Wind power moratorium rejected

Idaho House panel votes proposal down; proponents had complained of impacts of wind projects on birds, property values

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A House panel on Tuesday took the wind out of the sails of those demanding a moratorium on wind power development in Idaho.

In an 11-8 vote, the House State Affairs Committee rejected a proposal to ban new turbine projects for two years.

Idaho Falls Republican Rep. Erik Simpson was pushing the moratorium on behalf of residents of his eastern Idaho city and surrounding Bonneville County who are unhappy with dozens of turbines that have been erected, some just a mile or so from their houses. Utilities including Avista Corp. also backed the ban, saying the difficulty of integrating wind power into their electricity systems is driving up customers' rates.

Representatives who voted against the moratorium Tuesday conceded rapid development of Idaho wind farms was creating some concerns,

CSI apartment plan panned by T.F. P&Z

Times-News writers

Affordable housing is always high on a college student's list of needs and desires.

Natasha Williams and Luke Reed, both 20-year-old sophomores at the College of Southern Idaho, said it's one of the reasons they take up residence in CSI's 30-year-old Northview Apartments. The two share an apartment with another roommate.

"People try to get out of the dorms pretty fast," Williams said. "These apartments are really affordable for us. We each pay $180 a month."

In about a year, CSI officials hope more students will have a chance to call apartments owned by the college their home. But the plan has suffered a setback — following passionate testimony Tuesday by neighbors to the proposed 40-apartment complex, the city of Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously voted against recommending the zoning change required to build it on the eastern edge of the college. It still needs to go before the City Council for a final say.

Idaho Supreme Court affirms 93 Golf Ranch rezoning

Giltner Dairy 'jumped on the wrong horse' in trying to stop change

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

JEROME — Giltner Dairy "jumped on the wrong horse" with the law it cited in asking state courts to step in against the more urban-oriented zoning of 93 Golf Ranch, an Idaho Supreme Court justice wrote in a ruling against the dairy.

The unanimous ruling brings to an end the two-year-plus legal wrangling over the zoning change to Golf Ranch, which went from agricultural use to a designation allowing for urbanization. The 843-acre dairy, which neighbors Golf Ranch east of Jerome, worried the new zoning was a precursor to houses and nuisance claims from new residents.

But without actual permits authorizing development of Golf Ranch, the state courts didn't have jurisdiction over the zoning change under Idaho's Local Land Use Planning Act (LLUPA), according to the Supreme Court opinion issued last week.

Since Giltner's legal petition was filed, however, the state legislature has amended LLUPA to broaden the scope of judicial review to include zoning concerns, meaning the suit may have had a

Wendell library board performance criticized

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Citizen frustrations with the way Wendell's library board manages the city library boiled over into another meeting on Monday, this one of the board itself.

Though a representative of the Idaho Commission for Libraries wasn't able to make the evening meeting as planned, Wendell residents in the audience of about 30 people lambasted the board for its conduct — with even a couple of calls for board members to resign. In the middle of it all, the board conducted an hourlong, closed-door performance appraisal of current head librarian Elaine Dalton.

At question is whether the library board is hampering the work of its library directors, including Dalton.

Amid the furor, one member of the volunteer board resigned on March 17.

"I have seen deliberate, unprofessional behaviors. I do not feel comfortable working in that environment," Pam Crawford wrote in her resignation letter, mirroring complaints citizens had raised at a Feb. 17 City Council meeting.

Mayor Brad Christopherson read Crawford's letter into the record at both Thursday's City Council meeting and Monday's library board meeting. At the latter, he also supported two requests by Dalton: for the board meetings to be recorded, saying he believed past meeting minutes from two meetings to be incorrect, and for himself or library liaison Councilman Kent Bates to be present at any closed-door sessions between Dalton and the board.

Board President Jan Gooding acquiesced to both requests and recorded Monday's meeting.

Six other citizens spoke up during the board's public comment period, four of them expressing displeasure with the board.

Mike Hollomon, a former library chairman, said he was disappointed that the board had not tried to address the complaints before they came to a head in a large public meeting.

"I'm very disappointed in the board, that you guys haven't really taken a handle on that and really dealt with the situation. It's part of the leadership of the library board," Hollomon said.

Hollomon also questioned Gooding sitting on the board while acting as editor-in-chief of the Hub City News. He suggested she resign.

"I believe you're putting yourself and your ethics and your newspaper in great peril by being on the board," he said.

Former Mayor George Benson suggested the entire board resign, an idea that drew applause from the audience.

"You know, I listen to Dr. Phil McGraw. A lot of times when things are working out not too well, he'll say 'How's it working for you?' I don't think it's working for you," Benson said. "... We all know things aren't working in the library. Maybe it'd work better if you all resigned."

Outside of public comment, audience members also spoke up to correct open meeting violations.

Benson told the board that minutes needed to be approved by a vote after the board skipped it, and Hollomon told the board that recessing to the closed-door session required a roll-call vote after the board voted regularly. In both cases, the board corrected its actions after the input.

During board comments, Secretary Marilyn Neal said she wished citizens would express concerns earlier and more often.

"We do not get paid a lot for this job. We're doing this because we actually care about the library," Neal said. "I have noticed in a lot of places, not just Wendell, that it's easier to criticize as a group. A lot of your questions would have been answered if you had just called one of the board members. If you ask about small problems, they don't become big problems sometimes."

Sci-fi club founder pleads guilty to child sex charge

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A Burley man accused of using a science-fiction club to lure underage girls to have sex with him has pleaded guilty to sexual battery of a minor.

In accordance to a plea deal, Robert Scott Waldemar, 39, pleaded guilty to felony sexual battery of a minor 16 to 17 years old. In return, the state will drop three other felony sex charges against him.

Waldemar will be sentenced at 1:30 p.m. May 17, in Cassia County 5th District Court.

He was charged in September with two counts of sexual battery of a minor, statutory rape and conspiracy to commit rape.

Waldemar stated in a plea agreement form that the reason he was pleading guilty to the charge was because of "the texting."

Waldemar and his accomplice, Nicholas Brent Dudley, 37, were both slapped with child sex charges after they set up a Star Wars-based club called "Freedom Fleets" and allegedly engaged in sexual conduct with an underage club member.

Dudley was sentenced in November to two to 10 years in prison after entering an Alford plea — a plea deal in which the defendant asserts innocence but recognizes there is likely enough evidence to grant a conviction — to sexual battery of a minor 16 to 17. Under the plea agreement, seven other related sex charges against him were dismissed.

T.F. P&Z says no to downtown church

Commissioners cite potential effect on area's atmosphere

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

When it came to filling buildings or keeping a desired atmosphere in downtown Twin Falls, the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission went with the latter.

By a 4-2 vote, the commission decided Tuesday against allowing the Magic Valley Bible Church into the old Cain's Furniture building on Main Avenue. Commissioner Lee DeVore and Chairman Wayne Bohrn were in favor, with Commissioners Kevin Cope, Terry Ihler, Erick Mikesell and Jim Schouten voting against.

The church's pastor, Greg Morton, said he thinks the church will appeal the decision to the Twin Falls City Council.

Some commissioners worried about the effect on downtown events if the church goes in: Alcohol licenses cannot be issued to premises within 300 feet of a place of worship, according to Idaho Code, though it allows exceptions by the approval of the municipality's governing body.

"We're in a spot that, by possibly allowing this, we could be shutting down a lot of activity," Mikesell said.

But by the same token, even commissioners who voted against the church move fretted about the lack of activity in the area. As Cope said, "There's not a big line for that building."

The public hearing didn't draw much attention: Only four people testified, one against, one with slight concern and two in support. One of the latter was the pastor, and the other a congregation member.

"I can see where if the area was developed more it might not be advantageous (to have the church down there), but now, having us there won't hurt," congregation member Jerry Smith said.

Tony Prater, a downtown business owner, was the only member of the public to speak against the permit on grounds of its fit for a downtown atmosphere. The other concern was for traffic in the area, as the church could expect as many as 150 people in the area for Sunday service.

WHAT'S NEXT

Now: The request for a permit for a church to move into the Cain's Furniture building in downtown Twin Falls failed to pass muster with the Planning and Zoning Commission over questions of it being the right fit for the area.

different outcome if Giltner had filed an update to reflect the amended law or even pursued it at oral argument.

Instead, Giltner continued to pursue its appeal through a law that, if the court followed through, would have an "anomalous result" that allowed judicial review for county zoning decisions, but not for identical city decisions, Justice Joel D. Horton wrote in the majority opinion.

In a concurring opinion, Justice Jim Jones wrote that the dairy "jumped on the wrong horse ... and doggedly continued to ride it," even after LLUPA was amended to allow judicial review of zoning decisions. Jones added

BREAKING IT DOWN

Background: The 93 Golf Ranch east of Jerome was rezoned from an agriculture designation to a designation intended for land switching from agriculture to urban land; the neighboring Giltner Dairy objected, concerned the new zoning was a precursor to housing development and complaints from new residents.

Petition: Giltner filed a legal petition in 2009 asking a judge to review the zoning decision; citing a land use law, a district court ruled it couldn't weigh in unless there were building permits, thus letting the zoning stand.

Laws: Giltner lawyers argued the courts could weigh in under a different Idaho law than the one cited by the district court; in the Supreme Court's opinion, the law cited by Giltner was inapplicable. It concurred with the lower court.

However: The law cited by the district court has been amended since the January 2009 petition to explicitly allow courts to review zoning issues. Justice Jim Jones wrote that if Giltner embraced the amended law, he thinks it would have gotten the review.

that Giltner indicated it wouldn't object to the court taking the amendment into

"I've been impressed with CSI's planning for 45 years, and this one just doesn't make any sense," Commissioner Erick Mikesell said. "... You're moving students away from campus. It just doesn't work. I don't know who came up with that idea. Was it the cheapest, easiest way?"

Many who testified came from the Green Acres Subdivision, which would border the southern side of the complex. Their concerns included light and noise, student parties and traffic, extra foot and vehicle traffic near where their kids play and walk, and the loss of privacy to looming buildings with views into their backyards. Many of them voiced their support for CSI and what it has done, but said there are better locations for the complex on the campus.

CSI Vice President of Administration Mike Mason said CSI understood the neighbors' concerns and said it would work with them to find resolution.

If the council chooses to approve the rezone, the one- and two-bedroom apartments will augment the 42 current units at Northview. CSI's plans for the new apartments leave enough room to build a second 40-apartment unit if demand dictates.

Mason said he hasn't put together the final budget for the project yet, but expects it would cost around $4.7 million. Twin Falls-based Starr Corp. would design and build the apartments, after being contracted for the project by CSI in August 2010. Mason said construction would start in the fall, and the addition should be completed by spring 2012.

"It would be nice to have more options, more buildings and more rooms," Williams said.

Enrollment at the Twin Falls college has grown over the past years, eclipsing 8,000 students per semester. Graydon Stanley, CSI's dean of students, said there is account when rendering its opinion, but still wouldn't include the new portions of the law in its argument.

Jones wrote that he believed the court would have reviewed the zoning decision if Giltner had included the amended law in its argument.

"Since the reinstated review mechanism was procedural or remedial in nature, the amended statute could have been applied here, had the Court properly been asked to do so," he wrote. "Failing that request, the Court has correctly disposed of this matter."

Wind

but they concluded a decision to take a breather on new projects was best left to local county commissions. Rep. Ken Andrus, R-Lava Hot Springs, said he feared a moratorium would be an industry-killing message to companies to blow past Idaho in favor of neighboring and equally blustery states like Wyoming that don't have such restrictions.

"I cannot in good conscience shut people off and chase them out of the state after they've invested several million dollars when we encouraged them to come and build wind farms," Andrus said. "I understand there's a problem in Bonneville County, but I think that is a siting problem with officials. They want it to be our responsibility, but it's not our responsibility for local siting."

If development of wind power is out of control, Andrus said he'd rather dump the 6 percent sales tax rebate that Idaho now offers for alternative energy projects than ban projects.

A separate bill to extend that sales tax rebate until 2014 has been introduced in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, but intense opposition from utilities including Avista, Idaho Power Co. and Rocky Mountain Power has forced behind-the-scenes negotiations with wind companies including Exergy Development Group, leaving that measure's future in doubt.

A decision on the rebate extension is due Wednesday, leaving residents in Simpson's eastern Idaho region who spent two days of hearings railing against wind projects still hopeful for at least a partial victory.

Moratorium proponents complained of wind power project impacts to birds, falling property values — even "wind turbine syndrome," a disputed illness that includes headaches caused by the low-frequency hum of the turbine blades as they spin in the seemingly ever-present gusts blowing from Idaho's high desert to the northwest.

Simpson branded Idaho's wind industry as a government-dependent faction that has taken advantage of federal and state incentives to grow out of control. His moratorium, he argued, would stop any new projects that have yet to begin while leaving projects that are already in development free to move forward.

"A timeout isn't going to hurt the industry," Simpson said. "The wind energy developers are going to have plenty of work while we take a timeout."

During the hearings, however, wind developers with projects in their advanced stages of planning and contracting, including RES Americas' China Mountain project south of Twin Falls, argued that the bill was too ambiguous and left it unclear whether they would be able to proceed or not.

What to do about wind power has become one of the always a waiting list for the Northview Apartments. Last year, the college had a need for about 25 more units. The Northview Apartments are also open to non-college residents, so competition for the low-cost apartments is high.

"The feeling among parents is that they want their students in housing associated with the college. It gives them a sense of belonging," Stanley said, adding that he estimates the new apartments will be completely full once they open their doors. "If we fill them right away we'll just turn around and build more like it. It's a short-term solution with a long-range look" most expensive issues in the Legislature this year, judging from more than a dozen lobbyists employed by the utilities, wind energy developers and foes of the industry who attended Tuesday's hearing.

Before the final vote, Rep. Gayle Batt, R-Wilder and a moratorium backer, quipped that the wind industry was clearly a powerful economic development tool for some.

"I don't deny the hours of testimony we took provided proof to us that in that wind energy is creating jobs, whether it's with attorneys and lobbyists that have been here — or the people on the ground doing the work," Batt said.

Nuisance bill reaches full Senate

Environmental groups, local officials still concerned about measure

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho Senate will now take up debate of a bill to strengthen the state's Right To Farm Act, making it harder to successfully pursue nuisance complaints against agricultural operations.

The Senate Agricultural Affairs Committee approved the legislation Tuesday by a 6-2 vote, passing it on to the full body. It has already passed the House.

Industry groups contend the change is necessary, as Idaho's population has grown and more people who are unacquainted with agriculture live near farm operations. But opponents say the law will make it more difficult to battle cases of large agriculture operations that harm neighbors' quality of life.

The bill would stop agricultural activity from being declared a nuisance if it follows recognized agricultural practices and is properly permitted. It also prevents local ordinances from turning properly conducted agricultural activities into a nuisance.

ABOUT THE BILL

A bill to strengthen Idaho's Right To Farm Act, making it more difficult to pursue nuisance complaints against agricultural operations, is moving in the Legislature. The latest: The Senate Agricultural Affairs Committee passed the bill with a 6-2 vote on Tuesday. It already passed the House. What's next: The bill still needs a full Senate vote to move to the governor's desk.

"Our agriculture producers have become very concerned about the future of their agricultural operations and the future of agriculture itself," said Roger Batt, a lobbyist representing the Coalition For Agriculture's Future, mint growers, the seed industry and wine producers.

He told stories of struggles farmers have faced: complaints about the noise of baling hay at night, calls to police, and one person dangerously climbing up farm equipment to voice concerns.

Dar Olberding, a lobbyist with the Idaho Grain Producers Association, said more houses have been built in the last couple of decades near his once-isolated farm outside Emmett.

"Rural Idaho, which has been the backbone of this state, needs some help," he said.

Some worry that help will come at the expense of local officials.

Twin Falls County Commission Chairman George Urie has reservations about the bill taking away the county's ability to regulate facility expansions. Speaking to the Times-News, he said that the system that's in place now works well.

"I hate to see it opened up that much," he said.

"I'm not sure why there's a problem and why they're dealing with it. I feel like we've done a pretty good job and haven't had a lot of controversy or problems."

Those concerns were also raised in Tuesday's committee hearing. Ben Otto, a lobbyist for the Idaho Conservation League, opposed the bill, saying it would prevent local governments from putting new agricultural ordinances in place to keep up with changes to the industry.

He asked lawmakers to consider potential nuisances created when an expanding agricultural operation impacts someone already living nearby.

The Idaho Rural Council sent a letter to the committee opposing the bill, saying it would weaken the ability of local officials to make land use decisions and give existing agricultural facilities that expand their operations immunity from nuisance complaints.

Committee Chairman Sen. Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, said in an interview that counties and cities haven't done the best they could in protecting farmland and scrutinizing planning and zoning.

That's led to conflicts as homes have encroached upon agricultural operations, he said.

"So they want to sue because they have holes in their new grass because the cow got out," he said. "Well, cows get out and those are things we have to bring to people's understanding."

Sen. Les Bock, D-Garden City, was among those opposed to the bill, saying it is so narrowly written that local ordinances will be overridden.

The folly of solemnity with a straight face

Betcha can't NOT laugh.

There was a British sitcom a few years ago called Coupling that depicted the adventures of six thirtysomethings — sort of like Friends, only better-written and better-acted.

One of the characters in the series was named Jeff Murdock, a weird Welshman with some novel ideas about life.

One of Jeff's theories was called "The Giggle Loop," which he defined as the increasing urge to laugh during a moment of solemnity. He compared it to stacking drinking glasses in a tower; eventually the stack will fall — with disastrous consequences at a particularly inappropriate time.

"To know about The Giggle Loop, is to become part of The Giggle Loop," he explained.

morial service — I was 12 — one of the speakers said he was convinced this particular congregation's doctrine was true because it had been proclaimed as such by a senior church official whom the speaker described as the "sixth-smartest person in the world."

