Luna plan has computer makers lining up at door

Companies stand to make bundle if education reforms are placed into law

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press

BOISE — As Idaho looks at education reforms that could place laptops in every high school, computer companies are already eyeing what could become a lucrative contract with the state.

Public schools chief Tom Luna unveiled his sweeping overhaul at the start of the 2011 Idaho Legislature, calling for the state to put laptops and other technology in the hands of high school students while making

“... as unusual as it might be for Apple to come to us and say: ‘What do you guys think will be the next great iPhone?’ ... I’m not sure I understand the idea of a high-tech company necessarily advising us on educational policy.”

online courses a requirement to graduate.

The legislation calls for the state Department of Education to provide a classroom’s worth of mobile computing devices, which could be laptops to start and later come in the form of other electronics such an iPad or another tablet, in every high school for the next five years.

While online education providers stand to profit in Idaho should lawmakers decide to make their courses mandatory, computer makers could also make a bundle if the reforms are placed into law.

And a handful of companies have already contacted the state.

“We’ve been very careful with the vendors that have approached and certainly what we’ve said to them is that, there’s going to be a task force that comes forward with recommendations,” Luci Willits, Luna’s chief of staff, said. “We have not engaged any vendors.”

A budget plan for the proposed reforms includes $4.7 million each year, for five years, to phase in laptops for high school students. There’s another $2.3 million to $9.5 million budgeted each year for maintenance, repairs and support.

Eyeing a better downtown

Ballroom owners wade into T.F. revitalization effort

Chance brought Sarah and Jimmy Taylor back to the Magic Valley. But a desire for a more vibrant downtown — and the drive to make sure it happens — may morph their chance return into one more opportunity for the struggling area.

The married twenty-somethings grew up in the area, but jumped around the country, from Bellingham, Wash., to Austin, Texas, at adulthood. They sport the fashion of urbanites, Jimmy referring to himself as “holed up and tattooed up,” and Sarah having a style that sets her apart from most downtown business owners.

But when they took over The Historic Ballroom Venue and Event Center in Twin Falls last year, they blended in as another set of business owners who “love downtown and want to see it beautiful and successful,” Jimmy Taylor said.

They’ve opened their business to city meetings about downtown matters, including a presentation by Boise-based developer and downtown consultant Mark Rivers and a local nonprofit’s open-house on the proposed redevelopment of the Main Avenue Fountain Plaza. They are also networking with other downtown business owners and getting invited to informal get-togethers to jaw about downtown’s potential.

“That was my first project, to get as involved as possible,” Sarah

Taylor said. “It’s totally paid off though, absolutely. I’ve noticed the more my face shows up, the more people are getting used to it and the more people are like, ‘Hey, she wants to be involved,’ and it’s awesome.”

Jimmy Taylor called their start in Twin Falls an unexpected turn that ended up being a “drastic change in direction.” The two were living in Austin — “We loved Austin. Looooooved Austin,” Sarah Taylor said — when the funeral for Jimmy Taylor’s grandmother brought them back to the area.

Sarah Taylor’s dad had been looking at the Ballroom, and told them he would buy it if they would run it. Jimmy Taylor joked running

Former U.S. Sen. James McClure of Idaho dies

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press

BOISE — Former U.S. Sen. James McClure, who spent six years as chairman of the Energy Committee and fought to keep Idaho’s wilderness areas controlled by the state, has died. He was 86.

McClure, a Republican who served 24 years in Congress, died Saturday, according to the McClure Center for Public Policy Research at the University of Idaho. His family said he died of complications from a series of strokes.

“Jim McClure set a standard for public servants that will endure for generations,” U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, said in a statement Sunday. “His unfailing goodwill and respect for others, together with his essential western conservatism, are still the best model for how to engage today’s public policy debates.”

U.S. Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho, called McClure a “principled conservative” who could work with all people to find solutions on difficult issues.

“Idaho has lost a great statesman,” Risch said.

McClure earned a reputation as a nuts-and-bolts legislative craftsman while in Congress and was genial but reserved among most colleagues. He was elected to the U.S. House in 1966, staying there until his election to the U.S. Senate in 1972, where he eventually became the head of the Energy Committee.

After six years in the seat, he lost the chairmanship when the Democratic majority took Congress in 1987. And though he fought to reduce federal control over wilderness in Idaho and throughout the West — hoping to free the land for economic development — in 1980 the federal government created the River of No Return Wilderness over his objections.

Still, McClure’s tenure was not without victories. During the Cold War, McClure was instrumental in persuading President Reagan in 1986 to abandon the unratified Strategic Arms Limitation Talks Agreement II in the wake of Soviet violations, according to “Politics

Blaine commissioners to choose new sheriff Tuesday

Times-News

HAILEY — The Blaine County Commissioners are set to interview three finalists for county sheriff tonight, before appointing and swearing in the new sheriff Tuesday morning.

The finalists, one of whom will replace retiring Sheriff Walt Femling, were selected by the Blaine County Republican Central Committee from eight men who put their names up for nomination.

Because Femling is retiring for health reasons before his elected

WHO’S RUNNING FOR BLAINE CO. SHERIFF

The three finalists for county sheriff are:

- Hailey police officer Larry Clark, who served eight years in Wood River Valley law enforcement after retiring from the U.S. Navy.
- Blaine County Sheriff’s Office Chief Deputy Gene Ramsey, who has served in law enforcement for 33 years after retiring from the U.S. Air Force military police.
- Phil English, who moved to the Wood River Valley a few years ago after 34 years in law enforcement in Texas.

term is up, representatives from his political party were able to choose the three finalists. The candidate the county commissioners appoint will serve until Femling’s term is up in 2012, when the public will elect his replacement.

Beginning at 6 p.m. today, the commissioners and three other county employees — prosecuting attorney Jim Thomas, director of probation Teresa Espedal, and county clerk JoLynn Drage — will question the candidates in open session and then behind closed doors. They do not expect to open questioning to the public, but the public is welcome to attend.

The commissioners will announce and swear in the new sheriff at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Luna plan

Altogether, a statewide contract could be worth an estimated $57.2 million over five years.

The legislation calls for Luna to form a task force that would decide how to implement the online course requirements and the laptop program, making recommendations on the types of devices Idaho should use and whether there should be a statewide contract or multiple contracts for individual school districts.

Idaho may not be picking sides yet when it comes to which company would provide the hardware, but at the state Legislature, it’s not uncommon to find a lobbyist for Apple Inc. touting the latest technology being used in the classroom or to hear a representative from chip-maker Intel Corp. praise Luna’s education reforms at a public hearing.

“Most of the people who have been there from these companies are their education arms, so they’ve brought research and have been able to show how technology can influence the classroom,” Willits said. “Certainly there’s another arm, which is the vendor arm, and we’ve not engaged any vendors whatsoever.”

House Education Committee Chairman Bob Nonini was among lawmakers impressed last week during a presentation by Apple Inc., which provides laptops to Maine students under a four-year, $64 million lease signed in 2009 and showed off some of the latest mobile devices and online curriculums being used by students.

“I think technology is great. I wish we would have had it in our era but we didn’t,” Nonini said. “I don’t think we can let the kids move forward without it.”

Democrats on the committee were more skeptical and questioned how much the technology would cost and whether teachers had been let go to help pay for computers in other states. Under the Idaho plan, the state would increase class sizes in grades four through 12 to pay for a bulk of the education reforms, cutting 770 teaching jobs.

State Rep. Brian Cronin, a Boise Democrat, sits on the education committee and said he felt like he was being “sold a solution” for public schools.

“Apple is, after all, a high-tech manufacturing company,” Cronin said. “And as unusual as it might be for Apple to come to us and say: ‘What do you guys think will be the next great iPhone?’ ... I’m not sure I understand the idea of a high-tech company necessarily advising us on educational policy.”

Apple lobbyist Renee Sinclair countered she was merely trying to brief lawmakers, at their request, on the latest online applications being used in schools.

“We show them on Apple products because that’s what we do. We’re not here to sell you a product,” said Sinclair, who later hailed the company’s experience with big state initiatives like the one proposed in Idaho. “We’ve tried to be a resource here as this legislation is moving through,” she said.

When asked if Apple would ultimately like to be the company that provides the hardware should Idaho adopt the reforms, Sinclair said: “I would imagine we would ... My role is to talk about policy. There are sales people, when that time comes, who will deal with that end of it.”

The legislation to boost technology in the classroom remains in the Idaho Senate, where it was introduced this month and is being reworked amid lawmaker concerns that include increased class sizes. The Senate passed two other bills that are in Luna’s reform package and would eliminate tenure for new teachers, restrict collective bargaining and introduce merit pay.

T.F. council to hear canyon trail proposal

New police chief, park garden plan also on agenda

Times-News

Folks who’ve wished for a walking trail into the Snake River Canyon will be heard before the Twin Falls City Council tonight.

John Lezamiz will present a petition to the council asking for a designated walking trail down Canyon Springs Road on the canyon’s Twin Falls side “to enable the safe passage of pedestrians into the Snake River Canyon.” A petition dated Jan. 28 lists nine issues with the current grade and the hazards pedestrians face when they walk on it. The petition has almost 200 signatures.

The item is on the agenda as a presentation, so the council may choose to take no action.

Also on the agenda:

- The Twin Falls Community Garden Board is asking to convert a section of Harrison Park into a community garden. The garden would be about 20 feet by 85 feet in the southwest corner of the presidential streets-area park. The garden board would pay for irrigation system improvements — so the project will cost the city nothing, as proposed — and the city is requiring a $500,000 liability insurance policy.

- Twin Falls Police Capt. Brian Pike will be sworn in as police chief. He will replace retiring Chief Jim Munn. The council selected Pike as Munn’s successor in January.

- The council will consider recommending the reappointment of city Planning and Zoning Commissioner Lee DeVore to another three-year term and consider the appointment of two new commissioners: Terry Ihler and Chuck Sharp. Ihler and Sharp would replace outgoing commissioners Gerardo Munoz and Bonnie Lezamiz.

Because DeVore lives in and represents the city’s area-of-impact residents, the council can only recommend his appointment. The Twin Falls County Commissioners have the final say.

in America; The 100th Congress,” edited by Alan Ehrenhalt.

He also co-sponsored legislation that weakened federal gun-control laws in 1986.

“Lots of legislation that went through Congress had his handwriting on it,” longtime McClure staffer Jim Goller said. “He was a leader, but he never tooted his own horn. He was a good guy to work for — he wanted people to challenge him and have opinions of their own.”

McClure was born and raised in the small town of Payette, Idaho, and served in the Navy from 1942 to 1945. Afterward, he earned his law degree from the University of Idaho and became the Payette County prosecutor and later the Payette city attorney.

“Jim McClure will stand as one of Idaho’s best public officials and one of our very best citizens,” said University of Idaho President M. Duane Nellis. “His passionate dedication to public service led to a lifelong career that had far-reaching local, state and national impact. As an institution, we are proud of his long and supportive association with the University of Idaho.”

— University of Idaho President M. Duane Nellis share them. In the 1970s, one biography put out by the senator’s office began, “If someone were to write down all of the qualities needed in a senator from Idaho, he might start by reading a biographical sketch of Jim McClure.”

