CSI forms building committee for Jerome Head Start

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

College of Southern Idaho trustees approved forming a new selection committee on Monday to choose who will design and build the college's planned $1 million Head Start building in Jerome.

Trustees said forming the committee will add transparency to building processes the Twin Falls college and its board have previously been criticized for.

In a recommendation letter to the board, Vice President of Administration Mike Mason wrote that past selection processes showed bias toward firms that previously successfully completed projects for the college. The board expressed a desire to change the selection method previously used for choosing architects and other building professionals.

The new selection committee will consist of Head Start Director Mary Marshall, Trustee Bob Keegan, Region IV Development project director Jeff McCurdy and retired CSI employee Darrell Buffalo. Those members will choose a fifth member to complete the team.

Madison County shines in report on counties' health

By Mitchell Schmidt
Associated Press

BOISE — A survey comparing the overall health in counties across Idaho shows Madison County has the state's healthiest population, while inhabitants of Lewis County are more likely to struggle with high teen birth rates, children living in poverty and poor health than residents in any other Idaho county.

The second annual County Health Rankings report, released Wednesday, also shows the health disparity between the state's poor, rural counties and those in with urban and wealthier populations.

Researchers analyzed health records from each county and then ranked 42 of the state's 44 counties in categories like mortality, health behaviors, access to clinical care, social and economic factors and physical environment.

The report by the University of Wisconsin Population Health Institute and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation looked at counties in all 50 states and is designed as a tool to help policy makers drill down and compare conditions and health factors in their state, said “It's a snapshot of what's going on in that community,” said Julie Willems Van Dijk, associate scientist with the institute.

Idaho Senate passes urban renewal bill

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — With a unanimous vote, the Senate on Tuesday passed a bill that sets the state on a path toward reforming urban renewal.

Urban renewal districts are crucial for economic development, lawmakers said, but lack safeguards that prevent misuse.

The issue has attracted much attention this legislative session, with 10 separate bills introduced that targeted it. This bill is the only one to survive; having passed both the House and Senate, it now heads to Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter's desk.

The bill is tailored toward halting unbridled growth of urban renewal districts and increasing transparency and accountability to the public. Urban renewal districts get their money primarily by tax-increment financing, which allows the agencies to collect any increase in assessed property tax value within their boundaries after their formation. Usually initiated by cities, but technically free-standing entities, the districts provide a source of revenue as incentives to developers.

“I think it provides better sideboards to this and still allows the cities their opportunity to seek better economic development,” said bill sponsor Sen. James Hammond, R-Coeur d'Alene, of the reform.

Xavier principal hearing open to public today

Times-News

A hearing today to decide Cindy Fulcher's fate as Xavier Charter School's principal will be open to the public at Fulcher's request. Fulcher will go before a three-person panel, and lawyers for both she and the Twin Falls charter school will present their arguments to the panel.

The hearing will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the Red Lion Hotel Canyon Springs Oak Room, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Twin Falls.

Fulcher has been on paid administrative leave since August, and in October filed a lawsuit against the school's board of trustees in an attempt to keep her job.

The panel, a provision of an out-of-court settlement of that lawsuit, is not expected to rule on Fulcher's employment status today. According to a posting on Xavier's website, lawyers for both sides will have until 5 p.m. Tuesday to submit post-hearing arguments.

While the panel will provide direction, any change to Fulcher's employment status would need to be voted on by Xavier's board of trustees.

What's next

Today's hearing is only one step that will decide Cindy Fulcher's ongoing employment at Xavier Charter School.

Today: Lawyers for Fulcher, Xavier present arguments to three-member panel.

Tuesday: Deadline for post-hearing arguments to be submitted.

Following: Panel will make its recommendation to Xavier trustees. A board vote is required to change Fulcher's employment status.

U.S. 93/I-84 junction work to start Monday

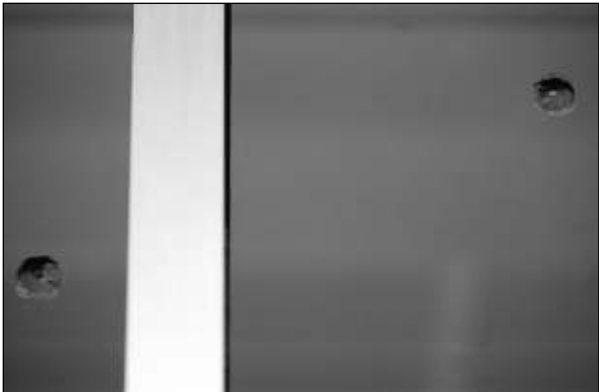

Times-News

Drivers should expect delays at the junction of U.S. Highway 93 and Interstate 84, as road work at the major commuter route to Twin Falls and Jerome begins Monday.

The Idaho Transportation Department expects work to reconstruct and widen nearly two miles of U.S. 93 will start Monday and be completed in October. The project will extend four-lane traffic farther north, and will also include ramp overlay work. A four-lane road with right turn lanes will extend to the Crossroads Ranch development, while a center turn lane will be included from the Flying J access north to the end of the four-lane section.

Through most of the project, traffic in the area will be limited to one lane in each direction. Boise-based Knife River Corp. is the contractor for the $5.2 million project.

DREW NASH/Times-News

Damage from BBs is shown at Obenchain Insurance on Tuesday afternoon in Twin Falls. Obenchain applied for more than $6,000 in facade improvement matching funds made available from Twin Falls’ disbanded business improvement district.

