Medicaid cuts pass House

Idaho lawmakers pass reform bill, 56-14

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho House voted 56-14 to cut $34 million from state funding for Medicaid in 2012, with all but one Republican supporting the measure and Democratic lawmakers calling it “tunnel-vision budgeting at its worst.”

Thursday’s bill cuts a total of $108 million from the program, due to lost federal matching funds.

It now goes to the Senate.

Rep. Janice McGeachin said these cuts will help preserve money for public education programs that are also going under the budget knife amid lackluster tax revenues and an anemic economy.

McGeachin highlighted how public input was sought to improve the bill and make changes.

House Minority Leader John Rusche, a Lewiston doctor, argued the bill is “the worst tunnel vision budgeting.” He said ignoring the needs of Medicaid recipients won’t make them vanish.

At a glance

A bill to reform Idaho’s Medicaid system and reduce state and associated federal spending is working its way through the Legislature.

Where it started: A bill, later slightly modified to include 21 cuts to save $34.3 million in Medicaid spending, was introduced on March 2 in the House Health and Welfare Committee.

Where it stands: The Idaho House voted 56-14 Thursday to pass the bill, with Rep. Tom Trail, R-Moscow, joining Democrats in opposition.

What’s next: The legislation advances to the Senate.

Twin Falls city and county officials take a tour through the St. Luke’s Clinic on Shoshone Street Thursday. The downtown Twin Falls building will revert back to county control when St. Luke’s moves its clinic, and could offer a wealth of office space for interested tenants.

City, school district look for potential use

Travis Rothweiler, assistant city manager of Twin Falls, was “shell shocked” walking through the downtown St. Luke’s clinic during part of a Thursday tour to elicit interest from potential tenants.

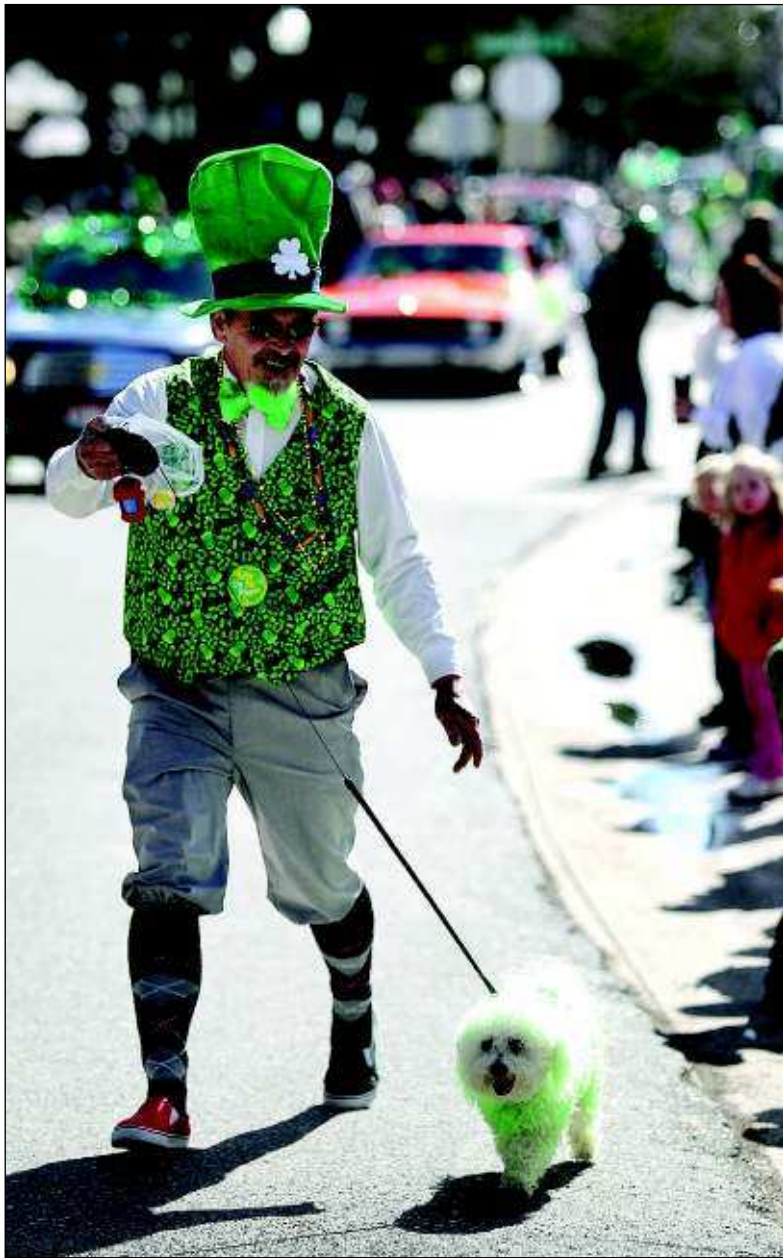

“It’s big. It’s 87,000 square feet. Big,” Rothweiler said after the tour with city staff, councilmen, Twin Falls School District leaders and other officials. “It’s going to take considerable thought to see how (the city) would even use a space this big.”

Twin Falls County is trying to find potential tenants for the building, which will lose a good number of the bodies filling it after St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center moves to its new complex in May. Aside from St. Luke’s, some county services also call the building home. The tour took interested parties through the basement, the boiler room, the kitchen and everywhere else as local officials sized up the space.

Otter signs ed reform bills

The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter signed a law Thursday to phase out tenure for new teachers and restrict collective bargaining in Idaho.

The Republican governor also signed off on legislation to introduce teacher merit pay. Otter said the two bills, which were fought by the statewide teachers union, have been “a long time coming” and would improve the ability of public schools to fulfill their mission of educating Idaho’s children.

Otter said he remains committed to working with lawmakers on a third piece of a plan authored by public schools chief Tom Luna to overhaul Idaho’s education system.

“Our work is not done,” Otter said in a statement.

Supporters of the law to limit the statewide teachers union contend it will give more power to Idaho’s locally elected school boards when it comes to labor relations. But opponents argue it’s a mean-spirited move to dismantle the union and gut collective bargaining

Decision made on water call

Supreme Court rules on first of three water cases

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

The Idaho Supreme Court weighed in Thursday on a major Magic Valley water debate, representing a milestone in efforts to manage surface and groundwater in the region.

The decision addressed issues surrounding a 2005 water call made on groundwater pumpers across the Magic Valley by Clear Springs Foods and Blue Lakes Trout Farm, both fish producers relying on Snake River Canyon springs.

The long-awaited decision should clarify questions surrounding Idaho’s system for managing the precious state resource. It also effectively represents the final word, ending the case’s main chain of appeals.

In a water call under Idaho’s “first in time, first in right” system, a water user with higher-priority rights asserts that a lower-priority user has infringed on its water use and must make reparations. On a large scale, such matters greatly affect the cost and availability of water for farmers, businesses and cities.

In 2008, former Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Dave Tuthill ruled on how many of the fish farms’ water rights the state would consider injured.

Both sides appealed the ruling to district court, where 5th District Judge John Melanson — now on the Idaho Court of Appeals — concluded Tuthill mishandled two aspects of the case, but otherwise upheld the director’s conclusions.

Meanwhile, the harm done to the water rights and lack of a remedy led the state to briefly shut off about 250 groundwater users’ wells in August 2009.

Melanson’s decision was again appealed up to the Supreme Court, with seven specific issues laid out for the court’s review. Thursday, the justices unanimously upheld Melanson’s ruling regarding all seven items.

Among their conclusions:

- IDWR cannot deny a water call just because it would create “substantial economic harm.”

WHOSE WATER?

Thursday’s Idaho Supreme Court decision was a long-awaited step in a water struggle dating back to 2005.

What it’s about: Clear Springs Foods and Blue Lakes Trout Farm say groundwater pumpers have taken water that should have spilled out the side of the Snake River Canyon as part of their water rights.

What’s new: The Supreme Court upheld a 5th District judge’s handling of appeals of the water call, further clarifying aspects of Idaho water law.

The bigger picture: This is one of three such large water calls in the Magic Valley, made against a backdrop of a declining aquifer, declining spring flows and growing demand for water.

House panel kills public records bill

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — The House Commerce and Human Resources Committee killed Thursday with a 6-3 vote a bill that would have required 114 non-government organizations to comply with the Idaho Public Records Law because of their participation in the state's pension plan.

Backers of the bill, including Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, made the argument that because those organizations' employees get the benefit of the Public Employee Retirement System of Idaho, the public deserves some transparency from them.

"The rationale is that PERSI is a privilege," Hartgen said in his presentation. "...The entities that are doing that, they're getting a good benefit."

Had the bill passed, the list of organizations that would have needed to comply is varied. It includes the Idaho Education Association, the Idaho Dairy Council, the Idaho Public Employees Association, the Idaho School Boards

Association, and canal companies, among others.

But Sherri Wood, president of the IEA, spoke against the measure, saying it goes against the grain of the public records law to include private organizations.

"It's inconsistent with the purpose of the act," she said, stressing that taxpayer dollars don't aid the IEA employees' pensions.

The IEA, involved with PERSI since 1965, participates because administrators coming from school districts to the organization wanted to keep their retirement program, Wood said.

Rep. Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot, was among those opposed, saying the bill could have unintended consequences, and that the connection with PERSI was too thin to open the groups up to public records laws.

Supporters, including Rep. Erik Simpson, R-Idaho Falls, spoke of the need for transparency.

"I think given the public's distrust of government right now, and the request for more transparency, I can support this," Simpson said.

ABOUT THE BILLS

- Senate Bills 1108 and 1110, have passed through the Legislature and were signed by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on Thursday. One adds a merit-based pay system for teachers, eliminating tenure, and the other revamps how teacher contracts and labor negotiations play out. The bills have become law, but the changes have yet to unfold in local districts. For example, teacher evaluations won't be based on student achievement until after June 30, 2012.
 - Senate Bill 1113 would add more classroom technology but eliminate 770 teaching positions, while increasing the student-teacher ratio.
- What's next: Legislators are preparing a new version of the bill, which will be introduced today in the Senate Education Committee.

— Ben Botkin

rights teachers have held for decades. The law allows the union to only negotiate salaries and benefits, not work rules like breaks and other policies.

The biggest piece of the plan, which calls for boosting technology in the classroom, remains in the Idaho Senate. It has undergone significant changes amid concerns over provisions in the bill that would increase class sizes and force the state to cut about 770 teaching jobs to pay for the education reforms, including the pay-for-performance plan.

Lawmakers plan to introduce the revamped legislation today.

Under the merit pay plan, Idaho will award bonuses to teachers who raise student achievement and take on hard-to-fill positions or leadership roles. The merit pay plan carries a $38 million price tag in the 2013 fiscal year, rising to $51.3 million in the 2014 fiscal year.

Lawmakers who opposed the bill called it an "unfunded mandate" because the funding piece remains part of the third bill in the Senate.

2 teens charged in Kimberly break-in

Times-News

Two Burley teens are charged with felonies for allegedly breaking into Kimberly businesses in December.

Jesus Contreras, 18, and Christian Tate Winnill, 19, were arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court this week, joining two other co-defendants. According to the police report, six young men are suspected of breaking the storefront windows of Quickdraw Embroidery & Screen-printing and Tianna's Coffee House in Kimberly during a Dec. 5 attempt to steal cash registers and other small appliances.

Police detained two of the six suspects during a foot chase near Windsor's Greenhouse and Nurseries: Zane Bud Harman, 19, of Burley, and Enrique Vidal Gonzales, 19, of Twin Falls. Harman is awaiting an April 12 hearing in magistrate court for trespassing, malicious injury to property and resisting officers. Gonzales' charges of trespassing, malicious injury to property and unlawful entry were dismissed, but he is scheduled for sentencing for resisting officers on March 29.

Contreras is charged with felony malicious injury to property, while Winnill faces two charges of malicious injury to property — one felony and one misdemeanor. Both are slated for March 25 preliminary hearings.

Ranger District will get new Burley building

Forest Service plans September move

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Sawtooth National Forest's Minidoka Ranger District will have a new home in Burley by September.

Additional square footage will reduce the district's current space concerns, but will cost the forest's caretakers $100,000 more per year than they currently pay for their Overland Avenue office.

"This building was never meant to house as many employees as we've got," said Ranger Scott Nannenga. "We have employees stuck in places that were never intended to be offices."

The district's new offices and warehouse will be located south of the First Baptist Church on Hiland Avenue. The property is owned by Jim Read, of Ring Enterprises in Preston, and was annexed into the city Tuesday. Read's company will pay for the building's construction, including costs in the lease.

The current Ranger District office has been located at 3650 Overland Ave. for 18 years.

LAURIE WELCH/Times-News

Scott Nannenga, ranger for the Sawtooth National Forest Minidoka Ranger District, looks over plans Thursday for the planned district office that will be on Hiland Avenue in Burley.

Nannenga said at one time there were six ranger districts in the area, but they have been progressively consolidated due to budgetary constraints. The last consolidation was in 2002, when the Twin Falls and Burley districts melded, creating the Burley-based Minidoka Ranger District. Full-time staff in the building went from 15 to 30 employees.

"We have people stacked on top of people," Nannenga said.

The 10-year lease for the district's new 9,000 square-foot office and 3,000 square-foot warehouse will cost $179,000 yearly, Nannenga said, up from the district's current $79,000 yearly lease.

"But you have to understand that was a lease that was negotiated 18 years ago," Nannenga said of the cost increase.

The new office will include two conference rooms and grouped work spaces for different departments, while the warehouse will have two large bays and room for the fire cache that includes sleeping bags and packs for fire crews.

The new site will also more than double the district's parking space.

Nannenga said district officials plan to be in the new building by Sept. 1, and will have to accomplish the move during fire season.

"We'll make it work," Nannenga said. "I'm really excited. We're ready for a new space."

Yellowstone bison get more room to roam in Montana

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Montana officials are pushing ahead with a plan to let Yellowstone National Park bison roam more freely within a sprawling river basin formerly off limits to the disease-carrying animals because of livestock industry concerns.

The move is aimed at ending a dispute on Yellowstone bison that has resulted in almost 4,000 of the animals being hauled to slaughter since 2000. It will allow at least some of the animals to carry out their natural migration to lower elevations outside the park during harsh winters.

Bison will be allowed within the Gardiner Basin, which straddles the Yellowstone River and stretches roughly 13 miles north of the park, a top aide to Gov. Brian Schweitzer said Thursday.

Bison that go any farther — entering the Paradise Valley south of Livingston — would be shot by state officials, said Mike Volesky, the Democratic governor's natural resources adviser. He also said that if too many of the animals crowd into the basin they could be hazed back into the park.

"This doesn't mean they turn open the gates and let a bunch of bison loose," Volesky said. "It's a limited amount (of habitat) and how many bison can be there will be dictated by how much grass there is and the snow-pack."

But a Republican lawmaker said Thursday that the Schweitzer administration was letting "a creeping cancer" into Montana by opening new areas to bison.

"You can't have free roaming buffalo in a society like we have today, it doesn't work," said Sen. John Brenden, a Republican from Scobey, who has a measure pending in the Montana Legislature to largely prohibit free-ranging bison across the state.

