not what we make,” Lloyd Mahaffey, of Eagle, told the Idaho Statesman. “This technology is gasification, not incineration.”

Mahaffey, the CEO of Dynamis Energy, said he wants to build one plant in Ada County in southwest Idaho and another in Clark County in eastern Idaho.

The two plants could power 10,000 homes by converting 250 tons of trash a day. He said the trash is heated in a chamber without oxygen, breaking it down into gas that can then be burned to produce energy.

About 95 percent of the trash is destroyed in the process, he said.

“Burying our waste is the second-dumbest thing humans do,” said Mahaffey, noting No. 1 is always up for debate. “Every ton of waste stream we process is one ton the county doesn’t have to bury.”

He said there’s more interest in such plants because landfills are filling up and it’s expensive to build new ones, technology has advanced to make trash-to-energy plants more viable, and there are government incentives for renewable energy.

Dynamis Vice President Pete Johnson said the technology the company plans to use leapfrogs earlier attempts at turning trash into power. He said even advanced incinerators produce emissions that require an expensive process to make the emissions safe.

According to a report from the Energy Recovery Council in Washington, D.C., 86 waste-to-energy plants operated in 24 states with the capacity to process more than 97,000 tons of municipal waste per day in 2010.

Mahaffey said most of those use older technology that requires so much electricity there’s little net gain in electricity produced, while the new technology overcomes that problem.

The company also said the process uses items such as tires, medical waste and plastics, which are materials that are difficult to destroy or store. The company has also designed a small stream gasification system using trash that could be used to produce energy and get rid of waste following a natural disaster.

Utah police: Laser tracks travel space between cars

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Police have begun using laser light technology to detect the distance between traveling vehicles, allowing them to enforce a state law that prohibits drivers from following too closely.

Assistant Police Chief Jeff Curtis said state law requires that drivers maintain at least two seconds of travel distance between vehicles when traveling at 35 mph or faster.

“The general reaction time for most people is about 1.5 seconds,” Curtis told the Herald Journal of Logan. “If the front vehicle has to take some type of action to avoid a collision, the vehicle behind doesn’t have time to perceive and react to the danger safely.”

Police said following too closely and inattentive driving are the leading causes of crashes on Logan’s Main Street.

The devices, called Tru-Cams, work like standard radar guns, but use laser light technology instead of radio waves. It calculates the space between two in-line traveling vehicles and records video footage that can be downloaded for use in court cases.

The TruCam is considered extremely accurate.

Montana biologists outfit cow elk, wolves with GPS collars for study

HAMILTON, Mont. (AP) — Dozens of cow elk and two wolves have been equipped with GPS collars as part of a study that could provide important information on the big-game animal and its interaction with predators.

Biologists with Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks and the University of Montana attached the collars to 44 elk captured with net guns and tranquilizer darts fired from a helicopter this month.

“It’s rare to get the opportunity in a single watershed to do a comprehensive study like this,” Fish, Wildlife and Parks biologist Craig Jourdonnais told the Ravalli Republic. “People are excited about how comprehensive it is. Nationwide, there are a lot of sportsmen groups interested in big game. They know they need solid data to effectively manage big-game populations. They’ve been willing to support this project.”

He said the study, expected to last through 2013, should show how elk are using the landscape and the pressures they face in the East and West Forks of the Bitterroot River.

Biologists already discovered that the body condition of elk captured in the upper West Fork area was not as good as those captured on the other side of the valley.

“We didn’t see a lot of elk in great condition,” Jourdonnais said. “It is a tougher winter range.”

State biologists planned to conduct three or four flights a month to check for mortality as well. In the spring, biologists hope to capture and radio-collar elk calves and track them to determine causes of mortality.

Biologists said the study could help explain why the elk the population in the West Fork has dropped from about 1,900 in 2005 to about 750 last year.

Some say wolves are to blame, and the study could determine whether that’s accurate.

“We are trying to build a baseline of information about wildlife in the Bitterroot,” said Jourdonnais.

Biologists also hope to get funding to try to determine the black bear and mountain lion population in the region.

The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation recently contributed $30,800 to help pay for a portion of the elk calf study, which is expected to cost $50,000.

“We want to know what’s going on there,” said Blake Henning, the foundation’s vice president of lands and conservation. “Credible science is something that we’re very much interested in, especially the interaction between large predators and elk.”

The study could eventually help biologists and federal officials better understand the interaction of big game and predators, information that could be used to make wildlife management decisions.

“Everyone gripes about wolves and the impact they are having on elk here in the valley,” said Tony Jones, president of the Ravalli County Fish and Game Association. “Opinion is not enough. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service isn’t going to just take the word of anyone living in the Bitterroot.”

Districts

“I could end up with another county,” said Moyle, the House’s No. 2 leader, of the potential consequences of redistricting for the 2012 election.

Idaho has 35 legislative districts, stretching from Canada to the Wyoming and Utah borders. Each district has two representatives and a senator.

Over the last decade, the state has grown to nearly 1.6 million people from 1.3 million, with the most dramatic increases in the suburbs of Boise, Nampa and Coeur d’Alene, as well as Idaho Falls and Rexburg. Each new district will jump to around 45,500 people, from 37,000 in 2002.

As a result, generally conservative suburban areas like Moyle’s district, Meridian and Canyon County, stand to gain representatives, while the power of Idaho’s agricultural hinterlands at the Capitol will continue to ebb.

“We’ll need to have 4,000 or 5,000 additional people in my district,” conceded House Assistant Minority Leader Scott Bedke, a rancher whose district covers four rural counties north of the Utah line. “In my part of the state, you have to go a long way to gather up 5,000 people.”

By June 1, House and Senate Republican and Democratic leaders, as well as the parties’ respective chairmen, will choose three Democrats and three Republicans for volunteer posts on the redistricting commission.

Over the following 90 days, the commission people will hold public hearings across Idaho, before formulating a redistricting plan.

Here are the basic rules: The largest and smallest districts’ populations can’t vary by more than 10 percent; where possible, commissioners shouldn’t split up counties; and they should combine “communities of interest” to avoid pairing groups with little in common — rural Elmore County and Sun Valley, for example.

In the last redistricting, multiple lawsuits ended up in the Idaho Supreme Court, delaying the final plan until March 2002 — just before that year’s election filing deadline.

Idaho’s strange shape, vast distances and population centers separated by miles of sagebrush or mountains don’t help.

“The reality is, somebody always thinks they’ve been done wrong in redistricting,” said Gary Moncrief, a political science professor at Boise State University. “I tell my students, it’s like painting the kitchen, and you’re going to wind up in the corner. In Idaho, you always wind up in a corner.”

The provincial politics involved in the process are often accompanied by animosity.

“The reapportionment process is the purest form of political blood sport,” said Tom Stuart, a Democratic commissioner from Boise in 2001.

The 2002 plan left southeastern Idaho GOP lawmakers furious, after incumbents wound up facing each other in a new “super district” that included Bear Lake, Bonneville, Caribou, Franklin and Teton counties. Some didn’t run again. Rep. Tom Loertscher lost his 2002 GOP primary to Rep. Larry Bradford, another sitting lawmaker.

Loertscher, who rejoined the Legislature in 2004, remains convinced that a backroom deal gave northern Idaho more political clout, leaving him fighting for his political life in an unwieldy district where travel requires detouring through Wyoming.

Dean Haagenson, a Republican redistricting commissioner from Coeur d’Alene in 2001, recalls how some GOP officials called for his resignation. They thought he was working with Democratic commissioners in order to receive their help for his region, though Haagenson said nothing of the kind happened.

“I told those threatening me, ‘I’m a Republican, but my first responsibility is to the citizens,’” Haagenson said. “‘And by the way, I don’t respond very well to threats.’”

Today, Haagenson said he regrets the plan’s effect on southeastern Idaho, however unintentional. And he and Loertscher both would prefer that Idaho return to the system it had before 1994 when redistricting was handled by the Legislature. Voters passed a constitutional amendment to take it out of the Legislature’s hands.

“When it was done by the Legislature, it was a full representation of the state,” Loertscher said. “We know the way our districts fit together.”

But Secretary of State Ben Ysursa remembers the old process was never easy, either, with some lawmakers mainly busy protecting incumbencies.

“The commission certainly has its flaws, but to me, it’s better than the Legislature doing it,” Ysursa said.

This time, the 2011 commission will benefit from the 2001 and 2002 Supreme Court rulings.

Also, a 2009 law seeks to avoid cumbersome districts like Loertscher’s by requiring they be at least connected by paved highways. Idaho also has new software, called Maptitude, so any interested residents can draw districts on their home computer, to help gird themselves for the summer’s public hearings.

The politics, however, will remain, because the final plan requires just four of the six commissioners’ support.

The three Democrats could peel off a Republican. GOP commissioners may do likewise.

“I fully expect they’ll get the plan done within 90 days,” House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston. “When they do, we’ll go to court two or three times — just like we did the last time.”

Fisherman missing after vehicle falls through ice on Montana lake

TOWNSEND, Mont. (AP) — Officials searched Sunday for the body of a man whose vehicle went through the ice on Canyon Ferry Lake, the first of two that ended up in the water at the western Montana fishing spot within hours of each other.

Gregory Elliott, 51, of Townsend, was one of three people inside the vehicle when it broke through the ice

Saturday afternoon. The vehicle went down in about 32 feet of water, about a mile offshore.

Another man and a 12-year-old boy were pulled out but Elliott couldn't be saved, Broadwater County Undersheriff Wynn Meehan said.

"He came up twice and went straight back down, and we haven't seen him since," said Meehan.

A truck also went through the ice three hours later as the driver was on the phone with a deputy attempting to find a safe route off the frozen lake. The men in the truck survived, but a dog trapped inside died.

Meehan said the ice on that portion of the lake has been closed to motor vehicles.

He said about 200 to 300 people were on the ice either fishing or recreating that day, but pressure ridges bracketed the area. Many people decided to leave after the first vehicle went through.

Meehan said Sunday would be the last day of searching for Elliott's due to limitations on how far divers could venture from a hole cut in the ice where the truck went through. He said finding bodies in the 34-mile-long lake can be difficult.

