Crane topples during St. Luke's construction

No one injured when truck tips during sign work

Times-News

A crane truck tipped on its side Thursday morning while hanging a building-mounted sign on the new St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Two people were in the crane's bucket while another operated it from the ground when it tipped. No one was injured, though the truck rolled up onto just one front tire, its chassis angled up into the air.

The incident is being investigated. St. Luke's spokeswoman Laura Stewart said no damage estimates exist yet. Work elsewhere on the building appeared to keep going, even while the truck was still in the air.

Jeff Hull, St. Luke's Health Systems director of architecture and construction, said "a whole myriad" of safety and construction precautions need to happen before crane work can begin.

A representative from Golden West Sign of Boise, the company that was installing the sign, was unavailable for comment.

Workers continue to prepare for the new Twin Falls hospital's May 21 opening, when patients at the existing hospital on Addison Avenue West will be transferred to the 700,000-square-foot, multimillion-dollar facility.

Crapo on the budget: Put everything on the table, let Congress fine tune it

Crapo

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

When it comes to trimming the nation's budget, Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, said everything needs to be on the table. Crapo sat down with the Times-News editorial board on Thursday for a quick discussion. Here are a few of his thoughts on current issues:

Fiscal responsibility:

Crapo said Social Security should be separated from the issue of national debt. Reforming federal tax code to create a system that is both business- and family friendly will simplify the tax rate structure.

"I believe we need to get past politics and cut everything in an evenhanded way and let Congress fine-tune it," Crapo said.

"Everything needs to be on the table," he said, adding military spending and farm subsidies were not exempt from examination.

Wolves:

Crapo said a proposed compromise to allow Idaho and Montana to manage their wolf populations is positive, but Congress needs to continue to examine wolf management on a larger scale.

"It's way better than the status quo," he said of the compromise. "This is a two-state solution for a short period of time. But there are more states than Idaho and Montana that have wolf issues."

Senate OKs third Luna bill

Cameron concerned over fund shift, consolidation issue

How they voted

The Idaho Senate passed the third part of a state education overhaul with a 20-15 vote.

Local supporters were: Sens. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, and Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson.

Local opponents were: Sens. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, Denton Darrington, R-Declo, and Michelle Stennett, D-Ketchum.

What's next: The bill still needs to pass the House Education Committee and the House.

Already done: Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has already signed into law the two other bills in the "Students Come First" plan, which revamp teacher contract negotiations and put a merit-pay system in place.

Sewer problems in Jerome still under investigation

Times-News

JEROME — After a smelly, problematic glitch, Jerome city officials say the town's sewer system is back online and running at full capacity.

The city is in the process of investigating a Dec. 30 incident when industrial dairy waste clogged the system and shut down the city wastewater facility.

City Administrator Ben Marchant said the sewage smell is gone and no one should be worried about untreated waste in nearby canals, as a temporary discharge of waste into canals has ended.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency was informed of the problem in early January and officials visited Jerome last week. David Domingo, with EPA's Region 10 Office of Compliance and Enforcement, said EPA officials are still investigating the situation and declined further comment.

Cassia County residents join potato board

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Three Cassia County residents have been selected to serve three-year terms on the United States Potato Board. Karlene Hardy of Oakley, Jeff Gibson of Burley and Craig Searle of Burley were recently selected to join the national board that promotes U.S. potato export and domestic consumption. They were seated during the board's annual meeting, held March 10-11 in Colorado Springs, Colo. All three grow Russet Burbank potatoes. "I've found out that when we speak out, our voices are heard," said Hardy. The three new members join 23 other Idahoans on the board, including Brent Stoker of Burley, Nick Cummins of Murtaugh and Ryan Cranney of Oakley. Hardy said the number of state representatives on the board is based on the percentage of potatoes produced. "It's important for growers to have that representation," said Hardy, "But it's more important for our message about the nutrition of potatoes to be heard." Hardy Farms Inc. grows potatoes for table use in rotation with alfalfa, wheat, barley and corn. Hardy replaces her husband, Randy Hardy, on the board. Randy now serves on the National Potato Council, the lobbying arm of the potato industry. Gibson said he has been a farmer for 13 years. "I think the board's important for both the fresh and process producers," said Gibson. Searle owns Moo View Cow Palace, and grows potatoes for frozen processing. Hardy said one of the current issues facing potato producers is U.S. Department of Agriculture nutrition standards issued in January for the national school lunch and breakfast programs, which recommend reducing the servings of potatoes, corn and peas in school menus. Laurie Welch may be reached at lwelch@magicvalley.com or 677-5025.

obligate legislators to certain future actions and disrupt the public schools budget. Cameron said the bill is akin to taking "money out of your left pocket and putting it into your right pocket." The bill ultimately would take money the state gives to school districts for teacher salaries and tabs it for technology instead. It also allows districts added flexibility to dip further into the salary money, making it discretionary dollars for technology-related items and other needs. "If the public policy of this body and of the Legislature is that we reduce salary-based apportionment, in my mind that should be for very specific reasons," Cameron said, reminding lawmakers they'll also have to vote for a budget. The bill isn't necessary, Cameron said, because JFAC can put $13 million toward technology in the public schools budget without it. "Every stakeholder that has been before us has testified opposed to it," Cameron said. Referring to the financial figures given to lawmakers, Cameron said that the only way the numbers balance out financially is by funding school districts in seven counties — including Twin Falls, Lincoln and Gooding — as if they were consolidated. If consolidation isn't part of the plan, Cameron said, it's "$10.8 million short." Another opponent, Sen. Denton Darrington, R-DeClo and a former teacher, said education reform has been "taking place incrementally through the years." The examples he gave: alternative high schools, high-tech high schools, advanced placement classes and a required fourth year of English in high school. "I only had to take three," Darrington said. He added: "Reform has been constant and it has been incremental." Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, said in an interview that he's comfortable with supporting the bill because it gives more spending flexibility for schools, including allowing those that already have computers to use the money for other needs. Ben Botkin may be reached at bbotkin@magicvalley.com.

Heyburn employees keep days; handbook approved

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — Points of contention in Heyburn's new personnel handbook were smoothed out Wednesday after the City Council agreed to allow employees to keep three paid days of personal leave that were previously on the chopping block. The council approved the handbook, which had been in the works for months, after making a few changes requested by city employees. The paid personal leave days are in addition to six sick leave days allowed each year. "I know this is kind of sticky," said Councilwoman Leann Smith. "If you leave the (sick) days as personal time off, it gives them the flexibility they need to take care of any issues at a time when we're seeing cities and states going bankrupt because of benefits they can't afford to pay. I think it's a good time to hold it to the six days." Councilwomen Joanne Justesen, Cleo Gallegos and Councilman Rocky Baker said they didn't want employees to lose any days of available pay. Other changes to the handbook included allowing employees to volunteer with the fire department with prior approval from their supervisor and the mayor. The issue stemmed from a mandatory call-out of volunteers on all structure fires. "I know that if my home was on fire, I'd want whoever could come to come and help put it out," said Justesen. "I'd like to not tie their hands." The council also opted to do away with a citizen's ride-along program offered by the police department due to potential liability issues. "I wouldn't even want to put that responsibility on the city's shoulders," said Dan Bristol, Heyburn police chief. In other business, the council:

- Reversed the direction of one-way traffic on two one-lane streets to accommodate a U.S. Postal Service request. Traffic on Sessions Street will now travel westbound, while Holsten Street will direct traffic eastbound. The city plans to reverse signage on the streets.
- City Administrator Scott Spevak said the town's new postmaster called to complain about mail carriers driving against traffic to deliver mail on Holsten. Spevak said if the city hadn't made the change, the post office would have suspended delivery to Holsten residents.
- Approved the mayor's signature on a rate settlement agreement with Bonneville Power Administration that will possibly end a nearly 30-year-old legal battle over alleged past overcharges.
- Granted Minidoka County School District Food Supervisor Phyllis Bean permission to use Galawn Park for the district's Lunch in the Park program. The school district has participated in the federally subsidized program for the last two years at parks in Heyburn, Rupert and Paul.

Report released on Idaho plane crash that killed 2

BOISE (AP) — Officials have released a preliminary report investigating a plane crash earlier this month that killed two people on board. The National Transportation and Safety Board report does not mention a possible cause of the March 8 crash that killed 55-year-old Danny Joe Summers and 47-year-old Jodi Wyatt. The plane — which was flying from Wendover, Utah, to Idaho Falls, Idaho — went down about a mile north of the Idaho-Nevada border in Twin Falls County. The report says the plane crashed at about 6,000 feet and caught fire. The report also says weather conditions at the time of the flight were good enough to meet visibility rules. KBOI-TV in Boise reports authorities found the 1952 Korean War-era airplane partially covered in snow. Officials are still examining the wreckage.

Energy and nuclear power:

Crapo said Japan nuclear issues after the tsunami may have a significant impact on the market's investment in nuclear energy, but the U.S. should continue to support nuclear advancements. Moving away from dependence on foreign resources and petroleum is key, the senator said. Crapo said the federal government should incentivize development of alternative energy sources to make them viable.

driving some business out of America. He said the EPA's role should stay in the realm of regulating clean air and clean water, and said curbing its influence will have to happen through budget cuts or a change in the presidency.

Libyan engagement:

"I have mixed feelings on this but we should not have gone in," he said. "We should never do that unless our national security is at risk or all other options have been tried and failed." Crapo said the U.S. is stretching itself thin by occupying other countries without a strategy, then staying to rebuild damage done through military action. Health care: Crapo said health care costs are going up and the quality of medicine is low. To deal with issues, he said the U.S. needs to increase competition between in-state and out-of-state insurance agencies, allow small businesses to pool together to get better rates and find solutions to the two largest health risks — tobacco use and obesity.

Marchant said the city is taking samples of canal and ditch water and will receive results in the near future. No related fines have been issued by the EPA or Idaho Department of Environmental Quality. Likewise, Jerome continues to pin down the source of the discharge. Only one dairy processor is linked to the line where city officials found the discharge to come from, Marchant previously said. But city officials aren't ready to point a finger of blame yet. "Our investigation continues to determine the reason for the plant failures," Marchant said. "We will continue to cooperate with the DEQ and EPA, canal company and the county. If we don't know why it happened then we can't prevent it." Marchant said the city is looking to upgrade the plant but items needed weren't budgeted for this year. The City Council will discuss plant upgrade options soon, he said.

Some confused by new automated alert system in T.F.

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Twin Falls residents with landline telephones received a call from an out-of-state number on Sunday. The message left was the same from household to household, and described a missing woman's description, last known whereabouts, other pertinent information and a Twin Falls Police Department number to call with any information.

Many people called city emergency dispatch, thinking the call they received was a scam. But Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts said it was just the first activation of the department's agreement with the A Child is Missing Alert (ACIM) program, a national nonprofit that helps coordinate missing persons alerts.

TFPD started using the program in July but hadn't needed to use the system until last weekend. Stotts said the program is just one more tool to help officers locate missing children and vulnerable adults.

The ACIM system can make up to 1,000 calls in a minute and has helped safely recover 750 people in the U.S., including three in Idaho, since 1997.

Stotts said the calls didn't help in Sunday's search, but the woman was safely located around 30 minutes after the calls went out.

"We don't want to over-use it and we have been close to activating it a few times," Stotts said. "It went off without a hitch."

Another generation, another famous Idaho Hemingway

Dree Hemingway, daughter of Mariel, granddaughter of Jack, great-granddaughter of Ernest, is the fastest-rising star in the rarified world of international high-fashion modeling.

And she's just 23 years old.

Hemingway, who was born in Blaine County and went to school at Ketchum's Ernest Hemingway Elementary before moving to California as a teenager, has walked the runways for Givenchy, Calvin Klein, Lagerfeld and Chanel; has lucrative contracts with Gianfranco Ferre and Salvatore Ferragamo as the face of their products; has done ad campaigns for Gucci, Jean Paul Gautier, Valentino and Paco Rabanne; and is a regular in the pages of Harpers Bazaar and the Japanese, Russian, Chinese, German, British, French, Teen and American editions of Vogue.

Last year, British Vogue sent her on a fashion shoot to the Wood River Valley. It was published in November.

In one photo, Hemingway is slouching in front of an "Idaho Is Too Great to Litter" sign on Idaho Highway 75, wearing a $2,100 Missoni patchwork tweed skirt, $1,300 D&G fur boots and $130 cashmere fingerless gloves. In another picture, she's straddling a rail fence with Bald Mountain in the background, wearing a Prada wool skirt and wool sweater — $1,000 apiece.

In a third photo, she's leaning against the sign at Hemingway Elementary, wearing a $3,000 Acme shearling jacket and $600 Chanel faux fur boots.

And she has some interesting things to say about her home and heritage.

Hemingway told V Magazine that she finds her great-granddad's books "kind of depressing," and prefers F. Scott Fitzgerald. "Right now I'm more in a Gatsby phase."

And she told Vogue UK: "Idaho has this glamour thing going with pishy-poshy grandmas wearing old Chanel suits."

Gooding examines utility deposits

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

Gooding City Council is looking ahead to new projects and some revamped ordinances.

At its Monday meeting, City Clerk Carmen Korsen gave the council research into raising the deposit for water, sewer and garbage services. Korsen said that with Gooding's water bill at a minimum $35, the current $30 deposit doesn't cover even one month of a delinquent bill.

"We're losing a lot of money when people leave us with bills," she said.

Korsen also gave council members 10 pages of how other cities handle water deposits to help them make a new plan.

One of Gooding's ordinance cleanups is almost complete. The new sewer ordinance had its first official reading. The ordinance was rewritten to delete obsolete passages and clarify wording.

For Gooding citizens curious about other city ordinances, an easier way to access them is in the works. Korsen said Coeur d'Alene-based Sterling Codifiers plans to put the ordinances on the city's website. The firm has provided the same service for other Magic Valley communities.

"They have it all. They can put it online, search the document, get the ordinances," Korsen said.

Bart Morrow, with the airport board, said the board's work session resulted in a step forward with standards. Morrow hopes to cement the suggestions and have a proposal ready for the next council meeting.

In other business, the budget was re-opened to add $6,000 of grant money into the police department's account. The grants came from the Department of Homeland Security and the Office of Highway Safety. Police Chief Jeff Perry said similar grants in the past have helped the department fund items from overtime pay to gas masks without using taxpayer money. This year, the grants will probably help cover costs of keeping patrol car computers running.

Lawrence Denver Crutchfield

Sept. 1, 1923–March 23, 2011

Lawrence Denver Crutchfield, 87, of Twin Falls, died peacefully in his sleep, Wednesday, March 23, 2011, at home surrounded by his loving family.

Lawrence was born Sept. 1, 1923, at Jacksboro, Tenn., to William and Beatrice Crutchfield. He started his military career at the age of 18 in 1941 by enlisting in the United States Navy. He served in World War II, the Korean War, the Bay of Pigs and Vietnam. Lawrence was the second enlisted man to become a commissioned officer, which took an act of Congress to accomplish, and he was so very proud of this. He retired from the Navy as lieutenant in 1967. On Feb. 18, 1984, he married Irene Rodriguez at Murphy, Idaho, and they made their life together in Twin Falls.

Lawrence joined the Masonic Lodge when he was in Key West, Fla. He was an Australian dog trainer, enjoyed ranching, custom farming, cooking and gardening. He loved horses and participated in the Chief Joseph Ride. Lawrence was very involved with his family and loved spending time with them.

