2 of 3 education reform bills pass

WHAT'S NEXT

Senate Bills 1108 and 1110 go to the House Education Committee. The committee will begin hearing testimony at 8 a.m. Tuesday in the auditorium of the State Capitol.

The proposal's third piece, dealing with technology and student-teacher ratios, Senate Bill 1113, will be up again in the Senate Education Committee, probably next week.

Legislation would change aspects of teacher pay

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — A shakeup of Idaho's public education system got a big boost Thursday in the Senate.

After a marathon five-hour session, the Senate passed two of three reform bills with votes of 20-15 on Thursday, giving more traction to State Superintendent Tom Luna's "Students Come First" education overhaul push.

The first bill passed Thursday brings sweeping change to teacher labor and collective bargaining laws. It eliminates tenure for new teachers, includes parent feedback in teacher evaluations, and eliminates consideration of a teacher's seniority in layoff decisions. Schools would gain the ability to lay off teachers when enrollment drops, while collective bargaining would be limited only to salaries and benefits.

The other bill puts in place a plan to offer teachers financial bonuses based on their school's performance, and offers additional incentives for tackling hard-to-fill positions and assuming leadership duties.

Thursday's votes were key hurdles for the bills, which still face House votes.

"This is a great day for Idaho, and its children," Luna said in a written statement.

Former TFPD detective graduates drug court

Felony charges against Gambrel dismissed

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Curtis Gambrel counted himself among the addicts he used to put in jail. Then he left the College of Southern Idaho without a label that haunted him for one year: felon.

The retired Twin Falls Police Department detective attended Wednesday's 5th Judicial District Drug Court graduation not as a member of the law enforcement community, but as a graduate himself.

Gambrel pleaded guilty in November 2009 to two felony charges for obtaining the prescription painkillers that marred the end of his 22-year law enforcement career.

Those convictions were dismissed after Gambrel completed his 63-week drug court program.

Judge John Butler, who presides over the drug court, acknowledged that Gambrel, 46, was a former police investigator. But Gambrel made no mention of it during his brief remarks to the crowd at the College of Southern Idaho.

He came flanked by family and two bodyguards, sat quietly for his

Knieval delay blamed on 'red tape'

By Nick Coltraine
Times-News writer

To hear daredevil Robbie Knieval's spokesman Jeff Lowe tell it, jumping bureaucratic red tape is as difficult as jumping the Snake River Canyon.

Lowe said Knieval, son of the legendary Evel, is still eager to do what his father couldn't: Jump the canyon on a rocket-powered "skycycle." Knieval swept through town in May to pitch his idea for a repeat at the attempt 35 years later, but local officials said they didn't hear much after that.

Lowe attempted to fix that Thursday, after a Times-News article ran noting the silence, by calling Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce CEO Shawn Barigar "to check in," Barigar said. The chamber CEO said the conversation didn't bring much new information to the table: local officials still want a business plan, and Barigar's still willing to work on providing a liaison to help Knieval's crew navigate the various requirements for the proposal.

Such a jump would no longer be part of any Fourth of July celebration, Lowe said in an interview. Rather, Knieval would aim for a show closer to the anniversary of his dad's 1974 attempt, which would fall on Sept. 11 this year — of separate note, also the 10th anniversary of the 2001 terrorist attacks.

AT A GLANCE

Last we knew: Daredevil Robbie Knieval wants to jump the Snake River Canyon on a rocket-powered "skycycle," a feat his father attempted in 1974.

The latest: After a May visit, Knieval's camp went quiet. But his spokesman now says a jump could still happen, now on Sept. 11 this year.

What's next: Knieval's spokesman said he'll try to get a business plan to the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce in the next week. In turn, Knieval wants help from local agencies to navigate the bureaucracy of permits.

Jerome continues to ferret out source of sewer trouble

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

Jerome's city sewer system is almost back to normal, according to a city official.

But at the same time, rumors about what's clogged the system for two months have ramped up.

For most of this week, the cause of the problem has been attributed to a "mysterious fluid."

There's nothing mysterious about it, said Jerome City Administrator Ben Marchant. He said tests of the fluid indicated it was composed of calcium, proteins and fat: the components of milk products.

While the culprit is obviously a dairy processor, Marchant said, finding the exact source was a little more difficult.

"Only one processor is on the sewer line where we've identified the source," Marchant said. "But we can't jump to conclusions because someone could have poured milk down a manhole on the line."

Marchant said the city was trying different chemical baths to find which work to clean the membranes. The manufacturer's recommended bath was ineffective.

Permitting and coordinating the jump would require input from a range of city, county, state and federal authorities, as well as the owner of the jump site. In a lengthy comment left on the Times-News website Thursday, Lowe listed off 11 agencies Knieval will have to work with to satisfy all the permitting.

"We are so far from any decision points on this, from any organizations involved, be they public or private, because we still don't have a plan," Barigar said. "We weren't brought a plan. We were brought an idea."

Lowe said he'll get a business plan — one that includes what he and Knieval would like from local officials — to the chamber sometime in the next week. From there, he hopes for the liaison to help expedite the process and make sure all the permitting is done on the up-and-up.

"We want to do it, do it right, respect the property, and not damage anything," Lowe said. "But we can't do it without knowing what the costs are."

Lowe said he was worried his camp would still receive bills six months after a completed jump — he said some local officials in May pressed for Robbie Knieval to pay alleged debts owed by his father for the failed 1974 jump.

"We don't want a dime to put in Robbie's pocket (from local agencies)," Lowe said. "We'll get that from the TV sponsors. But we also don't want to go in there to pay for the infrastructure to put everything into place."

Barigar reinforced that the "ball is in (Knieval's) court" regarding any jump. He also said that an event's hosts making sure the infrastructure is in place is common practice.

"Certainly in the meeting we had with them when they were here, there was a lot of discussion with them that those who are putting on the jump, whoever that may be, incur the cost for putting that on," Barigar said. "These are not outrageous concepts. They happen with everything from parades and community activities to the event that Robbie wants to put on."

"We're trying to figure out if the problem is part of our system or part of their process because we were told the membranes could handle this," Marchant said. "But the problems we're finding are unique to us."

If Marchant can identify the source, the processor will be charged for the expense the city has incurred to clean the 20,000 filter membranes in its four sewage basins, he said. But if not, the city will have to absorb the cost.

The milk overwhelmed the sewer system on Dec. 30. The city has been working to unclog the filters for almost two months. In the meantime, liquid sewage overflowed holding ponds, sloshing into the North Side Canal Co.'s J Canal and eventually into the Snake River.

Ted Diehl, the canal company manager, said the city is still treating the canal water with chemicals, making it appear milky. But he was still concerned.

"They say everything is treated but they gotta prove it to us," Diehl said. "Hopefully we'll be able to meet with them next week."

The J Canal is the normal route for treated wastewater but a release of sewage required notification to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. EPA enforcement officer Dave Domingo said Marchant had responded to the EPA's inquiry this week but Domingo had not received related documentation as of Wednesday.

Another incorrect rumor is that the situation also affected Jerome's drinking water system. Marchant said all such claims are false.

Idaho winters? You have no idea

With the help of the Idaho State Historical Society, I've put together some accounts of how really cold it can get in Idaho this time of year:

"This has been the coldest spell Maladians ever experienced. Thermometers less than twelve feet long are absolutely worthless as indicators of the temperature. The water in wells 14 feet deep has been frozen solid. Coal oil is sold by the yard, beer by the foot, and the hottest kind of rot-gut whiskey by the stick. It is said that in St. John a

Idaho Statesman, Jan. 15, 1888:
"The unusual cold snap of the past two weeks has been very severe on jack rabbits, and we learn that hundreds of them have frozen and starved to death. After all, cold weather has its compensation."

Education

Eight Republican and seven Democratic senators voted against the legislation, including three from south-central Idaho: Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert; Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo; and Sen. Michelle Stennett, D-Ketchum.

Darrington, a former teacher, said Luna's focus on providing yearly performance-based bonuses neglects the long-lasting impact a teacher makes on a student, which can take years to see.

"That's down the road," he said on the Senate floor. "That's not measured at the time, and you can't measure that."

Sen. Michelle Stennett, D-Ketchum, raised concerns that eliminating tenure and reducing the scope of negotiations will marginalize educators.

"I'm really concerned with how mean-spirited this bill seems," she said.

The Idaho Education Association, which represents teacher unions, criticized the votes, saying the 20 senators who approved the bills' passage disregarded overwhelming opposition. Educators held solemn candlelight vigils Thursday evening across the state, including at nine Magic Valley sites stretching from Gooding to Burley.

"We're disappointed they passed, but thankful for the 15 senators who listened to their constituents," said Mike Wilkinson, president of the Twin Falls Education Association.

Asked about the legislation moving to the more conservative House, he said: "It's scary that it got past the Senate because we thought we did a good job communicating with them."

But supporters said the time is ripe for reform.

"If ever there was a time that education could be reformed, it's right now," said Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, in an interview.

He said that once the merit-based pay model is in place, teachers will grow to appreciate it.

"I think you'll see the good teachers rise to the top," he said. "Just like cream, they'll rise to the surface. They'll teach our kids in a very outstanding way"

Heider added: "I don't know how to put this gently, but I think it's time for the teachers union to be a thing of the past. So, I know that's not going to be a popular statement, but I think we'll grow to love this new education system and our kids will get a better education."

Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, said his vote of support came after getting much mixed feedback. But some reform opponents weren't fully informed, he said.

By contrast, superintendents and school board members were generally turn to talk, then gave a brief address to the crowd.

"I'll take what I learned and continue to share that with other people," he said, "Thank you and God bless."

After the ceremony Gambrel quickly left with his personal security detail, declining to speak to the Times-News.

Butler told those in attendance that he was concerned at first about the effect Gambrel could have on the rest of the drug court participants — if they would open up fully knowing that a policeman, even a former one, was in their midst. But Butler admitted Gambrel to the program and at the graduation boasted of the benefits.

"He provided a lot of leadership and support," Butler said.

Gambrel's career in law enforcement included a period in which he was a Drug Abuse Resistance Education, instructor. He taught D.A.R.E. classes to students from kindergarten through 12th grade to encourage them to stay off drugs before his 2007 retirement.

But he came under investigation for illegally using prescription painkillers during the final years of his career. He received them from nurse practitioner Jan Sund, who is now on felony probation for distributing the drugs.

Gambrel was accepted into the drug court program a month after he made a plea to receive treatment instead of probation or prison time.

It's unclear what Gambrel's future holds. The Idaho Peace Officer Standards and Training Council stripped him of his badge in February 2010.

Lawmaker wants bonds on lawsuits against megaloads

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho lawmaker has introduced legislation that would require huge bonds for anyone who sues to block oversized loads from moving on Idaho's highways.

Republican Rep. Dick Harwood of St. Maries introduced the bill Wednesday that would require anyone who files a lawsuit against a transportation project on state highways to post a bond equal to 5 percent of the value of the items being hauled.

That could be hundreds of thousands of dollars, which would be forfeited if the plaintiff loses the lawsuit. The bill would also authorize the court to award damages to the hauler based on losses due to delays because of a lawsuit.

"This has been brought because of the megaloads," Harwood told the House State Affairs Committee. "Any time an individual group can stop our commerce from flowing, it's not a good thing, and that's what happened."

ConocoPhillips is currently moving two of four megaloads from the Port of Lewiston in Idaho to a refinery in Billings, Mont., using U.S. Highway 12.

Under fire, BLM revises strategy for wild horses

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

After getting an earful from the public, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management is softening its policy on wild horses — going so far as to join forces with the Humane Society of the United States.

On Thursday, BLM Director Bob Abbey announced that he was stepping up reforms to his agency's Wild Horse and Burro Program while turning to other agencies and organizations for help.

The BLM has struggled in recent years to handle the explosive growth of wild horse herds on public lands.

The agency was similarly overwhelmed by more than 9,000 public comments since revealing a draft wild horse management strategy in June. It also received criticism for a contractor's handling of a herd roundup in northeastern Nevada last month, though a subsequent BLM review team cleared the contractor of wrongdoing.

"It's very clear that people are passionate about these animals," Abbey said. "We came to the conclusion that we need to move ahead with what's working in this program and away from what's not."

Abbey has asked the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a two-year review of the program and make recommendations in light of the latest scientific research.

In the meantime, Abbey said he was moving ahead with certain changes, including:

- Reducing the proposed number of horses permanently removed from the range annually by almost a quarter, to 7,600.
- Increasing horse adoptions from 3,000 this year to 4,000.
- Quadrupling the number of mares receiving fertility treatments to 2,000 annually.

"Our ultimate goal is to make various fertility control measures our primary means to maintain healthy populations," Abbey said. "We intend to work closely with the Humane Society of the United States to implement and monitor this expensive effort."

Few, if any, of these changes will affect the Saylor Creek herd, still corralled in Boise after being removed from its range southwest of Glenns Ferry that was ravaged by the Long Butte Fire. BLM spokeswoman Heather Tiel-Nelson said the condition of the range will determine how many horses are returned and when.

Tiel-Nelson said BLM employees heard the news when Abbey made his announcement, so she wasn't versed on many of the changes. But she said it was likely that more catch-and-release gathers would occur in the future to carry out fertility treatments.

Doro Lohmann, founder of Silent Voices Equine Rescue in Bellevue, was surprised to hear some of the changes, particularly the reduced number of removals.

"They've been claiming that it was so important to remove 10,000 and now they've backed off," Lohmann said. "They haven't gone into much detail on some other changes like volunteerism."

Abbey said the BLM would encourage volunteers to monitor herd rangeland and help with herd-related ecotourism. Lohmann's group wants volunteers to serve as cowboys during gathers rather than using helicopters.

Abbey insisted that the BLM will continue to use helicopters, but it may incorporate a training program used in Australia.

Police respond to I-84 crash, slideoffs

Times-News

A pair of Pocatello residents were injured Thursday morning when their Dodge pickup truck rolled over on Interstate 84.

Idaho State Police responded to an icy section of the interstate approximately three miles east of Hazelton, between mileposts 192 and 193, just before 8:30 a.m.

Terry Glenn, 57, and Pamela Glenn, 56, were taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, where they were in stable condition. Terry Glenn was behind the wheel and reportedly passing other motorists who had slowed down for icy conditions. He lost control of the pickup and went into the median, where the truck rolled.

Both Glenns were wearing their seat belts, and alcohol is not thought to be a factor in the crash, according to ISP.

Terry Glenn was cited for driving too fast for conditions.

Angel Hunsaker, a supervisor at the Southern Idaho

Regional Communications Center, said eight interstate crashes were reported to the dispatch center between 8:17 and 9:24 a.m. Thursday. Many of those were slideoffs resulting from the icy weather.

The National Weather Service's forecast for the weekend includes a winter weather advisory. Snow showers are expected today as temperatures drop below freezing, but the sun is expected to break through for Saturday and Sunday.

T.F. commissioners powerless to forgive Fort restitution

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls County Commission couldn't forgive the last $5,000 of restitution payments by Bob and Carol Fort if it wanted to, County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said Thursday.

Bob Fort, a former county clerk, was ordered by a judge in 2003 to pay about $85,000 in restitution for embezzling more than $60,000 from the county. The money was used to feed his gambling addiction.

He also served a year in prison after pleading guilty to the crime in 2003. He signed over more than $66,000 from his retirement fund to the county before serving his sentence.

Fort's wife, Carol Fort, asked the commission last week to forgive her husband's last year of payments. Now 71, she has been making the $350 monthly payments since her husband now can't hold down more than part-time work. But her worsening glaucoma, an eye disorder, is making it harder for her to do her job as a highway district clerk, she said.

Reached by phone Thursday and told of the commission's findings, she said she had no reaction.

Loebs said the proper process is for Bob Fort or his attorney to file a petition in 5th District Court. Carol Fort could not file the petition, though she could help her husband in doing so, Loebs said. The only role the county could have in the matter would be to say how it feels about the issue, if asked.

"It isn't in your power, if you voted unanimously today to forgive this debt, to do it anyway, because it is court-ordered," Loebs told commissioners. "I understand Mrs. Fort's interest, and I do have some sympathy for her situation. It's not really something you have any role in dealing with at this point."

The commissioners asked Loebs' office to draft a letter to Carol Fort with that information included.

"I think we all have sympathy for people in these kinds of situations," Commissioner Terry Kramer said after the meeting. "Mrs. Fort is elderly and her health is failing. But the restitution needs to be paid until the court says it doesn't."

Saudi man charged with plotting terrorist attack

George W. Bush’s home may have been a target

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A college student from Saudi Arabia who studied chemical engineering in Texas bought explosive chemicals online as part of a plan to hide bomb materials inside dolls and baby carriages to blow up dams, nuclear plants or the Dallas home of former President George W. Bush, the Justice Department said Thursday.

“After mastering the English language, learning how to build explosives and continuous planning to target the infidel Americans, it is time for jihad,” or holy war, Khalid Ali-M Aldawsari wrote in his private journal, according to court documents.

The 20-year-old Aldawsari wrote that he was planning an attack in the United States for years, even before coming to the U.S. on a scholarship. He said he was influenced by Osama bin Laden’s speeches and that he bemoaned the plight of Muslims.

One of the chemical companies,

Khalid Ali-M Aldawsari

Carolina Biological Supply of Burlington, N.C., reported a suspicious $435 order by Aldawsari to the FBI on Feb. 1.

Separately, Con-way Freight, the shipping company, notified Lubbock police and the FBI the same day with similar suspicions because it appeared the order wasn’t intended for commercial use. Within weeks, federal agents had traced his other online purchases, discovered extremist posts he made on the Internet and secretly searched his off-campus apartment, computer and e-mail accounts and read his diary, according to court records.

