Schools celebrate funding approval

Questions linger for Cassia Co. after $41.5M proposal fails

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Three Magic Valley public school districts are thanking voters for their support in passing desired supplemental levies.

While school districts in Gooding, Jerome and Twin Falls celebrated the passage of locally approved funding, Cassia County school officials were left wondering how to continue after voters dumped proposed funding for new buildings for the third time.

Twin Falls voters approved $7.5 million in new funding for the Twin Falls School District. Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he would have liked to see more voters, but said he was thankful for the support of those who participated.

“We are pausing today to thank our community members,” Dobbs said. “We are grateful they did this in a time when our economy is weak. This is just one piece of the puzzle, and now we know we can count on our supplemental levy funding, because we know we will be cut at the state level.”

Cassia County School District’s proposal for $41.5 million to build three new schools and update other facilities failed for the third time since 2008. Superintendent Gaylen Smyer said he was disappointed and didn’t know if the board would pursue another vote in the near future.

“Given the circumstances, I can see where people didn’t feel like they had the confidence to commit to a bond like that,” he said.

A more secure Idaho, or fiscal caution?

Lawmakers look to widen reach of DNA; expanded collection would mean extra staffing need for ISP

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho legislators want to expand DNA’s crime-solving potential, giving state and national law enforcement agencies the full use of the forensic tool.

A bill sponsored by Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, would require the state to collect DNA samples from all convicted felons, starting July 1, 2013. The bill’s passage would end Idaho’s distinction as the only state that doesn’t collect DNA samples on all convicted felons for state and national databases used to search for matches in unsolved crimes.

The Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee approved the bill on Wednesday, sending it to the Senate floor for a vote. It will also need approval from the House, where Rep. Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry and a retired ISP trooper, is the sponsor.

“I believe the tool is worth what we would put into it.”

• The sampling would cost $418,000 each year.

• Another $748,000 would be needed for one-time expenses like office supplies, software upgrades and other equipment.

How a DNA database works

A swab of an individual’s mouth is taken, usually by staffers with the Idaho Department of Correction or probation and parole personnel, and sent to the ISP laboratory. The lab runs the DNA profile, which consists of a series of numbers that can be compared against other DNA profiles for potential matches. A sample is assigned a bar code for tracking in the database, without the felon’s personal information. If there’s a match, the bar code is run in a separate database to obtain the person’s identification. Other states can search the national FBI database, but cannot view the DNA profile itself unless there is a potential match.

Second ed reform bill passes

13 Republicans in House join Dems voting no

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho is just one signature away from tying teachers’ pay to their accomplishments.

But how to fund the $38 million plan remains uncertain.

The House passed with a 44-26 Wednesday vote a bill that puts a merit-pay plan in place starting in the 2012-13 school year. It’s the second part of Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s three-piece “Students Come First” education overhaul to pass both the House and Senate.

The existing system, which pays teachers based on their education level and years in the classroom, is “arcane” and based on a “19th-century model,” said House Education Committee Chairman Rep. Bob Nonini, R-Coeur d’Alene. “It doesn’t work,” he said. “It doesn’t recognize excellence.”

The bill would allow teachers to earn up to $8,000 in yearly bonuses tied to academic growth of students in

“With this bill, Idaho now has the most comprehensive statewide pay-for-performance plan in the country.”

Some linked arms, some wore black, and some just rescheduled.

Educators and their supporters across the Magic Valley continued their protest of education reform Tuesday, as the second of three bills to revamp Idaho’s public schools system made its way to Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s desk.

Protesters converged upon Twin Falls City Park, linking arms and waving signs at passing motorists. Downtown Buhl became another rallying grounds for protesters, and Kimberly educators participated in an early morning demonstration.

Jerome educators planned to wear black on Wednesday, and human chains were also planned in Burley, Hailley and Ketchum. But things were all quiet at Burley High School Wednesday afternoon, despite a Tuesday announcement by the Idaho Education Association that educators would “surround the school in Cassia County” with a human chain.

Bill would protect farms from nuisance suits

By Mitchell Schmidt

JEROME — Dean Dimond has no difficulty imagining how a massive feedlot could affect his livelihood. He has only to gaze across the fence line on his farm in the heart of Idaho’s dairy country to envision the dust and odors a farm big enough to handle 13,000 cows could generate.

Dimond, 38, who raises cattle, hay, grain and corn on 450 acres near Jerome, is one of a handful of residents fighting a proposal to put a confined animal feeding operation, or CAFO, next to his land.

While their case is pending in the Idaho Supreme Court, state lawmakers are considering legislation to make it more difficult for citizens to file lawsuits to stop the expansion of such feedlots or protest farming methods that create noise or stir up dust and offensive odors. Lawmakers in several other states are considering similar measures.

DNA

Currently, the state only collects DNA samples from those convicted of sexual or violent felonies.

Because of the extra funding needed for more staff and equipment, the proposal’s requirements don’t kick in during the coming fiscal year, a reflection of the state’s budget shortages.

“I believe the tool is worth what we would put into it,” said Idaho State Police Maj. Ked Wills, the son of Rich Wills.

Recently, a suspect in an unsolved burglary and sexual assault in the Treasure Valley was identified through the national database after receiving a felony conviction in another state, Ked Wills said, giving an example of its value.

To accomplish the expansion, ISP, which oversees the state’s database, would need to increase the two-person staff that processes DNA samples to four people.

The money for staffers won’t be needed until July 2012, one year before the law goes into effect. That’s so ISP will have time to train the new staffers and prepare, Ked Wills said.

Darrington said that delaying the start date is necessary, given the state’s budget situation. At the same time, he said, it’s crucial to give the tool to law enforcement.

The sampling would cost $418,000 each year, including the salaries for the two forensic scientists, annual training and equipment to collect samples.

Another $748,000 would be needed for one-time expenses like office supplies, software upgrades and other equipment.

Based on current crime statistics, ISP forensic scientists would process 5,400 samples each year after the bill, up from 1,700 yearly now.

Although it’s a valuable tool, DNA testing doesn’t yield the instant results from searchable databases that fictional television shows portray.

“Unfortunately, DNA testing is not like TV,” said Cyndi Cunningham, a forensic scientist with ISP. “We cannot generate a profile in a single day, although we very much wish we could.”

T.F. on pace to recoup half of recycling costs

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

If the city of Twin Falls’ fledgling recycling program continues on its current pace, it will recoup more than half of the program’s first-year costs.

Almost 100 fewer tons of garbage were sent to the local landfill last month compared to February 2010, saving the city more than $3,000. Another $15-per-ton rebate for recyclables netted the city more than $2,000, setting pace for more than $55,000 in savings for the 11 full months of recycling in 2011.

“As we go forward, (the savings are) something we are monitoring, something we are watching very closely, but we are very clearly excited about the response,” Assistant City Manager Travis Rothweiler said.

The City Council voted in October to eat an initial $98,000 to run the program

Heather Williams said she’s waiting on the Legislature to set the public schools budget for next fiscal year before making decisions about use of levy funding.

“We’re relieved we have a known quantity and we are thankful for our community stepping up to support our kids,” Williams said. “We had a good turnout, and I am happy that people are out and about and voting.”

Jerome Superintendent Dale Layne said about 300 more people voted than during last year’s renewal election, adding that Jerome County officials went above and beyond to make the voting process easy.

Tuesday’s elections were the first conducted under Idaho’s new consolidated election law, and voters made their ways to the same polls they visit for national and statewide elections. Twin Falls County election director Larry Haycock said the transition to the new system was fairly seamless.

their schools, for working in hard-to-fill positions, and for taking on additional leadership roles.

Wednesday’s vote means that two of Luna’s three bills await only the governor’s signature before becoming law. The first bill, which passed Tuesday, revamps teacher contract negotiations and limits the scope of collective bargaining to only salaries and benefits.

“This bill is another monumental step toward reforming our public education system,” Luna said in a statement Wednesday. “With this bill, Idaho now has the most comprehensive statewide pay-for-performance plan in the country. This legislation is all about recognizing and rewarding our great teachers for the outstanding work they do every day.”

Emma Dickinson, 6, gets a ‘human chain’ of protesters to do the wave during a Wednesday afternoon education reform protest at Twin Falls City Park. The second of three public schools reform bills headed to the governor’s desk on Wednesday.

The third bill, which stalled in the Senate Education Committee, would cut 770 teaching positions, a move intended to free up more money for technology and the pay incentives.

If that bill doesn’t pass but the merit pay is signed into law, legislators would still have to fund the incentives instead of raising customer rates. The money came from reserves that officials had said were over-accumulated. Several councilmen had said at the October vote to create the program that they think it will grow into its costs.

While city officials are pleased with the year-to-year difference in recycling and tons of garbage diverted, the numbers before the city started any sort of recycling program are even more dramatic. More than 200 additional tons of garbage went to the landfill in 2006, city Utility Services Supervisor Sherry Jeff said.

Based on the 200 fewer tons of garbage, the city is on its way to net savings of more than $120,000, Rothweiler said.

Jeff said she didn’t know what to expect from the new recycling program but is happy with the results so far.

“I think that’s great,” she said. “We’re starting to make a difference, I think.”

Thirteen Republicans joined all House Democrats in voting against the bill, including Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, and Rep. Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry.

“I have no crystal ball,” Bell, co-chairwoman of the Legislature’s budgeting committee, said in an interview afterward. “... I budget now 18 months out and I cannot see the strength that will be there in the economy at that point.”

Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, said the state has outstanding teachers, but said the bill is not a reliable measure of teacher effectiveness.

She encouraged lawmakers to spend more time on an improved plan.

“We can do better,” she said.

The bodies of two eastern Idaho residents were found Wednesday in the wreckage of an airplane that crashed in southern Twin Falls County.

Danny Summers, 55, of Sugar City, and Jodi Wyatt, 47, of Rexburg, were found dead Wednesday afternoon by Twin Falls County Search and Rescue members. Their bodies have not yet been positively identified, but they were believed to be the aircraft's occupants.

Summers' Douglas Aircraft A-1 Skyraider took off from Wendover, Utah, at approximately 4 p.m. Tuesday. It was reported missing about two hours later, when it failed to arrive in Idaho Falls.

It's unclear when the aircraft went down or how it ended up more than 180 miles off course.

Civil Air Patrol pilots located the aircraft in the Shoshone Basin about one mile north of the Idaho/Nevada border shortly before noon Wednesday, and Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies reached the remote crash site by ground in the afternoon.

The search centered on a 50-square-mile area approximately 18 miles east of Jackpot, Nev. Cassia County searchers also participated.

Brad DeBow, manager of the Legacy Flight Museum in Rexburg, knew Summers for several years. He said the farmer flew to Utah "periodically" for vacation.

DeBow said Summers was a skilled vintage aircraft pilot.

"He's got a lot of experience with it," DeBow said. "He'd been flying them for years and years."

The Skyraider Summers was flying at the time of the crash was a National Guard plane used in radar operations during the Cold War, DeBow said.

The cause of the crash remains unknown, and will be the subject of a Federal Aviation Administration investigation.

Three T.F. school board seats to open

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Three Twin Falls School District board seats will be open for election on May 17.

Trustees Lori Ward, Kenney Young and Richard Crowley currently represent zones 2, 4 and 5, respectively, and have not yet declared their intent to run for reelection. District representation is based on five population-based zones, and board members serve four-year terms.

At Monday's meeting, the board voted to contract Boise-based civil engineering and land surveying firm Quadrant Consulting Inc. to help make sure board zones reflect new numbers released in the 2010 Census, expected today.

In other business, Bridge Academy Principal Jim Brown presented his request to require students at the alternative middle school to wear uniforms. Brown said a recent survey of parents of the school's students showed 73 percent supported the change, but cited associated costs and student individuality as two main concerns.

The new dress code would require students to wear polo shirts tucked into blue denim pants, skirts or shorts worn with a belt.

"It would eliminate a lot of problems and would send a strong message that they are proud to be in this school," Brown said. "These kids need more structure and stricter parameters so they can be more successful."

Board members asked for more discussion on costs and collaboration with Magic Valley High School, TFSD's alternative high

WANT TO RUN FOR TRUSTEE?

What those hoping to run for a Twin Falls School District trustee seat need to know:

- The election is on May 17
- Candidates must live within the trustee zone they would represent (Zone 2 is southwest Twin Falls; Zone 4, northeast; Zone 5, southeast)
- Contact Michelle Lucas, 733-6900, to request a petition of candidacy and declaration of candidacy

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said it isn't unreasonable to ask students to dress for success, adding that requiring uniforms doesn't

Trial set for man accused of grand theft

Times-News

A May trial is set for James J. Johnson, accused of stealing a 2006 Nissan pickup from a Twin Falls residence in September.

Johnson, 30, of Twin Falls, was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Monday, where he pleaded not guilty to felony grand theft, along with additional charges added upon his arrest in January: domestic violence, burglary and three counts of operating a vehicle without the owner's consent.

According to online court records, Johnson has prior convictions for misdemeanor battery — four from 2008 and one from 2007 — and misdemeanor driving under the influence.

Judge Randy Stoker will preside over the trial, slated to begin May 4.

Campuses should be about learning, not about fear

Nineteen months ago, after a 19-8 football loss to Boise State in Bronco Stadium, University of Oregon running back LaGarrette Blount punched BSU linebacker Byron Hout and knocked him to the ground. And he did so on national television. The incident took place in a section of the stadium filled with Bronco fans, but to make things worse BSU replayed the punch several times on a giant screen in the stadium’s north end. As the crowd of 34,127 jeered, Blount — escorted off the field by an Oregon assistant coach — got into another confrontation with Bronco supporters.

