Overhaul of Medicaid unveiled

Medicaid reform

Legislation to revamp Idaho's Medicaid system would accomplish two things:

- $39.1 million in immediate cuts to 25 different service items.
- Eliminate the Medicaid fee-for-service model in favor of a managed, justified care approach.

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — State lawmakers are considering legislation that would tighten the eligibility and accountability for Medicaid amid a backdrop of declining state revenues and federal expansion of the program. Besides program cuts, legislators may also revamp how health care providers are paid, moving away from a fee-for-service model. Legislation introduced Wednesday in the House Health and Welfare Committee would bring about those wide-ranging Medicaid policy changes, which would save the state an estimated $39.1 million in the next fiscal year. “As the saying goes, if handed two lemons, make lemonade,” said committee Chairwoman and Rep. Janice McGeachin, R-Idaho Falls, referring to the combined challenge of Medicaid federal expansion and revenue shortfalls. The state's Medicaid services reach about 210,000 Idahoans each month, providing medical services to pregnant women, the disabled and children. The federal government covers about 76 percent of its funding, with the state picking up the rest. The $39.1 million in savings — not counting the lost federal match — would come from just 25 items. They include such actions as scaling back chiropractic-visit coverage from 24 yearly visits to six, reducing psychosocial rehabilitation coverage for adults, and requiring co-payments, except for prescriptions.

A WALK FROM THE PARK

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Jamie Carlton, left, walks with students Wednesday morning to Kimberly Elementary School. Carlton runs a program called Safe Routes to School to show children the safest way to walk to school is along sidewalks. More than 200 students participated Wednesday.

Walking Wednesdays help Kimberly kids stay active

Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — This isn't your granddaddy's walk to school — uphill both ways in the snow. On the contrary, the walk from Kimberly City Park to the elementary school is a quick, half-mile jaunt school officials are determined to make fun. More than 200 students skipped along the route from the park to their school Wednesday. Some wore colorful hats, while others donned skirts made of red, white and black tulle in honor of the Walking Wednesdays' theme, “Crazy for Kimberly.”

The program started just a month ago, and while many schools designate one day a year for students to walk to school, Safe Routes Coordinator Jamie Carlton said she hopes to expand Walking Wednesdays to a few days a week, with the goal of getting kids active and interested in living a healthy lifestyle. “I have kids that live in Twin, and their parents drive them to Kimberly early on Wednesday, just so the kids can walk each week,” she said. “We've had great success. If you walk with all of your friends it's fun.”

Kimberly schools temporarily locked down Wednesday

Kimberly School District officials temporarily locked down school buildings and offices Wednesday afternoon, in response to an unidentified person posing as a student. District Superintendent Kathleen Noh said the imposter entered the high school with a backpack, posed as a student, and later fled the school. The afternoon lockdown ended shortly after, and classes were dismissed for the day regularly. More information about the imposter and the lockdown was not immediately available Wednesday evening. School district officials deferred comment to area law enforcement, who deferred comment to school district officials.

GOP open primary overruled

By Todd Dvorak
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A federal judge on Wednesday declared Idaho's 38-year-old system for holding open primaries unconstitutional and handed conservatives in the state Republican Party a victory in their bid to make sure only registered party faithful take part in primary contests. The ruling by U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill deals specifically with Republican primary elections and paves the way for the GOP-controlled Legislature to begin working on changing state law to regarding rules for casting ballots in those early nominating contests. The decision was cheered by Republican party leaders, who for years have complained the open primary system allowed Democrats and independents to cross over and skew results in some of most competitive primary races. “This decision will allow the Idaho Republican Party to decide how to conduct its primary elections,” Republican Party Chairman Norm Semanko said in a statement. “We only ask, and have a right to expect, that members of the Democrat Party or other political parties will not choose our candidates for us.”

IDAHO AIRMEN DEPLOY TO AFGHANISTAN

More than 400 airmen stationed at Mountain Home Air Force Base are deploying to support Operation Enduring Freedom and the ongoing war in Afghanistan. The 389th Fighter Squadron “T-Bolts” will conduct combat operations, providing F-15E air support of joint operations, according to a Wednesday release from the Idaho Air Force base. Non-aviation airmen will also conduct a variety of tasks to provide combat support in the U.S. Central Command area of responsibility. “This is why we exist and what we train for everyday,” said Col. Ron Buckley, 366th Fighter Wing commander. “... I have no doubt that the T-Bolts are well prepared and will accomplish their warrior mission with the high standard of professionalism and skill that Gunfighters are known for.” — Staff report

ABOUT THE BILLS

- Senate Bills 1108 and 1110, which the Senate passed last week, are being heard in the House Education Committee. One adds a merit-based pay system for teachers, eliminating tenure, and the other revamps how teacher contracts and labor negotiations play out. What's next: Testimony about the bills today, with a vote likely later this week.
- Senate Bill 1113 deals with technology and student-teacher ratios. What's next: Legislators are preparing a new version, which would be introduced in the Senate State Affairs Committee.

Education reform bill being retooled

Goedde: expect new bill in about a week

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Reports that a key part of state schools chief Tom Luna's education reform effort is on life support or dead are exaggerated, Luna said Wednesday. In fact, he said, he expects to see a new bill emerge with changes after Senate Bill 1113 was held in a Senate committee on Tuesday. That bill would put more technology in Idaho classrooms, paid for by cutting 770 teacher jobs through attrition. Sen. John Goedde, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said it's likely that a new bill will be ready for introduction in the Senate State Affairs Committee in about a week. “It's got to be dealt with,” Luna said, stressing the need for school districts to have flexibility amid state budget cuts. Luna spoke about the issue Wednesday at an Idaho Press Club-sponsored event in Boise. Legislators have yet to move the bill out of the Senate, in part over concerns about larger classroom sizes in public schools. But bigger classes are coming regardless of whether the bill becomes law, Luna said, because budget cuts would still take a toll on schools. Idaho's public schools budget faces a potential shortfall of $62 million. “The issue is that we have to have an education system that can operate on less funding and operate successfully on less funding,” Luna said.

Primary

The state party filed its lawsuit two years ago, setting up a legal and philosophical tussle with some of the state’s top elected Republican officials.

The secretary of state, Republican Ben Ysursa, defended the state’s open primary system in court, and Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter at one point questioned the merits of dismantling an election process that has enabled Republicans of all stripes to dominate the statehouse and Idaho’s four congressional seats.

Ysursa called the ruling disappointing and said no decision has yet been made whether to appeal.

“My personal feelings on this have been clear throughout: I don’t know what’s broken here,” Ysursa told The Associated Press. “I think the Republican Party’s success in recent years has been quite remarkable with the open primary system. It’s pretty hard to argue against the success we’ve had at the polls.”

Idaho Republicans even strengthened their stranglehold on Gem State politics last year. In the current legislature, Republicans hold 28 seats in the Senate, compared to 7 Democrats. In the House, the GOP has 57 of the 70 seats. Republicans own all the top elected state offices and all four congressional seats.

But a growing conservative wing in the party was far from satisfied, and contended that voters they call “Republican lite” or identify more with moderates and independents hold too much sway in the primary races.

During a trial last fall, party attorneys claimed the open primary infringed on their First Amendment right to free association. They argued that the open primary lumps die-hard, registered Republicans in the same bloc as nonmembers.

Too often, the open primary system diluted the nominating process by forcing candidates in tight races to moderate their message to appeal to a broad spectrum of voters.

Winnmill agreed, saying the right to free association is also founded on the right not to be required to associate with certain groups. He also validated evidence presented at trial showing that past primaries were influenced by crossover voting by Democrats and Independents.

“Idaho’s current open primary system, as applied, forces the Idaho Republican Party to associate with, and have their nominees and positions determined by those who have refused to affiliate with the party,” Winnmill wrote. “The current primary system in Idaho imposes a severe burden on the Idaho Republican Party’s First Amendment rights.”

Idaho Democrats said voters will ultimately be the biggest victims in a future of closed primaries.

“Public elections are not meant for private clubs,” said Larry Grant, the new Idaho Democratic Party chairman. “Once again, the Republican Party is purging their ranks and requiring a loyalty oath to participate in the voting process. The Democratic Party welcomes all those voters across the state who have now been thrown out by the Republicans.”

Convicted sex offender sentenced for new crimes

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A convicted sex offender from Washington will serve at least five years in prison for his most recent sex crimes.

Steven Ray Joy, 30, of Olympia, Wash., was sentenced Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court, receiving five to 10 years in state prison for each of his convictions: lewd conduct with a minor under 16 and sexual abuse of a minor under 16. He was credited for 347 days already served in Twin Falls County Jail.

Joy was accused of multiple incidents of inappropriate contact with two female victims between 2000 and 2009. He was on probation from a 2004 conviction of lewd conduct with a minor under 16 in Ada County. His original prison sentence of five to 18 years on that charge was re-imposed. All sentences will run concurrently.

Joy was charged in Twin Falls County in July and pleaded guilty September.

Filer woman receives probation

Teresa Fritz had a seven-year prison sentence suspended for a probationary term of four years Monday.

The former treasurer of a

Buhl-based Cherokee tribe, Fritz pleaded guilty in January to grand theft for taking more than $5,000 from the tribe’s bank account. Included in her sentence is an order for 90 days in Twin Falls County Jail. A restitution hearing is set for March 22.

Gambrel set for felony arraignment

Kody Gambrel is set to answer for three felony counts of assault or battery upon personnel in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on March 21.

His case was moved to district court following a Friday preliminary hearing in which Magistrate Judge Michael Redman determined there was enough probable cause to pursue felony charges. Gambrel is accused of fighting with deputies while incarcerated at the Twin Falls County Jail. He is serving a 180-day sentence for a driving under the influence conviction.

New magistrate judge to be sworn in Twin Falls County’s newest magistrate will take her oath at 3 p.m. March 11 at Twin Falls County’s judicial building.

Former Minidoka County Prosecutor Nicole Cannon is set to join judges Roger Harris and Thomas Kershaw at the magistrate level this month. She replaces Howard Smyser, who retired in 2010.

The courthouse, known as the Theron W. Ward Judicial Building, is located at 427 Shoshone St. N., Twin Falls.

Alleged drunken driver to change plea

A Twin Falls man accused of killing a woman while driving drunk has decided to plead guilty after all.

Homero Garibay-Alvarez, 36, is scheduled to change his plea in a vehicular manslaughter case. He initially pleaded not guilty to the felony in Twin Falls County 5th District Court in January. A trial was scheduled to begin Tuesday.

There was no plea deal within his court file as of Tuesday, but minutes from the Monday pretrial state that the change of plea hearing is scheduled for March 10.

Garibay-Alvarez allegedly crossed the center line while driving on U.S. Highway 93 and crashed into a vehicle containing Samantha K. Leonard, 23, and her husband Kevin Leonard, 27, on Sept. 26.

The Leonards lived in Mountain Home, as Kevin is a U.S. Air Force airman.

County seeks bankruptcy after legal loss

BOISE (AP) — Boise County is seeking federal bankruptcy protection in the wake of losing a federal lawsuit and getting slapped with a $4 million judgment in the case.

County leaders say bankruptcy may be the only way they can continue to deliver services and maintain their lawsuit appeal.

In December, a federal jury sided with a developer seeking to build a treatment center and school for teens diagnosed with mental illness or substance abuse issues. Attorneys accused the county of working with neighbors who opposed Alamar Ranch and taking steps to undermine it during the approval and permitting process.

Walk

Each week has a different theme, and students are judged on their creative outfits. Carlton gives little prizes each week to the winners, sometimes extending the gifts to all of the children.

Josie Schmitz, 9, was dressed in knee-high, bright red socks, each of her tiny fingernails painted a different school color.

“This gets you up in the morning and you get to walk with friends,” Schmitz said as she lugged a backpack and a gym bag over one shoulder.

Along the route, volunteers and city employees pointed the way — their orange, reflective vests acted as beacons along the path. One teacher held a stop sign in the middle of the road and high-fived each kid as they passed.

“Good morning!” she sang.

“Good morning!” the students shouted back.

Once the students arrived at the elementary school, they were greeted with hot chocolate and bananas.

Riley Cartwright, 10, said he usually wins the costume contest. He snapped his suspenders and adjusted his red, white and black tie.

“Yeah, I would totally wear this all day,” he said. “I like the walk because you can get exercise and stuff, and we get to know each other a lot better.”

What you need to know about the Twin Falls school levy

The Twin Falls School District is pursuing a supplemental levy election on Tuesday in order to maintain services and operations.

An advisory committee was created in October and determined TFSD would need nearly $14.8 million over two years to function at the same level as it did in 2008-09, but decided the district should pursue half that amount in light of the down economy.

Here’s what you need to know when you head to the polls on Tuesday.

Levy basics

What it seeks: $7.5 million

How long it lasts: Two years, splitting the amount to $3.75 million each year

What it covers: The cost of maintaining and operating district schools for two years, plus the restoration of as many student-teacher contact days as possible.

What it costs: $11.40 per month for every $100,000 of taxable property value within the district

What they say: “Our community is well-known for supporting its youth. The school district has been thrifty, but we can go no further without making certain cuts. We have a high-performing district and we want to stay that way. It’s an investment.”

Medicaid

Committee member Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, a retired physician and medical director of Cassia Regional Medical Center, said in an interview that what’s key is the legislation avoids the “blunt approach” of eliminating entire Medicaid programs.

Also important is the bill’s goal of ensuring that Medicaid programs go to those who truly need the services, he said.

Concerns abound because the existing system allows Medicaid recipients — once they meet the income guidelines — to easily get services without requiring scientific evidence that they are needed, Wood said.

The proposal also includes long-term changes that wouldn’t create immediate savings. It would eliminate the fee-for-service health care delivery model in favor of what’s called a “managed care approach” focused on outcomes of care and requiring third-party evaluations of treatment.

That change would follow the principle of requiring providers to show evidence of why the patient’s service is needed, Wood said.

That part of the proposal would take 18 to 24 months to put into place, he said.

House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, said he has concerns about parts of the legislation, such as requiring a co-payment. That raises questions about what would happen when a patient cannot pay, he said.

Reform

One part of the existing bill that Goedde, R-Coeur d’Alene, said he likes is a provision for a task force that would direct how technology would be tied into classrooms.

There are new ideas, too, and it’s unknown if they’ll find their way into a bill.

For example, Goedde said legislators may choose to give teachers laptops first, allowing a year for them to train with the technology before students get their own laptops later.

The other two pieces of Luna’s “Students Come First” package have already passed the Senate. Dealing with teacher negotiations and merit pay, they were the subject of testimony in the House Education Committee on Wednesday.

Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls and a committee member, questioned one part that would eliminate a one-year safety net for school districts — preserving almost all of their funding if attendance drops year-to-year.

While stressing it’s “not a deal-breaker” for him, Hartgen said he’s concerned about what the impact would be on small rural districts when a major employer shuts down and the student count plummets.

Jerome High students delay protest for test

By Laura Lundquist
Times-News writer

JEROME — Even though she was itching for action, one Jerome sophomore decided the best way to rally behind her teachers was to stay in class — at least until testing finished.

Celsey Kidd was joined by a handful of co-conspirators at the spirit rock near Jerome High School on Wednesday. A few carried signs protesting Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's proposed education reform while the parking lot filled with the staccato of honking horns.

Celsey had proposed a full-fledged student rally for Wednesday, but Principal Eric Anderson tempered her enthusiasm.

"I read in this morning's newspaper that she was planning a walkout and was concerned because this is testing week," Anderson said. "I said we couldn't support them, but if they had to leave class, Friday would be a better day."

Anderson told Celsey walking out on class doesn't support the teachers who are trying to finish testing. So Celsey agreed to shift the protest to Friday, which is the last day of the trimester.

"We'll have everyone meet at the rock, I'll explain why we're doing this, and we'll march to the courthouse," Celsey said. "Not everyone knows what's going on because they're just into being themselves."

Anderson said the protesters will be marked absent, but as long as the students have prior parental approval, the absences will be excused.

Celsey had the full support of her mother, Lisa Kidd.

Celsey Kidd and Ashley Maria stand on the Jerome High School spirit rock. They postponed their rally until Friday so fellow students wouldn't have to skip finals tests.

Buhl protest leads to meeting with mayor

Unconstrained by a testing schedule, up to 200 Buhl High School students marched Wednesday morning to Buhl City Hall for an audience with Mayor Tom McCauley. City Clerk-Treasurer Robin Filiaga said the group was nice, but was still upset with Luna's proposals.

"They think the reform will cause more people to drop out, that their quality of education will suffer and they want teachers there to help them out," Filiaga said. "We heard them out, but it's a difficult situation because the decision is not in our hands." Filiaga said she took notes during the 10-minute exchange and will send them and the mayor's observations to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

Lisa said Celsey's grandmother was a teacher and had taken part in protests in the 1960s, so the leaf didn't fall far from the tree.

"Celsey is trying to organize marches statewide using Facebook and she's calling it 'Freedom Friday,'" Lisa said. "My generation never did anything, so I'm trying to get all the parents out to support these kids."

Jerome mulls rezone requests

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Two public hearings were held at the Jerome City Council on Tuesday night to discuss pros and cons of rezone requests.

The council approved a rezone request from East-side Group to change the Glen Eagle Commercial Subdivision from a commercial permit to a mixed-use permit. It will allow for stricter restrictions on businesses in the subdivision.

Assistant City Administrator Micah Austin said the rezone allows flexibility for future growth.

"This opens up options for this type of development. Now there can't be automotive shops put in or anything with smoke or fumes," Austin said, adding that the area on the east side of town would allow for a business like a private school.

The second rezone request was denied by the council in a 3-1 vote. The switch would have allowed Keystone Construction and Development Inc. to start a second phase in Maple Ridge Subdivision, located off of Tiger Drive. The request had come before the council last year in June, but was pulled and changes were made to soothe concerns of neighbors and

IN OTHER BUSINESS

Government building funds: The council approved $12,330 to be used in the first phase of the city's development plan for municipal government buildings. The money will be used for preliminary architectural services in the hopes of passing a bond to build a new police station, fire department and city hall.