In 1991, McClure retired from Congress at the age of 72.

“Whatever active life I have ahead of me — and who knows what that is, whether it’s five minutes or five years or 25 years — six years is a pretty big chunk of what’s left,” McClure told The Idaho Statesman as he considered his retirement plans. “And therefore it’s a very, very difficult question.” During the same interview, McClure said he was dissatisfied with Congress, calling it an “instrument of response, not an instrument of leadership.”

But he didn’t completely retire from political life, going on to serve as a lobbyist for interests including Idaho Power Co. and Coeur d’Alene Mine and overseeing former Gov. Phil Batt’s citizens’ committees studying deregulation.

McClure’s contributions prompted then-President George W. Bush to sign legislation renaming the federal building in Boise as the James A. McClure Federal Building and United States Courthouse.

Fellow Republican Larry Craig was elected to replace McClure in 1990. He served three terms before deciding not to run again in 2008 amid criticism of his arrest in a Minneapolis airport restroom.

the business would be like a master’s of business administration program to follow Sarah’s bachelor’s degree in business.

In February 2010, Sarah Taylor moved back. She said she attended every meeting she could, from Historic Preservation to general Twin Falls City Council meetings. It was because Sarah Taylor sat in on a city council meeting two weeks ago that a dozen-plus other interested citizens later meandered through her business to critique proposals for a new fountain plaza. Mayor Don Hall had called out to her, asking if the city could use her building for the forum.

Sarah Taylor said they’ve been called the “new blood” of downtown, young people who are enthusiastic about the success of the area. It’s a role they are willing to embrace in an area that’s been criticized for holding no appeal for twenty-somethings. “If we didn’t have this business, we would not be here because this town holds nothing for us,” Sarah Taylor said. “But since we are, in a sense, forced to be here, because we are, we are running this business,” “Chose, we chose!” Jimmy Taylor corrected.

She chuckled and continued: “We chose, we dedicated ourselves to being here for a certain period of time, and hey, if while we’re here we can do anything to make it not so dead,” “Maybe good!” Jimmy chimed.

“Maybe even a little bit cool, then hey, that’s awesome,” Sarah finished.

Schools chief cleared to go back to work

Times-News

Wiley Dobbs, Twin Falls School District superintendent, was released by doctors to return to work after suffering a heart attack almost a month ago. A stent was inserted to allow blood flow to his heart, and he has been recovering at home. Dobbs made an appearance at the district office and a board meeting on Thursday. TFSD spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass said he will slowly work back up to his full time position and is following his doctor's recommendations to improve his health. Dobbs, 52, said he was glad to be back at work and was very encouraged by the support from coworkers and community members. He has been working with the Twin Falls School District since 1984 and has served as Superintendent since 2004, after serving as interim superintendent in 2003.

Jeff Gordon ends winless streak at 66 races

By John Marshall
Associated Press writer

AVONDALE, Ariz. — Just before peeling off what he called a lame burnout near the finish line, Jeff Gordon screamed into his radio, the emotion pouring out with his voice.

“We just beat Kyle Busch!” he yelled.

Gordon did much more than that. He was headed back to Victory Circle, the longest winless streak of his career finally in the rearview mirror.

Overcoming a slew of potentially disastrous incidents, Gordon passed Kyle Busch with eight laps left and stretched his lead from there, ending his winless streak at 66 races Sunday at Phoenix International Raceway.

“It feels so amazing. I can’t tell you how amazing this feels,” Gordon said. “It’s been a long time, I know, and I’m going to savor this one so much.”

PIR has been the place to end long winless streaks lately. Ryan Newman halted a 77-race checkerless streak at PIR in the spring and Carl Edwards stopped his run at 70 races without a win in the fall.

Gordon, a four-time

Sprint Cup champion, was mired in a drought that seemed inexplicable for one of NASCAR’s most successful and popular drivers. Even in ending it, it wasn’t easy.

Coming off a disappointing Daytona 500, Gordon struggled in qualifying and started 20th. Early in the race, he was knocked into the wall by Edwards and later had to avoid a massive wreck that led to a 14-minute red flag. He also had to pull behind another car to shake loose a piece of debris from his grill and fight his way back to the front after a slow pit stop late in the race.

Gordon still managed to lead a race-high 138 laps and was able to pull alongside then bump Busch out of the way to win for the first time since April 2009 at Texas. It was his 83rd career victory, tying him with Cale Yarborough for fifth all-time.

“He was on a mission today, that’s for sure,” said Busch, who held on for second to fall just short of winning all three NASCAR races in the same weekend for the second time in his career.

“When Jeff Gordon has a good car and he’s got the opportunity to beat you, he’s going to beat you, there’s no

CSI set to host Region 18 tourney

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

It’s tournament time.

The College of Southern Idaho will host the 2011 Region 18 men’s and women’s basketball tournaments this week. Games tip off on Thursday afternoon and continue through Saturday’s championship matches.

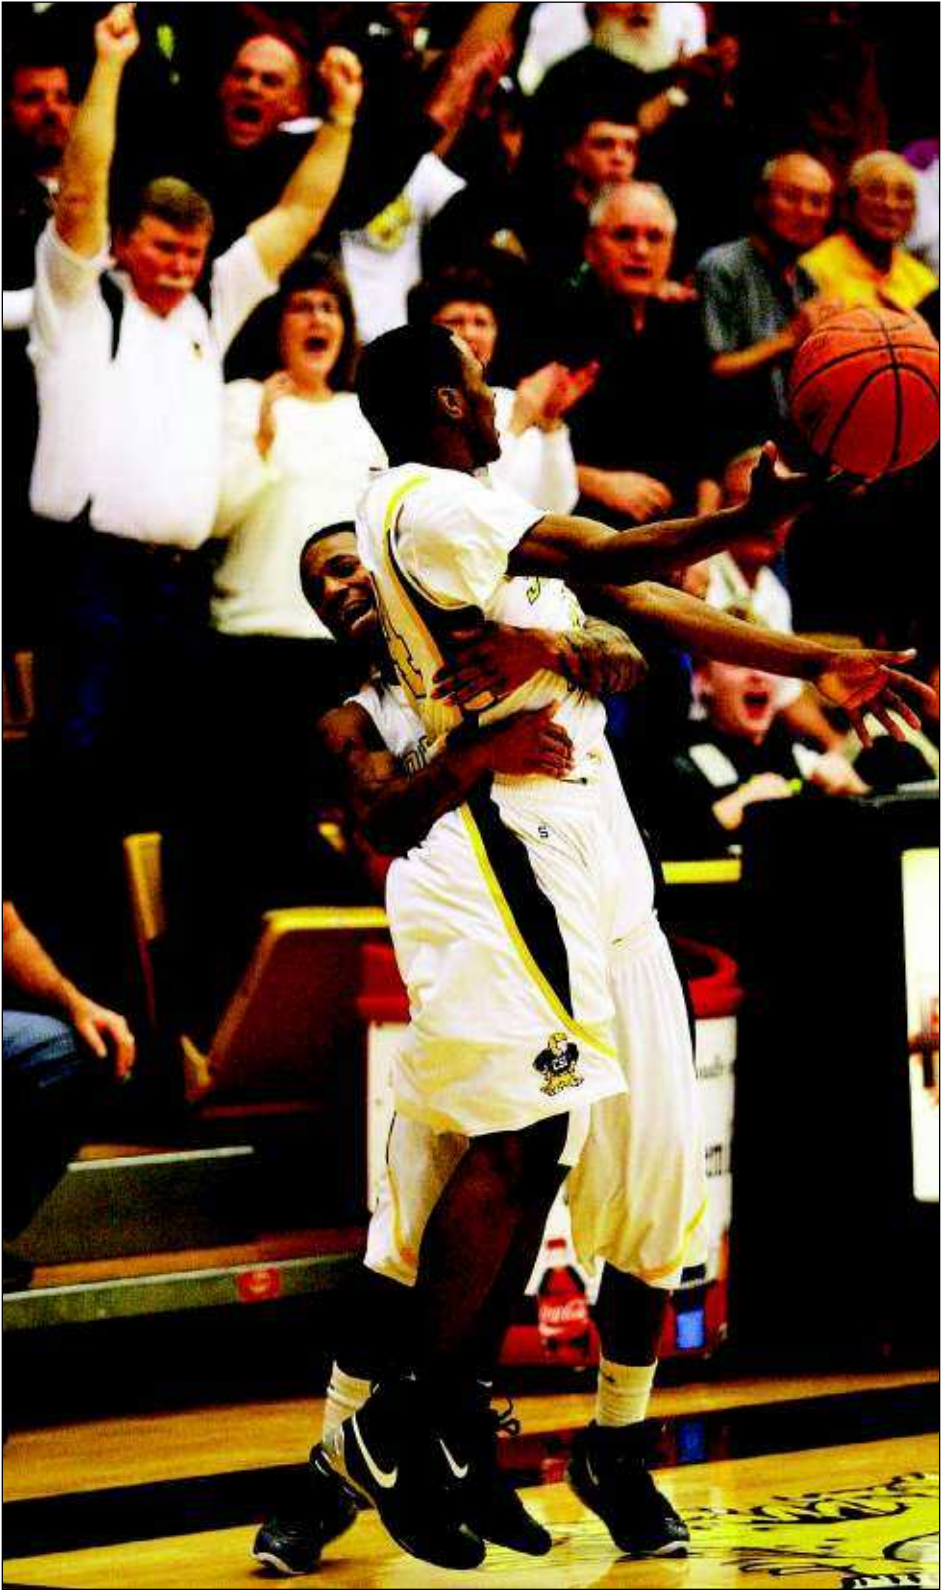

As Scenic West Athletic Conference regular-season champions, the third-ranked CSI men own the No. 1 seed for the region tourney and receive a first-round bye. The Golden Eagles will face the winner of Thursday’s quarterfinal matchup between fourth-seeded Snow College and No. 5 seed North Idaho College in a 7:30 p.m. semifinal on Friday. While CSI swept NIC in three meetings this season, it went just 1-2 against the Badgers, the only team it had a losing record against in league play.

“It’s do or die,” said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. “Hopefully we can keep winning to extend the season as long as possible.”

Second-seeded Eastern Utah also receives a first-round bye and awaits Thursday’s Salt Lake-Colorado Northwestern winner for a Friday afternoon semifinal.

Saturday’s men’s championship game is slated for about 7:30 p.m., with the winner traveling to Phoenix, Ariz., March 8 for a bi-regional play-in game to reach the NJCAA Tournament March 15-19 in Hutchinson, Kan.

“We just need to stay humble,” CSI guard Pierre Jackson said when asked for the key to his team’s postseason hopes.

If higher seeds win, the title game would feature a rematch of CSI and No. 14 CEU, two teams that played an epic double-overtime thriller this past week, won 88-86 by CSI.

Lockout could leave NFL rookies with big challenge

By Michael Marot
Associated Press writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Florida defensive back Ahmad Black would prefer to focus on football.

Instead, he’s getting a crash course in labor negotiations, lockout rules, even the possible implementation of a rookie wage scale.

These new obstacles are threatening to make the transition from college football to the NFL more complicated than usual, even if the players don’t want to admit it.