MAN WHO TRIED TO JOIN TERRORISTS SENTENCED

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A college dropout and Muslim convert who threatened the creators of the “South Park” cartoon series and then tried to join an al-Qaida-linked terror group in Somalia was sentenced Thursday to 25 years in prison.

Zachary A. Chesser, 21, of Bristow, Va., pleaded guilty last year to supporting the al-Shabab terrorist group in Somalia and posting online threats against the “South Park” creators for an episode that he perceived as insulting to the prophet Muhammad.

The 25-year sentence was halfway between the 20-year term sought by the defense and the 30-year maximum sentence sought by prosecutors. Chesser achieved notoriety on the Internet under the name Abu Talhah Al-Amrikee when he warned the creators of “South Park” that they risked death for mocking Islam. His online propaganda included urgings to leave suspicious packages in public to desensitize authorities to a real bomb threat and instructions on raising children who would grow up to be al-Qaida members.

Aldawsari was suspected of trying to make, has approximately the same destructive power as TNT. FBI bomb experts said the amounts in the Aldawsari case would have yielded almost 15 pounds of explosive. That’s about the same amount used per bomb in the London subway attacks that killed scores of people in July 2005.

Aldawsari, who was legally in the U.S. on a student visa, is expected to appear in federal court today. He was charged Thursday with attempted use of a weapon of mass destruction.

Aldawsari entered the U.S. in October 2008 from Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, to study chemical engineering at Texas Tech University. He transferred this year to nearby South Plains College, where he was studying business. A Saudi industrial company, which was not identified in court documents, was paying his tuition and living expenses in the U.S.

“He was quiet. I thought he was a good guy,” said Ahmid Obaidan, a senior at Tennessee State University who also is from Saudi Arabia and met Aldawsari in Nashville, Tenn., when Aldawsari was studying at an English language center at Vanderbilt University.

It was not immediately clear whether Aldawsari had hired a lawyer. Telephone numbers that Aldawsari had provided to others were not working Thursday. No one answered the buzzer or a knock on the door at the address listed as Aldawsari’s apartment, just one block from the Texas Tech campus in a recently gentrified area of mixed-use retail and apartment complexes where many students live.

The terrorism case outlined in court documents was significant because it suggests that radicalized foreigners can live quietly in the U.S. without raising suspicions from neighbors, classmates, teachers or others. But it also showed how quickly U.S. law enforcement can move when tipped that a terrorist plot may be unfolding.

“This violence must stop.”
— President Barack Obama, condemning the violence in Libya

EDITORIAL

Enough demonizing of Idahoans who join a union

In Idaho over the past 30 years, there’s been no more consistent skeptic of excesses by organized labor than the editorial page of this newspaper.

But the current round of union-bashing in this state has gotten out of hand — from Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s complaints of “union thuggery” and Idaho Falls businessman Frank VanSloot’s full-page newspaper adds vilifying the Idaho Education Association as run by bosses who put their selfish agenda ahead of the good of kids.

Our view: Idaho’s GOP has gone to war against the wrong workers. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

“Unions are not known for creating quality, efficiency, or a strong work ethic,” VanderSloot wrote in ads published in Idaho’s daily papers. “To the contrary, their goal is to make a safe haven for even the lowest performer. They understand there is power in numbers. Mediocrity is the standard. In most union shops, if an employee decides to give an above average effort or superior performance, they are asked to tone it down a bit.”

That’s over the top, and VanderSloot knows it.

The willful organized labor operatives that VanderSloot and legislative Republicans rail against don’t live in Idaho. Union workers here are personally and often socially conservative.

And unlike in Wisconsin — where public employee unions and Republican Gov. Scott Walker are locked in a death-match — they’re not massively concentrated in the public sector and driving state spending.

Meanwhile in the Statehouse, Republicans have been making hay at the expense of the 42,000 Idaho workers who belong to unions. This week the House of Representatives passed two Senate-approved bills aimed at undermining organized labor influence in Idaho, sending the measures to Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter for signing into law.

The first prohibits “project labor agreements” requiring contractors to forge pacts with unions as a condition of winning government construction jobs. The second forbids unions from using their membership dues to subsidize wages to help contractors with union workers win projects.

Idaho is already a right-to-work state, where workers haven’t been required to join unions as a condition of getting a job since 1985.

But GOP lawmakers say the new legislation helps solidify that philosophical approach to the workplace. That’s nonsense.

It’s an artlessly disguised effort to poke the big national labor unions that support President Obama and Democrats in Congress.

The Lewiston Tribune put it this way in a recent editorial:

“...if union workers have such a ‘devastating impact’ on the ‘industries they serve,’ how does VanderSloot explain (Lewiston-based) Clearwater Paper’s success? Two years ago, its stock was trading at $12 a share. Today, it’s almost $80 a share.”

In arguing against the wage subsidy ban in the House this week, state Rep. Lynn Luker of Boise, one of the few Republicans to oppose it, put it this way:

“I think (this bill) goes too far,” he said. “I think this is more than a bill about business vs. labor, I think it’s a bill about freedom.”

Last we checked, an Idahoan had just as much right to join a union as not to join one.

From Oklahoma to Tobruk

Watching Muammar al-Gaddafi do his Caligula thing in the ruins of the Great Socialist People’s Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, and reading about his son’s St. Barts fests with Beyonce, I confess that disgust yielded to nausea: enough is enough.

There are as many versions of current events in Libya as there are transliterations of the colonel’s name but it’s already clear this is the Ceausescu chapter of the Arab spring. Qaddafi’s killing is not yet on the scale of Assad’s Hama massacre of 1982 or Saddam’s slaughter of the Shiites in 1991, but it’s up there.

Roger Cohen

There are moments when the argument for capital punishment becomes persuasive to me. This is one.

I don’t know what the nascent Benghazi-Tobruk Libyan Republic with its new-old flag stands for, apart from ending Gaddafi’s 42-year rule, and I’m not sure anyone does. I do know Arabs have had it with despots who treat their nations as personal fiefdoms and oil revenue as pocket money for their dynasties. This is about enfranchisement. It’s not about Islam, or pan-Arabism, or Socialism. It’s about acquiring rights grounded in institutions and law.

Gaddafi’s Libya is a creepy place. I was there once for a couple of days and it left a lasting impression of spookiness. I went out to the desert to see the colonel in his dun-colored caravanserai. There were camel motifs; sand got in everyone’s eyes. I never saw him. Mercurial used to be the operative adjective. Murderous works better now.

I’ve been thinking about that trip and also about the last time I saw Libyans in exile, in a mosque in Oklahoma City where local Muslims had gathered for Friday prayers.

This was late last year after Oklahoma, in the grips of a strange wave of Islamophobia orchestrated by prominent Republicans, had approved a “Save our State” amendment banning Shariah law. Its supporters told me the amendment was a “pre-emptive strike” against Muslim takeover.

Imad Enchassi, the imam of the mosque, was talking to his congregation about these troubles and said this: “Many of you may have been harassed or threatened at work. I don’t expect you to love those that hate but understand one thing: Many of you came to America from states of oppression. Here we can sue the government. In the countries where you come from, if you sue the government you disappear.”

Or you get shot by hired mercenaries before you ever get to your lawyer.

One Oklahoma Muslim, Muneer Awad, 27, did just that. He sued the state of Oklahoma over the Shariah ban and secured a preliminary federal injunction blocking the amendment.

Awad, an attorney, is a Palestinian-American; his parents came to the United States from the West Bank.

His father started with a small store. He acquired real estate and gave his children good educations.

That’s the way the American Dream is supposed to work. Often, these days, it’s no more than a mirage. But Awad’s story is a reminder that America is still a reinvention machine.

Enchassi, the imam, had invited the local head of the FBI, special agent James Finch, to speak. He stood in front of the congregation and declared: “I’ve come here today to tell you that the FBI stands ready to investigate any violation of the civil rights of our citizens in the state of Oklahoma, irrespective of ethnicity, religion or sexual orientation. We are very aggressive in prosecuting civil rights violations, hate crimes, including religious discrimination and defacement or damage to any religious property. All persons in the United States have the freedom to practice their religions without fear of violent acts. If you are threatened in any way, call the FBI.”

There was an approving murmur through the mosque. As I watched this scene — a black cop telling Muslim Americans about their civil rights and what the FBI and the attorney general would do to enforce them — I could only think of the long journey traveled by the United States from its “original sin” of slavery, through the civil war and Jim Crow, on through the long civil rights campaign and the King assassination, to the once unthinkable thing: the election of an African American to the nation’s highest office.

It takes a long time to establish that all men really are created equal; and that “certain unalienable rights” belong to all citizens rather than to all citizens except those of a certain color. Even then bigotry rears its head — as it had in Oklahoma.

Finch, flanked by Sandy Coats, a U.S. attorney for Oklahoma, finished with these words: “I love this country and have to uphold its laws. The buck stops with me. I am the face of the FBI. Hold me accountable if something is not investigated because I am passionate about ensuring people’s rights are upheld.”

The Arab world has embarked on a very long road to enfranchisement. It will be tempestuous but the direction taken is irreversible.

Government puts a price on our heads

Back in the American Wild West, federal and state governments often put a price on the heads of infamous outlaws like Billy the Kid, Jesse James, Sam Bass, Belle Star and Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid.

Today, our government is not so selective. It’s seeking to put a price on the head of every American. Not because they’ve robbed a train, but for a different reason that could lead to a very bad end.

Various government agencies have come up with formulas for determining how much we are worth. The Environmental Protection Agency has set the value of a human life at $9.1 million. It reached this determination while proposing tighter restrictions on air pollution. During the Bush administration, EPA calculated our value at $6.8 million. Was the difference in price caused by inflation? The EPA didn’t say.

The Food and Drug Administration arrived at its own figure for the value of an American life. It says each life is worth $7.9 million.

Cal Thomas

That, too, is an increase from the $5 million value FDA had assigned each human American life in 2008. The agency calculated our value while proposing new and tougher warning labels on cigarettes that include pictures of cancer victims.

The Transportation Department — yes, Transportation — put our worth at $6 million while seeking to justify recent decisions to impose regulations the Bush administration had rejected as too costly, such as stronger roofs on cars.

It’s nice to know that our government values its citizens beyond what it can extract in taxes. But given the Obama administration’s likely pursuit of health care rationing (Dr. Donald Berwick, a wealth redistributionist who heads the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, is a proponent of rationed care) it is easy to forecast where this could lead should human life be regarded as having only that value placed upon it by government, or an agent of the state.

The beauty of our form of government is that it begins, not with government, but with us: “We the People.” In our Declaration of Independence from Britain, there is a clause that sets us apart from virtually all other nations. Instead of receiving our basic rights, such as the right to life, from a king or despot — as was the case in older cultures and too many modern ones — America’s Founders saw basic rights emanating from “our Creator” and thus, outside the reach of government and bureaucratic tampering.

Where could a formula for a governmental valuation of human life lead? If government gets to determine our worth, it could lead to government determining when in its judgment we are worthless. It could lead to government deciding that when we are costing the state more than we are paying in taxes, we might be seen as a bottle, package or can, whose “sell by” date has expired. And that would mean the government could regard us as disposable and allow — or force us — to “expire.”

Too extreme? “It couldn’t happen here,” you say? All great horrors begin at the extremes and work their way into the mainstream because of moral weakness or exhaustion, or self-regard, or the rejection of (or ambivalence about) certain fundamental truths. Such neglectfulness paves the way for the great inhumanities, which today are studied in schools. They wonder, “how it could have happened” and “why didn’t anyone see this coming?”

How and why, indeed? Consider yourself warned.

Under Luna's plan, teachers won't be there to fill the gap

Luna's plan creates "only the best" survive in Idaho's new educational environment Luna's plan: Short version: Here is a computer, here is the textbook — learn.

What is missing is the stimulus to process, engage discussion on how the material impacted today and how it could impact tomorrow. Where is the exchange between the educator and the many students who learn from each other through shared dialogue? How can we prepare our next generation of leaders when there is no opportunity to share from the wisdom of our teachers?

Even more importantly, the Luna plan completely ignores the many students who need extra attention to learn not to mention the developmentally disabled students who are struggling in the mainstream education system. What happens to all these students? They grow frustrated, lack independent focus as high school students, lack parental involvement with many broken families and without a teacher to fill the many "gaps" our high school students face — absolute recipe for failure.

I am very hopeful that Luna will hear the residents, parents, grandparents and educators — who are screaming — this is not how education looks as we move our students to be the informed, energized, thoughtful leaders of tomorrow. And as a proud lifelong Idahoan, I am also volunteering my time (which is precious to all of us in today's busy world) to join with the other progressive thinkers to carve out a true, meaningful future for our students. Ready to volunteer to take this in a different direction to ensure the future of our talented students and teachers who commit their lives to our children. Listen to the proud Idahoans and let us help

Work together instead of cutting benefits

Some of us do have good ideas. In the name of saving money our elected officials are going to be voting on large cuts to Medicaid/Medicare benefits to the adult population of the state of Idaho. The cuts would negatively impact a large portion of our population with everything from an increase in crime from unmediated individuals to an increase in unemployment benefits to the thousands of mental health professionals who would lose their jobs. If saving money is the goal our elected officials are looking in the wrong places. I would like to suggest a few places our lawmakers could save money and save needed programs as well:

- Sell the computers that generate your responses and start talking to the people.
- Start doing random drug tests to all Medicaid/Medicare recipients and cut the benefits to all who are using illicit drugs and/or abusing alcohol. The cost of the tests would by far be offset by the savings of benefits paid to those who are only trading their "benefits" to obtain more drugs and alcohol.
- Stop spending millions on Statehouse "improvements" like underground tunnels that keep you safe and away from citizens and start talking to the people.
- Stop listening to out-of-state interests and spending millions on their environmental impact studies that effect nothing but out of state interests. And start listening to the people of Idaho.
- The state of Idaho does not waste its time investigating Medicaid/Medicare fraud of less than $3,000, leaving the criminals to bounce from employer to employer to reoffend with little or no consequences. The employer is expected to pay back the amount stolen and then file a civil suit to try to recoup their losses. By this time the criminal has often moved on. When a call is place to the state of Idaho to report these criminal the state could start listening to the people of Idaho. The prosecution of these criminals at an earlier stage in their game could save millions

I am sure that if our elected officials would start listening to the people of Idaho. We could work together to solve the problems of this great state without cutting benefits to those who really need it and be an example for the rest of the nation to follow.

'Students Come First' is the right way to go

I read with a mixture of sadness and incredulity about Superintendent Tom Luna's truck being vandalized. Having played a very small part in public education reform by founding a public charter school, I know what it is like to be the recipient of that kind of anger. I admire the superintendent's fortitude. I personally support the entire "Students Come First" plan. If nothing else survived from Superintendent Luna's plan, the ending of tenure and the addition of merit pay would be a great start.

All of the teachers that came to my charter school gave up their tenure voluntarily. Some of our teachers came out of a desire to improve the overall public education system by joining the "reformers" at a charter school. Not all have been totally satisfied, and just like the rest of us do when we are discontented, they found another job.

I believe parents and interested citizens owe it to our state superintendent to read his proposal at www.sde.idaho.gov. The highlights section of "Students Come First" at the website says that "by spending what we have currently differently, Idaho will: Have one to one computer ratio in high school, give teachers classroom tools, provide teacher training, cover one-time money and restore maintenance funding, fully restore the salary grid, raise minimum teacher pay, implement pay-for-performance, and fund dual credit."

In exchange, public schools will receive cuts in the amount they receive per classroom, which will likely cause an increase in students per classroom. How to handle that cut is still in the hands of the local district. With the economy in a downturn, I believe the increased technology and increased teacher pay will help make the inevitable cuts more palatable.

I second Gov. Otter's request to all to "disagree without being disagreeable?"

Center would benefit from kitchen rental

How fortuitous was Ms. Hansen's article "Commercial kitchens offer opportunity to home cooks?"

Just three days prior I had begun to put feelers out among our area farmers market vendor community regarding the use of our kitchen at the Twin Falls Senior Center. Off-hours rental of our kitchen would be very amenable to most people, and profits from that endeavor would assist us in our mission to feed the homebound and enhance the lives of our area's seniors.

The scourge of Somalia

Jean and Scott Adam of Marina del Rey, Calif., lived a life many would envy, until it was cut short Tuesday by a band of Somali pirates. On their yacht, Quest, they had spent most of the last decade sailing to exotic locales and were on a trip from Thailand to the Mediterranean with another couple, Phyllis Macay and Robert Riggle of Seattle, when their boat was intercepted off the coast of Oman. All four were shot to death Tuesday by their captors after negotiations with U.S. naval officials for their release apparently broke down.

Pirates plying the seas off Somalia have been a scourge of international shipping for years, but this week's slayings mark the deadliest incident yet involving Americans. In response, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton called on foreign governments to contribute more toward the African Union peacekeeping force in Somalia.

Solutions to that country's piracy and governance problems are elusive, but the peacekeeping effort backed by Clinton isn't working, and U.S. policy toward Somalia could stand another look.

Tempting as it is to call for more naval involvement, it's clear that a purely military approach won't cut it. To avoid the U.S. 5th Fleet and other international warships plying the waters near Somalia, pirates are simply ranging farther afield; the seas between Somalia and India are too vast to be effectively patrolled. Meanwhile, every effort by the United States to intervene in Somali affairs since 1993, when the Clinton administration's attempts to subdue Mogadishu's warlords ended in the catastrophe chronicled in the film "Black Hawk Down," has backfired spectacularly.

The latest failed initiative is the so-called Transitional Federal Government, a United Nations fiction that controls a few square blocks in Mogadishu. The United States has invested millions of dollars arming a peacekeeping force to protect the TFG, which has little public support and is widely viewed by Somalis as an invading foreign force. Bronwyn E. Bruton, an Africa scholar with the Council on Foreign Relations, argues convincingly that the TFG is not only failing to spread democracy and the rule of law, it is actually strengthening radical Islamist movements by prompting quarrelsome extremist groups to unite against a common enemy.