I had 30 or 40 minutes to let that sink in before everybody's heads were bowed in silent prayer.

Ten or 15 seconds into the silence, tears of mirth were rolling down my cheeks and I was biting my tongue so hard that it bled. At just the second when the officiating clergyman said, "Please be seated," I convulsed into mirth and sprinted down the aisle and out the door of the church.

I hid in the back seat of my mother's car. When she arrived a few minutes later, Mom wasn't laughing.

"Whatever possessed you to do that?" she shouted.

"The sixth-smartest person in the world," I replied, breaking out in laughter all over again.

A few years ago, I was speaking to a meeting of a local service club. The previous speaker was a member of a parents' group promoting the virtues of abstinence education instead of sex education in schools.

"Idahoans are overwhelmingly in favor of teaching youngsters to just say NO to pre-marital sex," she said. "And I can say that without fear of contraception."

The speaker meant contradiction, of course, but for me the gig was pretty well up. I slunk low in my chair and muffled my guffaws as much as possible.

But by the time the club's president introduced me, my face and ears were still bright red and there were tears roaring down my cheeks.

Wiping my eyes, I began unsteadily, "Let's begin today with a moment of silence."

Steve Crump is the Times-News Opinion editor. Hear him Fridays at 8:30 a.m. on KLIX-1310 AM.

What he meant is that if you believe you're going to howl like a hyena, you will.

Happens to me all the time. That's why I dread long funerals, moments of silence for the departed — even the two or three minutes in the weekly church service I attend when the pastor calls upon the congregants to be quiet and meditate.

It's my wife's church, and several times I've had to jump up and scurry out the door during these moments of silence, then get far enough away from the building so that I can't be heard laughing uproariously.

Victoria's friends will lean close to her and whisper, "What's the matter with Steve?"

"He was overcome," she replies without cracking a smile.

AROUND THE STATE

Medicaid cuts now cruising through Senate

BOISE — A bill that cuts $35 million from state Medicaid funding is now cruising through the Senate.

Republicans on the Senate Health and Welfare Committee on Tuesday sent it to a full chamber vote.

It results in a total loss of $108 million, including federal matching funds.

It's been the subject of hours of debate this year, but tepid state revenue and the Republican-dominated Legislature's reluctance to boost taxes has necessitated chipping further away at this health care program for poor and disabled adults, children and elderly people.

In Tuesday's Senate hearing, Democrat Les Bock of Boise suggested slashing Medicaid would produce costs elsewhere in the public safety net.

Republican Sen. Patti Anne Lodge countered this bill results from a "small paring knife" that targets waste and duplication, not whole programs.

Bill would allow wolf kills to go unpunished

BOISE — Idaho lawmakers are advancing a bill to prohibit the state from investigating, arresting or prosecuting people who kill federally protected gray wolves.

Republican Rep. Phil Hart's bill also prohibits state employees from helping federal agencies to arrest or prosecute someone who kills a wolf.

The Lewiston Tribune reports the legislation cleared a House committee Monday but was put up for amendments.

The bill faces changes amid concerns it would prevent Idaho game wardens from even passing along information to their federal counterparts. State officials say that's a problem, considering wardens take oaths to cooperate with "all legally authorized agencies in the pursuit of justice."

Wolves in the Northern Rockies are listed as endangered under court order, but state and federal officials have been looking for ways to curb their population.

Senate passes bill to shift animal neglect cases

BOISE — The Idaho Senate has passed legislation to shift some animal neglect cases from the Idaho State Department of Agriculture to local police.

The measure approved Tuesday would move neglect cases involving animals kept as pets to local law enforcement. Idaho's agriculture department would be responsible for production animals under the bill, which now goes to the House.

State Department of Agriculture officials say they now spend time and resources investigating allegations concerning the neglect of so-called companion horses, and these complaints can be handled by local police.

Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, says most calls involve horses kept as pets and many of the allegations are unfounded.

Under Brackett's bill, police would consult the Department of Agriculture if there's a question over which agency should investigate a specific complaint.

Lawmakers OK bill to outlaw assisted suicide

BOISE — Legislation to make assisted suicide a felony is headed to the Idaho House — its final hurdle in the 2011 session.

The measure cleared the House State Affairs Committee on Tuesday. If it becomes law, those found guilty face five years in prison.

Sen. Russ Fulcher, R-Meridian, introduced the legislation saying he wanted to make it clear Idaho rejects assisted suicide as a standard of care. It passed the Senate, but not without emotional debate that underscored lawmakers' discomfort with encroaching on deeply personal decisions even as they seek to protect life.

Lawmakers in the House lauded efforts to improve the measure.

Rep. Phylis King, D-Boise, said she initially had doubts and feared it would allow "frivolous" intervention with end-of-life care, but changes had made it "a pretty decent bill."

Crews find missing Boise snowmobiler

BOISE — A missing snowmobiler without food or water spent his second night on a frigid Idaho mountain bundled up in a pine branch shelter as a trio of wolves watched from several yards away.

Stuck near the Bennett Mountains since Sunday night when his snowmobile overturned and failed start up again, Craig Noll, of Boise, was prepared for the elements, including five layers of clothing, but his biggest challenge was keeping his hands warm after his gloves became soaked and froze.

"The snow was just blowing through my shelter and it was just a mess," said Noll, described by friends as trained in outdoor survival. "I did not want to go through another night out there without gloves.

A National Guard helicopter crew found Noll, 54, Tuesday morning. He appeared in good condition and spirits after his rescue, even joking about his troubles and an unexpected visit from wolves.

"I just started setting up my shelter under this tree, and three wolves about 50 yards away were just watching me. Am I supper tonight or what?" Moll told KTVB-TV while recovering at the search and rescue base camp.

Noll ventured out with two friends Sunday in a remote area 25 miles northeast of Mountain Home, but Noll said he lost track of the others and when he tried to backtrack to find them, his machine got stuck. He said he tried several times to no avail to restart the snowmobile.

Panel backs bill to limit specialty plates

BOISE — Lawmakers are pushing legislation that would limit the number of specialty license plates appearing on Idaho cars and trucks in the future.

The Senate Transportation Committee sent a bill to the Senate Tuesday that would restrict future plates to only state or public agencies or foundations supporting the interests of government.

Existing plates would be grandfathered in to the program, but would be expected to meet specific benchmarks in the future, like reaching at least $1,000 in sales.

But starting next year, the state would only create specialty plates for government organizations.

Supporters say proceeds from plate sales for private groups and charities complain that state government doesn't benefit from the program.

Caldwell Republican Sen. John McGee voted against the measure, saying the proposed rules overreach.

Man shot while driving, crashes car into house

IDAHO FALLS — Idaho Falls police say an argument in a motel parking lot led to a chase and shooting that left one man dead. Officers are seeking two persons of interest.

Sgt. Phil Grimes tells KIFI-TV that the victim was shot in the back while he was driving and his car struck a parked car and then crashed into a house at about 3 a.m. Tuesday. The man died at Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center. His female passenger had minor injuries.

Grimes says detectives have identified two "persons of interest" in the shooting — Jason Burns and Geoffrey Salem Elawadly, who Burns says should be considered armed and dangerous. Burns has a newer model GMC extended cab pickup. No charges have been filed.

Officials have not released the victim's name or age.

Panel advances new ed reform bill

BOISE (AP) — Lawmakers voted Tuesday to advance the third piece of a plan to reform Idaho's public schools with legislation to boost technology in the classroom.

The Senate Education Committee voted 6-3 to move the Republican-backed legislation forward. Supporters said they were convinced by public schools chief Tom Luna's argument that lawmakers needed to take action in the 2011 session to restructure how Idaho's scarce education dollars are spent.

Luna contends the current public school system, which has lost roughly $200 million in the past two years and faces additional cuts in the upcoming year, is no longer sustainable.

"We have to make change," said Sen. Dean Mortimer, R-Idaho Falls. "We cannot live with the system that we have for one more year, in my opinion."

The panel sent the measure, which has undergone significant changes since it was first introduced, to the full Senate for debate.

The bill is the centerpiece of Luna's three-part reform package. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has signed two other parts of the reform plan into law, phasing out tenure for new educators and restricting collective bargaining while introducing teacher merit pay.

The biggest piece of the reform package aims to reform schools with more technology. It was reworked in the Idaho Senate amid protest over provisions that would have hiked class sizes and cut 770 teacher jobs to pay for new technology upgrades and cover budget shortfalls.

The previous bill also triggered strong opposition from teachers, parents and students over provisions that required online learning while arming high school students with laptops.

Credit Card Debt?

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill
CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

CreditGUARD of America, a non-profit licensed debt management service provider, is making a new program available to lower debt payments and become free of all credit card debt in only three to five years. Consumers need only $2,000 or more in total credit card debt and are falling behind on any account, to cut their payment by 35% to 50%, and reduce or eliminate interest charges altogether.

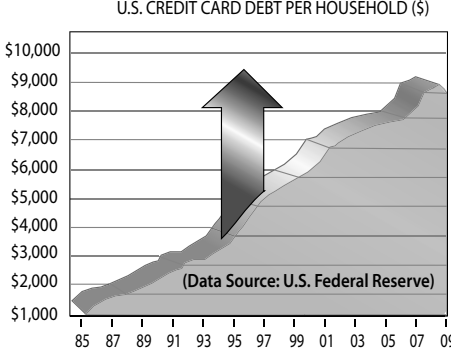

Over 200,000 families, located throughout the U.S. have regained financial independence with CreditGUARD's licensed, bonded and insured service. CreditGUARD of America has received high marks in consumer surveys showing high consumer satisfaction and confidence. The CreditGUARD debt management program can lower your monthly payments by hundreds and save you thousands!

One such case is Sandra L. who proclaimed "CreditGUARD cut my monthly payment by $656 and saved me over $29,206.53 in interest. They saved my way of life and gave me back my piece of mind! Now I can see myself on my way to becoming debt free." or Jeffrey C. who said "CreditGUARD of America helped me consolidate 3 of my credit cards into one affordable payment. They are now saving me nearly $200 a month. Now I will be debt free in 2 years or less"

COME SEE THE CHEAP FATHEADS

No, we're not being invaded by the IRS or overrun by a band of corporate lawyers. And we're certainly not calling ourselves cheap fatheads (we'll leave any appropriate name calling to our customers). We're just having a really great sale on super-fresh heads of romaine, red and green leaf lettuce. And with most stores in town charging double or triple the Swensen's price, you'll want to stock up on as many cheap, fat, delicious heads of leafy lettuce as you can pack into your fridge.

“I think it’s pretty clear to everybody that Libya would be better off without Gadhafi. That is a matter for the Libyans themselves to decide.”
— Defense Secretary Robert Gates in an interview saying it is a mistake to set Moammar Gadhafi’s ouster as a military goal

EDITORIAL

What you don’t know can hurt you

A year after the Idaho Legislature closed information about who holds hunting and fishing licenses in Idaho to the public, the trend toward secrecy seems to be accelerating in this state and beyond. On Monday, the Idaho House of Representatives passed legislation that would make nutrient management plans by dairies confidential.

House Bill 269 would define nutrient management as a trade secret and keep the plans out of the public domain. That’s wrong, because information about waste management is important to protecting the environment and public health.

Our view:
In a region where the impact of dairies is extensive, why did the Idaho House of Representatives vote to keep people in the dark?

What do you think?
We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The Utah Legislature recently passed legislation limiting access to most electronic communication — instant messages, voicemail, text messages, video chat, etc. — by government officials. That makes it easy for them to do all sorts of backroom deals face-to-face using Skype, or even phone texts.

The bill also sharply raised fees for citizens making public-records requests. Basically, Utah has shifted the burden of proof about whether records are open or not to those trying to get the information.

That’s a mistake. You, as a taxpayer, have a vested interest in knowing what your government — and your neighbors whose activities potentially endanger your health and economic well-being — are doing.

For example, the Gooding County Planning and Zoning Commission needs to review nutrient management plans to assure that duplicate fields are not being applied with manure from confined animal feeding operations, according to state Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum.

That, it seems to us, is the essence of local control. Without it, county commissioners and planners have their hands tied. The Senate should scrap HB 269.

Electric utility crews worked through night

On Thursday, March 10, Mini-Cassia experienced another “moderate” wind storm. This resulted in numerous power outages throughout the area. These included four Bonneville Power sub-transmission poles being downed along the Rupert-Heyburn highway that knocked out power to the city of Rupert and surrounding areas. This power was rerouted and power was restored within several hours.

Riverside and East End Electric had 15 power poles, nearly a mile of main line, blow down on 200 East between 100 and 200 South. With an estimated 600 homes without power and looking at 150-plus man hours to restore power, neighboring utilities stepped up and worked through the night to help in restoring power. What may have taken several days for our two small utilities to repair was completed with most customers’ power being operable by morning. The main wires were being lifted back into place around 5 a.m. and, although there is a great deal of cleanup and temp work to be fixed, homes were able to get the heat back on and get back to normal.

I would like to thank the city of Rupert Electric Department, United Electric and the Probst Electric crews for the help we received throughout the night. If ever we can be of assistance to your organization, we will gladly return the favor. Just one more example of why Mini-Cassia is a great place to live!

It’s that ’80s show again

Charlie Sheen is hogging the spotlight. Tron and Wall Street have just left theaters. Moammar Gaddafi is the planet’s top bad guy. Millionaires are enjoying budget-busting tax cuts. Conservatives are saber-rattling against Iran. Bon Jovi is on tour. And Ronald Reagan tributes are everywhere.

If you didn’t know better, you’d think we’d all just stepped out of a 1.21 gigawatt-powered DeLorean and right back into the 1980s.

And in some ways, we have. This collective déjà vu moment is part coincidence, part commodified nostalgia and part impulse to rehash successful old political and entertainment brands. But the similarities between today and the 1980s also reflect a country now run by those who came of age in that decade — people whose worldviews were molded by an era that began with a Chrysler bailout and ended with foreign students protesting dictatorship in a distant square.

This lasting influence goes far beyond the impact of the Reagan Revolution. No matter where we look for the roots of today’s political debates, we find the tropes of ’80s popular culture.

The origins of Barack Obama’s supposed post-racial qualities? Some look to Bill Cosby and the Huxtable Effect, which taught white America to embrace African Americans — so long as they “transcend” their race.

Official deference to the nation’s generals and ever expanding war spending? Our politicians are trying to “let us win this time,” as Sylvester Stallone’s John Rambo demanded in First Blood.

The precursor of today’s socially acceptable Islamophobia and prejudice against those of Middle Eastern descent? Try Marty McFly fleeing suburb-stalking Libyan terrorists in Back to the Future, or professional wrestler Sgt. Slaughter body-slamming the head-dress-wearing Iron Sheik and promising to “clean up America of all this trash.”

No meaningful crack-down on financial-industry abuse? Apparently, the bonfire of the vanities still burns, and Wall Street’s masters of the universe remain largely immune from punishment.

The popular notion that government is either so inept or so corrupt that individuals or nonprofits must take matters into their own hands? It’s inspired not just by Reagan’s sarcastic quip about nine “terrifying” words — “I’m from the government, and I’m here to help” — but also by classic ’80s television shows such as The A-Team, The Dukes of Hazzard and Knight Rider. The theme of that genre was self-sufficiency or even vigilante justice in the face of governmental uselessness or venality.

And what of the rare government success story? Turn to Top Gun, Die Hard, Beverly Hills Cop, Lethal Weapon and every other 1980s production that mass-marketed Ollie North-style bravado and affirmed the idea that government succeeds only when self-styled mavericks inside the system break the rules.

Yes, the 1980s are our very own Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon game: Everything defining today’s politics seems connected to that decade. And even though many of these political narratives were around before the Reagan era they were vastly amplified by the new technologies, corporate reorganizations and federal policy changes of the time.

Recall that the ’80s were the first decade when the majority of American households owned a TV and VCR and enjoyed cable service. This was the moment when companies from consumer-product manufacturers to fast-food chains to retail outlets became vertically integrated. That included the all-important media industry, which by 1983 saw just 50 corporations controlling the majority of U.S. newspapers, tele-

... the similarities between today and the 1980s also reflect a country now run by those who came of age in that decade — people whose worldviews were molded by an era that began with a Chrysler bailout and ended with foreign students protesting dictatorship in a distant square.”

vision stations, magazines, movies and publishing houses. Couple that with the move by Reagan’s Federal Communications Commission to end major restrictions on child-focused television marketing, and the result was a media machine that could trap unsuspecting kids in a bubble of political propaganda.

In the 1980s, children didn’t see E.T. just in a movie theater — we saw that anti-government parable about kids fleeing faceless, jack-booted federal agents in our Atari cassettes, and Reese’s Pieces wrappers. We didn’t see Mr. T just in Hollywood bit parts — we saw this offensive caricature of the “angry black man” in the cereal we ate, the Saturday morning cartoons we watched, the Trapper Keepers we used, the pro wrestling matches we cheered and the A-Team lunch boxes we took to school.

In short, we didn’t simply get disparate bits of popular culture — the 1980s were the first time that kids were subjected to cross-platform marketing throughout the media landscape, and the effects were profound.

Take the change in the economic attitudes of young people. In 1980, a Higher Education Research Institute survey showed that less than two-thirds of college freshmen said being “very well-off financially” was their top priority. By the end of the decade, that number had risen to roughly three-quarters — and has hovered near that mark ever since. What contributed to the change? A steady ’80s diet of Alex P. Keaton on Family Ties, Ricky Stratton on Silver Spoons and a larger “greed is good” ethos that equated the American Dream with following The Secret of My Success.

Near the end of the 1980s, political scientist Francis Fukuyama declared that the world was reaching the “end point of mankind’s ideological evolution.” He was writing about the intellectual triumph of democratic values and free-market principles, but he could have been referring to the entire zeitgeist of the 1980s — one that the children of the decade have now re-created with a mix of Gordon Gekko economics, Top Gun militarism, Lethal Weapon criminal justice and Cosby Show racial attitudes.