Facades

If the board approves the subcommittee’s recommendations, it will use almost $43,000 of the remaining BID cash, about $80,000, to fix up facades. The cash was left over after the BID’s dissolution last year when accounting records couldn’t accurately return it to the members that paid in.

“I was happily surprised,” subcommittee member Bob Richards said of the number of applications. “I would love to see all the funds used up for facade improvements.”

He said some downtowners he spoke with before the applications came in didn’t have plans for improvements. Richards said he got the impression that keeping business going, not improving their building fronts, was their main goal. He encouraged more downtowners to apply and hopes the project will snowball into other property owners improving their facades — if it’s hugely successful, he said the URA board will probably look into offering other programs to help business owners.

Tim Obenchain, of Obenchain Insurance, got the OK for $6,444.75 in matching funds to fix up the front of his Main Avenue business. He said he wants to change out his large windows for tiled smaller ones — replacing the giant ones when vandals shoot BBs at them is extremely expensive, he said — that are also more energy efficient, among other improvements.

“The money has to go someplace, and if it can improve downtown, and if the business owners are contributing equally, then it’s a good thing,” he said.

Sprucing up facades is a good way of beautifying downtown, Obenchain said. It’ll take work to restore vibrancy to downtown, and this is a good start, he said.

But not everyone was satisfied: Scott Andrus’ application to add a “Welcome to Historic Downtown Twin Falls” sign to his business, Escape Salon, was shot down amid concerns it wouldn’t fit with the project’s mission or fit the building. The subcommittee gave its OK to match the cost to clean and seal the brick on Andrus’ building.

Larry Hall, a subcommittee member, said his group wanted to expose the old architecture and brick of the buildings, not cover it. He also said Andrus’ proposed sign interfered with the feel of the rest of the building. Andrus in turn asked to present his plans to the full URA board.

“From my perspective as a business owner, removing thousands of dollars worth of signage to expose a few feet of unadorned brick is somewhat unsettling,” Andrus wrote in an email to URA Executive Director Melinda Anderson, which was copied to the Times-News.

Burley DQ embezzler sentenced to prison

Fabela could serve more than 7 years for $100,000 theft

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Appearing timid, former Burley Dairy Queen employee Lisa Fabela was led off to serve a prison term Tuesday after a Cassia County judge said she had an established pattern of stealing money from three employers in two states.

Fifth District Judge Michael Crabtree sentenced Fabela, 31, to serve up to 7 1/2 years in prison for felony grand theft. She’ll serve 1 1/2 years before she becomes parole-eligible. Under the terms of a plea agreement, two other grand theft charges were dropped.

Fabela asked the court for an opportunity to show that she’s a good person who made a mistake, adding that at the time she stole the money, her family had received a disconnect notice for electricity.

Crabtree said Fabela has a family, is a high school graduate and is a capable employee free of addictions — she just doesn’t hesitate to steal from others.

“If it’s not yours, you can’t have it,” Crabtree said.

“The severity of what was taken and the lack of remorse shows that the defendant has no concern for anybody else’s well-being to the extent that the thing almost broke a business that she was given trust to run,” said Con Haycock, co-owner of the Dairy Queen.

Fabela was charged after Haycock said she stole nearly $100,000 while working at the DQ’s drive-up window, although Fabela disputes the amount taken.

“The defendant’s position that she only took a couple thousand dollars makes very little sense based on the evidence and based on the pattern of activity occurring on her shift,” said Cassia County Deputy Prosecutor Blaine Cannon.

The amount of restitution Fabela will be ordered to pay will be determined in an upcoming hearing.

Cannon said Fabela has been convicted of two previous felony theft charges, although one was reduced to a misdemeanor after she served probation, and misdemeanor theft. Those charges occurred in Oregon.

Haycock said Fabela told him she was from Colorado, not Oregon, so he didn’t perform an appropriate background check on her.

“I would just recommend a harsh sentence, so she’ll have time to think about what she did,” said Haycock.

Cannon said the theft was fairly complicated and occurred many times on different days.

Renewal

Some of the bill’s requirements, such as those limiting the length and financing of urban renewal districts to 20 years and voter approval for an urban renewal district, only apply to new urban renewal districts, not existing districts.

Other parts apply to all, such as giving city councils the ability to remove urban renewal board members and requiring a public hearing each year for the urban renewal district’s annual financial report.

Lawmakers said the legislation is a good compromise and hinted that scrutinizing the state’s urban renewal system won’t end with it.

“It’s what I think is a consensus piece of legislation for not just the Senate, but the entire Legislature,” said Sen. Joe Stegner, R-Lewiston and chairman of the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee. “I predict that we are not through with considering

ABOUT THE BILL

Changes to Idaho urban renewal law include:

- Majority voter approval required for new urban renewal districts.
- Mayor and city council can remove an urban renewal board member for misconduct.
- Districts must have public hearings for annual financial reports.
- Provides public with 60 days, up from 30, to view proposed district plans after their submission to planning and zoning officials.
- Expanding a district’s area into forest or ag land requires written consent of property owners.
- Districts can only expand once, and only by 10 percent.
- “Shoestring” annexations aren’t allowed.
- Urban renewal plans are limited to 20 years, down from 24.
- Financing for urban renewal bonds is limited to 20 years, down from 30.

modifications to the urban renewal statutes in the state.”