Survivors include his wife, Irene; his children, Larry (Megan) Crutchfield, Alethia Young, Terina Sink, Colton (Michelle) Bartlett, Yancy (Rachel) Bartlett, Toma (Jessica) Bartlett, Joshua (Katie) Bartlett and Amanda (Chris) Raney; 22 grandchildren; siblings, Kenneth Crutchfield and Ilene Kirk, and three very special friends, Bob Korb, Butch Martin and George Pierce.

He was preceded in death by his parents, a brother and two sisters.

A celebration of life with military honors will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, March 26, at the 13th Ward LDS Chapel, 2085 South Temple Drive in Twin Falls. Bishop Rustin Hatch will officiate. Services are under the direction of Serenity Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

French hit targets deep within Libya; fewer U.S. jets used

By Ryan Lucas and Hadeel al-Shalchi
Associated Press

BENGHAZI, Libya — French fighter jets hit aircraft and a crossroads military base deep inside Libya on Thursday as the U.S. reduced its combat role in the international operation that is working to thwart Moammar Gadhafi's forces by land, sea and air.

Explosions could be heard in Tripoli, the Libyan capital, before daybreak Friday, apparently from airstrikes.

Libya's air force has been effectively neutralized, and the government has taken part of its fight to the airwaves. State television aired pictures of bodies it said were victims of airstrikes, but a U.S. intelligence report bolstered rebel claims that Gadhafi's forces had simply taken bodies from a morgue.

International military support for the rebels is not open-ended: France set a timeframe on the international action at days or weeks — not months.

The possibility of a looming deadline raised pressure on rebel forces. So does a U.N. arms embargo that keeps both Gadhafi and his outgunned opposition from getting more weapons. The rebels were so strapped Thursday that they handed out sneakers — and not guns — at one of their checkpoints.

"We are facing cannons, T-72 and T-92 tanks, so what do we need? We need anti-tank weapons, things like that," said Col. Ahmed Omar Bani, a military spokesman told reporters in Benghazi, the de facto rebel capital. "We are preparing our army now.

Before there was no army, from now there is an idea to prepare a new army with new armaments and new morals."

The Gadhafi regime appeared equally hard-pressed, asking international forces to spare its broadcast and communications infrastructure.

"Communications, whether by phones or other uses, are civilian and for the good of the Libyan nation to help us provide information, knowledge and coordinate everyday life. If these civilian targets are hit, it will make life harder for millions of civilians around Libya," Moussa Ibrahim, a government spokesman, told reporters in Tripoli.

Representatives for the regime and rebels were expected to attend an African Union meeting in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, on Friday, according to U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, who described it as a part of an effort to reach a cease-fire and political solution.

The U.S. has been trying to give up the lead role in the operation against Gadhafi's forces, and NATO agreed late Thursday to assume one element of it — control of the no-fly zone.

The U.S.-led coalition will still supervise attacks on targets on the ground, though fewer U.S. planes were used in airstrikes Thursday.

"Nearly all, some 75 percent of the combat air patrol missions in support of the no-fly zone, are now being executed by our coalition partners," Navy Vice Adm. William Gortney, told reporters at the Pentagon. Other countries were handling less than 10 percent of such missions, he said.

HIGASHIMATSUSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Where do you even start?

Do you start by carting away the Chokai Maru, the 150-foot ship that was lifted over a pier and slammed into a house in this port town? Do you start with the thousands of destroyed cars scattered like discarded toys in the city of Sendai? With the broken windows and the doorless refrigerators and the endless remnants of so many lives that clutter the canals?

In the first days after a tsunami slammed into Japan's northeast coast on March 11, killing well over 10,000 people, it seemed callous to worry about the cleanup. The filth paled beside the tragedy. Now, nearly two weeks later, hundreds of communities are finally turning to the monumental task ahead.

The legacy of Hurricane Katrina, which devastated the U.S. Gulf of Mexico coastline in 2005, gives an idea of both the immensity of the job and the environmental hazards Japan could face for years to come.

"In Katrina, you had debris that had seawater, sewage, chemicals, gasoline, oil, that was all mixed together in a toxic soup," said David McEntire, a disaster expert at the University of

A ship is seen Wednesday pushed up on a pier in Iwaki, Fukushima Prefecture, northeastern Japan, where it was deposited by the March 11 tsunami.

North Texas. "And you're going to have similar problems with the disaster in Japan."

Three years after Katrina, which spawned enough debris to cover Britain, the U.S. government had said the mess was not even close to being cleaned up.

The mess looks endless in Japan, and hauling it away seems unimaginable. The cost? No one really knows, though the crisis is emerging as the world's most expensive natural disaster on record, with Japanese officials saying losses could total up to 25 trillion yen ($309 billion). The World Bank says reconstruction could take five years.

So there's nothing to do but start.

Mayumi Hatanaka began with the knee-high mud that had flooded into her little seafood restaurant in the small seaside city of Shiogama.

"It's been four days, and we've been working, working," she said, standing beneath a sign that promised food "Straight From The Fishery To You."

She and her daughter were scraping the muck down their driveway and into the street. The thick, dark goo looked almost volcanic. Workers hired by the city used a gargantuan truck-mounted vacuum, normally used for well-drilling, to hose it up. The noise of the pump and the sucking splutter of the hose nearly drowned out her voice, and she had to shout to be heard.

Simply carving out an aisle in the restaurant took three days, Hatanaka said, so she has no idea when she'll be able to reopen. "I think we'll never finish," she said, only briefly willing to set aside her shovel before getting back to work.

Much of the official cleanup effort so far has been to support rescue teams. Soldiers and city crews have cleared streets of debris so rescuers can get through, and some buildings have been pulled apart in search of survivors.

Liz Taylor buried in small ceremony at L.A.'s famed Forest Lawn

By Sandy Cohen
Associated Press

GLENDALE, Calif. — Elizabeth Taylor's family mourned the screen legend in a brief private funeral service Thursday at a Southern California cemetery famous for being the final resting place of Hollywood celebrities, including her good friend Michael Jackson.

Inside the sprawling Forest Lawn Cemetery, barricades blocked access to the funeral, where about four dozen family members mourned the actress during a service that lasted about an hour, said Glendale police spokesman Tom Lorenz. Five black stretch limousines transported Taylor's family to and from the funeral, but no procession was held.

The service began 15 minutes after its announced start time in observance of Taylor's parting wish that her funeral start late, her publicist Sally Morrison said.

Taylor had left instructions asking for the tardy start and had requested that someone announce, "She even wanted to be late for her own funeral," Morrison said.

Taylor died early Wednesday of congestive heart failure while surrounded by her four children at Los Angeles' Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where she had been hospitalized for about six weeks.

Taylor, who was famously married eight times to seven husbands, converted to Judaism before her 1959 wedding to Eddie Fisher. Jewish customs call for a burial within 48 hours of death.

The roughly one-hour service began with poetry readings by actor Colin Farrell and Taylor's family members and included a trumpet performance of Amazing Grace by her grandson, Morrison said.

The casket was draped in gardenias, violets, and lilies of the valley before its interment in the cemetery's Great Mausoleum beneath a marble sculpture of an angel inspired by the work of Italian artist Michelangelo.

In addition to Jackson, the cemetery is the final resting place for such stars as Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, W.C. Fields, Red Skelton, Gracie Allen, Walt Disney and Nat King Cole.

Taylor, the star of such films as "Butterfield 8," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and "Cleopatra," won three Academy Awards, including a special one for her humanitarian work. She was an ardent and early supporter of AIDS research, when HIV was new to the industry and beyond.

"I admired Elizabeth Taylor enormously and feel heartsick losing her, especially with all of her charitable works," said Ann Berry, a fan and character actress who lives nearby and visited the cemetery with a friend to pay their respects to the star.

Several television news crews documented the service from across the street while news helicopters swirled overhead and students got out of class at the nearby Cerritos Elementary School.

Taylor underwent at least 20 major operations during her life and nearly died from a bout with pneumonia in 1990. In 1994 and 1995, she had both hip joints replaced, and in February 1997, she underwent surgery to remove a benign brain tumor. In 1983, she acknowledged a 35-year addiction to sleeping pills and pain killers, and was treated for alcohol and drug abuse at the Betty Ford Clinic in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

Survivors include Taylor's daughters Maria Burton-Carson and Liza Todd-Tivey, sons Christopher and Michael Wilding, 10 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Judge asked to lift federal protections on wolves

By Matt Volz
Associated Press

MISSOULA, Mont. — Ten conservation groups and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service asked a federal judge Thursday to approve their plan to lift endangered species protections for wolves in Montana and Idaho, effectively reversing his previous rulings on the matter.

But four other conservation groups who splintered from the plaintiffs told U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy the proposed settlement is driven by politics, not science, and will hurt the species before it has fully recovered.

“If the settlement agreement is entered, one thing is clear: hundreds of wolves will die,” said Jay Tutchton, attorney for two of the groups.

Molloy said he would rule soon on whether to recommend the proposed deal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which has jurisdiction over the case since Molloy ruled for the plaintiffs last August and the federal government appealed.

Molloy

If he does recommend it, or says it raises serious questions, the appellate court would then remand the case back to Molloy and he would make a final ruling.

Molloy rejected arguments last summer to remove federal protections in Montana and Idaho but allow them to remain in Wyoming, which has a wolf management plan considered hostile to survival of the species.

Molloy ruled then that decisions on the Endangered Species Act should be based on science and not on political boundaries, such as state lines.

The proposed deal asks Molloy to stay his ruling. It also provides assurances that wolves will not be hunted to extinction and requires the Department of Interior to review the animal’s status within four years of the deal’s enactment.

Department of Justice attorney Mike Eietel called the deal “a path that allows the parties to work cooperatively and outside of litigation.”

Michael Senatore, the attorney representing the 10 conservation groups who want to settle, said the deal will allow the issue to move forward and reduce the conflict and public rancor that has surrounded it. The conditions of the settlement also would provide for a new body of science on which governments can base their wolf management policies, he said.

But Tutchton called the conservation groups’ willingness to settle a “dramatic flip-flop” when nothing has changed since Molloy ruled in their favor last year. Instead, he argued, those who want to settle are trying to avoid the possibility of Congress passing a law that would take wolves off the endangered species list not just in Montana and Idaho, but in adjacent states and possibly nationwide.

The deal would put into place a system that Molloy has already ruled illegal, Tutchton said.

Senatore said portrayals of the settlement as politically motivated are unfair and that provisions in the settlement for monitoring the species and to conduct an independent review will go a long way to satisfy doubts over the information the Fish and Wildlife Service previously used to delist the wolves.

Montana and Idaho would take over management of wolves within their borders under the agreement, allowing the states to reinstitute hunts that were halted after one season.

Montana officials have endorsed the settlement while Idaho Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter has decided against taking a formal stance.

IDAHO Twin Falls dairy guilty of illegal waste discharge

BOISE — A federal jury has convicted a Twin Falls dairy operator for illegally discharging wastewater into a canal, a violation of federal clean water laws.

The jury found 52-year-old Mike Vierstra guilty of one misdemeanor count for discharging without a federal permit last May.

Prosecutors say wastewater from an uncapped pipe on his feedlot was leaking into the Low Line Canal. Complaints were filed by neighbors and the canal operator, Twin Falls Canal Co.

At trial, Vierstra argued the pipe was uncapped by an unknown third party and that he later ordered an employee to fix the problem.

Still, the jury found him guilty on one misdemeanor and acquitted him on two other counts.

Megaloads lawsuit bill heads to Senate

BOISE — A measure aimed at curtailing lawsuits filed against the state for permitting oversized truckloads is headed to the Senate for changes.

Citing concerns, the Senate Transportation Committee voted Thursday to move it to the Senate where it could be reworked or linger in the session’s final weeks.

The bill by Republican Rep. Dick Harwood of St. Maries would require anyone filing a lawsuit challenging plans to haul oversized loads on state roadways to post a bond equal to 5 percent of the load’s insured value.

Harwood says he wants to shield the state from what he calls frivolous lawsuits challenging permits issued for the massive shipments.

Flooding pushes lead into N. Idaho lake

COEUR D’ALENE — An official with the U.S. Geological Survey says an estimated 352,000 pounds of lead from leftover mine pollution has washed into Lake Coeur d’Alene in northern Idaho.

The Spokesman-Review reported in a story published Thursday that’s the weight equivalent of 70 Dodge Ram 1500 pickups.

Hydrologist Greg Clark says the lead washed into the lake on Jan. 18 as a result of a rain-on-snow event that caused flooding.

Senate OKs Liquor Division budget

BOISE — A spending plan that will allow more of Idaho’s busiest state-owned liquor stores to stay open a little longer each day has cleared the Idaho Senate.

Lawmakers voted 28-8 to approve the Liquor Division budget, which includes $450,000 to keep more than two dozen of Idaho’s busiest stores open until 9 p.m. as part of a six-month experiment. Most state stores close at 7 p.m., though some are kept open until 9 p.m. two days each week.

The plan is advancing amid some lawmaker objections that extending store hours was tantamount to the state promoting the sales of booze and spirits.

CALIFORNIA Site for ‘maternity tourists’ shut down

SAN GABRIEL — For months, neighbors noticed a number of pregnant Asian women coming and going at all hours at an upscale townhouse development in suburban Los Angeles.

They finally found out the home was being used as a maternity center for Chinese mothers paying thousands of dollars to give birth in the United States so their children would automatically gain citizenship, city officials said.

Officials in the suburb that’s home to a large Asian population shut down the house for building code violations earlier this month after receiving a complaint about excessive noise, overcrowding and possible building permit violations, said Clayton A. Anderson, the city’s neighborhood improvement services manager.

Why shouldn’t CSI students live near campus?

There are worse things than living next door to college students. They, most of them, are solid citizens who are investing their own money in building a stronger future for our community. So we’re puzzled why the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission would flatly reject the College of Southern Idaho’s plans to build a 40-apartment complex for students near the eastern edge of the campus.

P&Z voted unanimously this week to say no after residents of the Green Acres Subdivision, which would border the southern side of the complex, objected to the proposal, citing potential noise, lights, traffic and privacy concerns. CSI can appeal the commission’s decision to the City Council.

And it should. This is one of those not-in-my-backyard issues that doesn’t hold up to scrutiny.

This is not a honky-tonk or a high school going up next door, but a residential center for adults who are focused on getting an education. Thousands of CSI students live in private residences in Twin Falls, and in the nearby college-owned Northview Apartments, without disturbing their neighbors.

If the school can’t construct housing its students need near CSI, then where is it supposed to build? Miles away in the countryside, resulting in even more vehicles on the already packed campus and more traffic on Falls Avenue, Washington Street North and North College Road?

The $4.7 million project would provide construction jobs that Twin Falls needs, and do it with minimal impact on nearby residents.

CSI has a 45-year track record of being a good neighbor, and it’s earned the benefit of the doubt on this project.

Our view:

The College of Southern Idaho has historically gone to great lengths to accommodate its neighbors, so there’s no reason it shouldn’t be allowed to build a 40-unit apartment complex nearby.

What do you think?
We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Rich man, poor man: It isn’t that simple

Steven R. Cunningham

One of the most enduring economic myths in our society is that the rich keep getting richer, while the poor keep getting poorer. It isn’t true.