Schools invite public to transition center

The Twin Falls School District's Transition Center will have an open house Friday from 3 to 4:30 p.m. at the Snake River Youth Center, 2469 Wright Avenue, Twin Falls.

The center presents an opportunity for students to maintain or return to their academic progress if they have been expelled, are not enrolled or are transitioning between other educational programs. To qualify, students must be of secondary school age and meet state "at-risk" criteria.

More information: 212-6925.

City to hold open house on plaza plan

The city of Twin Falls will host an open house to discuss redevelopment options for the Main Avenue Fountain Plaza on Wednesday.

The meeting will be in the Bistro Room of the Historic Ballroom, 205 Shoshone St. N., Twin Falls, from 4 to 7 p.m. The open house will be to gather comments on the proposed redevelopment. The comments will be presented to the Twin Falls City Council in March.

City staff, the Land Group and members of the Twin Falls Community Foundation will be available during the event to answer questions and concerns and to gather suggestions. All five development proposals will be on display.

Public meeting on supplemental levy

The Twin Falls School District will host a public meeting on the upcoming two-year, $7.5 million supplemental levy election, which the district's budget advisory committee said is necessary to maintain services and operations.

The meeting will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the O'Leary Middle School Auditorium, 2350 Elizabeth Blvd., Twin Falls. School district officials and members from the district's Board of Trustee's community Budget Advisory Committee will present information on the levy.

The levy election will be March 8. If passed, the levy would cost an estimated $132.48 per year for every $100,000 of a property's assessed value.

Gary Taninbaum

“In March of 2008, I decided to have my heart tested when HealthFair was conducting tests near my home. The procedure was fun and painless, but the technician told me I had a problem. My Aorta was 5.7 cm, not in the danger zone, but way above normal. I went to a cardiologist to confirm these results and yes indeed I needed surgery. Three months later and I am already back at work. While I am grateful to the surgical team, I owe a big thank you to HealthFair. My father actually suggested I go for the test, and I am glad I did. I felt fine and there were no symptoms, but yet one day in the near future I would have died.

Funny thing is, I just had an annual checkup and was told I was fine. I suggest everyone reading this to get checked out with HealthFair. This test saved my LIFE!

This February my wife set appointments for the two of us with your bus. I was found to have an enlarged aortic root and your staff told me to see a doctor right away. My doctor ordered more tests and found I had a very enlarged aneurysm on my ascending aorta. Surgery followed the next month and I am happy to say that the recovery is going well and we would like to let the public know that the services that are offered through “HealthFair” have proved to be invaluable to our lives. We have told many people about you. Thanks for being there and having a price that is affordable to the average person.

ULTRASOUND TESTS OF THE HEART & ARTERIES

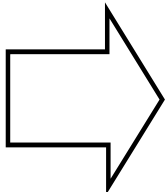

Heart Disease, Stroke, & Aneurysm Prevention Package

Echocardiogram
Ultrasound Test

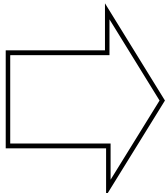

♥ Echocardiogram is a video ultrasound of the heart. It may detect enlargement of the heart, valve abnormalities, blood clots and tumors.

Electrocardiogram
(EKG) Test

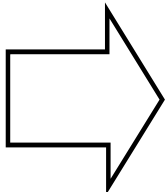

♥ EKG may detect ischemia, silent heart attack and atrial fibrillation. EKG provides a picture of the electrical activity of the heart.

Hardening of the Arteries
(ASI) Test

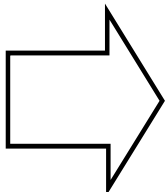

♥ Hardened arteries cause the heart to work harder, which leads to vascular disease. ASI test shows the degree of hardening of the arteries.

Stroke/Carotid Artery
Ultrasound Test

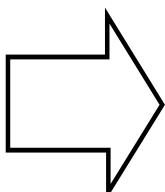

♥ Many strokes are associated with blockages in the carotid arteries that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Abdominal Aortic
Aneurysm Test
(4-hour fast required)

♥ Abdominal aortic aneurysms form as a result of a weakness in the lining of the artery wall that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Peripheral Arterial
Disease (P.A.D) Test

♥ Many adults have leg cramps due to poor circulation. ABI screening measures extremities for peripheral arterial disease.

ALL 6 TESTS

♥ These cardiac and vascular tests are painless and non-invasive. Their combined cost is more than $2,300 at most hospitals.

Kobe wins 4th MVP in West's All-Star 148-143 win

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Kobe Bryant always shines brightest among the stars, especially in his hometown.

Bryant brought Showtime back to the All-Star game, scoring 37 points and tying a record with his fourth MVP award, leading the Western Conference to a 148-143 victory over the East on Sunday night.

Returning to the game he dominates after a one-year absence, Bryant added 14 rebounds in a spectacular performance in front of the usual celebrity-filled crowd that turns out to see his Lakers at Staples Center.

"It feels great, being at home here and playing in front of the home crowd," Bryant said after receiving the MVP trophy. "This will be my last All-Star game in front of these home fans, so it feels good to do it."

Kevin Durant chipped in 34 points, scoring five straight after the East cut a 17-point deficit after three quarters to two points with 2:34 to play. The NBA scoring leader added the clinching free throws after the East got back within three in the final seconds.

LeBron James powered the East rally, finishing with 29 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists to join Michael Jordan as the only players with a triple-double in the All-Star game. Amare Stoudemire also scored 29, but Miami's Dwyane Wade, the MVP of the East's win last year, had to leave with an ankle injury after scoring 14.

Plenty of Hollywood giants were sitting court-side, but Bryant's popularity here can rival most of them. This week, he became the first athlete to have his handprints and footprints put in concrete outside Hollywood's famed Grauman's Chinese Theater.

He told fans to "enjoy the show" before the tip, and as always he delivered a good one.

Always more about focus than fun, Bryant had 21 points by the time Rihanna came out for her halftime performance, putting him halfway to Wilt Chamberlain's record from 1962, the year of his 100-point game. And when the East made it close in the third quarter, Bryant dunked over a chasing James who was going for the block, then nailed a 3-pointer to make it 90-79.

Carmelo Anthony scored eight points in his possible goodbye to the West team. The weekend was dominated by talk of a potential trade to New York or New Jersey, and the Denver Nuggets forward appeared alternately entertained and annoyed by NASCAR Sprint Cup Series driver Trevor Bayne (21) celebrates winning the Daytona 500 at Daytona International Speedway on Sunday.

20-year-old Bayne wins the Daytona 500

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Trevor Bayne finally made a mistake. Fortunately for him, it didn't happen until he missed the turn pulling into Victory Lane at the Daytona 500.

The youngest driver to win the Great American Race gave the historic Wood Brothers team its fifth Daytona 500 victory — its first since 1976 with David Pearson — and Bayne did it in a No. 21 Ford that was retrofitted to resemble Pearson's famed ride.

In just his second Sprint

Cup start, the 20-year-old Bayne stunned NASCAR's biggest names with a thrilling overtime win Sunday at Daytona International Speedway, holding off Carl Edwards after fan favorite Dale Earnhardt Jr. crashed in NASCAR's first attempt at a green-white-checked flag finish.

"Our first 500, are you kidding me?" said Bayne, who needed directions to Victory Lane. "Wow. This is unbelievable."

Unbelievable, indeed.

Just one day after celebrating his 20th birthday and leaving his teenage years behind, the sport's biggest race was captured by an aw-shucks Tennessean who shaves once a week and considers "Rugrats" his favorite TV show.

The rookie had been great throughout Speedweeks, even proving his mettle by pushing four-time champion Jeff Gordon for most of a qualifying race.

With the win Bayne breaks Gordon's mark as the youngest winner in Daytona 500 history. Gordon was 26 when he won the 500 in 1997.

"I think it's very cool. Trevor's a good kid, and I love the Wood Brothers," Gordon said. "I'm really happy for him. And I think it's great for the sport. To have a young talent like that — he's got that spark, you know?"

The victory for NASCAR pioneers Leonard and Glen Wood ended a 10-year-losing streak, and came the week of the 10th anniversary of Dale Earnhardt's fatal accident on the last lap of the 2001 Daytona 500.

This was only the fourth win in last 20 years for Wood Brothers, which hasn't run a full Sprint Cup season since 2006.

And there were no plans to do so with Bayne, who drove in the Daytona 500 on a loaner from Roush-Fenway

Hendrick stars involved in big wreck at Daytona

By Mark Long
Associated Press writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Hendrick Motorsports had a rough start to the Daytona 500.

Three of the team's four cars, including five-time defending Sprint Cup Series champion Jimmie Johnson, were involved in a 14-car wreck early in the 500-mile race Sunday.

Four-time series champ Jeff Gordon, who started on the front row, and veteran Mark Martin also sustained damage in the melee.

The fourth Hendrick entry, fan favorite Dale Earnhardt Jr., avoided the mess and was running with the leaders. His teammates weren't as fortunate.

Gordon's No. 24 Chevrolet was crumpled front and back, forcing the team to the garage area for major repairs. He returned to the race 30 laps down, essentially running for points while extending his winless streak to 66 races.

"It doesn't really matter at this point," Gordon said. "Our chances of winning the Daytona 500 are over. That's the disappointing part."

Johnson's No. 48 car also needed lengthy repairs. He returned to the track 18 laps down. Martin had fewer issues. His team worked on his No. 5 car on pit road. Still, Martin fell three laps behind the leaders and looked like he would extend his winless streak in the Daytona 500.

But Martin made a strong comeback. He took advantage of NASCAR's free-pass rule to get back on the lead lap and was running in the top 10 with about 50 laps to go.

Gordon, meanwhile, questioned the aggressiveness of his fellow drivers, saying the two-car tandems that have become the norm during Speedweeks were dicier than expected at nearly 200 mph.

"What I don't quite understand is why guys are doing it three-wide, three-deep running for 28th," Gordon said. "They need to let it thin out a little. As soon as it thins out, then go to it, and it can be very safe and pretty harm-free.

"But you see them, and they're pushing and shoving up the middle down the back straightaway, and you're like, 'What are they doing?'"

Two-time Daytona 500 winner Michael Waltrip started the accident by running into the back of teammate David Reutimann. Waltrip owns the team. Reutimann spun sideways and collected several cars in his wake, including several favorites.