“Hey, it’s better than doing it for free,” Black said Sunday at the NFL’s annual scouting combine. “I’m going to get a little bit of something (in a contract).”

Black, like most of the 329 draft prospects in Indianapolis this weekend, is trying to stay away from the discussion that has overshadowed one of the league’s biggest and busiest off-season events.

Normally, the discussion in Indy centers on 40-yard dash times and bench press repetitions.

This year, the showcase has expanded to multiple venues. There’s been a steady stream of meetings in hotel hallways, at the convention center, even at the Colts’ complex. Everyone from owners to coaches to agents have been briefed about negotiations that could avert the looming lockout, which could begin Friday.

And the potential draft picks find themselves caught in the middle.

If the expected lockout begins, teams will be prohibited from communicating with veterans or negotiating player contracts. Free agency will be put on hold and teams cannot cut players from their current rosters.

They’re all at different points, but they’re going to have to develop. If it’s going to be an issue, though, it’s going to be an issue for everybody.”

That’s not necessarily what the players want to hear.

“I don’t think it would set us back,” Miami cornerback DeMarcus Van Dyke said. “It would make us hungrier when we get into camp. It will probably cut down all the long contracts and just get guys right into camp.”

But it could affect how much of an impact the rookies make next season.

Without a playbook and minicamps, the learning curve likely will get steeper. And history has shown how tough it can be.

Rob Morris, the Colts’ first-round pick in 2000, often said his rookie hold-out stunted his development.

Former Ohio State running back Maurice Claret didn’t even make the Denver roster after missing two college seasons, and former Southern California receiver Mike Williams, another former first-round pick, had only 44 catches in his first three NFL seasons after sitting out the 2004 season.

The players in Indy want to avoid those mistakes.

“It’s always a setback because you want to be able to learn as much as you can and get that jump on everybody,” UCLA safety Rahim Moore said. “I hope there’s a minicamp so I can get the playbook and learn as fast as I can. If you try to rely on a training camp, it can be a bad thing.”

There’s even a possibility that the league’s first work stoppage since 1987 could lead to condensed training camps, the cancellation of games or, as unlikely as it seems, the loss of an entire season.

“At the end of the day, those guys are going to have to come up with an agreement because you can’t cancel the game of football forever,” said LSU’s Patrick Peterson, currently projected as the draft’s top-rated cornerback.

The other big issue will be contracts.

If the owners get the rookie wage scale they want, the days of record-breaking rookie contracts will be history. Last year’s top overall pick, Sam Bradford, signed a six-year deal worth $78 million with $50 million guaranteed.

Team officials are hoping a wage scale will lead to fewer holdouts. But there are no guarantees.

Donald wins first World Golf Championship

MARANA, Ariz. — Luke Donald spoiled Martin Kaymer’s rise to No. 1 in the world by winning the Match Play Championship on Sunday with a performance so dominant he never played the 18th hole all week.

Not even the snow and sleet could stop Donald.

On a bizarre final day in the high desert, which began with snow covering the fairways, Donald pulled ahead for good with a birdie on the par-5 11th and a par on the next hole, eventually closing out Kaymer on No. 16 for a 3-and-2 victory.

The consolation prize for Kaymer is going to No. 1 in the career, which he assured by reaching the championship match.

Donald was in more dire need of this trophy, however.

It was his first win in America in five years, and it was only his second win worldwide since he captured the 2006 Honda Classic. The 33-year-old Englishman had done just about everything right except win.

He took care of that in a week like no other in the 13-year history of the Accenture Match Play Championship. Donald played only 89 holes in six matches and never trailed in any of them. In fact, he led after 81 of those holes.

“It feels amazing,” Donald said. “I had a bit of a monkey on my back. I hadn’t won in the U.S. in five years.”

Donald won his first World Golf Championship, and became the second player from England to capture the Match Play Championship. He goes to a career-best No. 3 in the world to continue a European resurgence in the ranking.

WAGNER WINS MAYAKOBA GOLF CLASSIC

PLAYA DEL CARMEN, Mexico — Johnson Wagner won the Mayakoba Golf Classic for his second PGA Tour title, beating Spencer Levin with a par on the first hole of a playoff.

Wagner, also the 2008 Houston Open winner, closed with a 4-under 67 to match Levin at 17-under 267 on the Greg Norman-designed El Camaleon course. Levin shot a 65.

Champions Tour player John Cook shot a 66 to finish third at 14 under. Chris Stroud (70) was fourth at 13 under, and David Toms (67), Rory Sabbatini (66) Brian Gay (68), Briny Baird (69), Jarrod Lyle (70) and Bobby Gates (70) were 12 under.

Wagner had four birdies — on Nos. 7, 8, 11 and 13 — in a bogey-free round. He earned $666,000 in the event played opposite the Match Play Championship in Arizona.

WEBB’S TAKES HSBC WOMEN’S CHAMPIONS

SINGAPORE — Karrie Webb surged ahead with four straight birdies on the back nine and held off Japan’s Chie Arimura for a one-shot victory at the HSBC Women’s Champions.

The 36-year-old Webb, who earned $210,000 for the victory, was even on the front nine and bogeyed No. 10 before the string of birdies on Nos. 11-14 at Tanah Merah Country Club.

Gasol, Lakers edge Thunder 90-87

OKLAHOMA CITY — Pau Gasol had 18 points and 11 rebounds, Kobe Bryant scored 17 points and the Los Angeles Lakers extended their cushion over Oklahoma City in the Western Conference standings by beating the Thunder 90-87 on Sunday.

Andrew Bynum added 16 points and 10 rebounds, but the Lakers weren't able to simply overpower the a Thunder team that added Kendrick Perkins for interior toughness but won't get him in the lineup for a couple weeks.

SUNS 110, PACERS 108, OT
INDIANAPOLIS — Channing Frye hit a long jumper as the overtime buzzer sounded to lift Phoenix over Indiana.

Grant Hill had 34 points for the Suns, who scored the first seven points of overtime before the Pacers rallied.

Josh McRoberts tied the game at 108-all on a three-point play with 23.9 seconds remaining. But the Suns worked the clock to 3.5 seconds, and after a timeout, Frye converted from 23 feet for the victory.

TIMBERWOLVES 126, WARRIORS 123
MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Love had 37 points and 23 rebounds to extend his NBA-leading double-double streak to 46 games, and Minnesota snapped a seven-game skid.

Love had his fourth 30-point, 20-rebound game of the season as the Timberwolves overcame a 14-point deficit and avoided extending their longest losing streak of a frustrating season. The All-Star forward also went 18 for 23 from the free throw line to tie Minnesota's franchise records for attempts and makes.

ROCKETS 91, HORNETS 89
NEW ORLEANS — Kevin Martin scored 33 points and Houston won its fourth straight.

Kyle Lowry added 18 points for the Rockets, who overcame a 16-point, second-half deficit and made 11 3-pointers in the game, four each by Martin and Lowry. Martin was 13 of 13 on free throws, hitting two key foul shots with 18.4 seconds left to give Houston a 90-87 lead.

76ERS 95, CAVALIERS 91
CLEVELAND — Elton Brand and Lou Williams scored 16 points apiece, and Philadelphia moved above .500 for the first time this season.

The 76ers, who have won a season-high four straight games, placed six players in double figures. Philadelphia (30-29) has won six of seven and 13 of 17, but had to hold off a late Cleveland rally that saw the Cavaliers cut a 15-point lead in the second half to two in the final seconds.

Cleveland forward Antawn Jamison left the game in the third quarter with a broken little finger on his left hand. He scored 16 points in 30 minutes. J.J. Hickson had 22 points and 16 rebounds for Cleveland.

MAVERICKS 114, RAPTORS 96.
TORONTO — Dirk Nowitzki had 31 points and 13 rebounds, Shawn Marion scored 20 points and Dallas won its sixth straight game.

Jason Terry scored 19 points for the Mavericks, who have won 16 of 17, including nine of 10 on the road. Dallas came in having lost two straight against the Raptors, but won for the 12th in 15 meetings.

Ian Mahinmi scored 13 points, and Jose Barea had 12 points and nine assists for Dallas.

MAGIC 100, BOBCATS 86
ORLANDO, Fla. — Dwight Howard had 20 points and 10 rebounds to lead Orlando past Charlotte.

Brandon Bass added 17 points and Gilbert Arenas chipped in 16, making four 3-pointers to break out of a recent shooting slump.

Orlando won for the fourth time in five games and 12th in 14 meetings with Charlotte. The Bobcats had a two-game winning streak snapped and remained a half-game behind Indiana in the chase for the East's final playoff spot.

SPURS 95, GRIZZLIES 88
SAN ANTONIO — Manu Ginobili scored 18 of his season-high 35 points in the fourth quarter to rally San Antonio past Memphis.

The Spurs overcame the loss of Tony Parker and improved their NBA-best record to 49-10, tying a single-season franchise record with their 21st straight home victory.

KNICKS 91, HEAT 86
MIAMI — Carmelo Anthony scored 29 points, Amare Stoudemire added 16 points and a huge blocked shot against LeBron James with 7 seconds left, and the New York Knicks stunned the Miami Heat 91-86 on Sunday night.

Chauncey Billups had 16 points, including the go-ahead 3-pointer with 1:01 left for New York, which rallied from a 15-point, first-half deficit. Stoudemire finished with 10 rebounds for the Knicks, who improved to 2-1 since the megatrade with Denver that dramatically changed their roster.

Thomas' spurt lifts No. 2 Buckeyes, 82-61

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Deshaun Thomas, last year's Indiana Mr. Basketball, came out of a slump with 22 points to lead No. 2 Ohio State past Indiana 82-61 on Sunday.

Thomas scored all the points during a 14-3 first-half run that spanned 3:36 and turned the game into a rout.

William Buford added 15 points and Jon Diebler and David Lighty each had 11 for the Buckeyes (27-2, 14-2 Big Ten), likely to ascend to No. 1 next week after top-ranked Duke lost at Virginia Tech on Saturday night.

NO. 16 LOUISVILLE 62, PITTSBURGH 59, OT

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Kyle Kuric scored 12 points, including two big baskets in overtime, and the Cardinals held on through a bizarre ending to the extra session.

The clock didn't stop after the basket, which put the Cardinals up 62-59, and the horn sounded. Some Louisville cheerleaders on the baseline raced onto the floor, with one male cheerleader grabbing the ball and tossing it in the air.

makers to their sixth straight win and into contention for a Big Ten title.

Purdue (24-5, 13-3) took control with a 16-5 run midway through the first half and turned the road game into a rout with a 19-4 spurt in the second half that gave them a 57-35 lead.

NO. 12 WISCONSIN 78, NORTHWESTERN 63

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin is perfect at home for the third time under Bo Ryan.

Jon Leuer scored 26 points and No. 12 Wisconsin beat Northwestern 78-63 in its regular-season home finale

Sunday night, securing a perfect 16-0 record at the Kohl Center this season.

Jordan Taylor scored 16 points and Keaton Nankivil added 15 for Wisconsin (22-6, 12-4 Big Ten), which has won seven of its last eight overall.

NO. 14 CONNECTICUT 67, CINCINNATI 59

CINCINNATI — Kemba Walker scored 11 of his 16 points in the second half and the Huskies pulled away late to snap a two-game losing streak.