By any standards, things got ugly. Think how much worse they might have been had state Rep. Erik Simpson, R-Idaho Falls, had his way.

Simpson wants to prevent Idaho college and universities from banning guns on campus, including at football and basketball games. The House State Affairs Committee is scheduled to take action on his bill today.

Our view:
Why, exactly, do students on Idaho colleges campuses need to be packing heat?

Simpson’s GOP House colleagues, Carlos Bilbao of Emmett, thinks it’s a lousy idea. “I attend all the home basketball and football games,” Bilbao said Wednesday at a hearing on the bill. “There has always been some kind of an altercation. The Boise Police have done an excellent job. ... I’m not going to vote for your bill for this reason: I don’t want to sit next to someone that’s carrying a gun. These altercations, when they do occur, get into fisticuffs, and it does take two policemen to spread them. And if one guy has a gun, I can assure you that they’ll probably pull the gun out. ... I can’t see that, unless you put sideboards on — no guns at athletic games.”

We’re amazed that Simpson learned so little from the massacres at the University of Texas at Austin, Seton Hall University, Northern Illinois University and Virginia Tech over the past four years.

“My concern is the safety of our campus, so that’s the way I look at this issue,” John Uda, executive director of security at Boise State and a former FBI agent. “I could not find the compelling information that would lead me to be for this bill. During the past 15 years, people have been 60 times less likely to be murdered on a college campus than in society. ... The odds are one in a million.”

Uda says the crime rate on his campus is low. “Will adding guns to this equation lower crime rates even more?” he asked. He noted that some students have mental health issues, or use drugs or alcohol. “Students undergo a tremendous amount of personal development during their college years. ... Adding a weapon to a university environment will serve as an accelerant for conflict, not a deterrent.”

For the most part, folks who study and work on college campuses do so without fear. Students and faculty can speak their minds, with no worse consequences than disagreement.

And the fans of college sports teams arrive at games armed with nothing more sinister than their enthusiasm.

If Simpson’s bill passes the Legislature, all that could change.

Take the College of Southern Idaho, whose security officers are unarmed. If Simpson’s legislation is approved CSI would be pretty much obliged to give them weapons.

In what way, we wonder, does enhance that public safety on campus? And how does that protect Second Amendment rights.

At some point, common sense has to moderate the absolutest view of the right of bear arms. Firearms should not be welcome in bars, churches or schools.

Boise Police Department Lt. Tony Plott opposes HB 222. He says he’s a lifetime NRA member, the father of three college-age daughters, and a second-generation law enforcement officer. “Conduct that most adults feel is risky, young adults feel is pretty fun,” he told the committee. “As a campus police agency, we feel strongly that adding weapons to this mix will mean our college students are less safe.”

We couldn’t agree more.

Why GOP is cautious about 2012 prospects

President Obama’s approval rating is above water, but only barely. He’s two or three points below 50 percent in the Real Clear Politics average, with those disapproving a couple of points behind — hardly an impressive reading, but after the turmoil of the last two years you wouldn’t have thought it possible.

E. Thomas McClanahan

This president still exerts an undeniable tug on the public. But dig a bit deeper and the picture, along with Obama’s chances for reelection, looks much more complicated.

Earlier this month, a Gallup poll found that only 27 percent approved of Obama’s handling of the deficit.

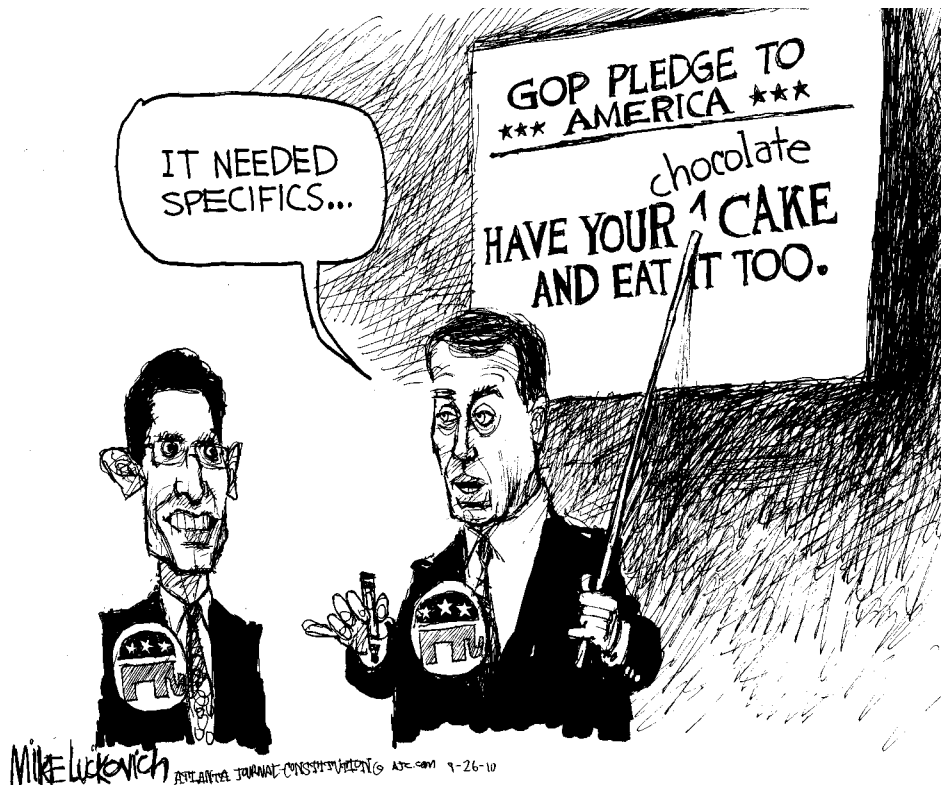

More than 60 percent think the country’s on the wrong track.

Columnist Sean Trende, a number-cruncher at Real Clear Politics, reminds us that a president’s approval rating can be a poor predictor for how well he’ll do on Election Day.

In 1956, President Eisenhower’s popularity was a full 17 points higher than his vote share — something that undoubtedly causes concern among Obama’s campaign strategists.

Here’s another: People otherwise inclined to support the president have noticed that in certain respects, he’s the Nowhere Man.

Rush Marcus of The Washington Post wrote that we’re living through the “Where’s Waldo Presidency.” Obama, she wrote, can be “strangely passive” and “unwilling, reluctant or late to weigh in on the issue of the moment.”

” .... many Republicans surveying their party’s prospects for 2012 remain ... downright glum.”

He gave only scanty marching orders to Congress on health care. With his recent budget, he abdicated on the deficit and entitlement reform. He all but ignored the recommendations of his own deficit reduction commission.

More recently, he has had little to say about the uprising in Libya and what he said, he said late. Americans have watched as European countries have taken the lead in the scramble to devise effective options to aid the rebels.

The Marcus column could well be a harbinger — a notice to others in the media that it’s now acceptable to begin unloading their own frustrations with this president.

Despite all this, many Republicans surveying their party’s prospects for 2012 remain cautious or downright glum.

Incumbent presidents are notoriously tough to unseat. Obama will draw from a very deep campaign war chest. He’ll be campaigning with the full trappings of his office, which comes with a large retinue and a big impressive airplane.

“Republicans underestimate President Obama at their own peril,” former Bush adviser Karl Rove told Politico. Still, Rove rated Obama only a “slight favorite.”

What has Republicans most worried is the lack of a clear champion. It’s very early, but the contenders most often mentioned have obvious liabilities.

Mitt Romney was beaten last time out by John McCain, a deeply flawed candidate, and as governor, implemented an Obamacare precursor — the disastrous Massachusetts health plan.

Mike Huckabee doesn’t strike me as someone likely to unseat the incumbent, and whatever you think about Sarah Palin, she has high negatives and remains divisive.

The candidates you’d like to see in the race aren’t running, at least not yet: Gov. Chris Christie of New Jersey, former Florida governor Jeb Bush and Gov. Mitch Daniels of Indiana.

In short, this is a worrisome picture for Republicans, and it would be a shame if heavy hitters like Christie or Daniels sit this one out.

Obama may be formidable, but he’s not unbeatable. In two years, unemployment will probably remain high, Obama will still be playing defense on health care and taxes and more voters are likely to be fed up with the Where’s Waldo Presidency.

Memo to candidates still playing coy: 1. Victory is a real possibility. 2. Carpe diem.

Education numbers don’t add up

I really enjoyed Monday’s (March 1) editorial but my question is: How many classes are those 2,930 students taking? $12.8 mil for 2,930 students works out to just over $4,500 per student, which I understand is slightly more than our current schools get to teach a student for a whole year.

First, I think that is an important point to single out. Second, my understanding is most virtual academy students are taking one to two classes at a time which would mean if all those students were taking two classes each semester that would mean the virtual academy is receiving more than $4,500 per student to teach four classes per year. Our traditional schools are teaching at least 10 classes per year per student for slightly less money.

Another way to look at it is if the same money was spent on traditional classrooms, my math works out to more than $130k for 98 classes of 30 students, if that money was spent on traditional classrooms. Now that is a lot of money for a 30-student classroom that I’m sure no school would turn down.

I would challenge the Times-News staff to compare apples to apples and really find out how many classes were taught to those 2,930 students for $12.8 million. To be honest I can’t believe more people are not looking at what an atrocious misuse of our tax dollars that appears to be.

A plea for continued mental health funding

Gov. Otter:

The Community Support Center in Twin Falls is an innovative and empowering program for chronically mentally ill adults. These mentally ill club members own and operate a thrift store in the front area of this facility. They are active in attending community events, such as city council meetings. They send out emails and newsletters to educate the public about mental illnesses. They organize fundraisers to help pay for their food, other services and club activities. During group meetings, we brainstorm ways to improve through education and ways to improve their community. I am impressed with their abilities in spite of adversities related to their mental health.

The club members are so important to the Twin Falls community. Their potential is barely being tapped into, as I see it. If funding is cut, they will lose current programs, and I feel that their efforts will be stifled.

CSC in Twin Falls and in Boise are necessary programs for the mentally ill in order for them to have a place where they can go where they feel safe and respected while getting their basic needs met. CSC staff has continued to provide transportation from the Burley and Twin Falls areas without state reimbursement. Clients are in attendance three hours a day for four days a week at no charge. This is followed by a hot lunch. For some, this is the only hot meal they will eat each day. CSC also provides laundry facilities. Additionally, Ronda Leonard, mental health technician, actively works with businesses to obtain food donations for club members and the community at large in the form of food boxes.

Please consider this population and their needs.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... regulation that's not

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Idaho could use a bill that regulates texting while driving. The last thing it needs is a bill that badly regulates (some) texting while driving.

Unfortunately, a 2011 model of texting legislation falls into that the mushy latter category.

Here's the business end of House Bill 141, sponsored by Rep. Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian: "No person operating a motor vehicle shall use a hand-held electronic device that causes such person to be distracted or otherwise fail to exercise due care."

The bill is on hold for a possible rewrite. Let's just say there's ample room for improvement.

Consider the message Hagedorn's bill would send to young drivers — which, ostensibly, is one of the main purposes of passing a texting law.

First, it says that texting is OK as long as the driver manages to "exercise due care." Implying, of course, that someone actually possesses the multitasking skills to pull this off.

Second, it says the Legislature isn't serious about passing a texting law. If lawmakers really want to address the documented link between texting and road risks, they'll find language that provides some deterrent to drivers and some direction to law enforcement.

This legislation does neither. If, indeed, this turns out to be the best the Legislature can muster, you can expect to see more cities follow Twin Falls and Hagedorn's hometown of Meridian, by passing local texting ordinances.

Texting while driving has proven to be a sticky issue. Some lawmakers want a standalone ban, or language worked into attentive-driving law. Some lawmakers think the inattentive driving ban is sufficient. Consequently, this proved to be the last issue considered — and tabled — by the 2010 Legislature.

Lawmakers have had 11 months to figure out a way to get this right. And for 2011, the clock is ticking.

... the Legislature stinks

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Cattle droppings may get more protection from the Idaho Legislature this year than education funding.

Why? Because Boise knows best.

The misnamed expansion of Idaho's Right to Farm law would gut the ability of county elected officials to control siting and expansion of feedlots and other industrial farms that produce noxious odors and sometimes pollute groundwater.

The bill would also make it so onerous for opponents to challenge industrial farming in court that few in their right minds would attempt to do so.

The bill got out of committee and will be taken up soon by the full House.

Anyone who drives to Twin Falls along state Highway 75 or has had the pleasure of visiting small communities along the Snake River knows that the stench that emanates from industrial farming operations brings tears to the eyes.

It's a stench that has manifested itself in the last decade as industrial agriculture displaced small family farms, fouled the air, threatened the purity of groundwater and dropped values of nearby properties.

The legislators who brought this bill, including House Speaker Lawrence Denney, want to override the power of elected officials in communities whose residents breathe the same air and drink the same water into which the industrial operators release cattle and crop wastes.

What's next? A "Right to Bury Nuclear Waste Anywhere" bill?

While legislators are so solicitous of cattle, kids aren't getting the same respect.

With a vote of 16-3, the Idaho Revenue and Taxation Committee weighed in against trusting elected school board officials in Blaine and three other counties to manage school funding.

The committee voted to overturn a law that allows the counties to maintain a permanent school tax override levy, which, in the Blaine County School District, accounts for 60 percent, or $29.5 million, of the operating budget.