Sen. Michelle Stenmett, D-Ketchum, called the bill a “tremendously good effort and good effort from everyone here on all sides.”

“A little more transparency, is, I don’t think, ever a bad policy,” she said. “... In the end, few things get done without compromise.”

In an interview, Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, noted that his city’s URA used so-called “shoestring” annexation to bring the Dell call center — located across town from the URA and now inhabited by C3 — to the city.

A former city council member, he said urban renewal has been a great benefit to Twin Falls, adding that it could be a tool for developing the community’s industrial area.

Health

The report takes into account a variety of health and environmental factors, including rates of adult smoking, adult obesity, excessive drinking in adults, teen birth rates, uninsured adults, rates of high school graduation, air pollution levels and access to healthy foods.

What the findings show about Idaho are the challenges facing those living in Idaho sparsely populated, farm and rural counties.

For example, the report found the rate of sexually transmitted infections in Lewis County in the north central portion of the states is 14 times higher in Madison County, home of the city of Rexburg and younger, educated population at Brigham Young University-Idaho.

Researchers found that Lewis County has more than five times the teen birth rate of Madison County, as well as a higher percentage of adults reporting to be in poor or fair health and children living in poverty.

Other rural counties deemed to have the poorest health in the state include Shoshone, Butte, Gooding, Payette, Lincoln, Bear Lake, Minidoka, Clearwater and Jerome.

Tara Dudley, spokeswoman for Idaho’s North Central Public Health District, said the geographic isolation and lower population contribute to the low rankings for counties like Shoshone and Lewis in the north and Gooding and Lincoln in the south. Residents in those counties face more challenges than their urban counterparts when it comes to access to healthy food and medical care, Dudley said.

Rene LeBlanc, director of South Central Public Health District, said agricultural counties like Jerome and Gooding tend to fall in rankings because the population tends to be older or retired, a trend exacerbated in recent decades by the migration of healthier younger residents to cities.

The report shows bigger counties like Ada or Kootenai ranked higher in access to hospitals and recreational facilities as well as less children in poverty.

Yet the report attributed some risks to living in the bigger counties. For example, residents in Ada and Canyon counties must deal with poor air quality and higher rates of sexually transmitted infections.

“We know our state faces unique challenges,” Dudley said. “Whether they come out of the top of the list or the bottom, groups in the counties are not as healthy as they could be.”

CSI

At a March 15 board workshop, Idaho Division of Public Works representative Elaine Hill recommended the board choose the Legislature’s preferred process of bidding out each facet of the building’s design and construction.

Board Chairman Thad Scholes said the board decided to take Hill’s recommendation and to also use different selection committee members.

The new Head Start building and the Applied Technology and Innovation Center will both use the recommended method.

“We are just looking for assurances. I don’t think there was anything wrong with the process before, but we want to be as open as we think we are,” Scholes said. “We aren’t looking for a different result — just more transparency for the public.”

In other business, CSI President Jerry Beck asked the board to consider the college’s budget and whether increasing professor salaries would be reasonable for next year. Beck said CSI’s starting professor salaries are comparable to those at Idaho’s other community colleges. A decision on salaries will be made at the next meeting. Beck said the board’s main goal is to keep finances within budget.

Looking up at (gulp) Mississippi

TGFM. Thank God for Mississippi. Every educator, politician, public health worker and economist in Idaho has uttered that phrase at one time or another. That's because the Magnolia State ranks at or near the bottom in a wide range of measurements of well-being in America. Quite often, right behind Idaho. Just last week, the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis reported that the average income in Idaho was $32,257 last year, second-worst in the nation. Mississippi brought up the rear at $31,186. But don't look over your shoulder, because Mississippi is gaining on us: Mississippi has a lower rate of binge drinking than Idaho. Idaho spends less per pupil on public schools than Mississippi — a lot less. The difference is $970 per student.

DON'T ASK ME
Steve Crump
Mississippi has lower corporate, individual and unemployment insurance taxes than Idaho. Idaho trails Mississippi in the disparity in salary between men and women. In the past decade, Mississippi's per capita personal income has grown half-again as fast as Idaho. Idaho has a lower immunization rate than Mississippi. Mississippi has a higher percentage of its citizens who check their cholesterol than Idaho's. Idaho has a higher underemployment rate than Mississippi. Although both states received "D's," Mississippi finished higher than Idaho in Education Week magazine's most recent rankings. In the category standards, assessment and accountability, Mississippi received a "B;" Idaho got a "C." Mississippi also got higher marks in school finance and teachers. Mississippi has increased teacher salaries in the past decade half-again as much as Idaho. Idaho has a lower average score on the college-admissions Scholastic Aptitude Test than Mississippi. If this continues, no Idahoan is gonna be able to go out of the house without a Confederate flag over his or her head. I mean, have you been to Mississippi? The humidity is so bad it's like walking around in concrete overshoes. You have to change your shirt three times a day. The roads are terrible, the politicians are crooked, the drivers are drunk (10.35 DUI fatalities per 100,000 people, as opposed to 4.67 in Idaho), fire ants and cockroaches are everywhere, and the food? Well, the Mississippi Fish and Wildlife Foundation compiled a book of favorite recipes. Among them are Squirrel Cacciatore, Rabbit Ravioli in Basil Cream Sauce, Crawfish Fettuccine, Tiggy's Favorite Baked Doves, and my personal favorite, Coon a la Delta. Another raccoon recipe advises, "Place kitchen towel at each place (setting) and two pots of hot water on table because there will be grease from ear to ear on each guest when the bottom of the pan is licked." Please tell me there's not a recipe somewhere out there for Fricasseed Idaho Jackalope. Steve Crump is the Times-News Opinion editor. Hear him Fridays at 8:30 a.m. on KLLX-1310 AM.