History may not have ended, but we are stuck in a loop, our Walkmen endlessly rewinding and restarting the soundtrack to a movie we’ve seen too many times. It’s time to turn it off — or at least to recognize that it’s still playing.

David Sirota is the author of “Back to Our Future: How the 1980s Explain the World We Live in Now.” He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Time to break our dependence on foreign oil

Gas prices are going to shoot up because of the protests in Egypt, or so they say. We are still buying foreign oil. Why? We have our own oil reserves. If the gas prices go up, the price to ship items cross country will go up so the cost of items they ship will go up. So food prices go up and everything goes up.

Foreign oil comes through the New York harbors. Traded right off the boats, whatever they trade the oil for is what we have to pay at the pumps. BP sets their prices on “how much it costs” to produce their gas (It does not cost that much to cook crude into gasoline.) It is cheap to make, like cocaine that sneaks across borders and harbors. A lot of money; breath-taking picture isn’t it?

It is like they are laughing in your face. Demand gas and pay the price. This would be a good time for inventors and brilliant young minds to come up with better vehicles and transportation that will not have to depend on oil. You want your oil? Keep it! I don’t want your blood-mixed oil! Time for real change! No more fake politics — just get it done!

Frenzied ambition: Parents and schools behaving badly

Tiger Mom, meet Lawsuit Mom.

The Tiger Mother, aka Yale Law School professor Amy Chua, sought to assure her children's success in a way that she described as quintessentially Asian: She pushed, bullied and at times insulted them into achieving.

Lawsuit Mom, Nicole Imprescia, took another, quintessentially American approach. First, she paid someone else to handle the work for her. Then she sued to get the money back.

Sigh. Did I mention that the dispute involved preschool? Another sigh.

Not just any preschool, of course, but a tony Manhattan preschool, annual tuition $19,000.

Imprescia sent her daughter Lucia, then 3, to York Avenue Preschool in 2009. She pulled Lucia out one month into the child's second year, after, according to a lawsuit filed in New York State Supreme Court, Lucia was "dumped" in with 2- and 3-year-olds. "Indeed, the school proved not to be a school at all, but just one big playroom," the suit alleged.

Little Lucia was still being taught shapes and colors at 4, for goodness' sake! Didn't they know she needed to be prepping for the ERB, the admissions test for private schools?

All this matters, according to the lawsuit, because, as everyone knows in Manhattan's "insanely competitive" nursery school scene, there is "tremendous pressure to choose the right preschool." Why? Isn't it obvious? Because "getting a child into the Ivy League starts in nursery school."

Hello, Nicole, you think being known as Lawsuit Mom is going to help your daughter get into the right school?

Actually, Imprescia's lawsuit is the second Parents Behaving Badly piece of litigation I've run across recently. In the other case, Houston surgeon Michael Bardwil sued his former prep school, Strake Jesuit College Preparatory School. Bardwil, class of 1973, was angling for his son, T.B., to follow in his footsteps.

According to the complaint, a Strake parent raising money for the school's expansion told Bardwil that the school had "gotten harder to get into" and "that it was very important that he make a contribution" to ensure his son's acceptance.

Bardwil duly pledged $50,000. He had paid $40,000 of that amount when Strake rejected T.B., who had performed poorly on his admissions test. Bardwil filed suit demanding his money back — and putting his son's test scores in the court record for all to see.

Of course, all these parents, in their out-of-control, complete-loss-of-perspective way, are behaving like this because they want what's best for their children. Or at least what they think is best for their children. And if they are caught up in the frenzied, must-get-into-Harvard mentality of modern parenting, it is awfully easy to scoff but — for me, anyway — also easy to empathize.

We are a year away from plunging into college admissions madness and I can already feel myself, against my will, getting sucked in. Worse, I can feel my daughter getting sucked in. She is wonderful, smart, well-adjusted. Whenever the subject of college comes up — and I don't raise it — my message is always: Wherever you end up going to school, you will get a great education, have a wonderful time and succeed in life. I mean this, really I do . . .

but if you hooked me up to a polygraph, it would also show that I do want her to get into a good college. Is the Ivy League essential? No. Would it be nice to have that choice? Um . . . Fifth Amendment.

And while it's easy to blame parents for succumbing to Ivy League-or-bust hysteria, schools themselves feed it. Look on the York Avenue Preschool Web site and you will find assurances that "our students have consistently tested well on the ERB" and "attend some of the finest private schools in the city." In case you want more detail, York provides a handy listing.

The hot movie for parents of high-schoolers these days is Race to Nowhere, a slightly overwrought documentary about students pushed to the brink by standardized tests, by an overload of Advanced Placement classes, by a surfeit of extracurricular activities. The showings, at least around here, have consistently sold out.

For all the Chuas, Imprescias and Bardwils out there, most of us don't want to see our children racing to nowhere. It's just that the treadmill is so hard to resist, and even harder to step off.

Don't give up on nuclear energy

In the 1979 movie The China Syndrome, reporter Kimberly Wells (played by Jane Fonda) witnesses an accident at a nuclear power plant and then uncovers a plot to keep it a secret in order to protect the power company's billion-dollar investment. The film was a gift to the political left, which at the time opposed the pursuit of nuclear energy to reduce our addiction to foreign oil. In some liberal circles, that opposition remains strong.

The film, along with real-life accidents such as Three Mile Island (also in 1979), in which no one was killed, and Chernobyl (1986), which, according to the World Nuclear Association, "killed two Chernobyl plant workers on the night of the accident, and a further 28 people within a few weeks, as a result of acute radiation poisoning," account for much of our modern thinking about all things nuclear. Other films, like Dr. Strangelove, Fail-Safe and On the Beach — along with the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, which ended World War II and launched the Cold War with the Soviet Union in which "mutual assured destruction" and civil defense drills became the norm — make us nervous about what the unrestrained power of the atom can do.

The nuclear reactors at Japan's Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear plant were damaged by the tsunami, not the earthquake, and not by faulty construction or worker error, as was the case at Chernobyl and to a lesser extent Three Mile Island.

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission has significantly tightened standards since those incidents, but no regulation or safety precaution can offer a 100 percent guarantee against an accident or natural disaster.

Politicians tend to overreact to such things and stoke public fear. The otherwise cautious and principled German Chancellor Angela Merkel quickly announced plans to shut down seven of her country's nuclear power plants pending a safety review.

U.S. Energy Secretary Steven Chu, a proponent of nuclear energy, told members of a House subcommittee Tuesday, "The American people should have full confidence that the United States has rigorous safety regulations in place to ensure that our nuclear power is generated safely and responsibly." He faces off against nuclear energy opponents, including Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass., who was recently quoted as saying, "We have to listen to what is happening in Japan and protect ourselves and our people." Run for the hills! Chicken Little lives!

The Houston Chronicle quoted Peter Cardillo, chief market economist for Avalon Partners, a brokerage house in New York: "It's a situation where you sell (your stocks now), and you ask questions later," thus indulging in self-fulfilling prophecy as Japanese and American markets dipped.

The Obama administration continues to stonewall when it comes to exploring for new sources of oil in or near American territory. (It has approved just two deep-water drilling sites since the BP oil spill in the Gulf, which, contrary to doomsday predictions, did not foul beaches for a decade or cripple the seafood industry, which seems to have recovered well in plenty of time for the summer vacation rush.) Too many politicians continue to oppose coal exploration, an American natural resource. Without advances in nuclear energy, the U.S. will continue to face not only the petroleum price equivalent of mood swings, but also deepen our dependency on foreign oil, a dependence that will ultimately lead to a host of domestic and international problems.

Cooler heads must prevail and conclusions avoided until a full assessment of the Japan disaster is known. Scientists and engineers have made great progress in addressing safety issues raised by Three Mile Island and Chernobyl, but again, nothing is foolproof or there would be no traffic accidents or airplane crashes. And we still drive and fly, don't we?

We need clean energy that can be developed on our own territory. Nuclear power, in conjunction with the discovery of more oil and the use of coal, natural gas, bio fuels, wind and solar power, offers the best option for the foreseeable future.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Teachers not all same as Malkin's picture

Dear Michelle Malkin: I have a problem with the picture you paint in your article of March 6.

I am a teacher of 29 years in the right-to-work state of Idaho. I joined the association for the same reason I joined the Readers, Math, Science and History associations.

As a teacher, everything in my job is controlled by an elected official. How I teach, what I teach, where I teach, everything is controlled by them. I must be involved in the election and legislative process for this reason.

As for union thug bosses, my Idaho Education Association president was in the classroom just a few years ago and then went into leadership. I do spend a lot of time teaching, even helping before and after school, during recesses and during my lunch. In Idaho, our students do come first, but because of articles like yours, people think we don't work very hard. I work very hard even though my state pays 49th in the nation. If I wanted money, I would not teach. I teach for the children and for the look on their faces when they finally get it.

Those in the East are really different from us in the West. We do have activities when the Legislature does something we really don't like, but we do not walk out on our children, parents, administrators or board. Our district understands that we are also voting Americans who have the right to voice our opinions. Just because one leader said agitate does not mean we all do it.

Our goals are raising great free-thinking Americans, not indoctrination, social upheaval and perpetual agitation. Please do not lump all teachers and associations into one group.

Thanks.

Idaho dairy group backs sweeping reforms in Farm Bill

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Members of the Idaho Dairymen's Association are hoping the 2012 Farm Bill will contain significant dairy policy changes.

On Friday, IDA members voted in favor of adopting the "Foundation for the Future," (FFTF) program, created by the National Milk Producers Federation.

IDA Executive Director Bob Naerebout told the Times-News that 86 percent of ballots cast were in favor of the new program approved by the Federation on March 8.

Naerebout said the new program would eliminate the current Milk Income Loss Contract (MILC) and create a market stabilization program that would kick in when producers' operating margin hit a certain bottom rate.

The 2008 Farm Bill set a $16.94 price per hundred-weight of milk trigger for MILC payments to a variable trigger adjusted monthly for variations in feed costs above $7.35 per cwt of a 16-percent protein feed ration.

The Federation argued the payments inadequately offset high feed costs and offered an inconsistent safety net for producers facing low- operating margins.

"Establishing the Dairy Producer Margin Protection Program would protect farmers when their margins are squeezed by low milk prices and high feed costs," Naerebout said.

He said the money spent on the MILC program would be shifted to the new, voluntary program.

"Other changes provide for the creation of a mechanism that would swiftly react to market demands, like reducing milk production. The program models how that reduction would take place nationwide," Naerebout said.

"Our industry has a once in a lifetime opportunity to make dramatic improvements to dairy policy, but the only way we'll achieve that is to work together, both in Idaho as well as across the country, to pursue a specific program," said Mike Roth, IDA president and Jerome County dairy farmer.

An analysis performed by the American Farm Bureau Federation's Economic Analysis Department, Helping teachers teach teens about personal finance

Few people doubt that Idaho teens are at risk if they graduate from high school without knowing how to balance a checkbook or the true cost of credit card debt. However, a recent Jump Start Coalition for Financial Literacy survey found that high school seniors nationwide knew the correct answers to only 48 percent of questions about personal finance.

To better equip Idaho's high school teachers to teach teens the fundamentals of finances before leaving school, University of Idaho Extension educators and partner credit unions have developed and led 18 one-day workshops for high school teachers from 40 Idaho counties. Those teachers, in turn, have taught some 35,000 Idaho students.

Each workshop for teachers uses the National Endowment for Financial Education's high school financial planning program and provides teachers with instructor manuals, a student guide and web-based resources. More of this training is being scheduled over the summer.

Hiring rebounds, but many jobs are gone for good

By Kathy Bergen
Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — After two years of painful contraction, construction executive Jim McShane is hiring again, seeking out accountants, property managers and engineers for projects ranging from offices and schools to medical-care facilities and affordable housing.

But he is moving with extreme caution, watching the unemployment rate to gauge whether the economic recovery has legs. And he is blown away by the deluge of applicants.

"We advertised for a project engineer and had over 400 applicants ... and many had five to 10 years of experience," said McShane, chief executive of The McShane Cos., based in Rosemont, Ill. "It was staggering, just staggering."

Many employers, in Chicago and elsewhere, are hiring again, easing fears that the economic recovery will be jobless. Among the more hopeful signs: The unemployment rate has slipped below 9 percent for the first time in nearly two years.

"The jobs picture looks like it's at a turning point," said former Federal Reserve governor Randall Kroszner, a University of Chicago economics professor. His forecast is now "partly sunny with a threat of intense storms," an upgrade from his "partly cloudy with a threat of intense storms" prognosis late last year.

But deep wariness remains among observers who predict a long road back to fuller employment, a path that could take several years to traverse. The housing market remains moribund, the auto industry is anemic and the Middle East is in turmoil, sending oil prices upward. Worries about government fiscal stress and about future health care costs persist. And federal stimulus money is tailing off.

"I'll acknowledge an improved economic environment, but I doubt if it's sustainable in the second half of the year," said Donald McNeeley, president of Chicago Tube & Iron, which supplies power plants, missile projects and heavy machinery makers.

Good for GDP does not necessarily mean good for workers

Here are four things you often hear asserted about the economy. Guess which ones are wrong:

- The major reason job growth has been so slow is that there wasn't enough fiscal stimulus.
- Off-shoring creates more jobs at home than it kills.
- Industrial policy always fails.
- Globalization is not a major contributor to rising income inequality.

In fact, all four statements are wrong. And now Michael Spence has the proof.

Spence is former dean of the Stanford Graduate School of Business, former dean of Harvard's faculty of arts and sciences and a world-class economist with a John Bates Clark medal and Nobel prize. And earlier this month Spence was in Washington to make a presentation at a high-powered conference organized by the International Monetary Fund. The moment I heard it, I knew he was on to something important.

Spence and Sandile

Hlatshwayo, a new colleague of his at New York University's Stern School of Business, took the U.S. economy and, from a statistical standpoint, divided it in two.

In one part were jobs in those companies that operate in a global market, subject to competition from foreign firms and suppliers. Most manufacturing wound up in the tradable bucket, but so did agricultural products, minerals, energy and a healthy chunk of business and financial services, from investment banking to management consulting. Not all these companies export, but they are all subject to import competition.

In the non-tradable bucket went activities such as government, health care, retail, construction, hotels, transportation, wholesaling — things that pretty much have to be done here and sold here.

When they looked at what happened between 1990 and 2008 — a period of rapid globalization — two things stood out.

One was that all the job growth came pretty much in the non-tradable activities, in particular government and health care, while across wide swaths of the tradable manufacturing sector, jobs declined significantly.

The other thing they noticed was that in terms of economic value-added – the “output” that is measured by GDP and generally correlates with income – the tradable sector gained a slight edge.

Put the two together – the very unequal employment growth and nearly-equal output growth – and what you get is an economic tale of two cities, one that is growing in terms of jobs but not in income, another that is growing income but not jobs.

The story behind the numbers goes like this:

Companies in the tradable sector, under the pressure of global competition, are busily outsourcing low- and mid-skilled work to other countries to become more competitive and more productive. The higher-skilled Americans who remain in those firms share in the benefits of that shift through wages and salaries that started higher and have been growing faster.

In the untradable sector, the story is one of rapidly rising employment but not so rapid a rise in output, which has translated into stagnant wages and benefits, both because of the slower growth in productivity and the increased competition in the labor market from all those workers laid off by the tradable sector.

In short, what ails the U.S. economy is primarily a structural problem, not a cyclical one that can be effectively dealt with through the magic of short-term Keynesian stimulus. Unless we find a way to dramatically increase the size and scope of the tradable sector, Spence says, we’re in for an extended period of slow job growth and rising inequality.

One response to this dilemma would be to build trade barriers, which Spence, like nearly every other economist, thinks would be a big mistake. But at the same time, he is equally dismissive of free-market cheerleaders who argue that globalization makes everyone better off in the long run – a view, he says, that is not supported by theory or experience. More significantly, it is a view that is increasingly rejected by voters.

Instead, Spence argues that what’s needed is a new policy tradeoff that strikes a better balance between the efficiency and overall economic growth that globalization delivers and the inequality of incomes and job opportunities that it creates.

In Spence’s view, redistributing income from the winners to the losers of globalization can only get you so far. The bigger challenge, he says, is to find a way to tilt the market incentives so that businesses – in particular, big multinational corporations – are more willing to invest in the physical and human capital necessary to make American workers more productive, rather than simply outsourcing work overseas.

Steven Pearlstein writes about the economy for The Washington Post.

according to the study’s executive summary, said that although the AFBF, “doesn’t support mandatory supply controls,” the “competitive pricing scheme included in the (FFTF) is a step in the right direction for the industry.”

A report from the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute at the University of Missouri found the program would reduce price volatility and help the industry recover from times of economic stress.

Naerebout said the industry’s next step is educating Congress on why the new program is needed.

“We’re hiring in very specialized areas, specifically in engineering and cold welding, but very slowly,” he said. The Romeoville-based company may add 25 positions to its workforce of 400 this year, but that’s still off its pre-recession peak of 500.

Debate has swirled over whether the country will return to pre-recession rates of economic growth and unemployment, or whether a “new normal” will emerge, as has been suggested by executives at Pimco, a huge investment management firm with deep expertise in bonds. This post-recession world would be marked by slower growth, higher unemployment and greater odds of systemic shocks.

Not everyone is buying the pessimistic outlook. “I don’t want to be Pollyannaish for recovery, because there are risks,” Kroszner said, “but broadly speaking, if there is not a major event or major glitch, then I think moderate recovery is likely.”

But Tony Crescenzi, a Pimco strategist, thinks a “new normal” will be felt in some key industries, notably housing and autos.