"You're going to see a lot more of what we just saw," Gordon predicted.

The crash ended an otherwise solid Speedweeks for Hendrick Motorsports. Earnhardt and Gordon were on the front row, a promising start after team owner Rick Hendrick made significant changes to his organization in the offseason.

Even though Johnson won his fifth consecutive championship, Hendrick felt his team fell way behind in 2010. Gordon, Martin and Earnhardt Jr. were winless.

The mediocre results came a year after Johnson, Martin and Gordon gave Hendrick an unprecedented sweep of the top three spots in the final points standings.

So Hendrick responded by moving everyone except Johnson and longtime crew chief Chad Knaus.

Earnhardt, who has just one victory in three seasons with Hendrick Motorsports, was paired with Gordon's crew chief, Steve Letarte. Earnhardt moved into the same shop as Johnson and Knaus, and Hendrick believes Letarte's strong personality will help rebuild the waning confidence of NASCAR's most popular driver.

Gordon was teamed with Martin's crew chief, Alan Gustafson.

Martin switched to Earnhardt's crew chief, Lance McGrew.

Johnson's team got an adjustment, too. Hendrick shook up Johnson's entire pit crew in hopes of fixing the most noticeable chink in the defending champ's armor.

Duerson's kin donating his brain for research

NEW YORK — Mike Ditka remembers seeing Dave Duerson at a reunion of the '85 Bears just a few months ago, and everything seemed fine.

Yes, Duerson's business had failed, he'd divorced and lost his home to foreclosure, but he seemed to have put it behind him. He was getting married again in April and spoke with optimism of the future, showing the kind of resolve that helped him reach four Pro Bowls, two Super Bowls and bounce back from countless bone-jarring hits over an 11-year career.

So it was understandable that Ditka felt numb this week when he learned that Duerson, one of the anchors of that fearsome Bears defense, had committed suicide at the age of 50.

"We had the anniversary party, and he seemed fine, you know?" the former coach said in a telephone interview Sunday. "I knew he had some problems, but I honestly didn't know."

Duerson was found Thursday in Sunny Isles Beach, Fla., and the Miami-Dade medical examiner ruled his death a suicide on Sunday, Miami-Dade police spokesman Roy Rutland said. There was no word on whether a note was left, though the New York Times reported that Duerson had sent text messages to his family asking that his brain be examined for chronic traumatic encephalopathy, a degenerative disease tied to depression, dementia and suicide.

3RD DAY OF NFL LABOR TALKS DONE

WASHINGTON — Federally mediated negotiations toward a new NFL labor deal lasted about eight hours Sunday, the third consecutive day the league and its players' union met to try to find common ground before the current contract expires.

NFL Players Association executive director DeMaurice Smith didn't stop for questions as he left the Washington office of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, a U.S. government agency, shortly after 6 p.m. He and NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell arrived within minutes of each other, shortly before 10 a.m.

Sunday was the third consecutive — and, so far, longest — day of face-to-face communication after months of slow and sometimes contentious bargaining. The sides have met for a total of more than 20 hours since Friday in front of George Cohen, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Because both sides agreed to Cohen's request that they not comment publicly on

No. 11 Purdue beats No. 2 Ohio State

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — E'Twaun Moore scored a career-high 38 points to lead No. 11 Purdue past No. 2 Ohio State 76-63 on Sunday, capping a week that saw the top four teams in the AP Top 25 lose a game.

Moore tied a career high with seven 3-pointers. He surpassed 2,000 points during a flurry of 13 in the final 3:49 of the first half, becoming the fifth player in school history to reach the milestone.

Jajuan Johnson added 13 points and six rebounds for Purdue (22-5, 11-3 Big Ten), which avenged an 87-64 loss at Ohio State on Jan. 25.

NO. 10 WISCONSIN 76, PENN ST. 66
MADISON, Wis. — Keaton Nankivil scored 22 points and tied a career-high by hitting all five of his 3-point attempts to lead Wisconsin to its 20th consecutive win coming off a loss.

Jon Leuer added 22 points and 10 rebounds as the Badgers (20-6, 10-4 Big Ten) reached 20 wins for the eighth time in the last nine seasons after having four 20-win seasons in the first 103 years of the program.

The Badgers' win, coupled with No. 11 Purdue's upset of

No. 2 Ohio State, puts Wisconsin one game behind the Boilermakers and two behind the Buckeyes in the conference race.

NO. 14 FLORIDA 68, LSU 61
BATON ROUGE, La. — Erving Walker and Kenny Boynton each scored 17 points and Florida moved back into a tie for the overall Southeastern Conference lead.

Their fifth consecutive win puts the Gators (21-5, 10-2) in a tie with Alabama with two weeks remaining in the regular season.

Walker made three 3-pointers and all four of his free throw attempts. Boynton was 5 of 12 from the field and made six of his seven foul shots.

NO. 23 TEMPLE 66, SAINT JOSEPH'S 52
PHILADELPHIA — Lavoy Allen had 12 rebounds and became Temple's career leader in that category.

Allen scored 14 points for the Owls (21-5, 11-2 Atlantic 10) and passed John Baum on the school's career rebounding list. Baum, Temple's radio analyst, grabbed 1,042 rebounds in only three seasons. Allen, a 6-foot-9 senior forward, helped the Owls win their eighth straight game overall and ninth straight over their city-rival Hawks (7-19, 2-10).

NO. 5 DUKE 79, GEORGIA TECH 57
DURHAM, N.C. — Nolan Smith scored 28 points and No. 5 Duke made its case to return to the top of the national rankings by routing Georgia Tech 79-57 on Sunday night.

Kyle Singler added 15 points and Ryan Kelly had 10 for the Blue Devils (25-2, 12-1 ACC). A technical foul on coach Mike Krzyzewski inspired the overwhelming run that carried Duke to its sixth straight win and 10th victory in a row in conference play.

Duke, the reigning national champion and pre-season No. 1, slipped from that perch after a loss in mid-January but could return to the top spot Monday when the new poll is released. All four teams ahead of the Blue Devils — Kansas, Ohio State, Texas and Pitt — lost in the past week.

Aaron Baddeley wins Northern Trust Open

LOS ANGELES — Aaron Baddeley returned to his old swing and a title he hadn't seen in four years — a PGA Tour winner.

In a battle of generations Sunday at Riviera, the 29-year-old Baddeley played mistake-free over the final six holes to hold off Vijay Singh and deny a fairy-tale finish for 51-year-old Fred Couples.

Baddeley closed with a 2-under 69 for a one-shot victory over Singh, who turns 48 on Tuesday.

It was the third career PGA Tour win for Baddeley, whose game had slipped so much that he had plunged to No. 224 in the world. This isn't enough to get back into the top 50, but at least he can book a trip to Augusta National in April for the Masters.

Singh, who only three weeks ago had fallen out of the top 100 in the world for the first time in more than 21 years, had his highest finish since he won the Deutsche Bank Championship in 2008 on his way to the FedEx Cup. Despite back-to-back bogeys on the back nine, he gave himself a chance to the end and closed with a 69.

Singh said it was the best week with the putter in his career, which would include his 2000 Masters victory. He took only 105 putts for the week, including just one three-putt in the second round.

"That's a great, great thing to have when you're putting well," Singh said. "I haven't done that for a long, long time. This is going to get me some places."

The heartache, though, belonged to Couples.

Two decades after he last won at Riviera, Couples ran off three straight birdies to start his round and take the lead, revving up the Riviera gallery. But it all came crashing down with a double bogey on the seventh hole — where Baddeley made a 20-foot birdie putt from the fringe — and Couples never could catch up again.

LANGER WINS ACE GROUP CLASSIC
NAPLES, Fla. — Bernhard Langer shot a 6-under-par 66 Sunday to set a tournament record with a 20-under 196 total and win the ACE Group Classic by four shots.

The 53-year-old Langer held a four-stroke lead going into the final round. Fred Funk got within two after Langer bogeyed No. 11, but Langer came right back with birdies on Nos. 12 and 14. He finished with a 5-footer for birdie on No. 18.

"It's always exciting winning," said Langer, who earned his 14th Champions Tour win. "It never gets old no matter where or how big the tournament, whether it's a major or not. Winning is what we're out here for, what I practice for."

TSENG WINS LPGA THAILAND BY 5
PATTAYA, Thailand — Top-ranked Yani Tseng earned her third tournament win in three weeks Sunday, shooting a 6-under 66 to pull away for a comfortable five-shot victory over Michelle Wie in the LPGA Thailand.

Tseng led by one stroke over Wie and I.K. Kim going into the final round of the season-opening LPGA event and had the lowest score of the day with seven birdies and one bogey to finish at 15-under 273.

Wie settled for a 70 to finish second in the season-opening LPGA event, while Kim had a 71 was another stroke back in a tie for third with Karrie Webb, who shot a 69. Paula Creamer was fifth at 8 under after a 71.

Tseng took over the No. 1 ranking after winning back-to-back Ladies European Tour events, the Australian Open and then the Australian Ladies Masters last weekend.

CHOWRASIA WINS AVANTHA
NEW DELHI — Shiv Shankar Prasad Chowrasia of India earned his second professional win at the Avantha Masters on Sunday, shooting a 5-under 67 for a one-stroke victory over Robert Coles of England.

Chowrasia set the clubhouse target of 15-under 273 at the joint Euro-Asian tour event and then had to wait an hour while Coles finished his round at the DLF Golf and Country Club.

The Englishman had several chances to win over the closing holes but couldn't sink the putts to pull it off. U.S. Open runner-up Gregory Havret of France claimed third another shot back after a 68.

The victory ensures that Chowrasia is exempt on the European Tour through 2013.

Bayne

Racing. Bayne came onto the NASCAR scene in late 2009 with Michael Waltrip Racing but bolted late last year when the team couldn't promise a sponsor for this season.

He hooked up with Roush and planned to run for the Nationwide Series title this season, and a deal was made to get him some seat time in the Cup Series with the Wood Brothers for 17 races. It wouldn't be for points, and he wasn't eligible to run for rookie of the year.

But the stunning Daytona 500 win might change everybody's plans.

Bayne could potentially retract his decision to run for the Nationwide title, and the fat Daytona 500 payday could provide the funding the Woods need to become competitive again.