When most people think of the rich, they probably are thinking of people with great wealth. When they think of the poor, they probably are thinking of people with low incomes.

While there’s obviously a correlation between wealth and income, they’re not the same. And we shouldn’t confuse them. A retiree who has $1 million invested in CDs is a millionaire; most people would consider this person wealthy. But at a 2.5 percent rate of return on the CDs — about twice what the typical bank is paying today — this person could have an annual income of just $25,000.

We don’t have to rely on hypotheticals to illustrate this. The households of people ages 70-74 have the highest average wealth of any age group in America, but less than half the income of those in the 35-44 age bracket.

Government data, if misunderstood or improperly used, can lead to many false conclusions.

For example, from 2000 to 2009, inflation-adjusted household income fell 4.5 percent, but consumer spending increased 22.4

on, up to the highest 20 percent.

While this is a reasonable approach, it can be extremely misleading.

We often hear, for example, that the top 20 percent of U.S. households receive roughly 50 percent of total income, while the bottom 20 percent receives less than 4 percent. According to the Census Bureau’s household data and quintile distribution, this is correct.

The problem is that we are not told that the top 20 percent of households includes four times as many workers as the bottom 20 percent, and nearly six times as many full-time, year-round workers. Knowing this makes a lot of difference in interpreting the original statement.

Income distribution data provide, at best, a snapshot, but this snapshot tells us little about movement within the economy.

Yet, economic mobility is a characteristic that helps differentiate the United States from many other countries. Between 2004 and 2007, for example, roughly a third of the households in the lowest income group moved up to a higher income group, according to the Census Bureau, while roughly a third of the households in the highest income group moved down.

Another study, conducted in 2007 by the U.S. Treasury, examined income tax returns from 1996 and 2005. Over the period, the median income of the study group rose by 24 percent. Almost 58 percent of those in lowest income group in 1996 moved to a higher group by 2005. About a fourth of them rose to middle- or upper-middle class incomes; more than 5 percent made it into the highest income group — in 10 years. The only group experiencing a decline in income was the richest 1 percent. This is hardly what most people have been led to believe.

While this may seem like an economic version of “musical chairs,” it tells us that mobility among economic groups is high and chronic poverty is rare.

Is U.S. income growth stagnant? Are the rich getting richer and the poor getting poorer? Neither is true.

The power of the American economy is that it provides opportunity. The income mobility numbers make this abundantly clear.

Steven Cunningham is director of research and education at the American Institute for Economic Research. He wrote this commentary for McClatchy-Tribune News Service.

Armed CSI students would stop attacker

To the College of Southern Idaho administration:

From the Times-News article, “CSI President Jerry Beck told lawmakers in a letter that the change would only add to the confusion, with police unable to distinguish between the perpetrators and legally armed citizens.”

Here is the fallacy of the honorable Mr. Beck’s statement: As a longtime CCW permit holder, I have taken several courses in advanced threat management and Front Sight’s Defensive Handgun Course. Every class teaches us not to chase the sound of gunfire. We are instructed to “hold our position or move to a more defensible position if needed.” When the police come, which is usually just in time to draw chalk outlines around the dead bodies, our weapons are to be re-holstered for the express purpose of not giving confusion to the police.

We do not go looking for threats; we only defend ourselves and, if needed, those in our immediate vicinity. Our handguns are to be used only for self-defense, not to interdict active shooters. If the armed assailant enters our defensive perimeter, only then do we engage the shooter as a last resort, when no other options exist. The gun fight in such an instance would be over in a matter of seconds, long before the police arrive, probably before they even get the first call from 911.

The idea of a bunch of gun-toting rednecks running toward the sound of gunfire is pure nonsense and a fallacy created only in the minds of the uninformed and, even more so, merely a “talking point” of the gun control crowd’s ideology. As a responsible CCW permit holder, er, you would never know I had a gun until the moment it is needed to save my life.

I took classes at CSI in the 1980s and as recently as 2010. The classrooms have no rapid escape routes. There is nowhere to run or hide if an armed assailant enters one of those rooms. It is a sitting duck pond and a nightmare scenario that we all pray never materializes. If it does, the only chance for anyone’s survival is an immediate response from a legally armed citizen.

Protect cow manure but not teachers?

Protect cow manure but not the children and teachers of Idaho? Don’t like the opinion of the attorney general? Hire a couple of lawyers who will agree with you. There’s not enough money in the state’s coffers to fund education, but evidently some legislators believe money can be found for a couple of attorneys picked so their opinions will agree with those of the Legislature plus money will also be needed for the support staff those attorneys will require plus office expenses, etc.

Is there something in the water in the capitol building in Boise that affects the minds of the people we elect to our state Legislature? Most of these people seem sane when elected. What happens to them when they get to Boise?

Adults setting a poor example for kids

I am writing because of the public interest in the bullying going on in our country right now.

My opinion is that kids learn from example, and the adults in this country are not setting a good example. We are appalled when our children choose up sides on the playground and fight with each other; yet we, as role models, choose up sides on a daily basis and fight each other.

Democrats fight Republicans and vice-versa, North fights South, we fight Orientals, Jews, Blacks, Whites, the rich, the poor, teachers, the lawmakers, neighbors, referees, umpires and strangers on the street — you name it, we fight about it.

Great role models we are!

My dad always said, “If you get a whuppin’ at school, sister, get ready for another one when you get home, because that teacher is right, just by the fact he or she worked to get there.” Unconditional respect and courtesy, when you teach people that, they will have respect for themselves.

We could all start this respect thing by not belittling our president the minute we elect him or her. That is not funny to me and should not be to you. He or she worked hard in their life to get elected by the majority or our people; that commands respect and courtesy. If we as a nation do not give them their due respect, how can we expect others to?

And what message is that sending to our children? Unconditional respect for our fellow man — that is my answer. Respect and courtesy in most cases begets respect and courtesy. It may take awhile, but I bet we can do it.

And yes, I know all the arguments against this theory. But the arguments have not worked in the past. They have only gotten us in this bullying and fighting mess. So think about it! And start with you and your child today, so we can have a brighter and happier tomorrow.

Why doesn't county consolidate offices?

There was an article in last week's paper about the Twin Falls County commissioners looking for tenants in the "clinic" building because there was going to be so much space available. Wasn't it just several years ago that the county commissioners were looking at the (former) Anderson Lumber Company building on Eastland Avenue so that they would have more room and could "consolidate all their offices"? Then, subsequent to that, Magic Valley Hospital was "sold" to St. Luke's and it looked like the clinic building was going to be available. And then, as I recall, shortly after that and despite the future availability of the clinic building, the county purchased the Vollmer building on Gooding Street and Third Avenue North.

So I have an idea which I offer without getting any consultant fees: Why doesn't the county take the offices from the Vollmer Building, from the building on Fourth Avenue North now housing the Vehicle Licensing offices (among others); and the offices from the building they own on Third Avenue East and consolidate them — put 'em in the clinic building.

Then they could sell these other buildings (and, incidentally, put them back on the tax rolls), get out of the real estate and rental business and start figuring out what to do with the "old" hospital building.

A few facts about educational reform

There is a lot of emotion attached to both sides of Mr. Luna's so-called educational reform, but few facts. Keep in mind that Idaho has one of the poorer-performing educational systems in the United States, and Mr. Luna is saying we will not look for additional money; rather, we will cut what we have.

Merit pay for the best teachers is fine, but it has been shown to not raise student performance. Learning technology as part of today's working environment is fine, but research shows it has mixed results in the classroom. It has been shown that there are populations of students that do worse in online classes. There is also a considerable amount of research that says that smaller class sizes do not result in higher student performance. As a math teacher, I can accomplish pretty much the same with 30 students that I do with 15. Teacher pay is a complicated matter. Teaching requires a set of skills that most people do not have. Teacher quality determines future student success. Teachers make significantly less than people in other professions requiring similar education. If you say what they make is all we have, that's fine; but at some point, talented people choose other professions where they can make more money.

About 10 years ago, South Dakota teacher pay was so low they could not fill all their teacher openings and we are headed in that same direction. Teachers with advanced degrees are paid more, but research shows obtaining advanced degrees does not result in higher student performance. Tenure does protect some bad teachers, but before there was tenure, good, experienced teachers were fired because they could be replaced by cheaper inexperienced teachers.

Sex-abuse claims are being used as weapon

Sunday's paper indicated child and teen pregnancy is very high in the Magic Valley and they do not understand why. It is very easy to answer. The schools have taken over reporting sex crimes in a suggestive manner to the police. Also, teens can go to the police and claim a sex crime was committed like "my father touched me in my privates." Years ago, this sort of thing was handled by the family but not anymore.

Like an attorney told my wife and I, the jury always believes the child. I know a man who is raising a teenager and he has no control over her because she has threatened him a number of times with LLC or sexual abuse so he backs off and she does whatever she wants. She goes wherever she wants and is not home much. I am waiting to hear about her getting pregnant.

Most of the children in school know that they can hold this sex thing over their parents' head and do whatever they want. You need to know that the court system has hearsay trials for these crimes. There is no evidence required.

Also, there is no structured reaction for teens in this Magic Valley. Parents often both work or a single parent is raising the teen or younger. Supervision is lacking.

My opinion is there are hundreds of people in jail and prison for these crimes and probably half of them are innocent. Also, there are probably thousands of people that just admit guilt because they only do up to five years instead of 25 years, even though they are innocent.

The state will not give an inch to find out if any of them are innocent because I heard they get $65,000 a year from the feds for each prisoner. Also, they can get sued if the decision is reversed.

Gaza militants fire rockets deep into Israel

By Aron Heller
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Palestinian militants in Gaza fired a new wave of rockets that landed deep inside Israel Thursday, defying Israeli retaliatory attacks and threats.

As the violence threatened to escalate the day after a deadly Jerusalem bombing, Israel got a boost from the visiting U.S. defense chief, who said no country could tolerate the “repugnant” attacks on its soil.

Police said Gaza militants fired 10 rockets and mortars toward Israel Thursday, including two rockets that exploded north of the city of Ashdod, a main Mediterranean port city about 20 miles north of Gaza — a first since Israel and Gaza’s Hamas rulers reached an unofficial truce following a three-week war that ended in January 2009. Israeli airstrikes hit a number of Gaza targets in retaliation throughout the day.

Neither side reported in-

A Palestinian inspects a destroyed Hamas compound after an Israeli strike Tuesday in Gaza City that wounded 17 people, Palestinian medics said.

juries or said they wanted a new fight. But the new hostilities could easily spin out of control, especially if civilian deaths mount.

Wednesday’s bombing killed a British tourist, and five members of a Jewish family were slain while they slept in a West Bank settlement earlier this month. Israel has blamed Palestinians for both attacks.

Also this week, Israeli shelling killed three children and their uncle in Gaza. The army said it was targeting militants.

The fighting in Gaza has been the fiercest since Israel went to war there to try to curb years of rocket attacks.

The fierce three-week offensive killed some 1,400 Palestinians, including hundreds of civilians. Thirteen Israelis also died. The volatile border has remained largely calm since.

Archaeologists discover saber-toothed vegetarian

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Surprised scientists have discovered the remains of a saber-toothed vegetarian.

The leaf-crunching animal — about the size of a large dog — lived 260 million years ago in what is now Brazil, researchers report in Friday’s edition of the journal Science. Its upper canine teeth were nearly 5 inches long.

Such large teeth are more often the mark of a meat-eating animal, used to capture and kill prey.

The enormous canines were likely used by the plant-eating animals to fight each other or protect against predators, said research leader Juan Carlos Cisneros of the University of Piaui in northeastern Brazil.

For example, they might have fought for territory, resources or females, like the modern musk deer, which also have a pair of large, tusklike teeth, he said via email.

“These situations are extremely important for the survival of an individual and the success of a species,” he said. Discovering animals like this “shows us how nature is extremely creative in providing solutions for several life tasks.”

In addition to its saber-shaped fangs, the newly discovered animal named Tiarajudens eccentricus had rows of teeth on the roof of its mouth for chewing, the researchers said. The lower jaw was incomplete, but they expect it would have had similar rows of teeth.

Tiarajudens was part of a group of animals known as anomodonts, sometimes called “mammal-like reptiles” and a major plant eater of their time.

The discovery provides novel insights into early tooth differences in these ancient animals and the evolution of plant eating and its complex social interactions, commented Joerg Froebisch of Humboldt University in Berlin.

Micron's net falls but is stronger than expected

The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Micron Technology Inc., which makes computer memory chips, posted a big decline in quarterly net income as it struggled with falling prices for its chips, a perpetual problem for its industry, but the results were still stronger than Wall Street expected. Micron operates a large facility in Boise. Its stock rose in extended trading following the release of the earnings report. The company said it expects improved pricing through the remainder of its fiscal year. Net income declined 80 percent from the prior year to $72 million, or 7 cents per share, which was ahead of the 3 cents per share estimate of analysts polled by FactSet. In the prior year, Micron earned $365 million, or 39 cents per share. Revenue was $2.26 billion, a 15 percent jump from the prior year and ahead of analysts' forecasts for $2.06 billion.

Memory chips are subject to some of the most volatile swings in pricing in the semiconductor industry. They're considered commodities and as such, memory chip makers compete fiercely on price. Micron said that prices for DRAM chips, which are a key component of personal computers, fell 23 percent from Micron's fiscal first quarter, which ended in December, to the second quarter, which ended this month. Prices for NAND flash chips, common in portable electronics such as MP3 players, fell 4 percent.

The earthquake and tsunami in Japan has raised fears about companies with a substantial presence in that country, as the destruction to roads and transportation has crippled supply lines and factory closures have stalled production. According to regulatory filings, Micron, headquartered in Boise, had 1,500 of its 25,900 employees in Japan as of September of last year.

Micron executives said on a conference call with analysts Wednesday, after the results were reported, that the company's main chip factory in Japan wasn't damaged and no employees were hurt. However, they noted that some of Micron's key suppliers — for chemicals and chip wafers and other important chip materials — have been affected but the full impact isn't yet known and could take at least a couple more weeks to assess. Japan, in addition to being one of the biggest makers of memory chips, is also one of the world's biggest suppliers of the materials underlying semiconductor production. Micron shares rose 42 cents, or 4 percent, to $11.03 in extended trading. They had risen 26 cents, or 2.5 percent, to close the regular session at $10.61.

Sen. Mike Crapo presented Legislative Excellence award

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

The Longview Fibre Paper and Packaging company presented Sen. Mike Crapo with the National Association of Manufacturers Award for Manufacturing Legislative Excellence on Thursday. The award was presented at Longview Fibre's Twin Falls plant by the company's president Randy Nebel. Longview Fibre is a member of the NAM, which bestows the award annually to congressmen who support policies that help businesses succeed in the global economy. "Sen. Crapo's support of manufacturers not only benefits our business but the industry on a whole," Nebel told the Times-News. "We're thrilled to have Sen. Crapo's support on one of the biggest issues facing us currently: the (Environmental Protection Agency) setting its own laws and agenda in regulating green house gasses. I personally believe that the legislature should set the laws EPA should follow, the agency shouldn't set their own."