“The construction industry lost 2 million jobs in the recession, during a period when housing starts fell from 2 million, annualized, to half a million,” he said.

GREGG MIDDLEKAUFF'S QUOTE OF THE DAY

A Libyan rebel adjusts his scarf Tuesday before moving closer to the frontline after Moammar Gadhafi's forces fired on them near Ajdabiya, Libya.

Gadhafi's forces terrorize Libyan city

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Moammar Gadhafi's snipers and tanks are terrorizing civilians in the coastal city of Misrata, a resident said, and the U.S. military warned Tuesday it was "considering all options" in response to dire conditions there that have left people cowering in darkened homes and scrounging for food and rain-water.

Libyan state TV broadcast what it was live coverage of a brief statement he made to enthusiastic supporters at his residential compound in Tripoli. It would be Gadhafi's first public appearance in a week.

Standing on a balcony, he denounced the coalition bombing attacks on his forces, and told the crowd, "in the short term, we'll beat them, in the long term, we'll beat them."

The state TV said Gadhafi was speaking from his Bab Al-Aziziya residential compound, the same one hit by a cruise missile Sunday night.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire and loud explosions sounded in Tripoli after nightfall, possibly a new attack in the international air campaign that so far has focused on military targets. But conditions have deteriorated sharply in Misrata, the last major city in western Libya held by the rebel force trying to end Gadhafi's four-decade rule. Residents of the city 125 miles southeast of Tripoli, say shelling and sniper attacks are unrelenting. A doctor said tanks opened fire on a peaceful protest on Monday.

"The number of dead are too many for our hospital to handle," said the doctor, speaking on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisals if the city falls to Gadhafi's troops. As for food, he said, "We share what we find and if we don't find anything, which happens, we don't know what to do."

U.S. TO TURN OVER CONTROL OF LIBYA EFFORT

The four-day air assault in Libya will soon achieve the objectives of establishing a no-fly zone and averting a massacre of civilians by Moammar Gadhafi's troops, President Barack Obama said Tuesday, adding that despite squabbling among allies, the United States will turn control of the operation over to other countries within days.

"When this transition takes place, it is not going to be our planes that are maintaining the no-fly zone. It is not going to be our ships that are necessarily enforcing the arms embargo. That's precisely what the other nations are going to do," the president said at a news conference in El Salvador as he neared the end of a Latin American trip overshadowed by events in Libya.

He spoke as one senior American military official said the Persian Gulf nation of Qatar was expected to start flying air patrols over Libya by this weekend, becoming the first member of the Arab League to participate directly in the military mission.

— The Associated Press

Gadhafi's forces are strong enough to hold Misrata or Ajdabiya, a key city in the east that is also a daily battleground. But the airstrikes and missiles that are the weapons of choice for international forces may be of limited use.

"When there's fighting in urban areas and combatants are mixing and mingling with civilians, the options are vastly reduced," said Fred Abrahams, a special adviser at Human Rights Watch.

Power connected at nuke plant

Equipment check could take weeks

FUKUSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Workers at a leaking nuclear complex hooked up power lines to all six of its reactor units, but other repercussions from a massive earthquake and tsunami still rippled across Japan as economic losses mounted at three flagship companies.

The progress on the electrical lines at the Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power plant was a welcome and significant advance Tuesday after days of setbacks. With the power lines connected, officials hope to start up the overheated plant's crucial cooling system that was knocked out during the March 11 earthquake and tsunami that devastated Japan's northeast coast.

Tokyo Electric Power Co. warned that workers still need to check all equipment for damage first before switching the cooling system on to all the reactor units — a process that could take days or even weeks.

Late Tuesday night, Tokyo Electric said lights went on in the central control room of Unit 3, but that doesn't mean power had been restored to the cooling system. Officials planned to try to power up the unit's water pumps later Wednesday.

Emergency crews also dumped 18 tons of seawater into a nearly boiling storage pool holding spent nuclear fuel at Unit 2, cooling it to 122 degrees Fahrenheit (50 degrees Celsius), Japan's nuclear safety agency said. Steam, possibly carrying ra-

FDA RESTRICTS FOOD IMPORTS

Ratcheting up screening on food products from Japan, the Food and Drug Administration on Tuesday announced that all milk, milk products and fresh fruits and vegetables from four areas near the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear complex will be barred from importation into the United States.

In addition to prohibiting those products from Fukushima, Ibaraki, Tochigi and Gunma prefectures, any other food imports from those regions will be automatically diverted for screening upon arrival at U.S. ports and will be permitted to enter the country only if radiation tests are negative, according to an FDA statement.

Japanese authorities already have barred the shipment of raw milk and spinach from one or more of the prefectures because of radiation concerns.

dioactive elements, had been rising for two days from the reactor building, and the move lessens the chances that more radiation will seep into the air.

Added up, the power lines and concerted dousing bring authorities closer to ending a nuclear crisis that has complicated the government's response to the catastrophic earthquake and tsunami that killed an estimated 18,000 people.

New homes are becoming a bad deal in weak markets

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new home, the dream of many would-be buyers, makes less and less financial sense in many places.

A wave of foreclosures has driven down the cost of previously occupied homes and made them even more of a comparative bargain. By contrast, new homes have become more expensive.

The median price of a new home in the United States is now 48 percent higher than that of a home being resold, more than three times the gap in a healthy housing market.

Such a disparity can be a drag on the economy. New homes represent a small fraction of sales, but they cause economic ripples, bringing business to construction and other industries. Sluggish new-home sales deprive the economy of strength.

"A lot of people are saying, 'If I can get a great deal on a home already on the market, why go through the headaches of getting a new home?'" says Mark Vitner, a senior economist with Wells Fargo. "There's a relatively small group of people who have the credit, have the down payment and are secure in their jobs that can go out and buy new."

The gap is widening because prices of previously occupied homes are falling fast, pulled down by waves of foreclosures and short sales. A short sale occurs when a lender lets a homeowner sell for less than is owed on the mortgage. New homes aren't directly affected by such sales.

The median price of a new home — the price at which half the homes sell for more and half sell for less — has risen almost 6 percent in the past year to $230,600, even though last year was the worst for sales in nearly a half-century.

Slowed by those higher prices, new-home sales have plummeted over the past year to the lowest level since records began being kept in 1963. The government provides fresh data on new-home sales Wednesday.

By contrast, sales of previously occupied homes have fallen almost 3 percent in the past year. Prices have dropped more than 5 percent. In February, the median price for a resale was $156,100, according to the National Association of Realtors.

That adds up to a price difference of $74,500, or 48 percent, the highest markup in at least a decade. In healthier markets, a new home typically runs about 15 percent more, according to government data.

Home prices and sales still vary sharply among metro areas. Cities with more foreclosures tend to have more resale homes that have languished on the market and are priced at a bargain.

That makes new homes in those areas comparatively expensive.

FOOD FADS

How bacon sizzled and people got sweet on cupcakes

By The Associated Press

Bacon. It's everywhere. Wendy's features it in the "Baconator" and Paula Deen crumbles it into quiche. Ditto for those deluxe cupcakes top-heavy with frosting. Is there a bakery or supermarket that doesn't sell them?

Bacon and cupcakes — like sliders, bubble tea, pop-sicles, food trucks and chipotle — have caught on from coast to coast.

But how?

Food fads don't always spread exactly the same way as other types of pop culture, such as fashion and music. Chefs don't walk the runway at food shows holding up this spring's hot pad Thai dish. There are no authoritative top-ten charts for food that show red velvet cake is No. 1 with a bullet.

But favored foods items can go viral in the time it takes to upload a picture of salted caramel ice cream. The arbiters of trendy tastes include big-name chefs, bloggers, urban hipsters, eater tweeters and journalists. Usually, they work in some hard-to-quantify combination.

"It's kind of like trying to grab a jellyfish, in terms of trying to understand it," said Ted Allen, host of the Food Network's "Chopped."

Food fads are older than the fondue pot in the back of your parents' pantry. But the lines of dissemination were easier to track before the existence of the Food Network and the Web. The high-brow authority was Gourmet magazine. Home cooks took cues from cookbooks and friends. There were just a few famous culinary authorities, like Martha Stewart or Paul Prudhomme, who helped popularize Louisiana cuisine.

Top-down authorities live on in the food world, even if they now share the stage with the cyber-masses. Serious eaters still are influenced by the magazines like Food & Wine and Bon Appetit. But the rise of food TV has dramatically multiplied the number of celebrity cooks who can popularize a food item. Think of what Rachael Ray did for extra-virgin olive oil, or what Bobby Flay did for grilling.

Television is widely believed to have kick started the long-running cupcake craze, though celebrity chefs had nothing to do with it. Credit here goes to Carrie Bradshaw and her pals on "Sex and the City," who treated themselves to the luxurious cupcakes at Manhattan's Magnolia Bakery. Mainstream and social media took it from there.

The obvious difference now is how food blogs and food-centric websites offer more possible trends at a faster rate, whether it's Epicurious listing "16 Restaurants that count" or a contributor posting a picture of tuna tartare on Foodspotting.

"Because of social networking, everybody is now a food expert," said Phil Lempert, a food marketing expert known as The Supermarket Guru. "When you look at Yelp, when you look at Foodspotting, when you look at all the social networking tools that are out there, everybody is telling everybody about every food trend that exists. The rules have changed dramatically and you can get something going very quickly."

Consider how social media helped bring food trucks into the fast lane.

Trucks serving burgers or gyros are nothing new, but the mania for hip, high-end mobile foods like Belgian waffles is more recent. The Kogi Korean taco truck in Los Angeles became the breakout star of the movement a couple of years ago. The fact that the food was creative and tasty made it popular, but Kogi's use of Twitter to keep fans posted on the trucks' whereabouts added to the buzz.

"If there were no Twitter, would the food truck trend be as large?" asked Food & Wine editor-in-chief Dana Cowin. "I think the answer to that actually has to be 'No.' Because before there was Twitter, there were food trucks: they were the local taco trucks ... Once you hooked up Twitter and chefs and higher-end ingredients at a great value, you've got a perfect match."

Media played a role too. Newsweek in 2009 dubbed Kogi "America's first viral restaurant" and the "food media elite," as Allen calls them, wrote about it too. The result is that food trucks have become as ubiquitous as package delivery vans in downtown neighborhoods from Miami to Milwaukee.

If there's one food trend that illustrates how top-down and grassroots phenomena combine it might be bacon.

It likely started with chefs tossing bacon into dishes earlier this century to add a dash of umami flavor. That encouraged others to think of bacon as more than a just a complement to eggs. The movement gained sizzle through media exposure and word of mouth. It appears that it was not one big thing that led to the bacon Renaissance, but a bunch of smaller things.

For instance, in southern California about six years ago, Rocco Loosbrock paired peppered bacon with Syrah wine at a tasting. His "swine and wine" was such a big word-of-mouth hit it inspired him to go whole hog into bacon. Today, he sells bacon jerky, bacon chocolate, bacon coffee and more on his Bacon Freak website, part of a suite of bacon sites.

Today, talk of bacon in sophisticated circles can bring on the same eye-rolls teens react with when middle-age people say "Dude." But while food hipsters may have moved beyond bacon, America has not. Chain restaurants serve everything from bacon-wrapped sea scallops to bacon club chalupas.

And perhaps it was simply inevitable, but there also are recipes online for bacon cupcakes.

"Bacon is one of the greatest things that was ever invented," said Allen. "I think what has peaked is us discussing that fact."

Timing is key in this 40-minute dinner

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

A glance at the ingredient list might not garner the impression that this is "spaghetti just a little bit different than usual," as the title is translated in Carol Field's classic 1997 Italian cookbook, "In Nonna's Kitchen" (HarperCollins).

You could make a recipe similar to this one in less time, and you probably have. But technique and timing elevate this dish. As mentioned in the headnote of the original recipe: "The most important part ... is mixing the ingredients together well, so they 'marry' and are equal, no one taste overwhelming the other." For example, three garlic cloves are used to infuse the oil and don't end up in the final dish.

We've kept it at 6 servings, because this pasta makes for great leftovers, cold or crisped in a skillet. Serve with roasted, crumb-topped tomato halves and a green salad.

SPAGHETTI UN PO' DIVERSI

6 servings

Kosher or coarse sea salt for the pasta water, plus 1/2 teaspoon for the bread mixture 14 ounces regular or multi-grain spaghetti
3 slices (3 1/2 ounces total) country-style bread, preferably salt-free and 2 days old
3 large cloves garlic
6 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

DEB LINDSEY/
For The Washington
Post

1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
10 to 12 large basil leaves
3/4 teaspoon dried oregano
2 ounces (1/2 cup) freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese

Fill a large pot with 5 quarts of warm/hot water. Bring to a boil over high heat. Add a large pinch of salt and then the pasta; cook according to the package directions. Drain, reserving at least 1/2 cup of the cooking water.

Meanwhile, toast the bread so it is lightly browned and crisp. Tear into large pieces.

Cut the garlic cloves in half, discarding any green veins inside. (They are bitter.)

Heat 2 tablespoons of the oil in a large nonstick saute pan or skillet (big enough to eventually hold all the cooked pasta) over medium heat. Add 2 garlic clove halves and the toasted bread pieces; cook for 2 minutes, until the garlic just begins to turn golden. Crush the halves to release their fragrance into the oil and then discard them. Transfer the bread to a plate; when it is cool enough to handle, tear or crumble into very small pieces.

Add 2 tablespoons of the oil to the pan or skillet over medium-low heat. Add 2 of the garlic clove halves and cook for 1 to 2 minutes, until they begin to turn golden. Crush to release their fragrance, then discard them.

Stir in the torn or crumbled bread, crushed red pepper flakes and 1/2 teaspoon of salt; cook for about 10 minutes, stirring a few times, until the bread is crisped and crunchy.

Stack the basil leaves (to taste) and roll tightly. Cut crosswise to create thin ribbons (chiffonade).

Heat the remaining 2 tablespoons of the oil in a small skillet over medium-low heat. Add the remaining 2 garlic clove halves and the dried oregano and cook for about 10 minutes. Remove from the heat; discard the garlic.

Add the drained pasta to the pan or skillet. Drizzle the oregano-flavored garlic oil over the pasta, then stir in the cheese and the basil. Toss to combine; add some of the pasta cooking water as needed if the pasta seems dry.

Transfer to a large, wide bowl; serve immediately, family-style.

What happens when the freezer breaks down?

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q My freezer went out a day ago and was just repaired a few minutes ago. Does all the food in the freezer need to be thrown out?

A Freezers will keep food cold longer than you may think. Food usually will keep for 4 to 6 hours in a refrigerator, 1 to 2 days in the freezer attached to a refrigerator, 2 to 3 days in an upright freezer and 3 to 4 days in a chest freezer.

Now, those numbers assume that you kept the appliance door closed, and that the freezer is full. This is when it pays to be someone who keeps too much food in your freezer — solid packs of frozen chicken act like ice packs. When bad weather is coming, I toss a couple of jugs of water in my upright freezer. They'll keep everything else cold longer if the power goes out.

As soon as your freezer is working, you have to act quickly to evaluate the food. First, keep a thermometer in your freezer so you can check to make sure the temperature stayed below 40 degrees. You need to check immediately: It won't do any good to check the temperature an hour after the power comes back on or after the freezer is repaired.

If the temperature got above 40 degrees, quickly evaluate the condition of the food. If ice crystals are visible or the food feels cold, it can be refrozen safely, although quality may suffer. If the food thawed completely or was above 40 degrees for more than two hours, throw it out.

It sparkles like the sea.

WARM MUSHROOM, BACON AND MOLASSES VINAIGRETTE

"This warm dressing is great served over salads, on grilled chicken, warm sliced beets or even country-fried potatoes. It's unbelievably delicious," said Ketchum chef Jeff Keys, author of "Well Dressed: Salad Dressings."

3 thick-cut slices smoked bacon
2 tablespoons reserved bacon drippings
3 tablespoons finely diced shallots
1 1/2 cups sliced baby shitake mushrooms or small crimini mushrooms
1/4 cup white wine vinegar
1 tablespoon molasses
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon fresh thyme leaves
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/2 cup mild olive oil (or a blend of 1/4 cup olive oil and 1/4 cup canola oil)

Cook the bacon until just slightly crisp and remove to paper towels; pat dry to remove excess fat. Reserve the bacon drippings. Sauté the shallots and mushrooms in 2 tablespoons of the drippings for 3 minutes. Add the vinegar, molasses, soy sauce, thyme and pepper. Bring to a simmer and cook for one minute. Remove from heat and whisk in the oil. The vinaigrette is perfect to serve right away. It also stores nicely in the fridge to warm up later. You may also serve it cold or at room temperature.

CURRIED HONEY-ORANGE MAYO

"This Middle Eastern-flavored dressing is so simple but absolutely delicious served in fruit salad, or in an apple-chicken salad served in a pita wrap. Or just dollop a spoonful over a piece of grilled salmon," said Ketchum chef and cookbook author Jeff Keys.

1 tablespoon freshly squeezed orange juice
1/2 teaspoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
2 teaspoons honey
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sour cream
1 1/4 teaspoons curry powder
2 teaspoons finely grated orange zest
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

In a mixing bowl, mix the orange juice, lemon juice and honey; stir until honey dissolves. Add remaining ingredients and whisk until they're evenly blended. If you like, you may stir in 1/4 cup lightly toasted slivered almonds to add a nutty flavor. Store in a covered container in the fridge for two weeks.

ASIAN VINAIGRETTE

"This has a great consistency. It doesn't break down like so many vinaigrettes," said Beau Piercey of Canyon Crest Dining Event Center in Twin Falls.

6 green shallots, thinly sliced (only the green parts)
5 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 1/2 cups canola oil
3 tablespoons sesame oil
3/4 cup rice wine vinegar
1/4 cup Sambal Oelek chili paste
3/4 cup honey
Pinch of salt and white pepper

Mix all ingredients except the oils in a blender; add oil while still blending. Makes four cups.