Bronwyn's proposed solution is "constructive disengagement," in which the U.S. stops backing a failed U.N. experiment and vows to engage with any government that emerges, including an Islamist one, as long as it renounces international terrorism and agrees not to interfere with humanitarian relief workers.

A government with a measure of legitimacy is far likelier to stabilize Somalia than the current puppet regime, even if it's not as secular as we'd like.

Protesters demonstrate against a proposed spending bill at the State Capitol in Madison, Wis., on Thursday.

Troopers sent to homes of some Wis. Democrats

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press writer

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin state troopers were dispatched Thursday to the doorsteps of some of the AVOL Democratic senators in hopes of finding at least one who would come back to allow a vote on a measure to curb the power of public-employee unions.

The stepped-up tactic ordered by the Republican head of the Senate came amid reports that at least a few of the missing senators were returning home at night to pick up clothes, food and other necessities, before rejoining their colleagues in Illinois.

Meanwhile, the state Assembly appeared close to voting on the bill after more than two days of filibustering.

Democrats agreed before dawn Thursday to limit the remaining number of amendments they offer and the time they devote to each one. More than 12 hours after the agreement was announced, Republicans voted to cut off discussion on all amendments. Democrats planned to spend several more hours railing against the measure that Gov. Scott Walker insists is necessary to ease the state's budget woes and avoid mass layoffs.

Democrats urged Republicans to accept a compromise that would keep collective bargaining intact.

"We all know there is an impasse. There is one person who can end this impasse and that is Gov. Walker," said Democratic Assembly Leader Peter Barca as debate reached its 53rd hour. "This state has never been more divided in the last 25 years. ... It's the governor's job to unify the state."

But Republicans summarily rejected every Democratic amendment in the marathon session, which unfolded as grand political theater. Exhausted lawmakers limped around the chamber, rubbing their eyes and yawning as Wednesday dragged into Thursday.

Around midnight, Rep. Dean Kaufert, a Republican from Neenah, accused Democrats of putting on a show for the protesters. Democrats leaped up and started shouting.

"I'm sorry if democracy is a little inconvenient, and you had to stay up two nights in a row," Pocan said. "Is this inconvenient? Hell, yeah, it's inconvenient! But we're going to be heard!"

Democrats, who are in the minority, don't have the votes to stop the bill once the vote occurs.

But even after the bill passes the Assembly, it cannot become law until it also passes the Senate, where action has been stymied by the Democrats' absence. At least one of them needs to be there in order for Republicans to take up the bill since the GOP is one seat short of having a quorum.

The Senate convened at 7 a.m. Thursday just long enough to take a roll call, which allows for the sergeant at arms staff to go to missing lawmakers' homes with police.

Troopers went to multiple homes but left after finding no one home, said Sergeant at Arms Ted Blazel.

Wisconsin law does not allow police to arrest the lawmakers, but Republican Senate Majority Leader Scott Fitzgerald said he hoped the show of authority would pressure them to return. He would not say how many Democrats were being targeted, but said it was more than one.

"Every night we hear about some that are coming back home," Fitzgerald said. Whether to send police out again is a day-by-day decision, he said.

Democratic Sen. Jon Erpenbach, who was in the Chicago area, said all 14 senators remained outside of Wisconsin and would not return until Walker was willing to compromise.

Some Republicans soften tough talk on unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a wary eye on Wisconsin, Republican leaders in several states are toning down the tough talk against public employee unions and, in some cases, abandoning anti-union measures altogether.

Indiana's governor urged GOP lawmakers to give up on a "right to work" bill for fear the backlash could derail the rest of his agenda. In Ohio, senators plan to soften a bill that would have banned all collective bargaining by state workers. And in Michigan, the Republican governor says he'd rather negotiate with public employees than pick a fight.

That's hardly enough to set labor leaders celebrating. They still face a slew of measures in dozens of states that seek to curb union rights. But union officials say they believe the sustained protests in Wisconsin, Ohio and other states are making an impact.

"It's still too early to tell, but I think the reaction that we're seeing from governors in other states really shows the power of workers standing together," said Naomi Walker, director of state government relations at the AFL-CIO. The fight over labor rights that has spread across the country reached a boiling point in Wisconsin after Gov. Scott Walker proposed a bill that would end virtually all collective bargaining rights for state workers.

Judge says WikiLeaks' Assange can be extradited

LONDON (AP) — Julian Assange can be extradited to Sweden in a sex crimes inquiry, a British judge ruled Thursday, rejecting claims by the WikiLeaks founder that he would not face a fair trial there. Assange's lawyer said he would appeal.

Judge Howard Riddle said the allegations of rape and sexual molestation by two women against Assange meet the definition of extraditable offenses and said the Swedish warrant had been properly issued and was valid.

Assange, 39, a key figure in the release of tens of thousands of secret U.S. government and military documents, has been out on bail during the extradition fight. He has seven days to appeal the ruling in British courts.

After hearing three days of testimony this month, Riddle concluded "there is simply no reason to believe there has been a mistake" about the European Arrest Warrant issued by Swedish authorities.

Restricted access to loans causes concern for SBA loan program

By Sharon Bernstein
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Months after Congress authorized a new loan program to help companies at risk of foreclosure, the Small Business Administration says it’s ready to get started.

But the agency has restricted access to the loans so significantly that many businesses in danger of losing factories, offices or stores won’t qualify. Excluded are any firms that already have real estate loans backed by the SBA, along with many that refinanced at unfavorable rates during the worst of the credit crunch.

“This is not good for small business. It’s awful. I don’t think they’re meeting what was the intention of the bill.”

Under the rules announced last week, businesses facing balloon payments on buildings in which their businesses are housed will be allowed to refinance with loans guaranteed by the federal government, even if those buildings are no longer worth the full amount of the mortgage.

But the loans will be available only to those companies whose mortgages are coming due over the next 24 months. And the program will cover properties that are worth less than what’s owed on their mortgages, or underwater, only if the owner puts up 10 percent of the loan amount in cash or has equity in another property. Additional collateral, such as equity in the family home, would also be required in many cases.

The agency also plans to charge businesses fees for the loans. According to the regulations released last week, borrowers will have to pay 1.043 percent annually in addition to interest charged by their lenders.

For a $1 million loan, that amounts to about $870 a month.

The SBA has also, for now, abandoned a provision in the law passed last year that would allow companies to use the loans to help pay business expenses in certain circumstances.

Congress authorized the program in September with the passage of the Small Business Jobs Act, but it could not go into effect until the SBA came up with rules and regulations to govern the loans.

Businesses can begin applying for the loans Feb. 28. Elizabeth Echols, who directs the SBA’s western region, said the restrictions were added to make sure that businesses facing immediate balloon payments on their mortgages would get help first — before the $15 billion authorized by Congress gets used up.

Once those businesses get through the system, she said, the agency might open up the process to additional firms.

“We are really focused on

MAKING A U-TURN

GM posts 1st full-year profit since 2004

By Tom Krisher
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — In a remarkable financial U-turn, once-bankrupt General Motors is tantalizingly close to reclaiming its title as the world’s No. 1 automaker.

The automaker’s profit for 2010 was impressive, especially considering where it has been.

David Garcia, General Manager of the Rob Green Auto Group in Twin Falls said sales have been on the uptick for several months.

“I think people are more confident in GM-manufactured vehicles,” said Garcia. “It helped that GM dropped several brands to focus on producing better quality vehicles for the Buick, GMC,

Details of General Motor’s comeback

The Associated Press

THE RESULTS: General Motors has reported net income of $4.7 billion, or $2.89 per share, for 2010, its first annual profit since 2004. Revenue for the year totaled $135.6 billion. For the fourth quarter, GM reported net income of $510 million, or 31 cents per share on revenue of $36.9 billion. Before charges, the company earned 52 cents, beating Wall Street’s expectations of 49 cents per share on revenue of $34.3 billion.

SALES: Profits were fueled by sales in the U.S. and China, the world’s largest market for car and trucks.

WHAT’S AHEAD: GM executives see sales continuing to rise, especially in North America. With a good performance this year, the company could even reclaim the title of world’s largest automaker from Toyota, and the U.S. government could recover more of the $49.5 billion it gave the company in 2009 to save it from collapse. But GM also faces some bumps in the road: Gas prices are rising, GM is short of new models, and its European operations are still losing money.

Garcia didn’t have sales Thursday he said January was his best sales month in five years.

“It was getting discouraging after a couple of really down years,” Garcia said.

Garcia expects sales to continue improving.

“GM has really turned around and those changes are starting to pay off,” Garcia said.

The company lost more than $80 billion in the five years before its bankruptcy and needed a government bailout to survive.

The U.S. government has been repaid $23 billion of what it spent to rescue GM. It still owns 500 million shares of GM common stock and would have to sell it for roughly $53 per share to get

For NFL Monopoly, the sure-fire way to lose is not to play

Don’t get too worked up over those talks between the NFL owners and players and the threat of a locked-out season. The National Football League is one of the most successful monopolies in history, on a par with OPEC in oil and DeBeers in diamonds.

The various participants in the football cartel — and in that, I include the players — now seem to have some disagreements over how their monopoly profits are to be divided. My guess, however, is that none is stupid enough to jeopardize $9 billion in annual income over a percentage point or two.

The secret to the NFL’s success is its ability to maintain the legal structure of 32 supposedly independent teams while operating with most of the advantages of a single business entity. As with many successful monopolists, its focus has been on expanding its market without having to lower its prices. In a very disciplined way, it has added teams, extended the length of the season and increased the number of nationally televised games each week of the season. It has been so skillful in playing one city off another that it squeezed taxpayers for $500 million a year in stadium subsidies for many years. And it has so cleverly structured the sale of television rights that networks routinely wind up overbidding, allowing the league to capture virtually the full value of its monopoly.

Equally impressive is the way the NFL has avoided unproductive competition among members of its cartel. This includes an agreement in which 80 percent of league and team revenue is pooled and shared equally among the 32 franchises. It also includes a salary cap and salary floor for all teams, along with some limits on

Elko room tax up 53 percent December; pipeline helps

ELKO, Nev. — Work on a pipeline project in northeast Nevada combined with steady activity at area gold mines is translating into a big boost in room tax collections for the Elko Convention and Visitors Authority.

ECVA Comptroller Delynn Jones says room tax revenue was up nearly 53 percent in December compared to the same month a year ago. For the six-month period from July through December, she says collections were about 29 percent higher than for the same stretch in 2009.

Authority officials say motel rooms are being filled up by miners as well as workers and vendor reps at El Paso Corp.’s Ruby Pipeline Project. The 680-mile pipeline under construction from Oregon to Wyoming runs through northern Elko County.

Boise company announces voluntary stroller recall

B.O.B. Trailers Inc., of Boise, Idaho is recalling about 337,000 single and double strollers in the United States and about 20,000 in Canada.

The recall was in response to the firm receiving one report of an 11-month-old who got entangled in a drawing cord at her neck. She was freed by her mother.

The drawstring poses a strangulation hazard.

The recall involves a number of models of single and double strollers, which were sold at REI and other stores nationwide and on the Web at Babiesrus.com, Target.com and Amazon.com between April 2002 and February 2011.

The strollers are also sold at 9 Months Later in Twin Falls.

Owner Conni Walker said the store, “only has a few effected models,” remaining in stock.

Walker said since the recall is voluntary the store would still sell the remaining stroller in stock but would warn customers of the possible danger.

“It’s really an anomaly and the drawstring don’t pose a serious risk. However, we are very involved and concerned about child safety and wouldn’t sell the strollers without notifying customers about the recall,” Walker said.

Walker said newer models of B.O.B. strollers don’t have the drawstring.

The manufacturer is urging consumer to stop using the recalled strollers and remove the drawstring.

More information can be found at the company’s website: www.bobcanopy.com.

free agency, which ensure that all clubs can retain “franchise players” and field a competitive team. Even the players are incentivized to focus on “growing the pie,” with a unique collective-bargaining agreement that guarantees them 60 percent of all revenue beyond the first $1 billion.

“Socialism with cheerleaders,” is how the Chicago Tribune once described it.

During the recent recession, however, the NFL has hit something of a wall, as revenue growth has slowed, profits have declined and some of the air has come out of inflated team values.

Financially pressed cities and states are no longer willing to subsidize new stadiums or stadium upgrades.

A number of teams have encountered price resistance from ticket holders, particularly season ticket holders, whose overall number is declining.

Perverse competition has developed around the signing of draft picks, resulting in pay for untested rookies that exceeds that of star veterans.

Meanwhile, some of the more aggressive and innovative owners, who have found ways to increase their teams’ revenue, are starting to resent how much of that revenue they are forced to share with other teams.

It is against that backdrop that the current contract negotiations are playing out.

To justify future increases in ticket prices and television rights, the owners want to extend the regular season by converting two preseason outings into games that count. The players moan and groan about the additional injuries that might result but, in the end, will allow themselves to be bought off with more money for post-retirement medical care. Nor will they offer much resistance to a proposal to cap rookie salaries, which would benefit lower draft picks and veterans near the bottom of the pay scale.

The real bargaining will come over the owners’ demand to reduce the share of revenue going to players under the existing contract.

The owners cite the need to stem the recent decline in profits and to provide funds necessary for stadium construction and upgrades.

On the former, the owners are likely to find little sympathy, either from the public or the players. The recession is ending. Tough it out.

GM profits

all its money back.

It emerged in the summer of 2009 cleansed of huge debt and costly labor contracts, returned to the stock market in November, and managed to make money even with auto sales near historic lows.

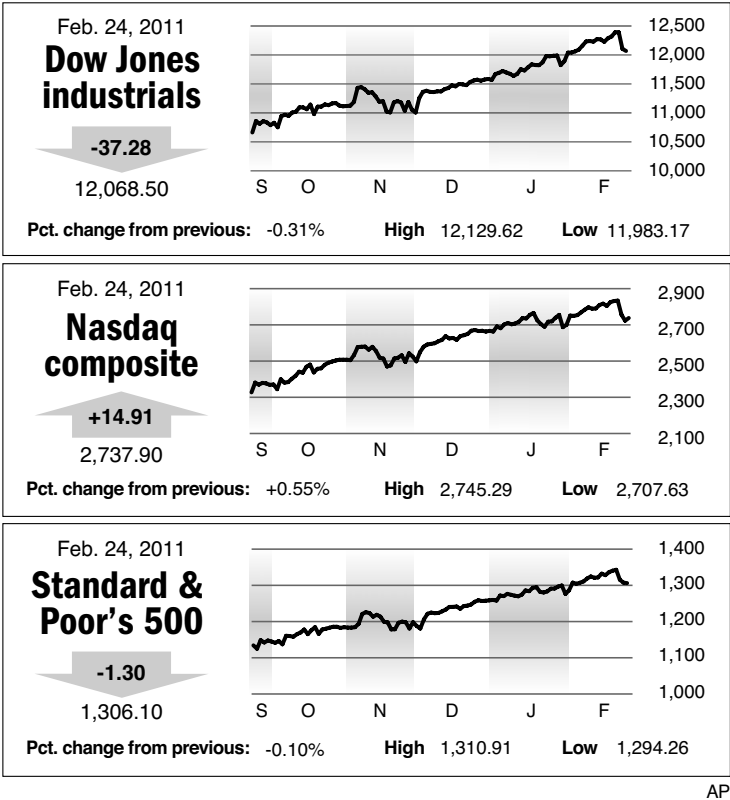

“I’m not sure anyone would have predicted a year ago that GM will deliver net income of $4.7 billion,” Chairman and CEO Dan Akerson said Thursday.

The annual profit gave GM its best year since 1999, when it made $6 billion at the height of the pickup truck and sport utility vehicle boom.

GM sold 8.39 million cars and trucks worldwide in 2010, coming within 30,000 vehicles of unseating Toyota, which has been wounded by a string of safety recalls.

Boeing a ‘clear winner’ in contest for tanker contract for the Air Force

By Julie Johnsson
Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO – One of the longest-running defense contracting sagas may finally have come to an end Thursday, when the Pentagon awarded Boeing Co. a $35 billion contract to build airborne tankers for the U.S. Air Force.

The news was considered an upset win for Chicago-based Boeing, which manufactured the half-century-old fleet of aerial gas stations used by the U.S. military. It had won an earlier version of the contest, only to be stripped of the reward amid an ethics scandal that ended with jail terms for Boeing executives.

Despite the controversy, and the widespread prediction of a victory for European-based European Aeronautic Defence & Space Co., the contest wasn’t a photo finish, Defense Department officials said.

“Boeing was a clear winner,” Ashton Carter, the Pentagon’s chief procurement official, told reporters.

Boeing 767 worker, Dale Flinn, left, jokingly wipes the forehead of co-worker David Mellenbach, as they both react to the news that the U.S. Air Force had awarded a $35 billion contract to build the next generation of air refueling planes to Chicago-based Boeing Co., Thursday.

But analysts expected widespread political repercussions in Europe and charges of U.S. protectionism after Boeing’s bid based on the smaller, older Boeing 767 defeated the Airbus A330, which had been considered the heavy favorite to win one of the largest defense contracts ever.

“I’m so pleased I was wrong,” said defense analyst Loren Thompson, who had predicted that European contractor EADS would win after its plane scored higher than the Boeing offer in warfighting effectiveness, one of the criteria studied by the Pentagon.

Both tanker bids, based on the Boeing 767 and Airbus A330, are far superior to the 400-strong Eisenhower-era tankers flown by the U.S. Air Force. Both jets had to satisfy 372 mandatory performance requirements set by the Pentagon just to qualify for the final round of the competition.

But Boeing’s smaller plane had far lower operating costs. Boeing calculated that its tanker would save taxpayers $36 billion in life-cycle costs, a difference that could pay for an additional fleet of 179 tankers.