Water

- The spring users' water right amounts are already set and they do not need to prove they could "produce more fish and profitably sell them" if their rights were restored.
- Tuthill acted appropriately in creating a 10 percent margin of error when deciding what pumpers would have wells shut off, instead of requiring even greater closures.

Various water users affected by the decision were still learning about it Thursday or could not be reached for comment. But Randy MacMillan with Clear Springs Foods said the ruling provides needed clarity as water users work to resolve the larger issues facing the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer — whether through more litigation or, as MacMillan hopes, cooperative solutions.

And questions remain.

Macmillan noted that a question about whether Tuthill's allowed margin of error inappropriately put the burden of proof on the senior user was not addressed, as the justices decided it hadn't been properly raised in front of Melanson.

"So that's an issue that's still out there," MacMillan said.

The Supreme Court has yet to weigh in on two other Magic Valley water calls, one by a group of canal companies and irrigation districts known as the Surface Water Coalition and one by the A&B Irrigation District in Rupert.

Separately, interim IDWR Director Gary Spackman announced last summer that the pumpers will have to make up injuries to additional Clear Springs and Blue Lakes Trout water rights.

Clinic

Twin Falls County Commission Chairman George Urie said the county is exploring all options for potential tenants. But the next step is just waiting to see if there's enough interest for further talks, he said. He and others stressed that the tour was just a preliminary part of any talks.

Retiring Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney has been kicking around the idea of moving City Hall functions — finance, human resources, utilities, planning and zoning and so on — into the clinic building when St. Luke's leaves, and turning over the current City Hall to the police department and fire department.

Councilman Greg Lanting, one of two councilmen at the tour, even joked that one of the rooms already looked like the engineering department.

Rothweiler, who will replace Courtney at the beginning of April, noted the benefits of consolidating city services in a single building, but emphasized that cash will determine the final outcome.

"When you're in a state of declining revenue, it's hard to convince the public to build Taj Mahal," he said.

Idaho National Lab experience prefigured today's Japan tragedy

It's safe to say that, without the Idaho National Laboratory, those Japanese nuclear reactors on the verge of melting down wouldn't be what they are.

It was a boiling-water reactor — BORAX, in INL-speak — that generated the first commercial nuclear power in history, lighting up the city of Arco on the night of July 17, 1955.

It was a boiling-water reactor at INL — SL1 — that exploded and melted down in 1961, killing three people.

And in a harbinger of things to come, the first BORAX reactor was intentionally destroyed in 1954 to determine whether it was safe under extreme conditions. That experience raised some eyebrows in the nuclear energy community.

In a boiling-water reactor, heat is produced by nuclear fission in the reactor core, and this causes the cooling water to boil, producing steam. The steam is used to drive a turbine, after which it is cooled in a condenser and converted back to liquid water. This water is then returned to the reactor core, completing the loop.

That's opposed to the pressurized-water reactor, the most common type in the world. Water is pumped under high pressure to the reactor core, where it's heated by energy generated by the fission of atoms. The heated water then flows to a steam generator, where it transfers its thermal energy to a secondary system. In that system, steam is generated and flows to turbines which, in turn, spin an electric generator.

In contrast to a boiling-water reactor, pressure in the primary coolant loop prevents the water from boiling within the reactor.

In pressurized-water reactors, the containment vessel is sealed inside a thick steel-and-cement tomb — making it safer.

Nuclear safety experts have worried for years that the boiling-water reactors developed and sold by General Electric don't have robust enough containment vessels to handle the overheating of the fuel rods inside, causing radiation to spill into the environment. That's exactly what's happening in Japan.

There are 35 GE boiling-water reactors in operation in the U.S., 31 of which are early Mark 1 or Mark 2 designs of the kind used in Japan. The closest is the Columbia Generating Station in southeastern Washington.

Five BORAX reactors were built at INL between 1953 and 1964, proving that boiling-water reactors were practical and that rapid conversion of steam to water would safely control the reaction.

But the deliberate destruction of the first BORAX proved eye-opening for scientists. It produced an energy surge that, instead of melting a few fuel plates, destroyed a major part of the core.

History repeats, 57 years and 8,500 miles away.

Xavier principal will face hearing on future at school

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Xavier Charter School Principal Cindy Fulcher's future with the Twin Falls school will be decided behind closed doors.

Xavier Board Chairwoman Teresa Berry said Fulcher will face a future termination hearing. Fulcher has been on paid administrative leave since August, and in October filed a lawsuit against the school's board of trustees in an attempt to keep her job.

In a brief Saturday meeting, Xavier's board approved a settlement with Fulcher, one day after her lawsuit was dismissed in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

In an e-mail to the Times-News, Fulcher said her demand to have a panel independent of Xavier's board decide her fate at the school has not changed with the settlement. In November, 5th District Judge John Butler agreed with lawyers from both Fulcher and Xavier to form a three-member panel to weigh in on Fulcher's future.

With the lawsuit's dismissal, details of the panel's decision will stay outside the public eye, though Xavier's board will have to vote in a public meeting to change Fulcher's employment status.

Berry declined to comment on whether the process to pick the panel has changed or any other details of the settlement. Lawyers for Xavier could not be reached this week.

In her e-mail, Fulcher stated that after the hearing is over, she will not hold any claims against the school board, stating that she doesn't want to "encumber the school financially."

"A hearing will be held concerning the allegations that the board is claiming and my contract will be decided upon by a three member panel. These three members are persons not associated with Xavier, and are educational professionals. At this time, a date has not been set," Fulcher wrote. "Additionally, a sub-committee will decide my future contract rights with XCS instead of being decided by the entire board. I hope for Xavier, the children, and the parents that all matters will be decided in a fair process."

Arsenic levels stable in Filer city wells

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Water system arsenic testing numbers remain at acceptable health levels in Filer.

January tests showed that city wells are below the maximum contaminant level of 10 parts per billion allowed by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Filer City Council learned Tuesday.

Filer Maintenance Director Bud Compher said that samples taken from each of the city's seven wells throughout 2010 ranged from a high of 20.2 parts per billion to a low of 7.07 ppb. So far this year, the high is 9.8

ppb and the low is 8.4 ppb.

"High numbers can happen when a well gets heavy use and you draw water from deeper in the rock, he said. "The wells that tend to show higher levels are basically shut down and only used in emergencies."

One of the changes that city officials hope will keep arsenic under control is no longer requiring that individual water samples from each well be tested. This approach is being replaced by mixed well samples taken from the city's two water tanks.

"The EPA said as long as we can keep that average under 10 parts per billion and watch our spikes, which are common, there shouldn't be a problem," Filer Mayor Bob Templeman said. "Something we can look into here is maybe using our Twin Falls Canal Company (shares) as much as possible this summer and watching our every-other-day watering."

In other action, work has begun to upgrade the city's sewer collection system. Rather than dig up deteriorated pipe, a trenchless technology called cured-in-place pipe is being utilized. With the help of robotics, the interior of old lines are simply coated and sealed with a fiberglass resin.

"This stuff feels like felt but it's pushed through and heated to about 250 degrees," said Rob Hegstrom with J-U-B Engineers.

"Next week, we are planning to hold a demonstration here for other wastewater operators from Burley, Rupert, Albion and other areas to see the process."

The demonstration of the CIPP process will begin at 8:30 a.m. Thursday in Filer and include a detailed discussion at the J-U-B office in Twin Falls.

Water deposit questioned in Buhl

Sunday liquor sales still await final vote

By Kimberly Williams-Brckett
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Citizens voiced their concern about deposits for water service at Monday's Buhl City Council meeting.

Business owners said the $250 deposit, which is the same for commercial users as for residential users, is too high compared to other Magic Valley locations. Speakers included Tom and Jennifer Nelson of Hagerman, who recently opened a business in Buhl, and other local business owners such as Mary Davison.

"The water bill itself is a tough bill to swallow," said Tom Nelson.

He said the deposit is a deterrent to new business in this city. He also said he felt Buhl enables people to get further in debt by not turning off services until after two full months behind on the bill.

Councilman Regie Finney argued Buhl has the cheapest water bill in the valley, with the base rate at $9.50 for usage up to 12,000 gallons per month.

After Nelson questioned the council for the need of a $250 deposit, Finney said, "It's how we recover the money." A large number of previous business owners were walking away without paying the bill and didn't leave a forwarding address, Finney explained.

"There are several business owners on the council, so we understand," said Council President Pam McClain.

Nelson and Davison further asked the council what the ratio of delinquency was, and requested a study about the fees.

The rate committee is working to find solutions with regard to the rates and deposit.

"We have a responsibility to the citizens of Buhl," said Councilman Kyle Hauser.

In other city business, McClain made a motion to approve the second reading of an ordinance that would allow the Sunday sale of liquor by the drink. The motion failed with the council's split vote.

Mayor Tom McCauley said the council will vote again after the third and final reading at the next regular April meeting.

Hauser reported they've been working on the grant to install equipment in the pocket park in the McCullum area, and said it should be in by the end of summer.

"It is going to be a very nice addition to our community," he said.

U.N. authorizes use of force against Libya

TOBRUK, Libya (AP) — The U.N. Security Council on Thursday authorized “all necessary measures” to stop Moammar Gadhafi in Libya — including strikes by sea and air — hours after he vowed in harrowing terms to launch a final assault and crush the weeks-old rebellion against him.

The resolution, approved with the backing of the United States, France and Britain, imposed a no-fly zone over Libya and authorized all measures short of a ground offensive to protect its people from Gadhafi's forces.

The U.N. resolution bans all flights in Libyan airspace in order to protect civilians. While it was unclear how the West might proceed, U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said earlier in the day that a no-fly zone would require bombing targets inside Libya, including some of its defense systems.

It was also unclear when any Western action would come. A British lawmaker said British forces could be mobilized as early as Thursday night. U.S. officials, speaking after a closed-door briefing in Congress, said they expected an attempt to ground Gadhafi's air force could begin by Sunday or Monday and would probably involve jet fighters, bombers and surveillance aircraft.

After deliberating for weeks over what to do about Gadhafi, the West acted with sudden speed as it became clear Gadhafi would attempt to finally put an end to the rebellion.

Gadhafi, calling in to Libyan television on Thursday, said his forces would “rescue” the people of Benghazi, the Mediterranean port city that has become the capital and staging ground for the opposition. For those who resist, Gadhafi said, there would be “no mercy or compassion.”

“This is your happy day, we will destroy your enemies,” he said, warning the people of Benghazi not to stand alongside the opposition. “Prepare for this moment to get rid of the traitors. Tomorrow we will show the world, to see if the city is one of traitors or heroes.”

“Don't betray me, my beloved Benghazi,” he said.

His ground forces were still about 80 miles south of the city on Thursday evening Libya time, so it was unclear whether they would move on the city as quickly as he suggested.

Speaking moments before in an interview with Portuguese television broadcast just before the vote at the U.N., Gadhafi pledged to respond harshly to U.N.-sponsored attacks. “If the world is crazy,” he said, “we will be crazy, too.”

At the U.N. headquarters in New York, the vote was 10-0. The United States, France and Britain had all pushed for speedy approval. “We had said all along that Gadhafi must go,” said British Foreign Secretary William Hague. “It is necessary to take these measures to avoid greater bloodshed.”

Five nations abstained, including Russia and China, which hold veto power on the council.

In Washington, officials said the Obama administration was readying plans to enforce the no-fly zone. The French prime minister said before the measure was passed that his nation would support military action within hours. Several Arab nations were expected to provide backup.

“Today the Security Council has responded to the Libyan people's cry for help,” said Susan Rice, the U.S. ambassador to the U.N.

House votes to cut off NPR funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Thursday voted to end federal funding to National Public Radio. Republican supporters said it made good fiscal sense, and Democratic opponents called it an ideological attack that would deprive local stations of access to programs such as “Car Talk” and “All Things Considered.”

The bill, passed 228-192 along mainly partisan lines, would bar federal funding of NPR and prohibit local public stations from using federal money to pay NPR dues and buy its programs. The prospects of support in the Democratic-controlled Senate are slim. Seven Republicans broke ranks to vote against the bill.

NPR received almost $5 million in federal funding in fiscal year 2010. In that year its revenues also included $2.8 million in dues and $63 million in programming fees from local stations, its largest single source of revenue. Under the bill, stations would still be allowed to buy NPR programs using private funds and use federal funds to provide their own programs.

“It is time for American citizens to stop funding an organization that can stand on its own feet,” said Rep. Doug Lamborn, R-Colo., the sponsor. He said it was not a question of content — which many conservatives say has a liberal bias — but whether taxpayer dollars should go to nonessential services. “As a country we no longer have this luxury.”

Other Republicans also denied that the measure was a vendetta against NPR, although the organization left itself open to conservative attacks last week when an executive, talking to conservative activists posing as members of a fake Muslim group, was caught on camera deriding the tea party movement and saying the NPR would be better off without federal funding. Both the executive and the president of NPR resigned after the incident.

“Nobody’s on a rampage,” said Majority Leader Eric

Cantor, R-Va., who also asked “why should we allow taxpayer dollars to be used to advocate one ideology?”

Democrats retorted that the legislation would do nothing to reduce the deficit and would be a blow to local public stations that rely on the national programs that include “Morning Edition” and “Wait, Wait... Don’t Tell Me” to attract listeners. “This bill would pull the plug,” said Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass. “It would snuff out stations from coast to coast, many in rural areas where the public radio station is the primary source of news and information.”

Rep. Anthony Weiner, D-N.Y., displayed a blow-up photo of the two brothers who host the car advice show “Car Talk” with the caption, referring to their nicknames, reading “Save Click and Clack.”

The White House said it “strongly opposed” the bill and voiced similar objections, saying “undercutting funding for these radio stations, notably ones in rural areas where such outlets are already scarce, would result in communities losing valuable programming, and some stations could be forced to shut down altogether.”

The move to curtail federal subsidies for NPR follows a House vote last month, as part of the GOP plan to cut federal spending for the remainder of this budget year, to take back some $86 million budgeted for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the parent organization of NPR.

QUOTE

“I don’t know any other way to say it, but this is like suicide fighters in a war.”
— Keiichi Nakagawa, associate professor of radiology at University of Tokyo Hospital, after Japan’s health ministry more than doubled the amount of radiation to which workers can be legally exposed

EDITORIAL

Jerome officials should think twice about a retrofit jail

A private-sector alternative for replacing the ramshackle Jerome County Jail emerged this week. While intriguing, former Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell’s proposal to transform the former Con Paulos auto dealership building into a 135-bed lockup has drawbacks.

The retrofit would be costly, and when it’s done the county would have a jail grafted onto a commercial building. It’s an older structure with the problems and inefficiencies inherent in buildings constructed in a different time.

“The design is not a good idea but it can be changed,” Lt. Robert Haas, jail facility administrator, said Monday.

In 2002, Twin Falls County commissioners considered and rejected a plan to transmute the former Norco windows factory in south Twin Falls into a 256-bed jail. The idea was for private investors to buy the building and lease it to the county for nearly $1 million a year for 30 years.

Neighbors objected, and the commissioners eventually concluded there were cheaper alternatives and that a factory wasn’t a good place to put a jail.

The Starr Corp. has approached the Jerome County Commission with a design-build option, and Gooding County commissioners continue to discuss the idea of a regional jail facility.