The new law would require that the levy go to the voters once every two years, destructively destabilizing programs and the district's ability to attract and retain good teachers.

The committee rejected three hours of testimony opposing the bill and agreed with an Idaho Farm Bureau representative who said voter control was more important than certainty in school funding.

If both the agriculture and education bills pass, Idaho could become known for protecting industrial-sized piles of polluting cow manure while endangering good education. The state hates federal intrusions on its power, but thinks nothing of handcuffing cities, counties and schools.

It just stinks.

... sell the governor's mansion

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

In 2004, Idaho icon and French fry mogul J.R. Simplot donated his hilltop mansion in north Boise to the state of Idaho to use as its official governor's residence.

It was a generous gift. But sometimes, even the most well-intentioned gifts get returned. It's time for the state to do just that with the governor's mansion.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter doesn't even live there. He lives on his ranch near Star. So the residence sits vacant. And given Idaho's geography and independent spirit, one has to wonder if any future governor would live there. It's difficult and inconvenient to get to, for starters.

It's also a money pit that's costing hundreds of thousands of dollars a year to maintain — for nobody. Annual costs are estimated at $200,000, and there are also liability issues for kids who use the steep slopes beneath the house for winter sledding, according to an Associated Press report. The state has paid for five years of upkeep on an empty house, and $310,000 in private donations has been used to fund renovations. The taxpayer-backed fund established to maintain the property is estimated to be gone in five years.

But selling it right away isn't as easy as it might seem. The terms of the deal Idaho agreed to when it took the land from Simplot stated that if the state sells it, Simplot's family gets 60 days to match any offer. Should the offer be $2.1 million or less, the family could reclaim the property without paying a thing.

In the summer of 2007, the mansion made "headlines" when vandals used a herbicide to burn the image of a 60-foot-tall phallus into the grass beneath the mansion.

An Idaho governor hasn't lived in a governor's mansion for 24 years now. Jim Risch, Dirk Kempthorne, Phil Batt and Cecil Andrus all made their own living arrangements in the Treasure Valley. The state had been giving its governor a $4,500 monthly housing stipend to pay for his housing, but Otter stopped accepting that two years ago.

It's time for the state to unload the property. Even if it means handing it back to the Simplots. Let's stop paying for maintenance and upkeep and eventually get that property on the tax rolls so that it's bringing in money to Idaho — not wasting it.

An idea for cutting government budgets

Seems like every budget from local, state and federal governments are under fire.

Thirty years ago, holidays were shuffled so government employees could have the three-day weekend. A simple change to if you work a holiday you get paid, if you don't work, you won't get paid. With 30 to 40 percent of America working for the government, what a savings.

One more question: Can a Republican and a Democrat be Americans? If so, forget the party and be Americans first.

Do your part to stop new federal agency

There was an article in the Business section of the Feb. 2 issue of the Times-News detailing the formation of a new federal agency. This agency will be known as the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, which was a part of a large piece of legislation known as the Dodd-Frank Act.

As we all know, federal agencies have a way of starting small and growing big! I have telephoned the Washington offices of our congressmen and our two senators, asking that they work toward introducing legislation which will cancel this program. Now is a golden opportunity to save our tax dollars and further growth of our monster of a federal government.

In case you have not noticed, this monster is eating us alive. Do your part. I have done mine.

Wisconsin workers have much to lose

What is all the fuss in the Badger State? Is it about collective bargaining rights? Is it about reducing the budget deficit? Is it about union busting? Why are all those people standing around with their signs?

The real question remains, however: Why does the governor want to eliminate collective bargaining rights? It has been said that in order to elect more Republicans, the public employee unions must be destroyed. This was made public after the defeat of candidates in the 2010 election in California. So what is the logic? It is simply that public employee unions are very successful at getting voters to the ballot box. We can't have that, can we!

Since when has it become unpatriotic to resist being brow beaten by rightwing politicians and media? Workers in Wisconsin have much to lose if they give in to the union busting tactics of their governor. These workers are fighting for respect and fairness — nothing more, nothing less!

Walgreen selling pharmacy benefits ops for $525M

By Marley Seaman
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Walgreen Co. said Wednesday it is leaving the pharmacy benefits management business, selling that operation to Catalyst Health Solutions Inc. for $525 million in cash and freeing it to focus on its drugstore network, the largest in the United States.

The companies expect to complete the deal by the end of June assuming regulators approve. The pharmacy benefits management business, known as Walgreens Health Initiatives, has never approached the size of Care-mark, the pharmacy benefits management business of CVS Caremark Corp., which is Walgreen's largest drugstore competitor. Caremark says it manages prescription benefits for about 60 million people.

Caremark is the third-largest pharmacy benefits manager in the U.S., behind Medco Health Solutions Inc. and Express Scripts Inc.

While Catalyst remains much smaller than those companies, the purchase more than doubles its size. After the deal is complete, Catalyst's total membership will rise to about 18 million from 7 million. The Rockville, Md., company said it will handle about 165 million prescriptions a year, compared to about 80 million previously.

Catalyst shares rocketed $7.12, or 16 percent, to $51.65 in midday trading.

Walgreen does not disclose financial results for the health initiatives business and did not say if it is profitable.

Pharmacy benefits managers handle prescription drug plans for health plan sponsors and members. They make money by reducing costs for sponsors and members. One of their chief methods involves encouraging members to fill prescriptions with low-cost generic drugs. PBMs also encourage patients with chronic illnesses to fill their prescriptions through the mail using 90-day orders instead of the traditional 30 days.

Some critics have said the drugstore-PBM combination creates a conflict of interest, as PBMs try to reduce costs and drugstores want to bring in more revenue. Walgreen's drugstores almost stopped doing business with Caremark last year over those issues: Walgreen was unhappy with the rates Caremark paid it to fill prescriptions, and with policies that were intended to encourage Caremark customers to fill their prescriptions at CVS stores.

Stifel Nicolaus analyst Steven Halper said Walgreens Health Initiatives was never a central part of Walgreen's business, since its highest priority is its retail stores.

"They don't believe that the PBM is central to what they want to do," Halper said in an interview. That's in contrast to Caremark, which is key to CVS's strategy: CVS Caremark uses its size to get discounts from pharmaceutical wholesalers, and designs its benefit plans to encourage clients to go to CVS drugstores.

Halper said Walgreen may use the proceeds from the sale to make another acquisition or buy back stock.

Walgreen, of Deerfield, Ill., said the sale of the Walgreen Health Initiatives unit will be neutral to its profit in its next fiscal year. In addition to its network of 7,689 drugstores, Walgreen still has specialty pharmacy and mail service businesses and runs worksite health centers.

BUSINESS IS BOOMING

Jennifer Grasso organizes a shipment of candies that will be sold at From Seed To Store, a new business that opened in Buhl.

Buhl enjoys period of business growth

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

BUHL — From the remodel of Mexican restaurant El Cazador to the sprucing up and filling of long-vacant store fronts, a flurry of business activity in Buhl is creating excitement throughout the community.

Within the past few months, several new businesses have opened their doors, including From Seed to Store and Sagewood Salon on Broadway Avenue, The Visions Group Home Health and Hospice on Main Street and the fast-food franchise McDonald's on the city's eastern entryway.

"It's nice that I'm able to purchase almost everything I need in Buhl," said resident Juelie Taylor, who popped into the Sagewood Salon to inquire about its tanning services.

Sagewood Salon Owner Jennifer Nelson said she's invested nearly $15,000 into the building she's renting at 115 Broadway Ave. S.

While the store's front half has been decorated in welcoming, soft colors and boasts three hair styling stations and shelves of beauty products, Taylor is overseeing additional construction projects in the back half.

Jennifer Nelson poses inside Sagewood Salon, a new Main Street store in Buhl that offers custom photography, hair and nail styling, massage and tanning.

The space will include a room for massage therapy and other body care services like facials, moisturizing body wraps and targeted cellulite treatments.

The space will soon have a photo studio for Nelson's craft.

"I personally don't do the beauty services, but my thought ... that if it offered a variety of services it would have a better chance of being profitable," Nelson said. "We hope to be here a long time. The community feedback is awesome. Every business is supportive of each other; I like that."

Like Nelson, Jennifer Grasso wanted to invest in the community's future.

Grasso, along with husband Tom Nelsen, own and operate the newly opened From Seed To Store, touted as a "a natural marketplace and bakery."

The couple live on and run a seven-acre farm in the Hagerman valley, but said they fell in love with Buhl by participating in the summertime farmer's market.

"When we told people about what we wanted to do we heard over and over that Buhl needs something like that," Grasso said.

"Personally, I want to help change how we buy things.

It's frustrating to go into a store and see grapes from Chile and apples from New Zealand. It makes no sense, because we can grow it all here," Grasso said. "Sustaining ourselves locally is better for the local economy and the world. The pollution generated to get oranges to Idaho from Australia is mind boggling."

Their business model combines the feel of an old-fashioned general store mixed with the products and ambiance of a farmer's market. Grasso said the couple has spent several thousand dollars in equipment and hundreds of hours remodeling the store they rent from a

Wash. workers await court's decision on legal pot use

By Jonathan Martin
The Seattle Times

SEATTLE — Among the questions left unanswered by Washington's medical-marijuana law: Can legal use of medical marijuana get you fired?

Thirteen years after voters approved its use, that question is likely to be answered by the Washington Supreme Court, which heard a test case on the issue last month.

It involves a woman fired by a Bremerton, Wash., call center in 2006 because she failed a pre-employment drug test but had a valid authorization from a doctor.

The woman, identified in court by the pseudonym Jane Roe, used marijuana at night to treat migraines. The call center, Teletech Customer Care, offered no evidence that the use impaired her ability to work.

Michael Subit, Jane Roe's Seattle attorney, argued, before the state high court that such use is implicitly protected because voters legalized it. "It would flabbergast the average voter to think, 'I've been given this right but can be fired for it anyway,'" he said.

Courts in other states, including Oregon and California, have ruled in favor of businesses in similar cases.

Washington business groups are watching the Jane Roe case closely, anxious that the court potentially could define medical-marijuana use as a disability and therefore protect patients from firing.

"There's only so often that we want Washington to be an outlier, to appear to be less competitive because we put obligation on employers that they wouldn't face elsewhere," said Timothy O'Connell, a Seattle employment lawyer speaking on behalf of the Association of Washington Businesses.

Citing a recent letter from Idaho's governor seeking to woo local businesses, O'Connell said, "Do we want the governor of Idaho to have another paragraph to send to employers here?"

The initiative passed by

"Employers across the country have now made a distinction between prescription drugs and medical marijuana."

— Rich Meneghello,
an employment lawyer
in Portland, Ore.

voters in 1998 included a sentence stating that it did not require "any accommodation of any medical use of marijuana in any place of employment."

The Legislature amended it in 2007 to say "any on-site medical use." But the law remained silent about use outside work, leading to uncertainty about the intent.

The issue most commonly arises in pre-employment drug testing. Many employers also conduct drug tests for cause, such as obvious impairment and after accidents or car crashes.

A 2006 survey by SHRM, a national association of human-resources managers, found that 84 percent of companies drug-test new employees; nearly 40 percent do random testing.

In the Seattle area, several big employers, including Microsoft and the University of Washington, don't routinely drug-test new hires unless the jobs are "security-sensitive" or involve driving. Other big employers, including Boeing, do screen. Federal contractors are required to ensure drug-free workplaces.

Rich Meneghello, a longtime employment lawyer in Portland, Ore., said companies with clear drug policies will prohibit use of marijuana because it is illegal but may exempt prescription drugs.

AROUND THE WORLD

WISCONSIN Senate Republicans bypass Democrats on collective bargaining

MADISON — Republicans in the Wisconsin Senate voted Wednesday night to strip nearly all collective bargaining rights from public workers after discovering a way to bypass the chamber's missing Democrats.

All 14 Senate Democrats fled to Illinois nearly three weeks ago, preventing the chamber from having enough members present to consider Gov. Scott Walker's so-called "budget repair bill" — a proposal introduced to plug a $137 million budget shortfall.

The Senate requires a quorum to take up any measures that spend money. But Republicans on Wednesday split from the legislation the proposal to curtail union rights, which spends no money, and a special conference committee of state lawmakers approved the bill a short time later.

The lone Democrat present on the conference committee, Rep. Peter Barca, shouted that the surprise meeting was a violation of the state's open meetings law but Republicans voted over his objections. The Senate convened within minutes and passed the measure without discussion or debate.

LIBYA Oil installations set ablaze as battles rage

RAS LANOUF — A giant yellow fireball shot into the sky, trailed by thick plumes of black smoke Wednesday after fighting between rebels and forces loyal to Moammar Gadhafi set two oil installations ablaze and inflicted yet more damage on Libya's crippled energy industry.

In the west, Gadhafi claimed victory in recapturing Zawiya, the city closest to the capital that had fallen into opposition hands. The claim could not immediately be verified; phone lines there have not been working during a deadly, six-day siege.

State TV showed a crowd of hundreds, purportedly in Zawiya's main square, shouting "The people want Colonel Gadhafi!" but the location of the rally could not be independently confirmed.

Western journalists based in Tripoli were taken late Wednesday to a stadium on the outskirts of Zawiya that was filled with Gadhafi loyalists waving green flags in a similar scene, complete with fireworks. Libyan TV cameras filmed the celebrations as food, drinks and cooking oil were distributed.

Government escorts refused journalists' requests to visit the city's main square.