UConn (21-7, 9-7 Big East) hadn't lost three in a row all season. It led for all but 29 seconds against Cincinnati (22-7, 9-7), but never by enough to get comfortable.

NO. 19 NORTH CAROLINA 87, MARYLAND 76

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Tyler Zeller scored 25 points while freshman Harrison Barnes had 21 to help the Tar Heels pull into a tie with Duke atop the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Leslie McDonald added 15 points off the bench to break out of a recent shooting slump for the North Carolina (22-6, 12-2), which led the entire night for its 15th win in 17 games.

NO. 25 XAVIER 66, DAYTON 62

DAYTON, Ohio — Tu Holloway scored 26 points, hitting the biggest shots down the stretch and helping the Musketeers remain alone atop the Atlantic 10.

Xavier (22-6, 13-1) retained its one-game lead over Temple heading into the final week of the regular season. It has won at least a share of four straight regular-season titles.

Dayton (19-10, 7-7) trailed by 11 before a late comeback tied it at 59 with 1:41 to go. Holloway made two free throws, then hit a 3-pointer with 41 seconds left for a 64-59 advantage.

Hall of Fame center fielder Duke Snider dies at age 84

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

Duke Snider, the Hall of Fame center fielder for the charmed "Boys of Summer" who helped the Dodgers bring their elusive and only World Series crown to Brooklyn, died Sunday. He was 84.

Snider died at the Valle Vista Convalescent Hospital in Escondido, Calif., said the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum, which announced the death on behalf of the family. Snider had been ill for months. His family said he died of natural causes.

"The Duke of Flatbush" hit .295 with 407 career home runs, played in the World Series six times and won two titles. But the eight-time All-Star was defined by much more than his stats — he was, after all, part of the love affair between the borough of Brooklyn and "Dem Bums" who lived in the local neighborhoods.

Ebbets Field was filled with stars such as Pee Wee Reese, Roy Campanella and Gil Hodges during that 1955 championship season. Yet it is Snider's name that re-frains in the ballpark favorite "Talkin' Baseball."

"Willie, Mickey, and the Duke," goes the popular song, which marks its 30th anniversary this year.

Snider wore No. 4 in Dodger blue and was often regarded as the third-best center fielder in New York — behind Willie Mays of the Giants and Mickey Mantle of the Yankees — during what many fans considered the city's golden era of baseball.

"The newspapers compared Willie, Mickey and I, and that was their thing," Snider said several years ago. "As a team, we competed with the Giants, and we faced the Yankees in the World Series. So we had a rivalry as a team, that was it. It was an honor to be compared to them, they were both great players."

Mantle died in 1995 at age 63. Mays, now 79, threw out a ceremonial ball last fall before a playoff game in San Francisco.

Commissioner Bud Selig called Snider an "integral part of Dodger history" and part of an "unparalleled triumvirate of center fielders" in New York.

"Then the Los Angeles native went home and helped usher in a new part of baseball history with great class," he said in a statement.

Former teammate Don Zimmer played with Snider for five years.

"Duke never got the credit of being the outfielder that Mays and Mantle were. ... But Duke was a great outfielder. He was a great player," he said.

Snider hit at least 40 home runs in five straight seasons and led the NL in total bases three times. He never won an MVP award, although a voting error may have cost him the prize in 1955. He lost to Campanella by a very narrow margin — it later turned out an ill voter left Snider off the ballot, supposedly by mistake.

Carl Erskine was Snider's roommate for 10 years and the two shared a house at spring training in Vero Beach, Fla., with their families

"Duke played so great when I pitched," he recalled. "He just made so many plays in the World Series for me, and he seemed to play his best when I pitched."

Snider hit .309 with 42 homers and a career-high 136 RBIs in 1955. That October, he hit four homers, drove in seven runs and hit .320 as the Dodgers beat the Yankees in a seven-game Series.

"He was the true Dodger and represented the Dodgers to the highest degree of class, dignity and character," Dodger Hall of Fame Manager Tommy Lasorda said.

doubt about that. He's my hero and I've always watched him and what he's been able to accomplish over the years, so it's no surprise that he beat us."

Jimmie Johnson, Kevin Harvick and Ryan Newman rounded out the top five in a 312-lap race around PIR's mile oval, the last on the current surface.

The quirky old track will undergo a $10 million repaving and reconfiguration project before the fall race, a move that isn't popular with many of the drivers.

The old bump-and-crack-filled surface held up well in its final weekend with a flurry of records.

Clint Bowyer set the qualifying mark in trucks on Friday, then Busch did it in Nationwide on Saturday. Edwards set a new Sprint Cup qualifying record at the track, hitting 137.279 mph to barely edge Kurt Busch on a day when 15 drivers eclipsed the previous record set by Edwards in the fall.

Conditions were a little different for Sunday's race.

A big storm came through the Valley of the Sun overnight, leaving a dusting of snow on the mountains above the track and washing away all the rubber that had built up on the track the previous two days. That meant a change in setups for all the teams, more grip for the tires and, fitting for the way the weekend went, more speed.

And it seemed the extra speed was hard to handle, leading to numerous early cautions, including one that took out Daytona 500 winner Trevor Bayne.

Edwards never got much of a chance to make it two straight wins at PIR. After leading several laps early, his No. 99 car got sent to the infield grass around Lap 60 when Kyle Busch's car got loose and hit him on the right side.

Edwards tried to keep going, but smoke started billowing out of the left side of his car and he was unable to turn, slamming into Gordon and sending both of them into the wall. He returned to the track later and finished 28th.

"I watched the replay and I think Kyle was just having a little trouble with his car," Edwards said. "He was frustrated about it and didn't give us the room we needed. It just worked out in the absolute worst case for us."

A few laps later, the big wreck hit.

It started with Matt Kenseth bumping Brian Vickers coming out of Turn 2. Vickers tried to correct his slide, got loose and started a chain-reaction wreck that involved 13 cars and brought out the red flag, not to mention several wreckers — the kind of aggressive racing not normally seen early in the season or early in races.

"They were driving like it was the last lap!" said Clint Bowyer, who was a part of the wreck. "Man, if we keep this up, we'll only have four cars to end all these races."

Once track officials finally cleared the track, the drivers were treated to a series of long runs.

Tony Stewart, Gordon and Johnson traded leads after that, with Gordon getting the longest stints. He seemed to be in control down the stretch, but lost the lead on a slow pit stop during the final caution.

Gordon quickly worked his way back through the field and caught up to Kyle Busch, who had passed Stewart for the lead. He stalked Busch for a few laps, then made his move and stretched the lead to take the checkers for the first time in a long time.

The fans in the grandstands savored the moment, nearly all of them rising as he crossed the line, and Gordon had a raucous celebration in the pits with his crew, owner and teammate Mark Martin.

"We were the only one to beat Kyle Busch this weekend and he's so tough to beat," Gordon said. "What an awesome, awesome feeling to have a car like that."

And to win like that, finally.

Lots of money at stake in ed reform – and too few answers

Sometime today or Tuesday, the Idaho Senate Education Committee will sit down and start deconstructing the centerpiece of Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s sweeping education reform plan.

It’s got its work cut out.

Senate Bill 1113, which was approved by the same committee earlier this month, calls for increasing class sizes in grades 4-12 and cutting 770 teaching jobs in the next two years. It would redirect millions of dollars into technology upgrades, a laptop computer for every high school student, online courses and teacher performance pay.

The legislation was pulled back last week amid concerns in the Senate about raising school class sizes. The other two pieces of Luna’s Students Come First initiative — SB1108, reducing Idaho teachers’ contract rights, and SB1110, setting up the performance-pay plan — both passed the Senate on Thursday.

Serious questions remain about the provisions of SB1113, and the technology aspect is especially vexing. We wonder how many IT positions have been cut in school districts across Idaho over the past two years and whether the legislation will provide money to bring back enough specialists to make all that expensive new classroom hardware and software work consistently.

And there are potential ethical issues.

Luna’s plan would funnel millions of taxpayer dollars to private-sector providers of online courses. As the Idaho Statesman and The Associated Press reported earlier this month, the superintendent has long known and worked with individuals who stand to benefit financially from his reform proposal.

Some of them have contributed to Luna’s political campaigns.

Consider K12 Inc., a Virginia-based online company with 81,000 students and operator of the Idaho Virtual Academy. In Idaho, IVA enrolls 2,930 students and received $12.8 million from the state in fiscal 2010. K12, its employees and major stockholders spent about $44,000 supporting Luna; $25,000 of that was funneled to an Idaho interest group for independent advertising on Luna’s behalf.

K12, whose co-founder and major stakeholder is former junk-bond king Michael Milken, also has financial ties to the J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation, which ran full-page newspaper ads statewide in support of the Luna plan.

Former state Sen. Laird Noh, a Kimberly Republican who retired in 2004 after 24 years in the Legislature, told the Statesman he fears privatization will twist policy to the detriment of students.

“It reminds me very much of President Eisenhower’s warning to beware of the military-industrial complex,” said Noh, who clashed with K12 Inc. while in the Senate. “It seems to me that what we’re seeing here is the educational-industrial complex that’s operating behind the scenes, with people like Rupert Murdoch. They are interested in the millions of dollars, frequently taxpayer dollars, which they can glean through the political process.”

Under Luna’s proposal, school districts could designate the required online courses that students must take, but not the providers of those classes. Yet the districts — and by that we mean the taxpayers — would still have to pay for them.

There’s a lot of your money on the table here. And it’s not clear how it would be spent, and with whom.

We agree with Sen. Shawn Keough, R-Sandpoint, that these issues should have been discussed before Luna sprang his sprawling reform package on the Legislature on Jan. 12.

So now the Senate Education Committee must act in haste. Let’s hope Idaho’s taxpayers don’t spend the years ahead repenting in leisure.

If the government shuts down, so be it

The Washington establishment believes that the government shutdown of 1995 was a disastrous mistake that accomplished little and cost House Republicans politically.

The facts are exactly the opposite.

While the shutdown produced some short-term pain, it set the stage for a budget deal in 1996 that led to the largest drop in federal discretionary spending since 1969. The discipline imposed by this budget — overall spending grew at an average of 2.9 percent a year while I was speaker of the House, the slowest rate in decades — allowed us to reach a balanced-budget deal in 1997.

Newt Gingrich

This would all have been impossible had Republicans not stood firm in 1995 and shown the American people (and the White House) that we were serious about reducing spending.