No prison for Idaho men convicted of hate crime

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Two Coeur d'Alene brothers convicted for racially harassing a Puerto Rican man in 2009 have been ordered to serve two years of probation and 300 hours of community service, sentences that wrap up a hate crime case that has undergone two jury trials and one mistrial. The sentences were handed down Monday by 1st District Judge John Luster in the case of William Tankovich, 50, and brother Frank Tankovich, 47. Luster opted against prison time, instead agreeing to a suspended five-year sentence because he wasn't comfortable sending the brothers to prison for their actions. The punishment and conclusion of the case did little to ease tensions on both sides. "They got off," said Kenneth Requena, the man the brothers were charged with harassing more than two years ago. "They pretty much got a smack on the hand." William Tankovich said the light sentence showed that the judge understood the case had problems. "Judge Luster saw through all the bull crap that went on," William Tankovich said outside the courthouse. William Tankovich and Frank Tankovich, along with a third brother, Ira Tankovich, each were charged after an altercation on Aug. 16 outside of Requena's Coeur d'Alene home. Authorities said the three brothers stopped their truck outside the house, and approached Requena in his yard seeking to buy electrical equipment. But Requena, who owns an electrical business, said he felt threatened and asked his wife to get a gun and call 911.

Scofflaw jurors: What’s Cassia County do do?

A jury summons isn’t a social invitation. It’s a civic responsibility, and for those who dodge it there are legal consequences.

So why does Cassia County have such a hard time getting jurors to show up in court?

Cassia County Jury Commissioner Elizabeth Kenner says the 5th District Court in the county chooses 1,000 candidates every three months, and each time about 600 are disqualified.

The current batch of qualified candidates included 122 people who didn’t respond to the initial summons. Of those, 85 will have to be sent orders to show cause for their absence.

Of course, for every juror who doesn’t respond, there’s a county deputy sheriff who has to knock on the door. In a county with 1.5 sworn officers per 1,000 population, that means fewer officers on the street.

In state courts, Idahoans are statistically more reluctant jurors than the nation as a whole, according to the Center for Jury Studies of the National Center for State Courts. Nearly 12 percent don’t respond to jury summonses, compared to 8.7 percent in state courts nationally. And nearly 19 percent of Idaho summonses are undeliverable by the Postal Service, compared to 14.7 percent nationally.

And when they do show up, 22 percent of potential Idaho jurors are disqualified, compared with 8.4 percent nationally.

As a state, just 38.5 percent of those summoned are qualified and available to serve; nationally, it’s 45.8 percent.

In a county the size of Cassia (population 23,000), that puts a burden on those who do their civic jury duty.

This week, Cassia County commissioners debated using additional databases to collect potential juror lists because current methods — voter registration and driver’s license records — aren’t getting enough eligible candidates.

And they discussed drafting more strongly worded jury summonses.

“My first response is they are violating the law, they’re not responding,” said County Clerk Joseph Larsen. “You serve them, arrest them and fine them.”

But Larsen wondered how effective a juror who has to be dragged into court will be.

“And at some point in time you go, how well are they going to serve on a jury or qualify there if you had to drag them in — in their orange-and-whites — to see if they are appropriate to serve on a jury. How far do you take that?”

Failing to respond to a juror summons can get you a $300 fine and three days in jail, under Idaho law. But the cost to justice — and to the safety of the community — is much higher.

The GOP’s adult deficit disorder

The Republican Party has a serious problem. Or rather, a seriousness problem.

Tough times elevate substantive people and cast pixilated partisans and juvenile jousters in an unflattering light.

Scot Lehigh

Which is just what’s happened these last few weeks. Although the left sometimes chafes under President Obama’s measured and mild manner, grouching that he lacks the combat-iveness the political era requires, Obama understands something they don’t: Voters want a calm, reasonable adult, not a partisan warrior, in the Oval Office.

Obama takes a page from both Ronald Reagan, who perfected the role of national leader high-minded enough to rise above his detractors, and Bill Clinton, who projected the air of a reasonable man ruefully trying to reason with a horde of hyper-partisans who preferred combat to compromise. The president knows that he enhances his image by comporting himself that way. But mostly, that’s just Obama leaning into who he is.

And as for the men and women who would replace him? First, the good news for the GOP. The party has two serious figures all but certain to run: Mitt Romney, the polished, if protean, former Massachusetts governor, and Tim Pawlenty, the determined and effective former Minnesota CEO. If he jumps in, Mitch Daniels, Indiana’s smart and accomplished governor, would make it three.

And yet look at the recent antics of some other possible candidates. Let’s start with former Speaker Newt Gingrich, who is trying to persuade people that, at 67, he’s finally grown up, but who fairly personifies partisan pettiness. The same man who used a Monday appearance on Fox News to accuse the Obama administration of “amateur opportunism” in its foreign policy has been busy criticizing Obama for . . . for . . . for finding time to make his March Madness picks. The job, intoned he, demands “a serious approach.” Which, of course, could cause problems on the family front. After all, as Gingrich has just, um, explained in addressing his personal issues, hard work (!), and passion for his country (!?) helped drive him to adultery. Ah, seriousness.