Police technology: The council also voted to support the police department's application for an Idaho Transportation Department enhanced data systems grant. It would provide 12 patrol cars with electronic ticketing machines. If the police department receives the grant for $41,190 it would come up with $10,298. City Administrator Ben Marchant said the ticketing system would provide cost savings and time savings in the future.

The rezone from a Residential 1 to Residential Multi-Family request was again met with many questions from the council. Currently there are single-family homes in the Maple Ridge Subdivision, and city officials were concerned that adding multi-family housing would cause density issues and traffic problems.

Online readers say kids were right to participate in rally

A majority of respondents to a voluntary Magicvalley.com poll said Twin Falls High School students should have been allowed to participate in a rally Tuesday with their peers from Canyon Ridge High School. In the poll, we asked: "Do you think Twin Falls High School did the right thing by preventing students from joining the rally against Idaho's education overhaul?"

The poll had more than 700 respondents as of 5 p.m. Wednesday. Results at that time:

76%: No; students should be allowed to practice their constitutional rights.

24%: Yes; School is a time for learning, not running around the streets.

In 2012, Idaho's GOP nominees may be none of your business

Before Wednesday, there was an Idaho Republican Party. Now there's an Idaho Republican Club.

U.S. District Judge Lynn Winmill ruled that Idaho's open primary system is unconstitutional, at least with respect to primaries held by the GOP.

That was a big victory for the conservative wing of the state Republican Party and its goal of making sure registered Republicans — and only registered Republicans — take part in primary elections.

The judge's decision ended a federal lawsuit that pitted Republican against Republican. In this case, the state party and its chairman Norm Semanko sued the Idaho Secretary of State, Republican Ben Ysursa, to dismantle the 38-year-old primary system.

Winmill sided with party officials who complained GOP primaries were tainted by Democrats and independents who crossed over to influence results.

Party lawyers claimed those voters also infringed on the First Amendment right to free association because the open primary lumps GOP faithful in the same pool as non-members.

So beginning in the 2012 primary — unmolested by contrary opinions — Republicans will nominate whom they will.

And keep in mind that the current state GOP platform stipulates loyalty oaths by candidates to the 2010 state Republican platform, which among other things demanded the repeal of the 17th Amendment to the Constitution and said Idahoans should be able to pay their taxes in gold.

Moderates and Democrats? They can take a hike. All of which is intriguing, since the Idaho Public Policy Survey taken by Boise State University in November and December showed that — for the first time in the poll's 20-year history — independents outnumbered Republicans.

It's doubtful that most of the earnest GOP advocates of closing the primary realize it, but the direct primary — and especially the open primary — over the past 121 years has been central to the evolution of Idaho's brand of independent, thoughtful, honest politics.

It made it possible for the likes of William Borah, Frank Church, Robert Smylie, Cecil Andrus, Ben Ross, Doc Robins and Phil Batt to rise to positions where they profoundly shaped Idaho history.

And, of course, producing a Legislature that's now 81 percent Republican.

But now, the open primary has been replaced by a biennial litmus test.

Wednesday was a sad day for democracy in Idaho.

Idaho primaries: a short history

- 1908 — Idaho adopts direct primary elections.
- 1919 — Republican-controlled Idaho Legislature repeals direct primary; for next 12 years, candidates are chosen by party convention.
- 1931 — Democratic Gov. Ben Ross pushes legislation through the GOP-controlled Legislature restoring the direct primary for state offices.
- 1937 — Democratic-controlled Legislature passes bill doing away with the requirement for declaration of party affiliation in primary elections, and Democratic Gov. Barzilla Clark signs it.
- 1964 — Combined convention and primary system implemented, as parties attempt to restrict the number of state primary candidates appearing on the ballot.
- 1972 — Idaho voters return to open primary system.

Our where's-Waldo president

For a man who won office talking about change we can believe in, Barack Obama can be a strangely passive president. There are a startling number of occasions in which the president has been missing in action — unwilling, reluctant or late to weigh in on the issue of the moment. He is, too often, more reactive than inspirational, more cautious than forceful.

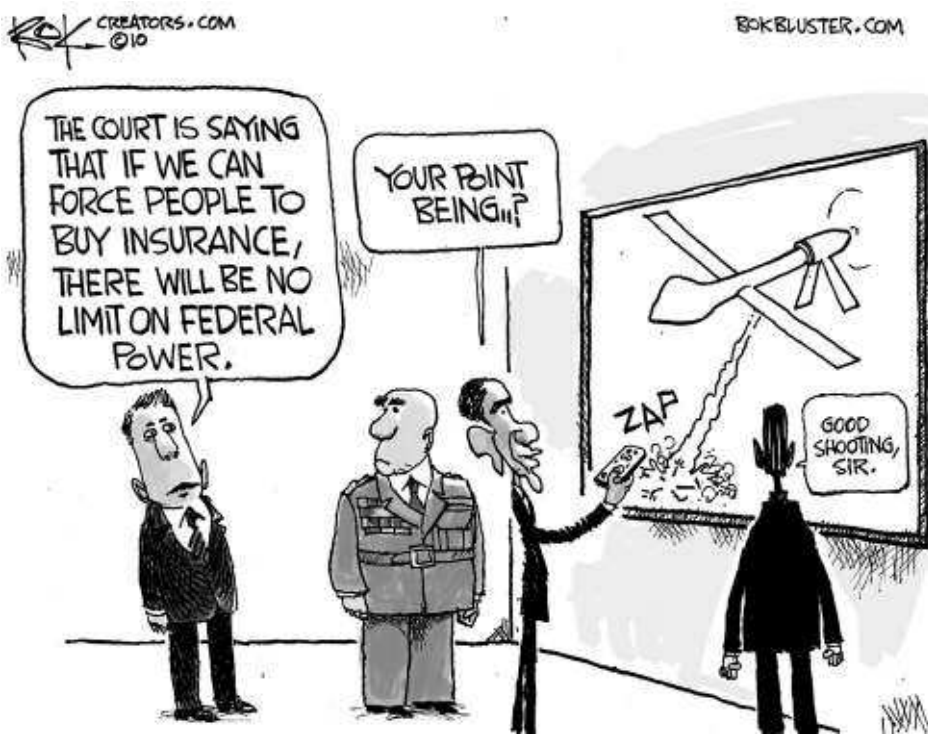

Ruth Marcus

Each of these instances can be explained on its own terms, as matters of legislative strategy, geopolitical calculation or political prudence.

He didn't want to get mired in legislative details during the health-care debate for fear of repeating the Clinton administration's prescriptive, take-ours-or-leave-it approach. He doesn't want to go first on proposing entitlement reform because history teaches that this is not the best route to a deal. He didn't want to say anything too tough about Libya for fear of endangering Americans trapped there. He didn't want to weigh in on the labor battle in Wisconsin because, well, it's a swing state.

Yet the dots connect to form an unsettling portrait of a "Where's Waldo?" presidency: You frequently have to squint to find the White House amid the larger landscape.

This tough assessment from someone who generally shares the president's ideological perspective may be hard to square with the conservative portrait of Obama as the rapacious perpetrator of a big-government agenda. If the president is being simultaneously accused of overreaching ambition and gutless fight-ducking, maybe he's doing something right.

Maybe, or else Obama has at times managed to do both simultaneously. On health care, for instance, he took on a big fight without being able to articulate a clear message or being willing to set out any but the broadest policy prescriptions. Lawmakers, not to mention the public, were left guessing about what, exactly, the administration wanted to see in the measure and where it would draw red lines.

That was not an isolated case. Where, for example, is the president on the verge of a potential government shutdown — if not this week, then a few weeks from now?

Aside from a short statement from the Office of Management and Budget threatening a presidential veto of the House version of the funding measure, the White House — much to the frustration of some congressional Democrats — has been unclear in public and private about what cuts would and would not be acceptable.

By contrast, a few weeks before the shutdown in 1995, Clinton administration aides had dispatched Cabinet members and other high-ranking officials to spread the message that cuts in education, health care and housing would harm families and children. Obama seems more the passive bystander to negotiations between the House and Senate leading his party.

He performs best on a stage that permits the grandest sweep. He rises to the big occasion, from his inspiring introduction to the public in his 2004 Democratic convention speech to his healing words in the aftermath of the Tucson shootings.

The president has faltered, though, when called on to translate that rhetoric to more granular levels of specificity: What change, exactly, does he want people to believe in? How, even more exactly, does he propose to get there? "Winning the future" doesn't quite do it.

My biggest beef is with the president's slipperiness on fiscal matters. Obama has said he agrees with some of his fiscal commission's recommendations and disagrees with others. Which ones does he disagree with? I asked this question the other day of Austan Goolsbee, the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Here's what I got: "The view espoused by some of the... commission that we ought to do Social Security 100 percent off of benefit cuts for sure he doesn't agree with." But of course, the plan that 11 of the commission members endorsed did nothing of the sort.

I was unfair to Goolsbee because I asked him a question he didn't have the leeway to answer. You can't blame the aide for ducking when the boss ducks.

Where's Obama? No matter how hard you look, sometimes he's impossible to find.

Riled about BSU football coach's raise

To the Idaho State Board of Education:

I am appalled by this board's recent decision to award BSU Football Coach Chris Petersen a $50,000 bonus and give him a raise of $35,000. This means that in 2011, Coach Petersen will make an astounding $1.525 million.

Education in Idaho is in crisis. Mr. Luna has been gallivanting all over the state touting his big plans to "reform" our education system. This plan calls for rendering 750 teachers unemployed. Tuition at Idaho's public colleges and universities is scheduled to increase significantly again next year. Our esteemed governor slashes education funding over and over again in a feeble attempt to balance the budget. And yet, even in this climate, you approved this increase.

I teach in the Adult Basic Education Program at a local community college. I have one child who is a freshman in college and two who are seniors in high school. The cost of educating them has become prohibitive. Idaho's children are no longer able to afford an education. And they will graduate with a crippling amount of debt from student loans. This is unacceptable.

I know Coach Petersen is a great asset to BSU. I know he does a fabulous job of shaping these young men into responsible adults who give back to their communities. I work very hard to have that same effect on my students, while at the same time struggling to educate my children and balance the budget at my house. No one is offering me a $35,000 raise. The sad fact is that neither I nor any of my colleagues even make $35,000 a year.

Mr. Bleymaier said, "He (Petersen) does it with integrity and he does it with class." Well, so do I. As a parent I'm angry; as an educator, I'm offended; and as a tax-paying citizen of this state, I'm mad as hell!

You, as a board, need to address this problem immediately. Better yet, the five who voted for this increase should simply resign and make room on this board for people with some common sense, some fiscal responsibility and some empathy for those you serve.

Zip line would spoil local gem

Is putting a zip line in the canyon really what's best for the residents in the Magic Valley? It's our one prize gem, besides Shoshone Falls. The zip line folks talk about showing tourists the animals in the canyon. There won't be any animals to see after customers repeatedly fly over the wetlands, shrieking at the top of their lungs. What the locals will have left, after the carnival-like zip line comes to town, is a canyon devoid of wildlife — congested and noisy.

The hundreds that walk the canyon grade on a regular basis, partially because of the unique challenge it presents or just to enjoy the peacefulness of the area, and the remaining recreationists that come to picnic, boat, fish, kayak, ride bikes, hike and play golf deserve better.

The canyon can expect at least 40 to 50 additional cars a day. That's just the people that choose to ride the line. That doesn't include their friends or family that want to watch. There surely will be an additional trip down the canyon to see if it's worth the suggested price of $65 to $70 a ride before they commit.

If one had a hard time finding a place to park in the summer or using the bathroom facilities, you might as well not even plan on that convenience. Don't forget Auger Falls Park hasn't officially "opened" yet, but it will undoubtedly be a popular attraction.

Prior to approving any high-use seasonal activities that would impact an infrastructure that has already been documented to be overloaded and potentially hazardous, the city must make an informed decision at the conclusion of a study that examines all of the stakeholders' interest in the well-being of our canyon.

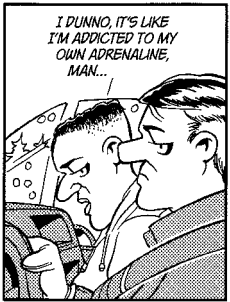

If passed in haste, the leaders of our city may have a weighty burden to bear for generations to come!

If you care about the future of our canyon, please voice your opinion by writing a letter today to the City Council and/or by speaking at the meeting March 14, 6 p.m. The address is 305 Third Ave. E.

Here’s what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

.... hands off URAs

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

In a misguided attempt to micromanage cities, the Idaho Legislature will make itself the enemy of economic recovery in the state if it guts urban renewal laws.

The phrase “urban renewal district” conjures up visions of crumbling buildings and scarred streets with dark alleys populated by addled druggies and dealers.

Yet, that’s never been the face of decay in Idaho communities. The reality has been more genteel, with old downtowns becoming decimated by commercial development on the outskirts ....

Idaho’s laws allow cities to create urban renewal districts and agencies to recoup property taxes generated by new developments that would otherwise be spent outside the city.

... A developer invests in building new structures or rehabilitating old ones. As a result, property values in the urban renewal district rise, yielding higher property tax revenues, a portion of which goes to the URA. The agency borrows money to construct roads, bridges, parks, parking garages or other related structures and uses its share of tax revenue to pay off the loans.

Everyone wins. URAs spur development by offering incentives in the form of improved infrastructure whose costs might otherwise fall on existing city taxpayers. Developers profit and cities get economic development and jobs.

URAs cannot live forever and can last only 24 years, so all taxing districts eventually realize higher tax revenues as the result of urban renewal.

What’s wrong with all this?

Well, the law works, which apparently chafes legislators who prefer to keep cities poor and government ineffective.

The proposals to “improve” URAs by forcing a public vote on every proposed project, populating governing boards with elected rather than appointed officials, and preventing city council members from serving on the board look oh-so-reasonable on their face. In practice, they would have the intended effect of gumming up operations and rendering URAs useless ...

... change at the top

Lewiston Tribune

Idaho doesn’t have an educator sitting atop its school system.

It has a politician.

For that, you can thank the state’s Republicans. And its Democrats.

Much has been said about current school Superintendent Tom Luna’s credentials – or lack thereof.

Luna famously got a degree from an online college, Thomas Edison State College in New Jersey, to qualify for the post. But he hasn’t spent one day as a classroom teacher or administrator.

Not long ago, that would have barred Luna from seeking the job. Besides a college degree, Idaho law required its top school administrator to have devoted at least three years as a teacher or administrator.

In 1993, legislators from both political parties were talking about seeking the job. Neither had spent time in the profession, so lawmakers removed the obstacle in their path.

It’s not the first time the politicians have meddled with the job.

A quick trip through Idaho history shows the scope and duties of Idaho’s school superintendent are not fixed.

There has been a tug of war between the State Board of Education and superintendents.

Lawmakers also have toyed with the idea of eliminating the superintendent’s position or making it an appointee of the state board.

The Legislature’s intervention in 1993 ushered in 16 years of turmoil. First came Republican Anne Fox, who flamed out ... Four years later, Marilyn Howard restored competence to the job. But as the state’s lone Democratic official, she became a target for partisan GOP appointees on the state board.

In 2006, Luna became the first non-educator to win the post ... Ask them and they’ll tell you Luna doesn’t speak for them ...

Idaho has dozens of politicians involved in debating, tweaking and passing new education policies.

It has only one superintendent of public instruction to advocate on behalf of – and then lead – the people who have to do the real work.

It’s a crucial difference.

What you get, at the schoolhouse level, is drift. Luna can propose policies at the Statehouse. But lacking credibility or trust from teachers and administrators, he has had a difficult time getting anything implemented ...

If Idaho wants a politician running the schools, turn that job over to the governor. The chief executive can, in turn, hire his own director of education. If voters don’t like the results, they can get a new governor.

If they want a professional administrator, have the State Board of Education hire a state schools superintendent in much the same way the board now appoints presidents at the college and universities ....

Voters urged to reject school levy

The Twin Falls School District has put together a committee to find out how much money the district will fall short after state cuts in funding for 2011 to 2012. How nice of the board of trustees to accept the recommendation of the committee and hold a supplemental levy.

These are the people that asked us to pass a school bond that went $10 million over budget the last time they raised our property taxes.

Now these people expect to raise our property taxes to subsidize their income for two years at $3.75 million a year. Where is this going to stop? Who is subsidizing your income?

I will vote no on this levy and, if you feel that these expectations have to stop, then I hope that you will vote no on March 8.

GREG PAOLI
Twin Falls

However, taking money away from an already financially stressed school system certainly won’t make schools any better. The district is only asking for half ($7.5 million) of the projected budget shortfall for the next two years. I’d vote for the full amount, if I could.

As a property owner, I know that good schools are one reason people move into Twin Falls with business opportunities and potential buyers for my house, should I need to sell it. Of course, there are other things I could do with the money, but I feel that paying for public schools is one way of being my “brother’s keeper.”

I’m investing in the world my grandchildren and great-grandchildren will inhabit.

Disturbed by many points editorial made

Response to Feb. 25 editorial:

First, I find it extremely disturbing to see an editorial headline in the largest circulated newspaper in the Magic Valley read “Enough demonizing of Idahoans who join a union.”

Second, you stated you thought union bashing had gotten out of hand. Tom Luna referring to “union thugery” and Frank Van Sloot vilifying the Idaho Education “Association” was two men calling a spade a spade.

Third, your quote of Van Sloot’s, “unions are not known ... asked to tone it down a bit,” was not over the top. It is reality.

Fourth, you state the “willful organized labor operatives that Van Sloot and legislative Republicans rail against don’t live in Idaho.” That is why we, the majority just re-elected these Republicans ... to ensure these willful labor operatives do not live or operate in Idaho.

Fifth, you go on to lament the two bills “undermining organized labor influence in Idaho.” This is again what we, the majority expect and demand our elected officials to do in Boise.