Sunday's race had a record 74 lead changes among 22 drivers, and a record 16 cautions that wiped out many of the leaders, including Earnhardt Jr. on the first attempt at NASCAR's version of overtime. It put Bayne out front with a slew of unusual suspects.

David Ragan, winless in 147 career starts, was actually leading the field on NASCAR's first attempt at a green-white-checked finish. But he was flagged for changing lanes before the starting line, then an accident that collected Earnhardt in the middle of the pack brought out the caution, and Bayne inherited the lead.

But he had two-time series champion Tony Stewart, now winless in 13 career Daytona 500s, lurking behind with veterans Bobby Labonte, Mark Martin and Kurt Busch, who had collected two previous wins over Speedweeks. All were chomping at the bit for their first Daytona 500 title, but Bayne never blinked, holding his gas pedal down wide open as he staved off every challenge over the two-lap final shootout.

"I've never been to a racetrack with this many people!" he yelled in Victory Lane.

Edwards wound up second in a Ford and was followed by David Gilliland, Labonte and Busch.

Juan Pablo Montoya was sixth, Regan Smith seventh, and Kyle Busch, Paul Menard and Martin rounded out the top 10.

Earnhardt Jr. wound up 24th. It was a rough start to the season for Hendrick Motorsports as three of the team's four cars, including five-time defending Sprint Cup Series champion Jimmie Johnson, were involved in an early 14-car wreck.

Gordon, who started on the front row, sustained damage in the melee and questioned the aggressiveness of his fellow drivers in the dicey two-car tandem racing, especially so early in the race.

"What I don't quite understand is why guys are doing it three-wide, three-deep running for 28th," he said.

Saturday. Cohen announced Thursday the groups agreed to the mediation, which is not binding but is meant as a way to spur progress.

The plan calls for several days of negotiations with Cohen present. The mediation could be seen as a positive sign after several months of infrequent negotiations — and frequent rhetoric, including charges from each side that the other was hoping for a work stoppage.

the constant questions.

"At times, it can be tough, but it's fun at the same time," he said while walking on the magenta carpet before the game. "During this weekend I'm still having fun."

While hearing some of the usual "MVP! MVP! MVP!" chants he's usually serenaded with at Staples Center, Bryant tied Bob Pettit's record for All-Star game honors. He was scoreless for the final 6:48, but Lakers teammate Pau Gasol had a big basket to help the West hold on.

The exhibition game had a bit of a finals feel with the presence of a record-tying four players from the rival Celtics.

Paul Pierce — who grew up in nearby Inglewood — and Kevin Garnett received the heaviest boos during the starting lineups. Ray Allen and Rajon Rondo were also here from the group that lost Game 7 on this floor last June and would love another chance to come take the title back.

East coach Doc Rivers sent his four players out together midway through the first quarter to loud boos that usually provide the soundtrack of June in Los Angeles. They quickly turned to cheers when Ray Allen threw up an airball on his first shot attempt.

The crowd of entertainers included Beyonce and Jay-Z, Sean "Diddy" Combs, Jack Nicholson, Stevie Wonder, John Legend and Justin Bieber — who was called Justin "Berber" by the public address announcer while mentioning the teen star's MVP performance in the celebrity game on Friday.

Perhaps trying too hard to impress the stars surrounding them, there were errant passes and shaky shooting in the early minutes. The West got it right in the final minute of the first quarter, with Blake Griffin catching an alley-oop pass from Deron Williams for one of his powerful dunks — though not quite the degree of difficulty as his slam while leaping over the hood of a car Saturday to win the dunk contest.

Following a pregame performance by rocker Lenny Kravitz a tandem talc toss by James and the rest of the East starters, Bryant scored 11 points in the first quarter. The West led 76-64 at half-time.

Why Smith’s urban renewal bill makes the most sense

Big changes are coming in the way Idaho cities do urban renewal.

Eight different urban renewal reform bills are being considered by the state House Local Government Committee, and four have been sent to the full House.

But legislation that’s still in committee is, in our opinion, the best option.

It’s a bill by Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, that would require an urban renewal district’s sponsoring governing agency — usually a city — to annually review a district’s accumulated funds not designated for a specific purpose. The city council would have final say in whether the money remains earmarked for urban renewal or returns to other taxing districts within urban renewal boundaries.

Smith’s bill would require a public hearing before such a decision is made, giving citizens an opportunity to offer input to urban renewal decision-makers.

Urban renewal plans would be limited to 20 years, down from 24. The legislation’s passage would also prevent urban renewal areas from expanding their set physical boundaries or lifespans.

The bill would limit board members to serving four two-year terms, down from the unlimited five-year terms they can serve now.

Agricultural land couldn’t be included in an urban renewal area without the consent of the property’s owner.

Urban renewal agencies get their money primarily by tax-increment financing, which allows the agencies to collect any increase in assessed property tax value within their boundaries after their formation.

Usually initiated by cities, but technically free-standing entities, the agencies are created to provide a source of revenue as incentives to developers.

That’s where money — and controversy — comes into play.

Critics contend that urban renewal agencies lack the same oversight as other government bodies that handle tax dollars. And they spend tax money that would otherwise flow to other taxing agencies like cash-strapped school districts, cities and counties.

Smith knows what reforms are needed because he’s sat on the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency board of directors for the past two years. Many of the other bills being considered by the House, in our opinion, use a meat cleaver approach to fix problems that require a surgical fix.

Legislation by Rep. Bob Schaefer, R-Nampa, to repeal the state’s urban renewal law ignores economic realities. And we don’t see the advantage of a proposal by Rep. Kathy Sims, R-Coeur d’Alene, to require countywide elections for city urban renewal boards.

A bill by Rep. Phil Hart, R-Athol, requiring a two-thirds vote to finance a specific project would take far too long to be a practical for economic development.

The purpose of Smith’s bill is to make urban renewal more accountable without rendering it ineffective. That’s exactly what’s needed.

The next crisis is scary food for thought

Forget Egypt for a moment. Skip the water crisis in China. Look past angst on the streets of Bangladesh. If you want to see how extreme the effects of surging food prices are becoming, look to wealthy Japan.

So big are the increases that economists are buzzing about them pushing deflationary Japan toward inflation. Yes, rising costs for commodities such as wheat, corn and coffee might do what trillions of dollars of central-bank liquidity couldn’t.

William Pesek

Yet the economic consequences of food prices pale in comparison with the social ones. Nowhere could the fallout be greater than Asia, where a critical mass of those living on less than $2 dollars a day reside. It might have major implications for Asia’s debt outlook. It may have even bigger ones for leaders hoping to keep the peace and avoid mass protests.

What a difference a few months can make. Back in, say, October, the chatter was about Asia’s invulnerability to Wall Street’s woes. Now, governments in Jakarta, Manila and New Delhi are grappling with their own subprime crisis of sorts. This one reflects a toxic mix of suboptimal food stocks, exploding demand, wacky weather and zero interest rates around the globe.

It’s not hyperbole when Nouriel Roubini, the New York University economist who predicted the U.S. financial crisis, says surging food and energy costs are stoking emerging-market inflation that’s serious enough to topple governments. Hosni Mubarak over in Egypt can attest to that.

It’s important to begin considering the side effects. The United Nations reckons countries spent at least $1 trillion on food imports in 2010, with the poorest paying as much as 20 percent more than in 2009. These increases are just getting started. In January, world food prices rose to another record on higher dairy, sugar and grain costs.

This crisis might lead to another: debt. Expect Asian leaders to increase subsidies sharply and cut import taxes. The fiscal implications of these steps aren’t getting the attention they deserve. The same is true of social-instability risks. Events in Egypt are a graphic example of how people living close to the edge can get motivated in a hurry to demand change. Keeping that rage bottled in the age of Twitter, YouTube and Facebook won’t be easy. Hence Roubini’s concerns about geopolitical crises.

There’s an extreme irony in the timing of all this. It’s coming as the world is becoming a heavier place. Obesity rates have almost doubled since 1980 and almost 10 percent of humanity was seriously overweight in 2008, according to the medical journal The Lancet. People have never been fatter at the same time when food prices have never been so high.

The Westernization of Asia’s diet is partly behind the rise in food costs. Rapid growth, rising incomes, growing populations and urbanization are conspiring to shift eating habits away from the staples of old toward livestock and dairy products.

The growing pains inherent in shifting consumption patterns will be especially acute in this region. Unlike the food-price spike of 2008, this one may be more secular than cyclical. Asia alone, for example, will have another 140 million mouths to feed over the next four years. Add that to almost 3 billion people in the fast-growing region and you have a recipe for booming demand.

China’s size and scope means it will be buying up ever-growing chunks of the world’s food supply. As the yuan rises, so will China’s ability to outbid everyone else. Increased trade tensions are inevitable and it will show the futility of food subsidies. Prices will rise as long as consumption does, so it’s really a matter of pouring money down the drain.

China also shows how changing weather will bump up against rising living standards. Severe droughts are imperiling wheat crops in the world’s largest producer. It’s creating shortages of drinking water both for China’s 1.3 billion people and livestock. It’s a reminder that water is the next oil. Governments will be scouring the globe for it before long.

Rising food prices will complicate things for China’s central bank. That goes, too, for India, Indonesia, the Philippines and even less-developed economies from Pakistan to Vietnam.

What’s killing households surviving on a few dollars a day is price volatility. If you spend almost half of your income to fill bellies, a 10 percent surge in cooking oil, wheat or chili peppers is devastating. It’s hard enough to pay rent and handle health-care costs today, never mind investing in education.

Governments need to get busy softening the blow, even at the expense of rattling the folks at Standard & Poor’s and Moody’s Investors Service. Otherwise, they will have a bigger crisis on their hands than voters or investors alike can stomach.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Legislation protects only profits of special interests

Honorable Representative:

HB 166 would take away local control of county planning and zoning; it is a slap in the face to rural Idahoans who care about the quality of their lives, the public’s health, safety and welfare. It is another case of Idaho state government kowtowing to the special interest of subsidized industrial agriculture and ignoring common sense and especially common decency.