Next, there’s real estate mogul Donald Trump, a walking exercise in self-parody who apparently mistakes national affairs for a reality TV show. In his own recent Fox News call-in, Trump boasted that in 2009, when Moammar Gaddafi came to New York to address the UN, he rented the Libyan wingnut a piece of land as a place to pitch his tent — and then refused to let him use it. That, the self-smitten billionaire seemed to think, is somehow a template for U.S. foreign policy.

Mike Huckabee, meanwhile, spent some time mucking about in that favorite quagmire of conservative kooks: the Obama-really-isn’t-one-of-us swamp. First, Huckabee transplanted Obama’s four out-of-country boyhood years from Indonesia to Kenya, maintaining that that (supposed) span of time in a former British colony explained the president’s (supposedly) anti-British outlook. Huckabee later portrayed it as an innocent mistake and said that in his new book he had “clearly said” that Obama “grew up” in Indonesia.

Two problems. The book actually doesn’t say that. And the section Huckabee cited traffics in equally egregious — and revealing — nonsense. There, Huckabee highlights this passage from Obama’s 2009 UN address: “No one nation can or should try to dominate another nation. No world order that elevates one nation or group of people over another will succeed.”

Standard diplomatic stuff, right? Not in Huckabee’s view. Rather, it “is a startling and disturbing view of America,” Huckabee warns, because it shows that Obama “rejects a vital part of our story: our shared belief in American exceptionalism.” About the best one can say about Huckabee’s insidiousness is that it’s not as outright idiotic as Gingrich’s new book, in which the author asserts that Obama and his allies represent “as great a threat to America as Nazi Germany or the Soviet Union once did.” But then, when it comes to howl-at-the-moon hysteria, Newt is tough to top.

Finally, consider Sarah Palin, who recently reinforced her reputation for unpresidential small-mindedness by labeling possible Republican rival Rick Santorum “a knuckle-dragging Neanderthal.”

It has been a diverting spectacle, certainly. Unfortunately, it’s one that suggests part of the Grand Old Party is suffering from Adult Deficit Disorder.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Teachers shouldn’t be exempt from cutbacks

I would like to reply to Steve Huettig’s letter to the editor posted Tuesday, March 28, with a loud hooray!

It takes a lot of courage to write this kind of letter and I commend him for it.

I also have had to pinch pennies. I had to take a cut in pay in order to keep my job. But you know what? I still have a good job and am extremely lucky.

I have also asked the questions Steve asked. If it is not about the money, why is that all they discuss? With their education, why does more or less money alter their ability to teach our children? Many, many people have spent money on their own education only to now find themselves not making as much money as they envisioned. Why do they feel they should be exempt from cutting back when every American has to?

Teachers need to stop using the excuse that our poor children will suffer when it is

U.S. should focus on domestic needs

Here we go again, helping another Arab nation ally — not! We are asked to assist from the United Nations and the Arab League. Aren’t these the same type of people we’ve been fighting in the past decade? Arabs, Muslims and terrorists are the same thing as far as I am concerned.

We go over there to assist

France and Britain, launch 150 of those tomahawk missiles at $700,000 a pop to cripple their defenses. Now the Arab League is complaining about civilian casualties. Boo hoo!

I say if these Muslims want our help, they’re going to have to play by our rules.

As far as I’m concerned, we should have never been in Iraq more than a couple of weeks, if at all.

They had no weapons of mass destruction as was reported by our intelligence! (They should be in prison.)

Like Libya’s Gadhafi. The only problem we had with Iraq is Saddam Hussein, and he’s been out of the picture for what, eight years?

I also think George Bush and his puppeteer, Dick Cheney, should be in prison for costing us a couple of trillion dollars. Several thousand U.S. servicemen casualties, as well as the thousands of crippled military returning home. Also, every member of Congress who OK’d the invasion of Iraq should step down or be removed from office and all their pensions and benefits terminated.

This includes but is not limited to Bush and Cheney, Obama, Hillary Clinton, House Leader Boener, Kerrey, Crapo, McCain, etc.

This country is $4 trillion in debt and here we are involved in three wars in countries that hate our guts!

I suggest our withdrawal from the Middle East and Africa, cold turkey. I think we should concentrate on getting our own country back on track. We need to get out of the world baby-sitting business!

GASOLINE OR FRESH STRAWBERRIES???

We thought it would be refreshing for our customers to be able to see that some prices are coming down (strawberries) instead of up(gasoline). Just imagine, this week you can buy two incredible containers full of delicious, juicy, red-ripe (not to mention radiation-free, thanks to Nancy Grace) strawberries for what one measly gallon of stinky gas would cost you. We think the choice is clear, and as soon as a strawberry powered vehicle hits the market—we'll let you know. Until then, ride your moped down here and grab some delicious, inexpensive strawberries!! ## AROUND THE CAPITOL

Democrats vow fight on cigarette tax hike

BOISE — The Idaho House's minority Democrats declared a procedural guerrilla war on Tuesday, vowing stall tactics to delay the 2011 session's end to protest the Republican majority's refusal to consider hiking the cigarette tax by $1.25 to fill budget holes.