GEORGIA Gingrich blames affair on patriotism

ATLANTA — Newt Gingrich says his passion for his country contributed to his marital infidelity.

In an interview posted

Wednesday by The Christian Broadcasting Network, Gingrich — who recently converted to Catholicism — said he had sought God's forgiveness for mistakes in his past.

"There's no question at times of my life, partially driven by how passionately I felt about this country, that I worked far too hard and things happened in my life that were not appropriate," Gingrich said.

"What I can tell you is that when I did things that were wrong, I wasn't trapped in situation ethics, I was doing things that were wrong, and yet, I was doing them," he said.

"I found that I felt compelled to seek God's forgiveness. Not God's understanding, but God's forgiveness."

PENNSYLVANIA Farmhouse fire kills 7 kids in Amish country

LOYSVILLE — The father was making his rounds in his milk truck and the mother was in the barn, milking the cows, when their 3-year-old daughter smelled smoke and ran for help.

By the time the parents reached their farmhouse, it was too late: Seven of their eight children were killed in a furious blaze Tuesday night in Pennsylvania's dairy country. The victims ranged in age from 7 months to 11 years.

As schoolmates, friends and firefighters mourned, neighbors in the heavily Amish and Mennonite area converged on the farm to help out with the chores Wednesday morning, a few arriving by horse and buggy. Even the grieving father, Theodore Clouse, kept busy, perhaps as a way of coping with the shock.

The cause of the blaze was under investigation, but the children's grandfather Noah Sauder said he suspected a propane heater in the kitchen.

WASHINGTON, D.C. Senate rejects GOP, Democratic budgets

The Democratic-led Senate on Wednesday emphatically rejected a budget-slashing House spending bill as too draconian. It then immediately killed a rival Democratic plan that was derided by moderate Democrats as too timid in its drive to cut day-to-day agency budgets.

The votes to scuttle the competing measures were designed, ironically, to prompt progress. The idea was to show tea party-backed GOP conservatives in the House that they need to pare back their budget-cutting ambitions while at the same time demonstrating to Democratic liberals that they need to budge, too.

White House budget director Jacob Lew said the votes should turn a law said that talks between the administration and Republicans are likely to become more productive. The negotiators are unlikely to meet a March 18 deadline, which means another stopgap budget extension would be required to keep the government from shutting down.

NPR chief resigns to limit damage after VP criticizes tea party

NPR's president and CEO resigned Wednesday in an effort to limit the damage from hidden camera footage of a fellow executive deriding the tea party movement as "seriously racist."

Conservatives called the video proof that the network is biased and undeserving of federal funds.

NPR's board had pushed for the resignation of Vivian Schiller, whom conservatives also criticized in October for firing analyst Juan Williams over comments he made about Muslims. She was not in the video, which was posted Tuesday by a conservative activist, but she told The Associated Press that staying on would only hurt NPR's fight for federal money.

"We took a reputational hit around the Juan Williams incident, and this was another blow to NPR's reputation. There's no question," she said.

The timing of the video was exceptionally bad from NPR's perspective, with Republicans in the new House majority looking to cut all federal funding of public radio and television. Public broadcasting officials say that would force some stations to fold.

Post columnist David Broder dies at 81

David S. Broder, one of the nation's leading political reporters and a Pulitzer Prize winner in 1973 for distinguished commentary about the Watergate scandal, has died. He was 81.

Broder, a longtime columnist at The Washington Post, died Wednesday at Capital Hospice in Arlington, Va., from complications of diabetes.

In a statement, President

Barack Obama described Broder as "the most respected and incisive political commentator of his generation."

Broder, who continued to write his column despite failing health, served as a mentor to countless colleagues. His professorial mien helped earn him the unofficial title of dean of the political news corps, and he gained considerable fame for his work as reporter, syndicated columnist and public affairs show guest — including a record 401 appearances on NBC's "Meet the Press," starting in 1963.

Outdoors writer stomps his boots upon Third Fork

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

HANSEN — What started out as a blue-sky day turned overcast by the time I stomped onto Third Fork. The gray atmosphere didn't prevent me from accomplishing my intended goal: to hike part of the miles-long loop nestled between mountains in the South Hills. It was the snow and mud that prevented me from hiking farther than I did. But I was on the trail for a couple of hours, stopping now and then along the way to rest and capture video.

Visitors who use Third Fork park in a large gravel parking lot next to a small stream. Picnic tables are lined up against the banks. At the far end of the lot is a sign that reads "Third Fork Trailhead," and to its right is the trail.

I began my hike the way others do — passing the wooden sign, another rusted kiosk sign, a bird house. The trail was muddy at first, dotted here and there with small patches of snow. The patches grew larger the farther I walked, especially on inclines where the sun had a difficult time hitting the trail. I almost slipped several times as I ascended and descended these small hills, but my boots provided a strong grip and I maneuvered the trail without any mishaps. As I've had the habit of doing on most any hike, my mind wandered as I took in the surroundings. I looked ahead and saw two crosses standing guard on the trail. But as I neared I realized these weren't the kind of crosses you'd find in cemeteries. One cross marked the main trail, the other an alternate route. "Let's see what's down there," I said. Since I was hiking alone, I was talking to my video camera. The path led downward to the river that now was several yards to the right of the trail. A bridge takes hikers across the river and along another hillside. I stopped at the bridge, but eventually turned back to the main trail.

One of the things I enjoy about living in south-central Idaho is the opportunity to explore all sorts of outdoor venues, to experience nature in many of its varieties. The South Hills is unique in that it offers a mix of bland-looking ranges, open fields with a little more personality, and mountains full of character.

Third Fork, which lies amidst a field of sage, becomes more scenic the farther you travel into the hills where you encounter aspen groves.

Snow still covers parts of Third Fork trail, making hikes along the 13-mile loop more strenuous. This photo shows part of the trail as it looked March 4.

IF YOU HIKE

Third Fork is a good trail for horseback riding and is popular for mountain bikers, but also provides a nice adventure for hikers. Here are some pros and cons about the 13-mile trail:

Pros

- Good for a day hike or back-packing trip, with areas to picnic.
- Fairly easy to begin with but the trail becomes more strenuous the farther you travel.
- Scenic, especially the farther you walk into the hills and aspen groves. You often can hear the rushing of the river.
- A good place to view song birds and game birds.

Cons

- Not a lot of shade or shelter from the sun or winds until you get farther into the hills.
- In warm weather, beware of snakes

F&G proposes hunting changes

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is seeking public comment on proposed changes to big game hunts. A number of people visited an open house at the region office last week to ask questions and learn more about the proposals. Another meeting was held last week in Hailey, and an open house Tuesday in Burley. Proposals in the Magic Valley Region include adding new controlled archery, any-weapon and muzzleloader, antlered and antlerless, elk hunts in the South Hills-Owyhee Zone. The hunts are aimed at treating elk depredations in the area, said Regional Wildlife Manager Randy Smith. Elk numbers in units 46 and 47 have increased, he said, allowing the addition of new hunting opportunities. Existing hunts in units 54, 55 and 57 will continue but with changes in dates consistent with the new hunts in units 46 and 47. The motorized vehicle rule was eliminated on a number of hunts in Unit 57. The current three and a half month deer archery hunt in Unit 53, east of Highway 93 from the Perrine Bridge to Shoshone, has been in place since the late 1980s, said Mike McDonald, a biologist with Fish and Game. According to information provided by the department, a number of things are different today: much of the sagebrush that once grew in the area has burned, leaving less forage for deer, the human population has increased, and landowner tolerance

81,500 trout released into mid-Snake

Times-News

Anglers know that spring is just around the corner when Idaho Power releases fish into the Snake River. Spring must be near. This week the power company released 81,500 rainbow trout into the mid-Snake. The company stocked 50,000 rainbow trout in C.J. Strike Reservoir and 31,500 into Upper Salmon Falls Reservoir, Lower Salmon Falls Reservoir and Bliss Reservoir, below the dam and at Glenn's Ferry boat ramp. The stocking program is part of Idaho Power's federal license agreement to run its hydroelectric operations in the mid-Snake. The fish measure in the 10-inch range.

Unlike previous rainbow trout released by Idaho Power, these fish are not fitted with jaw tags. But according to information provided by the company there are still plenty of tagged fish from previous stockings that anglers can catch in the river. When anglers catch tagged fish they should call the power company to report where the fish was caught. This helps the company to evaluate its stocking program, and might be beneficial for the angler: he or she will be entered into a drawing or, depending on the tag, win an instant cash prize. The company stocks rainbow trout in the Snake River every March and October.

Tagged fish

If you catch a jaw-tagged rainbow trout in the Snake River, call Idaho Power at 1-800-388-6011. Provide your name, mailing address, telephone number, whether the fish was kept or released and where approximately it was caught to be entered in a drawing for $1,000, held semi-annually in February and September. # Idaho sheriff says ‘SSS’ raffle not about wolves GRANGEVILLE (AP) — An Idaho sheriff’s raffle called “308 SSS Wolf Pack Raffle” in a region where SSS commonly stands for what to do after killing a federally protected wolf — “shoot, shovel and shut up” — has brought in $13,000.

Idaho County Sheriff Doug Giddings said the SSS in the raffle stands for “safety, security and survival,” and the drawing held Tuesday for a rifle and shovel wasn’t meant to encourage the illegal shooting of wolves.

But the added publicity with the wolf angle helped sell 13,000 of the $1 tickets, he said.

“That’s almost as many people as are in Idaho County,” Giddings told the Lewis-ton Tribune.

Some buyers were from as far away as Chicago and Florida, he said.

“This is somewhat of a ‘Whoa, wait a minute’ raffle,” Giddings said. “The wolves are not beneficial to anybody except some environmentalist someplace who has nothing to do with Idaho County. (The drawing) drew a lot of attention to the wolf issue, and that was good.”

Giddings pulled 10 preliminary tickets from two empty beer kegs, with those tickets then placed in a basket with the winner drawn by the 2-year-old daughter of a sheriff’s deputy.

Top prize went to Norm Sonnen, of Greencreek, who said he bought about 20 tickets, though he doesn’t hunt wolves.

“I support what (the sheriff’s office) is doing,” Sonnen said. “I think our ancestors got rid of them for a reason and we don’t need them back. Although I’m not going to go against the law to get rid of them. But I don’t like the wolves being reintroduced.”

Giddings said raffle money is being divided among eight elementary schools, four high schools, and the Idaho County food bank.

Second place in the raffle was a knife, while the third-place winner received a $25 gift certificate to a sporting goods store.

Giving Mercury a satellite was not an easy task

Strange as it may seem, Mercury — one of the closest planets — is also one of the least visited. But for good reason.

Mariner 10, the only spacecraft to visit the innermost planet, flew past three times in the 1970s, returning our only clear views of the planet’s cratered surface. Next week, if all goes well, Mercury will gain its first satellite.

Getting there wasn’t easy. After launch, the MESSENGER probe had to gain 40,000 mph to pace Mercury. It did so, in part, by zipping low over Earth (once), Venus (twice), and Mercury (three times) over six years, stealing a little energy from each planet to boost its speed.

The nail-biting moment will come next Thursday night, when MESSENGER’s main engine will fire for 15 minutes, expending nearly a third of its fuel to slow down enough for Mercury’s gravity to pull it into orbit. After that, it will circle the planet every 12 hours, surveying Mercury’s surface, magnetic field, gravitational field and space environment.

Earth-watching satellites have a relatively easy time of it, maintaining a relatively constant distance and returning images for weather prediction and monitoring the planet’s activity.

But at Mercury, the closer sun appears 11 times brighter. MESSENGER hides behind a multi-layer sun shield to protect its delicate electronics from the blistering heat. Worse, Mercury itself pours heat into space at the temperature of a pizza oven, so MESSENGER will follow an elongat-

Iditarod leaders beating record pace

By Kyle Hopkins
McClatchy Newspapers

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Four-time defending champion Lance Mackey led a charge onto the Farewell Burn Monday night as the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race ripped off a blistering pace on the first full day of mushing.

Mackey rolled through the Rohn checkpoint near sunset and headed toward the Farewell Burn with 15 dogs still in harness. The Fairbanks, Alaska, musher often stops to rest not far out of Rohn.

His friend Hugh Neff of Tok, Alaska, — who has battled Mackey in the Iditarod and, particularly, the Yukon Quest for years — gave chase 29 minutes later.

But the early speed of the 39th Iditarod was startling.

Mackey made the 48-mile run from Rainy Pass to Rohn at a jaw-dropping average speed of 13.2 mph. While the run is largely downhill, it includes a notoriously nasty section through the Dalzell Gorge replete with sharp switchbacks. It has brought more than one musher to tears, and ended dozens of races through the years.

Measured against the fastest race in Iditarod history, Martin Buser’s 2002 victory, this Iditarod is flying.

Need proof?

- In 2002, eventual race champion Buser reached Rohn at 7:25 p.m. on Monday and left at 1:19 a.m. on Tuesday.
- This year, Mackey pulled in at 5:45 p.m. Monday and left at 6:02 p.m.

Of course, the racers are only about 200 miles into a 1,000-mile marathon. Weather, health and a million other mishaps can happen before Nome, but the combination of ideal weather and excellent snow conditions appear to be delivering a bounty of speed for the frontrunners.

“Boy, they’re rolling,” said veteran Linwood Fiedler, who’s sitting out this year’s race with an injury. During Buser’s record run, Fiedler was the first musher out of Rohn, nearly an hour ahead of Buser. He ended up scratching in Ruby.