The latter would be the best solution.

For years, the counties of the western Magic Valley have talked about joining forces in building a regional jail, but could never agree on a site. Gooding County also needs a jail, and a two-county facility would be attractive — especially if it were large enough to house inmates from Twin Falls County, which would pay a daily rate per prisoner.

If the commissioners opt to try again to build a new jail — and the county’s voters have rejected three attempts to do that — we’d suggest a scaled-down version of the proposal that failed in the November election.

It called for a 165-bed stockade and sheriff’s office on 80 acres near the Jerome airport. That’s a better location than the old Con Paulos building on South Lincoln Street because it’s closer to U.S. Highway 93, which would mean faster response time to all areas of the county.

The existing 34-bed facility could be closed at any time if the county’s insurer balks at the liability, and Haas said Monday that in order to make room for felons the county has resorted to house-arrest for misdemeanors.

Whatever their decision, the commissioners are right to think outside the box about a new jail. But time is short.

Converting a building into a jail that wasn’t designed for that purpose will be problematic.

No more taxpayer funding for NPR

Honest — the column you are about to read does not argue that National Public Radio is programmed by Karl Marx. But as I watch NPR’s public-relations counterattack in the wake of the scandals of the past couple of weeks, I can’t help but think of that old Marxist strategy of “heightening the contradictions” of capitalism.

Faced with a serious move in Congress to eliminate their funding, NPR bosses are arguing that losing their taxpayer subsidy would mean the death of journalism, democracy and possibly the devolution of the entire human race. But without even taking a breath they add that federal funding is barely 2 percent of their budget. You don’t need IBM to tell you that those two statements don’t compute.

If just 2 percent of NPR’s money comes from the government, why not just tell Congress to take a flying leap at a rolling doughnut? Two percent, heck, you could make that up on doughnuts. Tens of millions of Americans have taken hits of more than 2 percent in this economy and lived to tell about it.

The answer: NPR gets a lot more than 2 percent of its budget from taxpayers — perhaps 20 times that. It’s completely a creature of government subsidies and cannot possibly survive in anything like its current form if Congress plucks public broadcasting from the federal teat. NPR’s real costs are hidden in a system of back-and-forth payments quaintly known along the Bogota-Miami axis as “money-laundering.”

Here’s how it works: Congress gives money to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which cuts off a small slice — the hallowed 2 percent — and hands it directly to NPR. The rest of the money goes out to public radio stations themselves, who then pay it back to NPR as programming fees. Other taxpayer money — from the Energy Department, state and local governments and state universities — also gets mixed into the pot.

In the end, something close to 40 percent of NPR’s budget has been extracted from taxpayers. And that doesn’t even include tax money spent on the operations of the radio stations themselves, without which there would be no audience for NPR programming. If NPR bosses look slightly twitchy when they talk about how insignificant their subsidies are, it’s probably because they’re glancing around for signs that the roof is about to fall in on them.

What has most of NPR’s congressional critics riled up is a series of scandals during the past few months that have laid bare the truth about the network’s steep leftward tilt. NPR doesn’t just disagree with Republicans, it loathes them. First the network fired commentator Juan Williams after he said (not even on NPR’s airwaves but on a Fox News show) that he feels nervous when he gets on an airplane and sees passengers dressed in Muslim garb. Not content to merely kick Williams off the air, NPR boss Vivian Schiller cracked to reporters that he needed to see a psychiatrist. (Oddly, when NPR reporter Nina Totenberg said during an appearance on PBS a few years ago that she hoped Jesse Helms got AIDS, she was neither fired nor told to see an exorcist.)

The furor over Williams’ dismissal hadn’t subsided when hidden cameras recorded NPR’s senior fundraiser in a meeting with what he thought were wealthy Islamic radicals willing to make a $5 million donation. Actually, they were conservative sting artists, and the tape they released of the NPR executive’s ranting litany of insults against the Republican Party (“seriously racist, racist people”) backed the network against the wall. And late last week an audio tape was released of another NPR fundraiser apparently suggesting that the $5 million donation could be kept secret from the federal government.

The evidence of NPR’s political tilt is damning. But even if the network agreed to fire half its staffers and replace them with Glenn Beck-certified tea partiers, it’s time to end the annual taxpayer bailout of an organization that ought to pay its own way in the world. While NPR, for public consumption, insists its listeners are Ma and Pa Kettle types hunkered down on the prairie where public radio is their only link to civilization, the demographic studies that it braggily shows to underwriters tell a different story.

The average NPR listener is white, 50 years old, holds a managerial or professional job and has a household income of $90,000. He (yes, he’s probably male) is three times more likely than the average American to have gone to college and four times more likely to have gone to graduate school. And he’s a lot more likely to be from Boston or San Francisco than Peoria or Topeka. We’re running a trillion-and-half buck deficit here, guys. Can’t we cut just a little bit of ruling-class welfare?

Glenn Garvin is a columnist for the Miami Herald.

Tea party leaders need to catch up with the rest of the country

The tea party is synonymous with anger. Anger defined it. Anger fueled it. Anger marred it. Anger became its face and its heart. But anger is too exhausting an emotion to sustain.

A poll released earlier this month by the Pew Research Center found that anger at the government among tea party supporters fell by 40 percent from September 2010 to this month.

Furthermore, anger among Republicans fell by more than half, and anger among whites, the elderly and independents fell by 40 percent or more.

Charles Blow

On the other hand, the percentage of tea party supporters who said that they trusted the government always or most of the time doubled from last March to this March, and the percentage of Republicans saying so nearly doubled. In fact, the percentage of both Republicans and independents saying so is now higher than it has been since January 2007.

Less anger? More trust? What happened? The midterms happened, that’s what.

Elections have a way of cooling passions, especially when voters get what they want. (Remember how lethargic many Democrats became after November 2008?) Electoral success not only satifies, it pacifies. The enormous gains by Republicans during the midterms assuaged much of the country’s grief. The pressure began to subside. The novelty dimmed. The urgency evaporated.

Yet tea party leaders are still sniping from the sidelines, holding politicians to overreaching promises made when the electorate was still stewing. Judson Phillips, founder of the Tea Party Nation, wrote a post on its website this week saying the House speaker, John Boehner, looks “like a fool” and should face a primary challenge in 2012 for not pursuing enough spending cuts this year.

For these tea partiers, any concession is a crime worthy of expulsion.

A September Pew Poll found that only 22 percent of those who identify with the tea party admire political leaders who make compromises. This is not the way the rest of the country feels. Fifty-five percent of Democrats and 36 percent of Republicans said that they admired politicians who compromise.

Staunch tea partiers seem to be guided by the worst kind of fundamentalist political extremism — immutable positions derived from a near-religious adherence to self-proclaimed inviolable principles. This could well be their undoing.

During the right’s season of anger, passion and convictions galvanized tea party supporters into an army of activism. But the vehicle is outliving its fuel. The movement is losing momentum. In fact, tea party-backed governors like Scott Walker in Wisconsin could be providing the rallying cry on the left to pick up the mantle of anger and send the momentum back the other way.

If tea party leaders continue to operate as if anger is still a major part of their arsenal and Republican politicians continue to feel pressured into untenable positions, Democrats could enjoy their very own Charlie Sheen-ism come 2012: “Winning!”

Five things you thought you knew about Libya's Gadhafi

Like Sinatra, Moammar Gadhafi has always done things his way. When Egypt - and Tunis - style public protests failed to dislodge the Libyan leader, a full-scale rebellion erupted, only to be met with the brutality so familiar to longtime Gadhafi observers. Let's topple a few myths about the mercurial leader.

1. Gadhafi is insane.

Given — Gadhafi looks like a deranged dictator. Homocidal attacks on his own people? Check. Wacky ideology? Try reading his incoherent ramblings in The Green Book, a manifesto published in the 1970s. Add to the mix his all-female Amazonian

Richard Downie

Guard security force and the Bedouin tent he pitches during trips to Rome, Paris and New York, and the evidence suggests that we're dealing with a crazy person.

But Gadhafi could not have held on to power for such a long time in a country as divided as Libya without being a canny political operator.

Libya's oil wealth enables Gadhafi to buy loyalty. When loyalty can't be bought, he uses intimidation and violence to extract it. He has methodically removed his enemies, keeping the military weak, tribes divided and Islamic radicals fearing for their lives. He's kept his foes bickering instead of working together to unseat him.

2. Gadhafi will fight to the death.

After President Ronald Reagan called Gadhafi "the mad dog of the Middle East," many thought the dictator would die before stepping down. Though he has vowed to oppose the Libyan rebellion "to the last drop of blood," Gadhafi's past suggests that he is capable of stepping back from the edge.

After the United States invaded Iraq in 2003, Gadhafi feared that his regime could be next. So he gave up his nuclear weapons program and paid compensation to the families of Lockerbie bombing victims in return for an end to U.S. trade sanctions.

3. Foreign mercenaries keep Gadhafi in power.

It's not so straightforward. Fighters from neighboring Chad and Niger as well as Syria, Serbia and Ukraine have flocked to Gadhafi in his hour of need, but the Libyan leader's core support comes from domestic constituencies. These include special forces units commanded by his sons, formidable internal security and the fealty of his own tribal group, the Qadhafha.

4. A no-fly zone will finish Gadhafi.

Very unlikely. Indeed, Defense Secretary Robert Gates and senior generals have balked at the cost and risks of destroying Libyan air defenses. In any case, the most significant attacks by the regime against the rebels haven't been mounted by warplanes, but by ground forces and helicopters capable of evading a no-fly zone.

5. Remove Gadhafi, and Libya's problems are solved.

Gadhafi's rule has had one benefit: It has kept a divided country together. His exit would leave a power vacuum. Gadhafi did such a thorough job of eliminating his opposition that there is nothing — no party, no ideology, no clear successor — left to replace him.

The rebels are united by little beyond their hatred of Gadhafi. Tribal loyalties further complicate efforts to forge a common front. Even if Libya's rebels can achieve victory on the battlefield the task of building a national movement in a divided society will prove even tougher.

WASHINGTON, D.C. Senate sends 3-week funding bill to Obama

Congress approved an additional $6 billion in spending cuts Thursday, passing legislation to keep the government running through April 8 and allow time for talks on a larger package of reductions demanded by Republicans.

"The president is optimistic that Congress can get this done," White House Press Secretary Jay Carney said in a statement.

The measure brought the total of cuts to $10 billion since Republicans took control of the House in January on a promise to rein in the federal government. It cleared the Senate on Thursday on 87-13 vote one day after passing the House.

Administration officials have already met with top aides to House Speaker John Boehner and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev. to discuss a compromise package of cuts that would be included in a longer-term bill funding the government for the six months remaining in the budget year.

The House has passed a bill calling for $61 billion in cuts, but it lacks enough support to pass in the Senate, and Obama has threatened to veto it.

It is not clear what, if any, progress has been made toward a possible compromise. The most significant decisions aren't expected to be made until lawmakers return to the Capitol after a 10-day vacation.

CONNECTICUT Yale lab tech admits killing grad student

NEW HAVEN — A former animal research technician pleaded guilty Thursday to killing a Yale University graduate student days before her 2009 wedding, and prosecutors revealed that he left behind evidence of a sexual assault and desperately tried to cover his tracks.

Raymond Clark III pleaded guilty to murder and entered an Alford plea to attempted sexual assault of 24-year-old Annie Le under an agreement with prosecutors that calls for a 44-year sentence. Under Connecticut's Alford doctrine, the defendant agrees that the state has enough evidence to likely get a conviction and a guilty finding is entered on the record.

The sex charge and related DNA evidence offered the first official revelation of a potential motive in the case.

"We believed all along that was the motivation," said Joe Tacopina, attorney for the victim's parents.

Clark, 26, was accused of strangling Le, of Placerville, Calif. Her body was found upside down stuffed behind a research lab wall on Sept. 13, 2009, five days after she was last seen inside the Yale medical building. It would have been her wedding day in New York.

Prosecutor David Strollo said there was evidence that Clark tried after the killing to generate an alibi, scrub the crime scene and even fish evidence out from behind the wall.

GEORGIA Transplant patient got AIDS from kidney

ATLANTA — A transplant patient contracted AIDS from the kidney of a living donor, in the first documented case of its kind in the U.S. since screening for HIV began in the mid-1980s.

It turns out the donor had unprotected gay sex in the 11 weeks between the time he tested negative and the time the surgery took place in 2009.

In a report Thursday on the New York City case, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommended that organ donors have repeat HIV tests a week before surgery.

"The most sensitive test needs to be done as close as possible to the time of transplant," said Dr. Colin Shepard, who oversees tracking of HIV cases for the New York City Health Department.

The CDC also said would-be organ donors should be told to avoid behavior that can increase their chances of infection.

Living organ donors in the U.S. are routinely tested for infectious diseases such as hepatitis and HIV. But the organization that oversees organ transplants in the U.S. does not have an explicit policy on when such screening should be done. That's left up to transplant centers.

Because of patient confidentiality, health officials released few details about the donor, recipient, their relationship or the hospital where the transplant took place, except to say that it is in New York.

Neither the donor nor the recipient knew he or she had HIV until about a year after the transplant, according to the CDC report.

The recipient developed AIDS, perhaps because he or she was on drugs that suppress the immune system to prevent organ rejection, while the donor did not, health officials said. Both are receiving HIV treatment. Their conditions were not disclosed in the report.

PAKISTAN Pakistan army chief condemns attack

MIR ALI — Pakistan's army chief has condemned a U.S. drone attack that killed more than three dozen people, saying the missiles struck a peaceful meeting of tribal elders.

Gen. Ashfaq Parvez Kayani called Thursday's strike "unjustified and intolerable" and said it was a violation of human rights.

Pakistani intelligence officials initially said the 38 people killed in a compound in the North Waziristan tribal area were militants meeting to discuss the war in Afghanistan.

They spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to talk to reporters.

Civilian casualties from drone strikes are a main source of friction between the Pakistani and U.S. governments.

NATO officials said the attack killed insurgents.

MINNESOTA Overdose leaves teenager dead, 10 hospitalized

BLAINE — One teen died and 10 teenagers and young adults were hospitalized Thursday after an apparent mass overdose on a designer hallucinogen at a suburban Minneapolis home, authorities said.

Investigators said the state Bureau of Criminal Apprehension has identified the drug as 2C-E. It appeared the hallucinogen, which is sometimes known on the street as "Europa" and has no approved medical use, was legally ordered over the Internet for a spring break party, said Paul Sommer, a commander in the Anoka County Sheriff's Office.

A 19-year-old Coon Rapids man, whose name was not immediately released, died hours after officers responded to reports of an overdose at the house in Blaine, investigators said. Officers found several people there who were ill shortly after midnight.

New cinema to be built at Magic Valley Mall

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Twin Falls will soon be home to a state-of-the-art, 14-screen cinema complex to be built in the Magic Valley Mall.

Woodbury Corporation, owner of the mall, announced Thursday that Magic Valley 14 Cinemas will replace the Odyssey Cinema.

Magic Valley 14 Cinemas is a partnership between Kansas City-based Entertainment Properties Trust and Cinema West, which owns 12 cinema complexes throughout northern California.