“The Airbus plane is so big that it burned over a ton more fuel per flight hour

Many government services would remain after a 'shutdown'

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Social Security checks would still go out. Troops would remain at their posts. Furloughed federal workers probably would get paid, though not until later. And virtually every essential government agency, like the FBI, the Border Patrol and the Coast Guard, would remain open.

That's the little-known truth about a government shutdown. The government doesn't shut down.

And it won't on March 5, even if the combatants on Capitol Hill can't resolve enough differences to pass a stopgap spending bill to fund the government while they hash out legislation to cover the last seven months of the budget year.

Fewer than half of the 2.1 million federal workers subject to a shutdown would be forced off the job if the Obama administration followed the path taken by presidents Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton. And that's not counting 600,000 Postal Service employees or 1.6 million uniformed military personnel exempt from a shutdown.

So we're talking fewer than one in four federal workers staying at home. Many federal workers get paid on March 4, so it would take a two-week shutdown for them to see a delay in their paychecks.

The rules for who works and who doesn't date back to the early 1980s and haven't been significantly modified since. The Obama administration hasn't issued new guidance.

The air traffic control system, food inspection, Medicare, veterans' health care and many other essential government programs would run as usual. The Social Security Administration would not only send out benefits but would continue to take applications. The Postal Service, which is self-funded, would keep delivering the mail. Federal courts would remain open.

The cherry blossoms in Washington would bloom as usual, and visitors to the city would be able to park and see them in all their glory around the Tidal Basin.

But they wouldn't be able to take the elevator up the Washington Monument, visit museums along the National Mall or take a White House tour. National parks would be closed to visitors, a loss often emphasized in shutdown discussions.

The Capitol would remain open, however. Congress is deemed essential, despite its abysmal poll ratings.

The IRS wouldn't answer its taxpayer hotline — at the height of tax-filing season.

Fire at daycare center kills three

HOUSTON (AP) — A kitchen fire filled a home daycare center with smoke Thursday, killing three children and injuring four others. Firefighters ran with babies and small children in their arms to nearby ambulances on the crowded street, a fire official said.

All seven children in Jackie's Child Care were taken to hospitals, said Lt. Rick Flanagan, Houston Fire Department's executive assistant chief. The children ranged in age from 18 months to 3 years old, officials said.

The four injured "are apparently still clinging to life ... I don't think they're out of the darkness yet," Flanagan said. He said no other information was immediately available on the names and ages of those who died or the conditions of those injured.

Trays of Social Security checks wait to be mailed from the U.S. Treasury's Financial Management services facility in Philadelphia in February 2005. Social Security checks would still be mailed in the event of a government shutdown.

DEMS MULL SPENDING CUTS

Senate Democrats signaled Thursday they will call for spending cuts as part of legislation to keep the government in operation through the end of the fiscal year, accepting a bedrock Republican demand for immediate reductions and easing the threat of a March 4 shutdown of federal programs and services. No decisions have been made on what size cuts to include in legislation expected on the Senate floor next week, these officials said, adding that $8.5 billion in funding for previously approved congressional-approved earmark projects is on the chopping block. In addition, aides are reviewing $24.7 billion worth of proposals President Barack Obama recently made to reduce or eliminate programs beginning in 2012, to see whether any should be accelerated.

— The Associated Press

Under IRS precedents, the agency would process tax returns that contain payments. But people getting refunds would have to wait.

All sides say they don't want a so-called shutdown like the two separate partial government closings in 1995-1996, when President Clinton and a then-new GOP majority in Congress were at loggerheads over the budget. Republicans took most of the political blame, and the episodes gave Clinton critical momentum on his way to re-election.

There haven't been any shutdowns since then. The politics stink.

But from a practical perspective, shutdowns usually aren't that big a deal. They happened every year when Jimmy Carter was president, averaging 11 days each. During President Reagan's two terms, there were six shutdowns, typically of just one or two days apiece. Deals got cut. Everybody moved on.

In 1995-96, however, shutdowns morphed into political warfare, to the dismay of Republicans who thought they could use them to drag Clinton to the negotiating table on a balanced budget plan.

Republicans took a big political hit, but a compendium of the other hardships experienced reads like a roster of relatively minor inconveniences for most Americans: closed parks, delays in processing passport applications, 2,400 workers cleaning up toxic waste sites being sent home, and a short delay in processing veterans' claims. A new government standard for lights and lamps was delayed.

To be sure, furloughs can be a major hardship for federal workers. Even those in essential jobs — and required to work — could see their paychecks delayed if a stalemate dragged on.

Lawmakers, however, typically provide back pay, even for employees who weren't required to work. A repeat of that could raise hackles with some in the tea party-backed House GOP freshman class. A spokesman for House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, wouldn't address whether furloughed federal workers would receive back pay if there is a shutdown this time.

Regardless, federal contractors would lose out. Many contract workers could be furloughed without pay and not receive lost wages retroactively, especially in an extended shutdown.

Under a precedent-setting memorandum by Reagan budget chief David Stockman, federal workers are exempted from furloughs if their jobs are national security-related or if they perform essential activities that "protect life and property."

In 1995, that meant 571,000 Defense Department civilian employees, some 69 percent, remained at post, while 258,000 other Pentagon workers were furloughed. Eighty-five percent of Veterans Administration employees went to work as did 70 percent of Transportation Department workers.

White Pine students prep for talent show

Rose and Kassidy audition for the White Pine Intermediate School talent show, to be held March 10.

By Judy Albertson
Times News writer

BURLEY — Children love to perform, and White Pine Intermediate School in Burley believes in giving them a chance to show off their talents.

This is the fifth year White Pine students will present a talent show. The performance will be from 6 to 8:30 p.m. March 10 at the school, and will also include non-stage talents such as an art display. The public is invited.

“Five years ago some sixth-graders came to me and said ‘We want a talent show. We’ll help you with it,’” said Bonnie Bair, music teacher at White Pine.

The show has blossomed from there. Students audition for a week before the actual talent show.

“We have 800 students in the school, so it takes awhile,” Bair said. “They can audition before school, after school, during lunch, in front of the class, whenever they want.”

Students have fun finding different variations of talent in their efforts to make the grade for the show.

“One year I had a student do a unicycle and once I had a boy who played the violin come in his tuxedo,” Bair said. “They’re really diversified. We have singers, dancers, musicians... even comedians.”

Eight sixth-graders help plan the event. “They applied for the position, and they do a good job,” Bair said.

Bair and some of the teachers select the performers for the main talent show. Usually well more than 100 students audition, but only 30 will be able to perform the evening of the event. Bair is meticulous in making her selections.

“I grade on a one to five scale — five being the best. But I have to have a well-rounded talent show, so sometimes there are a few who don’t get to appear because there are too many doing the same thing,” she said.

The show features a one-hour show for fourth- and fifth-graders and a one-hour show for sixth-graders. They do two performances — one during the day for the other students and one in the evening.

“I really work hard at getting them prepared for their audition. I encourage them and help them find music, but I can’t practice for them,” Bair said.

Sign up soon for science camp

Students in the third through fifth grades are urged to sign up soon for the Science Camp-In at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science the evening of March 11.

Event organizer and Herrett Center Education Coordinator Darcy Thornborrow has lined up hands-on workshops in experts in chemistry, biology, nursing, rocket science, horticulture, archaeology, geology and astronomy. The special guest for this year’s event will be Boise State University chemistry and biology professor Henry Charlier. He will be known by his alter ego during the Camp-In, the colorful “Dr. Picklestein.”

Students will list their top workshop choices when they sign up, and Dr. Picklestein will do a presentation for the entire group. The group will also see a show in the Faulkner Planetarium, peek through the telescope in the Centennial Observatory, have snacks, get a Science Camp-In T-shirt, and sleep overnight in the Herrett galleries, under constant adult supervision.

The event begins at 6 p.m. March 11. Parents will pick up their children at 8 a.m. March 12.

Registration is $40 per student, with only 140 slots available. Participants are urged to sign up before the registration deadline, Tuesday. No registrations can be taken at the door the night of the event.

What is diverticulosis and what foods are safe?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Several months ago, I was diagnosed with diverticulosis. Can you tell me the difference between diverticulosis and diverticulitis? Some days I do well with this problem, and other days are awful. I am trying to eat the right kinds of food, but still some days are bad. Do you have any suggestions on what foods are good for this problem?

DEAR READER: Diverticulosis occurs when small pouches in the lining of the large intestine bulge outward. Each pouch is called a diverticulum, while multiple pouches are known as diverticula. Most people with diverticulosis are symptom-free. Those with symptoms will have cramps and bloating of the lower abdomen. They may complain of constipation.

When diverticula become inflamed, the condition is known as diverticulitis. Pain may be mild or appear suddenly, increasing in intensity in the lower left abdomen. A person may have a fever, chills, vomiting, nausea and experience a change in bowel habits. There may be bleeding from weakened small blood vessels in the diverticulum, colon blockage and infection. Diverticulitis can lead to infection, which can be treated successfully with antibiotics. If the infection worsens, an abscess may form on the colon wall.

Diverticular disease, a blanket term used to describe both diverticulosis and diverticulitis, is likely the result of a low-fiber diet, lack of exercise and obesity. It is often diagnosed when a physician is testing a patient for a completely different ailment. For example, it can be identified during a colonoscopy that a physician may perform to rule out polyps or cancer, through CT (computerized tomography) or abdominal ultrasound.

Treatment for relatively mild cases is with pain medication, oral antibiotics and a high-fiber diet. Fiber will keep stool softer and lower pressure within the colon at the same time. Severe cases may require hospitalization, IV antibiotics and a few days without food to allow the colon time to heal.

For more detailed information on this topic, I suggest you visit the National Digestive Diseases Information website at www.digestive.niddk.nih.gov.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report “Diverticular Disease.” Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order made payable to Newsletter and mailed to Newsletter,

P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title or print an order form off my website at www.AskDrGottMD.com.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Could you please tell me what a carcinoid tumor is and what causes them? I was recently diagnosed with some in my stomach.

DEAR READER: Carcinoid tumors are slow-growing tumors that commonly begin in the lungs or digestive tract. Because they are slow growing, they don’t produce symptoms in their early stages. They excrete hormone-like substances. In later stages, flushing of the face and upper chest, cough, hemoptysis, chest pain, wheezing, bowel obstruction, diarrhea and difficulty breathing may occur.

The primary treatment for this condition is surgery, which will be successful as long as the cancer has not spread to other parts of the body. Treatment modalities for arresting tumor growth are experimental at this stage but show great promise. Chemotherapy is of little benefit and is not generally indicated.

Chris Carrico

Oct. 16, 1990–Feb. 21, 2011

GOODING — Alex Christian ‘Fozzy’ Carrico, 20, of Gooding, died Monday, Feb. 21, 2011.

From the moment that he was born, Fozzy was the light that always kept us smiling and laughing. Once he had the ability to talk, he took a cue from Fozzy Bear on the Muppet Babies and told jokes — to anyone that would listen — that made no sense at all. His laughter that followed them always made us laugh along with him and, thus, he was deemed our “Fozzy.”

Even as a small child, Fozzy was fiercely independent and wise beyond his years, a combination that made it difficult for his family to keep up with. As a baby, he would search out anything in his parents’ ski boat and throw it overboard — just to watch it sink. He included himself in this one time and when he emerged from the side of the ski boat he had a smile on his face from ear-to-ear for a job well done ... then screams of terror stretched across the canyon when he realized what he had done.

He was never afraid to voice his opinion. When his family asked him what he wanted for Christmas one year, he let them know right away that he wanted a gun, like his Dad had for hunting. When his Dad took him downtown to see Santa Claus a few days later, Chris sat in his Dad’s arms and addressed the first man he saw — asking him directly, “Do you have my gun?” He also let his Dad’s friend, Tim, know that he did NOT like him as Santa Claus.

Fozzy was fiercely protective and extremely loyal to those that he loved and we will always be humbled by this. When his sister was taking pictures for a school dance, Fozzy pulled the young man that was taking her aside. He let him know that, despite the guy’s bribe of candy in exchange for friendship, Fozzy would be waiting up for them and gave them one hour to attend the dance.

He was the kind of boy who loved to entertain people. While on a family vacation, Chris spotted a karaoke machine at the resort. Before dinner began, he warmed-up his pipes to his family. Once people began to come in for dinner everyone thought that stage fright would take over and he would resign. After several diners and songs, Chris was asked to sign off for the evening by his parents. He began to cry as a girl took the stage to sing. The owners saw him crying and released the microphone back to him. Nobody at that lodge heard another singer for the rest of the night.

Fozzy revived his entertainment career, unbeknownst to his family, just two years later. While reading through the local paper, his parents came across an advertisement for a new band playing at the Lincoln Inn. His parents called down to the Lincoln Inn to see if there was possibly another band in town going by the same name as Fozzy’s band. They soon found out that several weeks before-hand Fozzy had negotiated a fee for his band and booked a weekend to play over the phone with the owner. He was 10 years old.

His dedication to music and drums over the next few years excited and inspired others. He attained the coveted status of the Percussive Arts Society’s “One-Handed Drum Roll.” While only in junior high, he was asked to play as a drummer in the High School Honor Band. Also, he created a band for several of his friends to play with him. We will always remember him drumming around the house and singing away in the backyard.

Fozzy was always a leader; he was a proud and confident young man who stood out amongst the rest of his peers. He had a passion for people and nobody stood a chance against his charm, wit, and that huge smile.

In 2009, Chris became a father and taught everyone around him what it was to give yourself completely to someone. He was the most gentle and caring father and we will always be inspired by his love and remind Jetta of it every day.

Chris is survived by his daughter, Jetta Jade Carrico; his parents, Scott and Patricia Carrico; sister, Johanna Simon; brother, Joshua Aquino; and his friend and Jetta’s mother, Amber Trowbridge.

No services are being held at this time. The family invites Chris’ friends to come by the family home in Gooding in the coming days to sign the register book and visit with family.

In lieu of flowers, a trust is available at Wells Fargo for the continued care of Jetta Jade Carrico.

The family asks that you remember our Fozzy for who he truly was; an incredibly kind and caring young man; an extremely intelligent and loving person; a wonderful father and an amazing friend.

Remember his compassion and his caring soul. Remember Fozzy for his inspiration, laughter, and hope that he gave to you.

Condolences may be shared with the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

Sgt. says soldier’s dad reported Afghan plot

SEATTLE (AP) — An Army staff sergeant confirmed to investigators that he received a phone call from a worried father last year warning that soldiers in his son’s platoon were deliberately killing Afghan civilians.

However, Staff Sgt. James Michael Beck said he didn’t report the phone call to anyone because there was no standard operating procedure for doing so, according to a statement obtained by The Associated Press.

Beck said he was working in the operations center at Joint Base Lewis-McChord south of Seattle on Feb. 14, 2010, when he received a call from Christopher Winfield of Cape Coral, Fla., who told him soldiers in his son’s platoon had already killed one civilian and were planning to kill more.

Winfield said his then 21-year-old son, Spc. Adam Winfield, was being pressured to join the plot, and the younger Winfield was scared that his colleagues would hurt him if he didn’t go along, according to the statement.

Army prosecutors allege two more Afghan civilians were subsequently killed, one during a patrol in February and another in May, in a brutal plot led by Staff Sgt. Calvin Gibbs and Cpl. Jeremy Morlock.

Winfield is charged with joining Gibbs and Morlock in the final killing. He admitted in a videotaped interview that he took part and said he feared the others might kill him if he didn’t.

Among other defendants in the case is Pvt. 1st Class Andrew Holmes of Boise.

AROUND THE WEST

IDAHO

Senate plans hearing on nullification

BOISE — Idaho state senators are due to take up a measure that seeks to nullify the federal health insurance overhaul, a week after the measure cleared the Idaho House.

The Senate State Affairs Committee begins discussion of the state sovereignty measure today.

Republican conservatives say the bill is needed to halt President Obama’s reforms in Idaho, including returning federal money the state has already received to start new health insurance exchanges.

The House passed the measure 49-20 last Wednesday, with seven Republican dissenters joining Democrats who branded the push an unconstitutional exercise of state legislative power.

Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden’s office also has concluded the measure is illegal, so it remains unclear if state senators will go along and send it to Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter for signature.

ISP trooper pleads guilty to poaching

SANDPOINT — An Idaho State Police trooper has pleaded guilty to misdemeanor poaching for shooting a bull moose out of season last fall.

Cpl. Jeff Jayne entered his plea Wednesday during a hearing in Moscow.

Latah County prosecutor Bill Thompson told the Bonner County Daily Bee that Magistrate John C. Judge sentenced Jayne to six months of unsupervised probation, imposed a $500 penalty and revoked the trooper’s hunting privileges for one year.

The moose’s cape, antlers and meat were forfeited to the state. Jayne shot the moose with a bow north of Ponderay on Sept. 11. He reported the harvest to the Idaho Department of Fish & Game, which advised Jayne he shot the animal four days before the season opened.

Former UI employee pleads guilty to theft

BOISE — A woman from Priest River has pleaded guilty to using a University of Idaho credit card for personal expenses.

Thirty-six-year-old Brooke Marie Ramsey pleaded guilty to felony grand theft Tuesday in 1st District Court.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reported Ramsey was accused of using a university-issued purchase order card while she was working at the school’s Research & Extension Center.

Grand theft is punishable by up to 14 years in prison, but prosecutors are recommending a suspended term of two to six years. Prosecutors also recommend she serve up to 30 days in the Bonner County Jail and pay more than $18,000 in restitution.

Investigators say Ramsey used the card to buy items on the Internet and pay for travel costs for herself and others over an 18-month period.

Indian Valley man accidentally shoots self

HORSESHOE BEND — Boise County officials say a 57-year-old Indian Valley man who was playing with a handgun after a night of drinking accidentally killed himself.