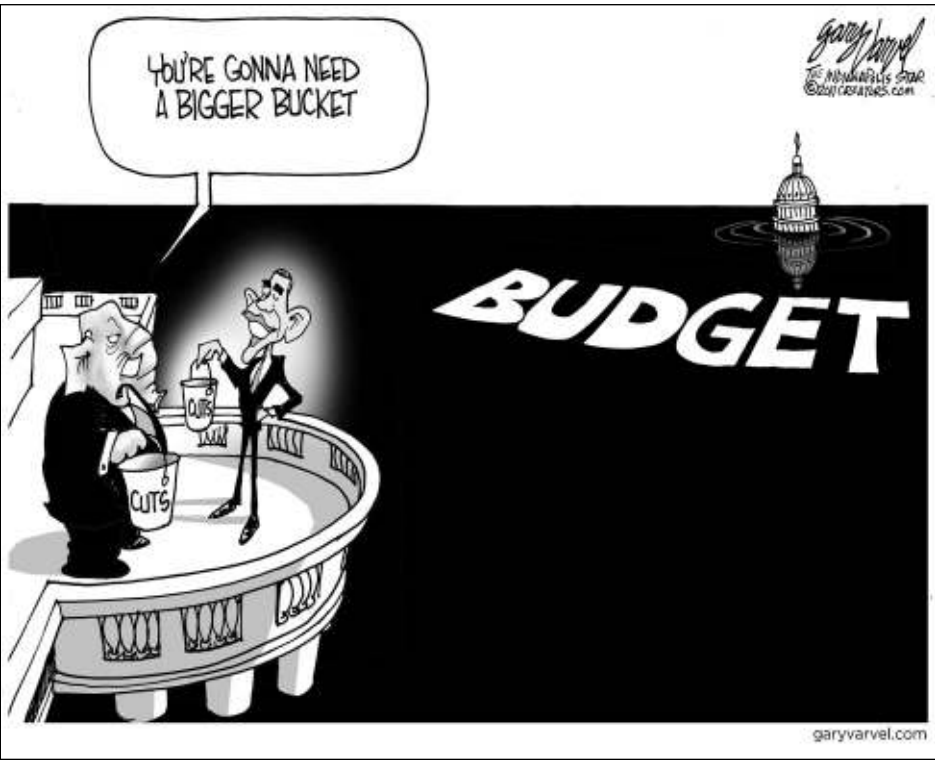

This historic success was not an achievement of the Clinton administration. In the summer of 1995, administration officials publicly expressed doubt that our aggressive timeline for a balanced budget was even possible. Instead, the balanced budget was an outcome driven by House Republicans with limited support from skeptical Senate Republicans.

How did it happen?

In the spring of 1995, House Republicans passed a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget. Seventy-two Democrats joined us, giving us the required two-thirds majority to amend the Constitution. Unfortunately, the Senate failed to reach this threshold by one vote.

At a three-hour leadership dinner shortly thereafter, House Republicans, including Texas’s Bill Archer of the Ways and Means Committee, Louisiana’s Bob Livingston of the Appropriations Committee and, most important, Ohio’s John Kasich of the Budget Committee, agreed that we were at a crossroads.

A typical group of politicians would have decided that we had technically kept our word in the Contract With America by holding the vote on the balanced-budget amendment, so it was now okay to revert to politics-as-usual and continue deficit spending.

“(Republicans should) work to keep the government open, unless it requires breaking (their) word to the American people Becoming one more promise-breaking, Washington-dominated, sellout group is a much worse fate — politically and ethically — than having the government close for a few days.”

But we weren’t interested in procedural success. We were elected to deliver results. So the House Republican leadership decided that we would voluntarily balance the budget, even without an amendment.

Our constitutional amendment would have set a seven-year deadline to balance the budget. We adopted the same timetable and created a plan that would end deficit spending by 2002. As we developed the reforms and spending cuts, Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., and Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., encouraged us to be smart rather than cheap. We realized that cutting spending in areas that produce long-term savings was destructive to the goal of a sustainable balanced budget. That is why, in the midst of a broad array of reductions and reforms, we doubled the budget for the National Institutes of Health and increased defense and intelligence funding.

The crisis came late in 1995, when the Clinton White House and Senate Democrats set out to test our seriousness. They made a calculated, cynical decision to use the threat of a presidential veto — which would close the government — to insist that we drop our balanced budget.

Those who claim that the shutdown was politically disastrous for Republicans ignore the fact that our House seat losses in 1996 were in the single digits. Moreover, it was the first time in 68 years that Republicans were reelected to a House majority — and the first time that had ever happened with a Democrat winning the presidency.

Neither these historic achievements nor this historic win would have been possible had Republicans not stood firm and showed the country that we were serious about keeping our commitments.

The lesson for today’s House Republicans is simple:

Work to keep the government open, unless it requires breaking your word to the American people and giving up your principles. Becoming one more promise-breaking, Washington-dominated, sellout group is a much worse fate — politically and ethically — than having the government close for a few days.

House Republicans should give President Obama the opportunity to sign significant spending reductions and keep the government open, or to veto their cuts and close the government. Similarly, they should give Senate Democrats a chance to accept real spending reductions or make clear that it is their stubborn liberalism that is closing the government.

Another shutdown of the federal government is not an ideal result, but for House Republicans, breaking their word would be far worse.

Newt Gingrich is a former speaker of the House of Representatives. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cuts to program would be devastating

My dear fellow Idahoans, Idaho government is voting this week to cut all adult developmentally delayed and adult mentally ill programs. No PSR (rehabilitative program) or Developmentally Delayed adult services! The effects of this will be catastrophic for these fragile people, plus will hurt our communities beyond belief. Loss of jobs for the providers, loss of business, income, increased unemployment lines, etc. These community losses don’t compare to any degree the pain and suffering and loss of life and hope that will ensue on our most fragile of fragile populations affected.

This will virtually take away their lives, their contact with society, their hope for a future of independence. Those now being kept out of hospitals and legal system will fall back into the already overcrowded system. There is no way we can support that; it will end up hurting us and them more in the long run. A simple proposed 1 cent tax hike will save us from all this.

Medicaid fraud is also rampant and can be curtailed by a simple drug test for those applying or on the program to see who is (common practice) selling their prescription drugs for street drugs. We need to use our heads to solve this problem and the answers are there, but please, please do not take away the lives and hopes of thousands of disabled people!

First the government takes away from those who can’t fight back, then it’s us. Speak up, step forward, take a stand; it’s them today, us tomorrow. This idea is just not acceptable, is inhumane and unjust. Look into your hearts!

I went to the statewide rally yesterday, and to see those beautiful people crying and shaking in fear of losing the only lifeline they have known was more than I could take. Please write to your representatives! God hear our prayers.

Stop the government takeover of our lands

It’s sad when so called gooders try to keep people from other states and organizations try to put unfair regulations on Idahoans!

Mr. Eckert is right on the mark in his Feb. 20 letter. We must all stand up for the given rights to our public lands. It is also our responsibility to patrol and make sure that all who use these lands are doing so in the proper manner! Most of the folks are really good at leaving the land better than when they found it, but it only takes one rotten apple to spoil the whole barrel!

If you see something wrong or you think it’s wrong, get the information on the people and report it at once! We also need stiffer fines for the misuse of our public lands! Stop government takeover of our lands and our rights as good stewards of Idaho!

By the way, I would like to put common sense back into Idaho’s Fish and Game as your next commissioner, and I would be darn good for Idaho. Write the governor and voice your opinion as to who fills this soon to be open position.

"In March of 2008, I decided to have my heart tested when HealthFair was conducting tests near my home. The procedure was fun and painless, but the technician told me I had a problem. My Aorta was 5.7 cm, not in the danger zone, but way above normal. I went to a cardiologist to confirm these results and yes indeed I needed surgery. Three months later and I am already back at work. While I am grateful to the surgical team, I owe a big thank you to HealthFair. My father actually suggested I go for the test, and I am glad I did. I felt fine and there were no symptoms, but yet one day in the near future I would have died.

Funny thing is, I just had an annual checkup and was told I was fine. I suggest everyone reading this to get checked out with HealthFair. This test saved my LIFE!

This February my wife set appointments for the two of us with your bus. I was found to have an enlarged aortic root and your staff told me to see a doctor right away. My doctor ordered more tests and found I had a very enlarged aneurysm on my ascending aorta. Surgery followed the next month and I am happy to say that the recovery is going well and we would like to let the public know that the services that are offered through "HealthFair" have proved to be invaluable to our lives. We have told many people about you. Thanks for being there and having a price that is affordable to the average person.

ULTRASOUND TESTS OF THE HEART & ARTERIES

INTERPRETED BY BOARD CERTIFIED
PHYSICIANS

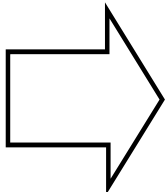

Heart Disease, Stroke, & Aneurysm Prevention Package

Echocardiogram Ultrasound Test

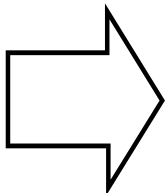

♥ Echocardiogram is a video ultrasound of the heart. It may detect enlargement of the heart, valve abnormalities, blood clots and tumors.

Electrocardiogram (EKG) Test

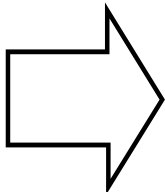

♥ EKG may detect ischemia, silent heart attack and atrial fibrillation. EKG provides a picture of the electrical activity of the heart.

Hardening of the Arteries (ASI) Test

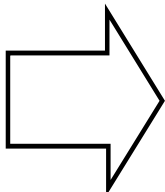

♥ Hardened arteries cause the heart to work harder, which leads to vascular disease. ASI test shows the degree of hardening of the arteries.

Stroke/Carotid Artery Ultrasound Test

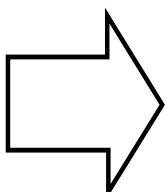

♥ Many strokes are associated with blockages in the carotid arteries that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm Test (4-hour fast required)

♥ Abdominal aortic aneurysms form as a result of a weakness in the lining of the artery wall that may be detected with an ultrasound.

Peripheral Arterial Disease (P.A.D) Test

♥ Many adults have leg cramps due to poor circulation. ABI screening measures extremities for peripheral arterial disease.

ALL 6 TESTS

♥ These cardiac and vascular tests are painless and non-invasive. Their combined cost is more than $2,300 at most hospitals.

20-Value Blood Chemistry

Complete Metabolic & Lipid Panel (Results While You Wait)

♥ This finger-prick blood test uses state-of-the-art technology to assess the kidneys, liver, bones, electrolytes levels and much more.

WISCONSIN Officials decide not to evict protesters from Capitol

MADISON — Wisconsin authorities backed away Sunday from a threat to evict hundreds of labor-rights demonstrators who have occupied the state Capitol for nearly two weeks.

Union members, students and activists staged the sleep-in to dramatize opposition to Republican Gov. Scott Walker's attempt to eliminate collective bargaining for most government workers.

The state Department of Administration had announced Friday that the Capitol would close at 4 p.m. Sunday for cleaning and reopen at 8 a.m. Monday. As the deadline approached, some demonstrators left. But hundreds remained, preparing for arrest.

About 7 p.m., Capitol Police Chief Charles Tubbs said the remaining protesters could stay the night as long as they otherwise continued to abide by laws.

The Capitol sleep-in has been almost uniformly peaceful, with only a few arrests on minor charges, Tubbs said. Many police are sympathetic to the protesters' cause, although most public safety employees are exempt from the bill.

CALIFORNIA 'King's Speech' wins best-picture Oscar

LOS ANGELES — "The King's Speech" has been crowned best picture at an Academy Awards ceremony as precise as a state coronation, the monarchy drama leading as expected with four Oscars and predictable favorites claiming acting honors.

Colin Firth as stammering British ruler George VI in "The King's Speech" earned the best-actor prize Sunday, while Natalie Portman won best actress as a delusional ballerina in "Black Swan."