We cannot continue to live safe and healthy lives surrounded by the pollution, contamination and filth that unregulated industrial agriculture leaves behind, with impunity! Since you, our representatives, have historically not protected the public with strict regulations, our only recourse is public participation in designing and enforcing regulations at the local level. And now we see there is a movement among you to take away that right, to usurp control of what should be a democratic process. This proposed legislation does not protect any of us here in rural Idaho. It only protects the enormous profits of special interests who prefer the political stagnation their investments ensure, as you well know.

We urge you to examine your consciences and, in the interest of common decency and respect for the laws of our democracy, vigorously oppose this rotten piece of legislation.

Nullification won’t turn country to old republic

“Reform nullification draws a crowd.” What a joke!

Back when the country was formed, it began as a confederacy under the Articles of Confederation. This structure was quickly challenged mostly by the Whigs (now called Republicans) as too loose for practical administration of national business. Meaning only the right, not the wrong, people could mishandle the public treasury.

Alexander Hamilton was the first to step forward with the new organizational chart under a constitution which consisted of a president, a judiciary and a house of representatives; all of these appointed for life. Notice: no senate. The Whigs hit the ceiling, they were mostly the rich property and slave owners and demanded a senate to protect their property and the public cashbox from the plundering by the “little people.” They got their way, thus, the so-called balance of power.

Nullification also became a major issue leading to the Southern states’ bid for independence and a return to a confederacy. Prior to 1860, most states, under the states’ rights understandings, felt they could stop undesirable law. The federalists said differently, so the civil war of 1861 would decide who had primacy, the states or the federal government. We know the outcome, but in the end, Samuel P. Chase said, “States’ rights ended at Appomattox.” There too died nullification, not by law, but with the point of the bayonet.

In other words, not law, but brute force was the measure of virtue and correctness, of rightness. Or, better yet, this action demonstrated its force that makes law legal and all other chatter is rubbish. Thus, unfortunately, to think we will return to the old republic of Thomas Jefferson’s time by the use of law is at best naive and to use force is idiotic. Folks, the old republic is dead.

Luna’s education plan will hurt social skills

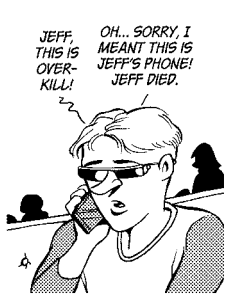

Let me preface this by saying that I am a firm believer in technology in classrooms. That being said, I see a major flaw with Luna’s proposal to give every ninth-grader a laptop and require online classes.

We now live in a world where social networking is becoming the primary socialization. And while many have hundreds of “friends” on online sites, the number of actual friends and time spent with them is decreasing. Removing kids from classrooms with actual teachers and peers is reinforcing this. I see an end result similar to the people in the Pixar movie Wall-E, in which all socialization is done through a small screen.

Luna’s plan will hurt our children’s education. That is obvious. His plan will also hurt their social skills.

If budget impasse leads to shutdown, lawmakers wonder who will get blame

By Charles Babington
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Few memories haunt Republicans more deeply than the 1995-96 partial shutdown of the federal government, which helped President Bill Clinton reverse his falling fortunes and recast House Republicans as stubborn partisans, not savvy insurgents.

Now, as Congress careens toward a budget impasse, government insiders wonder if another shutdown is imminent — and whether Republicans again would suffer the most blame.

Leaders of both parties say they are determined to avoid a shutdown. But they have not yielded on the amount of spending cuts they will demand or accept. Meanwhile, shutdown talk is rippling through Washington and beyond.

"It's good for political rhetoric to talk about a government shutdown. But I don't know anybody that wants that to happen," Sen. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., said on "Fox News Sunday."

Behind the scenes, Senate officials are spending Congress' President's Day recess week poring over the spending proposal passed by the House early Saturday, according to one Democratic leader.

"We are prepared to negotiate right away," Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., said on CNN's "State of the Union."

The Obama administration is warning that workers who handle Social Security benefits might be furloughed. Almost hourly, top Democrats and Republicans accuse each other of pushing the government to the brink by being inflexible.

"So much is at stake if this great government shuts down," said House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi. "I would hope that instead of having ultimatums, we go forward with an approach that talks about how we keep government open."

The House Republican campaign committee said Democrats are "shouting for a shutdown."

For all the political drama and rhetoric, the actual stakes of a shutdown are not so dire for ordinary Americans. The military would stay active, interstate highways would remain open and government checks would be issued, although new applicants for benefits under programs such as Social Security might have their sign-ups delayed.

In fact, the federal government has had more than a dozen "shutdowns" since 1981. Some lasted only hours, and few are remembered.

The exception is the two-stage partial shutdown of 1995 and 1996. Then, as now, a Democratic president clashed over spending priorities with a recently installed Republican House majority. Then, as now, Congress had failed to fund the government for a full fiscal year, so agencies depended on a series of "continuing resolutions" to keep them in businesses while lawmakers feuded.

When Clinton in late 1995 vetoed a Republican-crafted spending bill — he called it insufficient for health care, education and other programs — parts of the government closed for six days.

After a brief truce, the parties clashed again. Hundreds of thousands of "non-essential" federal workers were furloughed for three weeks, from mid-December to early January. (Some workers eventually received back pay for missed days). National parks, museums, passport offices and other agencies closed.

Each party blamed the other. But public opinion soon swung toward Clinton and the Democrats. House Speaker Newt Gingrich didn't help himself by suggesting he had triggered the shutdown out of pique because Clinton had made him ride in the back of Air Force One. Friends called it the biggest mistake of Gingrich's career.

Republican lore portrays the 1995-96 shutdown as a political disaster. Lawmakers who lived through it have vowed: Never again.

"There's absolutely no way" House Republicans will allow a shutdown, said Rep. Jerry Lewis of California, first elected in 1978. "It was a big mistake when Newt did it."

"There's not going to be one!" echoed Rep. Pete Sessions of Texas, who heads the House Republicans' campaign committee.

Some political insiders are not convinced that a new shutdown would play out like the last one, or that Republicans would take nearly all the blame. Public alarm over the federal debt has grown dramatically in the past decade and a half. And Republicans regained control of the House last fall largely because of candidates backed by the conservative, limited government tea party movement who ran on promises to slash spending.

The latest congressional showdown centers on spending for the current fiscal year, which is one-third over. House Republicans have promised to cut $60 billion from "discretionary non-security" programs. Those programs comprise only 12 percent of the entire budget, and they exclude items such as the military, Social Security and Medicare, the government program that provides health care coverage for the elderly.

MINNESOTA Dismal commute predicted as storm hits Midwest

MINNEAPOLIS — Hundreds of flights were canceled at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport and officials in several states advised people to stay off the highways as a winter storm blew through the upper Midwest on Sunday.

Even before the worst of the storm hit, Delta Airlines canceled about 700 flights to and from the Twin Cities airport and other airlines thinned out their schedules, said airport spokeswoman Melissa Scovronski. She said Sunday afternoon the storm had shut down two of the airport's four runways.

In Detroit, airlines canceled roughly 230 flights though the city's Metro Wayne County airport, while more than 200 flights through Chicago's O'Hare airport were off.

Traffic on the roads wasn't much better. The National Weather Service reported blizzard conditions in western Minnesota and issued a winter storm warning for the rest of the southern half of the state.

WISCONSIN GOP ups pressure on Democrats to return for vote

MADISON — Wisconsin Republicans on Sunday upped the pressure on Democrats who fled to Illinois to return home and vote on an anti-union bill, with the governor calling them obstructionists and a GOP lawmaker threatening to convene without them.

Gov. Scott Walker said the 14 minority Democrats who left Madison on Thursday were failing to do their jobs by "hiding out" in another state. And Senate Majority Leader Scott Fitzgerald said his chamber would meet Tuesday to act on non-spending bills and confirm some of the governor's appointees even if the Democrats don't show up — a scenario that should outrage their constituents.

Senate Democrats acknowledged that the 19 Republicans could pass any item that doesn't spend state money in their absence. The budget-repair bill they have been blocking requires a quorum of 20 senators to pass, while other measures require only a simple majority of the chamber's 33 members.

FLORIDA Engine failure forces emergency landing

MIAMI — A Delta plane's engine failed in mid-air over Florida, forcing the flight to make an emergency landing Sunday morning, authorities said.

Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Kathleen Bergen said it was a so-called "contained" engine failure, meaning small parts such as fan blades came out the back of the engine. A more dangerous scenario would be if the pieces penetrated the engine's cover and were uncontained.

It was not immediately clear what caused the failure, Bergen said.

Sheriff's deputies recovered pieces of what appeared to be the damaged engine from an area near the Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport, said Broward County Aviation Department spokesman Greg Meyer.

The plane returned to the airport shortly after its 7:45 a.m. takeoff and landed safely, Meyer said.

Delta spokesman Anthony Black said the 119 passengers and six crew members on Flight 1846 changed planes and arrived in Minneapolis 3 1/2 hours after the original scheduled arrival.

Verl Smith Okelberry

Jan. 22, 1918–Feb. 18, 2011

OAKLEY — Verl Smith Okelberry, 93, of Oakley, passed away Friday, Feb. 18, 2011, at Rosetta Assisted Living in Burley.

Verl was born at home on the family farm in Oakley on Jan. 22, 1918. He was an 8th grade graduate of the Island School and then completed his education at the Oakley Academy. He was drafted into the United States Army during World War II and served with the 444th Anti-Aircraft Battalion from Oct. 26, 1942, until his honorable discharge on March 20, 1946. While serving in Europe, Verl met his wife-to-be, Patricia A. Richards. They were married in London, England, on Nov. 17, 1945. Their marriage was solemnized in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple on Nov. 17, 1954.

Verl, a lifelong farmer, has lived on the Okelberry 80-acre family homestead his entire life. In addition to private farming, he had worked for Harold Cranney Farms and Anderson Farms. He was the Cottonwood Water Master until his health failed at the age of 82.

Verl was an active member of the LDS Church and served faithfully in various callings. He was a member of the V.F.W. and the Heyburn Lions Club. He enjoyed bowling, fishing and hunting, and especially loved family activities.