RANDY MCCARRON'S CILANTRO DRESSING

From Randy McCarron, head chef and owner of River Rock Grill in Twin Falls.

1/2 cup loosely packed fresh cilantro leaves
3 tablespoons fresh squeezed lime juice
2 teaspoons chopped canned chipotle peppers in adobo sauce
1 clove garlic, chopped
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup olive oil

Puree cilantro, lime juice, chipotle peppers, garlic and salt in a food processor. Slowly add olive oil while processor is running.

RANDY MCCARRON'S MACADAMIA VINAIGRETTE

From Randy McCarron, head chef and owner of River Rock Grill in Twin Falls.

1/2 cup macadamia nuts
1 whole small banana
1/3 cup rice vinegar
1/4 cup sesame oil
3/4 cup peanut oil
Salt and pepper to taste

Using a food processor, chop the macadamia nuts into a fine chop. Stop processor and add banana and rice vinegar. Start food processor and slowly add sesame oil and peanut oil while processor is running. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

"It's the easiest thing in the world to do. But people approach it as if it's a big mystery," he said. "Once you break through that wall, you wonder why you ever thought it was so hard. All the ingredients to whip up some wonderful dressings are at the grocery store. Top a salad with some sliced roasted chicken or diced roasted potatoes and you have a full meal."

Making your own salad dressing allows you to use fresh, seasonal ingredients, said Randy McCarron, head chef and owner of River Rock Grill, formerly the Garden Cafe in Twin Falls.

"If you make your own, you can keep it healthy because you know what's in it," said McCarron, who will teach a "Dressings for Success" class through the College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center on March 30 at River Rock Grill.

The best salad dressings are those that are unique, added Beau Piercey, whose house-recipe balsamic vinaigrette at Twin Falls' Canyon Crest Dining Event Center fits that bill.

menting — almost every dressing we use we make from scratch," he added. "Don't be afraid to try something different and use different ingredients most people don't have in their salad dressings."

Keys certainly does that in the small kitchen of his log cabin restaurant. He prepares salad dressings with jalapeno or red peppers he's toasted on an open burner, or with cumin seeds he's roasted in a steel pan until they smell "like the desert."

"When you toast vegetables and spices, you stir up the oils, and it enriches flavors," he said. "Add the star players — the oils and vinegars — and you're transported to far-off places and cultures."

Vanessa and Alan Johnson of Heyburn make their Dutch oven-baked crab and Cajun-filling rolls in the International Dutch Oven Society World Championship Cook-off last week. This recipe placed fourth in the bread category and helped the Johnsons win first overall.

week. In addition to their Meat Ecstasy entree, they made Cajun Crabby Rolls for the competition's bread category and a rolled Scrump U Licious Chocolate cake in the desserts portion.

Vanessa said she and her cooking partner husband spent a year combing through recipes to get the winning results.

"We'd go through recipes in cookbooks or find them on the Internet and find foods that are familiar, that are comfort foods and then try to change them," she said Monday.

The chocolate cake evolved from Vanessa's sister-in-law's recipe, which she layered with a frosting that came from a tiramisu recipe, made with mascarpone, cream cheese, whipped cream, dulce de leche and English toffee. Traditionally prepared chicken cordon bleu inspired the entree.

Dian Mayfield, a Burley Dutch oven enthusiast who took first in 2008, said rolled and stuffed meats like the Johnsons' entree were the most prevalent trend at this year's competition.

The six-hour final contest during the March 17-19 cook-off also judged presentation, recipe difficulty and how closely a recipe was followed. The world championship is two hours longer than most competitions, Mayfield said, to engage the public with what competitors are cooking.

Vanessa said the year-long prep for first place also included trial runs and smaller competitions, including an International Dutch Oven Society-sanctioned competition to qualify for the world championship.

Once there, the Johnsons squared off against 23 other teams. Vanessa said they knew about half of the people they were up against, and sized up the other half on game day. But all the competitors had at least one thing in common:

"There was tons of good food," she said. "It was amazing."

Per IDOS rules, the world champs aren't allowed to compete for a year, but Vanessa said the Johnsons have no plans to rest on their laurels.

This July will be the third year the Johnsons have hosted a Burley-area competition with its own twist. Last year, Vanessa said, the about 10 competitors' $30 entry fees were turned into gift certificates for each team. Contestants were allowed to bring spices and oils, with flour, sugar, yeast and meat provided. Everything else had to be bought on the spot.

"Every year we're going to try to do something different," she said. This year's twist has already been concocted, but it's a secret.

The Johnsons are also teaching a Dutch oven cooking class series this spring and plan to continue practicing for next year, when they have the opportunity to defend their title. That could be the best news yet for the Johnsons' friends and co-workers.

"We don't eat a lot of (the food). I take it to work and then everybody at work eats the leftovers. Family and friends come over. It's like a community group of tasters," Vanessa said.

"There are a couple people who call up and say, 'When are you cooking again?'"

Slathered with a taste of Thailand, this sandwich uses simple techniques and bold flavor in a quick-to-make meal.

Mayo shines in this ‘fried’ fish sandwich

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

For about a year now I've been trying to find a good way to infuse my basic baked “fried” haddock with the taste of Thai red curry paste. And the solution has repeatedly escaped me. Until now.

My haddock couldn't be simpler. I whisk eggs, mayo and mustard in one shallow bowl, and fill a second with panko breadcrumbs. I then dredge haddock fillets through the egg mixture, then through the panko, then bake them on a sheet in the oven.

That's it. And they're delicious.

But I'd wanted to add the gentle yet complex spicy heat of red curry paste. I'd always focused on adding the curry paste to the egg mixture, but no matter how much I added I never was able to taste it. Ditto when I added it to my breadcrumb mixture (a messy proposal).

I'd basically given up. Then it occurred to me. I was putting the curry paste in the wrong place. Instead of adding it to the coating, I removed the mayo from the coating, whipped it with the curry paste, then slathered that on a bun, added the fish and called it a day.

It was marvelous. Finally, haddock and Thai red curry paste together.

- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- 1 1/2 cups panko bread-

I was putting the curry paste in the wrong place. Instead of adding it to the coating, I removed the mayo from the coating, whipped it with the curry paste, then slathered that on a bun.

- crumbs
- 1 pound haddock fillets, divided into 4 pieces
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon Thai red curry paste
- 8 large Boston or bibb lettuce leaves
- 4 hamburger buns
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a rimmed baking sheet with cooking spray.

In a wide, shallow bowl, whisk together the eggs and mustard. In a second wide, shallow bowl, place the breadcrumbs.

Season the haddock with salt and pepper. Dredge each piece of haddock first through the egg mixture, then through the breadcrumbs. Ensure the breadcrumbs evenly coat the fillets, patting them on as needed. Arrange the fillets on the prepared baking sheet, then bake until they flake easily, about 10 minutes.

While the haddock cooks, in a small bowl whisk together the mayonnaise and curry paste.

Slather a quarter of the mayonnaise mixture over the bottom half of each bun, then top with 2 lettuce leaves. Set the haddock over it the lettuce. Serve immediately.

The savory side of blueberries

They are great when added to cooked dishes

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Sometimes the winter-time blues can be just what the doctor ordered, especially if they're the kind that grow on bushes.

Besides being a delicious addition to your diet, blueberries have been linked to numerous health benefits. And the good news is that it doesn't seem to matter whether you consume fresh, frozen or even dried blueberries.

Of course, it's easiest to eat blueberries out of hand or sprinkled over yogurt or cereal (just 40 calories per half-cup serving), but they also make an excellent addition to cooked dishes, and not just the usual desserts and bake goods. Blueberries can have a savory side, too.

Consider adding fresh or dried blueberries to your stuffing next time you roast a chicken or turkey. They even make a surprising addition to a meatloaf or burger, especially when blended with savory ingredients such as onions and Dijon mustard

For this recipe, blueberries are cooked down with chopped onion, minced fresh ginger and white balsamic vinegar to make a sweet and tangy ketchup to accompany lean pork tenderloin. But the ketchup would go just as well on top of a burger.

The technique for cooking the pork calls for dredging the medallions in seasoned Wondra flour because it creates a beautiful golden crust. But in a pinch, you can always use regular all-purpose flour instead.

PORK MEDALLIONS WITH BLUEBERRY-BALSAMIC KETCHUP

This recipe makes more blueberry-balsamic ketchup than you will need. Don't worry, it's delicious on just about any red meat, including in place of classic ketchup on burgers. Start to finish: 50 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 4.

- For the ketchup:
- 2 1/2 cups blueberries
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup finely chopped sweet onion
- 1/3 cup white balsamic vinegar
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- For the pork:
- 1/4 cup Wondra flour
- 3/4 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/4 pounds pork tenderloin
- 1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil

- To make the pork, in a shallow wide, shallow bowl or pie plate, whisk together flour, thyme, pepper and salt. Slice the pork tenderloin on the diagonal into 1-inch thick medallions.
- In a 12-inch nonstick skillet over medium-high, heat the oil.
- Working in batches, dredge the pork medallions through the flour mixture then place them in the hot skillet. Cook the pork until golden-brown and no longer pink at the center, 4 to 6 minutes per side. Serve the pork medallions immediately, topped with the blueberry-balsamic ketchup.

To make the blueberry-balsamic ketchup, in a medium saucepan over medium-high, combine the blueberries, brown sugar, onion, vinegar, ginger and salt. Heat, stirring constantly, until the sugar has dissolved.

Adjust the heat so the blueberry mixture is vigorously simmering and cook, stirring occasionally, until the blueberries have popped and the ketchup has thickened slightly, 20 to 25 minutes (the ketchup will thicken more as it cools). Remove from heat and set aside.

Lighten up classic guacamole with spring peas

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

The flesh of a ripe Hass avocado is so luxuriously buttery and creamy you know from the first bite that it's loaded with fat.

The great news is that it nevertheless is good for you. The fat that's in an avocado is mostly the healthier monounsaturated kind, similar to olive and nut oils. Avocados also contain loads of healthful nutrients and antioxidants.

And if all these nutritional bonuses weren't enough, research has shown that adding avocado to a plain green salad helps your body absorb more of the nutrients from the other ingredients.

Still, even good fats are high in calories. So for this recipe we figured out a way to get all the benefits of avocado while cutting a bit of the fat.

This bright green sweet pea and avocado guacamole is a spring-inspired version of the classic dip, and has a fresh, crisp flavor that is brightened by plenty of fire-roasted chilies, lime juice and chopped fresh cilantro.

The sweet baby peas lighten the guacamole while adding impressive amounts of vitamins. Use this dip as you would a traditional guacamole.

SWEET PEA AND AVOCADO GUACAMOLE

Start to finish: 10 minutes. Makes about 2 1/2 cups (12 servings).

- 2 cups frozen baby peas, thawed
- 1 medium Hass avocado
- 1 small red onion, finely chopped
- 4-ounce can fire-roasted green chilies, drained
- 1/4 cup lime juice
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste

2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro

In a food processor, combine the peas, avocado, onion, chilies, lime juice, garlic, cumin and salt. Process until smooth, scraping down the sides of the processor bowl with a rubber spatula as needed. Add the cilantro and pulse until just blended.

An adult take on grilled cheese comfort

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

A great grilled cheese practically defines comfort, all crispy bread and gooey cheese.

And a grilled cheese is the perfect base to add other flavors, whether you fancy a slice of tomato or a little ham or bacon.

This version is similar to a grilled ham and cheese for adults. Salty prosciutto pairs with creamy, earthy blue cheese. A touch of sweetness from apricot preserves balances the sandwich. This quick and flavorful lunch would be great served with an arugula salad dressed with balsamic vinaigrette.

PROSCIUTTO, APRICOT AND BLUE CHEESE PANINO

Start to finish: 15 minutes.
Servings: 1.

- 2 thick slices country-style sourdough bread
- 2 tablespoons apricot preserves
- 2 tablespoons Great Hill blue cheese, or other creamy raw milk blue cheese
- 2 slices prosciutto
- Ground black pepper, to taste
- 1 tablespoon olive oil

To assemble the sandwich, spread 1 tablespoon of apricot preserve on each slice of bread. Sprinkle one slice with the blue cheese, then top with the prosciutto. Sprinkle with black pepper and top with the other slice of bread, preserves to the inside. Brush each side of the sandwich with the olive oil.

Using a panini press or a skillet, cook the sandwich 3 to 4 minutes, or until the cheese is melted and the bread is golden brown. If using a skillet, flip the sandwich after 2 minutes.

Spring dinner in 30 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

Chances are you'll be making this recipe more than once during the height of asparagus season. The sandwich filling might remind you of baked crab dip, although it's more goat cheese than mayonnaise and brightened with herbs and lemon zest. It calls for just a modest amount of the seafood.

This sandwich is not built for a panini press, as the filling is too soft and would squish out the sides under the weight of the appliance lid. You could save calories by making them as open-faced sandwiches instead (using a total of 4 slices of bread); if so, hide the asparagus spears under the Swiss cheese and run the sandwiches under the broiler so the cheese melts.

Serve with a salad or a pea soup. Adapted from "Grilled Cheese Please! 50 Scrumptiously Cheesy Recipes," by Laura Werlin (Andrews McMeel, 2011).

CRAB-SWISS MELT WITH ASPARAGUS

- 4 servings
- 16 thin asparagus spears (about 8 ounces)
 - Olive oil
 - Kosher salt or coarse sea salt
 - 1 lemon
 - Leaves from 3 or 4 stems tarragon
 - 12 to 15 chives
 - 4 ounces goat cheese
 - 1/4 cup low-fat mayonnaise (do not use nonfat)
 - 6 to 8 ounces lump crabmeat
 - Freshly ground black pepper

DEB LINDSEY/For The Washington Post

8 sandwich-size slices crusty, firm bread, such as sourdough or ciabatta

4 slices Swiss or Emmentaler cheese (4 ounces total)

Place a large, well-seasoned cast-iron skillet or ovenproof nonstick skillet on the bottom rack of the oven; preheat to 350 degrees. Line a baking sheet with aluminum foil.

Place the asparagus on the baking sheet; drizzle with a little olive oil and sprinkle lightly with salt. Roast on the middle oven rack for 7 or 8 minutes, until lightly browned and barely tender.

Meanwhile, finely grate enough lemon zest to yield 1 teaspoon; reserve the remaining lemon for another use. Finely chop the tarragon (2 tablespoons) and chives (2 tablespoons); combine those in a mixing bowl along with the goat cheese and 2 tablespoons of the mayonnaise.

Pick over the crabmeat and discard any bits of shell or cartilage.

When the asparagus is cool enough to handle, cut off the tips (about 2 inches down) and reserve. Cut the stalks crosswise into 1/4-inch pieces, discarding the tough ends. Fold the stalk pieces and the crab (to taste) into the goat cheese mixture until well incorporated. Taste, and season with salt and pepper as needed.

Lay the 8 bread slices on a sheet of plastic wrap or waxed paper; spread them with the remaining 2 tablespoons of mayonnaise. Turn over 4 of the slices.

Divide the crab mixture among the 4 inverted slices, spreading it in an even layer. Top with a slice of Swiss cheese, then place 4 of the reserved asparagus spears on each piece of cheese. Top each sandwich with one of the remaining 4 mayonnaise-covered slices of bread, with the mayonnaise on the outside/top. Press firmly to create 4 sandwiches.

Transfer the heated skillet to the stovetop over medium heat. (Remember that the skillet handle will remain very hot.) Place as many sandwiches as will fit in the skillet (2 or 3); cover with a pan lid small enough to rest directly on top of the sandwiches (like a weight) and cook for about 3 minutes, until golden brown on the bottom. Uncover and turn them over; cover and cook for about 1 minute on the second side, pressing down slightly with a spatula.

Transfer to individual plates and let the sandwiches rest for a few minutes before cutting them in half. Repeat with the remaining sandwich(es). Serve warm.

Light, clean saute in half an hour

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

This is a saute with light, clean flavor. Tomatillos, jalapeno and lime make a winning sauce combo.

Serve over plain white rice or Mexican rice, with a side salad of lightly dressed slices of ripe avocado.

Adapted from "Bold & Healthy Flavors: 450 Recipes From Around the World," by Steven Raichlen (updated; Black Dog and Leventhal, 2010).

CHICKEN WITH TOMATILLOS AND CILANTRO

- 4 servings
- 1 pound (about 8) husk-on, firm tomatillos
 - 1 1/4 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
 - Kosher salt
 - Freshly ground black pepper
 - 1 tablespoon olive oil
 - 1/2 white onion
 - 1 jalapeno pepper
 - 4 scallions
 - Leaves from 2 to 4 stems cilantro
 - 1 lime
 - 1/2 teaspoon sugar

Heat a large cast-iron skillet over medium heat.

Discard the husks from the tomatillos; rinse the tomatillos to remove any stickiness.

Place the tomatillos in the skillet. Cover and cook for about 15 minutes, until lightly charred and softened, using tongs to turn them as needed. Transfer them to a food processor and pulse to form a coarse puree.

Meanwhile, trim off and discard any fat from the chicken; cut the chicken into 2-inch strips, then on the diagonal into 1 1/2-inch pieces. Use paper towels to blot dry. Season the chicken with salt and pepper to taste. Heat the oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium heat.

Cut the onion half into very small dice. Stem, seed and mince the jalapeno pepper. Trim off the dark-green and root ends of the scallions; finely chop the remaining scallions.

Add the onion, scallions and jalapeno to the nonstick skillet; cook for about 4 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the vegetables have softened but not browned.

Coarsely chop the cilantro leaves. Cut the lime in half.

Increase the heat to medium-high; add the chicken and stir-fry for 2 minutes, until lightly seared, then stir in the tomatillo puree and the sugar. Squeeze in a tablespoon's worth of lime juice. Cook for 2 to 4 minutes or until the chicken is cooked through.