Dispatch received a call at 2:17 a.m. Sunday that Allan Ray Coulter had shot himself in the head.

Coulter and his nephew, 23-year-old Kasey Conca, had been out drinking Saturday night and returned to a residence in Horseshoe Bend. Boise County officials say Coulter took a handgun from a backpack and began playing with it.

Conca told authorities he took the handgun and unloaded it, except for one bullet that was stuck in the gun and returned it to his uncle. Conca said his uncle pointed the gun to his head and pulled the trigger.

Sheriff’s deputies have indicated it was an accidental shooting, but it remains under investigation.

Woman accidentally run over by husband

IDAHO CITY — Boise County officials say a 51-year-old Idaho City woman was killed when her husband accidentally backed over her while they were trying to tow her car home.

Sheriff Dale Rogers says Keith Hammond was pulling Cynthia Storts’ car until his pickup became stuck in snow and ice. He unhooked the tow strap and was trying to free his truck. When he backed up the pickup struck Storts, who was standing outside her vehicle.

WASHINGTON

Rep. Hastings blocks breaching dams

KENNEWICK — Washington Rep. Doc Hastings says he’ll use his position as chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee to block any bills related to breaching lower Snake River dams.

Hastings says salmon runs are recovering under current management practices and dam breaching is the last resort.

Judith Alice ‘Judy’ Pellegrino

Feb. 19, 1940–Feb. 22, 2011

Judith Alice “Judy” Pellegrino, 71, of Twin Falls, passed away Tuesday, Feb. 22, 2011, with her family by her side.

Judy was born Feb. 19, 1940, in Salt Lake City, Utah, and has resided in California, Iowa, Las Vegas and Twin Falls. In 1957, Judy married Walter Omer and they were later divorced in 1966. In 1968, she married William R. Pellegrino and they later divorced in 1987.

Judy worked in the service industry for many years as a waitress, bartender and mom. Judy brought much love to all who knew her. A woman of kindness, strength and compassion, her laughter and zest for life will be fondly remembered.

Judy was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Judy is survived by her daughters, Jadie Pellegrino and Shawnee Pellegrino-McKendry; four grandchildren, Tyler (Karla) Moir, Saraelye Moir, Brittany and Marissa McKendry; and one great-grandchild, Angel Moir.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. Friday, Feb. 25, at Rosenau Funeral Home, 2826 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Bishop Adam Hodges conducting.

Family and friends are encouraged to share their thoughts and memories of Judy at www.rosenaufuneralhome.com.

Throngs view space shuttle Discovery's last launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery, the world's most traveled spaceship, thundered into orbit for the final time Thursday, heading toward the International Space Station on a journey that marks the beginning of the end of the shuttle era.

The six astronauts on board, all experienced space fliers, were thrilled to be on their way after a delay of nearly four months for fuel tank repairs. But it puts Discovery on the cusp of retirement when it returns in 11 days and eventually heads to a museum.

"Discovery now making one last reach for the stars," the Mission Control commentator said once the shuttle cleared the launch tower.

Discovery is the oldest of NASA's three surviving space shuttles and the first to be decommissioned this year. Two missions remain, first by Atlantis and then Endeavour, to end the 30-year program.

It was Discovery's 39th launch and the 133rd shuttle mission overall.

There were several tense minutes just before liftoff when an Air Force computer problem popped up and threatened to halt everything. The issue was resolved and Discovery blasted off three minutes late, with just two seconds to spare.

"Great way to go out," said launch director Mike Leinbach. Launching late in the window like that "probably makes it a little bit more sweet."

"I would say we scripted it that way," added Mike Moses, chairman of the mission management team, "but I could use a little less heart palpitations in the final couple seconds of the countdown."

As the final minutes ticked away, commander Steven Lindsey thanked everyone for the work in getting Discovery ready.

"And for those watching," he called out, "get ready to witness the majesty and the power of Discovery as she lifts off one final time."

Emotions ran high as the shuttle rocketed off its sea-side pad into a late afternoon clear blue sky, and arced out over the Atlantic on its farewell flight. Discovery will reach the space station Saturday, delivering a small chamber full of supplies and an experimental humanoid robot.

"Look forward to having company here on ISS in a couple days," station commander Scott Kelly said in a Twitter message.

The orbiting lab was soar-ing over the South Pacific when Discovery took off.

On-board TV cameras showed some pieces of foam insulation breaking off the shuttle's external fuel tank four minutes into the flight, more than usual in fact. But it shouldn't pose any safety concerns because it was late enough after liftoff, officials said.

NASA is under presidential direction to retire the shuttle fleet this summer, let private companies take over trips to orbit and focus on getting astronauts to asteroids and Mars.

An estimated 40,000 guests gathered at Kennedy Space Center to witness history in the making, including a small delegation from Congress and Florida's new Gov. Rick Scott. Discovery frenzy took over not only the launch site, but neighboring towns.

Roads leading to the launching site were jammed with cars parked two and three deep; recreational vehicles snagged prime viewing spots along the Banana River well before dawn. Businesses and governments joined in, their signs offering words of encouragement. "The heavens await Discovery," a Cocoa Beach church proclaimed. Groceries stocked up on extra red, white and blue cakes with shuttle pictures. Stores ran out of camera batteries.

The launch team also got into the act. A competition was held to craft the departing salutation from Launch Control: "The final liftoff of Discovery, a tribute to the dedication, hard work and pride of America's space shuttle team." Kennedy's public affairs office normally comes up with the parting line. Souvenir photos of Discovery were set aside for controllers in the firing room. Many posed for group shots.

Lindsey and his crew paused to take in the significance of it all, before boarding Discovery. They embraced in a group hug at the base of the launch pad.

Unlike the first try back in November, no hydrogen gas leaked during Thursday's fueling.

NASA also was confident no cracks would develop in the external fuel tank; nothing serious was spotted during the final checks at the pad. Both problems cropped up during the initial countdown in early November, and the repairs took almost four months. The cracks in the midsection of the tank, which holds instruments but no fuel, could have been dangerous.

Conservatives target gay marriage decision

NEW YORK (AP) — Angered conservatives are vowing to make same-sex marriage a front-burner election issue, nationally and in the states, following the Obama administration's announcement that it will no longer defend the federal law denying recognition to gay married couples.

"The ripple effect nationwide will be to galvanize supporters of marriage," said staff counsel Jim Campbell of Alliance Defense Fund, a conservative legal group.

On the federal level, opponents of same-sex marriage urged Republican leaders in the House of Representatives to intervene on their own to defend the 1996 Defense of Marriage Act, or DOMA, against pending court challenges.

"The president has thrown down the gauntlet, challenging Congress," said Tony Perkins of the Family Research Council. "It is incumbent upon the Republican leadership to respond by intervening to defend DOMA, or they will become complicit in the president's neglect of duty."

Conservatives also said they would now expect the eventual 2012 GOP presidential nominee to highlight the marriage debate as part of a challenge to Obama, putting the issue on equal footing with the economy.

Gay rights activists welcomed Wednesday's announcement from the Justice Department, sensing that it would bolster the prospects for same-sex marriage in the courts.

Former Bush press secretary speaks in Ketchum

Times-News

Ari Fleischer, White House press secretary for President George W. Bush, will speak in Ketchum on March 10.

Fleischer, the final speaker in the Sun Valley Center for the Arts' annual lecture series, was the voice of the White House during a time that included the Sept. 11 events, two wars and an anthrax attack.

His 2005 book, "Taking Heat: The President, the Press and My Year," reached No. 7 on the New York Times bestseller list. The book is a critical assessment of the media and how news gets made.

After leaving the White House, Fleischer formed Ari Fleischer Sports Communications, which advises corporations and sports organizations on press relations, the Sun Valley Center said. This business, too, proved contentious, thanks to clients like steroid-using baseball player Mark McGwire and, briefly, Tiger Woods.

Prior to his time at the White House, Fleischer worked for the Bush-Cheney and Elizabeth Dole presidential campaigns. He was press secretary to a New Mexico Senator and to two members of Congress from New York.

Fleischer's lecture is 6:30 p.m. March 10 at Church of the Big Wood in Ketchum. Tickets are $25 for Sun Valley Center members and $35 for others, at sunvalleycenter.org or 726-9491, ext. 10.

Oakley musical takes Hollywood from silent film era to talkies

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — When the signature song in your play relies on a down-pour but you're performing indoors, how do you make it rain?

On Thursday, Oakley Valley Arts Council premieres its spring show, "Singin' In The Rain." The stage adaptation is slightly different than the movie, but still conveys the romance and comedy of the classic film.

The musical, first shown on Broadway in 1983, is based on the 1952 movie of the same name. "Singin' In The Rain" tells the story of silent film star Don Lockwood (played by Dan Hendricks in the Oakley production) as he resists the advances of obnoxious leading lady Lina Lamont (Rebekah Ramsey) and woos actor Kathy Selden (Janelle Jones).

Oakley's Howells Opera House is a gorgeous historical venue, but it isn't set up for the on-stage rain showers that punctuated the Broadway and London productions. Instead, director Kent Severe is relying on a disco ball to throw light for a storm effect.

Severe and the cast also have to figure out how to quickly change the set between scenes. Act I alone has 14 scenes, and each requires a set change. You won't see dimmed lights or curtains closed during the changes — Severe is just trying to get the set flips done as quickly as possible.

An interior wall and a rail will be on stage the whole time, while furniture and props change. Three printed screens that drop from the top will also change scenes. Those screens are layered with the permanent set pieces; an outdoor image

Tonight's guest conductor brings perspective to MV Symphony

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Ordinarily, there aren't a lot of volunteers in front of him when Dallin Hansen picks up his conductor's baton. But tonight, the Brigham Young University-Idaho professor will lead the Magic Valley Symphony, whose members are all unpaid amateurs.

"I work with student orchestras who are compelled to come as part of a class, and it's refreshing to work with individuals who come because they truly love it," Hansen said from his Rexburg office. "It's not a top-down kind of situation, where I'm there to tell them what to do and teach them. We're there to make music together."

Hansen will guest conduct the musicians as they perform three pieces. One of them — the Saint-Saens symphony, which listeners might recognize from the finale of the film "Babe" — is a longtime Magic Valley favorite, performed last by the symphony a dozen years ago. To choose the other two pieces, Hansen worked with regular symphony conductor Ted Hadley.

"I don't feel threatened at all by having a guest conductor, because I always learn more than even the orchestra does," Hadley said. "People need to come and hear our symphony conducted by somebody different than me."

Hadley said Hansen's style is physically different — "He conducts bigger than I do, wider and taller" — as well as providing a fresh perspective on the music and group dynamics for the performers.

"It's been instructive for me to watch Dallin work with our orchestra, the way

Dallin Hansen is a professor of violin at Brigham Young University-Idaho, where he directs the string pedagogy program, the sinfonietta and two orchestras.

he addresses string issues and deals with the balance of the group, the parts he chooses to work on and the ones he chooses to ignore," Hadley said. Hansen's background is primarily in violin; Hadley's primarily in French horn. "We directors have to know everything about everything, but the practical thing is we know more about some things and less about others."

Ken Patterson, principal second violin with Magic Valley Symphony, said Hansen's expertise in strings has been edifying.

"That's really helpful when we're trying to work on a difficult violin part; he has some suggestions Ted wouldn't have," Patterson said.

Patterson, a member of the symphony board, has also hosted Hansen at his home during the conductor's weekly visits to Twin Falls to practice in advance of the performance. He said

Hansen's pleasant personal demeanor extends to his conducting style.

"He always says something nice first: 'Trumpets, great job, but could you come in just a little quicker?'" Patterson said. He said Hansen appreciates that the symphony members play for the love of it, but that as unpaid musicians they're perhaps less accomplished than their professional counterparts.

Hansen said Hadley has done an excellent job teaching the orchestra and, equally important, inspiring them to stick together year after year.

"For a community orchestra that's one of the challenges," Hansen said. "He's set a high standard of repertoire, he's playing difficult music and he's expecting the orchestra members to step up and do their best."

Wood River arts leaders push for renovation of Hailey auditorium

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Wood River High School drama teacher Karl Nordstrom has to remind his theater students that they can stand only a few places on the stage if they want to be in the light.

Max Stimac, the choir teacher, will move his spring choir concert to a church 12 miles away in Ketchum next week because of the auditorium's poor acoustics.

Footlight Dance Centre director Hilarie Neely has to rent side lights and other lighting equipment every time she holds a dance performance at the Community Campus auditorium.

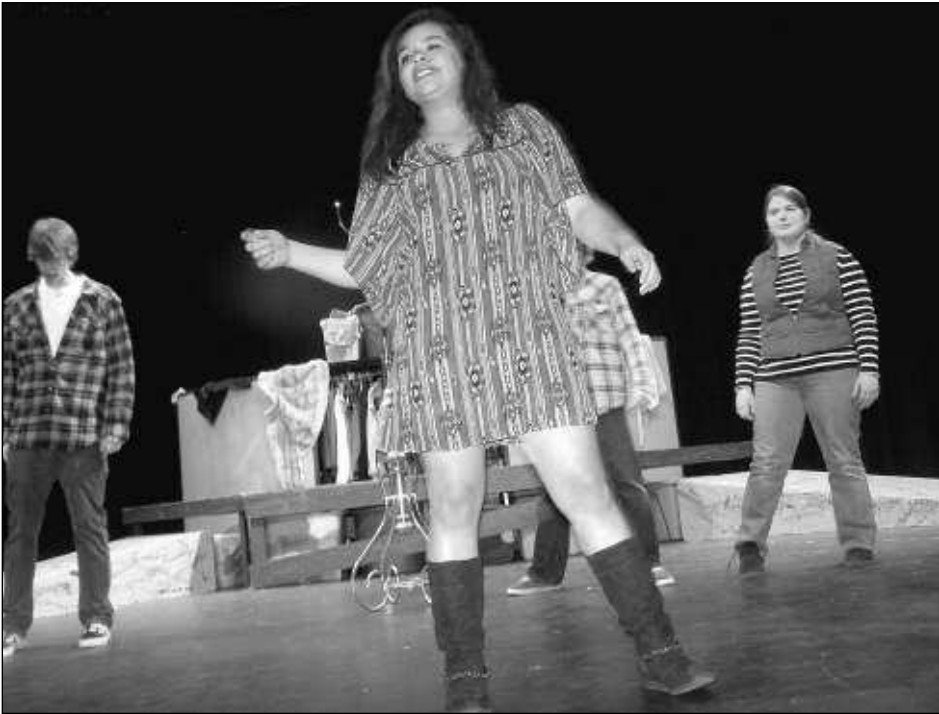

And the band that will perform for next week's spring musical will bring its own sound equipment, as the auditorium doesn't have a sound system.

These are just a few of the problems that have plagued the Sun Valley area's biggest auditorium since it was built as part of Wood River High School in the 1970s.

"It's a horrible place for music in general," Stimac said. "It has parallel walls that create a sound flutter, so we've been forced to use mics for everything we do. The roof is built on a reverse effect. And we can't light the entire stage in order for the audience to see the students. That's why we go to the church — so we can perform in a beautiful place where people know they are going to hear beautiful music."

Stimac hopes that's about to change.

Blaine County School District has $880,000 available to renovate the auditorium as part of the $59.8 million plant facilities levy that voters approved in 2009. And while that money won't fund all the items on the arts community's wish list, it's a start, said

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News
Siomara Navarrete, backed by Fischer Lewis, Drake Arial and Katie Walton, is among the students participating in next week's spring musical in Hailey's Community Campus auditorium, 'Just Another High School Musical.'

Mike Chatterton, the school district's business manager.

The district's board two weeks ago approved the hiring of Sawtooth Construction and Ruscitto/Latham Blanton architects to remodel the Community Campus.

And those who use the auditorium hope that the remodeling can take place by fall 2011 as the school district refurbishes the building's HVAC and fire-suppression systems.

In 2003, as the school district moved forward with the building of its current high school, there was a big push in the Wood River Valley to build a multimillion-dollar 1,500-seat complex to house theater, music, dance and visual arts. A study commissioned at the time showed that available facilities in the Sun Valley area had not kept pace with the arts market.

But the push to build the dream complex went nowhere, leaving the Community Campus auditorium as the valley's biggest indoor performance venue at 700 seats.

The remodeling committee includes the high school drama, band and choir teachers as well as representatives from the Sun Valley Symphony School of Music, Footlight Dance Centre, Company of Fools and Sun Valley Center for the Arts. It also includes sound and light technicians Jay Cutler and Ted Macklin.

They're hopeful that there will be enough money to transform the Green Room, which currently has concrete choir risers, into a rehearsal space with a flat floor. They'd like to see the old music practice room, currently used for storage, made into a secondary rehearsal space so groups can hold simultaneous music and theater rehearsals.

They'd like to put in loading dock doors that would allow staging equipment to be brought in more easily. And they'd like to add dressing rooms.

"Right now we have to bring in walkie-talkies so we can communicate between the lighting board and backstage," Neely said. "We need to bring in power packs if we want more lights. And there's no catwalk for changing the lights."

Neely said the committee is eagerly anticipating the architect's report.

"Our committee has mapped out the direction we should go," she said. "But without the input of the architect and the builders, we don't know how much anything will cost. We can't go any further prioritizing the things on our wish list until we know."

You thought you had a lot of theater choices last week. This week, you have more.

"Singin' in the Rain" opens Thursday in a surprisingly lovely venue: a renovated historical opera house in Oakley. The reporter who wrote today's cover story came back to the newsroom raving about lead actor Dan Hendricks' "dreamy voice." Sounds like a can't-miss.

Two high schools are about to open the curtains on their productions, too: the zany comedy "Cut to the Chase" in Declo, and Buhl's contemporary drama about teen girls' struggles, "Reviving Ophelia."