Minority Leader John Rusche told reporters that his party, only 13 strong in the House compared with 57 Republicans, aims to force the GOP into giving a hearing to the tax hike, as well as a proposed voter referendum on schools chief Tom Luna's disputed school reforms.

Rusche says the tax hike would raise about $50 million to soften the blow of cuts to state education and Medicaid programs.

Education reform bill heads to House

BOISE — Legislation to shift money in Idaho's public schools budget to pay for classroom technology and other reforms is headed to the state House of Representatives.

The Republican-dominated House Education Committee advanced the bill Tuesday on a 12-6 vote, with three GOP state lawmakers joining Democrats in opposition after four hours of public testimony and debate. The bill is the final piece of a reform plan by schools chief Tom Luna.

The plan redirects money in the schools budget for salaries to fund new technology in the classroom and a teacher pay-for-performance plan.

Bill to punish texting drivers dies in House

BOISE — Idaho lawmakers have dumped legislation to punish drivers who become distracted using hand-held electronic devices.

Meridian Republican Rep. Marv Hagedorn's measure was killed Tuesday on a 21-48 vote in the Idaho House. The bill aimed to give law enforcement officers a tool to cite drivers who become distracted while texting, but don't break any actual traffic laws.

The bill died amid lawmaker concerns it was too ambiguous, and would jeopardize all forms of cell phone use behind the wheel.

Bill on conscience conflict sent to Otter

BOISE — Doctors who object to the dying wishes of their patients would have to make a good-faith effort to refer them to another physician willing to provide the treatment, under legislation now headed to the governor's desk.

The Idaho Senate voted 21-13 to approve the measure Tuesday.

Republican supporters say the bill aims to resolve a "narrow conflict" between a 1988 law governing living wills and last year's measure allowing health care workers to bow out of providing care that violates their ethics.

Bill for Medicaid midwife option OK'd

BOISE — Legislation allowing pregnant women on Medicaid the option of using a licensed midwife has won final approval in the 2011 Idaho Legislature.

Lawmakers in the Idaho Senate voted 33-1 on Tuesday to approve the measure, sending it to the governor's desk.

Nearly 40 percent of all births in Idaho qualify for some kind of financial support from Medicaid. Supporters of the legislation say the move will save the state $100,000 annually.

Medicaid claims malfunction could cost Idaho

By John Miller
Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho's new, problem-plagued Medicaid claims processing system may cost taxpayers millions, according to a report released Tuesday by legislative auditors who concluded that neither Idaho health officials, the software company nor Medicaid providers were adequately prepared for the switch last year.

After California-based Molina Medicaid Solutions took over the $106 million contract in May 2010, problems handling Idaho's roughly $1.4 billion in annual Medicaid claims emerged almost immediately. That delayed thousands of payments to private providers who rely on the payments to provide services to the poor and disabled.

To help keep them in business, the Department of Health and Welfare advanced these providers a total of $117 million in interim payments in July and August.

These companies were paid again once their original claims were processed late.

Now, however, only about half these double payments have been recouped by the state. And because some of those providers did eventually fold, an estimated $2 million is now at risk of never being recovered, wrote the Legislature's Office of Performance Evaluations.

"That's a rough estimate," said Health and Welfare spokesman Tom Shanahan. "It may be more, it may be less. Some of them (the providers) are not billing anymore. We believe some of them have gone out of business."

There are more issues, too, that are costing Idaho money. For instance, federal matching rates for Medicaid are going from nearly 80 percent to 69 percent on July 1. With so many claims delayed, the state is likely to lose hundreds of thousands in federal matching funds, money Idaho has to make up in state taxpayer dollars.

Department of Health and Welfare officials are in talks with the Idaho attorney general's office over how to address these issues — and how to hold Molina accountable.

That finger-pointing phase has been put on hold, for now, while Molina and state officials concentrate on working all the bugs out of the system, said Dick Schultz, a Health and Welfare deputy director who is managing the project.

Dismal numbers lend urgency to new mortgage rules

By Kevin G. Hall and David Lightman
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — U.S. home prices continue to fall, new data showed Tuesday, giving urgency to important changes taking shape this week aimed at fixing specific causes of the U.S. financial meltdown.

January home prices fell 1 percent from a month earlier and 3.1 percent from January 2010, as measured by the S&P/Case-Shiller index, a composite of sales prices in 20 major U.S. housing markets. National prices have slumped for six straight months, and home prices are down 31.8 percent from their 2006 peak.

“The bottom line is we just have a boatload of loans sitting in foreclosure or close, and we have to work through those loans before we can find a bottom,” said

Mark Zandi, the chief economist for forecaster Moody’s Analytics.

The dismal numbers reflect the deep damage done by a financial crisis that began with problems in mortgage finance. This week may prove a pivotal one for fixing some of what went wrong.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. approved Tuesday a rule that would force Wall Street to retain an ownership share when issuing complex bundles of mortgages that poisoned the global financial system.

Lack of “skin in the game” allowed Wall Street firms to take millions of shoddy U.S. mortgages and profitably bundle them into complex bonds in a secondary market, where they were dumped on unsuspecting investors. The FDIC measure, backed by other regulators, is designed to restore investor trust in this secondary market, which is vital to mortgage lending.