Stir in the cilantro and cook for 1 minute. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Spoon over rice; serve hot.

A creamy mushroom sauce; no canned soup required

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

It's hard to go wrong with heavy cream and mushrooms.

Actually, you could just stop with the heavy cream. But we'll pretend the addition of mushrooms to this easy, comforting weeknight dinner somehow makes it virtuous. If nothing else, relying on real, fresh ingredients will certainly be better for you than popping open a can of cream-of-anything soup.

This recipe is ridiculously simple. Make a vinaigrette-like marinade and give some chicken breasts a bath in it for about 20 minutes. I keep the marinade simple with little more than oil, vinegar, garlic and smoked paprika, but you can add any other seasonings that excite you.

Next, you saute some mushrooms, then add the chicken. When everything is cooked, you dump in some cream and call it dinner.

You're going to want to eat this with something to sop up all that sauce. Hunks of French bread would be nice, but egg noodles or rice would be great, too.

CHICKEN WITH SMOKY MUSHROOM CREAM SAUCE

Start to finish: 30 min-

This recipe is best served with French bread, egg noodles or rice to sop up the sauce.

utes. Servings: 4.

- 4 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 6 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon smoked paprika
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 1 1/2 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 1 pound sliced button mushrooms
- 1/2 cup white wine
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme
- 1 scallion, finely sliced
- Bread, noodles or rice, for serving

In a large bowl, combine 2 tablespoons of the olive oil, the vinegar, garlic, paprika, 1/2 teaspoon of salt and 1/4 teaspoon of pepper. Mix well, then set aside.

One at a time lay each chicken breast on the cutting surface and slice across the center horizontally to create 2 thin halves.

Add the chicken to the bowl, turn to coat, cover and set aside for 20 minutes.

When ready to cook, in a large saute pan over medium-high, heat the remaining 2 tablespoons of olive oil. Add the mushrooms and saute until browned, about 8 minutes.

Add the chicken and any marinade in the bowl to the pan. Brown the chicken on both sides, about 4 minutes per side. Add the wine and gently shake the pan to help deglaze it.

Reduce heat to low, then add the cream and the thyme. Stir to combine with the mushrooms. Bring to a simmer and cook for 1 minute.

Serve chicken and mushroom sauce over noodles, rice or bread.

Classic ratatouille recast as a cheesy gratin

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

Ratatouille is a classic French country dish of vegetables cooked in their own juices until tender. Taking the same classic flavors, we layered the vegetables with cheese in a gratin-like dish. Comte is a nutty semi-firm cheese from eastern France. If you can't find comte, Gruyere is a good substitute.

RATATOUILLE GRATIN

Start to finish: 1 hour 15 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 8.

2 tablespoons olive oil

2 medium yellow onions, sliced
3 cloves garlic, chopped
1 red bell pepper, cored and sliced
1/2 cup packed fresh basil leaves, chopped
1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme
14 1/2-ounce can chopped tomatoes, preferably fire-roasted, drained
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
2 small summer squash, sliced into thin rounds
2 small zucchini, sliced into thin rounds
2 Japanese eggplants, sliced into thin rounds

1 1/2 cups comte cheese

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. In a large, deep skillet over medium, heat the olive oil. Add the onions, garlic and bell pepper. Sauté for 10 to 12 minutes, or until tender.

Add the basil, thyme, tomatoes, vinegar, salt and pepper. Bring to a simmer and cook for 5 more minutes, stirring occasionally.

Spread a third of the tomato mixture over the bottom of a deep 10-inch pie pan or 2-quart casserole dish. Using a third of each vegetable, arrange one layer each of squash, zucchini and eggplant rounds over the tomato mixture, alternating vegetables and overlapping slightly. Sprinkle 1/2 cup of the cheese over that.

Repeat the layering in that order two more times, ending with cheese.

Bake for 45 minutes, or until the vegetables are tender when pierced with a knife. Increase the heat to broil and cook for another 2 to 3 minutes to lightly brown the top.

Dallas Rae Jurak

Oct. 23, 1937–March 20, 2011

HANSEN — Dallas Rae Jurak of Hansen and formerly of Hardin, Mont., died Sunday, March 20, 2011, of complications with COPD.

She was born Oct. 23, 1937, in Hardin, Mont., to Albert and Doris (Finch) Herman, the oldest of three children. Dallas graduated from Hardin High School in 1956 where she excelled in music and art. All through the years, we all enjoyed her talents in these two areas, whether through ceramics, paintings or a snippet of a song.

On July 10, 1960, Dallas married Mike Jurak in Sheridan, Wyo. Mike and Dallas settled in Hardin, Busby, Lame Deer and later in Dubois, Idaho. They had three children, Mike, Bert and RaeAnn, and they truly wanted more for them than for themselves. Dallas was able to stay at home taking care of her children. She also spent many years raising quarter horses and was especially fond of Easy Purple Jet, a stud she bought as a weanling. She loved all horse events, but mostly thrived when watching or participating in horse shows. She also loved watching the foals in the pasture below the house.

She enjoyed and studied birds and water fowl and could tell you what they were just by a quick glimpse or a whisper of their song in the distance. Once she moved to Hansen, Mom seldom missed an auction sale where she could possibly find some unique antique. Until her illness took a strong hold, that little pickup and she could be found anywhere in or around the Twin Falls area.

Dallas is survived by her sons, Mike (Deena) Jurak of Kimberly and Bert (Susan) Jurak of Button Willow, Calif.; and her daughter, RaeAnn (JD) Svedberg of Hardin, Mont. She also leaves behind 10 grandchildren, Jennifer Jurak and Jessica Schaak, Clay, Nick, Ty, Cole and Jordan Seamans, Zak and Tiffany Jurak and Mesa Svedberg; and nine great-grandchildren, Dakota, Mac, Issy, Zoey, Evyn, Kale, Jaxon, Ave and Brayden. She is also survived by her brother, Dale (Mary) Herman of Lodge Grass, Mont.; and her sister, Wilma Herman of Mesquite, Texas. Dallas was preceded in death by her parents and her husband.

The family wishes to express a big thank you to St Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls for the care shown to mom.

A celebration of Dallas' life will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, March 26, at Bullis Mortuary in Hardin, Mont., with a reception to follow. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery in Hardin.

Memorials can be shared with the family at www.whitemortuary.com. Arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary in Twin Falls, Idaho.

Clyde W. Hanks

July 11, 1930–March 21, 2011

BURLEY — Clyde Wayne Hanks, age 80, passed away Monday, March 21, 2011, at Plantation Place Assisted Living in Boise.

Clyde was born July 11, 1930, in Burley, the son of Edison and Delva Lyons Hanks and was a lifelong resident of Burley. He served in the Navy, where he met and married his wife, Loretta Robbins, while stationed in Corpus Christi, Texas. They were married 49 years and together, they had five children.

He worked several places after his return from the service, including Challenge Co-Op Creamery, Western Construction, Union Seed, Wes' Welding and Shockey Sheet Metal. He was a member of the LDS Church and the Burley Elks Club.

Clyde was an avid fisherman and hunter and spent countless hours sitting on the fishing banks of practically every river, lake or stream in southern Idaho. He loved working with rocks and doing woodwork and insisted on giving away most everything he made.

In his later years, he enjoyed traveling with his wife to the Oregon Coast. They took many trips around Idaho and the surrounding states with hardly ever a set destination or a planned time for return.

After his wife's death in 1999, he spent many hours in Charlie's Café in Burley, where he ate breakfast and had afternoon coffee with a group of friends he cherished deeply.

He is survived by his children, Blake (Jill) Hanks, Ken (Carole) Hanks, Cindy Hanks and Mick Hanks, all of Boise, and Katy (John) Nance of Nampa; seven grandchildren; eight great-grandchildren; one brother, Lowell Hanks of Pukalani, Hawaii; one sister, Deanne Searle of Burley; one niece; and seven nephews. He was preceded in death by his wife; father; and mother.

A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, March 24, at the Gem Memorial Gardens in Burley. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley.

The family expresses their sincere appreciation to the staff and caregivers at the Plantation Place Assisted Living and Align Hospice in Boise for their care and concern for Clyde.

James Stanley Brown

July 7, 1944–March 20, 2011

James (Jim) Stanley Brown, 66, passed away peacefully with his family at his side Sunday, March 20, 2011.

Jim was the second of six children born to Douglas and Laura Brown on July 7, 1944, in Twin Falls, Idaho. He graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1962 and attended Brigham Young University for two years. After serving a two-year LDS mission in Texas, he married the love of his life, Georgia Kay Moncur, on Aug. 17, 1967, in the Idaho Falls Temple for time and all eternity. They gave birth to their first son, Jim Jr., on Nov. 4, 1968, and their second son, Brent, on Aug. 5, 1970.

After brief stints in Washington and California with American Greetings Corp., the family returned home to Twin Falls, where Jim joined the family business at Claude Brown's Furniture. He retired from the family furniture business in 2005. Jim was an avid golfer, sports fan, teenage "gearhead" and car enthusiast. In 1968, Jim purchased a bright red AMC Javelin. Over the years, his love of this car has become symbolic of our family and has provided many special memories.

As a young parent, he enjoyed playing with his two boys, coaching their youth teams and teaching them the right way to play their various competitive sports. His greatest joy was his time spent with family and friends on the golf course. He was an accomplished golfer, accumulating three, yes three, holes in one and was the Net Club Champion at Jerome Country Club in 2005. One of his favorite activities was setting up Georgia in the trees, while playing her drive from the middle of the fairway in Friday Night Chapman tournaments. He loved the time spent each Thursday with his golf buddies, trading jokes and barbs with them on a weekly basis. The friendships that he made on the golf course transcended off the course into valuable, lifelong relationships.

He enjoyed the competitiveness of sports so much that he became a referee for high school football and basketball all over the Magic Valley for 20 years. Nothing sounded sweeter to his ears than a good old barbershop harmony and he enjoyed singing with the Twin Falls Magichords. He belonged to Toast Masters for more than 30 years and enjoyed improving his speaking skills, telling stories and spending time with friends.

The most important aspect to Jim's life was his friendship with other people. It didn't matter who you were, he was able to be your friend without judging you and was truly a friend to all. He could have a conversation with total strangers and they would leave with a new friend every time. When someone needed help or there was work to be done, he was always the first in line to help.

In 2003, his life changed with the addition of grandchildren. Lauren and Nicholas became the apple of his eye and the feeling was mutual. He loved visiting them in Texas and allowed Georgia to spoil the kids as much as possible. He always said, "It's better to get on the train than to get ran over by it." The time he spent with them will always be cherished.

Jim was a High Priest in the LDS Church and held numerous church callings. He loved to teach lessons in priesthood meeting that would make you go home and do additional studying. He had a strong testimony of the gospel and found great comfort in his knowledge of our Heavenly Father's plan of salvation. His faith was felt by all who knew him.

His death was preceded by his older brother, Doug Jr. He is survived by his wife, Georgia; sons, James Jr. and Brent (Tina); parents, Douglas and Laura; brothers, Bob (Cathy), Dick (Jacque) and Keith (Debbie); sister, Sherri (Dean) Johns; and grandchildren, Lauren and Nicholas Brown.

Son, Brother, Husband, Father, Grandpa, Friend — You are loved by ALL!

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, March 25, at the Twin Falls LDS 3rd Ward Chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard, with a viewing one hour before the service. A viewing will also be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, March 24, at White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Burial will take place at Sunset Memorial Park. Services are under the direction of White Mortuary, "Chapel by the Park," in Twin Falls.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Perpetual Education Fund of the LDS Church or to the Jerome Country Club Beautification Committee.

The family wishes to express their gratitude to Dr. Charles Smith and nurses at Mountain States Tumor Institute and Rick, Travis and Jacque at St. Luke's Home and Hospice.

Condolences can be left for the family by visiting www.whitemortuary.com.

Gosar happy at CSI, won't rule out alma mater

Wyoming fans, boosters hoping JUCO champ coach gets D-I shot

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Steve Gosar has fielded a bevy of phone calls the past couple days about becoming the next head men's basketball coach at the University of Wyoming.

"Just not from the right people," Gosar said Tuesday.

Gosar, who led the College of Southern Idaho to the NJCAA Tournament championship last weekend in Hutchinson, Kan., said he has not been contacted by Wyoming Athletic Director Tom Burman regarding the opening.

But Gosar, a Pinedale, Wyo., native and former Wyoming player and graduate assistant coach, has heard from several Cowboys boosters and fans.

"There are several boosters that have sincere interest in getting me back there," said Gosar, adding that he would consider the position if approached.

The Wyoming job has been vacant since the school fired Heath Schroyer on Feb. 7. Burman told the Casper Star-Tribune (Wyo.) that he hopes to fill the position by the time the NCAA Tournament's Final Four tips off April 2.

Burman has declined to comment on the specifics of the search or the candidates for the opening. Several news outlets have reported that current NCAA Division I coaches Billy Kennedy (Murray State) and Blaine Taylor (Old Dominion), and prominent assistant coaches Mike Dunlap (St. John's), Joe Dooley (Kansas) and Larry Shyatt (Florida) are among the candidates.

Various Internet blogs have suggested Kennedy was offered the job last weekend, but those reports have not been confirmed.

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL SEMIFINAL: BYU VS. FLORIDA 5:27 P.M. THURSDAY, TBS

Rose hopes for Final Four return

By Lynn DeBruin
Associated Press writer

PROVO, Utah — Google the words “Phi Slama Jamma” and the names “Dream” Olajuwon, “Glide” Drexler and “Silent Assassin” Young bring back memories of Houston's high-flying 1983 Final Four team.

Scroll a little farther along and the name Dave Rose appears. No adjectives, no catchy nicknames, just simple, straightforward, unassuming.

Rose, who 28 years later is trying to take the BYU Cougars to college basketball's greatest stage, probably wouldn't have it any other way.

“Coach is really soft-spoken and humble about his part on a Final Four team,” said BYU assistant Dave Rice, a member of UNLV's 1990 NCAA championship team. “If guys bring it up, he'll talk about it. But it's not something he brings up very often.”

That's not to say Rose can't impart those experiences to his third-seeded BYU squad,

Boynton gets help on Jimmer

By Mark Long
Associated Press writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Florida's Kenny Boynton guarded Brigham Young's Jimmer Fredette nearly every minute of their game in last year's NCAA tournament.

He won't have to this time around.

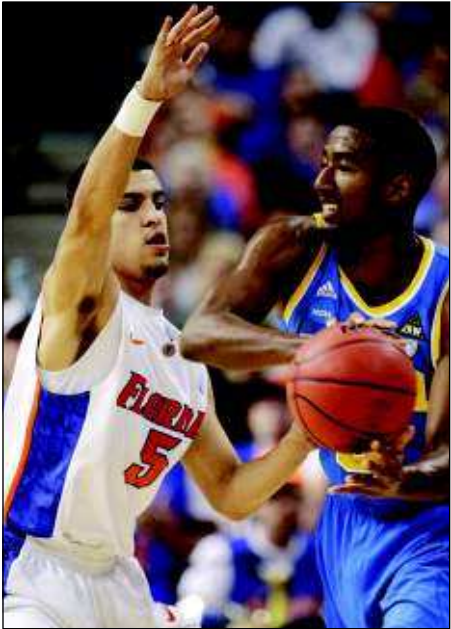

It has nothing to do with Boynton's sprained left ankle, either.

The Gators (28-7), the No. 2 seed in the Southeast region, feel like they're better prepared to handle the nation's leading scorer when they play the third-seeded Cougars (32-4) in the regional semifinals in New Orleans on Thursday night.

Fredette scored 37 points against Florida in the opening round last year, leading the Cougars to a 99-92 win in double overtime. He scored 10 points in the decisive extra frame, taking advantage of Boynton's fatigue by hitting two 3-pointers and getting to the free-throw line six times.

Coach Billy Donovan's team is hoping for better results in the rematch.

“When you play against a guy like that, you understand how good he is and you try to take away what he's really good at,” said versatile forward Chandler Parsons, the Southeastern Conference's player of the year. “Watching him, he's done it against everybody, so it's not like we're going to say, ‘All right, face-guard

Amid lockout, NFL owners change multiple game rules

Kickoffs moved up to 35-yard line, touchbacks stay put

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — The NFL will move kickoffs up 5 yards to the 35-yard line, keep touchbacks coming out to the 20 and allow the number of players in a blocking wedge to remain at two.

Kick coverage players now will be limited to lining up 5 yards or fewer from the spot of the kickoff.

Team owners also voted Tuesday to make all scoring plays reviewable by the replay official and referee. But they tabled a proposal to ban players launching themselves to make a tackle, and will reconsider it in May.

The league's competition committee proposed placing the ball at the 25 after touchbacks on kickoffs and banning the wedge altogether. Several coaches expressed concern about making too many changes to kickoffs, also saying bringing touchbacks out 5 more yards would affect field position too much. Coaches worried about an increase in touchbacks from the 16 percent of kickoffs last season.

“Any time there's a touchback and now it's not coming to the 20,” Saints coach Sean Payton said, “I think that that probably was the most drastic of the four or five items that constituted one rule.”

Making kickoffs safer was the objective, and Payton believes the owners met it, voting 26-6 for the new rule.

“The bottom line is it's ... the highest risk of injury play,” he said.

Browns standout returner Joshua Cribbs wasn't thrilled by the changes, tweeting: “Essentially taking returners out of the game...injuries will still take place, then what move it up again, or eliminate it all together?”

On touchbacks, competition committee chairman Rich McKay said coaches were concerned about an increase in high kicks from the 35 intended to trap returning teams deep and severely decreasing the number of returns. He also said the two-man wedge was not a driving force in the uptick in injuries on kickoffs. Indeed, more injuries occur in coverage than on the return squads.