I agree that “Idahoans have just as much right to join a union as not to join one.” In a perfect Idaho, there would be no unions to join.

To close as you did with “Last we checked,” last I checked, the entire map of the state of Idaho is painted bright red with only a few small drops of blue insignificantly scattered on it.

Good education doesn’t come cheap

I am voting for the supplemental tax levy on March 8. When I was growing up in Denver in the '50s, voters went to the polls in many elections to increase funding for schools. They passed bond issues to build more schools and increased the number of teachers to ease overcrowded classrooms. I can do nothing less for young people today.

For years, I have wanted schools to change. I think the school day should be longer. I think the curriculum should be tougher. I think there should be some way of encouraging poor teachers to find other employment. In other words, I don’t think the schools we have today are perfect.

EPA trims $300M from N. Idaho cleanup plan

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is cutting at least $300 million and possibly more than $500 million from its original plan to spend $1.3 billion on an expansion of Superfund cleanup efforts in the Coeur d'Alene Basin.

The effort aims to clean up some 300 sites contaminated with a century's worth of mining waste in northern Idaho and will take 90 years to complete.

But the Upper Basin Project Focus Team, made up of state and federal agency officials, environmental experts and representatives of the Coeur d'Alene Tribe, have been examining the plan.

They've concluded, and the agency has agreed, that about $325 million worth of lining planned for the South Fork of the Coeur d'Alene River could be dropped.

"Technically there were all kinds of problems with it," Focus team member Bill Rust told the Coeur d'Alene Press.

Rust also said the current plan was based on a feasibility study done in 1998, and some projects have already been finished. Others, he said, are not eligible for Superfund money because they are still being actively managed, while the money is for abandoned areas. Rust said that will save about another $200 million.

Bill Adams, project manager for the cleanup, said the agency has also been going through and responding to about 6,000 comments submitted on the plan.

Adams said the agency has been compiling the comments and will eventually release a cumulative response for public viewing.

"The general themes (in comments) are that it's too long a period of time to do a cleanup, it's too expensive, that's it's not necessary," Adams said. "A lot of folks believe the risks aren't real, that enough work has been done already."

Before the EPA cleanup began, however, the Silver Valley was so saturated with arsenic and lead pollution that it stripped the hillsides

"We're not able to come back and say, 'We heard people and we're going to go away and not do the cleanup,'" he said. "We're working through them (comments) and looking at what changes we could make."

IDAHO Bill to extend jobless benefits clears House

BOISE — The Idaho House passed a measure to extend federal unemployment benefits for thousands of jobless workers this year, despite opposition from more than two dozen Republicans.

The measure, which carries a technical change to make Idaho eligible for extended federal unemployment benefits, passed 41-28.

Rep. Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian, was among GOP lawmakers who railed against run-away government spending and tried to defeat the legislation to extend these benefits for long-time unemployed workers who have been unable to secure a job.

Hagedorn said: "It's time to lead the horse away from the trough and make him go to work."

House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, countered that as much as Idaho lawmakers would like to send a message about deficit spending, they shouldn't do it on the backs of unemployed families.

Bill would strengthen Right to Farm Act

BOISE — A bill headed to the Idaho House would make it easier for farmers to enlarge their feedlot operations, but more difficult for opponents to challenge those plans in court.

The House Agricultural Affairs Committee signed off on legislation Wednesday to bolster Idaho's Right to Farm Act. It now goes to the full House.

Supporters say it will protect agricultural operations such as feedlots from local ordinances that regulate farms. But opponents say the measure would shield corporate farms from nuisance lawsuits and severely reduce local government control on the growth of feedlot operations.

The measure was brought to the House committee last week and amended to delete a section that would require people who bring nuisance claims against agricultural operations to pay full legal fees if they lost the dispute.

Lawmakers propose another hurdle to eminent domain

BOISE — State lawmakers have proposed another hurdle to using eminent domain in Idaho.

Republican Rep. James Guthrie of McCammon unveiled legislation last week that would prevent local governments from using eminent domain to create recreational paths over the objections of property owners. The bill was brought in response to a foundation's push for a greenbelt in Pocatello amid opposition from 22 property owners who refuse to sell.

House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke has now proposed a bill that would require developers of transmission lines to demonstrate that the project will "directly serve the interests of the residents of Idaho" before eminent domain is used. The measure makes an exception for public utilities.

Bedke's bill stalled in the House State Affairs Committee on Wednesday amid lawmaker questions about its impact.

Bill would allow more teens to give blood

BOISE — State lawmakers have moved a step closer toward allowing more Idaho teens to donate blood.

The Senate approved a bill Wednesday that would allow 16-year-olds to donate blood with consent from a parent or legal guardian.

Under current state law, people have to be at least 17 in Idaho to donate blood.

Sen. Lee Heider (R-Twin Falls) says his legislation would not only increase the number of donors in the state but also allow more teens to experience the value of giving blood. Under the bill, parents and guardians would have the authority to withdraw their consent of blood draws at any time.

The measure now goes to the full House.

Senate backs bid to rein in Washington

BOISE — Support for a measure aimed at keeping the federal government in check is gaining traction in the Idaho Legislature.

The Idaho Senate passed a resolution Wednesday in favor of the so-called "Madison Amendment," which would allow two-thirds of states to call a constitutional convention where Congress would take up a specific amendment.

Right now, states can already call for a convention, but not a specific amendment. They've never actually done this, out of fear it would create a chaotic, run-away process where Congress could consider broadly overhauling the Republic's founding document.

Sen. Curt McKenzie of Nampa thinks the Madison Amendment would give states like Idaho another tool in keeping Washington, D.C. in check. His non-binding resolution, which urges Congress to adopt the amendment, now goes to the Idaho House.

Fernandez named president of LCSC

LEWISTON — The Idaho State Board of Education has named Tony Fernandez the president of Lewis-Clark State College.

Fernandez was provost and has served as interim president of LCSC since July, after Dene Thomas left for the presidency of Ft. Lewis College in Durango, Colo.

In a teleconference Wednesday, the Idaho Board of Education unanimously voted to give the job to Fernandez.

He was chosen over two other finalists: Stephen Condon, former president of Tennessee Wesleyan College in Athens, Tenn., and Lynn Gillette, provost and executive vice president of Sierra Nevada College in Lake Tahoe, Nev.

Shortly after Thomas announced he was leaving, several faculty members urged school officials to save the money that would be spent on a national search and give the job to Fernandez.

OREGON Wolf fitted with collar found dead

GRANTS PASS — One of the young wolves from the Imnaha pack in Northeastern Oregon that was recently fitted with a radio-tracking collar has been found dead, the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife said Wednesday.

There were no signs of foul play, and the carcass was shipped to Washington State University to determine the cause of death, the department said.

Steve Pedery of Oregon Wild, a conservation group, said it was possible that the stress of being tranquilized for the radio collar fitting may be a factor.

He said while they support fitting wolves with radio collars to prevent conflicts with livestock, there are other, less expensive steps — such as electric fences and flagging around stock pens — that are not being taken.

Department wolf coordinator Russ Morgan said tranquilizing wolves and fitting them with radio-tracking collars is always risky, and they take all precautions to protect the animals. He said this young female had been observed the next day doing fine and had traveled a long distance before dying.

"This is a surprise," he said from La Grande. Morgan added that flagging and fencing and other steps to protect livestock from wolves were being taken.

in so-called incense will be banned for sale for at least a year. The order took effect Tuesday.

The fake marijuana, sold in drug paraphernalia shops and on the Internet, is marketed under various brands including Spice and K2. The products contain organic leaves coated with chemicals that provide a marijuana-like high when smoked.

Federal drug officials announced plans for the emergency measure in November, amid increasing reports of bad reactions to the chemicals including seizures, hallucinations and dependency.

Idaho temporarily outlawed the chemicals in October and lawmakers are working on making the ban permanent.

MONTANA Conoco megaload travels 33 miles

MISSOULA — The second oversized ConocoPhillips load en route to Billings traveled about 33 miles Tuesday night and Wednesday morning after sitting for nine days in Kooskia, Idaho.

The Idaho Department of Transportation says the coke drum left a weigh station at Kooskia at 10 p.m. Tuesday. The agency tells the Missoulian the load encountered light traffic, and delays were within the 10 to 15 minutes allowed for the shipment.

Weather permitting, the coke drum will travel about 30 miles on U.S. 12 on Wednesday night.

Fed survey: Economy expands throughout U.S.

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy expanded in January and early February in all parts of the country, but businesses reported they are under pressure to raise their prices.

A Federal Reserve survey released Wednesday showed that all 12 of the Fed's regions reported growth at a "modest to moderate pace" and it pointed to a pickup in job creation in each.

Retail sales picked up in 10 of the 12 regions, while falling in the Richmond and Atlanta areas. Factory activity rose in all districts except St. Louis.

The survey hinted at some inflationary concerns. Costs are rising for manufacturers and retailers in most areas. Manufacturers in many districts said they are increasingly able to pass on those costs to customers. Retailers in some districts said they have or soon will raise prices.

"There are beginning to be some troubling signs on inflation," said Steven Wood, Chief Economist at Insight Economics.

But other economists noted that the survey found little evidence that wages are increasing. Accelerating wages are "a necessary condition for a sustained, destabilizing high-inflation episode," said Dana Saporita, an economist at Credit Suisse Securities.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke endured tough questioning from members of Congress on Tuesday and Wednesday about the threat of rising inflation. Lawmakers raised concerns that the Fed's $600 billion bond-purchase program is laying the groundwork for higher prices.

Those concerns have been heightened by recent run-ups in the price of oil, corn, wheat and other commodities.

Bernanke told members of Congress that higher oil prices, which have risen due to turmoil in the Middle East, would likely cause only a temporary and mild increase in inflation.

The U.S. economy has been growing for 18 months. But that expansion hasn't been enough to significantly lower the nation's unemployment rate, which was 9 percent in January. The federal government will release the February jobs report on Friday.

The Fed survey did note

Steve Jobs emerges from medical leave to unveil iPad 2

By David Sarno
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Apple Inc. Chief Executive Steve Jobs took a break from his medical leave Wednesday to introduce the company's new iPad, an upgraded tablet that could help the company fend off a slew of rivals in the burgeoning tablet-computer market.

"We've been working on this product for a while and I just didn't want to miss the day," Jobs said shortly after receiving a standing ovation.

Jobs, who took the highly publicized leave in mid-January and who has battled pancreatic cancer for years, threatened to upstage his own product with his surprise appearance.

Jobs appeared in his trademark black turtleneck and blue jeans to show off the new iPad, which is one-third thinner and substantially lighter than the original and will come in both black and white.

Jobs said Apple has sold more than 15 million iPads since it was launched last April, generating $9.5 billion in revenue for the tech giant and leaving all of its tablet competitors far behind. Analysts expect Apple to sell more than 35 million tablets this year.

The iPad 2, as Apple calls it, will go on sale March 11 at the same price as its predecessor, starting at $499 for the entry-level device with Wi-Fi only, and going up to $829 for the version with a 3G cellular connection. Consumers can get the cellular iPad 2, which requires a $30 monthly contract, from both AT&T and Verizon.

Apple highlighted the new iPad's lighter weight — 1.3 pounds compared with the 1.5-pound original, as well as the addition of front- and back-facing video cameras that allow users to conduct video chats. The device has a newer computer processor that will make it run faster and allow smoother performance of video-intensive applications like games and movies.

4 large hotel projects stalled in central Idaho

KETCHUM (AP) — Four hotel and residential projects valued at $2 billion in the central Idaho resort area of Ketchum and Sun Valley that have all been approved by local officials remain stalled due to the difficult economy, developers and city leaders say.

Developer Jack Bariteau wants to build a four-story, 73-room hotel called Hotel Ketchum but said he can't find any banks or private investors willing to put up money.

"That's the only thing holding it up," Bariteau told the Idaho Mountain Express. "We spent all those years trying to get approved, and when we finally did, there was no market."

As for the planned projects, Ketchum city officials are optimistic they will come to fruition.

"I think we're going to see all these projects," said Lisa Horowitz, Ketchum's director of community and economic development. "It's just a question of when."

But time is a problem for developers, because they face city-imposed deadlines on starting construction. So far, Ketchum leaders have granted extensions so developers can avoid restarting the process, which requires planning and zoning meetings.

Bariteau's Hotel Ketchum was approved in November 2008 and he had two years to apply for a building permit and break ground. In February 2010, he received a two-year extension from the Ketchum City Council, with an option for a third year at the city's discretion.

"The city has been very cooperative, which is a good sign to investors," Bariteau said.

A problematic forecast for the hospitality business has caused investors to shy away, he said.

"Historically, banks were always there for these kinds of things," Bariteau said.

Sun Valley Co. has a massive project planned with a base village on 138 acres at Bald Mountain's main skier entrance of River Run, adding a hotel, restaurant and shops. The plan includes family residences and three parking garages.

The other two projects are the Bald Mountain Lodge and the Warm Springs Ranch Resort, a residential project that includes a nine-hole golf course.

A sign as to why investors might be wary of putting money in new lodging is that two existing hotels are in financial trouble. The Clarion Inn in Ketchum is in foreclosure and scheduled for auction on March 8. And the 29-room Knob Hill Inn in Ketchum has been on the market for two years.

The developer and owner of Warm Springs Ranch Resort, Helios Development, also received a one-year extension.

The city of Ketchum, on its website, says building hotels is a high priority, and Horowitz said hotels with four-star rooms are needed to help draw in guests to the tony destination area.

For that reason, the city is willing to be flexible, she said. The city also gave Bald Mountain Lodge developers $6.6 million in incentives to break ground by June 2012 and finish building the hotel by January 2015.

"I think it's very likely they could be in construction in summer 2012," Horowitz said.

Oil jumps to more than $102 per barrel

By Chris Kahn
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Oil prices settled above $102 per barrel for the first time since September of 2008 as fighting escalated in Libya and petroleum demand grew in the U.S.

Libya, a major oil exporter to Europe, has been embroiled in an uprising that has shut down oil production in many parts of the country. Forces loyal to Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi used airstrikes in a battle against protesters for control of a key oil installation in the eastern half of the country.

Analysts are concerned that the rebellion will endanger Libya's oil fields, which produce 1.6 million barrels per day. That's only about 2 percent of global demand, but experts say the disruption is putting pressure on world supplies at a time when demand is picking up.

Oil prices have soared nearly $17 per barrel since the Libyan uprising began in mid-February. Retail gasoline prices in the U.S. gained more than 25 cents per gallon in that time. American motorists are now paying $94.9 million more per day to use the same amount of gasoline.

As chaos spreads through Libya, experts have struggled to get an accurate account of the impact of the country's oil production.

A Libyan oil minister said the production in the east had declined 50 percent, though international observers say the drop is higher. The International Energy Agency said Wednesday that between 850,000 and 1 million barrels per day were shut in. Its previous estimate was between 500,000 and 750,000 barrels per day.

Whatever the number, not much will be moving out of the country, analysts said. Oil tankers that have made it to Libyan ports may simply be taking whatever excess supplies are available since the uprising began, Houston-based oil analyst Andrew Lipow said. Libya's oil fields

GOP wins first budget skirmish, bigger fight looms

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans won an early round Wednesday in their fight to shrink the government, pushing $4 billion in spending cuts through Congress in a bill that puts off the possibility of a government shutdown for two weeks.

Largely a spectator so far, President Barack Obama dispatched his vice president to initiate negotiations on a broader, longer-term spending bill and find “common ground” with GOP leaders determined to cut tens of billions of dollars more and undo much of his agenda.

He conceded in advance that any deal on a government budget covering the next seven months will feature cuts, not just the long-term freeze he proposed last month.

The Senate cleared the temporary spending measure by an overwhelming 91-9 vote after the House passed it with a large bipartisan vote Tuesday. Obama signed it Wednesday afternoon.

After initially being rejected last week by Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., the two-week cuts written by House Republicans shot through the Senate with minimal opposition on the right and left.

The upcoming talks, to be led by Vice President Joe Biden, promise to be far more difficult. Those talks could begin as early as Thursday.

“This agreement should cut spending and reduce deficits without damaging economic growth or gutting investments in education, research and development that will create jobs and secure our future,” Obama said. “It should be free of any party’s social or political agenda, and it should be reached without delay.”

Republicans who outmaneuvered Senate Democrats and the White House in orchestrating passage of the two-week measure called on Democrats to offer a longer-term solution of their own in response to a $1.2 trillion GOP spending measure that passed the House last month.

“It’s hard to believe when we’re spending $1.6 trillion more than we’re taking in a single year, that it would take this long to cut a penny in spending, but it’s progress nonetheless,” said Senate GOP leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky. “It’s encouraging that the White House and congressional Democrats now agree that the status quo won’t work, that the bills we pass must include spending reductions.”

The insertion of Biden into the talks — he played a lead role in bipartisan efforts in December to extend Bush-era tax cuts and ratify a nuclear arms treaty with Russia — was seen as evidence that the White House wants to regain the initiative. White House chief of staff William Daley and budget director Jacob Lew, who will also participate, held an early evening meeting Wednesday in the Capitol with House Democratic leaders.

House Republicans last month muscled through a bill that could cut spending over the next seven months by more than $60 billion from last year’s levels — and $100 billion from Obama’s request. It would also block implementation of Obama’s health care law and a host of environmental regulations. The White House has promised a veto and it could take weeks or months to negotiate a compromise funding measure that Obama would sign.

“The House position is perfectly clear. We cut $100 billion off the president’s request for this fiscal year,” said House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio. “We have no clue where our colleagues on the Senate side are.”

AROUND THE NATION

NEW YORK Study says 50-year-old with diabetes will die 6 years sooner than someone without

NEW YORK — A 50-year-old with diabetes dies six years sooner than someone without the disease, and not just from a heart attack or a stroke, new research suggests.

The large international effort to measure diabetes’ toll found the disease also raises the risk of dying prematurely from a host of other ailments, even breast cancer and pneumonia.