Nebel said that NAM, one of the largest business groups in America, was also impressed with Crapo's effort to "level the playing field," within the global economy and his work to ease government taxing and regulation of manufacturers. "We're being regulated and taxed out of business," Nebel said. Crapo told the group of about 20, including representatives from the Independent Meat Company, ConAgra Foods, Union Pacific Railroad and Glanbia Foods, he believes the current regulatory environment was pushing both small and large businesses "to the edge." Crapo said he is also concerned about health care reform, saying the Affordable Care Act is costing businesses more than before the act was passed a year ago. In regard to winning the Legislative Excellence award, Crapo said, "it was a great honor and very humbling."

Last year, Hilex Poly reached out to Sen. Mike Crapo for help. The senator paid a visit to the Jerome company as part of today's swing through southern Idaho. Plant Manager Mike Schutz said the company was facing was illegal trade deals made by manufacturers of plastic bags in China, Malaysia and Thailand. "Imports were dumping into the domestic market," Schutz said. "We weren't looking for a competitive advantage we needed a fair and competitive market. These bags were being subsidized by their governments and they were able to really undercut us in price." Schutz doesn't know just how many accounts Hilex Poly missed out on but said their prices were 25 percent to 50 percent lower than theirs. "We called on Sen. Crapo and asked for an investigation," Schutz said. "That investigation closed last year and found that trade policies in place were not being followed." Lindsay Nothern, spokesman for Crapo, said it really boiled down to the jobs and economic impact the illegal practice had.

Is merger likely to help wireless consumers?

Pop quiz: Name the telecom company whose wireless service is rated dead last for customer satisfaction and has been dubbed "worst carrier" by Consumer Reports. If you guessed AT&T, go to the head of the class. So does anyone think things will improve if AT&T Inc. wins federal approval to acquire rival T-Mobile USA for $39 billion, giving it more wireless customers than any other service provider? "What improves customer satisfaction is when carriers compete with each other," said Parul Desai, telecom policy counsel with Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports. "When you combine carriers that had been competing with each other, it's hard to see how customer satisfaction will improve," she said.

If the merger passes regulatory muster, a combined AT&T and T-Mobile would have about 130 million subscribers, vaulting past Verizon's 94 million customers. Sprint would be a distant third (and a probable takeover target for Verizon). For consumers, it's the classic merger conundrum: How can service improve and prices go down with fewer competitors in the market? John Britton, an AT&T spokesman, said consumers will definitely benefit from the company tying the knot with T-Mobile. He said the combined company would boast more wireless spectrum and cell-phone towers, which would improve its coverage area and reliability. Britton acknowledged that some might see AT&T's wireless service as, well, lacking. "We are focused on providing outstanding customer service. People have choices, and we want them to choose AT&T," he said. That's the thing, though. People have relatively few choices when it comes to telecom, and the ongoing wave of consolidation in the industry means that with each passing merger, there's one fewer alternative for consumers to turn to. Meanwhile, the regulatory landscape continues to evolve. In 1996, the Federal Communications Commission deregulated phone companies in hopes of fostering increased competition. What we got instead is a clear effort by leading telecoms to resurrect the scope of the old Bell telephone system, which once gave AT&T a monopoly over service, but without much of the regulation that previously kept Ma Bell in check. I wrote on Monday that regulators should respond to this critical mass of mergers in the telecom market by introducing new rules to accommodate the return of Ma Bell. A good place to start would be a requirement that companies unbundle their package deals so that consumers can clearly see how much they're paying for equipment and service — and can shop around for the best prices. Another would be a requirement that all price increases be justified, based on the actual cost to the carrier of providing the service. Customer satisfaction may not improve as the big get bigger. But that doesn't mean we can't do anything about it.

Your Money

Save money and pay down debt

Trying to save money and pay down debt? Here are some tried and true tips to getting it done:

- Pay yourself first. Experts suggest putting 10 percent of your monthly income into a saving account.
- Stop spending. Don't need it? Don't buy it.
- Pay your bills on time and avoid late fees.
- Set a budget and track your spending.
- Have an emergency fund of at least three to six months income. This way, if you need new tires or have an unexpected trip to the doctor you can cover it without pulling out the plastic.

Mr. KHS show to fund BPA trip

Kimberly High School senior boys will show off their talents and their good looks Wednesday to raise money for Business Professionals of America members.

Eight KHS student BPA members have qualified to compete at the BPA National Leadership Conference, May 3-8 in Washington, D.C. They did so by placing in the top 3 of their respective events at Idaho's state competition.

The trip is expected to cost more than $1,300, with the rising costs of gas prices and other factors. So, nine seniors will take part in a talent competition, answer impromptu questions, and model evening wear and sportswear in hopes of being named Mr. KHS and helping pay the BPA members' way.

The event, planned for 7 p.m. at the L.A. Thomas

Kimberly BPA students who will travel to Washington, D.C., in May include Alice Mothershead, Josh Rebollozo, Darby Hafer, Candaace Martin, Annie Fiala, Josie Lyman, Carlie Wilkins and Katie-Anne Smith.

Gym in Kimberly. Tickets are $6 at the door. A panel of local adults will judge the competition, and the theme is "Geek Squad." People who wish to help out but do not plan to attend the Mr. KHS competition can donate separately to the trip. Information: Josh Rebollozo, jrebol@cablone.net or 731-5067.

Is hypothyroidism linked to high cholesterol?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My cholesterol is very high. I cannot tolerate any of the statins. I've been on many and have problems with pain and weakness in my legs.

I also have an underactive thyroid, for which I take Synthroid. I have read in different medical books that hypothyroid disease is a cause of high cholesterol. I am trying to eat right (fruits and vegetables, no red meat, low salt and no cheese). I exercise. Is there anything else I can do to help this serious problem? Please help me!

lesterol, and particularly in those people without a previous history of hypercholesterolemia. It is believed if the elevated levels are due to hypothyroidism, an improvement will be noted after hormone treatment is begun.

In January 2011, the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists (AACE) released the results of a survey on the thyroid/cholesterol relation. They reported a new survey found that fewer than half the adults diagnosed with hypercholesterolemia knew whether they had ever even been tested for thyroid disease, despite the well-documented connection between the two conditions. Following diet, thyroid disease is the most common secondary cause of high cholesterol levels. If there is a decrease in the body's ability to metabolize cholesterol, an excess of cholesterol in the blood may occur. If the thyroid gland is underactive and producing too little thyroid hormone, metabolism slows and can have a direct bearing on the body's ability to metabolize blood cholesterol. Once treated, symptoms can be relieved and the patient's quality of life can be improved.

The New York Times ran an article about the dilemma on Feb. 21 of this year. In part, the article stressed low thyroid levels being linked with a greater risk for high triglycerides, LDL and total cholesterol levels. It went on to state the treatment of hypothyroidism can significantly reduce cholesterol levels, but research is still mixed on whether mild hypothyroidism is even associated with unhealthy cholesterol levels.

It appears to me that routine lab testing — including thyroid and cholesterol levels — is critical because from all I read, it appears we commonly fail to test for both conditions; yet once thyroid medication is introduced and a connection is made, things should level off.

You are on the right track by modifying your diet and exercising. Avoid processed cold cuts, kielbasa, sausage, fried foods, hot dogs and ham. I'm reluctant to mention eggs, since it appears every other week a new report bashes or endorses eggs as being good for us. Apart from the steps you are taking, over-the-counter remedies might include niacin or supplements containing plant sterols and stanols for helping to lower your cholesterol.

Latinos surpass 50 million in U.S.

By Stephen Ceasar
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The Hispanic population in the United States surpassed 50 million and accounted for more than half of the 27.3 million increase in total population over the last decade, the U.S. Census Bureau reported Thursday.

The Hispanic population grew by 43 percent, rising from 35.3 million in 2000 to 50.5 million in 2010. The group now makes up 16 percent of the total U.S. population of 308.7 million, the data showed.

The growth in the last decade is due more to birth than to immigration, said D'Vera Cohn, a senior writer at the Pew Research Center.

"In the adult population, many immigrants helped the increase, but the child population is increasingly more Hispanic," Cohn said.

In 2010, Hispanics made up 23 percent of people under the age 18, which rose from 17 percent in 2000. In California, 51 percent of children are Hispanic, up from 44 percent in 2000.

About three-quarters of Hispanics now live in the nine states that have long-standing Hispanic populations, including Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Illinois, New Mexico, New Jersey, New York and Texas.

That figure is down from 81 percent in 2000, indicating the population has begun dispersing to other parts of the country, particularly in the Southeast, Cohn said.

The Hispanic population more than doubled in Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, South Carolina and North Carolina.

"This is a sign that the Hispanic population is spreading out more widely than in the past," Cohn said. "You now see Hispanic communities in many places that hadn't had them a decade or two ago."

The population growth among Hispanics also kept the population steady in states that would have shown a decline or no growth, including Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Illinois and Louisiana.

The non-Hispanic population grew at a slower pace in the past decade, at about 5 percent. Within that population, those who reported their race as only white grew by 1 percent.

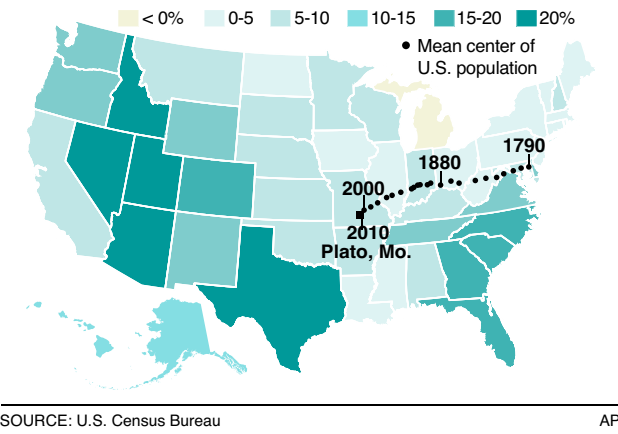

While the population of those who reported as only white grew in number in that time, from 196.6 million to 196.8 million, its proportion of the total U.S. population declined from 69 percent to 64 percent.

Population center moving west

America's population center is continuing to move westward. The four fastest growing states are Nevada, Arizona, Utah and Idaho, while California and Texas, made up more than one-fourth of the nation's total gains since 2000.

MINNESOTA Adviser: Bachmann likely to run in 2012

ST. PAUL — Tea party favorite and Republican Rep. Michele Bachmann is feeling pressure from the political calendar to rush a decision on a White House bid and may announce her intentions as early as May, one of her top advisers said Thursday.

Bachmann, a third-term congresswoman from Minnesota, could form a presidential exploratory committee before two televised Republican debates scheduled the first week of May, said Ed Brookover, a Bachmann adviser.

TEXAS Jury: Pageant broke queen's contract

SAN ANTONIO — A Texas jury ruled Thursday that a 17-year-old beauty queen allegedly told to "get off the tacos" after gaining weight was wrongly stripped of her crown and has had it returned by a judge.

Dominique Ramirez won her lawsuit against the Miss San Antonio pageant her attorney, Luis Vera, told The Associated Press.

Judge Barbara Nellermoe then restored Ramirez's crown, clearing the way for her to compete for Miss Texas and Miss America, according Court Clerk Grace Montalvo. After deliberating 11.5 hours over two days in the week-long trial, the jury found that pageant officials, not Ramirez, breached the contract.

CALIFORNIA Paralyzed mom seeks right to visit kids

LOS ANGELES — It's a custody case in which no one disputes these tragic facts: A healthy young woman went to the hospital to deliver her triplets, was badly brain damaged by a series of medical errors and can no longer walk, talk or even feed herself.

But Abbie Dorn's attorney says that doesn't make her any less a mother to those 4-year-old triplets, telling Superior Court Judge Frederick C. Shaller at a hearing in Los Angeles Thursday that the 34-year-old woman has the same rights to regular visits with her children as any other parent.

"They can call her mommy and, most of all, they can tell her they love her," attorney Lisa Meyer said during closing arguments at a hearing to decide whether Dorn is allowed to see her children for two weeks every summer and a week in the spring and fall.

The attorney for Dorn's ex-husband, Dan Dorn, countered Meyer, saying that as tragic as her situation is, she is no longer capable of being a parent and that if her children are to see her it should only be under the supervision of their father and on his terms.

WASHINGTON — Should jetliners be landing with only a single air traffic controller on duty — even if he's awake? Federal officials are grappling with that question following the safe landing of two jetliners this week with no help from the lone air traffic supervisor on duty at Washington's Reagan National Airport.

He's been suspended, and safety investigators say he has acknowledged he was asleep.

The incident comes nearly five years after a fatal crash in Kentucky in which a controller was working alone. Accident investigators said that controller was most likely suffering from fatigue, although they placed responsibility for the crash that took 49 lives on the pilots.

Still, the National Air Traffic Controllers Association warned at the time against putting controllers alone on shifts and assigning tiring work schedules.

The union's president, Paul Rinaldi, made the same point again on Thursday: "One-person shifts are unsafe. Period!"

The Reagan National incident, around midnight Tuesday night, has sent administration officials scrambling to assure the public that safety isn't being compromised. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood has ordered an examination of controller staffing at airports across the nation, and he directed that two controllers staff the midnight shift in Washington from now on.

Federal Aviation Administration chief Randy Babbitt said he was investigating the incident, but he also said that at "no point was either plane out of radar contact, and our back-up system kicked in to ensure the safe landing of both airplanes."

Modern styles, wider interest in dance attributed to pop culture effect

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Watching someone else dance may not be very good exercise, but south-central Idaho dance teachers say shows and movies like "Step Up," "America's Best Dance Crew," "High School Musical" and "America's Got Talent" are spurring more viewers to get off the couch and sign up for dance lessons.

"If I see a move on 'Dancing With the Stars,' I say, 'I want to do that,'" said Brittany Ellifrits, a 19-year-old who assists with dance instruction at Up-town Dance Studio in Wendell. "There's a lot more girls (who want to learn) now; the more hip-hop we put into it, the more interest there seems to be." But it isn't just children and teens who are jumping on the dance bandwagon.

Fun exercise for all ages

"I want you to know, dancing is coming back," said Patricia Weaver, owner of Two To Tango in Hailey, who teaches primarily adults. "Definitely, more people want to dance with partners rather than get out on the floor and move around. ... The older people are getting involved in it because it's a good way to get solid activity without being a young athlete."

Ellifrits' mother, for example, is taking a Latin dance class for exercise, her daughter said. Latin dances, either with traditional steps like salsa and merengue, or modernized with moves like those used in Zumba exercise classes, are taking off in popularity, instructors said.

There are even opportunities for families to dance together these days, including the "Mommy and Me" classes at Dance with Shari. Jennifer Harpel of Jerome said she learned to dance years ago from Shari Mauldin's aunt, and she signed up daughter Joleigh for lessons when she was old enough.

"It gives her something extra that she's proud about, and it helps me for exercise; being in the studio dancing beats being in the gym," Harpel said, describing taking lessons with her daughter. Right now, they can't get enough of The Macarena, and "Dancing With the Stars" and "America's Best Dance Crew" are appointment TV.

Of course, as the movies and television shows demonstrate, dancing is a lot of fun, but it's also a lot of work.

Have some empty spaces on your bookshelf?

Fix that at the Twin Falls Public Library's used book sale, today and tomorrow. The sale, a fundraiser for the library, makes use of the thousands of donated items that pass through the library's hands each year.