These join the continuing theater lineup of "Hairspray," "Ten Little Indians," "Sleeping Beauty," "Dead Man's Cell Phone" and "The Tortoise and the Hare." Pick a show, buy your tickets, ask a friend. There's no excuse to stay home with Netflix.

Mini-Cassia is a hot spot for entertainment in the coming week, with a Burley ball on Saturday and an Oakley pops concert on Thursday, in addition to the Oakley and Declo plays.

A good place to eat your sack lunch today is Twin Falls Center for the Arts, listening to anthropology professor Jim Woods lecture on southern Idaho's native cultures. Another chance to stretch your mind: retired aeronautical engineer Jack Wendling's discussion of fun physics on Wednesday in Twin Falls.

I have a particular fondness for classical music, so I'm looking forward to tonight's Magic Valley Symphony concert and Thursday's performance by touring pianist Alpin Hong. He's into skateboarding, martial arts and videogames and has been called a firebrand at the keyboard. I'm intrigued.

For event details, see the full calendar in today's Entertainment section.

Local films win

Times-News

The film "This is Twin Falls" took first place and "Solved II" won second place in an amateur film competition.

The contest was held in conjunction with the College of Southern Idaho's new film series that's wrapping up this weekend.

Jake Schumacher, Scott Whipple, Heath Kemper and Jedidiah Hurt won $500 for "This is Twin Falls," which follows the growth of street artist Future Twin Falls and his contribution to the city. The film was recently featured on street art blog Wooster Collective, which showcases ephemeral art in cities around the world.

"Solved II," by Carlos Arenz, features stop animation of a puzzle being put together. He will receive a high-definition camcorder.

The five top-scoring entries will be posted on the CSI Film Series website: fineartscenter.csi.edu/film-series/.

MONDAY IN HEALTHY & FIT

Spring collaboration promises evening of jazz standards

Times-News

College of Southern Idaho's music department will present a spring jazz collaboration concert at 7:30 p.m. March 16 in the college's Fine Arts Auditorium.

You'll hear groups that are together for just one night a year: the smooth sounds of the CSI Jazz Ensemble and Swing Band, plus the college's elite vocal group, the CSI Madrigal Ensemble. Expect an evening of jazz standards such as "Blue Skies," "Sunny Side Up," "A House is Not a Home," "Lullaby of Birdland" and "That Old Black Magic," with the groups performing together and separately.

Admission is free, but organizers suggest a $5 donation to the CSI Music Department Scholarship and Activity Fund.

Information: Camille Barigar, 732-6288.

Sweet Plantain: one part classical, two parts improv

Times-News

Inspired by Latin American composers, classical training and jazz improvisation, Sweet Plantain is an audience favorite in the Wood River Valley.

So the acoustic string quartet will return for an encore performance March 4.

In January, New York-based Sweet Plantain sent sheet music to Rebecca Martin's orchestra group at Wood River High School, which will accompany the quartet as part of the evening performance at Sun Valley Opera House.

"We've never seen so many kids so fired up to discuss music as we saw last year when Sweet Plantain played here as part of our Performing Arts Series," said Kristine Bretall of Sun Valley Center for the Arts. "Not every band is willing to invite school kids to join them in a concert setting. It's an amazing opportunity for local youth to play with skilled professional musicians."

Sweet Plantain's promoters say this suits-and-sneakers pairing sums up the quartet's combination of impeccable musical credentials and a willingness to break the rules, particularly in improvisation.

Fusing Western classical traditions with hip-hop, jazz improv and Latin rhythms, the four musicians of Sweet Plantain make use of extended percussive techniques. They weave improvisation into classical music

Symphony

Though he hasn't spent much time in Twin Falls, Hansen said his sense of the city is that it has the same commitment the symphony does.

"To have a community orchestra in a town of that population says a lot about that community," he said. "It seems to be a community where people are really interested in working together to make the community vibrant."

Both conductors said the three pieces on tonight's program will be crowd-pleasers.

Hansen has a personal connection to the Williams rhapsody, which is set in the Norfolk area of England. He served a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints mission there, Hadley said, and was able to translate the landscape of sound to the physical landscape for the performers.

"He has a feel for it. He knows what it's like to stand on a seashore and watch the wind and the waves in that very place, Norfolk," Patterson said.

Gretchen Manker on French horn practices with Magic Valley Symphony in November. The symphony will perform tonight under a guest conductor's baton.

And Hadley will step back on stage for the finale of the Saint-Saens symphony — this time behind the keyboard, as two of the four hands in the piano part.

"The thing to listen for is how the composer uses the organ with the other instruments," Hansen said. "The moment we're all waiting for is the beginning of the last movement, which begins with a big organ chord played fortissimo, after a moment of calm. It's shocking if you're not expecting it.

"You have the strings painting these beautiful legato lines, melodically, and also a lot of big chords that put punctuation to what the organ is doing," he said. "In the brass you have the most important fanfare moments that the trumpets and trombones have, and the timpani have the last word with a big cannonball 'The End' at the end of it."

What better way to go out with a bang, for a guest conductor?

Ariel Hansen may be reached at 788-3475 or ahansen@magicvalley.com.

Sign up for St. Patrick's Day parade

Times-News

Want to participate in this year's St. Patrick's Day parade in downtown Twin Falls? You'll need to sign up in advance at O'Dunken's Draught House.

The parade is set for noon March 17. It starts in the 500-600 block of Main Avenue East and proceeds to the intersection of Main Avenue North and Dierkes Street North.

A third annual food drive will be held on the day of the parade. Bring canned food items to donate or make a cash donation, with all proceeds going to an area food bank.

It's free to register your parade entry through March 17 at O'Dunken's Draught House, 102 Main Ave. N., or 733-8114.

Declo students mount screwball comedy

Times-News

Declo High School's drama class will perform Pat Cook's 1949 comedy "Cut to the Chase," opening Monday.

After the Masked Wonder leaps into the room and fights off four or five henchmen without wrinking his cape, the writers of Majestic Studios have to figure out what he does next. Pop, Tiger Lil, Stu, Howard and Dena are stuck until they meet the latest addition to their writer's stable.

("Like any of us are writers," Stu says, "or stable.")

As the new kid on the team, Freddie has a lot to prove, mostly to his overbearing mother. But he and Dena prove that love can win out, even when Kate, the love-birds' boss, makes a play for Freddie. The studio head, meanwhile, is suddenly struck by amnesia. It's a screwball comedy that isn't over until they cut to the chase.

Performances are at 7 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, March 7-8 and March 10 at Declo High's auditorium. Regular tickets are $5 for adults, and $3 for seniors, children and students with activity cards. On the two Family Nights — Monday and March 7 — tickets are $15 per family.

The cast: Adam Rowe, Canon Hansen, Braxton Reinke, Daniel Tolman, Colton Denning, Nick Thomander, Tori Crane, Kylee Matthews, Ciara Bailey, M'Kenzie Osterhout, Stormie Kidd, Danielle Allen, Tyler Searle, Whitt Davis, Teague Smyer, Zack Thomander, Kacie Clark, Kaitlyn Smyer, Rachael Young, Merinda Gentry, Craig Christensen and Russell Eggleston. Declo drama teacher Ken Weeks directs.

drops between the wall and rail to make a garden.

The play, which takes place during the change from silent films to talkies in the late 1920s, relies on pre-filmed movies for some scenes. The cast planned to film those earlier this week, then use computer effects to make those movies look older.

The creative stage adaptations aren't the only thing that make the play interesting. Hendricks' skilled singing as Don Lockwood is reason enough to drive to Oakley for the play, and Ramsey's nasal-voiced Lina Lamont is a riot.

Some of the actors, like Jones, have grown up with the iconic movie.

"I kinda already had the whole thing memorized," she said.

You won't hear all of the movie's songs in the Oakley production. Severe decided to cut a few — including "Make 'Em Laugh" — that didn't contribute to the plot. The play runs long as it is, he said.

But the transitions are still smooth, and the lively cast brings the play to life. Who needs a rainstorm to sing in the rain?

A foot of fresh snow was a great add to the "mountain niceness" atmosphere, completed by spirited dancing and a relaxing bonfire. Though the music started late, mellow reggae beats followed by high-energy Celtic rock kept the party going for hours. At $10, I can't wait until next year's lineup.

Raw, real emotion was palpable in each song Matthew West performed Monday from his album "Story of Your Life," which he wrote using real-life fan stories. # Take the kids to Hailey for a free day of art

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Youngsters are invited to spend a day learning to drum, dance hip-hop, take part in magic acts and participate in a Mardi Gras party on March 5.

It's part of the free Fourth Annual Children's Arts Festival put on by Wood River Community Arts Alliance at the Community Campus in Hailey. The campus, part of the old high school, is at 1050 Fox Acres Road.

"It's a chance for children of all ages to watch puppet shows, visit an instrument petting zoo and engage in crafts. And children in grades three to five can experience an exciting day discovering what it takes to create a stage performance learning to dance, sing and perform all in one day," Claudia McCain said.

Children can drop in throughout the day. Registration starts at 8:30 a.m. for early birds who want to make sure they get into the classes of their choice.

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Sara Gorby, left, as Terry Tortoise, counsels children to stop and smell the roses and make friends along the way during St. Thomas Playhouse's 'The Tortoise and the Hare.' Children and parents can see the musical at noon March 5 during Hailey's free Children's Arts Festival.

Folksinger Tom Nash, board castle and pirate ship the past two years, will solicit help from youngsters to paint a city this year from 9 a.m. to noon in the gym.

The first performance — at 9:30 a.m. — will feature Montana Public Radio storyteller Annie Gard, host of the children's radio show "Pea Green Boat."

St. Thomas Playhouse will present its half-hour play "The Tortoise and the Hare" at noon. The day will conclude with a 3:15 p.m. performance of "Tall Tales," the play that third- through fifth-graders work on from start to finish.

Children interested in narration for the "Tall Tales" show should attend auditions from 4 to 5 p.m. Monday at the Community Campus.

A variety of groups have volunteered to teach classes during the day, including Boulder Mountain Clayworks, The Mountain School, Footlight Dance Centre, Sun Valley Center for the Arts, Bella Cosa, Wood River Community Orchestra, nexStage Theatre, Laughing Stock Theatre, LaAlianza, Royal Larkspur Play Troupe and Sun Valley Summer Symphony. Hands-on classes, set for 10 a.m., 11 a.m., 1:15 p.m. and 2:15 p.m., include making spring baskets, insoluble art, ceramic painting, oil painting, critter crafts, sand art and oil painting.

The Community Campus will be transformed into a gallery featuring the artwork of students from Carey to Sun Valley.

"The entire day is a celebration of the arts. The idea is to let kids know how exciting arts — from the visual to the musical — can be. We hope to unlock their creativity and encourage them to find ways to express themselves," said Hilarie Neely, Footlight Dance director.

"I love the festival," added Andrew Alburger, who wrote the script and music for "The Tortoise and the Hare." "It's so great to see the kids appreciate art. At that age, they think they're playing and they're very creative."

Performers present free show to mark King center's anniversary

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Expect vocal, instrumental, dance and comedy talent as Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation presents its free gala at Burley's King Fine Arts Center.

The foundation's 13th annual gala, set for 7:30 p.m. March 7, celebrates the King center's anniversary with entertainment from local and visiting performers.

Rick Bollar will again be host, with Roger Turner and the Declo Jazz Band doing a pre-show at 7 p.m. Mini-Cassia veterans will present the flag.

Erin Webster, Miss Canyon Rim, will open with "God Bless America." When Webster performed that number for Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, he gave her a standing ovation and asked her to sing it again, gala organizers said. Webster is a 2006 graduate of Minico High School and is in Idaho State University's nursing program. She will compete this summer in the Miss Idaho pageant.

More of the gala lineup:

- Julie's Dance Works 'G-Force' Dance Co., under Julie Goodfellow's direction, will perform "Prom Night" with dancers Shaelyne Bailey, Nicole Chestnut, Shelby Dunahoo, Nikela Greener, Sarah Hansen, Andrea Hurst, Liberty Ledford, Courtney McGuire, Makena Searle, Ellie Smith, Macaela Tolle and Braylyn Vale. The dancers range in age from 12 to 18 and will perform in the Spotlight Dance Cup Nationals this summer in Oregon.

- Aubrey Nielsen will play "La Folia," a Corelli violin solo, with accompanist Marilyn Whiting. Nielsen is 13, the daughter of Alan and Darla Nielsen of Burley. Nielsen has received "superior" ratings in music festivals for the past seven years.

- Main Motion Studio of Dance M-Squad's eight members, under Alyssa Robinson's direction, will perform "Right Here Waiting For You," choreographed by Tasha Payton.

- Rupert United Methodist Church Bell Choir, led by John Eilers, will play "Give Thanks" and "Joy and Elation." The 12 ringers vary widely in age. The 49 bells cover just more than four octaves.

"There are quite a few ways the bells can be used," Eilers said. "Each technique brings out a different tone quality or sound."

- Jason and Ashley Hull will perform a duet, "As Long As You're Mine." They moved to Mini-Cassia from West Los Angeles in 2009 and have been involved in the fine arts all their lives. Jason was a member of Showtime at Ricks College, and Ashley toured with the Boston Pops Christmas Tour.

- Other performers include Upside Down tumblers, Kay Webster doing the zumba, a duet by Tony Garcia and his wife, Scot Pilling on the piano and a medley by The Taffetas.

The King Fine Arts Center opened March 1, 1999, the result of a bond issue to build a new Burley High School and of private donations. The show commemorating its opening is a Mini-Cassia staple.

The nonprofit Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation organized fundraising to build the King center, which seats 1,313 people and is used for a variety of performing arts.

Escape into disco with Burley choir

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Burley High School's Bel Canto Choir offers dancing, dinner and entertainment next weekend, all for $20.

The choir will host its 9th annual dinner show at 6:30 p.m. March 4-5 at Burley's King Fine Arts Center, 2100 Parke Ave. This year's theme: "Disco Fever."

The home-cooked dinner, prepared and served by parents of the performers, includes pulled beef and pork, baked potatoes, corn and rolls. Diners eat on stage under the lights.

During dinner Bel Canto individuals and groups will sing "Brand New Key," "You Really got a Hold on Me,"

"Don't Stop Believing," "Love Story," "The Longest Time," "Don't go Breakin my Heart," I'm Leavin' it up to You" and more.

"It's a wonderful meal. One of the fathers has a big smoker, and he cooks the meat for us in that. After the dinner we clear the stage and the entire choir gets up and sings and dances. They include the audience in their performance," choir director Cindy Hansen said.

Bel Canto choir will perform two medleys, "Forever Polyester" and "Disco Fever," choreographed by Christine Handy.

Hansen started the event nine years ago.

"It's a huge undertaking for the parents as well as the kids," Hansen said.

Event proceeds will pay for transportation for the group's trip to Anaheim, Calif., to compete at Fullerton College, and will help with tickets to Disneyland and a Broadway show.

Tickets must be purchased in advance from a Bel Canto member or from Hansen, 878-6606 or 677-8894.

Saturday's banquet, ball support renovation of Rupert icon

Times-News

BURLEY — On Saturday, the 9th annual Renaissance Arts Center Banquet, Auction and Ball in Burley will celebrate more than nine decades of the Historic Wilson Theatre in Rupert — and raise money for its continued renovation.

No-host cocktails, the auction preview and a balloon sale begin at 6 p.m. Saturday at Burley Inn Convention Center, 800 N. Overland Ave. Dinner follows at 7 p.m., the live auction at 8 p.m., and a dance to the sounds of Alan Hale and Friends Band at 9 p.m. A silent auction runs 6-9:30 p.m. Tickets are $40, at 436-2787 or at the door.

"We will feature 14 live auction items including a self-propelled lawnmower," said Chris Jackson, of the Wilson Theatre ball committee. Other donated wares

"It's been a renovation of love, and we have taken our time to do it right and bring it back as a vital part of the community."

include a snowboard package, a Sun Valley ice show and overnight condo, a Dutch oven dinner and two paintings by Mini-Cassia artists.

Balloons sold during the 6 p.m. social hour usually go fast, Jackson said. They're $10 each or three for $25, and each holds something worth $10 or more. Just before 7 p.m., buyers may pop their balloons any way they can.

"The Wilson Theatre was built in 1920 and opened its door to an anxiously awaiting crowd on Aug. 25 of that year," Renaissance Arts Center vice president Earl Corless said in a press release. "It's been a renovation of love, and we have taken our time to do it right and bring it back as a vital part of the community."

The historic theater's restoration has included the exterior, storefronts, lobbies, the grand stairway and a convention center.

"We've been able to open the community/convention center and have had weddings, receptions, reunions, training, civic and social meetings," Jackson said. "Now we're in the final phase ... of the actual auditorium, so we need to raise some money to keep working toward the goal of returning this Rupert icon back to its original glamour."

Oakley schools show off their best at pops concert

By Judy Alberson
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — You'll be grooving to the beat at the Oakley Pops Concert, on Thursday at Oakley High School's gym. Dinner will begin at 6 p.m., with a concert at 7 p.m.

The price for both is $25 for a family, $15 per couple or $10 per person.

"If you have a large family, it's a great way to take them out to dinner and entertainment. This year Nina Austin is heading up the meal for us. She is making a taco salad in a fried bowl; she's going to be busy for a few days. And there will be brownies and ice cream for dessert," said music director Mary Kay Setoki, who has helped host the event for five years.

Performing in the concert are the sixth-grade choir, the junior high and high school mixed choir, the jazz choir and the junior high and high school band.

Setoki said Oakley has participated in the Danny Marona Performing Arts Scholarships for several years. Of the eight students who competed this year, four get to go on to the April 14 finals in Twin Falls.

"They will be performing the numbers they did for the Danny Marona competition the evening of the concert," Setoki said.