“It’s quite a wide sweep of conditions,” said Dr. John Danesh of Cambridge University in Britain, who led the team of researchers. While most people think of heart problems, diabetes surprisingly “appears to be associated with a much broader range of health implications than previously suspected.”

Putting the six years lost in context, he said, long-term smoking shortens life by 10 years.

The analysis used pooled medical information for 820,900 people from nearly 100 studies done mostly in Europe and North America. The results are published in Thursday’s New England Journal of Medicine.

CALIFORNIA Sirhan Sirhan denied parole in RFK killing

COALINGA — A California board denied parole Wednesday for Robert F. Kennedy’s convicted assassin, Sirhan Sirhan.

A panel of two California parole board commissioners concluded after a four hour hearing that Sirhan hadn’t shown adequate remorse or understanding of the crime that was mourned by a nation.

Sirhan, now 66, spoke at length and expressed sorrow, but said he doesn’t remember shooting Kennedy or five other victims on June 4, 1968, in the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel, where Kennedy stood moments after claiming victory in the California presidential primary.

“Every day of my life, I have great remorse and deep regret,” he said at the hearing at Pleasant Valley State Prison in Coalinga.

He pleaded with the panel to give him a date for release, saying he wants to “get lost in the woodwork” and live out his life.

The panel chairman, Mike Prizmich, and the deputy commissioner, Randy Kevorkian, told Sirhan he must seek further self-help courses, come to terms with the crime and show evidence of his improvement when he gets his next parole hearing, which will be in five years.

Woman survives 35-mile ride on van hood

MANTECA — The woman desperately gripped a windshield wiper blade, her body splayed across the hood of the minivan as it raced down a Northern California freeway in the middle of the night, reaching 100 mph, witnesses said.

With the temperature hovering in the low 30s, Christopher Michael Carroll drove 35 miles from Manteca to nearby Pleasanton on Saturday with his wife clinging to the hood, prompting 911 calls from at least two alarmed witnesses, police said.

Carroll, 36, was being held without bail Wednesday at the San Joaquin County Jail on charges of attempted murder, kidnapping and domestic assault, according to sheriff’s department records.

Carroll got into the family’s minivan around 12:30 a.m. Saturday after he and his wife had an argument at their Manteca home, said police spokesman Rex Osborn.

“She kind of goes with the van to try to stop him, gets up on the hood and is hanging on to the wiper blade,” he said. “She obviously didn’t think he would keep driving.”

PENNSYLVANIA Scientists declare eastern cougar extinct

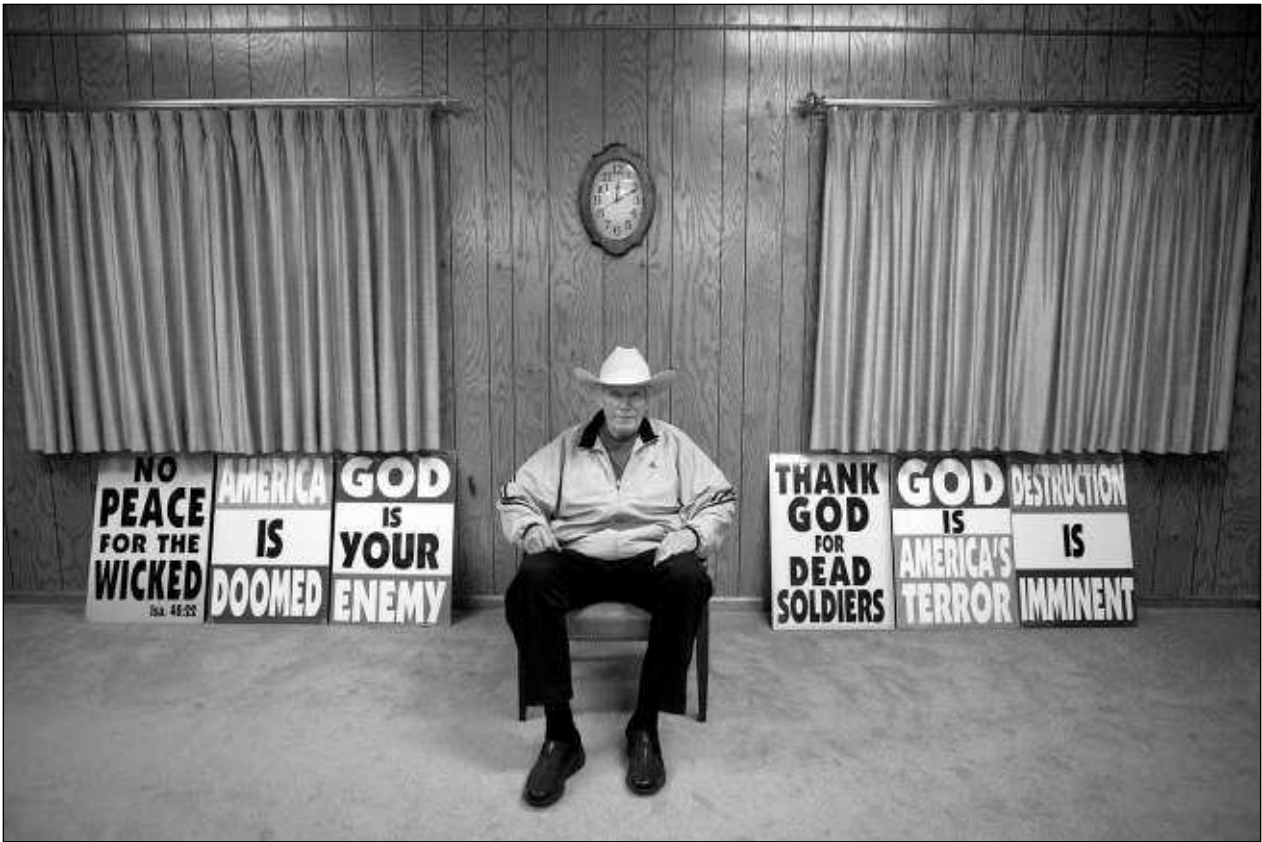

ALLENTOWN — The “ghost cat” is just that. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on Wednesday declared the eastern cougar extinct, confirming a widely held belief among wildlife biologists that native populations of the big cat were wiped out by man a century ago.

After a lengthy review, federal officials concluded there are no breeding populations of cougars — also known as pumas, panthers, mountain lions and catamounts — in the eastern United States. Researchers believe the eastern cougar subspecies has probably been extinct since the 1930s.

Wednesday’s declaration paves the way for the eastern cougar to be removed from the endangered species list, where it was placed in 1973. The agency’s decision to declare the eastern cougar extinct does not affect the status of the Florida panther, another endangered wildcat.

Some hunters and outdoors enthusiasts have long insisted there’s a small breeding population of eastern cougars, saying the secretive cats have simply eluded detection — hence the “ghost cat” moniker. The wildlife service said Wednesday it confirmed 108 sightings between 1900 and 2010, but that these animals either escaped or were released from captivity, or migrated from western states to the Midwest.

Fred W. Phelps Sr., of Westboro Baptist Church, is shown with picket signs at Westboro Church in Topeka, Kan., in September 2010. In a case that arose from a protest by Phelps’ group at the funeral of a Marine who had died in Iraq, the Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the First Amendment protects hateful protests at military funerals.

Supreme Court: Anti-gay funeral picketers allowed

By Mark Sherman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that a grieving father’s pain over mocking protests at his Marine son’s funeral must yield to First Amendment protections for free speech. All but one justice sided with a fundamentalist church that has stirred outrage with raucous demonstrations contending God is punishing the military for the nation’s tolerance of homosexuality.

Albert Snyder

The 8-1 decision in favor of the Westboro Baptist Church of Topeka, Kan., was the latest in a line of court rulings that, as Chief Justice John Roberts said in his opinion for the court, protects “even hurtful speech on public issues to ensure that we do not stifle public debate.”

The decision ended a lawsuit by Albert Snyder, who sued church members for the emotional pain they caused by showing up at his son Matthew’s funeral. As they have at hundreds of other funerals, the Westboro members held signs with provocative messages, including “Thank God for dead soldiers,” “You’re Going to Hell,” “God Hates the USA/Thank God for 9/11,” and one that combined the U.S. Marine Corps motto, Semper Paratus, with a slur against gay men.

Justice Samuel Alito, the lone dissenter, said Snyder wanted only to “bury his son in peace.” Instead, Alito said, the protesters “brutally attacked” Matthew Snyder to attract public attention. “Our profound national commitment to free and open debate is not a license for the vicious verbal assault that occurred in this case,” he said.

The ruling, though, was in line with many earlier court decisions that said the First Amendment exists to protect robust debate on public issues and free expression, no matter how distasteful. A year ago, the justices struck down a federal ban on videos that show graphic violence against animals. In 1988, the court unanimously overturned a verdict for the Rev. Jerry Falwell in his libel lawsuit against Hustler magazine founder Larry Flynt over a raunchy parody ad.

What might have made this case different was that the Snyders are not celebrities or public officials but private citizens. Both Roberts and Alito agreed that the Snyders were the innocent victims of the long-running campaign by the church’s pastor, the Rev. Fred Phelps, and his family members who make up most of the Westboro Baptist Church. Roberts said there was no doubt the protesters added to Albert Snyder’s “already incalculable grief.”

But Roberts said the frequency of the protests — and the church’s practice of demonstrating against Catholics, Jews and many other groups — is an indication that Phelps and his flock were not mounting a personal attack against Snyder but expressing deeply held views on public topics.

Indeed, Matthew Snyder was not gay. But “Westboro believes that God is killing American soldiers as punishment for the nation’s sinful policies,” Roberts said.

“Speech is powerful. It can stir people to action, move them to tears of both joy and sorrow, and — as it did here — inflict great pain. On the facts before us, we cannot react to that pain by punishing the speaker,” Roberts said.

Snyder’s reaction, at a news conference in York, Pa.: “My first thought was, eight justices don’t have the common sense God gave a goat.” He added, “We found out today we can no longer bury our dead in this country with dignity.”

He said it was possible he would have to pay the Phelpses around $100,000, which they are seeking in legal fees, since he lost the lawsuit. The money would, in effect, finance more of the same activity he fought against, Snyder said.

Margie Phelps, a daughter of the minister and a lawyer who argued the case at the Supreme Court, said she expected the outcome. “The only surprise is that Justice Alito did not feel compelled to follow his oath,” Phelps said. “We read the law. We follow the law. The only way for a different ruling is to shred the First Amendment.”

Ohio Senate passes bill to restrict public unions

By Ann Sanner
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The bargaining rights of public workers in Ohio would be dramatically reduced and strikes would be banned under a bill narrowly passed by the state Senate on Wednesday.

The GOP-backed measure that would restrict the collective bargaining rights of roughly 350,000 teachers, firefighters, police officers and other public employees squeaked through the state Senate on a 17-16 vote. Six Republicans sided with Democrats against the measure.

Firefighters and teachers shouted “Shame!” in the chamber as the legislation was approved and moved on to the GOP-controlled House, where it is likely to receive strong support.

The bill is similar to the Republican-supported collective bargaining bill in the Wisconsin legislature that has sparked national debate in its weakening of public employees’ ability to negotiate contracts — although there are differences between the two. Wisconsin’s bill exempts police and firefighters from the collective bargaining restrictions, while Ohio’s does not. And the bill there would affect 175,000 unionized public workers.

The Ohio bill would ban strikes by public workers and establish penalties for those who do participate in walkouts. Unionized workers could negotiate wages, hours and certain work conditions but not health care, sick time or pension benefits. The measure would do away with automatic pay raises and base future wage increases on merit.

The legislation would also set up a new process to settle worker disputes, giving elected officials the final say in contract disagreements. Binding arbitration, which police officers and firefighters use to resolve contract disputes as an alternative to strikes, would be eliminated.

“It’s a fair bill,” said state Senate President Tom Niehaus, a southwest Ohio Republican. “It’s more balanced and fair for the taxpayer whose money these elected officials will ultimately spend.”

Alleged source of WikiLeaks’ documents faces new charges

The Washington Post

The Army has brought new charges — including one that carries the death penalty — against Pfc. Bradley Manning, a former intelligence analyst accused of leaking hundreds of thousands of classified military and diplomatic documents to the anti-secrecy website WikiLeaks.

But prosecutors would not seek Manning’s execution if he were convicted of the capital offense of “aiding the enemy,” officials said Wednesday in a statement that outlined the 22 charges.

Though the statement did not specify the enemy, Manning, 23, is accused of giving documents to WikiLeaks that related to the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq and that U.S. officials have asserted could put soldiers and civilians at risk.

The new charges, filed Tuesday under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, also include wrongfully causing intelligence to be published on the Internet.

Gadhafi loyalists attack oil center in Libya's east

By Nancy A. Youssef and Hannah Allam
McClatchy Newspapers

BREGA, Libya — Ground and air forces loyal to Moammar Gadhafi attacked this key oil terminal city in eastern Libya Wednesday, but were repulsed by a motley army of volunteer fighters who flocked to this strategic coastal town as word of the assault spread.

Hospital officials here said at least six people had been killed in the fighting, and witnesses showed a video purportedly of an injured Libyan Army soldier being treated at the hospital. At least 10 rebel fighters who returned to Ajdabiya were being treated for gunshot wounds at that city's hospital.

The purpose of the pro-Gadhafi forces' attack was unclear — in addition Brega's oil terminal, the attackers also targeted the city's university — but the battle followed what's become a strange pattern: After hours of fighting, Gadhafi's better-armed and -trained loyalists withdrew without taking control of their likely objective.

In the western city of Zawiya, fighters said they faced a major assault by Gadhafi's forces Monday night, only to have them back down.

"It was like they were surveying the place. We don't understand what they are doing," Tarek Zawi, 19, a fighter, said Wednesday by telephone from Zawiya after hearing about the fighting in Brega.

The battle for Brega, however, buoyed the spirits of the disorganized rebels who flocked here after days of mounting frustration at their inability to topple Gadhafi, who remains firmly in control of the capital, Tripoli, about 500 miles west.

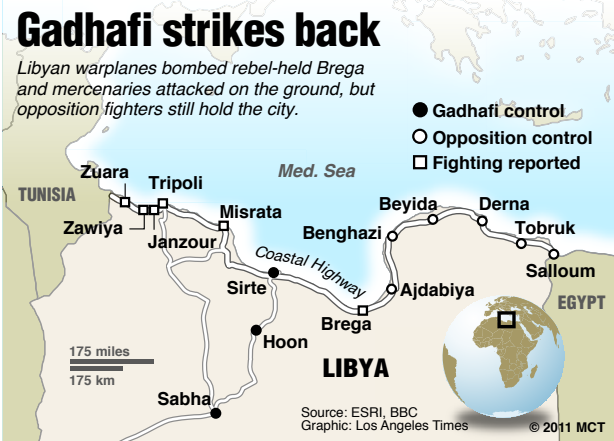

In a speech as the Brega battle unfolded, Gadhafi urged his followers to fight for Libya "inch by inch." He blamed al-Qaida for the unrest and said that army commanders had defected to the rebels because "terrorists" had forced them to do so at gunpoint. He denied that government forces had attacked peace protesters.

"This is the Libyan people, standing in defiance, backing their own symbolic leader," Gadhafi said, as his supporters in the room cheered as if on cue.

Meanwhile, in Cairo, the Arab League, meeting for the first time since the region exploded in a collective protest movement that in six weeks has forced out the leaders of Tunisia and Egypt and threatens several others, suspended Libya's participation and condemned Gadhafi's use of force against civilian protesters. They rejected possible foreign intervention, however, calling the turmoil an internal matter for Libya.

A protester shouts as copies of Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi's 'Green Book' are burned during a demonstration against the regime Wednesday in Benghazi, eastern Libya.

In Washington, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Obama should consider a no-fly zone to stop Gadhafi from using air power.

"A no-fly zone is not a long-term proposition, and we should be ready to implement it as necessary," Kerry said at a hearing where Secretary of State Hillary Clinton testified.

But Clinton told the hearing that "we are long way" from a decision on a no-fly zone.

Libyan warplanes took part in the assault on Brega, dropping at least three bombs after Gadhafi's forces found themselves cornered at the city's university. The bombs left vast craters, but it was unclear whether they'd killed or wounded anyone. The attacks did, however, allow the Gadhafi forces to escape, witnesses said.

According to witnesses, the Gadhafi loyalists began their assault at around 6 a.m., arriving in 50 to 60 military vehicles and taking hostages at the university's engineering school. They also moved into the city's port and oil terminal, which controls the distribution of natural gas in the country's eastern, rebel-held area.

Two U.S. airmen killed in Frankfurt airport shooting

By David McHugh and Juergen Baetz
Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — Two U.S. airmen were killed and two others were wounded at Frankfurt airport Wednesday when a man opened fire on them at close range with a handgun, the first such attack on American forces in Germany in a quarter century.

President Barack Obama called the shooting an "outrageous act."

The alleged assailant, identified as a 21-year-old Kosovo man, was taken immediately into custody and was being questioned by authorities, said Frankfurt police spokesman Manfred Fuellhardt.

Family members in Kosovo described the suspect as a devout Muslim, who was born and raised in Germany and worked at the airport.

The attacker got into an argument with airmen outside their military bus before opening fire, killing the bus driver and one other serviceman, and wounding two others, one of whom was in life-threatening condition, Fuellhardt said. He said the attacker also briefly entered the bus.

The suspect then fled into the airport terminal, where he was quickly grabbed by two federal police officers and a U.S. airman who had pursued him into the building, authorities said. He was disarmed without incident.

The victims, part of a group of about a dozen members of an Air Force military police and base security unit, had just arrived from England, the Air Force said.

They had landed at Frankfurt airport, one of Europe's busiest, and were waiting outside Terminal 2 to be driven to nearby Ramstein Air Base, which is often used as a logistical hub for operations in Afghanistan and Iraq. The two wounded airmen were taken to a hospital.