“This is our first cinema complex outside of northern California,” Cinema West President David Corkill told the Times-News.

Construction of the cinema complex will begin in late April and the facility will likely be open by year’s end.

The complex will feature stadium-style luxury seating, all digital projection, wall-to-wall screens and even motion seats and an on-line ticket service.

“We feel that the Twin Falls market is under served and there is a lot of room for improvement,” Corkill said. “The amenities we’ll offer are comparable to what many people experience in larger urban BOISE — Construction on a $70 million project in Boise designed to honor Idaho business icon J.R. Simplot could begin by the end of the year, a Simplot Co. spokesman said.

A Simplot team is finalizing details with the City of Boise and the Ada County Highway District as part of a process to get building permits, said David Cuoio.

“We will be working out some details with Design Review, but don’t anticipate any major issues in regards to them,” Cuoio told the Idaho Business Review.

Late last year the Boise Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously signed off on plans for the Simplot family to build a complex with office space, art studios, meeting spaces and a public park on a collection of vacant lots in the city’s downtown. Plans also call for an outdoor amphitheater.

The complex is called JUMP — or Jack’s Urban Meeting Place. Construction would create more than 700 construction jobs and take two years to complete.

Boise Planning Director Hal Simmons said work sessions will be set when the company submits additional plans.

Bracing for another hit

Hawaii expecting downturn in travelers from Japan

By Jaymes Song
Associated Press writer

HONOLULU — A tsunami spawned by the deadly earthquake in Japan caused tens of millions of dollars in damage to homes, businesses and boats in Hawaii after the waves roared ashore last week.

Now the islands are bracing for another hit — a loss in travelers from Japan.

Gov. Neil Abercrombie predicted the economic consequences will be severe for this tourism-dependent state that is already dealing with a projected shortfall of nearly $1 billion over the next two years.

“It’s going to be terrible. It’s going to be rough,” he said earlier this week. “It’s something that we have to come to grips with.”

Hawaii is the top U.S. destination for the Japanese, hosting more than 1.2 million of the 16.6 million total outbound tourists last year. Visitors from Japan poured about $1.9 billion into Hawaii in 2010, or about 17 percent of the $11.4 billion overall visitor revenue.

The Japanese are treasured in the Aloha State for their affection of shopping and dining. They also embrace Hawaiian culture and outspend American visitors nearly 2-to-1 on a per-person, per-day average. Each day, there are 13 direct flights from Japan to Hawaii, bringing in anywhere from 3,000 to 5,000 tourists.

The tragedy is being followed closely here and has prompted residents, businesses and government leaders to respond with widespread fundraising efforts in this state, which has close ties with Japan. The first Japanese immigrants arrived here more than a century ago to work on the sugar canes fields with their children and grandchildren rising to prominence and power. Today, about a quarter of the state’s population, or 296,674 residents, identified themselves as being part or full Japanese descent, according to the 2000 Census.

“This market is very important to us,” said Mike McCartney, president and CEO of the Hawaii Tourism Authority. “(But) for us, first of all, we’re most concerned about their well-being. More than dollars and cents, that’s No. 1.”

Lessons from the long tail of improbable disaster

If it seems that the frequency and size of calamities have been picking up in recent years, it’s only because they probably have.

In just the past decade, we’ve had the attacks of Sept. 11, the tsunami in the Indian Ocean, Hurricane Katrina, the global financial crisis, a global flu pandemic, the earthquake in Haiti, the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico, and devastating floods in Australia and New Zealand. Now, Japan has been hit with a triple whammy of earthquake, tsunami and nuclear crisis.

What all of these have in common is that they are all low-probability, high-impact events — the “long-tail” phenomenon, to use the jargon of risk modelers, referring to the far ends of the traditional bell curve of probabilities, or “black swans,” to use the metaphor popularized by former Wall Street trader Nassim Nicholas Taleb.

Such calamitous events have

been a regular part of the human experience since Noah and the flood, some of them natural, others manmade. Despite that, however, we continue to underestimate their frequency and severity.

To a degree, that is a good thing. If we were to focus too much of our attention on all the really, really bad things that could befall us, we’d never get out of bed in the morning.

But the same psychological trait that allows us to go about our daily business also creates blind spots. Although we observe that calamities happen, we assume that they won’t happen to us, or they won’t happen again. And if it has been a long time since the calamity, we are apt to take false comfort that we have beaten the odds.

There was no better example of this memory lapse than in the weeks after the Gulf Coast oil spill, when political leaders were jumping up and down demanding that the federal government move more aggressively to contain what they described as a life- and economy-altering disaster, even while expressing outrage over a temporary moratorium on other drilling.

Similarly, nine months after Hurricane Katrina, a survey of more than 1,000 residents of coastal areas found that 85 percent had taken no precautions to protect themselves from a similar storm.

Even those who say they can assess risks and probabilities to the third decimal point have a history of wildly overestimating their predictive powers. By their calculation, the BP spill could never happen. Nor could the collapse of national real estate prices or the nuclear crisis in Japan.

Part of the problem is that we don’t know what we don’t know. The other part is that small miscalculations of probabilities can have large effects on outcomes when dealing with long periods of time. Think of the sailor who sets off on a voyage a few degrees off course. A few miles out, the error is small, but by the time he crosses the ocean, he may find himself hundreds of miles from the intended destination.

Our reward structures don’t encourage spending the time or the money to deal with low-probability disasters.

When we conclude that the chance of something really bad happening is very small, we wind up taking actions that either increase the probability of the disaster or the damage that it will cause.

YOUR MONEY

Use your bank's ATM to save on fees

Use your own bank's ATMs and you probably won't be charged. However, use an out-of-network machine and you'll likely be suckerpunched with fees.

Using an out-of-network ATM often results in two fees: one from the ATM operator and one from your own bank.

On average, banks charge their own customers $1.41 for using of an out-of-network ATM, according to Bankrate.com.

However, those out-of-network fees could be increasing.

Chase is testing fees of $4 to $5 for non-customers using its ATMS.

With 16,000 machines Chase operates the second largest ATM network in the country.

By planning ahead and making sure you've got the cash you need before heading to the mall or the movies you could save a bundle.

and final landscape plans,” Simmons said. “Some specifics about some other buildings on the site will also be worked out.”

Simplot Co. has also submitted a request to the Ada County Highway District involving land near where the project is planned between 9th and 11th streets.

That request has to do with the acquisition of unused public areas and involves inviting property owners within 300 feet of the construction site to a meeting.

The type of request is called a “vacation” of public right-of-way application.

“Ultimately, the ACHD Commission will determine whether or not to approve the requested vacation,” said Christine Myron, spokeswoman for the highway district. “The applicant is also required to have the area appraised and, if approved, pay fair market value for the portions of right-of-way.”

Additionally, local nonprofits are being asked what kinds of uses they might like at the complex, Cuoio said.

“There are so many possibilities as far as programs for the studios,” Cuoio said. “We are looking at all of them.”

settings. They are amenities that enhance the experience and what people have grown to expect and deserve.”

Corkill said the company expects the complex to draw not only Twin Falls residents but people from across southern Idaho.

“A minimum of four screens will be similar to IMAX screens and we can play live streaming sporting events and concert and such, in addition to 3-D,” Corkill said. “We’ll also offer D-BOX, premium motion seats, that move with the movie. Users can chose the intensity of movement, from one-to-ten.”

Three of Cinema West’s theaters operate with the largest solar power systems on the roof of a movie theatre anywhere in the world, Corkill said.

“We don’t know if the cinema complex in Twin Falls will operate with solar power yet,” he said. “We still have a lot of design work left to complete.”

He estimates that the cinema will need about 40 employees.

Odyssey Cinema has operated in the mall since the late 1990s said Magic Valley Mall General Manager Brent White.

Odyssey Theater is operated by Interstate Amusement, which also owns and operates the Twin Cinema 12 and the Orpheum Theatre, in addition to a pair of Twin Falls drive-in facilities and the Jerome Cinema 4.

Interstate Amusement Manager Larry Roper did not return calls for comment.

White said Interstate Amusement is under contract to close by the end of September.

“We’re excited because this new complex more than doubles the square footage, screens and seating,” White said. “This decision was made by private sector investors and I think that is the best indication of the stability and growth potential our market has.”

He said the complex will compliment the mall’s retail offerings without being in direct competition with them.

Pearlstein

When the government builds a levee, it may reduce the frequency of damaging floods but may also encourage even more people to build homes and businesses behind the barrier. When the Big One finally arrives, the total damage will be even greater than if no levee had been built.

We’re also discovering that the impact of disasters is magnified by globalization. The troubles in northern Japan, for example, are beginning to ripple through global supply chains, creating bottlenecks and shortages in dozens of industries. The way globalization increases economic efficiency is by leveraging the advantages of scale and specialization. Yet the bigger and more concentrated production becomes, the more vulnerable it becomes to disruption.

Many scholars now think that the very complexity of modern life is directly implicated in the severity of catastrophes. The things that make our systems more efficient also make them more effective in spreading the impact of a catastrophe.

The lesson to be drawn from all this is not that we should roll back the clock and return to a simpler and less interconnected existence.

It is, rather, that more attention must be paid to the extra risks that come with all the advantages of modern life.

Columnist Steven Pearlstein writes about business and the economy for The Washington Post.

Feb. 26, 1933–March 14, 2011

BURLEY — Our loving dad, grandpa and friend went to join his Heavenly Father on Monday, March 14, 2011, in Glendale, Ariz.

Dad was born Feb. 26, 1933, in Pettus, Texas, the son of Modesto and Ensebia Castro. He married Mercy Prescilla Gomez on March 18, 1960, in Rupert, Idaho. He worked various farming jobs across the country.

After marrying mom, he settled down in Acequia, Idaho, and eventually went to work for Ore-Ida Foods. He worked as a truck driver for Ore-Ida for many years. He loved being on the road. Dad retired from Ore-Ida after 25 years. He loved his community, and he loved Idaho. Dad became the first Hispanic city council member to serve in Idaho in 1982. He served as a council member on the Acequia City Council for 27 years, until he retired in 2009 at the age of 76. Dad enjoyed hunting, fishing and camping. He always made sure that everyone would wake up to a warm fire and fresh cup of coffee. Dad loved his children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and friends. He enjoyed people, and anyone he met became an instant friend.

He is survived by his children, Albert (Kenda) Castro, Lydia and Abel Saldana, Richard and (Edith) Castro, and Cora Castro. He had nine grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his wife of 45 years and a great-grandson.

Future of Idaho energy policy debated in Capitol this week

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The accident of meteorology and geography that turned the ridgeline behind Maureen Finnerty's Idaho Falls home into a prime spot to capture the blowing wind and turn it into electrons has also made her an accidental player in the debate unfolding in the Capitol this week over how the state's energy policy will look in the years to come.

Finnerty says she can count 47 tall, white wind-power turbines from her family's property alone.

"Cranes were going up behind my house before we even knew what was going on," Finnerty recalled Wednesday in a phone interview. "The more I become informed of the whole circle of effects, the more I was convinced this is not the right thing for Idaho to do — until they determine what are the costs and what are the benefits."

Finnerty is calling for a moratorium on wind turbines and supports ending sales tax rebates that since 2005 have helped spur a billion dollars or so in investment in the wind energy industry in the state.

The extension of the rebate, which also benefits other alternative energy developers like geothermal, got a hearing Thursday morning, while Finnerty's proposed two-year ban on wind projects gets scrutiny today.

On Thursday, Rep. George Eskridge, R-Dover, introduced the rebate extension with a reference to the nuclear crisis currently unfolding in Japan, saying it

"Above all else, the state needs to have this debate. How much wind energy is too much? How much is enough?"

— Idaho legislator Erik Simpson is another reason why Idaho should do as much as it can to diversify the sources of its power.

"That incident has added to our nuclear power uneasiness," Eskridge said.

A vote was delayed until probably next week, but debate from all sides has reached hurricane strength in recent days.

For example, in advance of the hearings, lobbyists from Idaho's three investor-owned utilities sat down with Democratic House lawmakers to campaign against extending the energy rebate. Idaho Power Co., the state's biggest utility, has complained that wind energy developers have gamed a federal law to force their way onto the electricity grid, contributing to higher rates for its customers.

At Thursday's hearing, Idaho Power lobbyist Rich Hahn urged the committee not to extend the rebate on grounds that intermittent wind energy — the wind doesn't always blow — will hurt its system's reliability and add to customers' bills.

"How does this benefit the economy of Idaho?" Hahn said.

Members of the small, 13-member Democratic caucus say Monday's meeting was the first time in memory they've gotten so much attention from three of Idaho's most powerful companies, a sign of just how important the issue is to them — and how close a vote may be.

"They told us, 'Wind companies are making a huge profit already,'" said Rep. Phylis King, D-Boise.

Meanwhile, Exergy Development Group, which erected a 183-megawatt wind farm in southern Idaho with General Electric Co. last year, is in league with other wind companies aiming to head off the moratorium and preserve the tax rebates. They say those rebates have been instrumental in helping boost Idaho's wind-power machine from practically nothing five years ago to likely more than 500 megawatts by 2011's conclusion.

Peter Richardson, a Boise energy lawyer who represents Exergy, said companies like his are being paid for their electricity only at rates commensurate with Idaho Power's cost of building a new natural gas-fired power plant. What's really behind the utilities' push to dump the rebate is not concern for customers, Richardson said, it's their fear of losing control of generation facilities that have been their bread-and-butter for decades.

The specter of higher costs for customers is a "red herring," Richardson said Thursday.

"They want to kill the industry," he said. "They don't like buying from third parties under contract, because they can't mark it up and earn a profit on it."

RES Americas, the United Kingdom-based company behind the proposed 400-megawatt China Mountain wind farm near the Idaho-Nevada border, is also on the offensive, arguing moratorium proponents like Finnerty have spread misinformation about wind projects' impact on power rates in Idaho.

Laura Lickley, a spokeswoman, says China Mountain plans to sell its electricity to Nevada, so it would have no effect on what Idaho customers pay.

"Nevertheless, the moratorium ... would put the China Mountain Wind Project on hold," Lickley wrote lawmakers in an e-mail obtained by The Associated Press.

Rep. Erik Simpson, a Republican lawmaker who represents the Idaho Falls district where Finnerty lives, is sponsoring the moratorium.

In addition to concerns about customers' rates, Simpson said he's been swayed by arguments that construction of wind-power infrastructure like turbine towers and transmission lines could hurt southern Idaho's sage grouse populations — and speed their listing under the federal Endangered Species Act. If that happens, he said, the impact on activities like ranching could be devastating.

"Above all else, the state needs to have this debate," Simpson said. "How much wind energy is too much? How much is enough?"

Fuel truck crashes, spills gasoline

BOISE — The Idaho State Police say a tanker truck crashed on Interstate 84 in southwestern Idaho, critically injuring the driver, spilling thousands of gallons of gasoline and closing a 13-mile stretch of the westbound lanes for about nine hours.

The ISP says the semi was eastbound and negotiating a curve east of Mountain Home at about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday when the tanker went off the left shoulder of the road, down a slope into the median and overturned.

The driver, 39-year-old Danny Guntrum of Nampa, was taken by air ambulance to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. The nursing supervisor said he was critical condition Thursday morning.