Diane Van Engelen, director of the library's foundation, said the sale requires between 85 and 100 volunteers each year. On Tuesday, Magic Valley Movers lent two workers to move the materials from storage to the former Banner Furniture building on Main Avenue.

"They worked six hours today straight just loading all our books and tables into two vans," Van Engelen said. From there, volunteers dis-

So you think you're funny?

Stand-up comedy class sorts the best from the rest

Times-News

If you missed out on last year's stand-up comedy class, you have another opportunity to test your microphone appeal.

Retired performer Danny Marona's "How to be Funny While You're Standing Up" class, offered through the College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center, promises to give you the tips to succeed not only at stand-up comedy but at telling a joke in general. It'll get you out of your comfort zone and — if not into the spotlight — into a good deal of laughter.

In this five-week course, which begins tonight in Twin Falls, you'll learn the elements of being funny and performing in front of a live audience. Each week, Marona will focus on how to identify the humor in spoken word, how to develop material, how to do stand-up and how to perform and analyze comedy.

A public performance at the Turf Club during the last week of class benefits the Danny Marona Performing Arts Scholarship Fund. Five students will be selected to perform their stand-up routines, with local judges choosing a winner. This year's judges are Broc Johnson from 99.9 The Buzz, KEZJ's Brad Weiser and former class finalists and tag-team judges Kate and Nelson Woods.

Tickets to the Turf Club performance on April 22 are $17 in advance, at 732-6442, and $20 at the door.

The stand-up comedy class will be 6-8 p.m. Fridays, March 25 to April 22, at College of Southern Idaho. Cost is $105. Register: 732-6442 or communityed.csi.edu.

Kate Morrison, acquisitions manager for Twin Falls Public Library, goes through donations at least once a week and decides what stays for the library's collection and what goes to the sale.

"As the time goes by year after year we keep getting more and more books," Morrison said.

It makes more sorting for Morrison, but that's exactly how Van Engelen likes it.

"If they didn't come and donate all year long to the library, the sale wouldn't be nearly what it is," Van Engelen said.

Reporter Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or melissa.davlin@lee.net.

QUIZ ANSWERS

1. A. Morrison looks for books that are in good condition, she said, but slightly frayed edges are acceptable. And any books about Idaho history are a plus. Those books are often added to the Idaho and Pacific Northwest History Room, where they're not in circulation but are reference books that stay in the library. Extras are kept in storage in case something happens to the originals.
2. C. Vinyl records don't sell at used book sales, so the library staff discards them. "We hate to throw things away," Morrison said, so she tries to convince the person who donated them to find someone who might use them.
3. B. Although the library still has VHS tapes available for check-out, it isn't adding any more tapes to the collection, Morrison said.

4. A. It doesn't matter that a movie is rated R — "We don't do any censoring or anything like that," Morrison said. If the DVD is in good condition, and Morrison thinks it will interest patrons, it gets added to the collection.
5. B. Plenty of patrons donate new titles to the library, Morrison said. Most of the time, they read the books once, then want to get rid of them. "But we purchase so many new and popular books that we don't use those too much, and then they go to the book sale," she said. They library will get the book new, and the dog-eared copy will raise money for the library foundation.

6. C. Like LPs, "Reader's Digest" doesn't sell at the used book sale, Morrison said. That doesn't stop people from bringing in copies. "Reader's Digest" is one of the most commonly donated items at the library.

Boise classical trio plans Twin Falls performance

Times-News

A Boise-based classical trio will make its first visit to Twin Falls in April, to perform in the city's newest venue.

Magic Valley Arts Council will present the musicians of Table Rock Trio at 4 p.m. April 10 at Twin Falls Center for the Arts. Tickets are $10.

Table Rock will perform pieces from "Sinfonia Concertante for Flute Clarinet and Orchestra" by Franz Danzi, "Hungarian Dance Suite No. 1" by Johannes Brahms, "Petite Suite" by Claude Debussy, "Tarantella" by Camille Saint-Saens and "Carmen Rhapsody" by Georges Bizet.

The trio, formed in Boise in 2008, has performed in the Cathedral of the Rockies Second Sunday Concert Series, the McCall Second Sunday Sounds Recital Series, the Montana/Idaho Clarinet Festival, the Idaho State P.E.O. convention and for Boise civic organizations.

Karlin Coolidge, on flute, has performed with orchestras in Pennsylvania, Oregon, Washington and California, and now plays piccolo with the Boise Philharmonic Orchestra and maintains a private flute studio. She also plays with Treasure Valley Concert Band, Darkwood Consort and Boise Baroque Orchestra.

Carola K. Winkle, on clarinet, just retired after 20 years teaching music education and woodwinds. Winkle has performed with symphonies in Wyoming, Nebraska and South Dakota, and now plays in Treasure Valley Concert Band. As a Yamaha Performing Artist, Winkle frequently serves as a clinician. She is president of the U.S. Corp. of the International Music Camp and is an adjunct professor at Boise State University.

Marlys Hughes Saltzer, on piano, was a piano teacher and accompanist for Youth Pro Musica, the Newton Community Chorus and the Newton public schools in Massachusetts. Her performances include WGBH (the Boston Public Broadcasting Station), the Boston Public Library and the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum.

Morgan Meyer, 12, center, and others try out their princess poses at Mauldin's Dance Academy. Little girls still drool over pink tutus and toe shoes, say south-central Idaho dance instructors, but popular television shows and movies have also interested them in ballroom dance and modern dance.

Dance

"It's beautiful, and it makes everybody think there's a dancer inside of them, but it does takes some background and some dancing training to be a social dancer," said Kelli Turner, owner of Mauldin's Dance Academy in Twin Falls. "What it does in our community at least is inspire. I hear wives saying to their husbands, 'Honey, we can do that.' That prompts them to call the dance studios and try to get something formal going."

Defying gravity and their peers

Among the younger crowd, the most popular styles are hip-hop and even breakdancing, a more technique-oriented version of what was seen on the streets in the late '80s. Instructors of other styles are incorporating hip-hop moves into their classes — including Bryan Harris, who danced for a few years in high school before entering the military.

"When I came back, three years ago, I started up again. I love dance, all around, I love doing everything, the lyrical jazz, all that kind of stuff, but hip-hop's the only one I'm good at," Harris said. He now teaches at Dance with Shari, which has studios in Jerome and Kimberly. Most of Harris' male students are younger, because despite its increasing popularity, dance is still looked down upon by older boys.

"You don't see too many guy dancers around the Magic Valley. The younger kids, the 12- to 13-year-olds, they're OK with it, but the older ones aren't. They'd rather to go for sports," Harris said. He said he was made fun of in high school for dancing, that his peers thought it was "all girly." What they didn't realize, he said with a laugh, is that boys who dance get to spend a lot of time dancing with girls.

And with some of the modern styles, they can learn impressive, gravity-defying moves similar to those they see in music videos and YouTube street-dancing videos.

"I think if they knew there was actually breakdancing out there, they'd probably come," Harris said.

Mauldin, owner of Dance with Shari, said many boys aren't aware of how dancing could improve their prowess on the field. "It requires a lot of coordination and flexibility, and it really helps them a lot with their athletics," she said.

Beka Gilbert, 13, practices a princess pose.

Competitions are getting more popular too, with many students signing up to test their mettle against other dancers across the state and region. A few teachers attributed this to the excitement generated by reality dance competitions as well as scripted competitions like those on "Glee."

"Rather than going to a dance convention where they'd learn techniques and choreography, they want to go and perform and compete," Mauldin said, noting that she started a performing group about a dozen years ago that has continued to rise in popularity.

The urge to compete is more prominent in teens, the instructors said, noting that their older clientele are more interested in social dancing, despite scarcity of adult dances in Twin Falls and nearby cities.

Carolyn Anderson of Filer said she has been trying to talk other older women at her church into starting a tap group that would compete at the church's annual talent show and travel to retirement homes and other community gathering places to perform.

"My dad put me on the top of his shoes at age 5, and danced me around the lodge hall, and I've been dancing ever since," Anderson said. "I thought it'd be good exercise, and that it'd be fun."

'Dance has become cool again'

Dancing is also coming back as a wedding reception activity, instructors said, with many couples taking lessons before their big day. Swing and ballroom dances are popular now among young adults, as well as the Latin styles.

And in living rooms, families are using their gaming systems to dance casually, incorporating exercise and entertainment with such titles as "Dance Dance Revolution" for many consoles and "Just Dance" for Wii.

The trend toward hip-hop, breakdancing and street moves has even filtered into the most traditional corners of the dance world.

"There are a lot of choreographers working with different kinds of music; ballet's not always set to classical anymore," said Sherry Horton, artistic director at The Sun Valley Ballet School in Ketchum. Though the students still do a classical ballet each fall, their spring performances have broken the mold with bright unitards instead of tutus and songs from Annie Lennox instead of Peter Tchaikovsky. And because ballet gave dance many of the basic moves used in other styles, there are plenty of modern dance enthusiasts who continue to turn to ballet to develop technique.

"Because of a lot of movies that have come out recently, dance films, you always see a spike in enrollment after that," Horton said. "They need the dance background to do the musical theater that's so popular around here."

All these forms and styles are blending, said Trina Ciocca, owner of Uptown Dance in Wendell.

"Dance comes in circles, like fashion," she said, describing moves like Michael Jackson's moonwalk. What's old is new again — like the excitement of her students when she choreographed a tap dance to Elvis Presley's "Jailhouse Rock."

What has changed the attitude of south-central Idahoans of all ages: "Dance has become cool again," Ciocca said.

If you manage to buy fewer than, say, 50 used books this morning, reward yourself with anthropologist Ron James' lunchtime lecture on the Northwest's Astorian fur traders. And tonight, catch the Italian Saxophone Quartet in Ketchum. These sax players have an intriguingly mixed repertoire and an international performance resume.

Be sure to stop by the Herrett Center by Saturday, the final day of local potters Sheryl and Bill West's ceramics exhibit. That night, Oregon musician Tyler Fortier will be back in Twin Falls to perform at Anchor Bistro and promote his new CD, a deliberately lo-fi collection of narrative songs about the 19th-century West.

On Monday, Christopher Meyerhoeffer, a Twin Falls professor of criminal justice, will be in Buhl for a book discussion about his debut novel, a legal thriller dubbed "Dismissed With Prejudice" that won praise from our reviewer.

And Wednesday night offers a couple of promising choices: In a free concert, Twin Falls composer and pianist Mike Kearney will play original compositions in binary, ternary and pas-sacaglia forms. I have no idea what those are, but I suspect it will be interesting to learn. Meanwhile, Florida storyteller Keith Wann will be performing an American Sign Language comedy show about his perspectives on the hearing and deaf worlds. Can't ASL? Class series turns kids into pop artists

Is there a youngster in your household with an itch for art? Twin Falls Center for the Arts plans a series of five "Pop Art" classes for students in grades one through five in April.

Kim Cooper will instruct. The cost is $10 per class for Magic Valley Arts Council members, and $12.50 per class for others. All materials are provided. Classes will run 10-11:30 a.m. Saturdays, April 2-30. The lineup:

Lesson 1: Claus Oldenburg. Students will learn how Oldenburg uses everyday objects to make colossal sculptures. They'll use his ideas to make giant, soft sculptures of ordinary stuff.

Lesson 2: Roy Lichtenstein. Students will examine Lichtenstein's technique for turning advertising ideas into large works of art using primary colors, bold black lines and dots. They'll begin to make their own giant paintings in his style.

Lesson 3: George Segal. Inspired by Segal, who made life-sized sculptures of people doing ordinary things, students will use plaster cloth to make casts of their hands that they'll later decorate to show a real-life setting. This activity is messy.

Lesson 4: Andy Warhol I. Students will explore Warhol's advertising art and how he took popular products and reproduced them many times using bold colors. Students will choose an item, draw it several times and use watercolors to paint it in the Warhol style.

Lesson 5: Andy Warhol II. Students will look at another technique used by Warhol: reproducing images of famous people several times using a variety of colors.

Twin Falls Center for the Arts is at 195 River Vista Place in Twin Falls. Register: 734-2787.

Your 'wild' Idaho photos could win symphony contest

Times-News

Magic Valley Symphony is offering $500 in prizes in its "Wild About Idaho" photo contest.

A prize of $100 will be awarded in each of five categories: sunrise, painted desert (including plants), on the trail (including animals), sunset and cloud-burst. Images will be used in a photographic collage to accompany the performance of Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite" in April 2012.

The symphony's photo contest is open to amateurs and professionals of all ages, with no entry fee. Images will be accepted electronically until June 15.

Contest rules and instructions for submission are posted online at www.mvsymphony.org.

Magic Valley Symphony is a community orchestra of adult volunteer musicians. Its 2011-12 season, themed "Wild About Idaho," will feature Idaho musicians and composers.

Fools' free party is a great place to be April 1

Times-News

Theater troupe Company of Fools is inviting the public to a free party 6-7:30 p.m. April 1 at the Liberty Theatre in Hailey.

At the party, the Fools will announce their 16th season, in which they promise entertaining theater and inspirational classes. The party's other hoopla: a proclamation from the city of Hailey, prizes and desserts baked by the Fools' volunteers. Last year the Liberty was packed with people celebrating the day.

Company of Fools was a recipient of the 2004 Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts. In 2000, the company became the first in Idaho to receive Constituent Theatre status from Theatre Communications Group, the national organization for professional, nonprofit American theater. The company has also been featured in such publications as American Theatre Magazine, DramaBiz, Backstage West and Sunset Magazine.

So what does Company of Fools do?

It has staged 103 stage productions in 15 years. Its in-school program reaches every elementary student in the Blaine County School District. The company offers drama and creativity classes for adults, seniors, teens and children, plus summer apprenticeships for high school and college students. And it brings touring performers to town.

Company of Fools builds interest for its upcoming theater season by announcing the lineup at an annual April 1 party — an appropriate date for fun with the Fools.

New on the bookshelf: Easter fiction for kids

By Virginia Hutchins
Times-News writer

A new children's book by a Twin Falls author offers youngsters a tale about the origin of Easter that has nothing to do with crucifixion and resurrection.

In "Evelyn's Special Eggs" (FriesenPress, $10.99), a chicken pursued by the farmer's dog gives her eggs to a rabbit named E. Aster for safekeeping. The chicken is caught, but the rabbit Evelyn hides her eggs in a hot spring, then in a flower patch — before three picnicking children arrive to find a surprise under the leaves.

Author Lisa McInnes, who moved to Twin Falls in 2008 from Peoria, Ariz., said she loves the small-town lifestyle she found here. "It has been my inspiration for writing these books about the life in the country,"

McInnes — a mother of five and stepmother of three kids — intends the Easter egg story to be her first of 10 children's books depicting life in Willow Woods. It's illustrated with colorful, full-page drawings by Mackenzie

McInnes

Schlund

Schlund, a Twin Falls High School senior who has been drawing since third grade.

"Her fifth-grade teacher, Mrs. Fox, and her current high school art teacher, Mrs. Wood, have been an inspiration to her talents," McInnes said, adding that Schlund's grandmother from Jerome bought the first copy of the book at Crowley's-The Quad in Magic Valley Mall.

McInnes and Schlund plan a booksigning from 1 to 3 p.m. April 9 at Crowley's-The Quad.

Classes offer your choice of salsa, swing, ballroom

Times-News

Put a new step into your spring.