He is survived by his loving wife of 65 years, Patricia Okelberry, of Oakley; his children, Richard Henry (Joyce) Okelberry of Selah, Wash., Susannah Rosina Bailey, and Verl Chris (Shililah) Okelberry, all of Burley, and Eileen (Greg) Tyler of Heyburn; 12 grandchildren; 27 great-grandchildren; his siblings, Lillian Osterhout, of Declo, Rachel Martindale of Boise, David (Rhea) Okelberry, of Woods Cross, Utah, Betty Osterhout of Declo, and Richard (Betty) Okelberry of Ogden, Utah; and a sister-in-law, Donna Okelberry of Declo.

He was preceded in death by his parents; and two brothers, Joseph W. Okelberry and Myron D. Okelberry.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 23, at the Oakley LDS Stake Center, 355 N. Center Ave., with Bishop Scott Arnell officiating. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Burial will be in the Marion Cemetery.

Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St., in Burley, and from noon until 12:45 p.m. Wednesday at the church.

SOMALIA Pirates: Warship shadowing hijacked American yacht

MOGADISHU — A warship is shadowing a yacht with four Americans on board that was hijacked by Somali pirates, a pirate said Sunday, as the vessel was reported to be moving closer to the Somali coast.

The yacht Quest was hijacked on Friday off the coast of Oman, but is now in the waters between Yemen and northern Somalia, two pirates and a Somali government official told The Associated Press.

One pirate who gave his name only as Hassan said a warship with a helicopter on its deck is near the Quest.

The pirate's claim could not be independently verified, and U.S. officials on Sunday did not release any information about the yacht. A U.S. Embassy spokesman on Saturday said officials were assessing options and "possible responses."

Hassan told the AP he is speaking directly with the pirates aboard the hijacked yacht. A second pirate who gave his name as Bile Hussein and a Somali official in Puntland who asked not to be named both said the Quest is in between Yemen and Somalia and heading closer to Puntland, a haven for pirates on Somalia's northern tip.

MEXICO State congress seeks ban of video game

CIUDAD JUAREZ — A shoot-em-up video game set in the border town of Ciudad Juarez has angered local officials who are busy fighting all-too-real violence.

Chihuahua state legislators said Sunday they have asked federal authorities to ban "Call of Juarez: The Cartel," which is based on drug cartel shootouts in Ciudad Juarez.

About 6,000 people died in drug-related violence in Ciudad Juarez in 2009 and 2010, making the city, located across from El Paso, Texas, one of the deadliest in the world.

The website of game developer Ubisoft Entertainment SA says the title is due for release this summer. Screen shots from the game show three characters armed with a pistol, an assault rifle and a shotgun ready to open fire on a city street.

The game's promotional slogan urges players, "Take justice into your own hands and experience the lawlessness of the modern Wild West." No one answered a message left at the company's San Francisco office.

Ricardo Boone Salmon, a congressman for Chihuahua state, where Ciudad Juarez is located, said the state legislature unanimously approved a request this week asking the federal Interior Department to ban the game.

CHINA China tries to quash 'Jasmine Revolution'

BEIJING — Jittery Chinese authorities staged a show of force to squelch a mysterious online call for a "Jasmine Revolution," with hundreds of onlookers but only a handful of people actively joining protests inspired by pro-democracy demonstrations sweeping the Middle East.

Authorities detained activists Sunday, increased the number of police on the streets, disconnected some cell phone text messaging services and censored Internet postings about the call to stage protests in Beijing, Shanghai and 11 other major cities.

Police took at least three people away in Beijing, one of whom tried to place white jasmine flowers on a planter while hundreds of people milled about the protest gathering spot, outside a McDonald's on the capital's busiest shopping street. In Shanghai, police led away three people near the planned protest spot after they scuffled in an apparent bid to grab the attention of passers-by.

Many activists said they didn't know who was behind the campaign and weren't sure what to make of the call to protest, which first circulated Saturday on the U.S.-based Chinese-language news website Boxun.com.

The unsigned notice called for a "Jasmine Revolution" — the name given to the Tunisian protest movement — and urged people "to take responsibility for the future." Participants were urged to shout, "We want food, we want work, we want housing, we want fairness" — a slogan that highlights common complaints among Chinese.

AFGHANISTAN NATO disputes claims it killed 64 Afghan civilians

KABUL — Tribal elders in a remote part of northeastern Afghanistan claimed Sunday that NATO forces killed 64 civilians in air and ground strikes over the past four days. The international coalition denied the claim, saying video showed troops targeting and killing dozens of insurgents.

Coalition and Afghan officials plan to go to the Ghazi Abad district of Kunbar province, a hotbed of the insurgency, on Monday to investigate. Civilian casualties have been a constant source of friction between coalition troops and Afghan President Hamid Karzai.

Tribal elders told the provincial governor that air strikes hit a village in the area and that "women and children had been killed inside their houses," said Nawrdin Safi, a member of the Kunar provincial council.

Kunar province police chief Gen. Khalilullah Ziayi said local residents claimed 15 men, 20 women and 29 children or young adults were killed during operations in the area, about 190 kilometers (117 miles) east of Kabul.

NATO said video of the operations show troops targeting and killing between 35 and 40 armed insurgents along steep, rugged cliffs.

Rear Adm. Gregory Smith, director of communications for the coalition, said he watched video of a five-hour battle — recorded by cameras mounted on helicopters and unmanned aerial vehicles — and saw no evidence of civilian casualties or strikes against any structures.

Supporters of Libyan President Moammar Gadhafi shout slogans during a pro-government demonstration in Tripoli on Saturday. According to witnesses, protesters in the eastern city of Benghazi defied once more a fierce crackdown by Gadhafi's regime, returning Sunday to a square outside a court building after a day of bloodshed to demand the overthrow of Gadhafi.

Gadhafi's son warns of civil war in Libya

By Sarah El Deeb
Associated Press

CAIRO — After anti-government unrest spread to the Libyan capital of Tripoli and protesters seized military bases and weapons Sunday, Moammar Gadhafi's son went on state television to proclaim that his father remained in charge with the army's backing and would "fight until the last man, the last woman, the last bullet."

Seif al-Islam Gadhafi, in the regime's first comments on the six days of demonstrations, warned the protesters that they risked igniting a civil war in which Libya's oil wealth "will be burned."

The speech followed a fierce crackdown by security forces who fired on thousands of demonstrators and funeral marchers in the eastern city of Benghazi in a bloody cycle of violence that killed 60 people on Sunday alone, according to a doctor in one city hospital. Since the six days of unrest began, more than 200 people have been killed, according to medical officials, human rights groups and exiled dissidents.

Libya response has been the harshest of any Arab country that has been wracked by the protests that toppled long-serving leaders in neighboring Tunisia and Egypt. But Gadhafi's son said his father would prevail.

"We are not Tunisia and Egypt," he said. "Moammar Gadhafi, our leader, is leading the battle in Tripoli, and we are with him."

"The armed forces are with him. Tens of thousands are heading here to be with him. We will fight until the last man, the last woman, the last bullet," he said in a rambling and sometimes confused speech of nearly 40 minutes.

Although the elder Gadhafi did not appear, his son has often been put forward as the regime's face of reform.

Western countries have expressed concern at the rising violence against demonstrators in Libya. British Foreign Secretary William Hague said he spoke to Seif al-Islam by phone and told him that the country must embark on "dialogue and implement reforms," the Foreign Office said.

In his speech, the younger Gadhafi conceded the army made some mistakes during the protests because the troops were not trained to deal with demonstrators, but he added that the number of dead had been exaggerated, giving a death toll of 84.

He offered to put forward reforms within days that he described as a "historic national initiative" and said the regime was willing to remove some restrictions and begin discussions for a constitution. He offered to change a number of laws, including those covering the media and the penal code.

Dressed in a dark business suit and tie, Seif al-Islam wagged his finger frequently as he delivered his warnings. He said that if protests continued, Libya would slide back to "colonial" rule. "You will get Americans and European fleets coming your way and they will occupy you."

He threatened to "eradicate the pockets of sedition" and said the army will play a main role in restoring order.

"There has to be a firm stand," he said. "This is not the Tunisian or Egyptian army."

Protesters had seized some military bases, tanks and other weapons, he said, blaming Islamists, the media, thugs, drunks and drug abusers, foreigners — including Egyptians and Tunisians.

He also admitted that the unrest had spread to Tripoli, with people firing in central Green Square before fleeing.

The rebellion by Libyans frustrated with Gadhafi's more than 40 years of authoritarian rule has spread to more than a half-dozen eastern cities — but also to Tripoli, where secret police were heavily deployed on the streets of the city of 2 million.

Armed security forces were seen on rooftops surrounding central Green Square, a witness said by telephone, speaking on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisal.

As Idaho vaccination rate rises, state considers requiring more shots

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Dr. Jack Trotter and his nurse have a game. Whenever a young patient comes in for a bump or bruise and the St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center pediatrician finds out the patient is behind on shots, he gets a point. If the nurse figures it out, she gets a point.

Whether they're wary of vaccines or confused by different schedules and recommendations, many Idaho parents hold off on getting their children vaccinated, despite living in one of the only states that vaccinates all children for free. The Idaho Legislature will soon consider a rule change adding more vaccinations to the current school immunization requirements, but parents will still have the last say on whether their children get shots.

In 2008, Idaho had one of the lowest vaccination rates in the country at 60 percent for children ages 19 to 35 months, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. In 2009, that rate rose to 70.5 percent, which almost equaled the national average, the Idaho Department of Health in Welfare said.

Health and Welfare is looking to boost that percentage even more.

In Idaho, children 18 and younger can get all vaccinations for free. Taxes on insurance companies pay for vaccinations for insured children, and a federal grant pays for vaccinations for uninsured children and those on Medicaid. Parents might still have to pay a clinic fee at a doctor's office or at the local public health district, but the shot itself is free.

Mismatched lists

To attend any school in Idaho, children must be up to date on certain shots. But what's legally required to attend school and what is medically recommended don't always match up.

"Most people don't understand the difference," said Lisa Klamm of South Central Public Health District. Parents often make sure their children get what's required for school, but those requirements fall short of what doctors recommend. For example, the CDC recommends four doses of the polio vaccine before age 6, while Idaho requires only three doses to get into school.

"But if you're going to start something, why don't you finish it?" Klamm said.

There are reasons for the disparity between recommendations and requirements, Trotter said. For example, the CDC recommends three doses of the vaccine for the human papillomavirus, or HPV, for females ages 12-26 and males 9-26. HPV is the leading cause of cervical cancer, but some parents are squeamish about giving their young children a vaccination against a sexually transmitted infection.