Fire crews and hazmat teams worked to contain the estimated 3,000 gallons of gasoline that spilled.

The crash remains under investigation.

Man shot in shootout charged with assault

SANDPOINT — A Bonner County man shot twice in a shootout with a neighbor last month has been charged with two counts of aggravated assault.

Prosecutors charged 59-year-old Richard Allen Larson this week following an investigation into the Feb. 9 shootout with 58-year-old John Bilsky.

Bilsky was arrested after the shooting, but the Bonner County Daily Bee reports prosecutors held off filing charges until detectives had a chance to investigate.

Testimony from a court hearing this week suggests Bilsky fired at Larson in self-defense. Authorities say the argument ensued after Larson assaulted his ex-girlfriend, who was dating Bilsky at the time.

Bilsky told police he then pulled his gun and ordered Larson to leave. But police say Larson refused, pulled his own gun and fired first, prompting Bilsky to fire back.

Idaho mulls expanding trophy hunt auctions

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Department of Fish and Game officials are fighting a plan to expand special trophy hunting tag auctions after fielding complaints about the fairness of such high-priced hunts for the wealthy.

A bill that cleared the House Resources and Conservation Committee on Thursday on a 14-0 vote would raise additional revenue for wildlife management and habitat protection by holding annual auctions of up to three elk, deer and antelope tags, and one moose, wild big horn sheep and mountain goat tag.

Idaho now auctions one tag for big horn sheep and offers another in a lottery, bringing in tens of thousands of dollars. For instance, an anonymous Oregon hunter paid $120,000 for Idaho's auction bighorn sheep permit in 2009.

The state has also auctioned special wolf tags in 2009, the year the predators weren't listed under the Endangered Species Act.

Doug Sayer, a Blackfoot, Idaho businessman and avid hunter behind Thursday's auction proposal, estimates these so-called "Governor's tags" could reap an additional $200,000 yearly for the Department of Fish and Game.

That's cash that could help re-establish Idaho as a mecca for trophy big game hunters by directing the money toward habitat improvement, big game management and hunter access, said Sayer, recalling decades past when southeastern Idaho was known the world over for its enormous mule deer bucks.

Despite what the state Fish and Game Commission says would be a welcome cash infusion, it opposes the measure in part because of discontent over exclusive tags from some hunters who aren't wealthy enough to participate in such auctions, yet want the same access to a public resource.

Cause uncertain in Oregon wolf death

LA GRANDE, Ore. (AP) — Authorities say that internal bleeding was found in a wolf that had recently been captured and fitted with a radio tracking collar.

The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife said Wednesday that a necrop-sy at the Washington Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory found no obvious cause for the blood in the wolf's chest cavity that could be listed as a cause of death.

An endangered species in Oregon, wolves have been moving into the northeastern corner of the state from Idaho for several years. Biologists have been monitoring their locations closely to minimize attacks on livestock and keep track of how they are doing.

More smoke rises from Japan's crippled nuke plant

By Eric Talmadge and Mari Yamaguchi
Associated Press writers

YAMAGATA, Japan — Smoke billowed from a building at Japan's crippled nuclear power plant today as emergency crews worked to reconnect electricity to cooling systems and spray more water on the overheating reactors at the tsunami-ravaged facility.

Four of the troubled Fukushima Dai-ichi plant's six reactors have seen fires, explosions or partial melt-downs in the week since the tsunami. While the reactor cores where energy is generated are a concern, Japanese and U.S. officials believe a critical danger are the pools used to store spent nuclear fuel: fuel rods in one pool were believed to be at least partially exposed and in danger of leaking radiation.

This morning's smoke came from Unit 2, and its cause was not known, the nuclear safety agency said. An explosion had hit the building on Tuesday, possibly damaging a crucial cooling chamber that sits below the reactor core.

More urgent, Japan's chief government spokesman said, was the adjacent Unit 3. Fuel rods there may have been partially exposed, and without enough water, the rods may heat further and possibly spew radiation. Frantic efforts were made Thursday to douse the unit with water, using helicopters and firetrucks, and authorities were considering whether to repeat the effort today.

"Dealing with Unit 3 is our utmost priority," Chief Cabinet Secretary Yukio Edano told reporters.

In the week since the massive earthquake and tsunami, Japan's government and the utility that runs Fukushima have struggled to contain the plant's cascading troubles.

Edano said today that Tokyo is asking the U.S. government for help and the two are discussing the specifics. "We are coordinating with the U.S. government as to what the U.S. can provide and what people really need," Edano said.

The U.S. and Japan, close allies, have offered differing assessments over the dangers at Fukushima in recent days. U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission Chairman Gregory Jazcko said in Washington Thursday that it could take days and "possibly Passengers wait for their flights at a check-in area at Narita airport, near Tokyo, Thursday. The airport was crowded with evacuees and regular passengers Thursday following advisories from some foreign governments recommending citizens leave the country.

A Japanese woman holds her dog as they are scanned for radiation.

weeks" to get the complex under control. He defended the U.S. decision to recommend a 50-mile evacuation zone for its citizens, wider than the 30-mile band Japan has ordered.

Crucial to the effort to regain control over the Fukushima plant is laying a new power line to the plant, allowing operators to restore cooling systems to the reactors. The operator, Tokyo Electric Power Co., missed a deadline late Thursday but said today workers hoped to complete the effort, first reconnecting Unit 1.

Also today, the Group of Seven major industrialized countries agreed to support Japan — whose infrastructure and industries were badly battered by the disasters — by intervening in currency markets. The group did not say what it would do but the efforts would likely focus on weakening the Japanese yen, which has risen this week. A strong yen could make Japanese exports less competitive, crimping any recovery.

The quake and unfolding nuclear crisis have led to power shortages in Japan, forced auto and other factories to close, sending shockwaves through global manufacturing and trade, and triggered a plunge in Japanese stock prices.

Two Japanese military CH-47 Chinook helicopters began dumping seawater on Unit 3 on Thursday morning, defense ministry spokeswoman Kazumi Toyama said. The choppers doused the reactor with at least four loads of water in just the first 10 minutes, though television footage showed much of it appearing to disperse in the wind.

Chopper crews flew missions of about 40 minutes each to limit their radiation exposure, passing over the reactor with loads of about 2,000 gallons of water. Another 9,000 gallons of water were blasted from military trucks with high-pressure sprayers used to extinguish fires at plane crashes, though the vehicles had to stay safely back from areas deemed to have too much radiation.

Special police units with water cannons were also tried, but they could not reach the targets from safe distances and had to pull back, said Yasuhiro Hashimoto, a spokesman for Japan's nuclear safety agency.

Unit 3's reactor uses a fuel that combines plutonium, better known as an ingredient in nuclear weapons, and reprocessed uranium. The presence of this mixed oxide fuel, or MOX, means potentially that two very harmful radioactive products could be released into the environment.

Obama: U.S. shouldn't worry about radiation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama, trying to reassure a worried nation, declared Thursday that "harmful levels" of radiation from the Japanese nuclear disaster are not expected to reach the U.S., even as other officials conceded it could take weeks to bring the crippled nuclear complex under control.

The situation remains dangerous and complicated at the damaged Fukushima Dai-ichi reactors in northeastern Japan, U.S. officials said.

"We've seen an earthquake and tsunami render an unimaginable toll of death and destruction on one of our closest friends and allies in the world," Obama said in brief remarks at the White House after a visit to the Japanese Embassy to offer his condolences.

Obama said he had asked the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to conduct a "comprehensive review" of the safety of all U.S. nuclear plants.

"When we see a crisis like the one in Japan, we have a responsibility to learn from this event and to draw from those lessons to ensure the safety and security of our people," Obama said.

There are 104 nuclear reactors in the United States, providing roughly 20 percent of the nation's electricity. "Nuclear energy is an important part of our own energy future," Obama said.

Meanwhile, the first evacuation flight of U.S. citizens left Japan, the State Department said.

In the U.S., Customs and Border Protection said there had been reports of radiation being detected from some cargo arriving from Japan at several airports, including ones in Chicago, Dallas and Seattle.

Radiation had not been detected in passengers or luggage. And none of the reported incidents involved harmful amounts.

Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said the agency was screening passengers and cargo for "even a blip of radiation."

Obama said he knows that Americans are worried about potential risks from airborne radiation that could drift across the Pacific.

"So I want to be very clear," he said. "We do not expect harmful levels of radiation to reach the United States, whether it's the West Coast, Hawaii, Alaska or U.S. territories."

After death of guitarist, band decides its fate

They called him Juddy, or Speedy Fingers Magee. The guitarist wrote the majority of Twin Falls rock band Death of Herod's songs, and he'd light up band practices with his goofy sense of humor.

But now his guitar is silent, and Death of Herod is feeling the loss. Justin Howard, 19, died March 6 at his home. As his bandmates mourn their friend, they are also trying to decide what will happen to the rock band that Howard loved so deeply.

They had known him only since October, but that was plenty of time for him to make an impact on their lives. A mutual friend brought him to the first Death of Herod meeting, and Howard charmed everyone with his warm personality and skilled guitar playing.

"It didn't matter what kind of mood one of us were in," recalled vocalist Eric Odlin. "When we walked in that practice room, or we were around him, he would always lighten the mood."

The band was Howard's first, said his bandmates, all in their teens or 20s. Although he had been playing for five or six years, he didn't put himself out there, choosing instead to practice for hours at a time in his room.

But in the time he spent with Death of Herod, he helped shape the band.

"The five songs we have, he pretty much wrote 75 percent of those songs," said bass player Torey Clark. Howard also came up with the band's name, referring to the biblical account of King Herod.

Howard's lightening-fast metal guitar playing defined the band's songs.

"He had mastery over his instrument," said drummer Ryan Reeves. "He inspired me to reach that level of mastery."

Magic Valley's theater world

Dilettantes, Xavier, RAT Players, Magic Valley High are on top

By Virginia Hutchins
Times-News writer

Amateur arts critics debated the merits of Magic Valley's stage performers, then honored recipients of the third annual Curtain Call Awards at a gala this week.

These are particularly subjective honors, awarded by the votes of people who pay $10 a year to join the Curtain Call Awards Association, a division of the Twin Falls-based nonprofit Danny Marona Performing Arts Scholarship Fund.

Curtain Call announced its slate of nominees in late February, then used the voting to drive membership. Winners were secret until Tuesday night's gala.

"More than a few were separated by only one vote; 2010 was an amazing year for great productions, very close on almost all categories," Curtain Call administrator Diane Stevens said.

Dilettante Group of Magic Valley's production of "Beauty and the Beast" claimed Best Musical honors — and cleaned up the categories for lead actor (Brandon Hunt), lead actress (Tess Gregg), director and musical direction (Lori Henson) and supporting actor (Dusty Blackburn). Jennifer Miller kept the Dilettantes from sweeping the musicals division, with Random Acts of Theatre Players won Best Play for "A Streetcar Named Desire," and the show's cast snagged honors for lead actor (Jud Harmon), supporting actress (Tamara Harmon) and supporting actor (Blackburn). Again, Miller broke the trend, by taking the Best Lead Actress honor for her performance in the fledgling OutCast Theater's first play, "Boy Gets Girl."

NEW ON THE BOOKSHELF

'All About Daisy'
(CreateSpace, $13.49)

This first novel by Malta native and Raft River High School graduate O'Dell Hutchison, now a business systems analyst in Katy, Texas, is intended to be the first in a new young-adult series about the awkward girl Daisy Rose Brown.

The 14-year-old character has spent the past three years being bullied in middle school when she decides to take matters into her own hands. Daisy starts with a list of things she thinks she needs — a best friend, a boyfriend, a first kiss, a spot on the cheer-leading squad, boobs — and determines to be popular in her first year of high school. The plan backfires, of course. But while popularity might not be her destiny, she's finished being taken advantage of.

"Daisy's story is one that will resonate with young readers, particularly young women that may feel awkward or out of place in high school," Hutchison said.

'My Stroke of the Pen: Meditations on Life After Stroke'
(Abiqua Country Estate, $12 at bcvet936@gmail.com)

Historian Betti VanEpps-Taylor, who teaches English composition at College of Southern Idaho, edited this collection of essays for her Colorado brother, Dave VanEpps, who suffered a stroke then used writing to bring order back to his life.

The essays are well-edited anecdotes, both rich in personal specifics and relevant to the shared human experience.

The volume "has had a quiet but modestly successful dry-run among readers in Buhl, and on the CSI campus, and in his neighborhood in Littleton, Colo.," VanEpps-Taylor said. "Dave has always written with insight and humor, and his wry experience with stroke and its complications and aftermath will resonate with readers who have shared this unwelcome health challenge either themselves, or as caregivers."

'Echoing Calls of the Spirits'
(IUniverse/Author Solutions, $15.95)

Heyburn resident Michele Walton, writing as M.R. Walton, self-published her first book. She describes it as an adult paranormal romance that takes place in a fictional town in the Sawtooth Mountains.

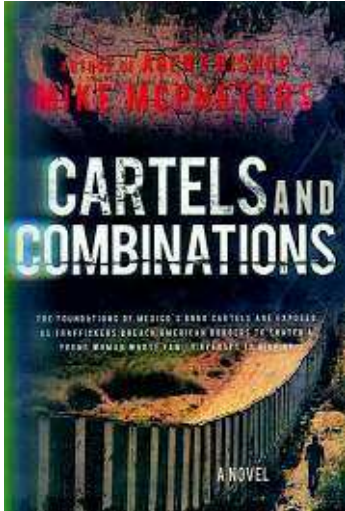

The story centers around an American Indian tribe with the ability to shape shift into totem spirits. Walton promises romance, suspense, crime and unsolved mysteries, and she intends this to be the first book in a Guardian Saga series.

Walton will sign copies of "Echoing Calls" from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday at Hastings Books Music & Videos in Twin Falls; it's her first signing.

The book, released Jan. 20, "just got its first five-star customer rating on the Barnes & Noble website this week," Walton reported last Saturday. That's enough to warm the heart of an excited new author.

'Cartels and Combinations'
(Bonneville Books, $16.99)

Former Ketchum resident Mike McPheters followed his 2009 memoir — "Agent Bishop: True Stories from an FBI Agent Moonlighting as a Mormon Bishop" — with this novel about drug traffickers on the U.S.-Mexico border.

It's the story of a family caught in the crossfire between a drug cartel dubbed Vultures and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. But there's a religious theme here, too: The story addresses "latter-day evil and how we can find protection and peace in heeding the words of ancient and modern prophets and apostles alike," the book's promoters write.

McPheters' friend Rosa — daughter of a Mexican gas station employee shot in the head by drug traffickers who couldn't buy gas when the station was closed — inspired the retired FBI agent to write about the porous U.S. border, he explains in the book's foreword.

McPheters

'Einstein's Trunk'
(Cedar Fort, $15.99)

Boise State University graduate Jim Haberkorn, working in Zurich for HP, chose a ranch outside Twin Falls as the childhood home for the hero of his international thriller.