Separately, the Federal Reserve imposes new rules on Friday that will end the practice of allowing mortgage brokers to receive a bonus from lenders — a legalized kickback — when they get a borrower into a loan with a higher interest rate than the rate for which they qualified. During the housing boom, lenders rewarded brokers for getting borrowers into ill-suited and often predatory loans.

“I think the importance of what you’re seeing as you group the pieces together is the remaking of the mortgage system after the crisis. ... It is very, very important,” said Barry Zigas, the director of housing policy for the Consumer Federation of America.

Businesses, banks clash over debit card fees

By Bill Lambrecht
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON — Mike Foster, who owns a 7-Eleven in St. Louis, arrived at the U.S. Capitol recently with a burning question: What happened to the new law aimed at lowering charges on all those debit card transactions at his store?

The answer is a familiar Washington story.

In fevered behind-the-scenes lobbying in recent weeks, financial institutions have been working to delay new rules that would lower by billions of dollars what they reap from debit card transactions.

These “interchange fees” — better known as swipe fees — became part of the broad financial overhaul signed into law last summer after several years of effort by Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill. Durbin initially set his sights on lowering the fees on all credit cards. But he retreated from his bigger plan in the face of lobbying by banks and inserted an amendment into the broad financial bill that focused on debit card fees.

The amended law now directs the Federal Reserve to ensure that the debit card fees retailers pay are “reasonable and proportional to the issuer’s cost.” The Fed’s current plan would cap the fee at 12 cents, significantly lower than the average 44-cent cost assessed merchants now.

In the case of Foster’s 7-Eleven, the fees amount to his third-biggest cost after rent and payroll.

“The big banks had plenty of time to make their arguments, but all of a sudden they’re squealing that it’s the end of the world,” Foster said.

High court justices skeptical of Wal-Mart class-action suit

By David G. Savage and James Oliphant
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON (MCT) — The Supreme Court justices, sharply divided along gender lines, appeared poised to reject a nationwide class-action lawsuit that accuses Wal-Mart of sex discrimination after an argument over class actions became a debate over what constitutes sex discrimination in today’s workplace.

The men and women in the black robes seemed to see the matter quite differently.

For the first time in its history, the high court has three women on the bench, and Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Sonia Sotomayor and Elena Kagan asserted that a corporate policy of letting store managers decide on promotions could result in discrimination against women. The statistics strongly suggest that is what occurred, they said.

But led by Justices Anthony M. Kennedy and Antonin Scalia, most of the six men on the court questioned how Wal-Mart can be held liable for illegal sex bias, since its 3,400 store managers across the nation decide on who gets promoted and who receives pay raises.

Protesters demonstrate against Wal-Mart outside the U.S. Supreme Court in Washington on Tuesday.

“It’s not clear to me: What’s the unlawful policy that Wal-Mart has adopted?” Kennedy asked, since the company’s written policy calls for equal treatment without regard to race or sex.

A lawyer representing the female plaintiffs argued Wal-Mart has a “corporate culture” that teaches mostly male supervisors that women are less aggressive than men and therefore are less suited to being managers.

Unpersuaded, Scalia called that “an assessment of why the percentage (of women in management) is different,” but it is not evidence of an illegal policy. Wal-Mart does not say “don’t promote women,” he said. “If you have an aggressive woman, promote her,” he added.

Ginsburg, who made her legal reputation in sex-discrimination law, said Wal-Mart’s experience shows how “gender bias can creep” into the workplace. It isn’t “at all complicated,” she said. “Most people prefer themselves. And so a decision maker, all other things being equal, would prefer someone who looked like him,” she said.

The case heard Tuesday is the most important and far-reaching job-discrimination

Inflation worries push consumer confidence lower

By Anne D’Innocenzio
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Rising prices at the gas pump and in grocery aisles are starting to crimp shoppers’ outlook.

The Conference Board’s Consumer Confidence Index fell sharply from a three-year high in February, reversing five straight months of improvement.

The decline raises questions about Americans’ ability and willingness to spend in coming months.

The index fell more than expected to 63.4 from a revised 72.0 in February. Economists expected 65.4, according to FactSet.

The drop was the steepest since the 10.1-point plunge from January 2010 to February 2010, when the U.S. stock market was hammered by worries about Greece’s national debt.

“Rising food and gasoline prices are starting to take their toll on the consumer psyche, and Japan’s triple calamity — earthquake, tsunami and nuclear disaster — has been very unsettling,” said Chris Christopher Jr., senior principal economist at HIS Global Insight.

The index measures how Americans feel about business conditions, the job market and the next six months.

It has hovered in a tight range from the high 50s to low 60s over the past year, far below the 90 that indicates a healthy economy. The index hasn’t approached that level since the recession began in December 2007.

A housing slump that isn’t over and won’t be for a while isn’t helping.

Home prices are falling in most major U.S. cities, and the average prices in four of them are at their lowest in 11 years, according to Standard & Poor’s/Case-Shiller report released Tuesday. On Friday, the Commerce Department said new-home sales plunged in February, the third month in a row.

The falling Consumer Confidence Index is in line with Gallup Poll’s weekly surveys, which have registered a slide in confidence since mid-February.

Economists monitor confidence because consumer spending, including big-ticket items such as housing and health care, accounts for about 70 percent of U.S. economic activity and is critical for a strong rebound.