Also, recommendations from the national Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices change frequently. Even as the Legislature is considering adding the additional

All the shots

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends these vaccinations by the time a child turns 6:

- 5 doses of diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis vaccine (DTaP)
- 3-4 doses of Hib vaccine (depending on the brand)
- 4 doses of pneumococcal vaccine
- 4 doses of polio vaccine
- 2 doses of hepatitis A vaccine
- 3 doses of hepatitis B vaccine
- 2 doses of measles, mumps and rubella vaccine (MMR)
- 2-3 doses of rotavirus vaccine (depending on brand)
- 2 doses of varicella vaccine
- Yearly doses of influenza vaccine (6 months and older)

Source: CDC. List does not include additional vaccines for certain high-risk groups. For the schedule, visit cdc.gov.

Idaho law requires children born after Sept. 1, 1999, to have these vaccinations to enroll in school:

- 2 doses of measles, mumps, and rubella vaccine (MMR)
- 5 doses of diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis vaccine (DTaP), or 4 if at least 1 dose was administered before the fourth birthday
- 3 doses of polio vaccine
- 3 doses of hepatitis B vaccine

A proposed rule change before the Legislature would add these vaccinations to the requirements:

- 1 polio dose, 2 hepatitis A doses and 2 varicella doses for a child younger than 5 entering kindergarten during the 2011-12 school year
- 1 DTaP dose and 1 meningococcal dose for a child entering seventh grade in 2011-12

Source: Idaho Department of Health and Welfare doses, ACIP in October changed its recommendations to include another dose of the vaccine against meningitis.

"Already we're not in alignment anymore," said Dr. Christine Hahn, the state's epidemiologist.

Parents' choice

Parents and guardians can exempt their children from the school immunization requirements by signing a three-page form. For each vaccine they decline to give their children, they must initial a statement that outlines the risk of opting out. For instance: "I understand by not receiving the Diphtheria vaccine, my child is at risk of developing a sore throat, lowgrade fever, heart complications, paralysis, respiratory complications, coma and even death." And, "I understand by not receiving the Tetanus vaccine, my child is at risk of developing seizures and possible fatal neuromuscular disease."

The parents also must indicate whether they are opting out for personal, religious or medical reasons. In 2009, 3.6 percent of Idaho students enrolled in school had exemptions on file, according to Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Of those, about 8 percent cited medical reasons, about 8 percent cited religious reasons, and about 84 percent cited personal or philosophical reasons. Parents also have the option of explaining what those personal or philosophical reasons are.

The health department reviews those explanations to see what information — or misinformation — parents base their decisions on. They don't follow up with parents, but they do base education campaigns around common responses.

Not all of the children who have exemption forms are entirely unvaccinated, Hahn said. Many are almost caught up on their shots, decide to opt out of just one or two doses, or use a different schedule.

Jennifer Votroubek of Twin Falls decided to vaccinate her three children but didn't follow the schedule for the measles, mumps and rubella shot, dubbed MMR.

"On that particular one, we've always waited an extra three to six months," Votroubek said. Votroubek said her younger sister had a bad reaction to the MMR shot, which she believes may have led to ear infections, dyslexia and learning disabilities. And for her youngest daughter, Votroubek's doctor recommended waiting until she grew for that shot.

Among the most common reasons parents opt out of the MMR: worries about autism. Trotter said he gets questions about an alleged link between the MMR shot and autism weekly at his clinic.

But that link has been disproven, he said. Andrew Wakefield, the British medical researcher who published work on an autism-vaccine link in 1998, has since been accused of fabricating his research and in May had his medical license stripped.

Trotter provides information to parents concerned about autism, but by the time they get to his office, their minds are usually made up on the matter, he said.

Twin Falls mom Heidi Campbell decided to vaccinate her two children after doing some research.

"The concerns get a lot of publicity, a lot of play, so you can't help but hear those," said Campbell, who has a doctorate in biochemistry. "But if you look into them a little further, they're fears. They're not substantiated, there's no data behind them."

And she's glad she followed the suggested schedule.

"Every time somebody has chicken pox and my kids don't, I'm very grateful for vaccines," she said.

Lisps, stutters and the power of speech

Peers and parents are critical for successful speech therapy

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Speech is one of the basic ways humans communicate, so those with impediments are doubly challenged. Yet there's hope and help through therapy.

Speech and language therapists can assist with an enormous variety of conditions and syndromes, from cleft palates to autism, from stutters to hyponasal sound production. And therapy can help at any age, from infants who have difficulty swallowing to seniors recovering from a stroke.

But the common thread in speech therapy? Parents, peers and community are critical, to support progress and avoid a downward spiral of self-esteem.

"Listen to your kids and help them, work with them and use those tools the therapist has to help you with," said Barbara Roberts of Buhl, whose daughter, Angel, now 11, struggled with pronunciation of the letter R.

"She would say 'huh' for 'her.' 'Girl' was very hard; 'guwul' was how she said it," Roberts said.

For the past four years, Angel has been in therapy with Audrey Hassani, speech language pathologist with Horizon Therapy Services in Twin Falls. Now, the girl's pronunciation is much improved, and Roberts credits both Hassani's therapy and the therapist's instructions for the family about how to help Angel at home.

Roberts said her 20-year-old son, who has had similar speech issues since he was a child, received some therapy when he was young. But she said it was less effective than Hassani's therapy.

Therapists are often specialized — either in technique, the issue they address or the age group they focus on — so researching which therapist to use is important to the

Diet soda tied to stroke risk, but reasons unclear

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's far from definitive proof, but new research raises concern about diet soda, finding higher risks for stroke and heart attack among people who drink it everyday versus those who drink no soda at all.

The beverage findings should be "a wakeup call to pay attention to diet sodas," said Dr. Steven Greenberg. He is a Harvard Medical School neurologist and vice chairman of the International Stroke Conference in California, where the research was presented.

A simple solution, health experts say, is to drink water instead.

Doctors have no chemical or biological explanation for why diet soda may be risky. It could be that people who drink lots of it also fail to exercise, weigh more, drink more alcohol or have other risk factors like high blood pressure and smoking. However, the researchers took these and many other factors into account and didn't see a change in the trend.

"It's reasonable to have doubts, because we don't have a clear mechanism. This needs to be viewed as a preliminary study," said lead researcher Hannah Gardener of the University of Miami.

But for those trying to cut calories, "diet soft drinks may not be an optimal substitute for sugar-sweetened beverages," she said.

Clearing up confusion on wisdom teeth removal

By Meredith Cohn
The Baltimore Sun

It seems just about everyone has to have his wisdom teeth extracted. For most, it's an easy procedure and an easy recovery. But many people don't understand why we have those third molars to begin with — or if there are alternatives to removal. We asked Dr. Robert E. Williams, a clinical associate professor at the University of Maryland Dental School.

What is the purpose of wisdom teeth, and why do so many people have to have them removed?

Wisdom teeth (third molars) were necessary eons ago when humans had a coarser diet and larger jaws. With evolution, our jaws have gotten relatively smaller and, in many cases, there isn't enough room for them to erupt fully or into a favorable position. Often, these teeth will only partially erupt, leaving a flap of tissue over a portion of the crown of the tooth. Food and bacteria get under this flap and cause an infection. Even if the teeth fully erupt, they are so far back in the mouth that it is difficult to keep them and the surrounding gums clean and healthy.

Are there alternatives to removal or a best time to remove them?

The only alternative to removal is to leave them alone. There are two different schools of thought regarding the removal of wisdom teeth. One group recommends prophylactic removal prior to the development of any problems, and the other recommends waiting until a problem develops and removing them at that time. Unfortunately for the "wait and see" group, recovery from the surgery is usually quicker and easier for younger patients. Some wisdom teeth should never be removed if there is a high probability of damaging the underlying nerve, or causing an extensive loss of the bone surrounding the tooth.

What are potential complications from removal?

Dr. Robert Williams, of University of Maryland Dental School, answers questions about third molars at his Baltimore office.

The most common complications are the pain and bleeding that accompany the surgical procedure. This can be controlled with medication and pressure applied over the extraction site. If the clot in the socket is lost, an infection can develop resulting in a "dry socket." These infections are treated with antibiotics. Rarely, damage to the underlying nerve can occur leading to a partial numbness of the chin. Maintaining the mouth in a wide-open position for an extended period of time may result in pain or discomfort in the jaw joint.

If you have gaps that haven't healed over time, is there something you can or should do?

Healing should take about 10 days to two weeks. If you experience any bleeding after the first few hours post-surgery, or if pain or swelling persists beyond a few days, you should contact the surgeon.

If you have impacted wisdom teeth, does that mean you'll have other problems such as crooked teeth?

There is no relationship between the impaction or eruption of wisdom teeth and other orthodontic problems, especially crowding of the lower front teeth. Wisdom teeth tend to erupt in the late teens to early 20s, about the same time that many people experience some crowding of their lower front teeth, but there is no causal relationship between the two events.

Speech

Continued from Healthy & Fit 1 therapy's success. So is how the therapist and the patient get along.

Twin Falls parents Ricky and MJ Sanchez took their son Kaidem to three therapists before settling on speech language pathologist Kerry Bowman of Primary Therapy Source in Twin Falls.

"First we thought it was autism, but he had social skills and was playing with other kids and doing a lot of stuff that autistic kids don't do," MJ said of Kaidem, then 2 years old. The family speaks Bosnian, Spanish and English at home, but Kaidem wasn't confusing the languages; he instead used a garbled vocalization that was difficult and frustrating to understand for the whole family. "We used to kid around, saying maybe he speaks some other language, comes from a different planet. ... I'm sure it makes sense to him what he's saying."

Now almost 4, Kaidem is learning signs to help himself be understood, and he practices vocalization at therapy three times a week as well as at home during play with his parents and older brother.

"We've seen so much improvement; he'll even do three-word sentences now," MJ said. "He still points and still doesn't have that many words, but we can understand him more."

Bowman said families often blame themselves for their children's difficulties (Roberts speculates whether Angel's difficult birth might have contributed) but that is not where fault should be laid. Nor should others in the community assume parenting is a contributing factor, she said. Often, the cause of speech impediments is not well understood, but some may have a genetic component.