As for the six no votes, McKay said: “The objections were, ‘Hey, you're affecting my team.’ Clearly, some teams have good kick returners and they said, ‘What if there's 10 percent less returns?’”

“We have no answer,” McKay added, “but player safety will always trump any other consideration.”

Yet the two player safety amendments were tabled until the May league meetings. A proposal to outlaw players launching to make hits was deferred, as was expanding the definition of a defenseless receiver.

McKay said joining those two additions to a previous rule caused the tabling. Each of the proposals will be made into separate amendments before being presented again.

“We didn't feel like there was enough support to get it passed,” said Giants owner John Mara, a competition committee member. “A number of people seemed to be, in my opinion, more concerned about flags being thrown for questionable hits. My feeling is, I'm more concerned about needless concussions, so I'm willing to make that trade. But I think we need to go back and just clarify some of the language, maybe to make it a little bit more clear for everybody.”

McKay praised players for avoiding launching themselves during the second part of last season after the league threatened suspensions for illegal and flagrant hits. No suspensions were handed out, but Ray Anderson, the NFL's chief disciplinarian, said they will be in play from the outset of next season.

The replay change passed 30-2, with one modification: The third coach's challenge that the competition committee suggested dropping will be kept.

The replay official now can call for the referee to review any scoring play. Previously, replay officials only could order reviews (on any play) in the final two minutes of each half and in overtime.

Coaches pushed for the change in great part because they felt they didn't get a fair shake in road games.

“It's a real big competitive disadvantage,” Ravens coach John Harbaugh said. “You don't get that look at it on the road that you get at home; they just don't show it.”

One proposal was adopted unanimously, giving the commissioner the power to approve or deny requests to change the color of the playing field from green. Falcons owner Arthur Blank said the concern was that sponsors could approach teams and suggest a deal that involved altering a field's color.

As McKay previously noted with a smile, “We don't want any red fields like at Eastern Washington.”

Associated Press writers Howard Fendrich and Tom Withers contributed to this report.

BSU on road for CBI semi vs. Oregon

Times-News

To get to the College Basketball Invitational championship series, Boise State is renewing an acquaintance, albeit from another sport.

The Broncos head to Eugene, Ore., tonight, to visit the Oregon Ducks for a place in the best-of-three championship series. The two schools recently played a home-and-home football series.

A previous Associated Press schedule had the Broncos playing Creighton in the semifinals. Creighton will host Central Florida in the other semifinal.

Boise State (22-12) defeated Evansville and Austin Peay in its first two CBI games, both at Taco Bell Arena. Oregon (18-17) beat Duquesne and Weber State, both in the new Matthew Knight Arena in Eugene.

Tonight's game will start at 8 p.m. MDT and will be broadcast on HDNet.

UConn women cruise into Sweet 16

STORRS, Conn. — Tiffany Hayes scored 23 points, Maya Moore added 16 and No. 1 Connecticut put on a defensive clinic to beat ninth-seeded Purdue 64-40 on Tuesday night in the second round of the women's NCAA tournament.

The Huskies (33-1) advanced to the regional semifinals for the 18th straight season, the longest active streak in the nation. The victory was UConn's 22nd straight overall and 83rd in a row at home, and allowed Moore and fellow senior Lorin Dixon to go out in style.

They were playing their final game at Gampel Pavilion, and became the first UConn seniors to finish unbeaten at home.

GEORGETOWN 79, MARYLAND 57
COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Sugar Rodgers scored a career-high 34 points, and fifth-seeded Georgetown breezed past fourth-seed Maryland to reach the round of 16 for the first time.

The Hoyas (24-10) bolted to an 11-0 lead, made it 40-26 at halftime and increased the margin to 23 points with 16:23 left. They'll play top-seeded Connecticut in the Philadelphia Regional. Georgetown went 0-2 against their Big East rivals this season.

LOUISVILLE 85, XAVIER 75
CINCINNATI — Shoni Schimmel scored a career-high 33 points, leading a late comeback that swept Louisville to a victory over No. 2-seed Xavier on its home court.

The Cardinals (22-12) go to Spokane to play Gonzaga in a regional semifinal on Saturday.

Xavier (29-3) had no answer for Schimmel, who rallied the Cardinals from a seven-point deficit with 5:58 to go.

OKLAHOMA 88, MIAMI 83
CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Danielle Robinson scored six straight points to break open a tied game, and sixth-seeded Oklahoma held on to beat third-seeded Miami.

Whitney Hand scored a career-high 27 points to lead the Sooners (23-11), who will move on to the Dayton Regional two victories away from a third straight trip to the Final Four.

Shenise Johnson scored 25 points to lead Miami (28-5), including the jumper with 3:26 to go that tied it at 79-all.

BAYLOR 82, WEST VIRGINIA 68
WACO, Texas — Brittney Griner had 30 points even after sitting on the bench the final 9 minutes of the first half because of foul trouble, and top-seeded Baylor rolled into the round of 16 for the sixth time in eight years.

The Bears (33-2) already had a 14-point lead and Griner had 10 points when she picked up her second foul, but West Virginia managed to only trim that deficit to 11 by halftime.

TEXAS A&M 70, RUTGERS 48
BOSSIER CITY, La. — Danielle Adams had 28 points and 11 rebounds, and Texas A&M stormed into the third round of the NCAA tournament with an easy win over the Scarlet Knights.

Sydney Carter added 14 points and Tyra White had 11 for the second-seeded Aggies (29-5), who were upset in last year's second round but this time have strung together victory margins of 20-plus points in each of their first two tournament games.

WISCONSIN-GREEN BAY 65, MICHIGAN STATE 56
WICHITA, Kan. — Adrian Ritchie scored 20 points off the bench, Julie Wojta added 18 and Wisconsin-Green Bay advanced to the NCAA tournament's regional semifinals for the first time.

The Horizon League champions extended their winning streak to 25 games and their record against Big Ten Conference teams to 4-0 this season.

GEORGIA 61, FLORIDA ST. 59
AUBURN, Ala. — Jasmine James scored on a putback with 2.1 seconds left, then made the subsequent free throw to lift Georgia into the round of 16 for the second straight year.

The 5-foot-9 James caught the ball in midair after a missed jumper by Porsha Phillips, tossed it in and drew a foul. Florida State (24-8) didn't get another shot off as Christian Hunnicutt's pass to Courtney Ward at midcourt went out of bounds as time expired.

Rose has 30 as Bulls crush Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Derrick Rose had 30 points and 10 assists, helping the Chicago Bulls move back in the Eastern Conference lead with a runaway 114-81 win over the Atlanta Hawks on Tuesday night.

Chicago's starters sat out the final period after the Bulls set season highs with 41 points in the second period and 72 points in the first half. Luol Deng finished with 27 points.

The Hawks, who have lost seven of 10, were denied an opportunity to clinch a playoff spot and absorbed their first home loss to Chicago in four years.

The Bulls, who have won 10 of 11 since losing in Atlanta on March 2, began the night tied with idle Boston for the best record in the East.

Jeff Teague scored 17 of his 20 points in the fourth for Atlanta, which trailed 98-60 after three and also decided to rest its starters in the final period. Josh Smith and Al Horford had 14 points apiece, but Horford departed in the third with a strained hamstring.

The Bulls and Hawks played for the third time in three weeks.

Chicago led by 19 points in the second quarter of their 83-80 loss in Atlanta on March 2. Since then, the Bulls have won 10 of 11, including two lopsided wins over Atlanta.

The Hawks, who lost 100-59 to New Orleans at home on Jan. 21, came close to a second 40-point home loss. Chicago's big lead was 47 points.

The Bulls were almost perfect in pulling away from the Hawks in the first half.

With 4:50 remaining in the second quarter, Hawks coach Larry Drew called a timeout after Kyle Korver's 3-pointer gave the Bulls a 57-35 lead. Atlanta had made 52 percent of its shots from the field and still trailed by 22 because the Bulls were shooting at a season-best pace.

Chicago's best shooting game of the season came on Dec. 21, when they shot 64.5 percent from the field in a home win over Philadelphia. Against the Hawks, the Bulls were even better — for a half.

Rose

which faces No. 2 seed Florida in a Southeast regional semifinal Thursday night in New Orleans.

And he certainly isn't about to squelch his players' excitement.

"I don't know if you can be overexcited to play," Rose said before his team left Tuesday for the Big Easy. "What you hope is that they play with no fear. They understand they're in a position where a couple of more wins ... and they're in the Final Four. That's the ultimate goal ... then you see what happens from there."

As a player, Rose was an energy guy off the bench, a co-captain and shooting guard asked to hit the open shot, make the extra pass or dive for a loose ball — not necessarily dunk with the likes of his more famous teammates Hakeem Olajuwon, Clyde Drexler and Michael Young.

As a coach, there's no denying Rose's success.

He recently was named one of four finalists for the 2011 Naismith Men's College Coach of the Year award.

His 127 victories in his first five seasons as BYU head coach placed him fifth for best career starts by wins in NCAA history, ahead of names such as Jerry Tarkanian, Jim Boeheim and Thad Matta.

This year's 32-4 mark is a school record, and his 78-18 mark in Mountain West Conference games is the best winning percentage (.813) in conference history.

He won back-to-back MWC coach of the year honors his first two seasons, and shared the honor with San Diego State's Steve Fisher this season.

Though intense competitors on the court, the men share a friendship and respect for one another.

"He's very genuine," Fisher said of the 53-year-old Rose. "He's not full of himself. He doesn't have to tell you he's good. He's not overly demonstrative. He's a guy that when they win, he sits back and talks about how good a team he's got."

Fisher also called Rose "steady at the wheel," even when BYU goes through occasional rough patches — something they did this year when leading rebounder Brandon Davies was suspended late in the season for violating the school's honor code.

"He doesn't scream and yell and go crazy too often," said the more animated Fisher. "I like his style. Obviously, he's got proven results with what he's done."

Rose will be the first to admit his style has changed a bit over the years. At Dixie State College, players recalled him as a coach not afraid to storm down the tunnel and chase after a referee.

He's not so apt to do that anymore.

Part of it no doubt was making the jump from the junior college ranks to BYU assistant and then to head coach in 2005 of a mid-major program.

A more profound impact, however, came from lying in a pool of his own blood during a scare with pancreatic cancer while on a family vacation during the summer of 2009.

A Deseret News story last year chronicled how paramedics removed an ailing Rose from a flight to Las Vegas and Rose's worsening condition in the emergency room where he coughed up enormous amounts of blood.

Further tests revealed a grapefruit-sized tumor on his spleen, which was removed in emergency surgery along with the tail end of his pancreas and six lymph nodes.

The diagnosis was pancreatic neuro-endocrine cancer — considered a rarer form of cancer that is not as aggressive as the most common form of pancreatic cancer that claimed the life of actor Patrick Swayze and thousands of others through the years.

Though Rose can never say he is "cured" because the cancer left the source where it originated, scans every six months have shown him cancer-free.

Apple co-founder and CEO Steve Jobs had surgery for a similar condition to Rose's in 2004 and still deals with the disease.

While Rose's prognosis remains good, he readily admits he's a changed man on and off the court.

He smiles more, takes more time for his family, notices tiny details he otherwise would have missed.

"He just appreciates every day now and having the opportunity to coach because he was really close that summer ... to having that all taken away," Rice said.

"He still very competitive, and still has the same fire," Rice added. "But the big change is that he worries a little bit less on a day-to-day basis about the little things. ... whether the bus is a little late getting there or something doesn't happen exactly right. Little things used to bother him. He's a little bit more patient now."

Rose no doubt will take time to smell the beignets in New Orleans, and allow his players to take in some sights, just as they did when playing in Buffalo earlier this season.

"We stayed at Niagara Falls," Rose said of that late-December trip. "There was a time in my career (where I'd think), 'If we go to Niagara Falls, we'll jinx ourselves.'"

That's not the case anymore.

He's also doesn't view each season as success or failure.

"It's really hard to explain unless maybe you've been through it somehow," he said of battling cancer. "It seemed like I was always trying to get our team in a position to be really good at the end of the year and that was where all the focus was."

"Now I seem to enjoy each step of that process."

But which would ultimately bring Rose more satisfaction, knowing that he played on a team that came within a buzzer-beater of winning an NCAA title? Or taking his own team to the brink?

"That's a good question," Rice said. "I don't know that we can separate the two. I think the fact that we're having success speaks volumes to coach Rose's experience as a player, then as a coach."

"He's able to use those experiences to help this team progress and go through the highs and lows that every team goes through, and rise above it."

Associated Press writer Bernie Wilson contributed to this report.

A possible hiring of Gosar, who is 75-25 in three seasons at CSI, is getting plenty of support in the Wyoming community. A Facebook group called "Steve Gosar for Head Basketball Coach @ The University of Wyoming" had 327 members as of Tuesday afternoon.

Asked if being the Wyoming head coach would be his dream job, Gosar said, "It could be under the right conditions. I grew up wanting to play there and played there and I've coached there, so it could be a great situation."

But Gosar isn't itching to leave CSI after a 33-4 season that saw the Golden Eagles claim their first national title since 1987.

"We have the best job, the best situation in junior college," he said. "I don't think right now there's any pressure to leave. ... We've got a chance to be as good or better next year."

Recruiting interest in CSI's four sophomores, particularly guards Pierre Jackson and Darius Smith, has exploded since the NJCAA tourney, with Gosar staying busy trying to coordinate it all. Sophomore center Kenny Buckner has already committed to Boise State, while freshman forward Mitch Bruneel could also leave for a four-year program.

But with eight freshmen and several redshirt players slated to return next season, CSI could have a great shot at defending its national crown.

"We've got a great thing going here," said Gosar. "I love my job."

BARRY BONDS GOES TO TRIAL

Bonds lawyer starts to pick away at government's case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — With prosecutors saying Barry Bonds lied about using steroids, the home run king's lead attorney started picking at the government's case Tuesday, attacking witnesses expected to accuse Bonds of willfully taking drugs to make him hit the ball harder and farther.

Defense lawyer Allen Ruby, his rich voice sometimes inflected with sarcasm, said in his opening statement that a former Bonds girlfriend, a former business partner and a former personal shopper only came forward against his client after the baseball star broke off relationships with them.

He also insisted Bonds testified truthfully before a grand jury in December 2003 when he said he did not know he was using a pair of designer steroids. Bonds claims his trainer told him that he was taking "flaxseed oil" and "arthritic cream."

"I know it doesn't make a great story. Barry Bonds went to the grand jury and told the truth and did his best," Ruby said. "That's not a made-for-TV story."

On a day when federal agent Jeff Novitzky became the first witness to testify, saying Bonds' grand jury account differed with other facts in the case, the contrast in stories and legal teams could not have been greater.

While Ruby, a high-priced, high-profile defense lawyer, spoke in a booming baritone and painted Bonds as a victim over the course of an hour, Assistant U.S. Attorney Matthew A. Parrella gave his 46-minute statement in a workmanlike monotone that had some jurors struggling to keep their heads up.

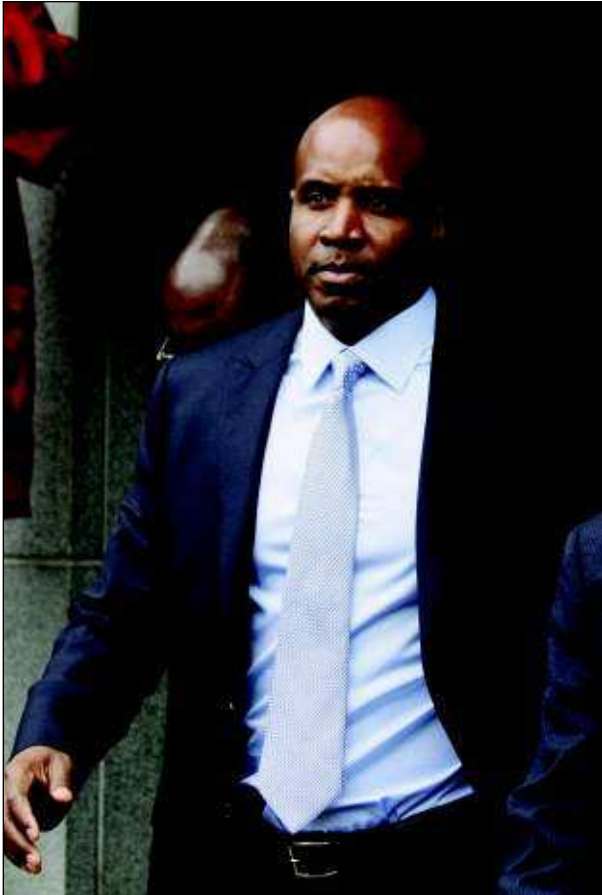

His two best lines drew objections from Ruby that were sustained by U.S. District Judge Susan Illston.

First, Parrella called BALCO founder Victor Conte, Bonds trainer Greg Anderson and Bonds "the three Musketeers of BALCO."

Then, Parrella said Bonds' grand jury testimony was an "utterly ridiculous and unbelievable story."

After the opening statements, and with the jury out of the court room, Anderson walked in and passed Bonds, who turned his head away.

Anderson repeated his long-standing refusal to testify against his childhood friend, was held in civil contempt by Illston, taken into custody by U.S. Marshals and escorted out a back door. This will be his fourth time in prison, his third for refusing to testify against Bonds, and he likely will be held until the end of the trial. The case is expected to last about a month.

Barry Bonds leaves the federal courthouse after the second day of his perjury trial, Tuesday in San Francisco.

Anderson also served three months in prison and three months in home confinement for money laundering and steroids distribution from the original Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative (BALCO) case. Anderson's plea in that instance happened in 2005. Bonds' trial is the last to stem from the BALCO investigation.

Mark J. Geragos, Anderson's lawyer, argued that additional sanctions would be "punitive rather than coercive," which was ignored by Illston. Later, she instructed the jury that Anderson was unavailable and that jurors may not draw "any inference from his failure to testify."