Concert proceeds will help the music department attend a spring festival competition. Call 862-3328 for tickets, or get them from any Oakley music student.

The Minico boys basketball team celebrates with the Class 4A District IV trophy after beating Twin Falls 53-28 in Rupert on Thursday.

Minico throttles Twin Falls in 4A boys district title game

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

RUPERT – Nets were cut, photos taken, interviews given, family members hugged.

Only when the Minico High School gymnasium had long since emptied did the Spartans boys basketball team finally retreat to the refuge of their locker room.

To be fair, they had 23 years' worth of emotion to let out.

Minico delivered a strong effort on both ends of the court when it mattered most Thursday, beating Twin Falls 53-28 to win the Class 4A District IV championship for the first time since 1988.

For a team with high hopes both this season and the one prior, at last one of its goals was accomplished.

"We've just remained humble, even when we had blowouts we didn't automatically think we were the best team in the state or anything," said Minico senior Kade Miller, who scored a game-high 14. "We've focused on continuing to get better, knowing that would carry us through."

Minico's 10 seniors will put an exclamation point on their careers, leaving their home floor for the final time as district champions, as well as earning the right to

MEET THE CHAMPS

CSI edges in CEU in 2OT for SWAC title

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

It lived up to the billing.

Those were the words of College of Southern Idaho head coach Steve Gosar after his team outlasted the College of Eastern Utah for an 88-86 double overtime win Thursday night at CSI Gymnasium.

In a showdown for the regular-season Scenic West Athletic Conference title and the No. 1 seed for next week's Region 18 Tournament in Twin Falls, No. 3 CSI (25-4, 11-3 SWAC) rallied to force overtime and did just enough to edge No. 14 CEU (23-6, 10-4).

"It was one of the best ball games I've ever been associated with," said Gosar.

"As much as anyone could ask for," said Eastern Utah coach Brad Barton.

A three-point play by CSI guard Pierre Jackson gave the home team an 87-84 lead with 1:17 left in the second overtime. Eastern Utah had one last chance, trailing 88-86 with 12.2 seconds to play, but Darius Smith stole the ball from CEU's Maxim Zakharov to seal the win.

"Man that was a tournament-type game right there," said Jackson, who had 22 points and seven as-

Kimberly holds off Buhl for the 3A district title

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY – Pushed against the brink of elimination in the Class 3A District IV Tournament, Kimberly turned to its football players for inspiration.

Jade Wadsworth, line-backer in the fall and a forward on the hardwood, scored 17 points to lead Kimberly over Buhl 52-46 to win the district championship and punch its ticket to the state tournament.

"We lost that first game of the tournament and it's been win or go home since then," said senior Brian Crane. "Most of these guys are football players and the end of their season was pretty crazy and came down to the wire every game, so we really leaned on them and they kind showed us how to get it done."

Wadsworth scored eight of his points in the third quarter, including three straight buckets down low after Buhl had cut the Bulldogs' halftime lead of seven down to three.

"We just had to play with more intensity because

24 Magic Valley wrestlers advance to next round of state tournament

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

NAMPA – Every year it's on full display – how do high school wrestlers handle competing on the state's biggest stage.

Sink or swim?

"It's a little nerve-wracking," said Burley senior Jake Lake. "You only have to worry about one match. If you sit here and say 'Crap, this is big,' then you get freaked out and psyche yourself out and you do poorly."

Lake was able to block out the nine other mats and the hundreds of fans filling the spacious Idaho Center on Thursday to win his first-round match at 140 pounds. For Lake, it was easy to focus, since this is what he's looked forward to since finishing third at last year's state tournament.

"This is what we work for all year," Lake said. "No one asks how you did at Bear-Cat, no one asks you how you did at the Buhl tournament. What do they ask? They ask how you do at state."

Lake was one of 24 Magic Valley wrestlers to advance past the first round of the Class 4A state tournament.

Wrestlers who lost their first-round matches had to return for the evening's consolation rounds, while winners received the rest of the night off and advanced to the championship quarterfinals, which begin today at 9 a.m. Two rounds of consolation matches follow, and then championship semifinals begin at 7:30 p.m.

Preparation is key while taking on the bright lights of the state tourney – something Minico sophomore 119-pounder Isaiah Alvarado almost had to learn the hard way. Down the entire match, Alvarado trailed by three points with time winding down. But with eight seconds left, he rolled a reversal and got his opponent on his back for the pin.

"First round kid, I kind of overlooked him. I didn't think he was going to be that much of a challenge, but he was tough. I didn't warm up as much as I should have," Alvarado said. "During the match I was like, 'I can't lose right now, it would ruin everything.' I can pull off stuff at the end. I've been doing that all year. Kids are tired during the third round, and I just keep going and give them all I've got."

"Fourteen years is coming to an end. I've wrestled hundreds of matches and it's down to four matches left. It's kind of weird. This is what I've been focusing on the whole year."

– Twin Falls High School wrestler Todd Anderson

At 103 pounds, Eric Ayala of Jerome won by pin, while teammate Riley Thacker advanced via forfeit. The Tigers' Kaden Luper joined Alvarado in advancing at 119.

Alberto Ramirez of Minico moved on to the quarterfinals at 125, as did Jerome's Nick Thorne at 135.

"I take one match at a time, I don't want to get ahead of myself," Ramirez said. "Each match motivates me more to go for that state title. I don't want to leave my high school career without a state title, and I feel like this year and next year will be the years that I will get it."

Second-half spurt lifts CSI women past CEU

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

The Golden Eagles knew what was coming at halftime.

"We already knew we were going to get it because we were playing so bad," said College of Southern Idaho freshman guard Taylor Gipson.

CSI women's coach Randy Rogers got into his players at halftime and the Eagles (21-8, 8-6 Scenic West Athletic Conference) responded with a 20-5 run to start the second half en route to an 82-72 win over the College of Eastern Utah.

A lackluster first half left the CSI leading CEU just 37-32.

"We were one play behind everything that needed to be made," said Rogers. "... We look confused offensively, we looked confused defensively."

"I didn't have a really heated halftime speech. It was just 'Let's get on board or let's not get on board if we're going to quit on the season right now. Nobody wants to quit on the season, but I thought the way we played was like 'Let's just get on to the region tournament and not worry about this week's games.' But we need to use these games to get better."

With 2:22 left in the half and his team up just 29-27, Rogers slammed his clipboard to the floor during a timeout. His team ended the half on a 7-3 run and then forced four consecutive Eastern Utah turnovers to start the second half, not allowing CEU to cross halfcourt in that span.

CSI scored seven straight points to ignite the game-changing run.

"We just found it in ourselves to create energy when we were down and really played together and pushed each other," said sophomore Taylor Altenburg, who went 4-for-7 from 3-point range and scored a team-high 16 points. Her final trey put CSI up 57-37.

Gipson, who scored nine off the bench, said the energy the starters displayed to start the second half was contagious. Tina Fakahafua finished with 10 points and six boards, while Mechela Barnes scored 12. Laurel Kearsley and Fanny Cavallo each grabbed eight rebounds.

Eastern Utah had an 8-0 run after CSI's spurt, but never got closer than eight.

With little intensity, CSI fell behind 25-21 in the first half. Altenburg hit three consecutive treys in a 12-4 run that also included a Barnes triple to put the Eagles up 33-29.

Bruna Deichmann scored 15 of her game-high 24 in the first half to keep CEU within 37-32 at intermission, while Priscila Santos most of her 20 points after halftime.

CSI concludes the regular season by hosting Colorado Northwestern at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Notes: Rogers sent freshman guard Guili El-Mir to the locker room shortly before halftime and she didn't return to the bench. Rogers said he was frustrated with El-Mir at the time and will address her situation later.

Morin spurs CSI baseball to victory over Dawgs, 5-3

Times-News

On a cold, snowy day in Twin Falls, Parker Morin did his best to keep some heat in the College of Southern Idaho dugout.

Morin drove in four runs and threw out two runners on the basepaths as CSI's baseball team returned to action with a 5-3 win at Skip Walker Field over the Prairie Baseball Academy of Lethbridge, Alberta.

The Golden Eagles (6-4) scored twice in the first in their home opener, then saw the Dawgs rally to tie it at 3-3 in the fifth. But Morin's two-run single in the seventh inning provided the final scoring margin.

"I was just seeing the ball well and felt good. For the most part we did pretty well," said Morin, who went 3-for-4 to up his batting average to .389. "I always feel better when we're able to score some runs early in the game, not have to be pressing so hard. Once they started coming back, we did a good job of staying in the game."

It was CSI's first game since Feb. 12.

Morin tripled to score Ryan Cooperstone in the first inning, then came home when Ben Douglas grounded out to make it 2-0. The sophomore catcher threw out a runner at third base in the top of the second, and Caleb Olson picked off a second runner to end the inning.

Olson threw 4 1-3 innings, allowing five hits and three runs before giving way to Tyler Vavra with the bases loaded and two outs in a 3-2 game. The Calgary, Alberta, sophomore finished scattering two hits — one to the first batter he faced — and fanning five to pick up his first win of the year.

"Caleb came out and gave us a chance, and Vav came in and threw really well," Morin said.

With three more games scheduled before the start of Scenic West Athletic Conference play, the Golden Eagles appear to be finding their stride.

"Guys are starting to realize what their roles might be and the guys who are playing want to keep those roles," Morin said. "Mainly everybody really wants to win. We've just got to keep working on the little things that will help us out (long-term)."

Former CSI shortstop Tanner Craswell went 0-for-3 for Prairie, with a stolen base.

The two teams are back it at 1 p.m. today.

CSI softball looking for better showing at Snow

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The last time the College of Southern Idaho softball team split with Salt Lake Community College and headed to Snow College the next weekend, it didn't end well.

It took a year, but the Golden Eagles have a measure of redemption in their grasp.

CSI lost three of the four games in Ephraim, Utah, last season, and it's something that's been on the minds of players and coaches all week after last week's home split with Salt Lake.

"Good sophomore leadership would take care of that," said CSI coach Nick Baumert. "Our goal is to win the (Scenic West Athletic Conference) and the girls know there aren't a lot of places that you can afford to drop a game here or there. If we want to host that region tournament, we have to go in and win three or four (out of four) on a consistent basis every weekend."

There could be three winners this weekend: CSI, Snow, or snow.

With bad weather in the forecast, the series was moved from Ephraim, Utah, to nearby Richfield, then back to Ephraim and back again to Richfield. The two teams will attempt to play three games today, beginning at 11 a.m., and one on Saturday if they can get it in.

"The best-case scenario is four games. Our kids kind of get in a rhythm once you get into conference, and you'd hate to see that rhythm break," Baumert said. "But you look at the forecast, and you know how much snow they've had ... I think they'll do what they can to get it ready. But you can get it ready, and it's still what comes down the pike that will dictate."

Baumert said shortstop and relief pitcher Kelsey Bryant should be ready to go, after re-aggravating a back injury last weekend. Pitcher Jessi Duncan is also expected to return after being struck with a line drive last Saturday.

Castleford beats Murtaugh to advance to state

Times-News

Mitch Howard's 14 points helped Castleford top Murtaugh 53-38 in the second place game of the Class 1A Division II District IV-V Tournament on Thursday and secure a spot in the state tournament.

The Wolves pulled away in the second quarter and kept the Red Devils from rallying.

Kale Weeks and Tyler Hansen scored 13 points each for the Wolves (18-2).

"I am proud of our team for bouncing back after the tough loss last night," said Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore. "It was nice to put it together tonight and shake off that loss to get to state."

Humberto Pacheco and Troy Baynes scored 11 points each for Murtaugh.

the game, but CSI clawed back to take its first lead since 3-2 at 69-68 with 1:22 left in regulation.

"Our guys showed a lot of character when they got down 13 just to battle back," said Gosar. "I thought (CEU) came out really loose and we were tight early, but as the game went on we got looser."

Eastern Utah appeared to have the game in hand in regulation. A Zakharov trey put CEU up 73-71 with 23.4 seconds left and Jonathan Mills, who led Eastern Utah with 22 points and 13 boards, stole the ball and was fouled with 7.5 seconds left. He made the first foul shot, but missed the second, giving CSI one final shot.

Smith drove to the baseline and kicked the ball out front to Mitch Bruneel, who barely beat the buzzer with a game-tying 3-point swish from the right wing. It was his first field-goal attempt of the game.

"I don't even know what to say. It was crazy. It just went in," said Bruneel. "Great pass, great shot."

"I tell Mitch he reminds me of Jimmer (Fredette)," said Jackson. "That was a big shot."

Eastern Utah dominated the boards, outrebounding CSI 48-31. Brady Hurst had a 17-point, 11-rebound double-double before fouling tonight it was going to come down to who wants it more," Wadsworth said.

The Bulldogs (18-5) jumped out hot, scoring 19 first-quarter points and a 13-0 run spanning the first and second quarter buried the Indians (11-10) early.

"When we're moving on offense, not just up and down the court, but within the offense and getting good motion, we shoot the ball well and our offense really was clicking," said Kimberly coach Marvin Mumm.

However, behind Mark Montgomery and Markus Lively, Buhl came out aggressive in the second half. Lively scored six points in the third quarter and Montgomery swatted away several shots and provided an intimidating presence in the paint.

Kimberly though closed the third on a 6-0 run and Buhl never got closer than four the rest of the way.

"At the beginning of the season, we weren't expected to be here," said Buhl coach Dan Winn. "I love this team. We talked about how being a tribe is more than one night or one team, or one game on the basketball court. It's about life. It's about much, much more."

Buhl ends its season, while Crane, Wadsworth and the rest of the team celebrated its state tournament berth.

"This is just so overwhelming," said Crane, who scored 13 points. "It's an amazing feeling. I've been going to the state tournament to watch since I was four and now we feel like we can make a deep run."

Kimberly begins state tournament play March 3 in Meridian.

Alonzo brothers push Declo to first-round lead

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

NAMPA – It took all of 11 seconds for Declo’s Jaime Alonzo to pin his opponent in the opening round of the Class 2A state wrestling tournament on Thursday.

Not to be outdone, younger brother and work-out partner, sophomore Alex Alonzo, earned a pin just moments later on the other side of the Idaho Center.

Both Alonzos wrestle in the 103-pound classification, are on opposite sides of the bracket and would like nothing more than to meet in the finals on Saturday.

“He and I practice hard all the time,” said Jaime Alonzo, as senior. “I hope he places high because this is his first year. I want him to give it all he’s got. I hope he and I are in the championship. Today I just wanted to get it over with. To get to Saturday I’ve got to stay focused for my next two matches tomorrow.”

Of the 21 wrestlers from the Magic Valley who won first-round matches in 2A on Thursday, nine were from Declo, which led the team standings by four points over North Fremont after Round 1.

Stirland Zollinger (112), Josh Phillips (119), Matt Newman (125), Justin Cameron (130), Jacob Miles (145), Jason Gillette (160) and Mark Knobbe (215) also won first-round matches for the Hornets.

Wendell advanced three wrestlers in the championship bracket, as Kaleb Bowers (112), Tyler Egbert (140) and Luis Vital (285) were each winners.

For Gooding, Torin Brunson (140), Chance Adamson (171) and Cole McGinnis (215) moved on to today’s championship quarterfinals.

Raft River and Oakley each had two first-round winners. Layne Ward (119) and

Twin Falls teammates Todd Anderson and Markus Ko won first-round matches at 145.

“Fourteen years is coming to an end,” Anderson said. “I’ve wrestled hundreds of matches and it’s down to four matches left. It’s kind of weird. This is what I’ve been focusing on the whole year. I’ve tried to focus on each match, but really this has been on my mind the whole year. Getting the first one out of the way is nice, it gets you rolling for the tournament.”

Said Ko: “I did pretty good, but if I’m going to win the next round I need to do better. I need to be more physical the whole match and finish out strong.”

All three District IV representatives at 152 moved on, as Brayden Metcalf of Canyon Ridge, Jordan Staley of Twin Falls and Joey

Carey of Jerome each won.

“I think our district was the hardest one in the state at 152,” said Carey. “We’re just really competitive guys and it doesn’t surprise me those two moving on. I have a lot of respect for the two.”

Likewise, the area’s three 160-pounders also advanced, with David Borden of Minico, Mark Christensen of Twin Falls and Chase Smith of Canyon Ridge winning.

At 171, Twin Falls’ Brady Barton and Minico’s Skye Dansie each won by pin. At 189, Minico’s Salvador Gutierrez and Wood River’s Kasey Baker also pinned their opponents.

Jade Parsons of Jerome and Jacob Barclay of Minico each won by pin at 215, while all three area wrestlers at 285 advanced, including Alex Thomas of Wood River, Layne Lasike of Jerome and Brett Thompson of Minico.

4th-ranked Panthers roll over Mountaineers 71-58

PITTSBURGH — Lamar Patterson scored the first five points of the second half in sparking a decisive run that led fourth-ranked Pittsburgh to a 71-58 win over West Virginia on Thursday night.

Nasir Robinson scored 15 to help Pitt (25-3, 13-2) take another step toward clinching the Big East conference title. Patterson finished with a career-best 11 points, while enjoying extra playing time due to an injury to Talib Zano na and after Gilbert Brown ran into foul trouble late in the first half.

Brad Wanamaker had a balanced game for the Panthers with 11 points, eight assists and seven rebounds. Pitt bounced back from a 60-59 loss at St. John's last weekend and moved two wins ahead of second-place Notre Dame.

Casey Mitchell scored 22 for the Mountaineers (17-9, 8-7), who failed to build off the momentum of their 72-58 win over the Fighting Irish last weekend. West Virginia has dropped six of its past 11 after opening the season 12-4.

NO. 13 FLORIDA 71, GEORGIA 62
GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Kenny Boynton scored 18 points, including three consecutive 3-pointers in the second half that helped the Gators take control.