Just a few days ago, Fiedler was on the Susitna River headed toward Skwentna on a snowmobile.

“I’ve never seen the river so flat — so hard and fast,” he said. “Usually you’re fighting snow-go bumps and maybe some drifting.”

“It’s been cold at night setting up the trail and warmer during the day. My guess is that it’s just wind-blown and hard.”

“Remember, though,” he cautioned, “it’s a long ways to Nome.”

And a lot of racers want to get there first.

By 8 p.m., a growing crowd of 10 mushers were in Rohn. Among them were past champions (Buser), runners-up (Hans Gatt, Sebastian Schnuelle and Paul Gebhardt) and a couple of surprises.

Anchorage’s Robert Bundtzen, 61, who’s never finished higher than 27th in a dozen Iditarod races, was running fourth with all 16 of his dogs in harness. And Bruce Linton of Kasilof, Alaska, who’s never been higher than 25th was 10th.

Linton, a Type 1 diabetic, has also raced three Ironman triathlons and aims to spread the message that diabetics can accomplish an array of athletic feats. His kennel, the No Limits Sled Dog Kennel, is the first hint.

His team of speedy dogs is the second.

for hunters has declined.

Proposals for this unit include issuing a general season from Aug. 30–Sept. 30, or an unlimited controlled hunt from Nov. 25–Dec. 19, or an unlimited controlled hunt from Aug. 30–Dec. 19.

The department also is proposing to lengthen the short-range weapon season in the western portion of Unit 53 by seven days and to include that portion of Unit 45 south of Interstate 84 and east of the Bliss Bridge in a new short-range weapon general season.

And if elk depredations occur in Blaine County’s Unit 52, landowner-permit hunts will be initiated, McDonald said.

No changes are proposed for black bear and mountain lion hunts.

Fish and Game is accepting comment on the proposals until Monday. The Fish and Game Commission will vote on them at its March 28 meeting in Boise.

The response from people so far has been positive, McDonald said. About 50 people turned out to the Burley open house, he said, and about 30 to the one in Twin Falls.

“There are a lot of questions because some of this is new,” he said. “But the comment period is still open.”

Third Fork

I experienced all of that while hiking Third Fork.

The trail is perhaps best tread on horseback. And according to Trails.com, it also is used by mountain bikers. They call it “Heart Attack Loop.”

Be careful if you come here during summer as there are plenty of snakes in the area.

A rise just off a bend of the trail offers hikers the chance to look over the valley spread before them, where the trail leads farther into the hills. Snow-capped mountains in the distance and, for sound, still the rushing of the river.

A crow cooed, keeping me company, and around me the bushes sang, being pushed by the wind.

And then, oddly, the wind stopped.

Travelers on Third Fork, which is a 13-plus-mile loop with connecting trails along the way, can actually end up in nearby Porcupine Springs.

The farther you walk, the more scenic the landscape becomes. A small forest of trees provides a nice reprieve from the otherwise open fields. More trees, barren of leaves this time of year, stand tall and naked the deeper you walk into the hills.

I knew I wasn’t going to make the whole trail. A number of trail off-shoots presented themselves, and I wanted to explore further. But the day was fast closing in and I still needed to return to my car.

I marched back, my feet growing heavy — and cold — with the passing afternoon.

And then I heard what sounded like ghosts. The wind was blowing again, pulling at the dried reeds that here and there covered the hillsides.

I returned to my car and propped the video camera on a tripod, and then set that on my car to do a stand up, my feet growing colder by the minute.

Cold weather didn't stop anglers from casting their lines on the season opener in Kansas.

Cold weather doesn't freeze anglers out of trout opener

By Brent Frazee
McClatchy Newspapers

KANSAS CITY, Kan. — For Justus Welker, a father-son fishing trip one Saturday at Wyandotte County Lake was all about tradition.

“My dad used to take me to the trout opener here years ago,” he said. “Now I’m transitioning to the next generation.”

“I’ve had Jackson (his 10-year-old son) out here for opening day three years now. We wouldn’t miss this.”

Not even on a day like this particular Saturday, when conditions were less than ideal.

The temperature was in the 20s and a cold wind swept across the water when the Welkers arrived at the lake at 5:30 a.m., a half-hour before the season opened.

Fishing weather? Hardly. But on the first day of the season, such conditions can be ignored.

“We put a lot of clothes on to stay warm,” said Jackson, dressed in a coat, a red stocking cap and gloves.

When the gates opened, the Welkers, who live in Kansas City, Kan., rushed to a spot at the kids pond and dad helped son bait his hook with PowerBait. Just minutes after Jackson cast that bait into the water, he watched his fishing rod suddenly bend.

He set the hook and felt the strong pull of a good-sized trout. Seconds later, that fish was on the stringer and the Welkers were celebrating a good start to a new season.

“I remember years when we would get out here at midnight to wait for the gates to open, and we’d still be way back in line,” Justus said. “There’s always a crowd, no matter what the weather is like.”

Fishermen at Wyandotte, a 330-acre lake in Kansas City, Kan., waited patiently as the trout season opened at Shawnee Mission and Heritage Park lakes on Feb. 26 and at the Missouri trout parks March 1. That Saturday, it was their turn.

They made a mad dash to favorite spots, parked their vehicles and scrambled down hills to the water’s edge before it even turned light. Within minutes, lanterns were lighted and the banks were glistening like a pearl necklace.

Fishermen tossed hooks baited with PowerBait, night crawlers or minnows into the frigid water and they waited.

Jackson Welker was among the lucky fishermen. Before the season was an hour and a half old, he had two nice-sized trout on his stringer.

Another 10-year-old, Cobie Frie of Piper, also had reason to get excited. Fishing with his grandpa, Philip Mikijanis, and family friends Derrick Hansroth and Richard Gordon, he quickly earned bragging rights in his group.

“He’s got the biggest trout,” Mikijanis said of his grandson. “He’ll probably never let us hear the end of that.”

For Mikijanis, it was also a good day. A good, long day.

He and the others in his group arrived at the lake at 4:30 a.m. That should have been early enough to ensure getting a good spot to fish, right? Wrong.

To their surprise, they found that plenty of others had arrived earlier.

“I’ve been coming out here for the opener for 30 years,” he said, “so I know what kind of crowd can come out.

“Sometimes, the guys at the front of the line will spend the night out here. We got here early, but not as early as a lot of people.

“This opener has a real following. This is like the end of winter for us.”

Well, kind of.

The first Saturday of March marks the first day of the spring fishing season at Wyandotte. But it came in more like a lion than a lamb this year.

Erica Rodriguez of Kansas City, Kan., stood on the Grassy Slope with a cold wind blowing in her face and shivered. She had a hooded jacket pulled tight around her face and a coat draped over her head. But it was still cold.

“Very, very cold,” she said.

So cold that she almost hated to shuck the coat covering her head when she caught a trout.

“This is the coldest day I’ve ever fished,” she said.

John Morris definitely didn’t mind. He had been looking forward to this day for a long time.

“I used to be a sergeant for the park rangers out here and I could never fish the opener. I was out writing tickets,” he said. “But now that I’ve moved on (he is deputy chief for the Roeland Park Police and police chief for Randolph, Mo.), I can fish out here.

Hunt to speak at Magic Valley Fly Fishers meeting

The Magic Valley Fly Fishers will hold its regular monthly meeting at 7 p.m. March 16 at Fish and Game’s Magic Valley Region Office, 319 S. 417 E. Highway 93, Jerome.

The featured speaker will be Chris Hunt, communications and outreach director for Trout Unlimited’s Sportsman’s Conservation Project. He is a former journalist and has written two books on fly fishing. The latest is titled, “Shin Deep:

A Fly Fisher’s Love for Living Water.” He is an avid fly fisher and has been fishing the waters in and around Yellowstone National Park for nearly 15 years.

He will speak to the Magic Valley Fly Fishers Chapter of Trout Unlimited on the proposed plan by the National Park Service to remove lake trout from Yellowstone Lake and to rein-vigorate Yellowstone’s native trout fisheries. The public is invited.

It’s everyone’s responsibility to report vandalism

“I was at the Niagara WMA last week and talked with a department employee about all the vandalism on WMAs and fishing access areas. Is there anything I can do to help the department avoid having to spend my license and tag fees fixing those things destroyed by vandalism? This just irks me to no end!”

A You have hit on a subject that drives all of us in the department and most sportsmen crazy.

Last weekend vandals broke into the shop at the Niagara Wildlife Management Area. Aside from general mischief such as spraying fire extinguishers inside the shop, they destroyed the incoming electrical connection when they cut the electricity.

They also stole several power tools, personal equipment, a chain saw, and then drove a brand new department ATV into the stream. They destroyed the entrance to the shop when they crushed the door knob and drove a heavy piece of steel through the door.

Earlier this winter at the Dog Creek Reservoir fishing access, vandals shot out several windows in the newly installed restroom facilities, tore up several fishing docks and left burned and unburned pallets full of nails in a camp fire in the parking area.

The last several weeks state and federal employees drained several of the Oster Lakes at the Hagerman WMA so they could clean up the trash that had been deposited over the years in the lakes. Employees spent more than 100 hours working in the Oster Lakes.

Over the past weekend department employees discovered where someone had deposited nearly a pickup load of beverage bottles, glass containers and other miscellaneous trash in the newly cleaned area.

A while ago the department was rebuilding a fishing access and boat ramp along the south bank of the Snake River near Kelly’s Orchard when vandals stole a department utility trailer full of hand and power tools. The trailer was chained to a tree. The chain was cut and the trailer and its contents taken. Neither the tools nor the trailer have ever been located.

The point of this week’s column is to make the public aware that a significant amount of sportsmen’s dollars goes to replace and repair damaged department facilities and equipment.

I also am hoping this column may enlighten some who are using these areas and witness suspicious activity, or the kind of damage described above, to contact local authorities.

In many instances, witnesses can report this vandalism anonymously through the Citizens Against Poaching (C.A.P.) Hotline. There have even been instances where the C.A.P. Board has approved rewards for information about this type of vandalism.

These facilities provide sportsmen and non-sportsmen with unique opportunities to view wildlife, recreate on public land, and have public access to the Snake River. Sportsmen’s dollars are used to secure and maintain these opportunities.

Please report any vandalism you see or have knowledge about to your nearest police department, sheriff’s office or Citizens Against Poaching hotline at 1-800-632-5999.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: About two years ago, I bought a new car from a local dealer. Because I’m 70 years old and a widower, I had the car titled in my name and my son’s name. I had heard that titling the car in this way was a good way to pass the car to my son when I die without his having to go through probate. My son had to file a personal bankruptcy a few months ago, and his bankruptcy trustee is trying to take my car. Can the trustee do this?

Answer: This is a very complicated area of bankruptcy law, but essentially, your son’s name on the title to your car gave him an ownership interest in the car. His ownership interest is an asset of his, and along with his other assets, it has become part of his bankruptcy estate. Unless your son can exempt the value of his ownership interest in your car, the trustee can take the car, sell it, and distribute the money to your son’s unsecured creditors. You or your attorney should contact the trustee and try to negotiate an arrangement where you can pay the trustee a sum of money in return for keeping the car. The lesson to be learned here is that you should NEVER put another person’s name on the title or deed to property you own unless you are absolutely sure that the other person is financially solvent and will not be filing a bankruptcy. Idaho’s Probate Code provides for an abbreviated probate procedure where property can be passed to your heirs after death very quickly and inexpensively. Therefore, placing your heir’s name on a title or deed is usually unnecessary.

Crab feast fundraiser raised $38,000

Capstone Missions Inc. recently hosted its sixth annual Crab Feast Fundraiser for orphans of Tijuana, Mexico, at St. Jerome's Catholic Church in Jerome, raising $38,000.

Capstone is an Idaho non-profit organization dedicated to supporting two orphanages, a home for abused women and their infants, and helping the other poor of Tijuana. The organization is supported entirely by charitable donations from individuals and businesses. Part of its funding comes from two annual dinner and auction events, one in Jerome and one in Boise.

Using St. Jerome's new Parish Center, the Crab Feast has seated approximately 400 people in the past two years. Guests this year feasted on 1,200 pounds of Dungeness crab from Oregon.

Throughout the evening, guests participated in silent auctions, live auctions, a reverse raffle, several other games, and a dessert auction. Corbett Auctioneers kept the evening moving at a fast pace with lively and humorous patter.

Capstone welcomes trip volunteers of college age and above from all walks and faiths. Each trip has one or two professionals to lead the construction work, making sure the workers stay safe and that the work is of high quality.

For those interested in other ways to contribute, there is plenty of cleaning, sorting, helping with children, arranging pantries, and shopping for material, among other needed tasks.

The next Capstone trip is March 19-26. Information: www.capstonemissions.org, or info@capstonemissions.org.

He worked at Falks, Sears and Cain's, where he was a part-owner for 19 years. Jensen was part-owner of Redfish Lake Lodge. ## Mini-Cassia Spring Craft Fair starts today

This year's Mini-Cassia Spring Craft Fair has moved to the Cassia County Fairgrounds.

The three-day spring craft fair — it starts today and runs through Saturday — will still have favorite items and vendors from the Fall Mini-Cassia Craft Fair. The event is hosted by the same producers from the successful fall fair, but organizers say the move provides more days of shopping with smaller crowds. There will be a drawing for a Sweet Escape basket loaded with spa goodies.

A lunch of hot soup and sandwiches will be provided by the Square Meal Deli.