"I'm saddened and I'm outraged by this attack," Obama said at the White House. "I want everybody to understand that we will spare no effort in learning how this outrageous act took place."

In Berlin, German Chancellor Angela Merkel expressed sympathy for the victims and their families and pledged that Germany would do everything in its power to investigate the crime. "It is a terrible event," she said.

A tall blue barrier was erected around the bus as forensic experts examined it, and removed two bodies from the vehicle. As the bus was later towed away, a bullet hole was visible through the driver's side window.

Question: Jim wrote: "I heard that because of the new bankruptcy law that I can no longer file bankruptcy. True?"

Answer: The only people who cannot file a bankruptcy under the new law that could file a bankruptcy under the old law are those who have filed a previous bankruptcy and not enough time has elapsed to permit another filing. Under the old law, 6 years had to pass between the filings of Chapter 7 bankruptcies. Under the new law, the period is extended to 8 years. Under the new law, those who cannot file another Chapter 7 case because not enough time has elapsed, may still be able to file a Chapter 13 case where they repay a portion of their debts through a Chapter 13 plan. The new law also incorporates a "Means Test" where the debtor's household income is compared to the state median income for the same sized household. Because of this new test, some higher earning debtors may be prevented from filing a Chapter 7 bankruptcy case, but in most instances, they can still file a Chapter 13 case. The new bankruptcy law requires additional disclosures and documentation that sometimes make the preparation of a case more time consuming, but the new requirements do not prevent debtors from seeking financial relief through bankruptcy. A consultation with an experienced bankruptcy attorney will quickly identify any potential issues in your case, including whether you might be required to file a Chapter 13 bankruptcy case instead of a traditional Chapter 7 case.

Neighbors want county to red flag riders

Landowners complain about motocross track

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

A group of landowners are upset that a motocross track near their homes is still operating five years after Twin Falls County denied its owners a conditional use permit.

The residents complain that the track southwest of Filer, which sits on about seven acres of a 40-acre spread owned by Randy and Sally Williamson, is a nuisance and violates planning and zoning ordinances and right to farm laws.

"The motocross track does not meet county code," said Shadow Seaman, a neighbor of the track.

Seaman and about a dozen others visited the Twin Falls County Courthouse last week, asking commissioners and the county prosecutor to take the matter seriously.

"Basically, they (the county) have been exercising it as a squeaky wheel," Seaman said. "That's the way they've treated it. They've basically said, 'We're glad you came in and voiced your opinion. The county prosecutor will get to it when we get to it.' As citizens, we're looking at this as six years later."

In a Sept. 8, 2005, public hearing, Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning denied the Williamsons a conditional use permit at their property, approximately 3750 N. 1900 E., near Filer, noting that the track was not an allowed use or conditional use in the agricultural zone.

The Williamsons filed an appeal, and on Nov. 16, 2005, county commissioners upheld the planning and zoning decision.

According to the commissioners' findings: "While a motocross track may be good for the County in a recreational sense, it would be incompatible with the intended use of the Agricultural Zone ..."

Randy Williamson said the track was built for his grandsons and their friends, who ride the motocross circuit. It is not a commercial track, even though he'd like to use it as such. He operates the track under guidelines, which, among other things, designates that users must "exercise safety and courtesy" to neighbors when visiting the track.

"We've followed the guidelines pretty close," he said, noting that he believes the complaints are turning into "a neighborhood witch hunt."

Seaman, who was appointed spokesman of the residents group, said the point his group is making is that the track, regardless of who or how many people use it, is not an allowed use for agriculture land.

"That is our position as neighbors," he said, noting the track causes noise disturbances, traffic and dust pollution in an area near cattle pastures.

Williamson said the track has never bothered his own cattle.

County prosecutor Grant Loeb said the residents have been to his office a number of times.

"The county is trying to handle it for them," he said. "We've been trying to broker an agreement for some time. Their attitude is they don't want an agreement brokered, their agreement is their way or no way."

The attorney's office previously dismissed charges arising in 2008 that the track was a public nuisance.

Loeb said Tuesday his office is looking into whether a lawsuit enforcing the zoning division is applicable, and whether Williamson's actions constitute a direct refusal to comply with the county.

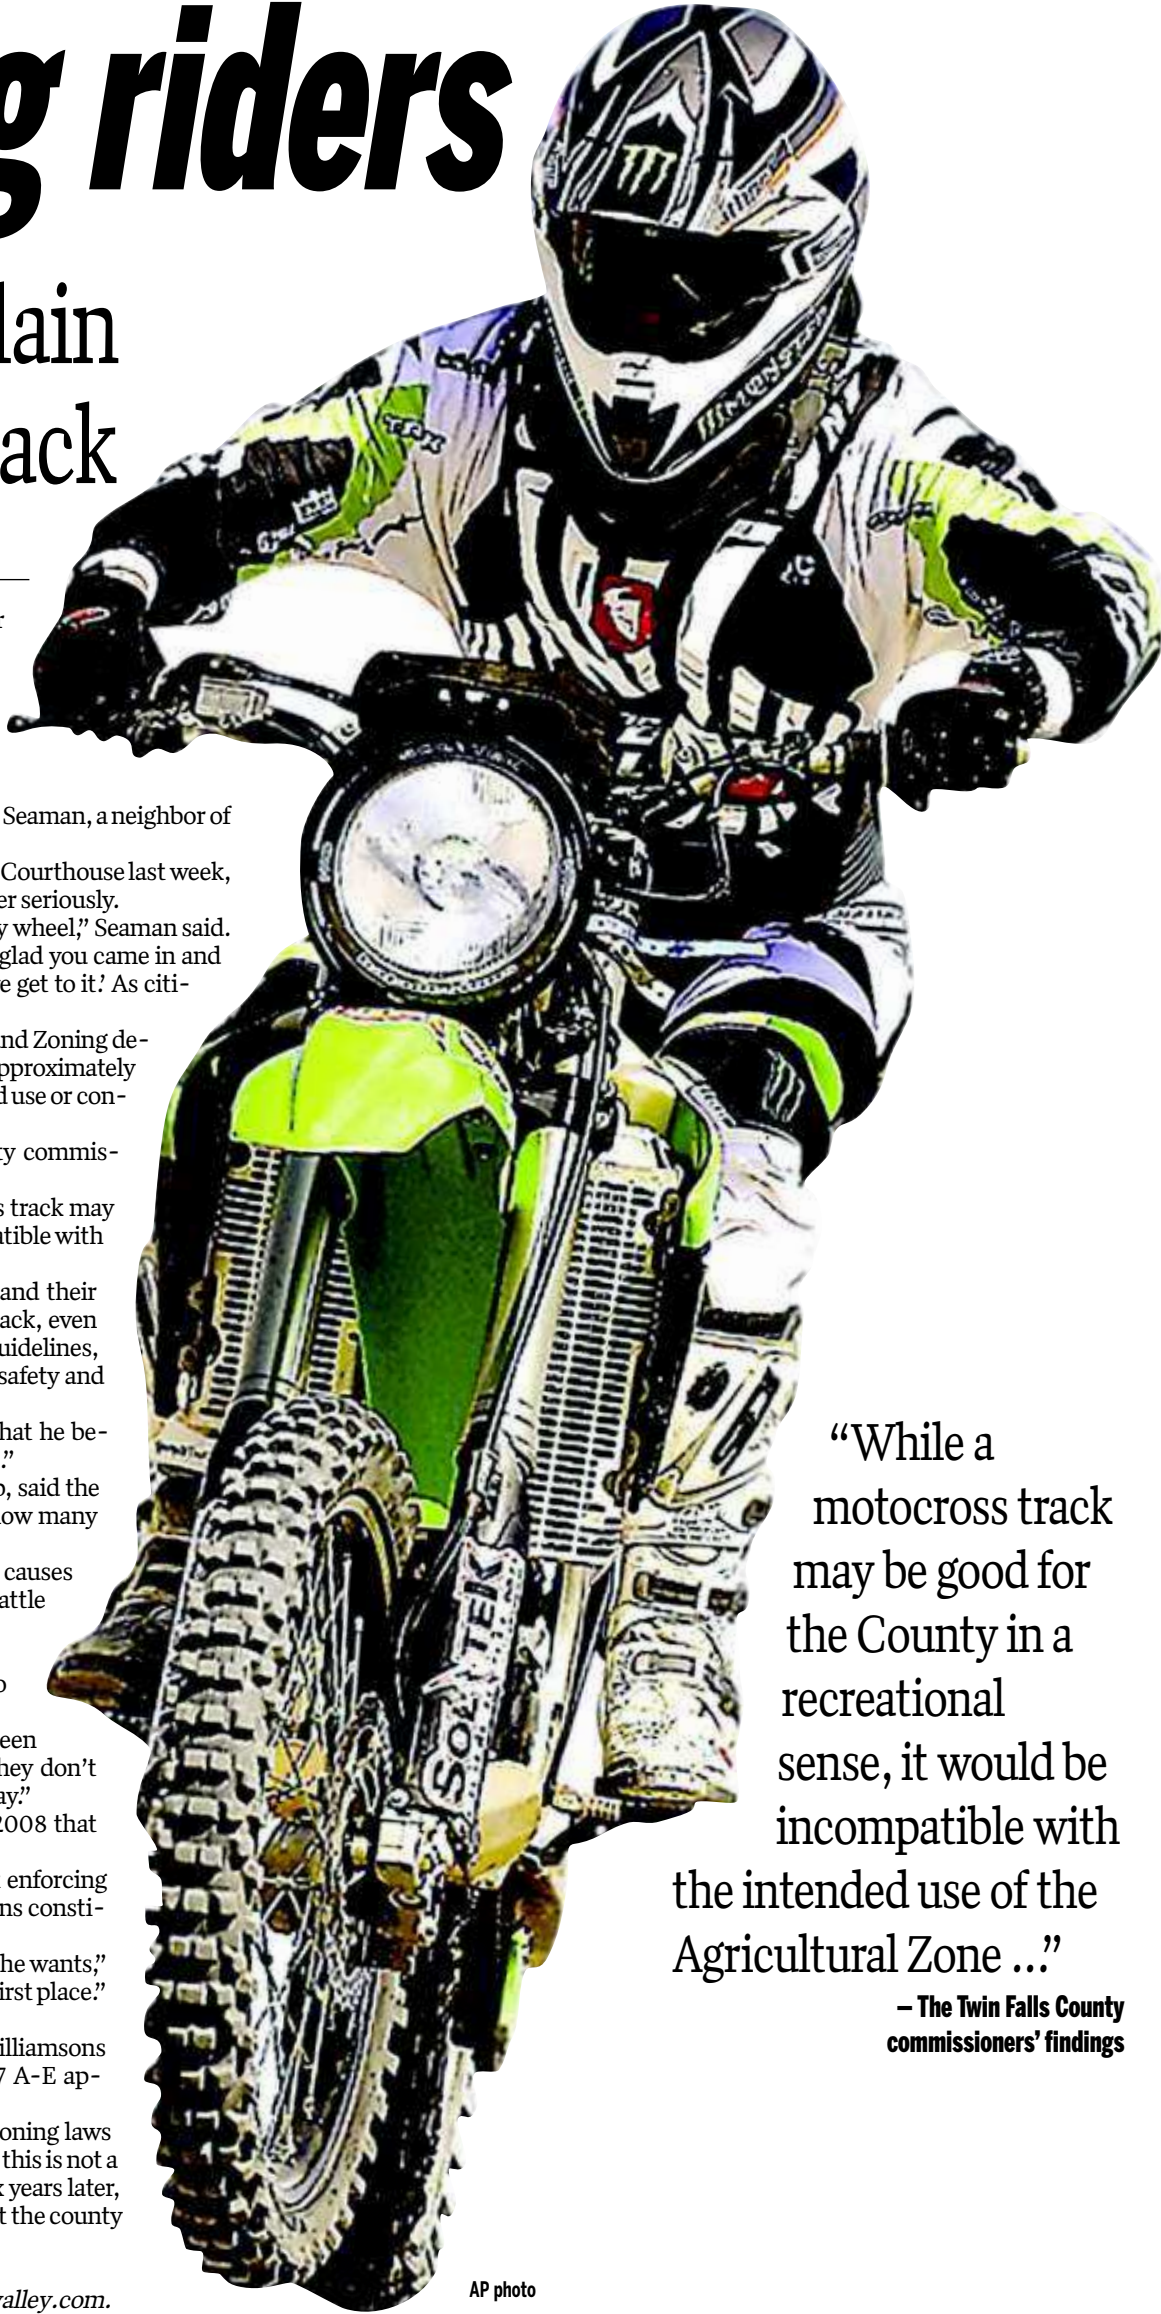

"If it is an approved use, he can do what he's doing for as long as he wants," Loeb said. "If it's not, then he shouldn't have been doing it in the first place."

Seaman said all it takes is a look at county codes.

The Planning and Zoning Commission, when it denied the Williamsons their request, said Title 8 sections 8-6B-1, 8-6B-3, 8-7-1, 8-7-7 A-E applies.

"Right now we still have faith the county will still uphold the zoning laws that are in place," Seaman said. "I understand that the county feels this is not a high priority issue for them but it's getting to the point, almost six years later, that things need to take place. That's what we're holding onto, that the county will uphold the laws that are in the books."

Idaho tribe probes claim of waste in bison hunt

By Matt Volz
Associated Press writer

HELENA, Mont. — An investigation is under way into allegations that members of an Indian tribe from Idaho wasted game during a recent bison hunt outside Yellowstone National Park, the tribe's chairman said.

Nez Perce chairman McCoy Oatman confirmed the tribe was investigating the claims after Montana wildlife officials reported that a bison was killed and left behind in a recent hunt.

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks spokesman Ron Aasheim said Tuesday that his agency turned the case over to the Lapwai, Idaho-based Nez Perce tribe in accordance with an informal agreement between the state and the tribe.

Oatman declined to detail the allegations, saying it would be inappropriate because the case is before the tribe's judicial system.

He declined to say how many tribe members were under investigation, how many bison were killed or even the day the hunt took place.

The tribe's bison hunt will continue as planned over the next two weekends, Oatman said.

"The investigation is ongoing and we are proceeding as normal," he said.

Montana law prohibits hunters from wasting any part of a game animal, bird or fish that is suitable for food. But jurisdictional questions arise when dealing with tribes, which are considered sovereign nations and have treaty rights to hunt the big-game animals.

Oatman said wasting fish and game is a violation of tribal code but he declined to say what the penalties are, saying the judicial system would determine what is appropriate.

Since 2006, the Nez Perce and other tribes have been hunting bison on federal lands outside of Yellowstone where bison migrate to lower elevations in winter in the search for food. Tribal treaties with the federal government give them the right to hunt on traditional hunting grounds on land such as the Gallatin National Forest.

Idaho lawmakers work to prevent ATV road closures

BOISE (AP) — State lawmakers are working to prevent the U.S. Forest Service from closing some roads to all-terrain vehicles amid safety concerns over underage drivers.

The Senate Transportation Committee approved legislation Tuesday to require underage drivers who use these forest roads to complete a state-approved safety course.

Forest Service officials are considering altering or closing some roads in Idaho for safety reasons, following a 2009 decision by state lawmakers that opened the roads to drivers younger than 16 who operate off-highway vehicles without a state-issued driver's license.

The Forest Service has identified more than 2,500 miles of roads that are "of concern."

Sen. John McGee, R-Caldwell, says his bill to require underage drivers to take safety training aims to fend off potential road closures. The measure now goes to the full Senate.

Rick Pope examines one of the many fishing rods made by his Dallas, Texas-based company.

Here's how to find the rod that's right for you

By Ray Sasser
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — When the average angler walks into a well-stocked tackle store, he is faced with rows of fishing rods in various lengths, actions and configurations. They cost from $50 to $500, and the most expensive rod may not be the best rod for the job.

The following is a question and answer on bass fishing rods with Rick Pope, president of Temple Fork Outfitters, a Dallas company that started building high-quality fly rods at bargain prices and expanded into other fishing markets.

Pope is a serious angler whose design team includes two legendary anglers — Lefty Kreh and Gary Loomis.

Though TFO is best known for its fly rods, the company offers about 35 casting and spinning rod models suitable for bass fishing. Most of them cost about $100 and are flying off the shelves at dealers across the country. In many areas, you can find them at Bass Pro Shops, Cabela's and Fishin' World. You can see them online at www.tforods.com.

Q How do you go about selecting a good bass rod?

A Length, action (where the rod bends) and power (how much it bends) are the fundamental issues. Price is a major consideration for most.

Q Is a $500 rod better than a $100 rod?

A Some believe so, and I like side lock 20-gauge shotguns, but my Remington 870 pump performs just as well. Components influence price more than rod blank construction. From a pure performance standpoint, most find it difficult to see price and performance as universally linked.

Q What do you do other than pick up the rod and feel the action (without a reel, line or lure) to determine if the rod will suit you while fishing?

A Balance, tip lightness (a sensitivity indicator) and overall weight certainly influence me the most. Wiggling a rod can give some insight into recovery speed (damping), and the tradition of bending a rod on the floor or ceiling can help predict both action and power.

Bottom line is that there is no good substitute for fishing with a rod.

Q Does everybody offer warranties for rods these days and how good are they?

A All of the branded rod companies I know of have some form of "limited" warranty. With conventional rods, it is usually a replacement offer at a greatly reduced price. Warranties are often stated to be lifetime, but that can be the lifetime of the owner or the rod company, whichever is shorter.

Q Is there a website where anglers can see definitive comparisons of fishing rods?

A We all pay close attention to fishing forums, but they are generally very regional and species specific.

Q If you had only one bass rod, what action would you choose?

A A fast-action, medium-heavy seven-foot-

Pay attention to new fishing rules brochure

Q "I saw an angler over the weekend on Rock Creek above the National Forest boundary. I stopped to inform him the area was closed to fishing. He told me in the new regulations Rock Creek is no longer closed during the winter. What's this all about?"