Straight-laced former cowboy Rulon Hurt, a BSU grad like his creator, works for a quasi-CIA organization in Zurich, where Russians are searching for Einstein's trunk after a long-lost report surfaced in the Soviet Federal Archives. With a worldly, intelligent physics student descended from Einstein, Hurt crisscrosses Switzerland trying to stay alive while unraveling the riddle of the trunk and its link to a main-belt asteroid, Haberkorn said. "Their path eventually leads to CERN — the European Nuclear Research Center in Geneva — and a climactic encounter with a Spetsnaz hunter/killer team in the labyrinth of the Hadron Collider."

And yes, it's a love story of opposites, too.

Hear Irish tunes, in four-part harmony

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — An Irish-themed concert this weekend will help bring free four-part harmony to weddings, funerals and festivals throughout the year.

The Snake River Flats Barbershop Chapter of the Barbershop Harmony Society will present its annual concert, “A Great Day For The Irish,” in two shows Saturday at Burley’s King Fine Arts Center.

The concert is the only fundraiser for Snake River Flats, which sings at many functions but doesn’t charge a fee.

“We sing at care centers, funerals, weddings, a spring show, Festival of Trees, parades and Memorial Day events. We also do singing valentines for Valentine’s Day,” said Paul Brown, publicity chairman of the 43-year-old Mini-Cassia chapter.

Brown has been with the Flats for 30 of those years and has watched the group’s progress.

“The biggest thing is getting our own facility to rehearse at: Harmony Hall in Rupert. We use to have to rehearse in the junior high schools or wherever there was nothing going on, so it’s nice to have our own place,” he said.

One of the best changes: performing at the King center.

“Before that we would perform at Minico on Friday and at Burley on Saturday. It has been a good thing for us to be able to consolidate the two into one, and we do it only one day now. We do a matinee in the afternoon for those who don’t like to drive at night as well as our evening show,” Brown said.

This year’s concert will feature the comedy quartet Vocal Mischief from Pocatello, plus appearances by The Snake River Flats Barbershop Chorus, School Board and Minico High School Reflections.

The regular group will sing

“It’s A Great Day For The Irish,” “If There’d Never Been An Ireland,” “McNamara’s Band,” “Danny Boy,” “Wild Irish Rose” and “Tumble-down Shack In Athlone.”

Country singer with Utah roots plans Twin Falls show

Times-News

A small-town Utah boy who grew up roping, riding and working hard became an opening act for country stars; Charley Jenkins says it’s because he was born country.

The country singer-songwriter will perform at 7:30 p.m. April 6 in the College of Southern Idaho’s Fine Arts Auditorium as a fundraiser for the college’s Equine Club.

Jenkins had already recorded his first album, “Greatest Hours,” before he moved to Nashville in 2001. His song-writing job on Music Row put him in touch with some of the industry’s biggest names.

He moved back to eastern Utah in 2004 to help with the family farm as his father battled cancer. His second album, “Round Here,” was a tribute to his dad. Other albums followed in 2007 and 2009. In the meantime, he had begun opening concerts for LeAnn Rimes, Lonestar, Montgomery Gentry, Kellie Pickler, Josh Turner, Taylor Swift and others. In 2008, he was one of 12 finalists on NBC’s “Nashville Star” program.

For his Twin Falls show, tickets for students and FFA members are $5 in advance or $7 at the door. Tickets for the public are $8 in advance or $10 at the door. Buy advance tickets at Vick-er’s Western Wear in Twin Falls, all Val-ley Co-Op locations or the CSI box of- fice, or from Equine Club members.

Ponder unknown universe at new planetarium show

Times-News

Most of the universe is made up of something sci-entists can’t see and don’t really understand. Dark matter and dark energy are at least 95 percent of the universe, say promoters of a new planetarium show. So all the planets, stars, moons and smaller bodies in all the galaxies we know about comprise a mere 5 percent of what’s really there.

“Dark Matters,” the newest show at the Faulkner Planetarium at the College of Southern Idaho, explores what scientists know — or think they know — about all that mysterious darkness.

Dark matter, for instance, doesn’t interact with ordi-nary matter in ways that are obvious. And dark energy actually increases the speed at which the universe is ex-panding, but how? And how can we possibly learn more about it? The answers, says Faulkner manager Rick Greenawald, are in the new show.

“Dark Matters” will debut at 2 p.m. Tuesday and will be part of an enhanced Faulkner show schedule during spring break weeks for southern Idaho schools through April 1. Other showings will be at 2 p.m. Wednesdays through Fri-days and at 7 p.m. Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

The Faulkner Planetarium is inside the Herrett Center for Arts and Science at the North College Road en-trance to CSI. It’s open Tuesdays through Satur-days year-round. Admis-sion is free to the galleries and exhibits. Planetarium admission is $4.50 for adults, $3.50 for seniors and $2.50 for children and stu-dents.

only trait his bandmates treasured. They remember him as non-judgmental, a supportive friend and in-credibly goofy.

“He was so spastic,” said vocalist Josh Hale. He could make a joke out of anything, and made band manager Will Endsley feel better when Endsley felt insecure about his position.

“I was critical of myself,” Endsley said. “He said ‘Dude, you’re whooping so much tail, it’s so amazing.’ He gave me so much encouragement.”

The band played only one show, a Jan. 14 benefit for breast cancer research at Ra-dio Rondevo in Twin Falls. The show raised about $1,500, according to Odlin.

“It was huge,” Reeves said. In February, the band added a second guitarist, Zamis Rockstahl, and made plans to record a five-track demo.

Before that could happen, Odlin got a phone call from a mutual friend saying Howard had died. The obit-uary published in the Times-News said he died peacefully at home.

At the March 10 memorial service, his guitar and am-plifier were draped in roses. Howard’s mother asked the band to play. As they per-formed three songs, they said later, they felt their missing guitarist’s presence.

The next day, the musi-cians met about the future of the band and decided to stay together. The decision was made easier by Howard’s mom, Kim Grata, who said Howard would be devastated if the band broke up.

“And she’s right,” Odlin said. “I mean, he cared about this band, much more than almost anything else.”

The band still plans to record those songs, relying on a friend to fill in for Howard. Because Howard influenced their metal sound so heavily, they know the band’s style will change.

And they say Howard will be playing with them, on a big stage in the sky.

Chinese stringband is all about fusion

Times-News

Whether it is fast and furious stringband music, the sultry beauty of Imperial Court classics or cutting-edge contemporary creations, expect hot passion from Red Chamber, a Chinese stringband.

Red Chamber performs at 7:30 p.m. April 1 in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium as Arts on Tour's sixth performance of the 2010-11 season. Tickets are $16 for adults and $12 for students in high school and younger.

Red Chamber's four performers have become notable in the international music scene, with concert tours from Europe's concert halls to Asia's international festivals. The band takes its inspiration from the traditional Chinese plucked-string repertoire, but its program embraces stringband music spanning centuries, many world cultures and a myriad of musical genres.

Master Zheng player Mei Han, who makes the Chinese zither whisper and growl, is joined by musicians on pipa (Chinese lute), ruan (bass lute), mandolin, banjo and other Asiatic and western instruments. Red Chamber straddles traditional and contemporary, from ancient Chinese string music seldom heard in the West to bluegrass or jazz fusion. You'll hear Chinese court music from the Tang Dynasty, contemporary Canadian compositions, Balkan works, gypsy jazz and Cape Breton fiddle tunes.

Buy tickets at the CSI Fine Arts Box Office from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, or at csi.edu/artsontour or 732-6288.

Great Britain's don't-call-me-opera singer, Boise's touring Shakespeare troupe and Utah's harmonious a cappella men are all headed for Magic Valley this weekend.

Singing sensation Alfie Boe, a former auto mechanic dubbed "the people's tenor" in Great Britain, will perform a Sun Valley concert Saturday. You might have seen him sing the Jean Valjean role in the 25th anniversary production of "Les Miserables" on PBS this month.

Idaho Shakespeare Festival brings its condensed "Twelfth Night" production to Twin Falls tonight. It's the classic comedic romance with all its love triangles and mistaken identities, but slightly less iambic pentameter. Elsewhere in town tonight, Brigham Young University's Vocal Point group will turn a repertoire of rock, pop, country, jazz and rhythm and blues into voices-only harmony and percussion. The nine-man ensemble already has an enthusiastic following in Magic Valley.

"Singin' in the Rain" ends its run Saturday night in Oakley's renovated historical opera house. The reporter who wrote about the musical came back to the newsroom raving about lead actor Dan Hendricks' dreamy voice, so don't miss these final performances. In nearby Burley on Saturday, Snake River Flats barbershop singers will put on their Irish-themed concert with the help of a visiting comedy quartet.

It's not all about performance this week. Local authors are responding to spring with a flurry of booksignings in Twin Falls and Buhl. Twin Falls Center for the Arts is hosting a new exhibit of works by Robert Moore and David Mensing. And a five-artist Ketchum exhibit opening tonight explores what furniture says about life, relating architectural design to political realities. It's cleverly named: "Social Structures."

Faulkner Planetarium will debut the new "Dark Matters" show on Tuesday as part of its ramped-up spring break schedule. A planetarium seat is a fine place to ponder the universe's great unknowns.

Storyteller and comedian Keith Wann, an American Sign Language performer, will make a return appearance at the College of Southern Idaho this month.

Florida-based Wann's first CSI show in 2009 was sold out, so the CSI United Signers Club will bring him back to perform at 7 p.m. March 30 in the college's Fine Arts Theater. Born a hearing

Sun Valley speed skier’s book recounts record-setting run

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Dick Dorworth fought to maintain his tuck position as the air rushing at him tried to push him backward with ever mounting force.

His right arm flew out to his side — reminding him how it might feel to drive down the highway at 100 mph and stick his hand out the window.

Somehow he managed to jam his hand back in close to his body. And then it was all over. “One-seven,” an excited friend yelled from a nearby hill. Dorworth smiled, confident in the knowledge that at 107 mph he was now the fastest skier on earth.

That was 1963 in Portillo, Chile. And, since, skiers wearing aerodynamic suits and using high-tech skis, helmets, goggles and gloves have shot past this man who wore standard Head metal skis and leather boots that he unbuckled at the top to get into his tuck. The current speed record is 251 mph.

But none have come close to telling the tale Dorworth does in his new book “The Perfect Turn.” It recounts not only his record-setting run but his terror at knowing he was about to crash in his attempt to best his own record the next year.

And it tells the sad story of the following year when a fellow skier died on the racecourse.

Dorworth’s 2010 book, published by Western Eye Press, contains 19 essays about skiing — many of them about skiing in Sun Valley or about Sun Valley skiers like Dick Durrance, Warren Miller, Dick Barrymore, Zach and Reggie Crist and even Ted Kennedy, with whom Dorworth skied while a Sun Valley ski instructor.

The final essay, from which the book gets its name, is a contemplative fictional piece about an old man who has never given up on the quest to etch the perfect turn on the snow.

“It’s simply the best piece of skiing fiction ever written,” said Dorworth’s friend Lito Tejada-Flores, who has Dick Dorworth, who credits Baldy’s superb grooming for allowing him to ski every day at age 72, says he could tell within a mile how fast he was going when he set the world’s speed record. ‘The difference between 80 and 100 mph is phenomenal,’ he said.

written plenty of skiing books himself, including the iconic “Breakthrough on Skis.”

Raised in the Tahoe area, Dorworth came to Sun Valley in 1953 for a Western Region Ski Race. Smitten with Baldy, he moved there in 1962.

“I’ve skied all over the world, and there isn’t another mountain that I know of that has as much consistent vertical,” said Dorworth, also a rock climber. “Other mountains go down and flatten out, down and flat.”

Dorworth, who has penned articles for Skier’s Gazette, Skiing, Powder, Snow Country and Men’s Journal, has coached the men’s U.S. Ski Team. He was at one time the No. 3 Skimeister in the country — an honor determined by his showings in downhill, slalom, ski jumping and cross-country races.

He has skied with big names in skiing from Billy Kidd to Daron Rahlves. And he’s able to tell some amazing stories about month-long ski trips into the backcountry when he and other famous racers battled frostbite rather than the clock.

But it was Dorworth’s training regimen for his speed skiing feats that intrigued Ed LaGrande of Ketchum.

That regimen involved all the usual things like hundreds of stomach crunches and push-ups a day. But it also involved standing in a tuck on a box in his Heidelberg, Germany, apartment — his heels up in the air as he bounced up and down for a thousand bounces to simulate what he knew he faced on the not-so-well-groomed speed courses of the early 1960s.

“Can you imagine?” said LaGrande. “And he says he crashed because he was not in good enough shape.”

Dorworth says his book is unusual in that it covers a large span of skiing, focusing on the spirit of skiing, the people and the country.

“Skiing has been a good thing for me. I was an angry youngster and it gave me a place to put all that energy. Now I’m 72 and I still ski every morning,” he said.

Ron James teaches English, literature and composition at Canyon Ridge High School and is an adjunct cultural anthropology instructor at College of Southern Idaho.

T.F. anthropologist lectures on fur traders of Idaho’s past

Times-News

Anthropologist Ron James, speaking on “The Hunt Party and Robert Stuart,” will be the third lecturer of the Magic Valley Arts Council’s Brown Bag Lecture Series, at noon March 25 at Twin Falls Center for the Arts.

The 2011 free lecture series recognizes the bicentennial of the Astorians in Idaho.

Two centuries ago, John Jacob Astor read about the Lewis and Clark expedition and saw a way to make money, if he could get an expedition to the mouth of the Columbia River before the Canadians reached it. Astor hired Wilson Price Hunt to lead an overland party in a mission that met disaster in what is now Twin Falls County.

James will present an overview of the Astorian fur traders, including Hunt and Robert Stuart, who explored and documented southern Idaho. The Astorians established the first permanent American settlements in the Pacific Northwest and discovered the route that would later become the Oregon Trail.

Their adventures — and misadventures — are exciting, dramatic and tragic.

James received a master’s degree in anthropology from the University of Idaho in 1993 and has done archaeological and ethnographic research on Chinese and Japanese contributions to southern Idaho history. His thesis, “Ruins of a World: Chinese Gold Mining in the Snake River Canyon” was published in 1993. Other publications include “Secrets of the Magic Valley and Hagerman’s Remarkable Horse” (2002), in which James contributed a chapter on the Astorians.

Bring a brown bag lunch to the March 25 lecture. Or order a box lunch by Thursday afternoon: 734-2787.

“Scratchboard Art” will meet 6-8 p.m. April 4 and 11 at Wendell High School. Cost is $40, plus a $5 materials fee. Bring an X-acto knife and a fine black marker pen to class.

What furniture says about life

Ketchum art exhibit relates design to social realities

Times-News

In a new exhibition opening today at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts in Ketchum, five artists examine how architecture and furniture converge with society's values, successes and failures.

"We all know that architecture reflects the society that creates it, but can architecture and design actually cause social change?" the center's Courtney Gilbert said in a press release. "What does it mean when we let architecture that we have long celebrated decay, or when structures that are supposed to be temporary become permanent? How can we take materials that are old or used and make something new of them, and what kind of meanings do these repurposed materials bring to their new structures?"