Doors will open at 5 p.m. today for Preferred Customer Night. The fee is $4 without a ticket and $3 with a ticket.

Friday and Saturday, the doors will open at 10 a.m. The fee then will be $1 without a ticket and free of charge with a ticket. Tickets can be used all three days and are available at local merchants.

This is a juried event, which means the items for sale have been previewed by the event producers for quality.

- “I’ve Turned On My Computer, Now What?” will be taught by Shirley Stauffer from 6-8 p.m.

Thursdays, March 17 to April 7, at the CSI Mini-Cassia Center. Registration is $40.

What’s the difference between hamartoma and hematoma?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I spoke with a friend recently who said she was diagnosed with a hamartoma in her chest cavity. I corrected her and said she likely had a hematoma, but she was convinced she heard her doctor correctly. Can you tell me the right word?

DEAR READER: Without knowing your friend and her medical condition, I can only assume she is correct. I will outline the differences between the two words.

ASK
Dr. Peter Gott

A hamartoma is a benign growth composed of an abnormal mixture of epithelial and mesenchymal elements. It is a part of any tissue that either grows faster or without the usual organization of its neighbor cells. It results from faulty development.

Their growth is limited, so they are not actually tumors, even though they are often referred to as such. They are more common in men than women, and most people so diagnosed are smokers. Growths vary in size from 1 to 9 centimeters and consist of lobules of cartilage, fat, fibromyxoid tissue and, on occasion, smooth muscle and bone. The growth of these lesions is extremely slow, perhaps 3 millimeters per year.

A hematoma, on the other hand, develops from injury such as from a fall or banging one’s arm or leg against a hard object. Blood vessels under the skin tear, blood leaks into the surrounding tissue, and a bruise or contusion results. The lesion will often turn purple, dark red, yellow/green and a variety of colors as the blood is absorbed back into the body. The process can take up to four weeks. There are some that do not reabsorb and need to be removed by a physician. If not removed, they may calcify. In an extremity, they cause pressure to build and cut off circulation.

Generally speaking, bruises are not a cause for concern, and a person is generally fully aware of why a hematoma develops. Older adults, on the other hand, have less fat under the skin, and they tend to bruise easily. Aspirin and anticoagulants can cause bruising.

Disorders that cause bleeding or a clotting disorder include hemophilia, thrombocytopenia, lupus, liver disease, leukemia and other less common disorders.

Because your friend referred to her chest cavity, she likely has a harmless hamartoma. My guess is her physician will continue to monitor it on a periodic basis to ensure it does not change in appearance.

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you address the link between aluminum and Alzheimer’s disease? And if there is truly a link, why do deodorants contain it? Thank you.
DEAR READER: I wish I could provide a direct answer. There have been a number of books written and a great deal of research done about a possible link, but after numerous years of research, scientists remain unsure what role — if any — aluminum plays in Alzheimer’s disease. In the 1960s and 1970s, researchers experimented with rabbits exposed to aluminum salts. They did discover severe neurological damage that might be compared with Alzheimer’s in people; however, further review revealed significant differences between what was found in rabbits and what was found in humans. The conclusion? Perhaps they were totally different ailments. This is not to say that aluminum has been ruled out as a cause of Alzheimer’s. It simply indicates that the views we so positively held several years ago may no longer be valid. It seems the more we learn, the less we know.

In terms of deodorant, it is likely safe. It’s antiperspirants that contain aluminum.

Brian Lee Ohlensehlen

Feb. 4, 1981–March 7, 2011

Brian Lee Ohlensehlen was born a special Child of God on Feb. 4, 1981, in Twin Falls, Idaho. He was carried to his heavenly home Monday, March 7, 2011.

His parents are Bob and Darlena Ohlensehlen of Twin Falls. Brian had a brother, Jim, and a sister, Cindy. During his life, Brian especially touched the hearts of his nieces and nephew, who loved Brian dearly. In return, Brian taught them and many of us about care and compassion for those who have not been as well blessed as most of us are. Many people have touched Brian during his life, providing aid and comfort that he was not able to provide for himself.

Brian enjoyed music; one of his greatest pleasures was to sit and enjoy listening to music. He also enjoyed being out and about in the community. He took in the county fair every fall. Brian enjoyed sitting in the rocker and would rock for hours at a time.

When Brian was 2, he began attending school in Gooding at the Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind. He attended there until he was 12. Then he attended Harrison Elementary and Robert Stuart Junior High. He has since attended the programs at the Center for Independent Living. Brian was baptized and a lifelong member of the Lutheran Church.

Like most children, Brian moved out of his home when he was nearly 20 and spent his adult life in the Clearwater, Hillcrest, Campus View and Bitterroot homes. There Brian was blessed to have shared his home with many of God's other special children and to have been cared for by dozens of people. In their eyes, Brian was the same as the rest of us. They loved him and cared for him as if he was one of their own family.

With all of the medical issues that Brian faced during his life, there were many physicians who were instrumental in giving Brian extra years to be with his family. There are too many to list everyone, but in the beginning, it was Dr. Paul V. Miles, Dr. Ronald Miller and

Dr. Jack Trotter; in the later years, Dr. Richard Hammond, Dr. Steve Kohtz and his nurse, Jenn Klinsky.

Brian's family would especially like to thank Dr. Ron Miciak and the nursing staff at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center for the excellent care Brian received in his final days. We are truly blessed to have such an excellent and caring medical staff who are there to treat not only the patient but to help the family through a difficult time as well. Brian's family would like to thank all of those who have given Brian a kind word, a gentle hand and loving care.

Brian is survived by his parents, Bob and Darlena Ohlensehlen; his brother, Jim (Wendy) Ohlensehlen; his sister, Cindy (Herb) Gonzales; maternal grandparents, James and Helen Kendrick; and paternal grandmother, Betty Ohlensehlen; nieces and nephew, Madison, Sydney, Matthew and Sadie Ohlensehlen, Camryn Stuhler, Olivia, Leah, and Hope Gonzales. He is also survived by his extended family at Clearwater Care Center. He was preceded in death by his paternal grandfather, A.E. Ohlensehlen.

He will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved him.

A service of remembrance will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, March 10, at the Peace Lutheran Church in Filer. Arrangements are under the direction of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

The family requests memorials in Brian's name be sent to the Peace Lutheran Church, 600 Stevens Place, Filer, ID 83328. Those wishing to share condolences may do so at www.magicvalley-funeralhome.com.

Dora Mae Priest Wildman Denny

March 16, 1925–March 6, 2011

Dora Mae Priest Wildman Denny was born one of five children to David and Alice Priest on March 16, 1925, in Kimberly, Idaho; she peacefully passed away Sunday, March 6, 2011, at the Twin Falls Care Center.

She married William Carl Wildman in 1941 and, through this union, five children were born. Dora learned to work hard at an early age and supported her family by taking jobs at the Sport Shop and Fredrickson's. Dora and Bill were divorced in 1963, and she married Gerald Denny in 1966. In 1967, she purchased and operated Shorty's Café until 1980. She continued to work at the Twin Falls Elks Club and found more time to enjoy camping, fishing and traveling with Jerry. She enjoyed lunches with her friends and swimming at the YMCA. Dora had a passion for sewing and was proud of the clothes she made for herself. She loved to read, crochet and bake. She would spend hours in her yard and her hard work was appreciated by all who had the honor of viewing the works of her labor.

Dora had a gentle demeanor but also had a way of letting you know her opinion. For the past five years, Dora resided at Curry Retirement Center, and the family would like to thank Barbara and the rest of the staff for their loving care.

Dora is survived by her brother, Ray Priest of Overton, Nev.; her son, Bob Wildman and his wife, Julie Ann of Twin Falls; daughters, Susan Legarreta and her husband, Cruz of Gooding, Idaho, Carolyn Biondi and her husband, Bill of Wendover, Nev., and Debbie Wiscombe and her husband, Kenneth of Kuna, Idaho; 12 grandchildren; 15 great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild. She was preceded in death by her parents, a daughter, two brothers, one sister, a grandson, a great grandson and her husbands.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, March 11 at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. Visitation for Dora will be held one hour prior to the service from 10 to 11:00 a.m. Saturday at the funeral home. Interment will be held following the service at the Twin Falls Cemetery in Twin Falls.

The family would prefer donations be made to Twin Falls Public Library or to a charity of your choice in lieu of flowers.

Those wishing to share memories and condolences may do so at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

Norman Radabaugh

Feb. 5, 1945–March 6, 2011

PAUL — Norman C Radabaugh, 66, of Paul, passed away at his home Sunday, March 6, 2011. He was surrounded by his family and friends.

Norman was born Feb. 5, 1945, in Marysville, Pa., to Clayton and Joyce (Barthel) Radabaugh. He was the oldest of seven children, Ron (Kim) Radabaugh of Buhl, Linda (Earl) Jackson of Mesa, Ariz., Susan Thompson of Irving, Texas, Bob (Von) Radabaugh of Montpelier, Lorraine Buckman of Yakima, Wash., and Mike (Rhonda) Radabaugh of Yakima, Wash.

Norman was retired from driving truck; he worked for C.R. England Trucking as an owner-operator until 2002. He owned Trucker Pallet Exchange, the business he started in 1993. Norman had a love for boxing and was a featherweight in his younger days; he was going to turn pro but an injury to his hand prevented that. He was a hard worker who always had something to do or someone to help. He enjoyed boxing and weightlifting. Norman also adored his grandchildren and loved to take walks with his "girls," Spot and Lilly, and had a love for all animals and children.

Norman was survived by his wife, Janet of Paul; his children, Jason (Ryann), James, Andrea (Fred) and Danyale (Lauren); and his stepchildren, Steve (Amanda) Smith, Sadie Chaffin and Russell Smith. He was "Papa Norman" to 12 grandchildren, MaKayla, Kaylee, Ashton, Koebea, Austynn, Morgan, Logan, McKell, Gloria, Ashlee, Nevaeh and Alexander. Norman will be joining his parents; daughters, Sheila and Shauna; son, Calvin; nephew, Kevin; great-nephew, Timothy; father and sister-in-law, George and Susan Becker.

Special thanks to Inter-mountain Healthcare for the support and compassion they showed to the family. We would like to offer a special thanks to Dr. Klett, nurse Debbie and Mario for the extra love and support during this very hard time. Norman lost his life too young but fought a courageous battle to the end. He will be missed dearly.

A viewing for family and friends will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. Saturday, March 12, at Morrison Funeral Home, 188 S. Highway 24 in Rupert. In keeping with Norman's wishes, cremation will follow and a private family service will take place at a later date. Services are under the direction of Morrison Funeral Home.

Color photographs of 1906 San Francisco quake found

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A museum volunteer has unearthed what the Smithsonian Institution believes to be the first — and perhaps only — color photographs of San Francisco after the 1906 earthquake and fire that nearly leveled the city.

The six never-published images were snapped by photography innovator Frederick Eugene Ives several months after the April 1906 "Great Quake," the San Francisco Chronicle reports. Most were taken from the roof of the hotel where Ives stayed during an October 1906 visit.

They were stowed amid other items donated by Ives' son, Herbert, and discovered in 2009 by National Museum of American History volunteer Anthony Brooks while he was cataloging the collection.

Although hand-colored photographs of the quake's destruction have surfaced before, Ives' work is probably the only true color documentary evidence, Shannon Perich, associate curator of the Smithsonian's photography history collection, told the Chronicle.

She says Ives was one of only a few photographers experimenting with color photography in the early 20th century and that his San Francisco images were meant to be viewed through a 3-D device he invented but which never became a commercial success.

The Golden Eagles' reward for the District I Championship?

"The most enjoyable 24-hour bus ride you'll ever have," according to College of Southern Idaho men's basketball coach Steve Gosar.

Enjoyable thanks to the destination: The NJCAA Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan. But before the second-ranked Eagles (29-4) depart early Friday morning, they'll enjoy a day of rest today.

Sort of.

The team will hold a "light" practice this afternoon and "get some shots up," Gosar said. Otherwise, it'll be a day for catching up in the classroom and resting some weary bodies.

"We need to do as much school work as possible on Thursday," said Gosar. "... We've got a couple guys nursing injuries, giving them a little bit of a break will be good."

The Eagles returned to Twin Falls on Wednesday after Tuesday's 94-75 district title win over Cochise (Ariz.) College in Scottsdale, Ariz. Gosar was pleased with how his team handled Cochise's full-court pressure and offensive attack without much

BYU coach brings suspended center to league tournament

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press writer

LAS VEGAS — Brandon Davies is not just here in spirit for No. 8 BYU. He's here in person.

The sophomore center who was suspended for violating the school's honor code by reportedly having sex with his girlfriend accompanied his teammates to the Mountain West Conference tournament.

"He's as big a part of this team as anyone on this team," senior guard Jackson Emery said Wednesday after a workout that was witnessed by Davies. "He screwed up. We've all screwed up in our individual ways. But it's good to have him here. He's helped us get to this part of the year and it's a big confidence boost to know that he's on the bench supporting us and not somewhere else."

Cougars coach Dave Rose said bringing Davies along was the right thing to do.

"I just think it's important for his teammates," Rose said. "There's not a message. This is about our team. We decided to bring him because we thought it would be good for both of us."

"He's a continuing student right now," Rose said when asked what Davies' role was. Rose said he's not decided, however, whether Davies would accompany the Cougars in the NCAA tournament.

"Yet to be determined," Rose said.

CSI baseball poised to buck losing skid at CSN

Never mind that the College of Southern Idaho baseball team is 3-15 at the College of Southern Nevada in the last five seasons. Never mind that the Golden Eagles have lost their last eight games against the Coyotes in Henderson, Nev.