A I'm sorry to inform you, but the angler you talked with was correct. The new fishing regulations brochure for 2011-12 went into effect in January.

There are several notable items in the new brochure. The first thing you'll notice is the brochure is organized by region. If you want to fish in the Magic Valley region, go to the Magic Valley section.

At the top of that section, in addition to a map of the region is "General Fishing Season" rules, bag and possession limits. It reads, "All Waters Open All Year, except as modified in the Magic Valley Special Rules." It also lists the general bag and possession limits for each game fish species in Magic Valley area waters.

In the following section all the areas within the Magic Valley that have special angling rules (that are not open to fishing year-round) are listed. The section begins with a reference list allowing anglers to quickly check to see if their specific waters have special rules. If your desired angling area is not listed, the region's general rules apply. If your desired area is listed then search the special rules on subsequent pages

ASK THE OFFICER

for details.

Specifically, Rock Creek above the highline canal that used to be closed through the winter is now open to fishing year-round because it is not listed as an area with special regulations.

There are a couple items of caution. Each region has its own general bag and possession limits listed in the brochure and they could be different between regions.

For example, the Panhandle Region has a 15 fish kokanee limit, while the Clearwater Region has a 25 fish kokanee limit, and the Magic Valley Region has a six fish kokanee limit.

Another thing to be aware of is that some regions list special rules by drainage, which may include many different streams not specifically named in the special regulation section.

Fisheries biologists worked hard utilizing many types of public input to improve this fishing brochure. Comments have been positive about the changes, suggesting the brochure is more easily understood.

Bison

Umatilla Indian Reservation resumed their hunts near Yellowstone this winter for the first time in 100 years.

Oatman said this year's hunt has been successful and without incident except for the current allegations, whereas last year no hunt was held.

State and tribal officials have been at odds in the past over details of the hunt, such as the number the tribes are allowed to take. On Tuesday, neither the tribe nor FWP could say how many bison the tribe had taken this year.

Right-to-carry laws: Second Amendment in action

I'd like to preface today's column by expressing a heartfelt "thank you" to the legislators and Second Amendment advocacy groups that have adopted a proactive strategy and are introducing legislation designed to protect and enhance our basic constitutional rights. In particular, I to focus attention on concealed carry provisions.

Concealed carry or CCW (carrying a concealed weapon) refers to the practice of carrying a concealed handgun or other weapon on your person or in your proximity while in public. Currently there is no federal or national statute granting this privilege to all law abiding U.S. citizens, but

THE BULL
Rich
Simpson

48 states have laws on their books extending this right to their legal residents. The lone exceptions are Wisconsin and Illinois, though in practice Hawaii is also a "no issue" state.

The states allowing civilian carry do so under one of three statutory provisions: Unrestricted, shall-issue, or may-issue. Unrestricted carry allows law-abiding residents to carry a handgun without a permit. Only Alaska, Arizona and Vermont currently exercise this option, but Utah and South Carolina have forwarded legislation for this permitting choice. This option is currently being championed in the Wyoming legislature (and recently introduced here in Idaho) under the title of Permitless or Constitutional Carry. Its intent is to allow all law abiding residents to exercise their constitutional right to keep and bear arms without the expense or stipulations of obtaining a special permit.

Shall-issue states require the issuance of a permit to any applicant who meets the specific criteria of the law. The granting authorities must and shall issue the permit if the individual meets all of the legal requirements. This frees the process from any possible discrimination or prejudice by the granting authority.

Typical requirements include proof of residency, minimum age, submission of fingerprints, passing a computerized background check, successfully completing a handgun/firearms safety class and payment of the required fee. Thirty-eight states currently exercise this option.

The may-issue jurisdictions requires a permit, and the granting of these licenses is partially at the discretion of local authorities, usually the sheriff's office or police department. In addition to meeting the state-level criteria, the applicant must convince the local granting authorities of their genuine need to carry concealed.

Requests for personal or family defense are not automatically accepted as sufficient need. A no-issue jurisdiction is just that — one in which no private citizens are allowed to carry a concealed handgun. Wisconsin, Illinois, and the District of Columbia enforce this statute.

Though technically may-issue states, Hawaii and New Jersey, as well as certain cities and counties in California and New York are in practice no-issue areas.

Any person considering applying for a concealed carry license should not only carefully research their local and state requirements and limitations, but those of other municipalities and states they may visit while armed. This will keep you free from many legal entanglements and therefore cannot be understated.

I just filled out the simple one-page application and I'm heading back to the sheriff's office tomorrow with a check for $60 for finger printing and a background check. I'll let you know how it goes.

Good shooting!

Big fish must be handled with care

By Ray Sasser
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — As soon as the weather warms up, more than a million sport anglers will dust off their fishing gear and take advantage of Texas' abundant water and equally abundant game fish.

Many anglers will keep a few fresh fish to eat, and there's certainly nothing wrong with that, as long as you abide by the legal size and daily bag limits.

The majority of anglers practice some form of catch-and-release fishing, however. Nearly every popular game-fish species is protected by a minimum size limit. Fishermen have learned that it doesn't hurt, and it makes good conservation sense to release large fish.

Big fish aren't as good to eat as their smaller counterparts. From the standpoint of conservation, trophy-sized fish are important because everybody would like to catch one (or more), and it takes years to grow a large fish. The bottom line is sportsmen have too much time invested in a big fish to kill the fish.

The Toyota ShareLunker program has proved that trophy fish can be recycled. Besides, if you want a wall mount of the biggest fish you've ever caught, you don't have to kill the fish.

Simply take a good photo of your catch, along with length and girth measurements, and get the details to a taxidermist who specializes in replica fish mounts. A good taxidermist can make a replica that looks just like your fish. The replica mount lasts longer than a skin mount.

Fish replicas are a classic example of having your cake and eating it, too. Who knows, maybe you'll be lucky enough to catch the big fish again next year, and even bigger than the first time. Most likely, the biggest fish you ever caught could wind up somebody else's biggest fish, too.

In spite of everything that's been learned and shared by Texas fisheries biologists, some anglers refuse to do it right. The ShareLunker crew is the closest thing in Texas to a triage group for fish. They know what to do to keep these fish alive and healthy.

Keep in mind that any big

HELPFUL TIPS

Three tips from Toyota ShareLunker director David Campbell to help a big fish survive being caught and released:

- Don't handle the fish any more than necessary. You'll remove the fish's protective slime coating.
- Don't hold the fish out of the water longer than you can hold your breath. If the wind is blowing, the fish's eyes can be damaged by as little as 20 seconds of exposure.
- Hold the fish with both hands; one hand on its lower lip to secure the fish, the other hand under its belly to support the weight.

fish is a senior citizen. A 15-pound bass is probably 10 years old and cannot survive the same rough treatment as a 3-year-old fish.

My pet peeve is anglers who continue to hold very big bass by the lower lip, supporting the fish's considerable weight with an exaggerated lip grip that rolls the fish's lip out and stresses the jaw. Anglers do this to make the fish look bigger. Texas officials long ago identified the practice as damaging to a big fish's jaw, and ShareLunker program director David Campbell said it may be damaging to smaller fish as well.

Another pet peeve is anglers who've caught the fish of a lifetime but aren't willing to disrupt their fishing day to transport the fish to a marina with certified scales. They stick the fish in a live well and continue to fish for several more hours, including running the boat all around the lake.

That's a lot of stress for a big fish. Bass boat live wells are better than ever, but they're not really designed for fish that measure 25 inches or longer. Even if the lake surface is calm, riding around inside a sloshing live well is stressful.

If you plan to release the fish, you should stop fishing as soon as the lucky catch occurs and transport the fish to the marina as quickly as possible.

Better yet, keep accurate scales and a digital camera in the boat, weigh and photograph the fish yourself and get it back in the water as quickly as possible.

Elko angler's 16-pound trout breaks Nev. record

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — Mike Mott thought he caught his line on a log when he was fishing last month at the Ruby Lake National Wildlife Refuge in northeast Nevada.

Instead, the Elko angler ended up breaking the state's 39-year-old record for the largest rainbow trout ever caught in Nevada.

State wildlife officials have confirmed the 30-inch-long whopper caught on Feb. 10 weighed 16 pounds, 8 ounces. That's four ounces more than the old record set at Lake Mohave in 1971.

Mott had to wade into the cold water to land the fish because it was too big for his net, but he didn't mind.

He decided to eat it instead of mount it, but is making replicas and has granted the state's request to display their own copies in Reno and Elko.

Careful management leads to lake sturgeon comeback

By Dennis Anderson
Star Tribune

ON LAKE WINNEBAGO, Wis. — America's greatest conservation success story might not be the return of the eagle, the wolf or the peregrine falcon. More likely it's a fish, and a disagreeable-looking one at that, the lake sturgeon.

Or what Wisconsin's Menomonie Indians call nam-a'o.

Paradoxically, the rebirth of these 150-million-year-old critters in this huge lake has depended on people who love nothing more on a winter's day than to send a razor-sharp spear into chilled water, hoping to stick a sturgeon.

So it has been as long as people have lived on Winnebago's shores, or along the banks of rivers flowing into it.

Late last month, on Winnebago, Paul Muche of Fond du Lac, Wis., was in a shanty staring into a large watery hole. The sturgeon's 16-day season was winding down, and relatively few people were on the ice, in part because 20 pickups had dropped into the lake during a recent warm spell, and one spearer had died.

Still, peering into the water in Muche's shanty, waiting for a sturgeon to appear, was mesmerizing, in an anxious sort of way — like staring at a TV test pattern while waiting for a real live monster to leap from the screen and grab you.

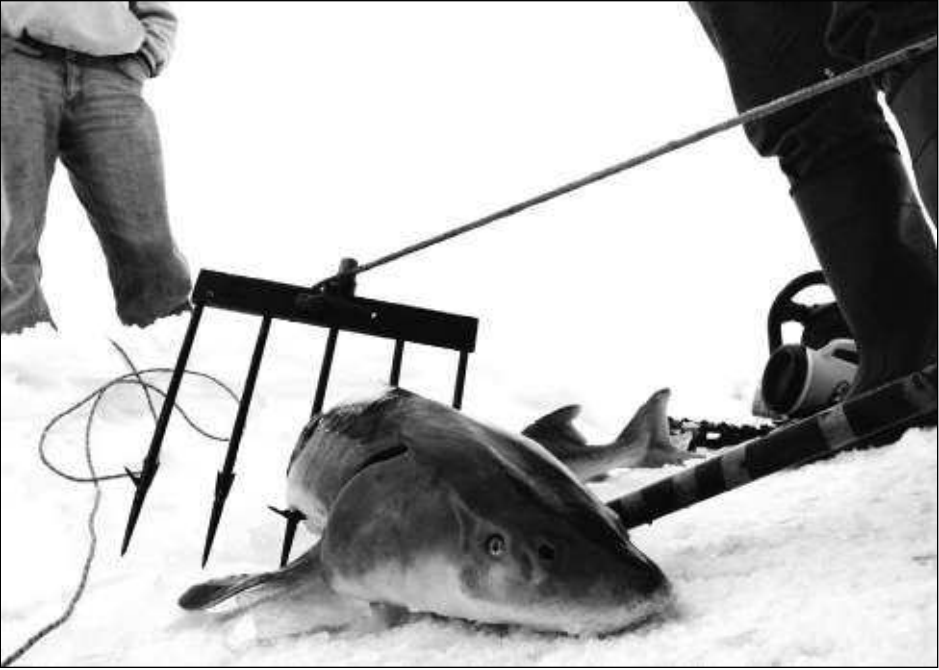

Also in the shanty was Karen Rediske, Muche's aunt. She too was transfixed by the water, and it returned her reflection. Hanging nearby were spears, 8 feet or so in length, their sharp steel tines submerged beneath the water, an important detail if a sturgeon appeared.

"When a fish swims into the hole, you don't want to spook it by moving the spear around too much," Muche said.

As popular as deer hunting is in Wisconsin, sturgeon spearing hereabouts is equally so. More lifestyle than sport, it's equipment-intensive: Four-wheel-drive pickups. Long-barred chain saws. Shanty heaters. Portable LP tanks. Decoys. And, of course, spears. All are needed.

"The spears are made by different people around the lake," Muche said. "Each is a little different."

Before statehood, the

Spears are used to catch sturgeon while ice fishing on Lake Winnebago, Wis.

Ryan Feldner shows a nearly 100-pound sturgeon he speared while ice fishing on Lake Winnebago, Wis.

Menomonie had enjoyed consistently high sturgeon populations, in part because they and other Indians in the area were relatively few, and the pressure they put on sturgeon was low. They speared through the ice in winter. But more intensively, the Menomonie speared Lake Winnebago sturgeon in spring when they ran up rivers to spawn, particularly when they crowded by the thousands in the Wolf River, near Shawano.

Shawano is 125 miles from Lake Winnebago.

Oshkosh, leader of the Bear Clan of Menomonie, in the mid-1800s successfully resisted efforts by the federal government to move his people to Minnesota, in part because of the rich resources available to them in Wisconsin, including sturgeon. The Indians not only ate the sturgeon and their eggs fresh, they smoked the big fish for consumption months later.

But hard times would beset Lake Winnebago's sturgeon during much of last century, and following decades of legal overharvest and poaching, Bill Casper had had enough.

Casper, a machinist who had grown up on the east side of Winnebago, didn't throw a single spear in the winter of 1977. Winnebago was dead sturgeon water, he thought. Or nearly dead. So he organized a group called Sturgeon for Tomorrow, which in the years since has pushed for better management, a cleaner Lake Winnebago and, particularly, for protection from poachers of spawning fish.

Muche is one of thousands of Sturgeon for Tomorrow members.

"We have banquets around the lake, raise money and volunteer to guard spawning fish," he said.

Don Muche, 73, Paul's dad, was on the ice Thursday, and at day's end — meaning the end of spearing, at 1:30 in the afternoon — he was happy enough about the state of his sport.

In a tavern near a DNR registration station, he held forth about the finer points of throwing a spear, which actually isn't "thrown" at all, he said.

"You slip it into the water and down as close to the sturgeon as you can, then you push it," he said, adding: "Of course, a lot of people get too excited, and miss."

Question: Jim wrote: "I heard that because of the new bankruptcy law that I can no longer file bankruptcy. True?"

Answer: The only people who cannot file a bankruptcy under the new law that could file a bankruptcy under the old law are those who have filed a previous bankruptcy and not enough time has elapsed to permit another filing. Under the old law, 6 years had to pass between the filings of Chapter 7 bankruptcies. Under the new law, the period is extended to 8 years. Under the new law, those who cannot file another Chapter 7 case because not enough time has elapsed, may still be able to file a Chapter 13 case where they repay a portion of their debts through a Chapter 13 plan. The new law also incorporates a "Means Test" where the debtor's household income is compared to the state median income for the same sized household. Because of this new test, some higher earning debtors may be prevented from filing a Chapter 7 bankruptcy case, but in most instances, they can still file a Chapter 13 case. The new bankruptcy law requires additional disclosures and documentation that sometimes make the preparation of a case more time consuming, but the new requirements do not prevent debtors from seeking financial relief through bankruptcy. A consultation with an experienced bankruptcy attorney will quickly identify any potential issues in your case, including whether you might be required to file a Chapter 13 bankruptcy case instead of a traditional Chapter 7 case.

St. Luke's addresses healthy teen eating

St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center will host a roundtable dialogue with two area professionals about helping teens develop a lifelong healthy relationship with food and their bodies.

The session will take place from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Monday in Room 211 of the Community Campus in Hailey. It will be facilitated by social worker Julie Carney and Becky McCarver, a registered dietitian at St. Luke's.

In 2006, 8 percent of tenth-grade students expressed anorexic or bulimic behavior, according to Blaine County Developmental Asset Survey data collected from students. In 2010 that number rose to 20 percent. In 2006, 11 percent of seniors reported they had anorexic or bulimic behavior, rising to 21 percent in 2010.

Eating disorders not only affect girls, but are also a growing concern in boys as well. The session will help parents to better recognize the signs of disordered eating in their children.

Dandy-Walker patient has uncontrolled seizures

DEARDR. GOTT: My 20-year-old granddaughter was diagnosed with Dandy-Walker syndrome at the age of 2. By the time she was 12, she had mild hydrocephalus and petit-mal seizures. We have tried anti-seizure medications, which have not worked. Some meds have put her in a mental-health facility. She was also given Haldol, which made her catatonic.

ASK DR. GOTT

Dr. Peter Gott

She had an acute reaction. She has a pediatric neurologist, but I feel that without any progress, this is as far as he can go. She has been going to him since she was 22 months old.

She was withdrawn from all medications two weeks ago, and all that she has been prescribed for a headache before her seizures was Tylenol and Ativan, which she takes following a seizure. She had three seizures on Saturday and one on Sunday. Thank you for any help you can provide.

DEAR READER: Dandy-

Walker syndrome is a rare congenital brain malformation that involves the back of the brain and the fluid-filled spaces that surround it. The brain contains four ventricles, which are filled with cerebrospinal fluid. Features that generally occur in early infancy include enlargement of only the fourth ventricle, partial or complete absence of the portion of the brain between the two cerebellar hemispheres and the formation of cysts near the internal base of the skull. For older children, features and symptoms can include convulsions, unsteadiness, jerky eye movements, a bulge at the back of the skull and problems with nerves that control breathing, the face, neck and eyes. The primary treatment for the condition is the placement of a shunt positioned in the brain to help drain excess cerebrospinal fluid to the peritoneal cavity, where it is absorbed into the body. Some children recover completely following shunt placement. For others, a lesser degree of progress is seen. Up to 90 percent of all Dandy-Walker patients have hydrocephalus, an

He loved his family and was a wonderful mentor to his children. Bill could cook anything and was an expert in German dishes, baking whole wheat bread and Dutch oven cooking (just to name a few). Additionally, Bill was a self-proclaimed meteorologist.