The exhibit, dubbed "Social Structures," includes work from five artists:

Francis Cape created a body of work around the Utility Furniture Scheme, a British government-run program from 1942 to 1951 that promoted functional, modernist furniture. Cape hand-built pieces of Utility Furniture design, displayed alongside photographs of New Orleans following Hurricane Katrina. Cape also pairs his furniture with photographs of trailers, both the FEMA trailers that filled New Orleans after Katrina and decrepit trailers in upstate New York, often nearly swallowed by vegetation.

Theaster Gates made a series of shoe shine stands from found wood and upholstery. Gates honors the labor of shining shoes while hinting at the power relations built into the throne-like architecture.

Clay Ketter's Gulf Coast Slabs, a series of photo-based objects, documents post-Katrina devastation along the Mississippi coast. With an appearance that recalls fresco painting as well as geometric abstraction, these works show both ruin and a slate wiped clean. Ketter's Trace Paintings explore the physical construction of walls.

Eamon O'Kane's paintings and drawings explore the work of iconic mid-20th century architects and designers. Often depicting houses engulfed in lush landscapes, his work considers the relationship between architecture and nature.

Stephanie Syjuco contributed two sculptures based on modernist furniture by French designer Charlotte Perriand, who hoped that better design would help create a better society. Using cardboard, paper, glue and tape, Syjuco reproduced shelving units Perriand created in the 1950s. She gives Perriand's clean lines, geometric forms and sleek surfaces an intentionally handmade appearance that juxtaposes modernism's utopian idealism with the social and political realities of the mid-20th century.

"Social Structures" continues through May 20. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. Admission is always free.

The Sun Valley Center is offering free exhibition tours at 5:30 p.m. on March 31 and April 14, and at 2 p.m. on April 26. To schedule a tour at another time or in Spanish, call 726-9491.

INSTANT Critic

Music: BB King
Seen Feb. 27 at the Morrison Center in Boise

Between the rambling, bantering and unsolicited love advice, this was less like a concert and more like a visit with a crazy, charming, slightly misogynist grandpa. We left happy, but bemused. There wasn't much music, though when you're the 85-year-old king of blues, you can get away with anything.

Musical theater: 'The Secret Garden'

Dilettante Group of the Magic Valley production, seen March 11 in Twin Falls

I enjoyed the always delightful story of "The Secret Garden" and came away amazed at how much the young "Mary Lennox" actress had to remember and how well she did it — and with such a great accent! The interaction between the Craven brothers was excellent as well.

— Rose Garber of Twin Falls

Books: 'Mom-Fu'

Author is Success Martial Arts owner Brian Higgins of Twin Falls

"Mom-Fu: It's OK to Protect Yourself From Your Kids" is a short but worthwhile read. It will wrap your head around the whole purpose behind parenting. I loved the author's novel idea for an 18-year alarm clock.

The singing — better than ever — enhanced my favorite childhood story. My compliments to those who worked on the mansion's gorgeous living room. Highest praise to the young actress playing Mary Lennox. Repeatedly I heard audience members speak of her ability to memorize so much, complete with a great British accent.

GOLDEN EAGLES CONTINUE FLIGHT TO CHAMPIONSHIP

Jackson leads CSI men into NJCAA semis

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Pierre Jackson provided the separation. Kenny Buckner provided the exclamation point.

Jackson hit consecutive 3-pointers with just more than four minutes left in the game and the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball rallied for a 77-65 win over Tallahassee (Fla.) Community College Thursday night in the quarterfinals of the NJCAA Tournament.

The win advances CSI to the national semifinals where it will face Monroe (N.Y.) College at 7 p.m. (MDT) today.

Jackson's triples, part of his 34-point night, broke open a 61-59 game and he scored the first eight points of a 10-0 run that put CSI in front 71-59.

"Nothing was bigger than those two 3s he hit," said Tallahassee head coach Eddie Barnes.

Jackson had missed his first six 3-point attempts in the tournament, but got the two triples to drop on consecutive possessions.

"It felt good," he said.

With the game clock winding down, Buckner, who finished with six points and a game-high 14 rebounds, emphatically swatted a shot into TCC's bench.

Walk-on redshirts play integral role in success of CSI men's team

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Jon Pulsifer, Cameron Bowen and Ryan McIntosh won't play a single minute for the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team at the NJCAA Division I Tournament this week.

In fact, the trio hasn't seen a single minute of game action all season.

But the three walk-on redshirt players have performed a vital role for the second-ranked Golden Eagles this season.

"I think they have been very important to our success," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar, who referred to Pulsifer, Bowen and McIntosh as "glue guys" and "great teammates" whose energy and unselfish play have rubbed off on the rest of the Eagles.

Pulsifer, a former Twin Falls High School star, is part of the scout team for CSI along with Bowen, who graduated from Utah's North Summit High. McIntosh, redshirt freshman forward Nemanja Grujicic and freshmen players Kevin Attila and Paul Bunch join Pulsifer and Bowen in coming to practice an hour early on certain days to learn the opposition's offense. Sixty minutes later in practice, they're expected to give CSI's starters a legitimate look at the upcoming foe.

It's a role they take seriously.

"It's tough to know that you're not going to be on the court (in games), but in practice you know that you're going to help the guys get better that are going to play," said Bowen.

Pulsifer said his approach to scout team work is to "just go hard every single play."

McIntosh, who did not make the trip to Kansas with the team, has done the same all season.

"He's been really good for us, too," said Gosar. "He's brought a lot of energy and taken pride in getting us ready for each game."

Pulsifer and Bowen have similar basketball backgrounds. Each led his high school team to a state title, with Pulsifer guiding the Bruins to the Class 4A crown in 2010 and Bowen helping North Summit to a Utah's 2A title as a junior in 2009.

Pulsifer averaged 14 points and seven boards as a senior, while Bowen scored 15 a game to go with eight rebounds.

While both acknowledged the lack of game time as the hardest part of their redshirt experience, they said their high school championships have served them well.

"To be on a team that's used to winning in high school and then come to a team in college that's used to winning, it's been an easy transition," said Bowen.

Pulsifer said CSI's Region 18 championship and trip to Hutch has produced some déjà vu.

Wofford gets Jimmered, falls 74-66 to the Cougs

The Associated Press

DENVER — Slowing down The Jimmer? It's possible.

Stopping him altogether? Well, as the sign in the stands put it, "Fredette about it."

Wofford used about every combination of defense imaginable Thursday night, but still got "Jimmered" by the nation's leading scorer. Jimmer Fredette dropped in 32 points to lead third-seeded Brigham Young to a 74-66 victory over the Terriers in the NCAA tournament.

Fredette went 10 for 25, made 12 trips to the free-throw line and added seven assists to help the Cougars win their school-record 31st game. Next, they'll play the winner of St. John's and Gonzaga in the Southeast region.

"He's a great player, great scorer," said Jamar Diggs, the Wofford guard who drew the short straw and covered Fredette much of the night. "One of best players I guarded all year."

Wildcats hold off Utah State in 73-68 victory in Southeast

The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Making one mistake after another in the closing minutes, Kansas State kept giving Utah State chances. The Wildcats pulled it out, of all places, from the free throw line.

Jacob Pullen scored 22 points and hit some big free throws down the stretch, helping Kansas State hold off Utah State 73-68 in the second round of the NCAA tournament Thursday night, the Aggies' seventh straight opening loss.

Pullen didn't show any ill affects from the flu that kept him out of practice Wednesday, scoring 10 points in the first half as fifth-seeded Kansas State (23-10) built an 11-point lead. The Wildcats allowed Utah State (30-4) climb back in it with a string of miscues, but closed it out from the line to squelch the 12-5 upset.

A 64 percent foul-shooting team during the season, Kansas State hit nine of 10 from the line in the final 1:08 and 24 of 28 overall to move into the third round of the Southeast Regional against Wisconsin on Saturday.

Buhl boys dominate Kimberly Invite

By Stephen Meyers

KIMBERLY — A personal best the first meet of the season isn't a bad way to begin your state title defense.

Whitney Amoth of Buhl tossed a 43-foot, 10-inch mark in the shot put Thursday at the Kimberly Invitational — more than a foot further than her state-title winning mark last season in Boise.

"It's good to start with a PR," Amoth said. "It's really hard to come outside and not know what the elements are going to be like. To come out and throw the way I did today is awesome."

Amoth, who signed a National Letter of Intent to throw the shot put with Boise State next season, is aiming for her third straight state championship this spring.

"There are a lot of expectations of me this season," Amoth said. "It's going to be a fun season and it'd be a nice way to end the high school career for sure."

Her teammates on the boys side took the team title with 178.5 points, followed by Kimberly (106) and Declo (82).

Buhl's Elenes Ramirez swept the 100, 200 and 400 meters, edging out Alan Cazeau in all three races and winning the 100 meter dash in a time of 10.97 seconds.

"It was a great race and I got it done," said Ramirez, who has hopes of qualifying for state in all three races.

Sam Loveless of Buhl won the 800 meters, Humberto Pacheco of Murtaugh swept the hurdles, Gooding's Mike McHan won the 1,600 and 3,200 meters, and McHan teammate Derek Evans jumped 6-2 to win the

Bruin golf teams cruise at Burley Invite

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Twin Falls' golf talent pool is deep.

At the Burley Invitational on Thursday, four Bruin girls finished in the top five as they easily topped the team standings.

Twin Falls' boys also won, with three top-5 finishers, while the Twin Falls JV team scored low enough it would have finished second.

"We're deep," said Twin Falls' Kyle Miley.

Twin Falls freshman Alec Perkins holed three birdie putts of longer than 30 feet and won his first-ever high school tournament, finishing with a 2-over-par 74 at Burley Golf Course. He said a switch in his driver helped.

"I had a couple drives that went off and I had to hit over some trees to save par a couple times," said Perkins. "Lately I've been a mental wreck, so I was really trying to just get my drives down the fairway. I knew if I did, I would at least set myself up for a good iron shot. I've been really working on my game, especially my short game, and it definitely showed today."

Tied for second, one stroke back of Perkins, were Twin Falls teammates Miley and Connor Meyerhoeffer.

"I played decent, except for on the par-5s," Miley said. "I usually shoot better than that. I haven't been playing well. But my putting wasn't bad."

Canyon Ridge was 10 strokes back in the team standings, led by Michael Curtis with a 4-over 76. Curtis had back-to-back birdies on Nos. 6 and 7. However, he later had trouble on back-to-back holes, going a combined plus-4 on Nos. 12 and 13.

"I played well, I just left a few shots out there. I had a few mistakes that should have been better," Curtis said. "Our team is getting better. "We have high expectations. We want to beat Twin, that's our first goal, and our second goal is to win state."

Twin Falls' Sydney Lee shot an 81 to top the girls' competition, while teammate Jenna Sharp was second with an 87. Also for the Bruins, Emma Bride finished fourth with an 89 and Kelsey Sharp was fifth with a 95.

But the big statement Thursday came on Jackson's 3s. CSI had trailed by double digits in the first half and hadn't led by more than four in the second half.

"A good shooter's going to keep shooting and it's going to fall for him. They fell for (Jackson) at the time we needed them and it gave us a whole lot of momentum," said Buckner.

Jackson's makes were part of an offensive resurgence for CSI. After trailing 41-36 at intermission, the Golden Eagles won the second half by 17. Jerold Brooks scored 14 points, while Mitch Bruneel chipped in 12. Jackson scored 22 after halftime and went 14-for-14 at the foul line for the game after missing five charity tosses in Wednesday's first-round win over Redlands (Okla.) Community College.

"I thought we found our offensive rhythm a little bit and our guys just pinned their ears back and knocked down shots," said Gosar.

Rashard McGill scored 18 to lead TCC, while Carlyle Francis scored 15 and Martterace Brock added 13. But Francis and Brock scored only six in the second half after CSI changed up its defense, switching ball screens and using a zone at times. As TCC's short rotation ran out of steam, CSI put the pedal down.

"I thought they had more gas in the tank when it came down to it," said Barnes.

Today's semifinals offer a chance at revenge for Jackson and Buckner, the only two returning sophomores on this year's CSI squad. They faced Monroe in the Holiday Hoops Classic in Las Vegas last season. CSI lost that game 78-76. The Eagles are anxious for the rematch.

"They have some athletic post players. It's going to be a battle on the glass," said Buckner.

Said Gosar: "They're a very talented ball club. We've got our work cut out for us. ... We've just got to get rested and come out and do what we do."

Barnes for one is impressed with what CSI does.

"Southern Idaho's a really good team," he said. "I think they have a chance to win it all."

Casey takes the early lead in Transitions Championship

PALM HARBOR, Fla. (AP) — Paul Casey changed his schedule leading up the Masters, and it's starting to look like a good move.

Once the fog lifted, Casey played bogey-free on the tough Copperhead course at Innisbrook on Thursday for a 7-under 64 that gave him a two-shot lead after one round of the Transitions Championship.

“The state of my game is going in the right direction,” Casey said.

Casey made back-to-back birdies late in his round to surge past Nick Watney, who is coming off the biggest win of his career in the World Golf Championship at Doral. Watney had seven birdies in 12 holes before missing a few greens toward the end of his round and settling for a 66. Garrett Willis, Martin Laird and Scott Stallings each had a 66 in the afternoon.

John Senden would have joined them except for his second hole of the day.

The Australian opened with a birdie and was in position for another on the par-5 11th. But at the top of his swing with a 3-wood from the light rough, he noticed the ball move and couldn't keep from hitting it. Once he hit his third to the green, he mentioned the slight movement to his caddie and called a rules official. Senden called the one-shot penalty on himself and ended up with a 67.

Morehead State shocks Louisville on late 3

DENVER — Demonte Harper made a 3-pointer from the top of the circle with 4.2 seconds left Thursday to lead 13th-seeded Morehead State to the first upset of the NCAA tournament, a 62-61 victory over No. 4 Louisville in the Southwest regional.

After Harper's go-ahead basket, the Cardinals had a chance to win it, but Morehead's Kenneth Faried blocked Mike Marra's attempt before the buzzer and Louisville was gone after its first game for the second straight year.

Terrance Hill scored a career-high 23 points for the Eagles (25-9), who next face Richmond.

RICHMOND 69, VANDERBILT 66

DENVER — Kevin Anderson scored 16 of his 25 points in the second half, including a floater with 18.7 seconds remaining that helped seal 12th-seeded Richmond's win.

The Spiders (28-7) sprang the second upset of the day at Pepsi Center.

Fifth-seeded Vanderbilt had a chance to tie the game with 2.5 seconds left, but Rod Odom's desperation heave was nowhere near the hoop as time expired.

KENTUCKY 59, PRINCETON 57

TAMPA, Fla. — Freshman Brandon Knight, held scoreless for more than 39 minutes, made a driving layup with 2 seconds remaining to lift No. 4 seed Kentucky over 13th-seeded Princeton.

Knight missed his first seven shots and even found himself on the bench in the closing minute.

Kentucky will face West Virginia in the East regional.

Upperclassmen carried the Wildcats (26-8) most of the way. Darius Miller scored 17 points, and lone senior Josh Harrellson added 15 points and 10 rebounds.

BUTLER 60, OLD DOMINION 58

WASHINGTON — Matt Howard scored on a tip-in at the buzzer, giving eighth-seeded Butler a victory in the Southeast regional.

After Shawn Vanzant missed, Howard went up with his right hand and put the ball in an instant before time expired.