The boxing drama "The Fighter" claimed both supporting-acting honors, for Christian Bale as a boxer-turned-drug-abuser and Melissa Leo as a boxing clan's domineering matriarch.

"The King's Speech" also won the directing prize for Tom Hooper and the original-screen-play Oscar for David Seidler, a boyhood stutterer himself.

WASHINGTON Sources: Gingrich closer to 2012 presidential run

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich intends to take a formal step toward entering the 2012 presidential race within the next two weeks, Republican officials said Sunday, after months spent traveling to important primary and caucus states.

These officials declined to say precisely what type of announcement the 67-year-old former Georgia lawmaker would make, but added they expect him to make clear his determination to run.

If so, he would be the first Republican to do so in a slow-to-develop field of potential challengers to President Barack Obama.

Gingrich became the first Republican speaker in 40 years after he led his party to control of the House in the 1994 elections. He left Congress two turbulent terms later, intensely controversial and under pressure from disillusioned one-time supporters in the rank and file.

ARIZONA Tea party 2012 poll favors Georgia's Cain, Texas' Paul

PHOENIX — Tea party supporters voting in a straw poll at a national summit favor conservative Texas Rep. Ron Paul and Georgia radio host Herman Cain for president in 2012.

Cain won 22 percent support from the audience in Phoenix at the summit organized by the Tea Party Patriots. He was followed by Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty and Paul among those casting ballots in person.

Paul had the most votes overall, thanks to a swell of support from online voters. Between the two sets of results, there were about 1,600 votes. Paul gathered more than one-third of them.

Pawlenty and former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin each had 9 percent overall. Cain, Paul and Pawlenty were the only three to speak at the three-day summit.

OREGON Congressman explains mental health issues

PORTLAND — An Oregon congressman whose erratic behavior has recently prompted calls for his resignation said Sunday that some of his actions could be attributed to a reaction to mental health drugs.

U.S. Rep. David Wu told The Associated Press, however, that it does not explain the behavior documented in reports over the last month, which included sending his staff photos of himself wearing a tiger costume.

Wu said he was hospitalized after his 2008 campaign for symptoms that were later diagnosed as a reaction to common mental health drugs. A spokesman, Erik Dorey, identified them as the sleep-aid drug Ambien and a generic form of Valium, which he said Wu used for anxiety and stress.

Wu said that as a result, he felt dizzy and confused on Election Day that year, when his staff and family reportedly were unable to locate him.

"It came up that afternoon, and it knocked me off my can," Wu said, referring to the symptoms.

Wilma Frances Horne Buhler

March 20, 1914 - Feb. 23, 2011

HAILEY — Wilma "Billie" Frances Horne Buhler passed away on Wednesday, Feb. 23, in Boise at St. Alphonsus hospital. She was born in Hailey on March 20, 1914, and lived in the Wood River Valley for almost 97 wonderful years. Woodrow Wilson was president of the United States when she was born.

Her father, Robert Ray Horne, also born in Hailey, married Phelena Cantine Spencer from Los Angeles. They had five children and first lived on a farm up Quigley Creek. Water for the house had to be taken from the creek. Mother described it as a "very humble home." The family moved to Hailey and lived close to the grade school that all of the children and their father graduated from. Two moves later, they moved into the home that became known as the Ezra Pound House.

Her mother taught her how to sew and that skill was enhanced in her home economics studies — a bonus in her life. She remembers "not having too much money growing up, but we were always well dressed, and happy, even with underpants made from flower sacks." She enjoyed playing basketball and tennis in high school. Her father would take the basketball team to Gannet for their games in a sleigh with a wood stove to keep them warm. An all-day and into-the-night trip but it was fun. She graduated from Hailey High School in 1932.

She worked for the telephone company the summer after high school and enjoyed dancing for entertainment. She invited Harold Buhler to a dinner dance that the young ladies' mothers put on and he accepted. They started to attend the weekly dances, and their courtship lasted about one year before they decided to marry. Dancing continued to be important to them, and included waltzes and square dancing with couples that would become the best of lifelong friends.

They were married in 1934 and lived for two years on the Buhler ranch before moving to a small house in Bellevue when Harold took a job with the Wood River Water board. In 1941, they moved to their first purchased home in Hailey with their three sons. They purchased a dairy farm where they milked the cows, bottled the milk, and then delivered the milk to homes in Hailey.

The farm was sold but they kept the delivery side of the business. They delivered to homes and businesses in Hailey and Ketchum with products purchased from Young's Dairy in Twin Falls. An opportunity then became available to operate the Bellevue Ranch in partnership with Harold's parents.

Billie had taken a leave from the phone company until the boys were older. When Mountain Bell no longer needed operators to connect and manually ring the phone, she retired and then took a job with the Blaine County Sheriff's office as a deputy. She retired again in 1962 and became very serious about her quilting.

To Harold and Billie, their church and their calling were always a very important part of their activities as a family, providing them with a wonderful life and strength for their community activities as well. Between the farm and her work outside the home they did not take many vacations or leave the valley for very long but after retirement they visited the Holy Land, Europe, and Western Samoa.

Billie was preceded in death by her husband, Harold Burdette Buhler, her oldest son Gerald Horne Buhler and her sisters, Roberta McKercher, Barbara Irwin, and Laura (Deni) Newman and her brother Robert Keith Horne.

To her two remaining sons, Harold Keith Buhler and William Spencer Buhler, she leaves a legacy of love and understanding. She thanks the Hinckley, the Fowls and the Miller families for the daughters she always wanted but had to wait a few years for.

In lieu of flowers, Keith and Bil, along with fifteen grandchildren, forty-seven great grandchildren, and seven great-great grandchildren, ask that donations be made to the senior center Senior Connection of Blaine County, P.O. Box 28, Hailey, Idaho 83333. The entire family would like to thank the Idaho Home Health and Hospice center, especially Dr. Clinger, Lori, Stephanie, Melody and Jennifer for their expertise in taking such good care of a special lady.

Funeral services will be at 1 p.m., Tuesday, March 1, 2011, at the Hailey L.D.S. Chapel. Interment will follow in the Hailey Cemetery. Friends may call at Wood River Chapel, Hailey, from 6 to 8 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday at the church one hour prior to the service.

Friends are invited to share memories and condolences at www.woodriverchapel.com.

LIBYA Gadhafi loses another city to Libyan opposition

BENGHAZI — Moammar Gadhafi's tenuous grip on Libya was further loosened when the city closest to the capital fell under the control of rebel forces, leaving Tripoli encircled by opponents determined to topple the dictator's 41-year regime.

Zawiya, a city of 210,000 just 30 miles west of Tripoli, was shaping up to be a potential focal point for clashes as anti-government forces with tanks and anti-aircraft guns massed throughout the city center Sunday, and Gadhafi forces surrounded the outskirts with tanks and military checkpoints, residents said.

From the east, small bands of armed men traveled in the direction of the capital from Benghazi, the city that gave birth to the 11-day uprising.

"This standoff may drag on for some time, and it may become much, much uglier," said Paul Sullivan, a regional expert at Georgetown University who has studied Libya for years. "The international community is going to continue to be placed in a very difficult position."

NEW ZEALAND Infant is first quake victim laid to rest

CHRISTCHURCH — A 5-month-old boy was laid to rest Monday at the first funeral for victims of New Zealand's devastating earthquake, as the death toll rose to 148 and the government said the economic cost could be $15 billion.

Dozens of family and friends gathered at a small chapel in the stricken city of Christchurch for Baxtor Gowland, who was sleeping at home when he was struck by masonry shaken loose by the magnitude 6.3 quake last Tuesday. He died in a hospital, the family said in a statement read to The Associated Press by the child's great-uncle, Peter Croft.

Inside the chapel, a slideshow of the smiling infant's photographs flashed on a screen, as Sarah McLachlan's song "Angel" echoed throughout the room.

Authorities have named just eight victims of last week's disaster — Gowland and another infant among them.

MEXICO CITY — Mexican authorities on Sunday arrested two alleged members of the Zetas drug cartel they say are linked to the killing of a U.S. immigration agent, including a boss of the man suspected of carrying out the attack.

Mexican marines arrested Sergio Mora, an alleged regional leader of the Zetas, in the northern city of Saltillo, along with five other suspects, the navy said in a brief statement.

Mora is boss of Julian Zapata

Espinoza, who was arrested Wednesday and is accused of fatally shooting U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agent Jaime Zapata and wounding fellow agent Victor Avila in the Feb. 15 attack, the navy said. The statement gave no other details.

Also Sunday, Mexican federal agents arrested Luis Rojo, known as "Red Bear," an alleged member of the Zetas also linked to the killing of the ICE agent, the Safety Department said in a statement.

Federal police arrested Rojo, 27, in the northern state of San Luis Potosi, where the attack on the agents took place on a highway linking Mexico City to the northern city of Monterrey.

Rojo has links to Jesus Rejon, a lieutenant in the Zetas drug cartel who has also been mentioned as a suspect, the department said.

Neither official statement specified how the suspects were involved in the attack on the U.S. agents, other than saying that Mora is a gang chief who gave orders to Zapata Espinoza and that Rojo was suspected of handling the cartel's finances in the region.

TUNISIA President appoints new prime minister

TUNIS — Tunisia's interim president chose a former government minister as a new prime minister on Sunday, appealing for a return to calm following new violent protests that have been hobbling this North African country since the ouster of its long-time autocratic leader.

DAYS LOST TO PAIN

Twin Falls migraine sufferer Jessica Lierman began experiencing extreme migraines about five years ago. 'Sometimes I couldn't even function,' she said. After eliminating foods from her diet that triggered the migraines, Lierman, 24, said her quality of life has improved dramatically.

How migraines affect us, and what we do for relief

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Mitch Eckles loses half his eyesight. Barbara Tolman wakes up with pain on the right side of her head. Megan Burr gets numb.

Across south-central Idaho, migraines put workers and students out of commission for days at a time. Their symptoms are varied, and so is the relief they find. But between endless doctor appointments, trial-and-error with medication and journaling potential triggers, finding a treatment that works can cause headaches in itself.

The medical community is still trying to understand migraines, said Dr. Bradford Talcott of Eastern Idaho Neurologist Associates in Idaho Falls. It does know a migraine isn't just a headache: The signature pain is more of a symptom of a bigger neurological event that can also cause nausea, sensitivity to light and sound, numbness, temporary paralysis and aphasia.

The causes of migraines aren't known, but Talcott said most of his colleagues believe hyperactive nerves in the brain are to blame. Some people are genetically predisposed, Talcott said, and a migraine can occur when those nerves are set off by triggers like alcohol or lack of sleep.

Eckles, of Filer, has had migraines since he was 4.

"I am talking about loss of half of my eyesight for about an hour, followed by pain that is so intense that even the bones I have broken in my life do not compare," Eckles, 35, wrote in an e-mail to the Times-News. The migraines hit about once a month and put him out of commission for up to three days at a time. He tries to sleep through the pain and nausea, and spends his time in a dark room to minimize the pain.

Adults aren't the only ones who suffer. Burr, 13, has had migraines since she was 11.