The College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center is offering three dance courses taught by Lori Head, beginning April 2 at the CSI Gym 236:

"Salsa Dancing," 4-5:30 p.m., teaches the sizzling style of salsa.

"Swing Dancing," 6:30-

7:45 p.m., teaches correct patterns for country western, jitterbug, jive and two-step.

"Ballroom Dancing," 8-9:30 p.m., leads students through the steps of waltz, fox trot, swing, cha-cha, tango, mambo and polka.

Classes are Saturdays, April 2-16. Cost for each dance style is $35 for singles or $55 for couples.

Tyler Fortier from Eugene, Ore., 8-11 p.m. at Anchor Bistro and Bar, 334 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. Fortier says this about his new CD, dubbed "...And They Rode Like Wildfire Snaking Through The Hills 'Neath The Scarlet Sun": "I chose to dust off an old 8-track digital recorder that has been tucked away under my bed, throw up a microphone, crank up the reverb, and hit the record button. ... I focused time on different vocal tonalities and was cognizant in deciding how different characters would sound and flow, which all reveal themselves in my delivery. The songs are raw, emerging soft at times and harsh at others, yet all surviving thematically in a web of what I consider to be 19th-century fiction. This is my first true concept record ... These songs are about compassion, revenge, love, life, death and loss."

Wooden puppet's tale gets a steampunk spin

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — After 128 years, Pinocchio is getting a makeover.

The little wooden puppet conceived of by Italian author Carlo Collodi in 1883 is becoming a more modern adaptation for the stage: a robotic toy made of cogs, wheels and tin with a golden gear that makes him go.

"In the play, Geppetto is coming out of the Dark Ages and inventing new things — some of which work and some which don't," said Jamey Reynolds, who plays the Puppet Master in a nexStage Theatre production of "Pinocchio" opening next weekend. "But the new version is faithful to the original story in that it deals with themes like honesty, learning from your mistakes and the idea that if we believe enough it becomes real and that against all odds we must keep on believing."

The play, which runs April 1-3 and 8-10 at nexStage Theatre in Ketchum, is a musical version written for the Northwest Children's Theatre in Portland, Ore.

The nexStage last year presented an original adaptation of "The Hobbit" that the Portland theater created.

"The Hobbit was geared toward a slightly older age group. This is targeted more towards elementary school-aged youth, although I'm confident that anyone of any age will enjoy it," said Patsy Wygle, who plays the judge.

The new version of "Pinocchio," adapted by Milo Mowery, puts a steampunk spin on the tale with Catjack (played by Keith Moore) and Foxtrot (Jamie Wygle) fight with Pinocchio (Natalie McStay) for control of the zeppelin in the nexStage Theatre's presentation of 'Pinocchio.' The musical opens next weekend in Ketchum.

wind-up toys, robotic donkeys, gears, flywheels and zeppelins. Steampunk is a sub-genre of science fiction that came into prominence during the 1980s and '90s. Involving an era like 19th-century early-industrial Victorian Britain where steam power is widely used, it often dotes on fictional technology such as dirigibles and H.G. Wells' time machine.

In this version of "Pinocchio," Geppetto is a toymaker who creates Pinocchio and Crick, a somewhat flawed windup toy patterned after Jiminy Cricket. The two toys set out for a day of trouble but find themselves chasing after the evil Catjack and Foxtrot after they steal the gear that makes Pinocchio go.

Along the way, Pinocchio — played by 10-year-old Natalie McStay — is imprisoned for foolishness, turned into a mechanical donkey and ultimately flies to a zeppelin airship, this play's substitute for a whale.

"The play still examines what it takes to be a real human being. It doesn't change the story. It just casts it in a new world," director Bruce Hostetler said.

Music composed by Rodolfo Ortega includes the song "Make a Copy," which Catjack, Pinocchio and Jiminy Cricket — played by Keith Moore, Natalie McStay and Brooke Sundholm — take on a steampunk look in nexStage Theatre's modern adaptation of the familiar children's moral play.

sports clever references to modern technology for tech-savvy kids. It also includes a heartwarming ballad that will be sung by Patty Parsons Tewson.

"The music is incredible. It's just about as good as any musical I know of," Hostetler said. "The songs tell the story."

Twin Falls senior Todd Anderson caps career with perfect season

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Todd Anderson stands alone on the mats inside the wrestling room at Twin Falls High School. A photographer sits in front of the 145-pound senior wrestler, camera tilted upward to catch Anderson in an intimidating pose. On the wall behind the two-time state champ reads a message: “Champions are made, not born.”

In 14 years of wrestling, Anderson has made himself into a state champion not once, but twice. And even though his future in the sport is still bright, he intends to walk away.

If the 2010-11 wrestling season was indeed his last, he picked quite the way to exit.

Anderson dominated all comers in his senior season, piling up a 37-0 record to win Class 4A’s 145-pound championship. Dominating at times and workmanlike at others, Anderson finished the season as the only undefeated 4A wrestler and one of five unbeaten grapplers in the state in all classifications. The other four were V.J. Giulio of American Falls, Tanner Hall of Meridian, Taylor West of Borah and Casey George of Lewiston.

“Those guys are all nationally ranked, so I’m just honored to be in that kind of company,” Anderson said. The title marked a long path back to championship form after Anderson won the Class 5A 130-pound title as a freshman in 2008.

“I just thought that since I’d won it as a freshman and all the older kids ahead of me were graduating, I’d just go and do it again,” Anderson said. “I lost my edge, and it took until just before the district meet of my sophomore

CSI evaluating players’ futures after drug charges

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

College of Southern Idaho basketball players Jerrold Brooks and Luke Cothron won’t face a pre-trial conference on their marijuana possession charges until May 3, but in the eyes of CSI’s athletic department, the pair is on trial each and every day.

CSI Athletic Director Joel Bate said Brooks and Cothron are still students at the school but are suspended indefinitely from the men’s basketball program and won’t be allowed to participate in any organized basketball activities.

Brooks, 19, and Cothron, 20, were arrested Tuesday evening and arraigned Wednesday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on one count each of misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance. According to Twin Falls Police Officer Ruben Murillo’s report, Brooks and Cothron were in possession of a container of 8.2 grams of marijuana, while Cothron had another 0.7 grams on his person.

Bate said the school will be “evaluating their behavior in line with our athletic policies” in the coming days and weeks.

A 5-foot-11 freshman, Brooks was a starting guard on CSI’s 33-4 national championship team, averaging 15.4 points per game. Cothron, a 6-8 forward from Huntsville, Ala., joined CSI’s program in early March and did not participate on the 2010-11 squad.

CSI plans to honor its championship team with a celebration at 7 p.m. Wednesday at CSI Gymnasium. Championship T-shirts will be available for sale and refreshments will be provided. Players will be on hand to sign autographs.

BYU’s Jimmer Fredette (32) wipes his face after being pulled from the game in the final moments of overtime in a NCAA Southeast regional semifinal game against Florida Thursday in New Orleans. Florida won 83-74.

Balanced Florida beats Fredette, BYU in OT

By David Brandt
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — BYU had the best scorer on the court. Florida had the best team.

Alex Tyus scored 19 points and grabbed 17 rebounds as Florida beat BYU 83-74 in overtime Thursday night, chasing Jimmer Fredette and the Cougars out of the NCAA Tournament.

While Fredette was the star attraction, scoring 32 points on 11 for 29 shooting in the final game of his college career, Florida countered with balance.

Kenny Boynton added 17 points — while also playing tight defense on Fredette — and Erving Walker and Chandler Parsons both scored 16. Boynton and Parsons each hit 3-pointers in overtime as Florida outscored BYU 15-6.

But it was Tyus’ monster game that put the Gators over the top. The 6-foot-8 senior is the team’s fifth-leading scorer, averaging 8.6 points and 5.7 rebounds coming into the game.

“The thing about Alex is he never really gets fazed with the moment or with what’s going on,” Florida coach Billy Donovan said. “One of the things I’ve tried to pull out of him and get him to see is that when he has a lot of activity and he’s flying around the court, because of

Feds anti-doping expert recounts unmasking steroid

By Paul Elias
Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO — One of the world’s foremost experts in detecting performance-enhancing drug use among athletes recounted on Thursday for the Barry Bonds jury how authorities unmasked the designer steroid dubbed the “clear.”

Bonds has admitted using the steroid, but said his personal trainer misled him into believing it was flaxseed oil.

Larry Bowers, the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency’s chief scientist, told the jury Thursday that his agency anonymously received a syringe with trace amounts of liquid in the summer of 2003. Scientists using highly technical chemical-detection equipment came up with a recipe for the liquid. Using the recipe, the agency had a batch ginned up and injected into baboons on their way to developing a urine test for the steroid, also called “THG,” that was put in place by late 2003.

A chemist named Patrick Arnold developed the steroid to evade detection and it was distributed to elite athletes by the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative and Bonds’ personal trainer Greg Anderson. “THG was pretty clever, cleverly designed,” Bowers testified.

Bowers also testified about the side effects of steroids, such as acne breakout and “bloating.”

The government plans to use that testimony to support the expected testimony of Kimberly Bell, Bonds’ former mistress. Bell plans to testify that she witnessed physical and mental changes in Bonds that prosecutors allege were side effects of steroid use.

Arizona upsets defending champion Duke in rout

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Der-rick Williams scored a career-high 32 points and his Arizona teammates showed they’re not just a one-man team, upsetting defending national champion Duke 93-77 Thursday night to reach the final eight for the first time since 2005.

The top-seeded Blue Devils (32-5) were sent packing from a regional semifinal for the second time in three years. Coach Mike Krzyzewski, with 900 wins, will have to wait until next season to resume his pursuit of Bob Knight’s record as the winningest men’s coach in Division I history.

Williams scored 25 of his points in the first half before his teammates came up big in the final 20 minutes. La-mont Jones added 16 points and Solomon Hill 13.

Williams had 13 rebounds to help his team dominate the boards, 40-27, while playing 15 minutes from his hometown of La Mirada.

Fifth-seeded Arizona (30-7) will play Connecticut (29-9) on Saturday in the West Regional final. The third-seeded Huskies defeated No. 2 San Diego State 74-67 in the other semifinal.

Duke’s Kryie Irving scored 28 points in his most minutes since returning at the start of the NCAA Tournament after missing 26 games with a toe injury. Kyle Singler added 18 as one of three Blue Devils in second-half foul trouble. Nolan Smith was held to eight points — well under the senior’s 21-point average.

Down by six points early in the second half, the Wild-cats unleashed a scoring rampage that left the Blue Devils looking stunned.

did the rest, hitting from long-range, driving to the basket and scoring off a fast break. Jones’ basket tied the game at 53 and the spurt ended with Arizona leading 66-55. Jones and Jamelle Horne had five points each.

CONNECTICUT 74, SAN DIEGO ST. 67
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Kemba Walker sliced up San Diego State’s defense for 22 points on shots from all angles and distances in the second half of Connecticut’s West regional semifinal.

The Aztecs only kept him down once: A shoulder bump from Jamaal Franklin sent Walker crashing to the Honda Center floor, drawing a technical foul and two momentum-killing free throws.

Walker denied doing any acting on the play. He’s still the star of these resilient Huskies’ remarkable production.

The guard scored 36 points in yet another dynamic postseason performance, driving UConn down the stretch Thursday night to a 74-67 victory that put the Huskies on the brink of another Final Four.

“I’m just trying to do the best I can do,” said Walker, who scored 12 straight points for UConn in the final minutes. “Whether it’s scoring, talking, getting their confidence up or giving an assist, I’m just trying to do whatever is possible to enhance this team.”

Freshman Jeremy Lamb added a season-high 24 points and hit a clutch 3-pointer with 1:43 left for the third-seeded Huskies (29-9), who are headed to an NCAA regional final for the 10th time after beating the Aztecs and a building full of hostile fans just 90 minutes from San Diego.

“I’ve never been in an environment like this,” said Lamb, perfect on three 3-pointers. “Kemba hit some big shots, I hit some big shots, and we were able to pull it out. They had a lot of fans. I’ve never played in a game like it.”

BUTLER 61, WISCONSIN 54

NEW ORLEANS — Matt Howard scored 19 points and Butler sent home yet another higher seed in the NCAA Tournament with a 61-54 victory over Wisconsin on Thursday night.

Shelvin Mack scored 13 points and Shawn Vanzant 10 for the eighth-seeded Bulldogs (26-9), who led by 20 points in the second half before withstanding a late rally by the Badgers.

Jordan Taylor scored 22 for Wisconsin (25-9), which shot 30.4 percent (17 of 56). Jon Leuer, normally one of the Badgers’ top offensive forces with 18.7 points per game coming in, was 1 of 12 shooting and finished with three points.

The victory sends Butler into the Southeast regional final, where the Bulldogs meet Florida (29-7) for a trip to the Final Four.

Okafor, Hornets top Jazz in overtime

SALT LAKE CITY — Eme-ka Okafor banked in a 20-footer at the regulation buzzer to force overtime, and reserve Aaron Gray scored six points in the extra period to lead the New Orleans Hornets to a 121-117 victory over the short-handed Utah Jazz on Thursday night.

David West scored 29 points for the Hornets before being taken off in a wheelchair holding his head and grimacing in pain after going down hard after a powerful dunk that tied the game at 103.

Paul Millsap hit two free throws to put the Jazz ahead 105-103 with 1.3 seconds to go, but Okafor, who had subbed back in when West was injured, managed to get off the game-tying shot.

Millsap had 33 points to lead the Jazz, who have dropped four straight.

Chris Paul scored five of his 24 points in overtime for the Hornets, and Trevor Ariza added 14, including a 3-pointer in the extra period.

While the Jazz were coming off a 0-3 road trip, the Hornets hadn’t played since Saturday, and coach Monty Williams used the time to hold some closed-door practices.

“We tried to create a bunker mentality, playoff mentality,” Williams said of the practice sessions. “Some things were said in practices that I didn’t want anybody else to hear. That’s just the way it’s got to be for us.”

The Hornets were starting a three-game Western trip just a 1/2-game ahead of eighth-place Memphis in the Western Conference playoff race. They also face Phoenix and the Los Angeles Lakers on the trip.

The Jazz entered Thursday four games behind eighth-place Memphis with 10 to go. In mid-January, they were as many as 14 games over .500.

Despite being without starters Andrei Kirilenko and Devin Harris, they continued to play spirited ball.

MAVERICKS 104, TIMBERWOLVES 96

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki had 30 points and 11 rebounds, Jason Terry added 18 points and Dallas rallied in the fourth quarter to beat Minnesota, giving Dallas 50 wins for the 11th straight season.

Shawn Marion added 17 points and Peja Stojakovic had 16 to help the Mavericks win for the third time in four games.

Anthony Randolph had a career-high 31 points with 11 rebounds for the Timberwolves, who’ve lost their last five games and are without injured All-Star forward Kevin Love.

SWEET 16 PREVIEWS

Fourth-seeded Kentucky ready for No. 1 Buckeyes

TV: 7:45 p.m., CBS

NEWARK, N.J. — Kentucky prides itself on its history, and rightfully so. The Wildcats have done just about everything there is to do in college basketball.

Whether you’re talking about their 51 NCAA Tournament appearances, 13 Final Fours or seven national championships, few programs rival the blue-bloods from the Bluegrass State.