A year ago, Butler's magical run to the NCAA championship game ended with a narrow miss at the buzzer against Duke. In this game, the Bulldogs got the bounce they needed.

TEMPLE 66, PENN STATE 64

TUCSON, Ariz. — Juan Fernandez sank an off-balance 18-footer with under a second to play to end coach Fran Dunphy's NCAA tournament record 11-game losing streak.

Talor Battle's 3-pointer from far behind the arc for Penn State tied it at 64-64 with 12.2 seconds to go. Fernandez and Ramone Moore scored 23 points each for the seventh-seeded Owls (26-7), who next play San Diego State. Battle scored 23 for the 10th-seeded Nittany Lions (19-15).

CINCINNATI 78, MISSOURI 63

WASHINGTON — Yancy Gates had 18 points and 11 rebounds, and Cincinnati made a successful return to the NCAA tournament.

The sixth-seeded Bearcats used their stalwart defense to hold the run-all-the-time Tigers to 29 percent shooting in the first half and 38 percent for the game. Missouri went some 11 minutes without scoring a field goal to fall behind by 15 early in the second half and finished well below their average of 81.4 points per game.

WEST VIRGINIA 84, CLEMSON 76

TAMPA, Fla. — Darryl Bryant scored 19 points and Kevin Jones added 17 to help fifth-seeded West Virginia overcome a slow start and wear down No. 12 Clemson.

Bryant's four-point play and a long 3-pointer by Jones that tied it 40-40 at the half highlighted a game-changing 28-8 run that enabled West Virginia (21-11) to turn a 10-point deficit into a 57-47 lead. The closest Clemson (22-12) would get the rest of the way was three points.

SAN DIEGO STATE 68, NORTHERN COLORADO 50

TUCSON, Ariz. — Kawhi Leonard had 21 points and 10 rebounds, and second-seeded San Diego State survived Devon Beitzel's scoring burst to earn its first NCAA tournament win.

The Aztecs (33-2) had their hands full with the Bears of the Big Sky early. San Diego State pulled away behind its defense in the second half, holding Northern Colorado (21-11) scoreless for nearly 7 minutes.

Beitzel scored eight of his 25 points during a flurry to start the second half, but it wasn't enough for the 15th-seeded Bears in their first NCAA tournament.

GONZAGA 86, ST. JOHN'S 71

DENVER — Marquise Carter scored a career-high 24 points, lifting 11th-seeded Gonzaga and capping a stellar day for the underdogs at the Pepsi Center in the NCAA tournament.

The Bulldogs (25-9) were the third lower seed to spring an upset, joining No. 12 Richmond and No. 13 Morehead State.

WISCONSIN 72, BELMONT 58

TUCSON, Ariz. — Jon Leuer scored 17 of his 22 points in the second half and Wisconsin methodically dispatched Belmont in the Badgers' fifth consecutive NCAA tournament-opening victory.

Jordan Taylor added 21 for the fourth-seeded Badgers (24-8).

The 13th-seeded Bruins never hit their stride against the Badgers, who made 12 of 22 3-pointers, led by Taylor's

5 of 9.

UCLA 78, MICHIGAN ST. 76

TAMPA, Fla. — Tyler Honeycutt and Malcolm Lee scored 16 points apiece and seventh-seeded UCLA held off a late comeback by No. 10 seed Michigan State.

The Bruins (23-10) won despite missing 17 free throws, nine of them in the final 3:40 while the Spartans were making a barrage of 3-pointers to get back into the game. The Bruins advanced to a third-round matchup against No. 2 seed Florida.

PITTSBURGH 74, UNC ASHEVILLE 51

WASHINGTON — Ashton Gibbs scored 20 of his 26 points after halftime, and bigger, stronger Pittsburgh kept the No. 1s perfect against the No. 16s in the NCAA tournament.

The Panthers out-rebounded the Bulldogs 50-27 to make up for so-so shooting by nearly everyone but Gibbs. Pitt (28-5) led by only three early in the second half before putting the game away with a 13-5 run.

CONNECTICUT 81, BUCKNELL 52

WASHINGTON — Kemba Walker had 18 points, a career-high 12 assists and eight rebounds, and No. 3 seed Connecticut earned coach Jim Calhoun his 850th career victory.

Roscoe Smith scored 17 for the Huskies (27-9), who showed no signs of fatigue after winning five games in five days last week to capture the Big East tournament.

FLORIDA 79, UC SANTA BARBARA 51

TAMPA, Fla. — Erving Walker scored 18 points, Chandler Parsons flirted with his first triple-double and Florida coasted to victory over 15th-seeded UC Santa Barbara.

Parsons, the Southeastern Conference's player of the year, finished with 10 points, seven rebounds and a career-high 10 assists. Florida (27-7) made 11 of its first 15 shots, opened up a double-digit lead and kept piling on the rest of the way.

Knicks' 3-fest blasts Grizzlies

NEW YORK — Toney Douglas tied a franchise record by making nine of the New York Knicks' franchise-record 20 3-pointers, scoring 29 points in a 120-99 victory over the Memphis Grizzlies on Thursday night that snapped a three-game losing streak.

Carmelo Anthony scored 28 points and Chauncey Billups added 18 for the Knicks, who were 20 of 36 (55.6 percent) from behind the arc and moved back ahead of Philadelphia into sole possession of sixth place in the Eastern Conference.

Wearing green uniforms for St. Patrick's Day, the Knicks looked much better than they did during their slide. Douglas' sneakers were the wrong shade of green — sort of like the Hulk — but everything else was perfect. His ninth 3-pointer, with 17 seconds left, gave the team a record total and allowed him to match Latrell Sprewell and John Starks on the individual game list.

Mike Conley scored 16 points for the Grizzlies, whose lead was sliced to one game over Utah for the final playoff spot in the West.

Amare Stoudemire scored 16 for the Knicks, who shot 52 percent overall and were 18 of 21 at the free-throw line.

BULLS 84, NETS 73

NEWARK, N.J. — Derrick Rose scored 21 points and Chicago extended its longest winning streak in six years to eight games.

Luol Deng added 19 points for the Bulls (49-18), who took a half-game lead over idle Boston in the race for the best record in the Eastern Conference. Rookie Omer Asik added 11 points and a career-high 16 rebounds.

The Nets rallied in the fourth quarter but Kyle Korver had seven of his 12 in the final period, helping the Bulls hold on.

Brook Lopez scored 22 points for New Jersey, which had won five straight for its longest winning streak in the last three years. Kris Humphries added 13 points and 16 rebounds, and Deron Williams had 11 assists, but Rose controlled him on defense, limiting him to five points on 1-of-12 shooting.

lost in the first round for the second straight year, but as they did in a four-point loss to Wisconsin in 2010, they gave BYU (31-4) quite a game. BYU played with a six- or eight-point lead for most of the second half and never turned it into the blowout that many of these 3 vs. 14 matchups can be.

But in the end, Wofford wound up like most of BYU's opponents this season — on the losing end, with nobody to match one of the country's most tenacious players bucket for bucket. Fredette's 32 points were 3½ more than his season average.

"He's really deceptive quick," Diggs said. "You think you're in front of him and he's by you. He's quick and unlimited range. Tough matchup."

While Fredette forced his share of shots and only went 2 for 9 from 3-point range, Wofford didn't live up to its billing, either. The eighth-best 3-point shooting team in the country went 4 for 19 from behind the arc. Outside of post man Noah Dahlman, who went 6 for 10 en route to 22 points, none of the key players in the Wofford lineup came close to making half their shots. Diggs got his 14 points on 5-for-14 shooting. Cameron

Rundles went 1 for 9 from 3 and had 11 points.

"I thought we did do a great job on Fredette," Wofford coach Mike Young said. "That he'd be 10 of 25 from the field and 2 of 9 from 3, I'd have thought we would have won the game."

Taking turns covering Fredette were Diggs, Rundles and another guard, Brad Loesing. Occasionally, big man Tim Johnson would pop out and try to trap. But it's hard to deny this guy his shots. He'd jack 'em up from 2, 3, 4 feet behind the arc. His favorite play in the second half was driving left to the hoop, then switching to his right hand for a layup.

"They were forcing me left so I kept going left all the way to the basket," Fredette said. "I was able to get to the basket and get the lead up and give us a cushion."

He did that on two straight possessions to give BYU a 49-41 lead. The teams traded buckets for a bit, then Wofford went on a three-minute dry spell during which BYU extended the lead to 65-51.

Game over. Jimmer's a winner again.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"It has long been an axiom of mine that the little things are infinitely the most important."
— Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

In this deal from the 2009 Lehar IMP Pairs at the Reno spring nationals, Marty Hirschman's partner, Frank Kasle, led a low spade against four hearts. Declarer put in dummy's 10, forcing the king. Declarer ruffed and innocently put the heart queen on the table. If Hirschman had fallen for the bait and taken the trick, declarer could have made the contract. He'd win the trump return in dummy, pitch diamonds on dummy's top spades, cross to a club, and run the trumps. In the three-card ending, dummy keeps the diamond K-10 and a club, declarer has the club Q-9 and the diamond eight, and East must come down to a singleton in one minor or the other, whereupon he will be endplayed in that suit.

Hirschman, however, ducked the heart queen! Declarer now had no trump losers, but the spades were dead and nine tricks were the limit.

At another table David Grainger declared four hearts from the North seat, and East elected to lead a low trump. Grainger won his heart nine at trick one, then went for his best legitimate chance of finding the doubleton heart king with East. He cashed the spade ace, pitching a diamond, led a club to the queen, ran the hearts, and squeezed East.

If East pitched from either minor, he would be endplayed with that ace and forced to concede a trick in the other minor. A spade discard would allow declarer to endplay him in either minor. Whatever East did, declarer had 10 tricks.

ANSWER: When your partner doubles one no-trump, it is for penalties, suggesting that your side has the balance of high cards and perhaps that he has a good holding in declarer's first-bid suit. You may not be proud of your hand, but on a spade lead you have no reason to assume that declarer will make his contract, so pass as instructed.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

BBQ Dining Set

Do-it-yourselfers who need extra outdoor seating for the summer's barbecues and parties can build their own dining set with little more than basic tools, lumber, hardware and a weekend of work. This project is easy, inexpensive and fun to build, even for amateurs. The rectangular picnic table and bench set is six feet long. It requires only basic assembly using nuts, bolts and wood screws. The table can be built with either a straight leg design (as shown) or a curved, country-style leg design. The plan includes full-size patterns for angled or curved cuts, step-by-step assembly instructions with photos, exploded diagrams and a shopping list and cutting schedule.

DEAR ABBY: While standing in a checkout line yesterday, I witnessed a cashier speak to the older woman in front of me in a condescending manner. She kept calling her "Sweetie" and talking to her as if she were a 3-year-old. The woman was obviously offended, but said nothing.

I experienced this kind of behavior often when my mother was alive. Receptionists, waitresses, store clerks and others would direct their questions to me and talk to me while my mother stood there, perfectly capable of answering the questions herself. I'm sure these people did not intend to be rude or disrespectful. However, it was extremely annoying to both Mother and me.

Because a person is elderly does not mean he or she is senile. Regardless of their mental capacity, older people have earned the right to be treated with dignity and respect.

— OFFENDED IN KINGSFORT, TENN.

DEAR OFFENDED: I'm glad you wrote. I have seen it happen, too, and with people who should have known better. And when it did happen, the offender was sometimes called on it in a way that wasn't at all "sweet."

Readers, if this letter strikes a familiar chord, please remember that most senior citizens are completely in control of their faculties and treat them accordingly. (Or risk losing a customer.)

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: At least two or three times a week, I receive requests for donations from various organizations. Many times the envelopes contain address labels, calendars and notepads. As much as I would like, I can't afford to donate to every cause. Is it wrong to use these "gifts" if I don't contribute? It's a shame to waste them — especially the address labels. No one else can use them.

I'm sure I'm not the only person who struggles with this moral dilemma. I'd really like your input.

— FEELING GUILTY IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR FEELING GUILTY: The organizations that send those unsolicited mailings count on the recipients feeling so guilty that they'll send something. If using the unsolicited "gifts" makes you feel guilty, toss them or don't open the envelope in the first place.

Compile a list of those causes that you wish to give to, decide what amount you have to donate to all of them, divide the total and send your checks. And as you do, check them off your list to make sure you won't accidentally give twice because many (not all) organizations solicit more than once a year, hoping donors will forget they have given and send more.

DEAR ABBY: I am seeing a therapist for my depression. The problem is I find myself wanting to have sexual relations with him. I'm 23, and he's older than my father, who is 63! What's wrong with me? Obviously, I can't have an affair with my therapist, and I desperately do not want to change doctors. Please help.

— LOVESICK PATIENT IN MONTANA

DEAR LOVESICK: What's going on with you is very common. There is a name for it: transference. While this may be embarrassing to you, I assure you your therapist has heard it before. It's not necessary that you change doctors, but it is important that you be honest about your feelings. (Nobody ever said therapy was for the faint of heart!)

IF MARCH 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: People may think you possess more talent and wisdom than you really do, but that dazzle you do so well attracts them, giving you an opportunity to fulfill your potential. You can be a successful businessperson or use your "street smarts" in lucrative ways in June and August, as long as you aren't side-tracked by an appealing fantasy in July. Your reputation spirals upward to the point where everyone seems to become your fan in August. That is a good time for public appearances, a job change or putting a special someone to the test to see if he or she is sincere about long term intentions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): When it looks too good to be true, it usually is. You may become an impractical dreamer if you are on the prowl for a new romance. If you yearn for love and affection too much, you might not be discriminating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is time for a reality check, rather than writing a check. Acting on a whim or getting in over your head can backfire. Examine the facts; be sure that you only act on the best and clearest of intentions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put your dreams to work in concrete ways. You may change your mind next week due to new information, so don't make decisions based on a sudden whim or brainstorm. Act only from sincere motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Retreating into a world of fantasy won't help you sustain key relationships. A key figure in your life may misunderstand your vagueness and indecisiveness. Don't hold important powwows right now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Turn off the spot that is wasting your cash. At the same time, do not deny yourself those little niceties that make life more pleasant. Your best chance for affection might be right in your own backyard.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put practical matters, not fantasies, first. Someone might ask you to grant a favor that has a few strings attached. You should be careful to read the fine print before signing any crucial documents.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The tell-tale heart lets you know it is lurking nearby. You can sense the beating of something, but it might only be the ghost of Edgar Allan Poe reminding you that not all romantic fantasies can come true.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sherlock Holmes may be needed as an adviser. You would be wise to thoroughly investigate matters that could impact your love life or finances before you sign a contract or make an investment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pay attention to reality even if fantasy beckons. Don't ignore the facts. "Men occasionally stumble over the truth, but most of them pick themselves up and hurry off as if nothing ever happened."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't sell yourself short. An aura of mystery and allure can attract the kind of attention you have always yearned to receive. Don't ignore an obligation as it might be in your best interest to honor it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Observe with objectivity. It may be highly tempting to give into temptations this evening, but you would be wise to keep your wallet in your pocket and your romantic yearnings under control.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It is difficult to be objective when feelings are involved. You may have mixed emotions about an amorous companion or a financial situation. There is a tendency to judge a book only by its cover.