The Twin Falls teen has experienced numbness in her arm, cheek, fingers and tongue with some of her migraines. Earlier this month, she experienced her first bout of aphasia — a language disturbance in which the speaker can't form the words she's thinking of. For almost 20 minutes, nothing she said made sense, said her mother, Debbi Burr.

"She said that she could see in her head what she wanted to say but it didn't sound like that when she would try to speak," Debbi Burr wrote in an e-mail. Migraine-related aphasia was in the news recently after Los Angeles reporter Serene Branson had an on-air aphasia incident while reporting at the Grammys on Feb. 13.

Tolman, 48, who lives in Burley, said the painful headaches hit her once a week. In a Wednesday phone interview, she was still suffering from a Tuesday attack.

"It's not as bad today," she said. "Yesterday I would have not wanted to talk to anybody."

Tolman started getting migraines about 10 years ago. Pain, light sensitivity and sound sensitivity are her biggest symptoms. When she closes her eyes, she sees vivid colors.

"It's just that I can't enjoy them because it hurts," she said.

So what relief is there? And are there ways to prevent migraines?

It's different for each patient. Jessica Lierman, 24, changed her diet to prevent her migraines. After nearly five years of debilitating headaches, multiple doctor visits and a CAT scan for a suspected brain tumor, the Twin Falls woman went online and found that her symptoms lined up with food allergies.

She visited an allergist to confirm her suspicions and found she was allergic to latex. Many foods, like avocados and cantaloupe, cause reactions in people who have latex allergies. Once she eliminated those fruits and vegetables from her diet, she felt instantly better.

Eckles takes metoprolol, which doesn't work as well as he hoped it would. After years of meds, he still can't find a treatment that works well for him.

"Basically every migraine medication that has been available through the public, I've tried," Eckles said in a Thursday phone interview. The best he can do is try to sleep through it in a dark, quiet room — the same approach Megan Burr takes.

Tolman takes Topamax and gets regular shots. Neck massagers and eating ice cream also provide a little relief.

They take the edge off, she said, but don't prevent the headaches completely. It's frustrating, Tolman said, but her son and husband help her get through the painful episodes.

And knowing she's not alone helps Tolman cope.

"It's just nice to hear from others who have it," she said. "You start feeling like you're crazy."

WHO SUFFERS FROM MIGRAINES?

Between 6 percent and 8 percent of men and 15 percent to 18 percent of women experience migraines each year, according to the World Health Organization. Statistics vary country to country: In Turkey, 10 percent of men and 22 percent of women experience migraines, while in Asian countries, 3 percent of men and 10 percent of women do.

Why do women have it worse? Blame it on the hormones.

TAKING TREATMENT

There are as many migraine treatments as there are triggers. The Times-News spoke to three southern Idahoans who treat migraines about the approaches they take:

Dr. Bradford Talcott of Eastern Idaho Neurologist Associates said many people find relief with over-the-counter medicine such as Excedrin and Aleve. If those don't help, it's time for a trip to the doctor for a prescription, the Idaho Falls neurologist said.

Lifestyle changes are also important, and they vary patient to patient. If you suffer from migraines, Talcott said, consider seeing a neurologist first. Visit his website at theheadacheguru.com.

Dr. Brady Wirick of Idaho Chiropractic Neurology in Idaho Falls advises many of his patients to stop eating dairy, soy and gluten. Wirick, a board certified chiropractic neurologist, also encourages them to consume more vitamin D, glutathione and fatty acids. Most migraines are related to autoimmune conditions, Wirick said, so getting the body's immune system in order is the best way to fight migraines. Visit his website at idahofallsmigrainedoctor.com.

Julie Willimott, owner of Snake River Acupuncture, bases her practice on Eastern medicine and emphasizes treating the root of the migraine instead of masking the symptoms with painkillers. The licensed acupuncturist analyzes each client's energy channel, then tries to clear what she calls blocks in energy pathways in the body. She then assesses lifestyle to find potential triggers.

"I can have 100 migraine patients and treat everyone totally different with great results," Willimott said.

POTENTIAL TRIGGERS

These things can set off migraines:

- Caffeine
- Chocolate
- Alcohol
- Tobacco
- Monosodium glutamate
- Allergies
- Stress
- Skipping meals
- Sleep deprivation
- Bright lights
- Strong scents like perfumes and air fresheners
- Weather changes
- Hormones and menstrual cycles

Flu vaccine available for $14 at health district offices throughout Magic Valley

Times-News

Reports of flu-like sickness around south-central Idaho are rolling in to South Central Public Health District.

So leaders there are issuing reminders to get vaccinated against influenza — and offering flu shots for $14 at health district offices in Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Bellevue, Jerome and Gooding. That's a savings of $9.

A high-dose flu shot for a more robust immune response is still available this year for people older than 64 and costs $38. The health district will bill Medicaid and Medicare Part B.

Visit www.phd5.idaho.gov for seasonal flu vaccination schedules.

The health district recommends the flu vaccine for everyone older than 6 months. The flu virus spreads quickly, particularly in schools and workplaces. The flu is contagious before symptoms start, so practice good hygiene at all times to help prevent its spread.

What does that mean?

Wash your hands often, and particularly after sneezing and coughing. Avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth. Cough and sneeze into your sleeve.

Runaway muscle

Scientists still do not understand well what causes most muscle cramps, but in general a cramp is a muscle running out of control.

What should happen

- 1 Brain sends signal to muscle
- 2 Muscle tightens, nerves detect movement and signal brain what's happening
- 3 Brain fine-tunes muscle contraction
- 4 Brain tells muscle to relax to normal ready condition

Contract!

That's enough! Hold it there

Chill!

What happens in a cramp

- 1 Brain sends signal to muscle, or some other cause stimulates nerve and triggers muscle
- 2 Muscle tightens hard; cramp triggers pain sensors
- 3 Brain orders muscle to stop; muscle ignores signal or never gets it
- 4 Cramp lasts until muscle becomes fatigued or is massaged and relaxes

AIEEEE!

Relax!! Relax!!

Grinding can help control fat content

The Washington Post

Want to control the fat content and the flavor of your meats? Get a grinder, says Cooking Light nutrition editor Sidney Fry.

When you grind your own meat, she says, "you know exactly what you are getting." Store-bought ground turkey, for instance, can contain more dark meat than white and even the skin, boosting its fat content. Grind your own turkey breast, sans skin, to cut the amount of fat.

"Take a whole lean sirloin steak (or ask your butcher for tenderloin tips) and grind it yourself with a little onion and seasoning for the best burger you'll ever eat," Fry said in an e-mail.

Relaxation drinks: Rest assured with low-key nightcap?

By Rachel Saslow
The Washington Post

Once, "relaxation beverages" consisted of alcohol, chamomile tea and warm milk. Now, the field includes a slew of new drinks promising a better night's sleep using such ingredients as melatonin, valerian root and — think turkey — tryptophan.

They have apt names such as Unwind, iChill and Dream Water, and offer such flavors as Berry-Berry Tired, Snoozeberry and Lullaby Lemon. They're the inverse of energy drinks. Consumers can wake up with Red Bull and then wind down with Slow Cow.

But can consumers trust these fruity concoctions to give them their z's?

According to Steven M. Scharf, director of the Sleep Disorders Center at the University of Maryland in Baltimore, the answer is a resounding maybe.

"The issue is this: Some of them probably have some biologic effect, but they haven't been as well studied as you'd like," Scharf says. "Nobody's ever compared valerian root to (the prescription sleep aid) Ambien."

The chief ingredient in many of these beverages is melatonin, a hormone that induces sleepiness and helps coordinate the body's biological clock. It's typically released by the pineal gland around 10 p.m.; secretion stops around 4 or 5 a.m., helping to trigger the body to wake up, Scharf says.

The body produces about three-fourths of a milligram of melatonin a day. The manufacturer of the sleep aid Snooz'n says its 2.5-

DEB LINDSEY/
For the Washington Post

ounce "shots" contain five milligrams of melatonin; Unwind, a "relaxation blend," has three milligrams per 12-ounce can.

Oral doses of melatonin haven't worked much better at inducing sleep than a placebo in most studies, Scharf says, and a single, concentrated shot of the stuff doesn't exactly mimic the body's time-release system. However, a study published in January in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society found that a pre-bedtime cocktail of magnesium, zinc and a five-milligram dose of melatonin significantly improved sleep among a group of 43 elderly Italian insomniacs.

Jason Healy, the head of InterMark Brands, which markets Snooz'n, says he drinks his product on nights when he is stressed-out or when he is traveling internationally. The back of the Snooz'n bottle says the beverage will "combat stress, energy drinks and sleeplessness" and takes about 30 minutes to take effect. When it launches nationally in March, Snooz'n will be available in grocery and convenience stores and pharmacies, like most of these drinks.

"We attack (insomnia) from two angles," Healy says. "You've got to turn off all the stimulants and also get into a natural sleep cycle."

Melatonin is used for the latter, while ingredients such as valerian root and chamomile take care of the former, Healy says. Both of those herbs are associated with soporific effects, according to the Natural Medicines Comprehensive Database. Valerian root has properties that resemble the benzodiazepine class of medications (such as Valium and Xanax), but Scharf says he has no idea how they compare with standard sleeping pills because of the lack of comparative studies.

Containers of relaxation drinks look similar to those of energy drinks. Many mimic the diminutive shape of the 5-Hour Energy shot or the bright graphics and tall, narrow can of Rockstar or Monster. Flavors range from a pleasant, fruit-flavored soda to just shy of cough syrup.

Many relaxation beverages contain safety labels that warn consumers that they should neither drive or operate machinery after drinking them, nor mix them with alcohol. Some say they aren't intended for people younger than 18 or for pregnant or nursing women — a warning that the Food and Drug Administration has also made about melatonin.

In January 2010, the FDA sent a warning letter to the Innovative Beverage Group, which makes the relaxation beverage Drank, saying the melatonin it uses is an "unapproved food additive" and not "generally recognized as safe."

Drank is still being sold with melatonin in it. In a statement, Drank inventor Peter Bianchi says "the safety of Drank's consumers remains a top priority" and the company is working to modify the product's packaging and marketing "to reflect its classification as a dietary supplement."

The FDA regulates conventional beverages' ingredients and labeling claims more strictly than those of dietary supplements. Drank is still classified as a beverage.

Katherine Zeratsky, a registered dietitian at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., has blogged about relaxation drinks. She says that people with certain health conditions, such as high blood pressure, should consult their physician before downing a can of Unwind or any of the other sleep beverages.

"A person can just go to the convenience store and purchase this," Zeratsky says. "There's this perception that it's safe and, depending on the person, it might not be a good choice."