He never knew a stranger and made everyone feel at ease when they were in his presence. He and his friends enjoyed their daily meetings at Price's Café with Bill having a perfect 100 percent attendance. He will be remembered as a loving husband, father, grandpa, brother, uncle, cousin, major tease and, most important, "best friend." Two years ago, Bill was baptized a member of the LDS Church and loved his church family.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, March 5, at the Burley LDS West Stake Center, 2420 Parke Ave., with Bishop Dan Alvey officiating. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Burial will be in the Oakley Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, March 4, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Margaret Emily Woods was born April 1, 1919, in Richmond, Calif., to William E. and Anna A. Little Woods. At an early age, Margaret, an older half-sister Mabel, a half-brother William, her brother Edwin, and her parents moved from St. Louis, Mo., to Twin Falls, Idaho. She graduated from Twin Falls High school in 1937 and attended nurses training at Mercy Medical Center in Nampa, Idaho, graduating in 1940 with an RN. She returned to Twin Falls and started her career in nursing. It was an important occupation and gave her great memories over the years. She met and on July 8, 1942, married John F. Weeks, a dashing young soldier. By the time John and Margaret divorced, she was a mother of two boys, Larry, born in 1943, and David, born in 1946.

She returned to Twin Falls, lived with her mother and raised her two boys while working as a registered nurse in pediatrics and as a night supervisor at Magic Valley

Memorial Hospital. Her retirement from Magic Valley Memorial Hospital was celebrated in 1981. Margaret touched many lives.

On May 17, 1969, Margaret married Robert Grant. Their years together were happy but short lived. Mr. Grant died in 1975. She married Cecil R. Bowyer, a high school classmate, in 1989 on her birthday. This union added Cecil's two adult sons, Raymond and Clifton, to her family. She enjoyed her retirement years participating in her TOPS club, a pinocle group, her garden club and St. Edward's Church activities. Cecil died in April 2009. In August 2006, she moved from her home on Borah Avenue to Wynwood Assisted Living, where she resided until her death.

Margaret was preceded in death by her parents, her three siblings and three husbands. She is survived by her sons, Larry F. Weeks (Virginia Neil) of Boise, and David L. Weeks (Laurie); and grandsons, Eliot and Colin Weeks, all of Reno, Nev.; one great-grandson; stepsons, Raymond (Amanda) Bowyer of Caldwell and Clifton Bowyer of Renton, Wash.

The family wishes to extend great appreciation for the loving and devoted care their mother received during the nearly five years that she lived at Wynwood. The staff became her second family. Flowers are welcome or memorial donations may be made to a charity of your choice.

Nellie Smith Drage

March 15, 1919–Feb. 28, 2011

HAGERMAN — Nellie Smith Drage, 91, of Hagerman, passed away peacefully at her son's home in Carey, Idaho, on Monday, Feb. 28, 2011.

Nellie was born March 15, 1919, at the family home in Malta, Idaho. She spent her childhood in Malta, where she attended school, graduating from Malta High School in 1938. She married Gordon W. Drage on Oct. 5, 1938, in a grocery store (which was owned by the local judge) in Burley, Idaho. Nellie and Gordon lived in Burley for a short time, then moved to Carey. In Carey, they farmed and ranched until 1975, when they "retired" to Hagerman. During retirement, they both worked at Tupperware for a number of years prior to retiring — this time for good.

Nellie is survived by her son, Randy Drage (Jolynn) of Carey; sister, Beth Gunnell of Preston; granddaughters, Cindy Baird (children, Jennifer, Amanda and Coleman) of Mountain Home, Chantel (Bill) Standley of Twin Falls, Brandi (Edd) Dingham (children, Macee and Gage) of Idaho Falls; grandsons, Ty (Gloria) Justesen (children, Caleb, Cassie, Jimmy, Pete, Vera and Danny) of Filer, and Daniel (Morgan) Drage (children, Ashton and Whitley) of Carey. Nellie was preceded in death by her parents, Samuel Napoleon (Nap) Smith and Vernice Rose Osterhout Smith; husband, Gordon Drage; daughter, Renee "Sue" Hestesen Esterholt; brothers, Bob, SN and Jake; and sisters, Rose, Helen, JoAnn and Emma.

There will be a graveside service at 11 a.m. Thursday, March 3, at the Hagerman Cemetery in Hagerman. The family suggests donations to Hospice of the Wood River Valley, P.O. Box 4320, Ketchum, ID 83340, in Nellie's memory.

Friends and family are invited to leave condolences and share memories at www.woodriverchapel.com.

Helen Dorothy Cozakos

Sept. 22, 1914–Feb. 28, 2011

She was born Sept. 22, 1914, in Salt Lake City, Utah, to Olaf Theodore Stevenson and Thora Sather Stevenson (both Norwegian immigrants).

She was the loving mother of five children: Jon Cozakos (Carla) of Gig Harbor, Wash., David Cozakos (Nikki) of Oceanside, Calif., Harry Cozakos (Annette) of Starr, Idaho, Mary Anne Fitzgerald of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Chris Patterson (Val) of Burley, Idaho. Plus, she had 16 grandchildren, 32 great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband, Harry E. Cozakos; her parents; and four siblings, Paul Stevenson, Glen Stevenson, Thelma Cottam and Ted Stevenson.

She attended schools in Salt Lake City, Utah. She met as a young adult and later married the love of her life, Harry E. Cozakos (Greek immigrant), on Feb. 21, 1936, and together they started making their history. She worked for Safeway and retired after 32 years. In May of 1982, they moved to Burley, Idaho, where she later joined the Burley United Methodist Church.

She was affectionately called "Pretty Grandma" by her grandchildren and great-grandchildren for her inner and outer beauty. She was a member of Eastern Star. Helen and Harry joined the Roaming Utes Chapter of Good Sam RV Club, where they traveled extensively across the states. Later, she traveled to Greece.

She loved playing cards with family and friends ranging from Canasta, Pinochle, Hand and Foot to Bridge. She created beautiful quilts wrapped with love that will forever warm our hearts. She often stated that her greatest pride was her children and grandchildren and their accomplishments in life. Family was the most important thing in her life, and she was the center of it, sharing her grace, affection, guidance and strength. She embraced life and the Lord and now walks in his light. Do not mourn her passing, but celebrate her legacy.

The funeral will be held at 3:30 p.m. Saturday, March 5, at the Burley United Methodist Church, with Pastor Karen Puckett officiating. Friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, March 4, at the Morrison-Payne Funeral Home, 321 E. Main St. in Burley, and 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. prior to the funeral Saturday at the church. ## REGION 18 TOURNAMENT PREVIEW

SIX FOR ONE

By Mike Christensen ♦ Times-News writer

Six will enter, one will emerge. The Region 18 men's basketball tournament, arguably the best junior college conference tourney in the nation, tips off today in Twin Falls. Five of the six participants have been ranked in the NJCAA Division I poll at some point in the season.

Top-seeded and second-ranked CSI and second-seeded and 20th-ranked Eastern Utah are the favorites, but there are no guarantees. As CSI head coach Steve Gosar said, "This is gonna be a fun weekend."

CSI Golden Eagles

Seed: No. 1
Record: 26-4 (12-3 SWAC)
Key players: 5-11 G Pierre Jackson (17.2 points, 4.6 assists); 6-8 C Kenny Buckner (12.0 points, 9.4 rebounds)

Why they could win it: CSI has the best guards in the conference, a solid post presence in Boise State-bound Kenny Buckner and good depth. The Eagles also share the ball well, leading the league in assists as seven players average 8.5 points more. Plus, CSI is on its home floor where it is 19-1 this season, including 8-0 against league foes.

Coach speak: "I think we just need to play one possession at a time and not look too far ahead. Not worry about what just happened, but one possession at a time and stay in the moment." — CSI head coach Steve Gosar

EASTERN UTAH Golden Eagles

Seed: No. 2
Record: 23-7 (10-5 SWAC)
Key players: 6-6 F Jonathan Mills (13.5 points, 10.7 rebounds), 6-8 F Brady Hurst (13.1 points, 7.5 rebounds)

Why they could win it: The SWAC's best rebounding team, CEU is long and athletic arguably has the most talent in the league. If the guard play does enough to complement the talent up front and the bench delivers, Eastern Utah will be tough to beat. With four starters standing 6-5 or taller, CEU size is a tough matchup for CSI small lineup if the two meet for the title.

Coach speak: "We've got a lot of work to do to get back (to a rematch with CSI). The two seed's a lot tougher than the one seed, especially in our conference." — CEU head coach Brad Barton

SALT LAKE CC Bruins

Seed: No. 3
Record: 23-7 (9-6 SWAC)
Key players: Patrick McCollum (17.4 points, 3.9 assists), Alfonzo Hubbard (17.3 points, 6.7 rebounds)

Why they could win it: In his 20th season, head coach Norm Parrish always has the Bruins prepared. If a third or fourth scorer like forward Jason Gamblin or guard Given Kalipinde steps up to complement McCollum and Hubbard, the Bruins could make a deep run.

Coach speak: "There are a lot of things we haven't done well consistently this year. We haven't guarded or rebounded consistently and we haven't consistently taken good shots. We have a very small margin of error because all the teams are very, very good." — SLCC head coach Norm Parrish

SNOW COLLEGE Badgers

Seed: No. 4
Record: 18-12 (7-8 SWAC)
Key players: 6-3 G Travis Wilkins (17.0 points), 5-9 G Brandon Vega (9.6 points, 4.0 assists)

Why they could win it: The Badgers recently dismissed two players and had another quit the team, but it's been addition by subtraction, improving the team's chemistry. If Snow's nine-man roster can get past NIC on Thursday, it will have confidence against CSI, having taken two of three from the No. 1 seed this season.

Coach speak: "Our team chemistry right now is really, really good. ... I don't think there's any magic formula really, it's going to come down to who can turn it over the least and win the battle on the boards." — Snow head coach Michael Ostlund

NORTH IDAHO Cardinals

Seed: No. 5
Record: 22-8 (7-8 SWAC)
Key players: 5-10 G Michael Hale (18.1 points, 4.1 assists), 6-6 F Tyrone White (12.4 points, 6.3 rebounds)

Why they could win it: The ultra fast Hale has a knack for getting to the foul line, where he shoots 84 percent on a league-leading 201 attempts. Forward Tyrone White is a versatile scorer, but the Cardinals will need more consistency from the rest of the roster to hoist a trophy on Saturday night.

Coach speak: "Our keys to advancing in the tournament are our defensive effort and our shot selection on offense. We also need focus on rebounding the ball and not giving up second chances." — NIC head coach Jared Phay

COLORADO NORTHWESTERN CC Spartans

Seed: No. 6
Record: 7-23 (0-15 SWAC)
Key players: Jon Henderson (15.5 points), Brent Aga (10.8 points, 7.4 rebounds)

Why they could win it: With a winless mark in league play, the Spartans are a definite long shot to win one game in the tourney, let alone the title. But if center Nick Gillett shoots like he did against CSI last Saturday (six 3s in the second half), CNCC could pull off a shocker.

Coach speak: "It will take us playing our best basketball from top to bottom to advance in the tournament, including rebounding, taking care of the ball and shooting a strong percentage from the field and doing all of these thing consistently throughout the tournament." — CNCC head coach Adrian Hayes

SLCC, NIC teams to beat in women's tourney

CSI women open with CNCC

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

There's no questioning who the favorites are in the Region 18 women's basketball tournament. Top-seeded and sixth-ranked Salt Lake Community College and No. 2 seed North Idaho College, ranked 15th, dominated regular-season play in the Scenic West Athletic Conference.

Both teams went 11-1 against the other four teams in the league this season. The Bruins (23-4) have won back-to-back Scenic West Athletic Conference regular-season titles, while the Cardinals are two-time defending Region 18 champions.

But as the third seed and tournament host, the College of Southern Idaho women aren't ready to concede anything to the top two

NFL and union plan to resume mediation Thursday

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Locked in a multibillion dollar staredown, the NFL and the players' union were expected to resume mediation Thursday morning, 15 hours before the current collective bargaining agreement expires.

The sides have met for nine days before federal mediator George Cohen, with no reports of significant progress. They talked for four hours Wednesday, before the NFL contingent departed to attend a meeting of the 32 teams' owners at a hotel 25 miles away in Chantilly, Va.

Wednesday evening, NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell, two members of the owners' labor committee and two top lawyers for the league returned to meet with Cohen at his office. The NFL

"The committee has not made any decision as to what will happen upon expiration of the current agreement if we don't have a new one by tomorrow night."

— NFL spokesman Greg Aiello

Players Association was not present for that meeting.

The CBA runs out at midnight Eastern time as Thursday becomes Friday, and among the possibilities are that the owners lock out the players or that the union decertifies. Whatever happens this week could cause the country's most popular sport to lose regular-season games to a work stoppage for the first time since 1987. Or, perhaps, everything could be resolved by management and labor in an industry with annual revenues topping $9 billion.

NFL owners, who are not required to take a lockout vote, ended their special labor meeting Wednesday night without taking any action.

"The committee has not made any decision as to what will happen upon expiration of the current agreement if we don't have a new one by tomorrow night," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said.

Thursday's owners session was canceled, and most owners, including the Patriots' Robert Kraft and the Cowboys' Jerry Jones, were headed for home.

CSI baseball gears up for SWAC start

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

It's not the ideal scenario under which the College of Southern Idaho baseball team begins the Scenic West Athletic Conference season. But at least the Golden Eagles are playing games this weekend. We think. CSI opens its conference schedule by visiting Eastern Utah on Friday and Saturday, marking the end of a 20-day stretch that saw the visiting Golden Eagles play just one baseball game. Some of that was due to an 11-day gap between games, but CSI lost four games against the Prairie Baseball Academy last weekend to snow. "We just want to play," CSI coach Boomer Walker said after Wednesday's practice, which was limited by residual snow and sped up by more incoming weather. "It's not ideal to need to see what guys can do and start conference at the same time, but it's what we've got." At least CSI isn't starting the conference season at a place it usually struggles. The Price, Utah, venue plays like a bandbox and has typically been friendly to Golden Eagles both home and visiting. That will benefit a couple of new pitchers CSI hopes to work out this week. Travis Huber, the team's closer last season, and freshman Paul Schaak are expected to start two of the four games. Michael Renner and Tyler Vavra are the other two likely starters. "Travis came to us and said he'd really like to try and start some games, which was something we were thinking about as a coaching staff for a while," Walker said. "Paul is someone we think can be really good for us, but he's only thrown a handful of innings." The onus will fall on a lineup that's hitting .302 through the nonconference season and showing early signs of life compared to previous seasons. The rest of the Scenic West schedule begins Friday as well, when Colorado Northwestern visits Western Nevada and No. 17 Southern Nevada trips to No. 11 Salt Lake.

CSI softball takes on white-hot Cardinals

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

When it comes to softball, North Idaho College is Rival No. 1A for the College of Southern Idaho. When the two teams square off this weekend, the Cardinals will also act as the hottest team in the Scenic West Athletic Conference. No. 15 CSI, winners of four in a row, will take on North Idaho, successful in its last 12, for a crucial four-game set Friday and Saturday in Moses Lake, Wash. The series was moved earlier in the week due to recent poor weather in Coeur d'Alene. Eleven of those wins have come in succession against three of the worst teams in the conference — Western Nevada, Snow and Colorado Northwestern — but CSI isn't using that as a reason to downplay North Idaho's recent success. "They're playing a lot better. They picked up the last game against Southern Nevada for a split and they've gone on a run since then," said CSI coach Nick Baumert. "It'll be interesting to see how we fare against them. ... Our goal is the same: to stay ahead of North Idaho and keep pace with Salt Lake." CSI (18-10, 12-3 SWAC) has a one-game lead, and four games in hand, over North Idaho (18-10, 13-6) for second place in the SWAC standings, as both try to chase down league-leader Salt Lake (22-6, 14-2). The third-ranked Bruins host Snow this weekend. Things are clearing up on the Golden Eagle injury front just in time for the (out-of-state) in-state showdown. Baumert said pitcher Jessi Duncan is close to 100 percent after taking a line drive off her leg in the Salt Lake series. She pitched one of the three games last week at Snow. Relief pitcher and starting shortstop Kelsey Bryant (back) is also close to 100 percent, Baumert said. This weekend's other SWAC series has Colorado Northwestern at Southern Nevada. Western Nevada is idle. CSI will take the bye next weekend and return home to face Western Nevada in two weeks.

Spurs the first to reach 50 wins

CLEVELAND — George Hill tied a season high with 22 points, and the San Antonio Spurs beat the Cavaliers 109-99 on Wednesday night to become the first NBA team to reach 50 wins.

Tim Duncan scored 16 points and DeJuan Blair had 14 points and 10 rebounds for the Spurs, who bounced back from a 109-93 loss to Memphis on Tuesday. San Antonio, playing its second game since point guard Tony Parker with a calf injury, also got 14 points from Gary Neal and 13 each from All-Star Manu Ginobili and Matt Bonner.

TIMBERWOLVES 116, PISTONS 105
AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Kevin Love had 20 points and 20 rebounds, and Anthony Randolph was among three reserves in double figures scoring for the Timberwolves.

Lazar Hayward scored a career-high 16 points and Anthony Tolliver added 13 for Minnesota, which has won three of its last five road games after a 2-23 start away from home..

HAWKS 83, BULLS 80
ATLANTA — Al Horford matched his career high with 31 points, including a jam with 29 seconds remaining to give the Hawks their first lead of the game.

The Bulls scored the first 14 points of the game, took a 19-point lead in the second quarter and kept the lead until the final minute.

WARRIORS 106, WIZARDS 102
WASHINGTON — Stephen Curry scored 29 points as the Warriors snapped a four-game losing streak and improved to 1-2 on their season-high seven-game road trip.

Playing without coach Flip Saunders, Washington trimmed a 20-point deficit to 103-102 with 6.3 seconds left on Nick Young's deep 3-pointer. Curry then hit three free throws to seal it.