Riding high from a four-game sweep of Eastern Utah that has the team off to its best conference start in six years, the Golden Eagles can't get to Henderson fast enough.

And it's not just because of the early-week snowstorm that restricted their practice to light work this week. They genuinely believe Southern Nevada is ripe for the picking, and they're determined to buck the trend of losing in the Scenic West Athletic Conference's southern-most city.

Gone is No. 1 overall MLB draft pick Bryce Harper, head coach Tim Chambers and the rest of the cast of characters that led the Coyotes to within a couple games of a national championship. Gone also is Chambers' replacement, Chris Sheff, who was fired without coaching a game after committing three NJCAA violations that left the program with 10 fewer scholarships for the 2012 and 2013 seasons, though it remains eligible for postseason competition.

In is the Coyotes' third coach in less than a year, Nick Garritano, a pitching staff leaning heavily on five transfers (the team has nine total) and a club enduring a rigorous schedule with far less fanfare than the media circus that followed Harper's (almost) every move.

In seven of the nine meetings last season, these

Twin Falls senior Jayson Welker was named a recipient of a $500 football scholar-athlete scholarship doled out by the Southern Idaho Chapter of the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame.

Bruins' Jayson Welker earns football honor

Times-News

The football season ended almost six months ago, but one area senior picked up a big recent honor.

Jayson Welker, a senior defensive back for Twin Falls, was selected by the Southern Idaho Chapter of the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame to receive a $500 scholarship.

Only eight football players from Idaho are recognized yearly with the award, and Welker becomes the fourth Twin Falls football player to earn the honor in the last 15 years.

He joins Brett Kohring (2010), Ben Kohring (1997) and Patt Hobbs (2000) as Twin Falls recipients. 2011 awardees will be honored during a statewide scholar athlete banquet April 16 in Boise.

In addition to the scholarship, recipients of this particular award have their names entered into a book held at the College Football Hall of Fame in South Bend, Ind.

The award is for seniors who have distinguished themselves on the football field, in the classroom and in extracurricular activities that display leadership, according to the foundation.

Past area winners in addition to the Kohring brothers and Hobbs are Curt Osborne (Hagerman, 1998), Sean Brown (Buhl, 1998), Rich Arrossa (Kimberly, 1999), Mike McHargue (Gooding, 1999), David Thibault (Valley, 2000), Pat Hobbs (Twin Falls, 2000), Andrew Coats (Minico, 2001), Chris Maughan (Dietrich, 2002), Sean Goodbody (Wendell, 2003), Jysen Lancaster (Wendell, 2004), Cory Rutkowski (Wood River, 2007), Will Chivers (Buhl, 2007), Dane Brodhead (Minico, 2008), Skylar Morgan (Minico, 2009), Jake Lammers (Jerome, 2009), David Griffin (Minico, 2010) and Nick Howard (Castleford, 2010).

No trouble spotting hypocrisy in college sports

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press writer

For all the justifiable criticism of those who run big-time college athletics, you've got to give 'em this: They don't make much of an effort to hide the hypocrisy.

The bowl system is convoluted and unfair? Sure, but the major conferences couldn't care less since they're the ones benefiting at the expense of the little guys.

The student part of student-athlete is nothing but a ruse? Of course, but English 101 is irrelevant as long as they can dunk a basketball or throw a football like a laser.

And now, our latest offering from a septic tank of a system that's unlikely to be flushed out in our lifetime.

Ohio State coach Jim Tressel was suspended for two games Tuesday after it was learned he had been tipped off nearly a year ago about a federal investigation into questionable activities involving some of his players, including a memorabilia-for-tattoos arrangement with a very seedy parlor owner.

Problem is, Tressel didn't bother telling anyone about it, even though that very requirement is underlined in his contract. He'll also get a $250,000 fine, a public reprimand (whatever that means on top of a suspension and fine) and have to make a public apology, no doubt ghostwritten by some combination of lawyers and public-relations folks.

"I plan to grow from this. I'm sincerely saddened by the fact that I let some people down and didn't do things as well as I possibly could have," Tressel said, tears welling in his eyes.

Cry me a river.

This is nothing more than a slap on the wrist.

Why did the school decide to sit Tressel for only two games, while the players involved in the illicit behavior, including star quarterback Terrelle Pryor, received a five-game ban from the NCAA? Why does the Ohio State coach serve a lighter sentence than former Georgia receiver A.J. Green, who got a four-game ban in a totally unrelated and seemingly more minor case — selling a bowl jersey to put a little cash in his pocket?

Opinion

Because this is college athletics, where doing what's right is usually way down on that honey-dolist, certainly far behind whatever it takes to keep the money rolling in to those school coffers. (Which, of course, is why the players must remain pure amateurs, or at least work out their own side deals without getting caught.)

The Ohio State players got caught bartering football memorabilia for money and tattoos. Their coach knew about it. Yet, the thing that surely took precedence over all that ugliness was Tressel's record on the field: 106-22 in a decade of coaching the Buckeyes, including a national championship back in 2002.

There was absolutely NO chance that Ohio State might actually do the very thing it had a right to do under Tressel's contract: Fire him for failing to report any information related to violations of NCAA, Big Ten or Ohio State bylaws and rules. Heck, according to athletic director Gene Smith, that step wasn't even seriously considered.

Why?

Have you not been listening? Remember, this is college athletics, where the overriding consideration is nearly always the bottom line. Tressel's program has made tens of millions of dollars for Ohio State. Might as well ride that gravy train a

Union seeking more financial data than NFL offered

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Play-ers’ union leader DeMaurice Smith indicated Wednesday that NFL owners have low-ered from $1 billion to $800 million the amount of addi-tional revenues they want to take off the top of their $9 bil-lion business.

He also was clear he con-siders that lower figure still too high, because the league is not offering to turn over enough financial informa-tion.

Leaving the 14th day of mediated talks — and with the labor contract set to ex-pire Friday — Smith called the information the NFL pro-posed to provide “utterly meaningless.” The union re-jected what the league offered to give; that financial infor-mation doesn’t include data requested nearly two years ago by Smith in a letter to Commissioner Roger Good-ell.

“Has it gotten everything it wants? Evidently not. Have we offered to provide more? Absolutely,” NFL lead nego-tiator Jeff Pash said. “And is it a subject that we’re prepared to discuss? Absolutely.”

At the outset of talks, the NFL sought an additional $1 billion before splitting re-maining revenues with the players; the NFL already gets an immediate $1 billion for operating expenses under the old collective bargaining agreement.

The NFL Players Associa-tion, meanwhile, insists it wants full financial disclo-sure.

“Just to be absolutely clear, the information that was of-fered wasn’t what we asked for,” Smith said, “and, ac-cording to our investment bankers and advisers, they told us that information would be meaningless in de-termining whether to write an $800 million check to the National Football League” in each year of a new CBA.

“We have requested access to fully audited financial statements since May 2009,” Smith continued. “We be-lieve that is the appropriate information to analyze the league’s request to write a multibillion check to the owners.”

In a letter dated May 18, 2009 — a copy of which was obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press — Smith asked Goodell to “provide audited financial statements concerning the operations of the 32 clubs and the league.”

Smith attached a list of 10 categories of information he sought, including:

- total operating income;
- total operating expenses, such as player costs, team ex-penses, sales and marketing expenses, game expenses, salaries/payments to owners;

- profit from operations;
- net income;
- cash and investment as-sets.

In the letter, Smith noted the owners’ push to expand the regular season from 16 games to 18 as one reason “this information is critical in understanding the fair ‘cost/compensation’ model for players and teams.”

On his way into Wednes-day’s mediation session, Pash said the issue of financial transparency — a key sticking point in labor talks this week — “really should be behind us.”

“We’ve made more information available in the course of this negotiation than has ever been made available in decades of collective bargain-ing with the NFLPA,” Pash said. “Far more information. And we’ve offered to make even more information (available), including infor-mation that we do not dis-close to our own clubs.”

Pash didn’t reveal any specifics of the league’s offer and wouldn’t comment on the union’s response. But a person familiar with the ne-gotiations told the AP that the NFL offered to turn over five years of league-wide prof-itability data to the union — and that the offer was reject-ed.

Jefferson scores 34 as Jazz rally to beat Raptors

TORONTO — Al Jefferson scored 34 points, including a game-winning layup at the buzzer, and the Utah Jazz ral-lied from a 14-point deficit to beat Toronto 96-94 on Wednesday, extending their winning streak over the Rap-tors to 12 games.

C.J. Miles and Devin Harris each scored 23 points for Utah, which has not lost to the Raptors since a 98-86 defeat in Toronto on Dec. 22, 2004.

DeMar DeRozan scored 17 points and Sonny Weems had 16 as Toronto lost for the fifth time in six games.

Jose Calderon scored 14 points and Ed Davis had 12 for the Raptors.

The Jazz, who had lost nine of 11 entering the game, trailed 86-72 with 8:21 to play before turning it around behind 10 fourth quarter points from Miles, including back-to-back 3-pointers.

A jump shot by Weems put the Raptors up by 14 before consecutive baskets from Miles sparked the Utah come-back.

Toronto Raptors’ Leandro Barbosa, left, watches as Utah Jazz’s Devin Harris shoots during the second half of an NBA basket-ball game in Toronto on Wednesday. Utah’s Al Jefferson scored on a layup moments later, giving the Jazz a 96-94 win.

the Chicago Bulls pulled away in the fourth quarter to beat the Charlotte Bobcats 101-84 on Wednesday night, a victory dimmed by Carlos Boozer’s leg injury.

Korver had 12 points in the final period and Joakim Noah added 12 points and 13 re-bounds for the Bulls, who won for the 11th time in 13 games and expanded their hold on second place in the Eastern Conference to 2½ games over slumping Miami.

NETS 94, WARRIORS 90

NEWARK, N.J. — Brook Lopez had 26 points and 10 rebounds, and made two made free throws with 3.3 seconds left as the New Jersey Nets beat the Golden State Warriors 94-90 on Wednes-day night for their first three-game winning streak in two years.

Anthony Morrow added 22 points for the Nets, who were without All-Star point guard Deron Williams. Sasha Vu-jacic, who entered the game averaging 8.9 points on 39.7 percent shooting, was 7 of 16 from the field for 16 points, and Kris Humphries chipped in with 11.

CLIPPERS 108, CELTICS 103

BOSTON — Mo Williams scored 28 points and the Los Angeles Clippers withstood a late Boston surge to beat the Celtics 108-103 on Wednes-day night for their fourth straight win despite a mediocre performance by Blake Griffin.

The Clippers took their biggest lead 65-42 two min-utes into the third quarter. They still led 84-68 with 10:28 left in the game before the Celtics went on a 15-2 run that closed the gap to 86-83 on a jumper by Kevin Garnett with 5:39 remaining.

HORNETS 93, MAVERICKS 92

NEW ORLEANS — Jarrett Jack scored 21 points, hitting three free throws to com-plete an unlikely 8-0 run in-side the final 1:13, and the New Orleans Hornets edged the Dallas Mavericks 93-92 on Wednesday night.

The Hornets trailed 92-85 when Dirk Nowitzki made a technical free throw, then Marco Belinelli hit a 3 and Emeka Okafor put back Be-linelli’s missed reverse layup.

BUCKS 110, CAVALIERS 90

MILWAUKEE — Brandon Jennings and Earl Boykins each scored 18 points to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to a 110-90 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers on Wednesday night.

Boykins had all of his points in the first half, then Jennings scored 14 in the third quarter as Milwaukee enjoyed its second blowout in two days, thanks to 55.1 percent shooting.

TIMBERWOLVES 101, PACERS 75

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin

Love recorded his 52nd dou-ble-double in a row to sur-pass Moses Malone for the longest such streak since the ABA and NBA merged in 1976 in the Minnesota Tim-berwolves’ 101-75 over the free-falling Indiana Pacers on Wednesday night.

Love overcame a bruised left knee to put up 16 points and 21 rebounds in just 27 minutes to help the Timber-wolves win for just the 16th time this season. Love didn’t waste any time extending the streak, reaching double figures in points and re-bounds with just under sev-en minutes to play in the first half.

KNICKS 110, GRIZZLIES 108

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Carmelo Anthony made a 16-footer with less than a second left as the New York Knicks withstood a late Memphis rally and beat the Grizzlies 110-108 on Wednesday night.

The winning shot by An-thony, who finished with 31 points, came over Tony Allen after Zach Randolph’s three-point play with 14 seconds remaining pulled Memphis even at 108.

SPURS 111, PISTONS 104

SAN ANTONIO — Tony Parker scored 23 points and the San Antonio Spurs bounced back from a hum-bling loss by beating the De-troit Pistons 111-104 on Wednesday night.

Tim Duncan, who matched a career low with two points in a blowout loss to the Los Angeles Lakers on Sunday, finished with 15 points and 12 rebounds in 31 minutes.

Richard Hamilton led the Pistons with 20 points off the bench, while Tayshaun Prince added 16.

If NFL stops, ‘innocent bystanders’ to take hit

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press writer

Beyond the rich players and even wealthier team owners arguing over how to divvy up $9 billion in revenue a year, the people who would suffer most if there’s no NFL season this year are those whose jobs, businesses and even charity work depend on games.

It’s the 2,500 ticket-takers, janitors and other game-day employees at the Superdome in New Orleans, and the sub-urban dry cleaner who wash-es all their uniforms.