One thing they’ve never done, though, is beat Ohio State when it counts.

“No one told me that,” freshman guard Brandon Knight said, upon learning his Wildcats will be trying to end a 0-for-5 NCAA tournament drought against the top-seeded Buckeyes in the East Regional semifinals tonight.

“You’re the first person to tell me that,” Knight said. “I mean, there’s a lot of things that haven’t been done, but some crazy things happen in the tournament. I know Ohio State has a lot of great players, but that stat doesn’t really mean that much to me.”

That’s because the Wildcats revel in their past, they just don’t live in it.

Not a single player on their roster was even alive the last time these two teams met in the tournament, when Eddie Sutton’s bunch lost in the first round in 1987. Even current coach John Calipari was just a youngster the time before that, when Dave Sorenson’s jumper in the final seconds lifted the Buckeyes to an 82-81 victory and into the 1968 Final Four.

Tar Heels seeking a different Final Four in ‘11

TV: 5:15 p.m., CBS

NEWARK, N.J. — Leslie McDonald remembers walking through the center of campus and down the main drag in Chapel Hill, N.C., last year and getting a sickening, uncomfortable feeling. People seemed to be staring, wondering what was wrong with the Tar Heels. The team that won the national title in 2009 had become mediocre in less than a year.

The Final Four for North Carolina became a trip to New York for the NIT, and the Tar Heels couldn’t even win that.

A year later, North Carolina’s back, and its sights are set on another national title.

Standing in the Tar Heels’ way next is Marquette, a tough-minded team led by a group of former junior college standouts that played its way into the NCAA party with a big win in the Big East Tournament.

The Tar Heels (28-7) will make their 31st appearance in an NCAA Tournament regional semifinal when they face the Golden Eagles (24-11) tonight at the Prudential Center, the first time a regional has been held in New Jersey’s largest city.

“This is a chance to play for the national championship,” North Carolina sophomore forward John Henson said Thursday. “Every day you step on the court from here on out, you’re playing for a national title. We just have to take these last steps.”

Florida St. a heavyweight compared to VCU

TV: 7:57 p.m., TBS

SAN ANTONIO — Florida State

has all the pieces to be a second-weekend darling in the NCAA Tournament: a double-digit seed, a star player working his way back from foot surgery last month and a 26-year-old big man who served three tours of duty in the Middle East for the Air Force.

Yet the Seminoles aren’t even the most compelling team in their Southwest Regional semifinal.

That would be Virginia Commonwealth, a team whose tournament credentials were so shaky that the coach didn’t hold a selection-watching party for fear they wouldn’t be invited.

The Rams got in through the back door, one of two new spots in a “First Four” game. Critics said they didn’t belong, but they proved otherwise by blowing past Southern Cal, then trashing traditional powers Georgetown and Purdue by 18 points each.

Now VCU is deeper in the NCAs than ever before and is the only team in the tournament that can boast about winning three games last week. There’s far less criticism this week, but coach Shaka Smart is on the lookout because he knows it brings out the best in his players.

“I saw somebody had us rated 16th out of the 16 teams still left,” Smart said, smiling. “I think there’s still some people that are doubting, you know, how well we can do down here in San Antonio. ... There’s some challenges that we have to battle through. But our guys know what brought us success last week. It’s mostly a matter of maintaining that mindset going into this game.”

Richmond the latest low seed for Kansas

TV: 5:27 p.m., TBS

SAN ANTONIO — So far in this NCAA Tournament, the top-seeded Kansas Jayhawks are riding an easy-looking path toward the Final Four.

Yet again. The Jayhawks returned to Alamodome on Thursday for the first time since winning their last national championship here in 2008. Most recall that overtime win over fellow top seed Memphis after first beating North Carolina to open the Final Four.

Easier to forget is how the Jayhawks got there: Beating seeds that were 16, eight, and then a 12 and 10.

Sound familiar to this run? Kansas has beaten as 16 seed (Boston), a nine (Illinois) and will face a No. 12 seed in the Richmond Spiders today. Then it’s a 10 or 11 seed at worst.

“When you’re in the business long enough you’re going to have things like that crop up,” Kansas coach Bill Self said. “But I haven’t thought about the (similarities) at all.”

If the Jayhawks (34-2) return to the Final Four this year, they’ll join Michigan State in 2001 and North Carolina in 1991 as the only schools to get that far without having to beat a seed higher than nine. Awaiting Kansas if it beats Richmond will be either 11th-seeded Virginia Commonwealth or 10th-seeded Florida State.

Only five teams have reached the Final Four by feasting on teams seeded eighth or lower, according to STATS LLC. One of those schools: the 2008 Jayhawks, which beat 12th-seeded Villanova in the round of 16 that year.

his athleticism, he’s got a great ability to impact a game.”

While Tyus was battling under the basket, Boynton was glued to Fredette on defense the entire game.

Fredette made just 3 of 15 from 3-point range and had to work for his points against the physical pressure. By the end of the game, he had a bandage on his chin from a blow in the second half, but the baskets kept coming until he was held scoreless in overtime.

When the outcome became apparent with one minute remaining, BYU coach Dave Rose subbed out Fredette, bringing a standing ovation from the crowd. He averaged nearly 33 points during three NCAA Tournament games and finished the season by scoring at least 30 points in seven out of eight games.

Rose said Fredette’s legacy would be a simple one to define.

“Winning games — that’s his legacy,” Rose said. “He just helped his team find ways to win games.”

Florida (29-7) eliminated BYU (32-5) and reached its first regional final since 2007.

The Gators led for much of the first half, but BYU rallied to tie the game at 36 by half-time.

Florida was almost unstoppable early, making 10 of its first 13 shots and leading by 10 points early. But the Gators cooled dramatically from that point, making just 4 of 13 from the field and 1 of 6 from the free-throw line in the first half.

Fredette, who came into the game as the nation’s leading scorer at 28.8 points per game, missed his first six shots from the field. But the Cougars were able to tread water thanks to Jackson Emery and Stephen Rogers, who combined to hit five 3-pointers in the first half.

Fredette was held scoreless for nearly 14 minutes before hitting a layup with 6:17 remaining in the first half. He made four of his next seven shots to finish the half with 10 points.

The Gators double-teamed Fredette occasionally, but usually guarded him one-on-one with Boynton or Scottie Wilbekin. Fredette was bumped several times while trying to finish layups, and two of his first three shots were blocked.

But fouls were hard to come by, despite Fredette’s occasional glares toward officials and the anger from the vastly pro-BYU crowd at New Orleans Arena.

“It was just a little frustration, just because that’s what happens sometimes during basketball games,” Fredette said. “But I tried to keep an even keel, and we were still right in there at the end of the game. We just didn’t win.”

Parsons said he could tell Fredette was upset.

“That’s just a credit to our guys on defense — especially Kenny Boynton,” Parsons said. “He stayed with him and made it difficult for him out there.”

year to realize that it was only getting harder to do it again. By that time it was too late (to repeat).”

Anderson, who said he took pride in never losing to someone in his grade or younger, finished sixth as a sophomore at 140 and moved up to 145 as a junior. At that point Twin Falls moved down to 4A status. He finished fifth at state to put himself in position to cement his name among the best to have ever wrestled for the Bruins.

But it still wasn’t enough.

“I knew this was going to be my last shot so I really committed to it. It was a goal of mine this season not only to win again but to go undefeated,” said Anderson, who became the first four-time medalist at Twin Falls High School, according to veteran coach Saïd Dabestani. “To do something that hadn’t been done by any of the great wrestlers to come through here was really a cool feeling.”

An undefeated champion, owner of four state medals and a career 131-29 record. For a wrestler who’s been competing since age 4, it just seems like the right time to hang up the shoes, singlet and headgear.

Some colleges talked to Anderson about continuing on, but his plans to serve an LDS church mission put most of them off. He holds no plans to resume wrestling upon his return, putting the chances that he’s done at “about 95 percent. College wrestling is a different deal, and I’m just not sure if I want to do it.

“I can only go down from here.”

Ralph Nader calls for ending athletic scholarships

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader is calling for the elimination of college athletic scholarships, saying the move is necessary to “de-professionalize” college athletes.

“As we near the exciting conclusion of ‘March Madness’ — which would more accurately be described as the 2011 NCAA Professional Basketball Championships — it’s time we step back and finally address the myth of amateurism surrounding big-time college football and basketball in this country,” said Nader, whose League of Fans is proposing that the scholarships be replaced with need-based financial aid. The Associated Press obtained a copy of the proposal Thursday, ahead of its official release.

NCAA spokesman Bob Williams said referring to college athletes as professionals defies logic.

“They are students, just like any other student on campus who receives a merit-based scholarship,” he said.

Nader, a former presidential candidate, argued that his plan would also help reduce the “win-at-all-costs” mentality in high schools, by reducing the incentive of college scholarships.

“An entire industry has developed in the youth sports arena — club teams, personal trainers, etc. — to prey on families’ dreams of an athletic scholarship,” he said.

“The lure of the elusive athletic scholarship is the primary — sometimes the only — marketing tool these youth sports entrepreneurs use.”

He said he would try to gin up support for his proposal from university presidents, Capitol Hill and the Education Department.

“We’ll use all the levers,” Nader said. “We’ll use the parents of athletes who’ve been mistreated and sick, and forced to play when they’re injured.”

Nader added that he hadn’t yet canvassed Capitol Hill, but figured he’d find lawmakers who are concerned about the way college athletes are treated.

He noted that the Drake Group, a college athletic watchdog organization, has come out in favor of banning athletic scholarships.

Nader said that colleges should either integrate athletics into the educational mission by eliminating college scholarships, or “openly acknowledge the professionalism in big-time college sports, remove the tax-exempt status currently given to athletic departments, and make universities operate them as unrelated businesses.”

The longtime former head of the NCAA, Walter Byers, has called for paying college athletes. Nader said his proposal was the opening initiative of a rejuvenated League of Fans, a sports reform group that has been dormant for some time.

Spencer Levin hits a shot from the sand trap to the No. 9 green during the first round of the Arnold Palmer Invitational golf tournament at Bay Hill in Orlando, Fla., Thursday.

Levin flawless in the wind to lead Bay Hill

ORLANDO, Fla. — Spencer Levin is atop the leaderboard after the opening round for the third time this year, so that’s nothing new. It was his score Thursday afternoon at Bay Hill that surprised him and everyone else.

In warm, blustery conditions on a course that allowed only three rounds in the 60s and the most rounds in the 80s in nearly two decades, Levin had a 6-under 66 and a three-shot lead over Rickie Fowler and Hunter Mahan in the Arnold Palmer Invitational.

Tiger Woods and his power group of Dustin Johnson and Gary Woodland provided the entertainment everyone expected, although not this variety. Woodland hit a tee shot onto another golf course, Johnson wound up 80 yards over a green and onto the next tee, and Woods’ angrily tossed his wedge after his best shot of the day.

Their scores weren’t impressive.

Woods missed a 10-foot par putt on the last hole for a 73, his highest opening round since 1999 at Bay Hill, where he is a six-time winner. Johnson and Woodland, coming off a win last week at Innisbrook, each shot 77.

Levin built the largest 18-hole lead of the year on the PGA Tour, but even that doesn’t illustrate how well he played. His 66 was nearly nine shots better than the average score at Bay Hill, which featured gusts over 20 mph and crusty conditions in the afternoon.

Fowler and Mahan played in the morning, as did Phil Mickelson, who opened with a 70.

The tough conditions showed themselves more at the bottom of the leaderboard. U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell had an 80, as did Bob Hope winner Jhonattan Vegas and Brandt Snedeker. Ricky Barnes shot an 82.

There were 13 rounds in the 80s, the most at Bay Hill since there were 24 in the second round in 1983.

And then there was Levin.

“Six under ... I didn’t really even think about that on the range,” Levin said. “Because I know the course is hard, anyway, and then you 20, 30 mile per hour wind and makes it even more tough. “I was just kind of hoping anything around par, maybe anything under par, would be a good score in the afternoon for sure.”

BLUMENHERST LEADS KIA CLASSIC

INDUSTRY, Calif. — Amanda Blumenherst birdied the final four holes for a 7-under 66 and a one-stroke lead over Germany’s Sanda Gal on Thursday in the Kia Classic.

Blumenherst, the former Duke star seeking her first LPGA Tour victory, had nine birdies and two bogeys in her opening round on the Industry Hills Golf Club course at Pacific Palms.

Michelle Wie birdied the par-5 18th for a 68. The Kia endorser, returning to the tour after finishing finals at Stanford, played in chilly conditions late in the afternoon.

Top-ranked Yani Tseng, the winner of the season-opening LPGA Thailand and three other worldwide events this year, opened with a 71. Karrie Webb, coming off her second straight victory Sunday in Phoenix, shot a 72.

The tournament is the tour’s first in the Los Angeles area in six years.

ROCK LEADS ANDALUCIA OPEN

MALAGA, Spain — England’s Robert Rock birdied five of his final eight holes for a 5-under 65 and a share of the first-round lead in the Andalucia Open. Fellow Englishman Jamie Elson and Swedes Johan Edfors, Rikard Karlberg and Oscar Floren also opened with 65s at Parador de Malaga Golf club.

Cycling body to appeal Contador doping case

GENEVA (AP) — Alberto Contador’s contaminated-beef defense will be tested again after cycling’s governing body decided Thursday to appeal the Tour de France champion’s doping acquittal.

The International Cycling Union said it will go to the Court of Arbitration for Sport to challenge the Spanish cycling federation’s decision not to ban Contador for his positive clenbuterol test.

UCI President Pat McQuaid said it had no choice but to appeal, to remove doubts about Spain’s reasons for acquitting Contador.

“It was something I feel we had to do,” McQuaid told The Associated Press at the track world championships in the Netherlands.

“The Spanish federation received a huge amount of pressure from outside, including from the prime minister and so forth. So it left a great deal of doubt in a lot of people’s minds as to whether there was influence or not. They said there was no influence, but the perception was that there could have been. In order to clear up all of that it was important we give it to an independent ... board such as the Court of Arbitration for Sport.

“We will accept whatever decision they make and I think from the credibility of the sport’s point of view, for the fans of cycling, for the family of cycling and everybody it’s important we get a result that everybody believes in.”

Contador was acquitted after testing positive July 21, 2010, a rest day during last year’s Tour de France. He blamed the finding on eating contaminated beef.

“I wish the situation was different, but I completely trust in my arguments and my lawyers,” Contador said Thursday after keeping his lead in the weeklong Volta of Catalunya in Spain. “I found out about the appeal when I got to the finish line. The race has been like any other day.”

“I am a person who believes that things happen because they are supposed to, and maybe we have to go to the CAS so that my innocence can be demonstrated even more clearly,” he added. “They (the UCI) have had time to see all the documentation that has been presented. I am sure they have never, ever seen a dossier like the one we have given them.”

The World Anti-Doping Agency has three more weeks to decide if it will join the appeal. UCI spokesman Enrico Carpani told The Associated Press that cycling officials had worked closely with WADA and “there is no reason to think they will not join us.”

Bonds

With an eye on the forthcoming testimony by Bell, federal prosecutor Jeff Nedrow asked Bowers what effect steroid abuse could have on testicles.

“They would shrink,” Bowers said.