Erving Walker added 15 points, and Chandler Parsons chipped in 16 for Florida, which clinched at least a share of the Southeastern Conference's Eastern Division for the first time since 2007.

Florida (22-5, 11-2 SEC) has won 14 of its last 16 games, including six in a row. The Gators swept Georgia (18-9, 7-6) for the first time since 2008 and extended their home winning streak against the Bulldogs to nine.

Travis Leslie led the Bulldogs with 20 points, six rebounds and four assists.

MARQUETTE 74, NO. 14 CONNECTICUT 67

HARTFORD, Conn. — Darius Johnson-Odom scored nine of his 17 points in overtime to lead Marquette over UConn, which played without coach Jim Calhoun on the bench.

Jimmy Butler added 16 points for the Golden Eagles (17-11, 8-7 Big East), who tied the game at 59 with 5.3 seconds left on a drive by Johnson-Odom.

Kemba Walker led the Huskies (20-7, 8-7) with 27 points.

It was UConn's first game since the NCAA revealed its sanctions against the program over recruiting violations. Among the penalties was a suspension of Calhoun for next season's first three Big East games. Calhoun was cited for failing to monitor and promote an atmosphere of compliance within his program.

Fowler bounces Mickelson out of the Match Play Championship

MARANA, Ariz. (AP) — Hotter than his matching pink shirt and shoes, Rickie Fowler led a dynamic charge of the next generation Thursday in the Match Play Championship.

Fowler brought Dove Mountain to life as much with his golf game as his colorful attire, making two eagles in a span of three holes to send Phil Mickelson to his worst loss ever in this fickle tournament.

Equally impressive was Italy's teen sensation, 17-year-old Matteo Manassero, who hit a 6-iron to 4 feet on the 17th hole and closed out Charl Schwartzel of South Africa to advance.

Of the 16 players remaining, eight of them are under 30.

That includes Nick Watney, who steadied his emotions over the last three holes to knock out top-ranked Lee Westwood — the third straight year the No. 1 seed did not make it out of the second round. The highest seed remaining after two wild days was PGA champion Martin Kaymer, the 25-year-old "Germanator" who had to go 20 holes to beat Justin Rose.

Mickelson didn't play his best, and it might not have mattered.

Fowler seized control with a tough pitch to close range on the eighth, chipped in from off the green on the 10th, then made two eagles. He ended the match with a 4-iron from 232 yards that rolled so close to the flag that Mickelson conceded the eagle.

"He doesn't really have a weakness," Mickelson said. "He really is a complete player, and he put it together today. I just couldn't keep pace. I think he's going to do a lot for American golf."

It hasn't been a bad week for the Americans at this World Golf Championship. They have eight players in the round of 16, the most Americans in five years. The surprise is the list of players.

Tiger Woods, Steve Stricker and Jim Furyk were gone after the first round. Mickelson joined them on Thursday.

Leading the way is a new cast of emerging stars, from Fowler and Watney, to Hunter Mahan, who won three of the last five holes to rally against Robert Karlsson.

But this youth movement isn't about the Americans.

Manassero keeps setting age records wherever he goes — the youngest to win the British Amateur, the youngest to be low amateur at the British Open and the Masters, the youngest to win on the European Tour.

"It's a big sense of achievement for me," Manassero said.

He was in control for much of his match against Schwartzel until nearly giving it away. His tee shot on the 16th bounced off the corporate tents and into a cactus, and the Italian felt as though he might have moved the ball while trying to remove a loose branch. So he conceded the hole to Schwartzel, and put it behind him quickly.

His 6-iron on the 17th set up birdie, and Manassero closed it out with a par on the 18th.

Jason Day may seem older than 23, but only because the Australian has been around the last five years and won on the PGA Tour last year. This is his debut in the Accenture Match Play Championship, and he already is showing some guile. He irritated Paul Casey by making him putt from short distance, and Casey missed his share.

Day never trailed in winning their match, 4 and 2.

One youngster not invited to the party was 21-year-old Rory McIlroy, the No. 7 seed. He ran into Ben Crane, who played perhaps his quickest round ever — the match ended on the 11th hole, an 8-and-7 victory.

Kendrick Perkins leads the big bodies moving at deadline

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press writer

Big bodies replaced big names on the final day of the NBA's trading season.

Boston traded starting center Kendrick Perkins, while Hasheem Thabeet, Nenad Krstic, Joel Przybilla and Nazr Mohammed were some other men in the middle who were dealt Thursday before the 3 p.m. EST deadline.

Baron Davis and Gerald Wallace were among the former All-Stars who moved on a busy day that featured plenty of action but no blockbusters like the ones that landed Carmelo Anthony in New York and Deron Williams in New Jersey earlier in the week.

The Celtics traded Perkins, their starting center who had recently returned from a knee injury sustained in Game 6 of the NBA finals, along with Nate Robinson to Oklahoma City for Jeff Green, Krstic, a future first-round draft pick and cash.

"He's a team-first guy, plays great low-post defense," Chicago coach Tom Thibodeau, a former Boston assistant, said of Perkins. "There may not be a better low-post defender in the league."

Boston also dealt backup big man Semih Erden and reserve swingman Marquis Daniels, an active day for the team that began the night percentage points ahead of the Miami Heat for the best record in the Eastern Conference.

They get back Green, the power forward they drafted at No. 5 in 2007 but traded to Seattle in the deal for Ray Allen. But with Perkins gone, and Shaquille O'Neal and Jermaine O'Neal battling injuries most of the season, interior defense is now a question mark for a team that appeared to have loaded up on it this season for a potential advantage against Miami.

"I'm just as surprised as everyone else was," the Heat's LeBron James said.

Wallace was an All-Star last season, but is owed about $21 million over the next two years, so the cost-cutting Bobcats have been shopping him. He'll try to help the Trail Blazers reach the postseason.

"He is just the sort of talent we were looking for," Blazers owner Paul Allen said in a statement announcing the trade. "I'm sure our fans will embrace him and hopefully he can help us make some noise in the playoffs."

Davis and an unprotected 2011 first-round draft pick went from the Los Angeles Clippers to Cleveland for Mo Williams and forward Jamario Moon. Davis and Cavs coach Byron Scott clashed when they were together in New Orleans, but Scott said the point guard apologized for his past behavior before a preseason game.

Mediator says NFL and union make 'some progress'

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Just as many expected would happen all along, labor negotiations between the NFL and the players' union are heading right down to the wire — and possibly beyond.

In the first real indication of what's been going on behind closed doors, the federal mediator overseeing talks said Thursday the two sides made "some progress" during more than 40 hours spread over seven consecutive days of face-to-face meetings, but "very strong differences remain."

The league and union will resume mediation Tuesday, less than 72 hours before the old collective bargaining agreement is set to expire. If there's no new deal in place by the end of next Thursday, the union thinks owners will move to lock out players, threatening the 2011 season. The NFL has said, however, that the deadline could be extended.

George Cohen, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, released a statement shortly before noon Thursday, his first public comments since he began working with Commissioner Roger Goodell, NFL Players Association executive director DeMaurice Smith and their negotiating teams last week.

"At bottom, some progress was made," he said, "but very strong differences remain on the all-important core issues that separate the parties."

While Cohen did not name those issues, the biggest sticking point all along has been how to divide about $9 billion in annual revenues. Among the other significant topics in negotiations: a rookie wage scale; the owners' push to expand the regular season from 16 games to 18 while reducing the preseason by two games; and benefits for retired players.

NFLPA executive director

DeMaurice Smith and the rest of the union's negotiating team left the building at about 12:30 p.m., three hours after arriving. The NFL departed afterward.

"Just continue talking, man — that's what we're doing," Indianapolis Colts center Jeff Saturday said as he got into a car. "I think ownership — everybody — needs to know that we're all committed to it and committed to getting something done."

Members of both groups now head to Indianapolis for the NFL's annual scouting combine for draft prospects; the league was to brief general managers, coaches and other team officials Thursday, and the union speaks to agents on Friday.

And everyone will wait to see what happens next week. In addition to the return to mediation in Washington, team owners are scheduled to meet in nearby Chantilly, Va., Wednesday and Thursday.

"During the intervening weekend, the parties have been asked by us to assess their current positions," Cohen said.

Cardinals ace Wainwright needs season-ending surgery

JUPITER, Fla. — St. Louis Cardinals ace Adam Wainwright will have Tommy John surgery on his right elbow and miss the entire season.

Cardinals general manager John Mozeliak confirmed the news Thursday from spring training camp. He said he learned the severity of the injury Wednesday night after the 29-year-old pitcher sought a second opinion from Dr. Lewis Yocum in Los Angeles. A surgery date is not set.

"It's not a real surprise to us but certainly a disappointment," Mozeliak said. "As we look to the future now we certainly believe we still have a strong starting rotation. Now we're going to have to look to try to fill it in terms of a fifth spot."

Wainwright, who won 20 games last year and was runner-up for the NL Cy Young Award, felt arm stiffness after Monday's throwing session. He had experienced soreness toward the end of last season and didn't pitch in September. He had minor arm issues in 1998 and 2004.

His loss leaves the team with a big hole in a starting rotation that for now includes Chris Carpenter, Kyle Lohse, Jaime Garcia and Jake Westbrook.

"That's a big guy to miss," Lohse said. "We still got to go out there and play. Nobody is going to feel sorry for us. We still have to go out there and do our jobs."

Manager Tony La Russa said Wednesday, before learning the extent of the injury, that he didn't expect the Cardinals to try to replace Wainwright through a trade or free agent signing of someone like Kevin Millwood or possibly Pedro Martinez.

CABRERA REPORTS TO TIGERS CAMP AND APOLOGIZES

LAKE LAND, Fla. — Miguel Cabrera arrived at spring training Thursday for the first time since he was arrested last week on suspicion of drunken driving and promptly apologized as Major League Baseball said he will undergo treatment set up by doctors administered by management and its players' union.

The 27-year-old was arrested Feb. 16 on suspicion of driving under the influence and resisting an officer without violence, both misdemeanors. He is set to be arraigned on March 16.

"I am very sorry for what I have done," Cabrera said through a translator. "I have worked hard for a period of time and I hope everyone forgives me. All I ask for is forgiveness."

Tigers General Manager Dave Dombrowski said last week that Cabrera would undergo treatment before arriving. Tigers position players reported on Feb. 18.

DEAR ABBY: I'm concerned about my friend "Nyla." She's 15 and pregnant. Nyla and her family are happy about it! As her friend, I'm not. I think she should have waited.

I keep telling her that her life is ruined and she'll regret having a baby this early, but she doesn't listen. It would be better if she had help, but she doesn't. Nyla's family is poor. Now she is angry with me because of what I keep telling her. What can I do to help her understand me, and not get mad when I tell her something?

— VIRGINIA TEEN

DEAR VIRGINIA TEEN: If you want Nyla to "understand" you, quit lecturing her because it's only making her defensive. Defensive people don't listen. How any family, rich or poor, could be "happy" about the pregnancy of an unwe 15-year-old is beyond me. But your friend IS pregnant and she's keeping the baby.

So be a real friend and encourage her to finish high school so she can prepare herself for a job that will enable her to support her little one. If she completes her education, the chances are better that her child will, too. But if she doesn't, the reverse is also true, and the repercussions will go on for another generation.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I need help. When we started dating, my (now) husband told me he didn't care about past relationships because "the past is the past and it's over." Now he has begun grilling me about every boyfriend I've ever had, demanding details about every aspect of the relationships, physical, emotional — whatever.

He makes snide remarks and asks if I would like him to track them down and if I'd like to sleep with them again. At first, I thought he was joking, but it has escalated to text messages and threats of divorce if I don't tell him everything he wants to know. I have been sick to my stomach the last few days, and I think this fits the definition of emotional abuse. I don't know whether to suggest counseling or just tell him to go.

He was wonderful when we first got together, but now he says marrying me was just a ruse to get sex. What can I do? I miss the person he used to be. He has always seemed concerned that I would eventually cheat on him, although I have given him no reason to think so and have assured him repeatedly that I want only him. Why is this happening?

— SICK TO MY

STOMACH IN OHIO
DEAR SICK TO YOUR STOMACH: It's because you didn't really know the man you married. The way he presented himself was, in his words, "all a ruse" to convince you to marry him "to get sex." He appears to have increasing anxiety about how he measures up to your past lovers.

Harassing you for details and threatening to contact them is, frankly, sick behavior. He needs counseling, and unless he seeks it immediately you should get out of there. If you stay, the emotional abuse could escalate to physical abuse. To ensure your safety, contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline (800) 799-7233 and discuss this with a trained counselor.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Wednesday, the 25th day of May, 2011, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m. of said day at Alliance Title & Escrow, 1411 Falls Ave. E., Ste. 1315, Twin Falls, in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, Ryan M Fawcett, as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to wit:

LOT 5 IN BLOCK 126 OF TWIN FALLS TOWNSITE, ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIAL PLAT THEREOF, FILED IN BOOK 1 OF PLATS AT PAGE(S) 7, OFFICIAL RECORDS OF TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO.

The Successor Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60 113, Idaho Code, the Successor Trustee has been informed that the street address of 631 3rd Ave. W., Twin Falls, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by WILLIAM F. MILLSAP JR., a Single Person, Grantor, to Ryan M Fawcett, Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of WELLS FARGO BANK, N.A., recorded April 4, 2006, as Instrument No. 2006-008021, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho; and assigned to the IDAHO HOUSING AND FINANCE ASSOCIATION by Assignment of Deed of Trust recorded on April 4, 2006, as Instrument No. 2006-008022, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTOR IS NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45 1506 (4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT HE IS, OR IS NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, monthly installment payments under the Deed of Trust Note dated April 3, 2006, in the amount of $645.00 each, for the months of July, 2010, through January, 2011, inclusive; and for each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reimbursement. All delinquent payments are now due, plus accumulated late charges, plus any costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure. The accrued interest is at the rate of 5.38% per annum from June 1, 2010. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $85,772.18, plus accrued interest at the rate of 5.38% per annum from June 1, 2010.

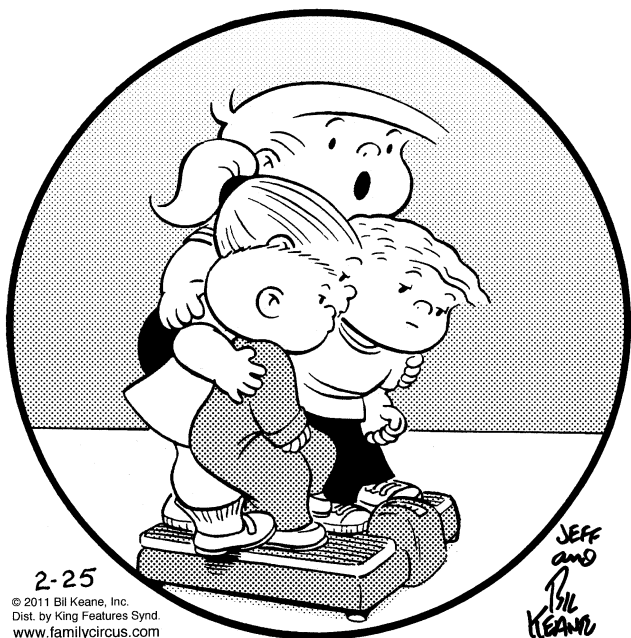

DATED This 24th day of January, 2011.

RYAN M FAWCETT, a Member of the Idaho State Bar, SUCCESSOR TRUSTEE

Today's Highlight:

On Feb. 25, 1913, the 16th Amendment to the Constitution, giving Congress the power to levy and collect income taxes, was declared in effect by Secretary of State Philander Chase Knox.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1836, inventor Samuel Colt patented his revolver.

In 1901, United States Steel Corp. was incorporated by J.P. Morgan.

In 1919, Oregon became the first state to tax gasoline, at one cent per gallon.

In 1940, a hockey game was televised for the first time, by New York City station W2XBS, as the New York Rangers defeated the Montreal Canadiens, 6-2, at Madison Square Garden.

In 1948, Communists seized power in Czechoslovakia.

In 1950, "Your Show of Shows," starring Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca, Carl Reiner and Howard Morris, debuted on NBC-TV.

In 1964, Cassius Clay (later Muhammad Ali) became world heavyweight boxing champion by defeating Sonny Liston in Miami Beach.

In 1986, President Ferdinand Marcos fled the Philippines after 20 years of rule in the wake of a tainted election; Corazon Aquino assumed the presidency.

In 1990, Nicaraguans went to the polls in an election that resulted in an upset victory for the alliance opposed to the ruling Sandinistas.

In 1991, during the Persian Gulf War, 28 Americans were killed when an Iraqi Scud missile hit a U.S. barracks in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

Ten years ago: The commander of the U.S. submarine that struck and sank a Japanese trawler off Hawaii expressed his "most sincere regret" — but Cmdr. Scott Waddle stopped short of an apology.

Five years ago: In Uganda, President Yoweri Museveni was declared the winner in the central African country's first multiparty election in 25 years. Apolo Anton Ohno upset favored South Korean Ahn Hyun-soo to win the gold in the 500-meter short track speedskating event at the Winter Games in Turin. Actor Darren McGavin died in Los Angeles at age 83.

One year ago: President Barack Obama convened a health care summit with Democrats and Republicans; after a day of debate and disagreement, the president concluded the talkfest with a bleak assessment that an accord might not be possible. In Vancouver, the Canadian women beat the United States 2-0 for their third straight Olympic hockey title. Americans Billy Demong and Johnny Spillane finished 1-2 in a Nordic combined race. Kim Yu-na of South Korea won ladies' figure skating.

ANSWER: Your partner has suggested three spades and extra values. However unlikely it might sound, the opponents appear to be lying low with 10 hearts between them. Since it is easy to imagine a minor-suit game having three top losers, I would raise to four spades, opting to play the 4-3 fit because of my strong trump spots.