Anderson was the go-between for Bonds in his contact with BALCO, and without his testimony to authenticate them, Illston excluded what the government said were three positive drug tests performed for the lab. Because he isn't testifying, the government will have a harder time proving the charges in Bonds' indictment, which includes four counts of making false statements to the grand jury and one count of obstruction.

Each count carries a penalty of up to 10 years, but federal guidelines recommend a sentence of 15-to-21 months.

Bonds, wearing a dark suit as he did Monday, this time with a light blue shirt and a silver-blue tie, sat with hands clasped for much of the time during opening statements. He occasionally wrote out notes for his lawyers, and he sat slouched in his chair, his long legs crossed at the ankles and poking out the other side of the defense table.

While much or all of the government's evidence has been made public since Bonds' indictment in December 2007, Ruby gave the clearest indication of the defense strategy: stick to the story Bonds told the grand jury and assail those implicating against him.

Ruby said the government witnesses and leaks "created a caricature of Barry Bonds, terrible guy, bad, mean."

"Barry is not a caricature. He's a man," Ruby said. "Whether the evidence in this case persuades you that he is an admirable man or not an admirable man or something in between has not a thing to do, we can all agree, with the charges that the United States government brought against him." He also criticized the government witnesses for co-operating with the media, saying they created "poisonous things that have been out there about Barry."

Ruby alleged Kimberly Bell, an ex-girlfriend who ended a nine-year relationship with Bonds, and Steve Hoskins, who had a fallout with Bonds in his signed memorabilia business, were "facing the loss of the financial benefit that Barry provided to them over the years."

Ruby also criticized Kathy Hoskins, Steve's sister and Bonds' former personal shopper, saying "the bitterness of these people toward Barry ... was very, very pervasive."

Will Bonds be convicted or just embarrassed?

SAN FRANCISCO — The Barry Bonds trial was barely an hour old, and already jurors were working overtime. Notebooks in hand, they scribbled words like testicular atrophy, heard about female fertility drugs, and were told a bitter ex-mistress and equally bitter former childhood friend of Bonds would soon be taking the stand to help explain it all.

Hopefully, one other thing will be explained along the way: After spending more than seven years and millions of dollars chasing Bonds, just what is it the government hopes to gain by convicting him of some relatively minor charges of lying to a grand jury?

Judging from opening day of testimony at the federal courthouse not far from the ballpark Bonds built it's this: If they don't convict Bonds, they sure intend to embarrass the heck out of him.

Not a bad idea, actually, if you consider how Bonds embarrassed the game of baseball with superhero-like feats every time he spread some "cream" or "clear" on himself. And Bonds should be embarrassed for not being man enough to tell Greg Anderson to take the stand already and avoid being locked up again as he was Tuesday while Bonds watched impassively from a few feet away.

For those keeping score, it's the fourth stint behind bars for Anderson, the trainer the government alleges helped supply Bonds with steroids and human growth hormone. His loyalty to Bonds may be misguided, but he steadfastly refused to testify despite the urging of the judge to take the stand "so that the whole truth can come out in this trial."

That may save Bonds from prison, judging from the cast of characters the government now must pin its hopes on in the absence of Anderson. They range from former mistress Kimberly Bell to Steve Hoskins, the childhood friend and one-time business partner of Bonds, and it didn't take long for the lead defense attorney to paint them as unworthy of belief.

Still, they will tell tales that would make anyone squirm, even Bonds. Unlike Anderson, they will talk about his allegedly shrinking body parts, his business dealings and what they believe was his steroid use.

They will certainly provide baseball writers a transcript of transgressions they can use to deny Bonds entry in the Hall of Fame when he is eligible on next year's ballot. And it will further tarnish the reputation of the surly slugger, who treated fans with such disdain over his long career.

But after Bonds' all-star team of lawyers get through with them, they may have so little credibility left that jurors will let him walk. In a case built largely on circumstantial evidence, these are not the people you want explaining the circumstances.

Indeed, if Bonds was worried about possibly going to prison for lying about his steroid use, the opening statements should calm those fears. Assistant U.S. Attorney Matt Parrella did a workmanlike job in laying out the prosecution's case, but defense attorney Allen Ruby seemed to captivate the jury when he launched into a folksy defense of his client.

"They've tried to create a caricature. Barry Bonds as a terrible guy, always bad and mean," Ruby said. "Barry's not a caricature. He's a man."

He's also a wealthy man, earning $192.8 million in his career, so he certainly has money to buy legal talent and lots of it. It's money well spent on a legal dream team of 13 attorneys — one that prosecutors can't hope to match with either talent or firepower.

Put in baseball terms, Bonds' team looks like the 1927 Yankees against the 2011 Pirates. And, unlike the prosecution, they don't have to convince all 12 jurors of anything.

Not that some of those jurors need too much convincing that Bonds is being unfairly targeted. One man made it on the panel even after expressing anger that Congress spent time investigating steroid use, and saying that Bonds has "probably not (received) a fair trial in the court of public opinion."

Just what the jurors were thinking after both sides laid out their cases is impossible to say. I know what I was thinking — that I couldn't believe how much smaller Bonds is today than he was in 2007 when I followed him as he passed Henry Aaron to become baseball's all-time home run leader.

Circumstantial evidence, sure. Anyone looking at Bonds would think the same thing and Bonds' own lawyer even admitted Bonds took steroids, though he said he did so unknowingly.

But the case is not about taking steroids; it's about lying about it. And, after a series of rulings that excluded evidence leading up to the trial, the prosecution's chances of nailing Bonds looked shaky going in.

That didn't change on the first day of testimony despite the best efforts of lead investigator Jeff Novitzky. If anything, the playing field seemed tilted even more toward the defense after Novitzky came off as evasive during cross-examination by an aggressive defense attorney late in the day.

Years after beginning their pursuit of Bonds, prosecutors finally have him on trial in the biggest case of the steroid era. In a few weeks they'll know if it was all a colossal waste of time and money or if their tenacity pays off.

It may. But my best guess is they'll have to settle for simply embarrassing him.

Blatter to stand down in 2015

PARIS (AP) — FIFA President Sepp Blatter says his next term will be his last if he is re-elected in June.

The 75-year-old Blatter is seeking a fourth term, running against Qatar's Mohamed bin Hammam. Blatter has led soccer's governing body since 1998 and faces his first challenge since 2002 by Issa Hayatou.

"Those will be the last four years I aspire to," Blatter said Tuesday at the UEFA Congress at the Grand Palais.

Bin Hammam, the Asian Football Confederation president, is also attending and lobbying European federation presidents for their vote June 1 in Zurich.

Bin Hammam has promised greater transparency if he ends his rival's 13-year reign. Blatter told delegates from European soccer's ruling group that the sport's main challenges are to preserve the identity of clubs and to fight illegal betting and doping.

"Football is corrupted by all little devils which exist in the world," he said. "Don't forget that football is a game and that when one is playing, he always tries to cheat a little bit. Together we have the task of bringing together the adventure we have started. We want to ensure a better future for our youth."

Blatter said FIFA will have a "zero-tolerance" policy in the fight against corruption. Several FIFA officials were suspended for seeking bribes during the 2018 and 2022 World Cup bids.

UEFA members make up more than one quarter of the maximum 208 FIFA voters that Blatter and bin Hammam will attempt to woo. The winner needs a two-thirds majority of votes cast in the first ballot or a majority in the second. FIFA has set an April 1 deadline for nominations.

Bin Hammam said Monday he offered a deal to UEFA President Michel Platini for European support to help him oust Blatter now.

A potentially new path to the PGA Tour

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Someone's dream comes true every December.

It could be an All-American from a golf powerhouse or a guy who has been toiling on the mini-tours for longer than he cares to remember. It could be someone as old as Allen Doyle (48) or as young as Ty Tryon (17). Some of them are so choked up they can't speak. Others are so excited they can't stop talking.

These are the stories and the emotions of Q-school for those who earn a ticket to the PGA Tour.

And this is what the PGA Tour wants to take away.

"I don't think I necessarily like that," said J.B. Holmes, speaking from experience. Holmes went straight from Kentucky to the Walker Cup to all three stages of Q-school and had his PGA Tour card. Two months later, he won the Phoenix Open.

And then there's Rickie Fowler.

He also made it through Q-school on his first try at age 21. Ten months later, he birdied the last four holes at Celtic Manor to earn an improbable halve in a critical singles match at the Ryder Cup.

Why take away an opportunity like that? Because of all the other stories that don't have such a happy ending.

"There is some charm to that," David Duval said of Q-school. "But history shows that romanticism, as attractive as it may be, leads to failure 10 months later when you lose your card and you're back in the cycle."

According to the PGA Tour media guide, Q-school has been around since 1965. A record 57 players earned PGA Tour cards in 1983. But as the minor leagues took root, tour officials began taking away the number of cards offered at Q-school and giving more to the top Nationwide players. The thinking was they proved themselves over an entire season.

The next move appears to be radical.

The policy board has given preliminary approval to a concept that essentially would end Q-school as we know it.

At the end of the regular season in Greensboro, N.C., the top 125 in the standings would go to the FedEx Cup playoffs and the money list would be closed for the year.

The next 50 or 75 players would join the top 50 or 75 players from the Nationwide Tour to play the "Finals Series," comprised of three tournaments that amount to a different kind of playoffs. The top 50 players from those three tournaments would earn their cards for the next season. Consider it 12 rounds of Q-school spread over three weeks.

The pressure could be just as great. The quality of competition would be stronger than ever.

As for Q-school?

It still would be played at the end of the year, but the only cards available would be for the Nationwide Tour. If not for a player's pride and patience, there shouldn't be a problem.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"It is a consolation to the wretched to have companions in misery."

— Publilius Syrus

Four hearts made more often than not on this deal from a national pair game, but the fate of the game bounced from side to side at one table.

West led the spade seven, which declarer won in dummy. Dummy's heart 10 held, and declarer continued with the ace and another club, ruffed in hand. The heart nine lost to East's queen, and South took the spade-jack return with his king. The heart jack came next. East captured it with the ace, then played a diamond to West's ace. Now East could ruff the spade return for down one.

Had declarer given proper thought to the possibility of a spade ruff, then after the heart 10 held, the play of a top diamond (or if this is ducked, a second diamond) cuts the communication between the defenders' hands before a second spade is played.

Equally, East could have set the contract by force by rising with the heart ace at trick two, then returning his last spade. Now when East regains the lead, he can cross to West's diamond ace for the spade ruff.

To bring home 10 tricks against any defense on the actual layout of the cards, South must win the spade lead in hand and play on diamonds before touching trumps. Then, with the defensive communications cut (and declarer able to pitch his third spade on the good diamond), only the three obvious tricks are lost: the ace and queen of trumps together with the diamond ace.

ANSWER: Rather than inventing a suit by bidding an honorless three-card holding, make the practical call of one no-trump. You have the hearts well under control, and even if the opponents can set up the clubs against you, you should be able to establish either spades or diamonds to come close to making seven tricks.

DEAR ABBY: I have read with interest your columns with tales of discontent involving overbearing in-laws. Some of them have been downright frightening, although, of course, not all in-law relationships are fraught with conflict.

I bring this up because I'm about to become a mother-in-law for the first time. My oldest son will marry his longtime girlfriend early this summer. She's a lovely girl, and we already consider her to be a cherished member of our family.

I remember a "Mother-in-Law's Prayer" that ran in your column years ago. It was a kind of "pep talk" from a woman to herself as she approaches mother-in-law status. I found it quite humorous. Would you please reprint it for me and for other mothers-in-law as the spring wedding season beckons? Hopefully, I won't need to refer to it often. Also, how can I get the booklet that contains it?

— KATHERINE M.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR KATHERINE: Congratulations on your son's forthcoming wedding. The item you referenced has been asked for many times.

Over the years, readers have requested that I reprint articles that have special meaning to them on subjects such as parenting, children, animals, aging, death, forgiveness, etc. My booklet ("Keepers") contains 72 column pieces that people have told me they kept to re-read until the pieces were yellow with age and falling apart. It can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby Keepers Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. You'll find stories, poems and prayers like the one below to inspire you, make you think or simply brighten your day.

If all mother-in-law relationships were judged solely by the letters in my column, many people would conclude that it's an emotional minefield. I discussed this subject with a psychiatrist who shared that a mother-in-law who is perceived as overbearing may be one who was a conscientious mother. But now that her child is grown, she finds it difficult to relinquish her role as teacher and protector and quit "hovering" — an interesting observation.

A MOTHER-IN-LAW'S PRAYER

"O, Lord, help me to be glad when my son (or daughter) picks a mate. If he brings home a girl with two heads, let me love both of them equally. And when my son says, 'Mom, I want to get married,' forbid that I should blurt out, 'How far along is she?'"

"And please, Lord, help me to get through the wedding preparations without a squabble with the 'other side.' And drive from my mind the belief that had my child waited a while, he or she could have done better."

"Dear Lord, remind me daily that when I become a grandmother, my children don't want advice on how to raise their children any more than I did when I was raising mine."

"If you will help me to do these things, perhaps my children will find me a joy to be around, and maybe I won't have to write a 'Dear Abby' letter complaining about my children neglecting me. Amen."

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

On March 23, 1775, Patrick Henry delivered an address to the Virginia Provincial Convention in which he is said to have declared, "Give me liberty, or give me death!"

In 1743, George Frideric Handel's oratorio "Messiah" had its London premiere.

In 1792, Joseph Haydn's Symphony No. 94 in G Major (the "Surprise" symphony) was performed publicly for the first time, in London.

In 1806, explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, having reached the Pacific coast, began their journey back east.

In 1919, Benito Mussolini founded his Fascist political movement in Milan, Italy.

In 1933, the German Reichstag adopted the Enabling Act, which effectively granted Adolf Hitler dictatorial powers.

In 1956, Pakistan became an Islamic republic.

In 1965, America's first two-person space flight began as Gemini 3 blasted off with astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John W. Young aboard for a nearly 5-hour flight.

In 1981, the U.S. Supreme Court, in H.L. v. Matheson, ruled that states could require, with some exceptions, parental notification when teenage girls seek abortions.

In 1994, Wayne Gretzky broke Gordie Howe's National Hockey League career record with his 802nd goal.

In 1996, Taiwan held its first direct presidential elections; incumbent Lee Teng-hui was the victor.

Ten years ago: Russia's orbiting Mir space station ended its 15-year odyssey with a fiery plunge into the South Pacific. Russia said it was expelling 50 U.S. diplomats in retaliation for the expulsion of 50 Russians by the U.S. Newspaper columnist Rowland Evans died in Washington, D.C., at age 79. Greenpeace International co-founder David McTaggart died in Umbria, Italy, at age 68.

Five years ago: U.S. and British forces freed three Christian peace activists — one Briton and two Canadians — near Baghdad, ending a four-month hostage ordeal that saw an American in the group killed. Police took DNA samples from 46 members of the Duke University lacrosse team after a woman hired to dance for a party charged she'd been raped. (Three players were indicted on charges of attacking the woman, but the rape counts were later dropped and the players exonerated.) Stephane Lambiel of Switzerland won his second straight World Figure Skating Championships title, in Calgary, Alberta. Conductor and opera company director Sarah Caldwell died in Portland, Maine, at age 82. Desmond T. Doss Sr., a conscientious objector whose achievements as a noncombatant earned him a Medal of Honor in World War II, died in Piedmont, Ala., at age 87.

One year ago: Claiming a historic triumph, President Barack Obama signed a $938 billion health care overhaul, declaring "a new season in America." IF MARCH 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You know how to really fly high this year. You will have many opportunities to change your perspective as well as your circumstances. Things that are of great importance to you may change – perhaps the kids go off to college or you get a new boss. In August and early September, your talents and charms are more obvious than usual, so this is a good time to land a promotion or find Mr. or Ms. Right. You might not be ready to settle down into humdrum routines this year but you will an opportunity to improve your circumstances and be able to make sound decisions for the future in September.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine
Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are out of practice. You could be tempted to celebrate the first week of spring too enthusiastically. Curb an appetite for rich foods and wasteful spending. A long walk will help get you back in shape.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There is no rabbit available to pull out of your hat. Worry about financial security could creep in and disturb the tranquility. It is best to hold off on major decisions and expenditures for a few days.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A Nervous Nellie needs to be nicer. Those in close connection may seem willing to take big gambles with cash that make you panicky. Remain cool and reasonable and avoid making careless remarks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep that upper lip stiff. It might seem that family issues are at variance with your career goals. A close companion might appear to coerce you into doing something at odds with your principles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You don't have to quit just because you have been outwitted. You might overreact to what appears to you to be underhanded maneuvering. In reality, your secrets are completely safe unless you blurt them out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It isn't wise to offer gifts or bribes. As The Beatles said, you "Can't buy me love." In the same vein, you can't purchase someone's allegiance or ensure success in a business deal through sheer bravado.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Bridge-burning may leave you on the wrong side of the river without a paddle – or a canoe. It is tempting to make sweeping statements and gestures, but you should tone down your rhetoric.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Misunderstandings thrive in the fertile ground of obsession. If you are overly focused on just one thing, you are unable to hear opportunities knocking on your door or might ignore a loved one's needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The burden you must bear just became lighter. You may become aware that an obstacle to one of your secret goals has recently been removed. A financial obligation is on the verge of being eradicated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is best to tread water until you have better tested the waters. You could seem obsessed on having your way and alienate your supporters. Do not begin any publicity campaigns or new business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your charm and beaming personality can draw others toward you like moths to a flame, but those moths may want to chew your clothes. Avoid signing agreements and making impulsive purchases.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Place emphasis on healthy, physical exercise and bypass expensive shopping expeditions. Walk through the mall only to check the window displays. You don't have as much spare cash as you think.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