In court papers filed before the trial started, prosecutors said Bell is planning to tell the jury that Bonds’ testicles shrank during their nine-year relationship.

Bowers also testified that scientific studies have suggested an excess of human growth hormone could cause an adult’s head, hands and feet to grow. Prosecutors allege that Bonds knowingly used human growth hormone and witnesses will testify that his head, hands and feet grew during his time with the San Francisco Giants.

Out of the presence of the jury, U.S. District Judge Susan Illston denied Bonds attorney Allen Ruby’s motion to exclude such evidence. Ruby argued unsuccessfully that Bowers failed to offer enough scientific evidence that growth hormone could enlarge a user’s head, hands and feet.

Bowers’ testimony Thursday followed the appearance on the witness stand of Bonds’ estranged childhood friend Steve Hoskins.

Hoskins has testified that he strongly suspected Bonds was using steroids between 1999 and 2003. Hoskins on Thursday testified that Bonds’ surgeon, Dr. Arthur Ting, told him that a Bonds elbow injury was caused by steroid use.

Hoskins testified that around 1999 and 2000 he told Ting that Bonds was using steroids. Ting advised him to tell Bonds to stop using them, Hoskins testified.

Hoskins and Bonds grew up together in a San Francisco suburb. Hoskins worked for Bonds from 1993 until late March 2003 when Bonds had Hoskins sign a document effectively ending what was a lucrative business arrangement for Hoskins.

Hoskins on Wednesday denied accusations that he planned to extort Bonds in the aftermath of that split by secretly recording conversations about steroids with the slugger’s personal trainer and doctor. Hoskins said he made the recordings to convince Bonds’ father, Bobby Bonds, that his son was juicing.

But he conceded Wednesday that he was incorrect in insisting his secretly recorded conversation with trainer Anderson occurred in late March 2003. Under cross examination from Ruby, Hoskins conceded the recording was made later. Ruby suggested that was an important inconsistency because that means the recording was made after Bonds had Hoskins sign the document on March 27, 2003, ending their business arrangement.

Nonetheless, Hoskins denied he had any malicious intentions and said he harbored no ill will toward Bonds at the time of the recording or now.

Bonds, baseball’s all-time home runs leader, is being tried in federal court on four counts of lying to a grand jury and one of obstruction for telling a grand jury in 2003 that he never knowingly took performance-enhancing drugs.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD CONCERNING FISCAL YEAR'S 2012 WATER QUALITY AND DRINKING WATER LOAN AND GRANT PRIORITY LISTS AND ASSOCIATED INTENDED USE PLANS (IUPs)

This notice is given to fulfill the public information requirements of Idaho's rules for administration of drinking water and water quality construction grant and loan programs. The Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) has scheduled a comment period concerning the following documents, which, upon final DEQ Board acceptance will govern the state fiscal year 2012:

1. The draft State Drinking Water Loan Intended Use Plan (IUP) which contains the Loan Project Priority List and the Drinking Water Quality Planning Grant Priority List
2. The draft State Water Quality Loan Intended Use Plan (IUP) which contains the Loan Project Priority List and the Water Quality Planning Grant Priority List

DEQ will award grants and loans from these four lists in priority order, to the highest ranked projects that are ready to proceed. Awards will be made to fully utilize all available funding. The purpose of the comment period will be to give interested parties an opportunity to comment on the grant and loan lists. Copies of the lists and IUPs are available for public review at the following locations:

Avail. for Adoption:

Did Did you know that Black Dogs are generally the last to be adopted and are euthanized in shelters in much large numbers? People may consider them too "plain", or simply don't notice them because their dark color makes them disappear in their kennels. Whatever the reason, black dogs are not given the attention they deserve. So PLEASE give our black dogs a chance!

Deuce is a handsome Labrador. He is middle aged, probably about 5-years-old, and is solid black. Deuce is very mild and sweet. He will make a nice family companion. Come meet him today.

Roscoe is a darling Australian shepherd mix puppy. He has medium length hair and is black with brown throughout his coat. Roscoe is very affectionate and is going to be a very beautiful adult doggie.

Kate is a black lab mix puppy that is about 5-month-old. She has white on her feet and is very cute. Kate is not going to get very big. Her build is short and stocky. Kate is a fetching fool! She loves to have people throw balls for her! She is very sweet and has been waiting patiently to find her forever family.

Annie Oakley is a black border collie mix puppy. She is about 14-weeks-old and is very cute! Annie loves to play with the other dogs, and loves human companionship as well. Come meet her today.

Calamity Jane is an adorable border collie mix puppy. She is about 14-weeks-old. Jane is mostly black with a white diamond on her chest. She is so cute!

The adoption fee is $75 and includes spaying/ neutering and the first set of vaccinations.

Today is Friday, March 25, the 84th day of 2011. There are 281 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On March 25, 1911, 146 people, mostly young female immigrants, were killed when fire broke out at the Triangle Shirtwaist Co. in New York.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1634, English colonists sent by Lord Baltimore arrived in present-day Maryland.

In 1865, during the Civil War, Confederate forces attacked Fort Stedman in Virginia but were forced to withdraw by counterattacking Union troops.

In 1894, Jacob S. Coxey began leading an “army” of unemployed from Massillon, Ohio, to Washington, D.C., to demand help from the federal government.

In 1918, French composer Claude Debussy died in Paris.

In 1947, a coal mine explosion in Centralia, Ill., claimed 111 lives.

In 1957, the Treaty of Rome established the European Economic Community.

In 1965, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. led 25,000 marchers to the state capitol in Montgomery, Ala., to protest the denial of voting rights to blacks.

In 1975, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia was shot to death by a nephew with a history of mental illness. (The nephew was beheaded in June 1975.)

In 1990, 87 people, most of them Honduran and Dominican immigrants, were killed when fire raced through an illegal social club in New York City.

In 1991, “Dances With Wolves” won seven Oscars, including best picture, at the 63rd annual Academy Awards.

Five years ago: In Los Angeles, half a million people marched to protest federal legislation to make illegal immigration a felony and build more walls along the border. In Seattle, Aaron Kyle Huff opened fire in a house full of ravers, killing six of them before killing himself. Kimmie Meissner won the ladies’ World Figure Skating Championships title in Calgary, Alberta. Country music star Buck Owens died in Bakersfield, Calif., at age 76. Movie director Richard Fleischer died in Woodland Hills, Calif., at age 89.

One year ago: Osama bin Laden threatened in a new message to kill any Americans al-Qaida captured if the U.S. executed Khalid Sheik Mohammed, the self-professed mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks, or other al-Qaida suspects. Defense Secretary Robert Gates approved new rules easing enforcement of the “don’t ask, don’t tell” ban on gays serving openly in the military.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“But I apply the term unstrung to a man when he is rather under the pressure of feelings than under the pressure of conceptions.”
— Friedrich von Schiller

The second Commonwealth Nations Bridge Championships were held in Melbourne a couple of years ago. The English team of Michelle Brunner and John Holland, with John Hassett and Bill Hirst, took the silver medal, aided by deals like today's.

You may care to cover up the East and West hands before choosing your line of play in three no-trump. There has been no opposition bidding and West leads the spade five. You have no choice but to play the king from the dummy, and there would be no story if it had lost. What now, when it holds the trick?

The best technical line is to cash the ace and king of diamonds to see if the queen drops, then run off the clubs, and finally take the heart finesse. This turns a 50 percent contract into a 60 percent one — a significant additional chance. The Australian declarer duly elected to cash the top diamonds, take the heart finesse, and go down.

By contrast, John Holland went for the psychological line. At trick two he led dummy's heart jack. When East did not play the king, John rose with the ace, cashed his clubs, and later took the diamond finesse to make his contract.

From the 1970s through the early 1990s BOLS Royal Distilleries sponsored a series of bridge-tip competitions. Zia Mahmood's 1989 winning tip was “When they don't cover, they don't have it.” It is excellent advice and worked well for John Holland here.

ANSWER: Although you do not have a real heart stop, it is right to bid one no-trump now, rather than introducing that feeble diamond suit. You have clubs under control, and partner's double guaranteed some heart length if not strength, so there is no reason not to head for the most lucrative partscore.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING SUPERVISOR

The Times-News is seeking a high-energy and enthusiastic classified advertising supervisor with strong interpersonal skills and who possesses an entrepreneurial spirit. The successful candidate will have real estate, automotive and/or recruitment advertising sales experience and will demonstrate the ability to effectively manage, lead, and generate revenue growth for recruitment, real estate, auction, and service directory categories.

Primary responsibilities include growing the number of recruitment, real estate and commercial classified customers as well as making the Times-News and www.magicvalley.com THE PLACE for buyers and sellers of household and miscellaneous items to connect. The Classified Supervisor will be responsible for exceeding print and online classified advertising revenue goals and will collaborate with the Advertising Director to develop and implement sales strategies to exceed goals. They will recruit, train, coach and manage a first class, diverse and talented classified department.

Requirements:

- Previous sales management experience.
- Knowledge of marketing and competitive media.
- Must be a decisive problem-solver and possess strong written and verbal communication skills.
- Serve on one or more community boards/activities.
- Computer skills including proficiency in Microsoft Word, Excel & PowerPoint.
- College degree or equivalent experience

We want to talk to people who have confidence in media companies, understand the power of effective advertising and approach challenges with a high level of enthusiasm that rubs off on those around them. This is a solid marketplace with opportunity for revenue growth.

ADVERTISING SALES CONSULTANT

The Times News Mini-Cassia is seeking a full-time advertising sales consultant who is ready to achieve success, is highly motivated and goal orientated. This position will manage an existing well established account list and be responsible for the development of new business from new and existing clients. This individual will provide excellent service to our clients, selling the newspaper advertising, specialty publications, online advertising, ad inserts and other online products.

The successful candidate must have a proven track record in outside sales, developing strong business relationships, possess good oral and written communication skills, well organized, have excellent follow-through and enjoy working with a variety of people. Previous marketing experience or advertising sales experience a plus.

First.Best.

what you expect, we deliver

IF MARCH 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Hard work never hurt anyone. You won't necessarily get a pat on the back from anyone over the next few months, but the fact that you are willing to embrace your obligations and adhere to high standards will earn you credit on the cosmic balance sheet — as well as a higher score with the credit bureau. It may be difficult to have fun while you are pressured to perform, but late May is a great time for short vacation or amorous fling. August could be a critical time when you might feel pressured to burn some bridges or become so enamored of a sales pitch that you try to buy the Brooklyn Bridge. Wait until late October, when your wishes might become reality and your luck and judgment are better than usual, to make major decisions.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Conjure up some confidentiality. There are some things you simply cannot discuss or share, because they could do harm. If you juggle your tight schedule efficiently you have a chance for some fun tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The cosmic seas can change swiftly in the next several days. Dealing with the ups and downs might make you seasick, so don't feel pressured to make an irrevocable decision. Get advice from partners.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If at first you don't succeed, take a time out. Your passion for success could lead you into taking unethical shortcuts. Rather than trying to continue in the face of opposition, shelve problems until next week.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Unbridled passions can run away with you. Although you may be intent on getting your way, you have to take a break. Plan to close the door on job pressures and spend time with loved ones tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Plan on being happy during happy hour. Meet up with friends and casual congenial contacts this evening. A short recess from pressure can restore your spirits. Cheerful surroundings will alleviate tensions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some days you feel smart and some days you feel dumb. You can't always be smarter than everyone else, and someone else might have the upper hand, so be watchful about investments and financial matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone's love light is shining for you — and you would be wise to let that beacon guide your actions. You may still carry a heavy workload, but you will find some time for fun and games of an amorous nature.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Locate a cheerful oasis far from the desert of drudgery this evening. Socializing at the local watering hole can provoke uplifting interchanges. Cling to those who have an optimistic outlook that might rub off on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Perfectionists who strive to make things better risk making a shambles of something that is all right as it is. Careless meddling could break down structures that are in place for a good reason.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Amorous addictions show up like ants at a picnic. If you can abandon your businesslike attitudes and unwind, you might find that you and your latest romantic interest have many things in common.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Maintain your own internal serenity by seeking pleasing surroundings and optimistic companions. Those with fears and anxieties can cause concern, but your warmth and vitality dispel gloom.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shift your mental gears where money and finance are concerned. Avoid taking any permanent steps today that will change or alter the status quo, but store beneficial information for the future.

DEAR ABBY: Please reprint the list of signs of an abuser. I lost the list I had, but I think my husband is one. He calls me names like “stupid” and “slut.” He tells me what clothes to wear, and if I refuse he threatens to cut them up. When we argue, he threatens to call 911 and have me locked up. He says everything that goes wrong is my fault.

We have been married 31 years. The stress is ruining my health. I have no money and no job. He stands in front of the door to keep me from leaving or going anywhere. Should I call a hotline or try to find a women’s shelter?

— END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: While you haven’t been battered, your husband’s treatment qualifies as emotional abuse. The National Domestic Violence Hotline toll-free number is (800) 799-7233. Do not try to leave without calling it first.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

The signs of an abuser:
(1) PUSHES FOR QUICK INVOLVEMENT: Comes on strong, claiming, “I’ve never felt loved like this by anyone.” An abuser pressures the new partner for an exclusive commitment almost immediately.

(2) JEALOUSY: Excessively possessive; calls constantly or visits unexpectedly; prevents you from going to work because “you might meet someone”; checks the mileage on your car.

(3) CONTROLLING: Interrogates you intensely (especially if you’re late) about whom you talked to and where you were; keeps all the money; insists you ask permission to go anywhere or do anything.

(4) UNREALISTIC EXPECTATIONS: Expects you to be the perfect woman and meet his every need.

(5) ISOLATION: Tries to cut you off from family and friends; accuses people who are your supporters of “causing trouble”; the abuser may deprive you of a phone or car or try to prevent you from holding a job.

(6) BLAMES OTHERS FOR PROBLEMS AND MISTAKES: It’s always someone else’s fault if anything goes wrong.

(7) MAKES EVERYONE ELSE RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS OR HER FEELINGS: The abuser says, “You make me angry” instead of, “I am angry” or says, “You’re hurting me by not doing what I tell you.”

(8) HYPERSENSITIVITY: Is easily insulted, claiming hurt feelings when he or she is really mad. Rants about the injustice of things that are just part of life.

(9) CRUELTY TO ANIMALS AND TO CHILDREN: Kills or punishes animals brutally. Also, may expect children to do things that are far beyond their ability (whips a 3-year-old for wetting a diaper) or may tease them until they cry. Sixty-five percent of abusers who beat their partner will also abuse children.

(10) “PLAYFUL” USE OF FORCE DURING SEX: Enjoys throwing you down or holding you down against your will during sex; finds the idea of rape exciting.

(11) VERBAL ABUSE: Constantly criticizes you, or says blatantly cruel things; degrades, curses, calls you ugly names. This may also involve sleep deprivation, waking you up with relentless verbal abuse.

(12) RIGID GENDER ROLES: Expects you to serve, obey and remain at home.

(13) SUDDEN MOOD SWINGS: Switches from sweet to violent in a matter of minutes.

(14) PAST BATTERING: Admits to hitting a mate in the past, but says they made him (or her) do it.

(15) THREATS OF VIOLENCE: Says things like, “I’ll break your neck” or “I’ll kill you,” and then dismisses them with, “Everybody talks that way” or “I didn’t really mean it.”