CELTICS 115, SUNS 103
BOSTON — Kevin Garnett scored 28 points with 11 rebounds, Paul Pierce had 16 and 13 and Rajon Rondo scored 16 with 15 assists to lead the Celtics.

The Celtics led by 29 in the second half before Phoenix scored the last nine points in the third quarter and the first nine of the fourth. But the Suns never got closer than eight.

KNICKS 107, HORNETS 88
NEW YORK — Amare Stoudemire scored 24 points, Carmelo Anthony added 22 and the Knicks rolled to their sixth straight win over the Hornets.

Toney Douglas also scored 24 points in place of an injured Chauncey Billups, outplaying slumping Hornets All-Star Chris Paul in the point guard matchup. Shawne Williams finished with 16 points off the bench, 11 in the third quarter when the Knicks broke open the game.

THUNDER 113, PACERS 89
OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Durant scored 21 points before leaving with a sprained left ankle and the Thunder snapped their first three-game losing streak of the season.

The NBA's scoring leader, Durant was helped to the locker room by two trainers after he stepped on Tyler Hansbrough's foot and got fouled on a drive to the basket with 2:44 left in the third quarter. He did not return.

NUGGETS 120, BOBCATS 80
DENVER — Wilson Chandler had 16 points to lead seven Denver players scoring in double figures in the Nuggets' most lopsided win of the season.

Nene, Chris Andersen, Ty Lawson and J.R. Smith had 14 points apiece for the Nuggets, who won for the fourth time in five games since completing the blockbuster trade that sent Carmelo Anthony to the New York Knicks. The 40-point margin of victory surpassed Denver's previous high this season, a 34-point win against on Phoenix on Jan. 11.

McDonald's 26 points lift UNM over No. 3 BYU

PROVO, Utah — Phillip McDonald scored 26 points to lead New Mexico to an 82-64 upset of No. 3 BYU on Wednesday night just two days after the Cougars dismissed leading rebounder Brandon Davies for a violation of the school's honor code.

The loss left the Cougars (27-3, 13-2 Mountain West) reeling just as they had vaulted into the top five nationally and sought a coveted No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament.

That looks like a long shot now even though the Cougars still have national player of the year candidate Jimmer Fredette.

Fredette had 33 points but it came on 10-of-26 shooting including 1 of 9 from 3-point range in a game that saw BYU try to find the right combination on the court without Davies.

BYU started 6-foot-10 junior James Anderson in Davies' place but coach Dave Rose quickly went to Plan B and inserted Kyle Collinsworth.

NO. 2 KANSAS 64, NO. 24 TEXAS A&M
LAWRENCE, Kan. — Marcus and Markieff Morris both scored 13 points and No. 2 Kansas wrapped up at least a share of its seventh straight Big 12 regular-season championship with a 64-51 victory over No. 24 Texas A&M on Wednesday night. Kansas (28-2, 13-2) holds a one-game lead over No. 8 Texas with one game left.

NO. 4 PITTSBURGH 66, SOUTH FLORIDA 50
TAMPA, Fla. — Nasir Robinson scored 18 points and Ashton Gibbs added 16

as Pittsburgh overcame a slow start to clinch at least a share of the Big East regular-season championship.

NO. 4 DUKE 70, CLEMSON 59
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Nolan Smith scored 21 points and Kyle Singler had 18 in their final game at Cameron Indoor Stadium. Seth Curry also had 18 points for the Blue Devils (27-3, 13-2 Atlantic Coast Conference).

NO. 11 LOUISVILLE 87, PROVIDENCE 60
LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Preston Knowles had 20 points, 10 rebounds and five assists in his final home game to lead Louisville.

Kyle Kuric had 25 points and Chris Smith added 12 for Louisville (23-7, 12-5), which clinched one of the top four spots in next week's Big East tournament and a double-bye into the quarterfinals.

NO. 13 NORTH CAROLINA 72, FLORIDA ST. 70
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Freshman Harrison Barnes' 3-pointer from the top of the key with 3 seconds to play gave North Carolina the win. John Henson had 19 points and 12 rebounds and Barnes added 18 points for the Tar Heels (23-6, 13-2 Atlantic Coast Conference), who won their sixth straight game overall and their fifth in a row on Florida State's court.

WEST VIRGINIA 65, NO. 16 CONNECTICUT 56
MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Kevin Jones scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half and West Virginia used a late run to beat Connecticut.

Jones had 10 rebounds for his second straight double-double. Joe Mazzulla led the Mountaineers (19-10, 10-7 Big East) with 18 points, three after halftime.

NO. 23 XAVIER 68, CHARLOTTE 48
CINCINNATI — Senior guard Dante Jackson scored 18 points and Xavier tied a league record by clinching at least a share of its fifth straight Atlantic 10 regular-season title.

REGIONAL
BOISE STATE 95, CAL STATE-BAKERSFIELD 59
BOISE, Idaho — Paul Noonan scored 20 points and Robert Arnold added 19 to lead Boise State over Cal State-Bakersfield 95-59 on Wednesday night.

Boise State (18-11) won its sixth straight game to match its longest win streak of the season. The 36-point margin of victory was the largest of the season for the Broncos.

MONTANA STATE 84, IDAHO STATE 68
BOZEMAN, Mont. — Seniors Danny Piepoli, Erik Rush and Bobby Howard combined for 62 points in their final home game as Montana State secured the fifth seed in the Big Sky Conference with an 84-68 rout of Idaho State on Wednesday night.

Serena Williams treated for blood clot in her lungs

Serena Williams underwent emergency treatment Monday, days after doctors discovered a blood clot in her lungs, People magazine reported. The 29-year-old Williams is being treated at a Los Angeles hospital.

sult of treatment for “a more critical situation,” the pulmonary embolism.

The 29-year-old Williams was treated at a Los Angeles hospital then returned to her home in the city.

“Thankfully everything was caught in time,” her agents said in a statement. “With continued doctor visits to monitor her situation, she is recuperating at home under strict medical supervision.”

Williams' mother, Oracene Price, tweeted: “Thank you for your concern. She is fine.”

The tennis star attended Sunday night's Elton John AIDS Foundation Academy Awards Viewing Party. On Tuesday night, Williams posted on her Twitter account, “Tough day.” A few minutes later, she retweeted Kim Kardashian.

“We can't comment, and even more so we're certainly still involved in our dialogue, and so there is no comment,” Jones said.

Indianapolis Colts owner Jimmy Irsay said the owners welcomed the opportunity to be updated on negotiations, but there was little reason for them to remain in Washington as the deadline approaches.

“We had the chance to ask questions, but we didn't break with a lockout vote or anything like that,” Irsay said.

Asked what he expected to happen heading toward the CBA's expiration, he added: “I never have expectations, except to have A, B, C, D and E, and to always plan for F. It changes, a chessboard that moves around and things happen at unusual hours.”

Because mediator George Cohen told both sides to stay silent publicly about the current talks, no one has revealed any specifics about what progress might have been made.

The biggest sticking point all along has been how to divide the league's revenues, including what cut team owners should get up front to help cover certain costs, such as stadium construction. Under the old deal, owners got $1 billion off the top. They entered these negotiations seeking to double that.

Among the other significant topics: a rookie wage scale; the owners' push to expand the regular season from 16 games to 18 while reducing the preseason by two games; and benefits for retired players.

seeds, even if they are a combined 0-6 against them this season.

“We've had the confidence to beat them before, I think we were just so quick to settle,” said CSI sophomore guard Felicity Jones. “If we have a two-point lead, we're just settling for a two-point lead. We really just need to keep building.”

“We have the confidence and we believe that we can beat them. Once we have them where we want them, we have to keep going and going. We can't settle for a five-point win, we've just got to keep scoring and running and doing the things that we do.”

To get a shot at NIC in Friday's semifinals, CSI (22-8) first has to beat sixth-seeded Colorado Northwestern at noon today. The Golden Eagles are 3-0 against the Spartans (7-23) this season, winning by an average of 34 points, including a 92-44 beat-down last Saturday. CNCC coach Antowin Edwards received two technical fouls and was ejected from that game, meaning he won't be able to coach his team against CSI today.

Jones said the key to advancing today and Friday is avoiding “mental lapses” on both ends of the floor. Rogers agreed.

“Our biggest weakness this year has been stretches in games where we've either lost focus offensively and turned the ball over in stretches or defensively let teams go on these 12-2 runs or whatever they are,” said Rogers.

While today's CSI-CNCC winner draws North Idaho at noon on Friday, today's 5:30 p.m. quarterfinal features fourth-seeded Snow College (16-12) against fifth-seeded Eastern Utah (9-19) with the winner facing Salt Lake at 5:30 p.m. Friday.

SLCC boasts the league's leading scorer in forward Haley Holmstead (24.2 ppg) and top rebounder in center Jami Mokofisi (10.5 rpg), while NIC has sharpshooter forward Kama Griffiths (16.4 ppg) and versatile post Tugce Canitez (15.2 ppg, 9.5 rpg), who Rogers called “the best big kid in the country.”

If CSI gets a chance at either squad, it will need a special effort to come away victorious. But Rogers believes his team is up to the task. With seven players averaging between 10.3 and 6.9 points a game and all 13 Golden Eagles averaging more than 10 minutes per game, CSI's balance and depth could play a role over the three-day tourney.

“I feel as good now as I did early in the year,” he said. “What we have to do is play extremely well.”

Note: The NJCAA did not release a final regular-season women's poll on Wednesday. Mark Krug, the NJCAA's director of sports information and media relations, said voters chose not to conduct the poll this week.

Vick signs 1-year deal with the Philadelphia Eagles

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Vick has signed a one-year contract with the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Pro Bowl quarterback was designated as the team's franchise player Feb. 15. He signed the franchise tender Wednesday.

Under rules of the collective bargaining agreement that expires at midnight Thursday, a team must pay a franchise player the average of the top five salaries at his position. Vick would make an estimated $20 million under this tag.

Vick led the Eagles to a 10-6 record and the NFC East title after replacing an injured Kevin Kolb in Week 1. Despite missing three games with an injury, Vick had his best season. He set career highs in yards passing (3,018), touchdowns passing (21), touchdowns rushing (9), completion percentage (62.6) and passer rating (100.2).

Vick was voted The Associated Press Comeback Player of the Year after missing two seasons while serving a federal prison sentence for dog fighting and playing sparingly in 2009.

SEARCH WARRANT ISSUED IN UNC AGENT-RELATED PROBE

RALEIGH, N.C. — Investigators have issued a search warrant for the financial records of NFL agent Gary Wichard as they continue looking into whether North Carolina's sports agent laws have been broken.

The search warrant was issued Tuesday to Bank of America for documents connected to Wichard and his California-based firm, Pro Tect Management LLC, since January 2009.

Investigators say that Pro Tect paid $1,000 to reimburse a high school assistant coach, who had paid for former Tar Heels defensive lineman Marvin Austin's flights to and from California in March 2009, according to a probable cause affidavit filed with the search warrant.

In addition, Pro Tect paid $915.40 to a travel agency to cover changes to Austin's flight itinerary, according to the affidavit.

The affidavit also alleges Wichard failed to register with the state as a sports agent despite having “several phone conversations” with Austin starting in January 2009.

North Carolina Secretary of State Elaine Marshall's office launched an investigation after the NCAA began looking into possible agent-related benefits in North Carolina's football program.

“It's fair to say this is a definitely a step forward in the investigation,” Marshall spokesman George Jeter said Wednesday.

The NFL Players Association suspended Wichard in December for nine months for his role in the UNC probe. Howard Silber, an attorney for Wichard, didn't immediately return a call and e-mail seeking comment on the search warrant.

DEAR ABBY: Every year for the last six years, I have hosted a family gathering at my home. Each and every year, my cousin's wife "Jodie" does everything possible to ensure that we all know she's upset about something. She'll sit on my couch as far removed from the family as possible, grumbling under her breath to her husband. Jodie never says more than four words to me (the hostess) the entire time — none of which are "thank you" — then she feigns food poisoning! (No one else gets sick.)

This has been going on longer than the six years I have hosted this event. My question is, would it be tactless of me to ask my cousin to leave his wife home next year? I am not the only family member who is disgusted with Jodie's behavior. I think we'd all have a better time if she wasn't there. Would that be wrong of me?

— SICK OF CODDLING HER IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR SICK: For a person to repeatedly act the way you have described is not normal behavior. Your cousin's wife may suffer from some significant emotional problems. Is no one in your family close enough to your cousin to express concern about it?

While it would, indeed, be tactless to tell him to leave his wife home instead of bringing her to a family gathering, it might be less so to mention gently that you have noticed she doesn't enjoy herself when she visits — and that her attendance isn't compulsory. Then listen to what he has to say because it may be enlightening.

DEAR ABBY: My sister "Blanche" has always depended on men to support her. She was married briefly, and after her divorce started going from one man to another. I can't count how many relationships she has been in. Her children are grown, but when they were young they had to endure their mother's lifestyle.

Blanche has just moved in with another man. She's 45, and has no job or money, but has gotten good at selling her pity story. Unfortunately, her new boyfriend, "Stanley," is an old friend of mine. Although we haven't been in contact for years, I'm concerned about his dating my sister. He's going through some hard times due to the loss of a family member. Blanche homed in on this and moved in with him to "help him grieve."

Abby, I know the damage my sister can cause. It never turns out pretty. She uses people to get what she wants, then if it turns sour, she becomes a stalker. She has refused my recommendations for counseling. I feel obligated to let Stanley's family know about Blanche's history. She's trying to prevent me from contacting him because she doesn't want her past revealed. What do you suggest?

— FEARFUL SIS IN MISSOURI

DEAR FEARFUL SIS: I strongly recommend that rather than telling Stanley's family your sister's history, you tell Stanley directly. To do otherwise would be interpreted as an underhanded attempt to break up his romance, would not be appreciated, and could only bring them closer.

DEAR ABBY: Help! If one spouse snores, the other can't sleep. Please print some solutions to this problem that have worked for your readers. We sleep in separate beds almost every night.

— SEEKING SLUMBER IN SANTA BARBARA

DEAR SEEKING SLUMBER: When one spouse snores so loudly that it keeps the other awake, it could be a symptom of a serious medical problem. While my readers may be kind enough to offer home remedies, my advice is that the snorer should consult his or her physician to find out what's causing it.

IF MARCH 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Take advantage of helpful opportunities in April when major progress in the material world can be achieved. You are more ambitious than usual, but once you win the new job, new contract or make an investment, you must work extra hard from May through August to maintain your momentum. Don't volunteer for new obligations this summer, as you will have enough to handle. In January, you may receive the rewards you deserve, as significant doors may open wide and invite you in — and set you off in a new direction. You would be wise to accept offers that come your way, as permanent improvements will be the end result.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do something different. Plan on getting away from the desk; you may shine in the spotlight of group activities. Fresh insights and new faces can help to break you out of a tiresome rut.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Respect the freedom of others and they will respect yours. A loved one might rave about someone or something, producing pangs jealousy. A new person you meet might think outside the box.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Ride the range. Fences might make good neighbors, but you don't want to fence in a romantic partner under these stars. The spark of friendship that is ignited today is not going to cause a romantic forest fire.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Girls just wanna have fun; that goes for guys, too. Gender-neutral fun is entirely possible under these celestial conditions, so don't fret if a loved one talks to someone else.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unexpected meetings might alter the course of your life. New contacts might leave your realm as fast as they arrive, but will at least offer some exciting insights. Make the most of your ability to build friendships.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Variety is the spice of life, so don't stick to the humdrum routines today. Indulge in the latest fad or head off to enjoy a popular entertainment such as a blockbuster movie showing at a theater near you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It is time to turn over a new leaf and face your formless fears. New friends might have interesting ideas, and it is in your best interest to experiment with them. Refuse to fall prey to feelings of inadequacy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be clear as a bell. You can think for yourself and still maintain a wholesome relationship. You thrive in a group and enjoy friendships with a variety of people. Don't let a loved one fume with jealousy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Extend a hand in friendship and it will be grasped warmly. You are at your best in a crowd with an admiring audience that appreciates your talents. Avoid making promises you cannot keep.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Spend not, want not. You are at your best with a congenial companion who shares your interest in New Age ideas or high tech games. Your unique perspective encourages others in the right direction.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay footloose and fancy-free. You are a live wire who can spread enthusiasm wherever you go. You can't ask for sympathy without having your confidence undermined, so show how strong you are.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Break free of constraints without breaking the bank. You don't have to buy into the latest craze or own the most up-to-date gadget. You will do your best by being independent; not dictated to by social pressures.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Hypocrite reader — my double — my brother!”
— Charles Baudelaire

Stuart and Gerald Tredinnick are one of two sets of twin brothers who have represented Great Britain successfully. Among other things they were part of the team that won the world junior championships 20 years ago.

Here is Gerald at work in five diamonds. Knowing that they had at most one spade trick to take on defense, West started off by leading the spade queen to try to retain the lead. Then, worried that declarer might be able to set up some hearts, West switched to the club jack, which ran around to declarer's king.

Declarer now played the heart ace and king, cashed the diamond ace, and played a diamond to dummy's king. He then ruffed a heart, ruffed a spade, ruffed a heart, and played a low club. When West played the 10, Gerald ducked. With nothing left but spades, West had to give declarer a ruff and discard. South ruffed in dummy, discarding one club from his hand, and then discarded his last club loser on dummy's fifth heart.

Nicely played, but declarer would have needed to see through the backs of the cards if West had continued with a second spade at trick two. At trick three, declarer must play a club from dummy himself. Now come the heart ace and king, followed by a finesse against the diamond jack!

This enables him to ruff a heart, cross to the diamond king, and ruff another heart before playing a low club to reach the same position as before.

ANSWER: It is a part of normal modern bidding style for responder to be able to find out more about opener's hand here with a forcing bid of two diamonds — known as “New Minor.” This acts like Stayman, asking opener to show three-card support, or four cards in the unbid major. If you are playing this convention, two hearts by you is natural and weak, denying invitational values, and therefore ideal.