It’s the receptionists and accountants for the New York Jets, and the high school band booster club that sells burgers and beer at Carolina Panthers games.

It’s the Episcopal church that sells parking spots for Tennessee Titans games, the hotel across the street from the stadium in Houston and the ticket broker who opened a store facing Cowboys Sta-dium.

And on and on it goes, across the communities of all 32 teams.

“It’s like an earthquake — there’s a ripple effect out to other people, other parts of the region,” said James J. Cochran, co-author of “An Event Study of the Economic Impact of Professional Sport Franchises on Local U.S. Economies” and an associate professor in economics at Louisiana Tech.

The NFL and the players union are talking with a fed-eral mediator to work out a new collective bargaining agreement. If they don’t have a deal by Friday afternoon, the owners could lock out the players or the NFLPA might decertify and take its fight to court. Either scenario would put the NFL on a path that might wipe out some or all the upcoming season.

two teams played close. CSI lost six of those and eight overall, but the Golden Ea-gles have what they feel is a much improved squad this time around. CSI coach Boomer Walker went so far as to say the conference may never again see the kind of talent on one squad that Southern Nevada had in 2010.

That, in and of itself, gives CSI confidence even though it travels to a venue in which it hasn’t so much as earned a split since 2005. But that confidence is what could set this Golden Eagles team apart from those of the last few years.

Where past CSI teams hoped to do well in Hender-son, and might feel some level of trepidation facing a Coyote squad that was just swept in its season-opening series at high-flying Salt Lake, this flock of Golden Eagles expects to win and is poised to pounce on a per-ceived weakness.

“It’s just different this year. We’ve got a lot of drive and hunger, and we don’t get frustrated,” said sophomore pitcher Tyler Vavra. “We’ve got some re-ally talented freshmen and a lot of experience that helps us settle down. We can score runs early, and I know we can come from behind even though we haven’t really had to that much. We want to go down there, score some early runs and jump on them right away.”

If it can do that, even with 32 games to go CSI will have gone a long way in shrugging off the “pre-tender” status it’s worn the last few seasons and prove itself as a legitimate SWAC contender.

CSI BASEBALL ON DECK

This weekend: CSI visits the College of Southern Nevada for a four-game set in Henderson, Nev., on the second weekend of Scenic West Athletic Conference play. Game 1 starts at 5 p.m. MDT Friday, three hours later than the conventional start time.

CSI last week: The Golden Eagles (10-4, 4-0 SWAC) took a four-game conference-opening sweep at Eastern Utah (9-1, 13-1, 9-2, 8-1) in Price, Utah.

CSN last week: The Coyotes (11-9, 0-4) were swept by Salt Lake in their season-opening series in West Jordan, Utah (2-0, 9-2, 3-1, 2-0).

Last meeting: Southern Nevada beat CSI 9-2 in the Region 18 Tournament May 13, 2010, in Henderson, Nev.

CSI coach Boomer Walker says: “We know they aren’t going to be as talented as they were last year, so that gives us some confidence right there. But their pitching staff is capable of being dominant, and we might have more conference experience but they’ve got the same amount of college experience. I think our difference is with our bats, and hopefully we can jump out to an early lead like we did last week.”

Injury report: Outfielder/designated hitter Tyler McCarty (torn labrum) is out for the season.

Up next: CSI hosts Western Nevada next weekend for a four-game series.

CSI season leaders (minimums apply)

Batting — Average: Ben Douglas .436 (leads SWAC). Hits: Parker Morin 21. 2B: Morin 6 (co-leads SWAC), Douglas 5. 3B: Parker Webster 4 (leads SWAC), Morin 3. HR: Four with one. RBI: Webster, Chase Harris 11. Runs: Webster 16. BB: Douglas 11. SB: Harris 5.

preparation time.

“I’m really happy. I thought our guys, after having the last two months of playing the same teams over and over again and getting good at guarding their stuff, did a good job of picking up something new,” he said.

The win demonstrated some-thing Gosar hopes will help his team in its quest for the program’s first national champi-onship since 1987.

“I love our guys, I love our ef-fort,” said the third-year head coach. “I know I’m going to get a whale of a game every time the ball goes up.”

CSI will travel to Laramie, Wyo., on Friday and practice there before heading to Denver on Saturday. The Eagles plan to ar-rive in Hutchinson on Sunday.

They open tournament play at noon (MDT) Wednesday, facing Redlands (Okla.) Community College in the final game of the first round. Being slotted in that spot means playing four games in four days if CSI hopes to win the title. That less-than-ideal spot in the bracket means the Eagles will lean on all available players.

“We’re going to really need our bench, we’re going to really need our depth,” said Gosar.

Sophomore guard Pierre Jack-son, the Scenic West Athletic Conference Player of the Year, said the secret to making a run in Hutch is no secret at all.

“Same old, same old,” he said. “We’ve just got to come as a team, play sticky defense, stay together and fight through ad-versity.”

If CSI beats Redlands on Wednesday, it’ll face either Talla-hassee (Fla.) Community College or Cape Fear (N.C.) Community College at 6:30 p.m. (MDT) next Thursday. A first-round loss would drop the Eagles to conso-lation play.

But the latter isn’t part of CSI’s plans.

“We’re going to Hutch,” said Gosar. “We’re excited and we’re pumped.”

Woods' playing schedule limited by time with kids

The Associated Press

DORAL, Fla. — Tiger Woods is hitting some of his best shots when no one is watching.

That's typically the case when Woods tries to build a new golf swing, and his third major swing change is no exception. Put him on the practice range at home in Isleworth and he says he goes through long stretches of hitting the ball how he wants. Put him inside the ropes, with a scorecard in hand and TV cameras in the towers, and he has stretches of looking ordinary.

But there is one big difference this time around.

Woods isn't playing very much.

When he tees it up Thursday in the Cadillac Championship at Doral, it will be only his 10th competitive round of the year, an unusually low number with the Masters around the corner. Woods talks about needing more competition, and most would agree that would speed along the process of revamping his swing. It also leads to a natural question.

Why not play more tournaments?

"Because I have a family. I'm divorced," Woods replied solemnly. "If you've been divorced with kids, then you would understand."

It spoke to a personal life that remains as much a work in progress as his golf swing.

There was speculation after Woods lost in the first round of the Match Play Championship that he would play the Honda Classic, especially since he is close to moving to south Florida. But that was his time with his 3½-year-old daughter and 1-year-old son as part of the "shared parenting" with ex-wife Elin. There are no plans to play next week at Innisbrook, either.

Woods can't expect any sympathy for a situation he created through serial adultery. Even so, his playing schedule reflects that he's having to change more than his swing.

When he went through his first big overhaul under Butch Harmon after the 1997 season, Woods played 17 rounds before the Florida swing. At the start of 2004 under Hank Haney, he played 22 rounds leading to Florida, the traditional start of the road to the Masters.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Dyspepsy is the ruin of most things: empires, expeditions, and everything else.”
— Thomas de Quincey

Both the defenders and declarers at the Dyspeptics Club are constantly under the scrutiny of their colleagues. The kibitzers tend to believe that it is better to comment and misanalyze than stay silent and be thought a fool.

On today’s deal the kibitzer commented afterwards that a good opportunity had gone begging. Was he right — and if so, what was the chance?

Against three no-trump West led his fourth-highest heart to East’s ace. South followed low, put in the heart 10 on the second round, and West took his queen and cleared the suit. South won in hand, crossed to the club king to take the diamond finesse, then took his extra chance of finding the spade queen doubleton to create an entry to dummy. When that didn’t work, declarer’s one remaining chance was to drop the diamond king. No luck — and declarer finished up with just seven tricks.

Let’s replay the deal on the lead of the heart six. When East follows with the ace, the rule of 11 shows South that West has all the top hearts. Whether hearts are 4-3 or 5-2, declarer cannot win more than one heart trick.

But that is not the full story. To create an extra entry to dummy, declarer drops his heart king under the ace! Now South can reach the North hand one more time by making best use of dummy’s heart jack to repeat the diamond finesse and bring home his game.

ANSWER: This auction suggests five clubs, four diamonds and some extras (though not so much as a classic reverse) since your partner has forced you to give preference at an inconvenient level. Because West did not raised heart, your partner looks to be short in spades and thus your two hands fit very well. So bid what you think you can make -- five clubs.

DEAR ABBY: I’m responding to the letter from “Craving the Cakes in Florida” (Jan. 30), complaining that her sister-in-law wouldn’t reveal the secret ingredient in a late relative’s pancake recipe. As a cook who has many of my own kitchen secrets, I’d be upset if one of my family members were to reveal them to anyone I didn’t authorize. A promise is a promise, and it should never be broken!

Believe it or not, recipes are intellectual property. How presumptuous for “Craving” to expect her in-law to divulge a secret from the family’s tradition. She should enjoy the meal when she’s at her sister-in-law’s, and work on developing her own mystery dish.

— STAYING MUM IN CHARLESTON, S.C.

DEAR STAYING MUM: Many readers agreed with you about the importance of keeping a promise. Some of them also were sure they knew the secret ingredient that made the cakes so memorable: buttermilk, ricotta cheese, nutmeg, vanilla extract, Irish Cream, Kahlua, lemon juice, oatmeal, yogurt, cinnamon, malted milk, cornmeal, sour cream and cardamom. (This is making me hungry!)

Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I obtained a recipe upon the death of an aunt who wouldn’t share it until she passed away. I did not think she was selfish. I fondly remember her serving these cookies the few times a year we saw her. I bake them for special occasions — holidays, birthdays, graduations, etc. — and mail them to family and friends out of state. The treats are special and everyone looks forward to receiving them. If everyone had the recipe, it would lose its distinction. When I am no longer able to bake them, I will happily pass the recipe on to a relative to continue the tradition.

— BETH IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR ABBY: I was taught a promise is sacred. Do you really think the in-law should sacrifice her honor over a pancake recipe? They may be delicious, but breaking my word would leave a bitter taste in my mouth.

— PROMISE KEEPER IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: A friend gave me a cinnamon bun recipe that had been in his family for as long as anyone could remember. About 15 years ago, his house caught fire and he lost most of his possessions, including that recipe. His siblings had misplaced it and the only person to have it was me.

Sometimes it’s good to share something, if only with one other person. That way, treasures aren’t lost forever.

— LISA IN RENO

DEAR ABBY: Because the relative had shared the recipe with “Craving’s” sister-in-law, technically it was no longer a secret. If it was to be kept a secret, then shouldn’t the relative have told no one? I feel the in-law is free to share the secret with a clear conscience. I’d like to know what it is, too!

— FOODIE IN TENNESSEE

DEAR ABBY: I think I know the ingredient in the hot cakes recipe. My daughter was co-owner of a small restaurant. Everyone begged for the secret of the waffles there. It was bacon grease in the batter. Not healthy — but delicious.

— MARGARET IN WHITTIER, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I have been cooking for about 50 years. You can bet your boots the mystery ingredient is beer. That’s how my daddy made them. Use it instead of water for really light pancakes.

— PATRICIA IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I’ll bet the secret is the same as my family’s: substitute half the regular boxed pancake mixture for ordinary white cake mix. Breakfast on our camping trips is always terrific with these fluffy treats.

IF MARCH 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This month, you would love a chance to just sit and dream and let your fantasies take control, but your savvy business sense won't let you do anything that will harm your financial future. Ignore the prodding of a new playmate and stick to business as usual until May. In May, a combination of lucky happenstance and glowing reviews from a past employer or partner, can give you the ammunition you need to rise higher in your chosen field. Amorous adventures can have a fairy tale ending because you are more likely to attract someone who has commitment in mind. In June, you could be distracted by a wild goose chase, so wait until July to reappraise a situation or idea.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't stoop to another's dirty tactics. Someone may try to get your goat. Be the bigger person and instead of retaliating, simply ignore it and move on. That'll really take the wind out of their sails.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Business and pleasure don't mix. Keep your dealings professional and pay careful mind to use etiquette and your best manners. The casual approach just won't cut it under these someone judgmental stars.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): There's a light at the end of the tunnel. Keep your ears open. Gather advice from others and put it to good use. Friends may have a more objective opinion and will provide a whole new way of looking at the situation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If success were easy, everyone would be successful. There's no shortcut to help you achieve your goals other than hard work. Things may seem far from glamorous but in the long run you'll reap the rewards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take charge of the situation. When others are twiddling their thumbs trying to think of what to do next, you can spring into action. You understand the objective better than anyone so guide others along the way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't stray from the beaten path. You may have second thoughts on whether your chosen course of action is really for the best. You've come this far and it would be counterproductive to turn back now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can't run before you learn to walk. Peers may try to push you into taking on extra responsibilities. Though they may mean well, you either don't want to handle, or can't handle, a new complication.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Too much of anything can get boring. Your need to indulge yourself has been amply fulfilling and rewarding, but moderation serves you best now. If you open up to a special someone you will find a receptive audience.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down. A positive attitude and some good cheer can go a long way toward curing the blues. Don't let minor annoyances get to you. Shrug off the little things and smile.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The only thing to fear is fear itself. Don't let doubts undermine your progress today. You need confidence to accomplish your goals — so for better or worse lower your shoulder and plow ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be the conductor of your own symphony of love. A certain someone may have been dreaming of you all week. Tonight might be the right time to make beautiful music with a harmonious playmate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't sweat the small stuff. You may find yourself flying off the handle at the most trivial things. You need total peace and quiet to get your job done. Make your own personal space and stay there until your task is complete.