In the past decade or so there haven't been major advances in treatment, the therapists said, although sophisticated technology (iPads for alternative communication, for example) can help with both assessment and treatment. There has also been a trend toward group therapy, Bowman said, in part because children respond especially well to a successful experience with a peer.

It's frustrating enough trying to communicate with a speech impediment, but kindness and patience on the part of peers and other community members can make it easier.

"It is good for typically developing kids to be involved with kids with disabilities because it teaches them acceptance," Bowman said, noting that most teasing starts around second or third grade as children become more aware of others.

Negative reactions can discourage progress, Hassani said.

"If they have a speech issue, they can be bullied, and if there are peer issues they can withdraw, incur different kinds of aggressive behavior problems, a lot of self-esteem problems," she said. Then the child might disengage from therapy, reducing its effectiveness.

Don't give up if improvement isn't quick. "Sometimes (the speech issue is) pervasive, lasts a lifetime, and sometimes they progress until they're at age level," Bowman said. "There's no way to judge what someone's potential could be."

Today is Monday, Feb. 21, the 52nd day of 2011. There are 313 days left in the year. This is Presidents Day.

Today's Highlight:
On Feb. 21, 1911, composer Gustav Mahler, despite a fever, conducted the New York Philharmonic at Carnegie Hall in what turned out to be his final concert (he died the following May).

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1846, Sarah G. Bagley became the first female telegrapher as she took charge at the newly opened telegraph office in Lowell, Mass.

In 1866, Lucy B. Hobbs became the first woman to graduate from a dental school, the Ohio College of Dental Surgery in Cincinnati.

In 1885, the Washington Monument was dedicated.

In 1916, the World War I Battle of Verdun began in France as German forces attacked; the French were able to prevail after 10 months of fighting.

In 1925, The New Yorker magazine made its debut.

In 1965, black Muslim leader and civil rights activist Malcolm X, 39, was shot to death inside the Audubon Ballroom in New York by assassins identified as members of the Nation of Islam.

In 1972, President Richard M. Nixon began his historic visit to China as he and his wife, Pat, arrived in Beijing.

In 1973, Israeli fighter planes shot down Libyan Arab Airlines Flight 114 over the Sinai Desert, killing all but five of the 113 people on board.

In 1986, Larry Wu-tai Chin, the first American found guilty of spying for China, killed himself in his Virginia jail cell.

In 1995, Chicago adventurer Steve Fossett became the first person to fly solo across the Pacific Ocean in a balloon, landing in Leader, Saskatchewan.

Ten years ago: The Supreme Court ruled that state workers cannot use the Americans With Disabilities Act, a federal law, to win money damages for on-the-job discrimination. At the Grammy Awards, Steely Dan won album of the year for "Two Against Nature," plus best pop album and best pop performance by a duo or group for "Cousin Dupree"; controversial rapper Eminem won three awards, all in rap categories.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush endorsed the takeover of shipping operations at six major U.S. seaports by a state-owned business in the United Arab Emirates, and pledged to veto any bill Congress might approve to block the agreement. Donald Herbert, a brain-injured Buffalo, N.Y., firefighter who suddenly spoke after nearly a decade in a near-vegetative state, died at age 44. Harvard University president Lawrence H. Summers announced his resignation.

One year ago: A mistaken U.S. missile attack killed 23 civilians in Afghanistan. (Four American officers were later reprimanded.) The United States stunned Canada 5-3 to advance to the Olympic men's hockey quarterfinals in Vancouver. Bode Miller finally captured his elusive gold medal, winning the super-combined for his third medal in three events. Spectator Susan Zimmer, 52, was killed at the NHRA Arizona Nationals at Firebird International Raceway in Chandler when a tire flew off a crashing dragster and struck her.

REAL NEWS. REAL VALUE

DEAR ABBY: My step-mother — the only mother I have ever known — has been clinically diagnosed with a paranoid personality. This means she is suspicious, a martyr in any situation and flatly denies anything she thinks would cast her in a negative light. She can be very convincing. Once or twice she has even convinced me that my memories were wrong, although the facts were later corroborated by other family members.

People who can't see through her "act" consider my mother to be a saint. Those who see her clearly know that she's spiteful and vindictive. She has, for years, refused to take her prescribed medicine and won't explore any other treatment. She insists the problem is with everyone else, especially me.

You have told others about the need to cut toxic friends and relatives out of their lives, but how does one do it? I know there will never be closure or a good relationship, but I can't help wanting one. I'm in my mid-30s and feel if my mother doesn't love me, how can anyone else?

— NEEDS A RESOLUTION IN GEORGIA

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR NEEDS A RESOLUTION: You have more than one problem. Removing toxic individuals from one's life is as easy as refusing to go along with their behavior. Once you draw the line, those people will "help" you by cutting you out of theirs. Your mother's mental illness may prevent her from loving anyone — not you specifically.

I hope you realize how important it is to discuss your feelings with a licensed psychotherapist. You have an entire upbringing by a woman with a damaged personality to overcome. The fact that she couldn't love you does not mean you are unlovable. And the sooner you are able to accept that, the more lovable you will be because you will like yourself more.

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago I was suddenly widowed after many years of marriage. Because I was totally "available," I became very involved with my children and grandchildren. I did not date.

About a year ago, that changed. I met "Gerald," a man who makes me very happy. We enjoy dinners together, dancing and travel. We spend three nights a week together — usually at my place.

My brothers and friends are happy for me, but my daughters have not accepted him. They are civil in his presence, but in private they put him down. Their objections are: Gerald is more reserved than their father was, he takes up a lot of my time, that I'm "acting like a schoolgirl," and the sleepovers set a bad example for the grandkids. (They are not present when this occurs.)

I have told my daughters repeatedly how happy I am and how hurtful I find their comments. I refuse to listen to their negative comments, but they always come up. I don't want to alienate them and possibly have my time with my grandkids limited, but Gerald is going to be in my life for a while. Any advice?

— GERALD'S "GIRL"
DEAR GERALD'S "GIRL": As an adult you have the right to live your life as you choose. Because you have already told your daughters their comments are hurtful, it's time to stand your ground more strongly.

Your grandchildren will not be shocked that Gerald is spending nights with you if their parents do not discuss it with them or in front of them. They'll be off doing their own thing as teenagers and, much as they love you, you will not be the focus of their attention.

If your daughters threaten to punish you by limiting your time with the grandkids, let it be their problem. But do not give in to the treatment they are giving you because it is unfair and uncalled-for.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"What would life be without arithmetic, but a scene of horrors?"

— Sydney Smith

When the opponents find the most damaging lead against your no-trump contract, how you continue may depend on your reading of the distribution of the danger suit.

Against three no-trump West led the club six. East played the king, which declarer ducked. When East returned the club nine, declarer ducked again and won the third club, pitching a spade from dummy.

Declarer has seven tricks on top and must decide where to try for the other two. It all depends on how he reads the early play. Two clubs are still outstanding.

If East and West have one apiece, the play is to continue with a diamond. The defenders will end up with three clubs and a diamond trick, but declarer gets home, regardless of which defender has the diamond ace.

However, East's play in clubs indicates that the suit was probably breaking 5-3. The clue is the return of the nine at trick two. Had East started with four, the normal return is the lowest of his remaining three cards, but with three, the top of his remaining doubleton.

South therefore decided to rely on West to hold the heart queen, rather than East to have the diamond ace. South cashed the heart king, finessed the heart 10, then ran the spades, ending in hand. He successfully finessed again in hearts, with the heart ace providing the ninth trick.

With clubs 5-3, even if the heart finesse had lost, declarer still would have been safe as long as the diamond ace was with East.

ANSWER: When in doubt against no-trump, try to lead declarer's shortage. On this auction it is most likely hearts. The question is whether to lead the queen (the best shot if declarer has a bare 10 or nine) or a low heart, which rates to work better if declarer has a bare ace or king. Since declarer has suggested a strong hand, I marginally prefer the low-heart lead.

IF FEBRUARY 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You're not only the star of your own private show during the next six to eight weeks, but you have solid business sense as well. Since you aren't just another pretty face, you might grab the attention of a dazzling new romantic partner who has permanent compatibility in mind. If you are looking for a new job or are considering a career change, this is a fabulous time to strut your stuff as people are more aware of your talents and less likely to notice your flaws. In August and especially late September, the world is your oyster. That is the very best time to start anything of great importance with an expectation of lasting success.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cooperation is king. You find that any task moves along more smoothly when there is a congenial buddy or co-worker along for the ride. Follow up on a fanciful flirtation by being fast with sincere compliments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Teamwork takes talent. To successfully work side by side with others, you must exercise self-discipline and use the lessons learned at your mother's knee. Your social skills are in full bloom.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Josh around without losing ground. Today you can use a temporary gift of gab and originality of thought to convince others of the value of your ideas. Lighthearted teasing and familiarity are acceptable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lighten up. The serious side of life might preoccupy your thoughts early in the day. If you take aim at achieving your ambitions by writing up a list, you will be able to accomplish everything in good time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The less said, the better. Prying information from someone might be like moving a boulder with your bare hands. This is not a good day to begin any work-related activity that depends upon accuracy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Nagging needs can be notable. The concern that you must pay off debts might be a motivating force that makes you more organized and industrious out of sheer necessity. Hard work will pay off.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Flirtations might facilitate the fulfillment of your fantasies. It could be that an opportunity to bask in genuine admiration from an appealing someone will make the day's work a little brighter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hit-and-run love affairs just aren't your style. You might mix business and pleasure during the next few days or find that your social activities trigger a hard edge more suited to work related behavior.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pay favors forward. A little kindness toward others will never detract from your own progress and might even make you feel better about your own self-worth. Do something nice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you are going to look a gift horse in the mouth, you had best have a toothbrush handy. Accept whatever comes your way with good grace, but don't try to outdo your good luck by pushing it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Perfection is preferable. Don't begin anything of great importance without careful planning and scrutiny. Once launched, your plans are set off on a trajectory based on your current situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Harmless playfulness pays off. This is a good day to approach someone who has often seemed standoffish without being seen as aggressive. Someone is willing to give you an honest appraisal of your work.