NOTICE OF HEARING
The Middle Snake Regional Water Resource Commission formed by a Joint Powers Agreement between the counties of Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls will hold a public hearing on the 16th day of March, 2011 at 1:15 pm at the Hempleman Building located at 246 3rd Avenue East in Twin Falls, Idaho. The purpose of the hearing is for public input on amendments to the Water Quality section and the addition of an Implementation section of the Coordinated Water Resource Management Plan. A summary of the proposed changes to the plan follows and a complete text of the proposed changes can be obtained at the County Clerk's office in Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls Counties Monday through Friday during the hours of 9:00 am to 5:00 pm. Gooding County offices are closed on Friday.
The proposed revisions will correct grammar, errors and update wording in the Water Quality section of the plan. The Preface has been changed to delete Minidoka county as a member county and the description of the Planning Area reflects this change. The Situation Statement has been revised to include aquatic nuisance species, recharge, cloud seeding, climate change and federal mandates and court decisions. Aquaculture facilities are now included under the Situation Statement for CAFO's. Item 19 under Policy Statements pertaining to water usage and diversions has been deleted. A section on aquatic nuisances species has been added which includes goals, objectives and strategies for preventing the introduction of these species. This section calls for education of the public, law enforcement, sportsmen and recreational groups. It also promotes the development of boat and equipment cleaning stations at recreation areas in the region. The Hydro Power situation statement has been updated and a new strategy AO1.a has been added to ensure there are no negative impacts to water quality from modifications to existing facilities. The Private, Municipal and Industrial waste treatment section has been revised to include commercial enterprises and the term "Middle Snake river" used throughout this section has been revised to "waters of the region". Goal B, Strategy BO1.b has been added requiring commercial and light industrial land uses to use municipal waste treatment systems unless there is insufficient capacity and what a developer must base their plans on when constructing private systems. BO1.c has been added calling for increased monitoring and enforcement of regulations for certain commercial and light industrial uses. BO1.f has also been added encouraging continued monitoring for pharmaceuticals in ground waters of the region. Goal C with objectives and strategies has been added to this section dealing with the development of heavy industry in the region. The purpose of this Goal is to protect surface and ground water quality within the region as it relates to heavy industry development. A waste treatment plan must include a contingency plan and assure there will be no negative impact from the escape or discharge of pollutants. This goal also calls for the construction of monitoring wells, Proper handling of commodity storage and solid waste landfills, dust and smoke stack remediation plans. The Field Agricultural Situation Statement has been updated to reflect the current number of farms, number of acres farmed and economic data. The goals, objectives and strategies of the Field Agricultural section has minor changes to correct spelling and phrases. Strategy BO2.g was added to promote research and the use of approved genetically engineered crops to reduce the use of pesticides and fertilizer. The Animal Agriculture Situation Statement has been changed to reflect current economic information for livestock operations. The definition of a Concentrated animal feeding operation (CAFO) has been changed to the definition used by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). A definition of an animal unit has been removed from the plan as each member county has their own definition of an animal unit. Strategies BO1.a, b, d, e, f and g have been eliminated and incorporated under new Strategies BO1a, b and c. BO1e is new and encourages monitoring for pharmaceuticals in ground and surface water. BO1f is also new and encourages increased monitoring and enforcement of regulations for chemical storage, mixing, application, waste disposal and spills including fuel storage. The Ground Water Recharge Situation Statement has been changed to reflect current information and recognize the Comprehensive Aquifer Management Plan (CAMP) in the recharge portion of the plan concerning the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer. Strategy AO1.d was eliminated under ground water recharge since the concern was already covered by strategy AO1c. In the Definition Section the definitions for Chemical, Nutrient, Organic and Sediment Contaminates are removed and replaced by a definition for Contaminates as defined by the EPA. The definitions for Commercial and Industrial properties is eliminated since both are defined by the member counties. A definition for Evapotranspiration (ET) has been added which is Water that is transpired from the leaves of plants and evaporated from the soil. Definitions have been added for NPDES, NRCS, TMDL as the abbreviations are used within the plan. A definition of wetlands has been included as defined by the EPA.
A new section, The Drinking Water Protection Plan, has been added to the Water Quality portion of the Coordinated Water Resource Management Plan. The purpose of this section is to address the concerns of cities and drinking water associations in protecting source water from contamination. The plan allows cities and member counties to work together in forming community advisory boards, delineating water protection areas, identifying potential sources of contamination, managing drinking water protection areas and planning for the future. This section outlines regulatory and non-regulatory approaches to protecting source water from contaminant sources within drinking water protection areas. Protection areas will be defined by the cities, drinking water associations and counties and set forth by overlays to county zoning maps. The Drinking Water Protection Plan will be implemented by the adoption of a Drinking Water Protection Ordinance by each county. A sample ordinance is attached to this section of the plan. The implementation will include an overlay to the county zoning map, an inventory of potential sources of contamination and the recognition of a contingency plan for contamination. The sample ordinance defines various water protection overlay districts depending on the time of travel for source water. Each district includes a description of land uses that will or won't be allowed with the county being the ultimate authority for land situated outside the city limits or the boundaries of a water association.
A new section to the Coordinated Water Resource Management Plan titled Implementation is added. The implementation portion of the plan reflects the way the plan has been adopted by the member counties. It calls for the application of policies included in the plan to apply to policies, resolutions and ordinances adopted by the member counties. It calls for coordination with planning and zoning commissions of the member counties as well as state and federal government agencies. It also calls for education, adoption and practice of water quality protection and conservation measure both in county facilities and new development. It further mandates that the plan must be continually reviewed and update as needed.
Any person may attend the hearing and written and/or oral testimony shall be taken. Written testimony may be sent to Bob Muffley, Executive Director, 122 5th Avenue West, Gooding, ID 83330. You may also fax comments to Mr. Muffley at 208-934-5648 and reach him by phone at 208-934-4781. All written comments must be received no later than the 16th day of March, 2011.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend “Diane” and I have known each other since we were children. She has always had difficulty in her relationships with men. In the last three years, she has begun dating married men. She was sure the latest one was the man of her dreams, but it was short-lived and destroyed his marriage. Diane rationalizes what she’s doing by saying the men will cheat anyway, so why not with her?

Diane is now in love with someone new. If he leaves his wife and children for her, this will be another home Diane has helped break up. She wants my blessings and for me to get along with her boyfriend. Being a married woman and a mother, I sympathize with the wives of these men.

Why has my best friend become a home wrecker? What can I do to avoid being pulled into this affair without losing her friendship?

— MORALLY COMPROMISED IN MICHIGAN

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR MORALLY COM-PROMISED: There is no one-size-fits-all answer about why a woman dates married men. Some women do it because they fall in love; others because they don’t care whom they hurt to get what they want; while still others see it as a competition they “have” to win — again and again.

You do not have to allow yourself to be drawn into this. Avoid it by making clear to Diane that as much as you care about her, you don’t approve, and want no contact with the new man in her life.

DEAR ABBY: Our son has not spoken to us in 2 1/2 years. This isn’t the first time it has happened. When we are asked how he and his family are doing and where they are living, we don’t know how to respond. What do we say when meeting someone new and they ask whether we have children?

If we answer that we have one son, a number of questions are sure to follow for which we don’t have answers. Can you offer some appropriate responses to these questions that don’t require having to say, “We don’t know?”

— NEEDS AN ANSWER IN VIRGINIA

DEAR NEEDS AN ANSWER: When someone asks how your son and his family are doing and where they are living, say, “We are estranged.” And if you are asked by a stranger if you have any children, look the person in the eye and reply, “I’d rather not discuss it.”

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor with a lovely family. While I enjoy talking to them, I don’t know how to politely tell her to stay home when I have company. She will send her children to my door selling school items when my adult children are here for dinner. She comes into my yard with her kids when I’m entertaining friends from out of town.

I was brought up that if a neighbor has company, you should stay home unless you were invited. I just want some privacy when I have guests.

— NAMELESS IN THE EAST

DEAR NAMELESS: You do have a problem, because it appears your neighbor is someone who never learned boundaries. Unless you tell the woman that when you’re entertaining guests, you want her to respect your privacy, she’ll continue inviting herself over. And if you prefer that your guests not be subjected to a sales pitch from her children, when they knock, tell them you have company, can’t talk to them right now and close your door.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"To clothe the fiery thought
In simple words succeeds,
For still the craft of genius is To mask a king in weeds."*

— Ralph Waldo Emerson

One aspect of bridge that new players and even relatively experienced duplicate players find very hard is to judge when to win tricks and when to duck them. After a few bad experiences of ducking aces and finding them ruffed away, a defender will hasten to take his tricks before the rats get at them, and his partner will then tell him, "Aces were made to take kings!"

Having been given this hint, play four spades on a top-club lead and heart shift. At the table, declarer took the heart ace and played another heart. Alive to the idea that declarer might be trying to ruff a heart in dummy, East made a nice play. He hopped up with the heart queen and led a trump, and when declarer finessed, West took his spade king and heart winner for down one.

If you focus on today's theme, you will see that declarer had a very simple resource available to him by following with a low heart from dummy at trick two. Contrast the situation East would now find himself in. If he returns a trump, declarer finesse, wins the heart return with the ace, then crosses to hand and draws trumps. The diamonds provide a home for the heart loser.

If East returns a heart at trick three, declarer wins dummy's ace, comes to the diamond queen to ruff his last heart, then ruffs a club and plays ace and another spade to remain in control of the hand whatever the defense does.

ANSWER: I would look here for our side's most passive lead. Both minor suits look far too committal, and since dummy rates to have four spades, I'd be very reluctant to lead that suit around to an honor in declarer's hand — though it could be our side's best lead if my partner has a very strong spade holding. I would expect a heart lead to be more passive, so that would be my choice.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Monday, Feb. 28, the 59th day of 2011. There are 306 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Feb. 28, 1911, President William Howard Taft nominated William H. Lewis to be the first black Assistant Attorney General of the United States. (Lewis took office in March 1911 and served until April 1913.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1844, a 12-inch gun aboard the USS Princeton exploded as the ship was sailing on the Potomac River, killing Secretary of State Abel P. Upshur, Navy Secretary Thomas W. Gilmer and several others.

In 1849, the California gold rush began in earnest as regular steamship service started bringing gold-seekers to San Francisco.

In 1861, the Territory of Colorado was organized.

In 1951, the Senate committee headed by Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., issued an interim report saying at least two major crime syndicates were operating in the U.S.

In 1953, scientists James D. Watson and Francis H.C. Crick announced they had discovered the double-helix structure of DNA, the molecule that contains the human genes.

In 1960, a day after defeating the Soviets at the Winter Games in Squaw Valley, Calif., the United States won its first Olympic hockey gold medal by defeating Czechoslovakia's team, 9-4.

In 1972, President Richard M. Nixon and Chinese Premier Zhou Enlai issued the Shanghai Communique at the conclusion of Nixon's historic visit to China.

In 1975, more than 40 people were killed in London's Underground when a subway train smashed into the end of a tunnel.

In 1986, Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme was shot to death in central Stockholm. (The killing remains unsolved.)

In 1993, a gun battle erupted at a compound near Waco, Texas, when Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents tried to serve warrants on the Branch Davidians; four agents and six Davidians were killed as a 51-day standoff began.

Ten years ago: A powerful magnitude 6.8 earthquake rocked the Northwest, shattering windows, showering bricks onto sidewalks and sending frightened people running into the streets in places like Seattle and Portland, Ore. A train collision in northeast England killed ten people and injured more than 80.

Five years ago: A 20-year-old legal fight over protests outside abortion clinics ended with the Supreme Court ruling 8-0 that federal extortion and racketeering laws could not be used against demonstrators. The first Mardi Gras since Hurricane Katrina drew a smaller-than-usual turnout.