“Consumers’ inflation expectations rose significantly in March and their income expectations soured, a combination that will likely impact spending decisions,” Lynn Franco, director of The Conference Board Consumer Research Center, said in a statement.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks finished broadly higher Tuesday after consumer confidence fell less than some analysts had feared. All 10 company groups that make up the S&P 500 index rose by more than 0.3 percent.

The S&P 500 rose 9.25 points, or 0.7 percent, to 1,319.44. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 81.13 points, or 0.7 percent, to 12,279.01. The Nasdaq composite rose 26.21, or 1 percent, to 2,756.89. Rising gas prices helped drag down consumer confidence in March. The Conference Board said its confidence index dropped to 63.4 from 72 in February.

The fall comes after five straight months of gains, but some economists had expected the decline to be even worse. Goldman Sachs had forecast a drop to 60, believing that high gas prices would pinch spending.

DETROIT — Shortages of auto parts from Japan are hitting North American operations at Honda and Toyota.

Toyota Motor Corp. on Tuesday said it wants its U.S. car dealers to stop ordering more than 200 replacement parts made in Japan because it's worried about running out of them. And Honda Motor Co. said it will temporarily cut production at its North American auto factories starting Wednesday due to shortages.

It's all because of the March 11 earthquake and tsunami that devastated Japan and its huge auto industry. The quake damaged many parts supply companies that make key components for cars and trucks in the U.S. and other countries. Industry analysts expect many automakers to run into shortages until production returns to normal. No one's nents for cars and trucks in the U.S. and other countries. Industry analysts expect many automakers to run into shortages until production returns to normal. No one's certain when that will be.

Already several automakers have been forced to cut production. Chrysler Group LLC, Ford Motor Co. and others have stopped taking orders for certain paint colors because a specialized pigment factory hasn't been able to come back on line.

Toyota has restricted orders for some Japanese components made at more severely damaged plants to make sure they remain available.

It has told U.S. dealers they can't order 233 parts for Lexus, Scion and Toyota models unless they have a customer who needs one for a repair.

Dealers said the parts include brake rotors, body panels, shock absorbers and other components. They mainly are for the Prius gas-electric hybrid and hybrid versions of the Highlander SUV, and the Camry midsize sedan.

Toyota spokesman Steve Curtis said he did not know specifically which models were affected.

"We are asking the dealers to refrain from ordering parts in excess of what they need," he said.

Parts managers at some dealerships may have ordered additional parts made in Japan in anticipation of shortages, and those orders could cause Toyota to run short, said Earl Stewart, who owns a Toyota dealership in North Palm Beach, Florida.

"It's not necessarily being a bad guy. It's just doing your job," Stewart said. "If everybody decides to stock up in advance, it's kind of like hoarding and suddenly there's a shortage."

About 70 percent of Toyota cars and trucks sold in the U.S. are built in North America, but roughly one in four parts in those vehicles still come from factories in Japan.

Production of most replacement parts resumed in Japan on March 17, and Toyota began shipping them to the U.S. soon after.

Meanwhile, Honda has run short of some engine, transmission and electrical parts that come from Japan. As a result, it will cut the number of hours that some North American assembly lines operate each day. Cuts will vary by plant and model, but Honda will not say how many hours it would cut from production schedules, or what models would be affected the most.

Honda has factories in Ohio, Indiana, Alabama, Georgia and Canada.

Rules

of financial regulation also created a new Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection, which opens for business on July 1, to better police mortgage lending.

Congressional Republicans are trying to defund and defang the new bureau, and on Tuesday, they unveiled eight bills designed to put to death mortgage finance titans Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. The two have been in government hands since September 2008.

The measures don't provide a timetable, but would progressively lower the limit of how many mortgage bonds the two could own over a five-year period, getting government almost completely out of mortgage finance.

"Today marks the start of a process," said Rep. Scott Garrett, R-N.J., the chairman of a subcommittee that deals with the agencies. "The culmination of our efforts will ... return our housing system to the private marketplace."

Fannie and Freddie buy loans from lenders and bundle them into bonds sold to investors, a process called securitization. Wall Street took much of their bonds during the housing boom, before weak lending standards brought down the entire system of mortgage finance. Today, Fannie and Freddie do about 90 percent of the pooling of new mortgages.

Fees

This month, nine senators signed on to legislation that would delay the debit-card fee change for two years, a move that Foster and many others believe would kill the amendment. The chief sponsor, Sen. Jon Tester, a Democrat from Montana, argued that more time is needed to judge the impact on consumers, credit unions and small banks.

Tester is pressing to pass the legislation quickly because the Fed is scheduled to issue its new rules on April 21; they would go into effect in July. Even if he loses — passage likely will take 60 votes — Tester hopes to send a message to the Federal Reserve with a strong vote. Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke is among those who have questioned the effects on smaller banks of a two-tiered system that would evolve.

Durbin acknowledged in an interview that he is frustrated at unfolding events after securing 64 votes for his amendment last year.

"The big banks and credit card companies have been saved from their own internal failures and shortcomings time and time again by this government," he said. "Now, here they go again looking for a break on interchange fees worth $1.3 billion a month to them."

Durbin, the Senate's No. 2 Democrat, exempted smaller banks and credit unions — institutions with less than $10 billion in assets. Nonetheless, community banks are working against the fee change.

Libya rebels flee Gadhafi assault as world debates

By Ryan Lucas
Associated Press

RAS LANOUF, Libya — Moammar Gadhafi's forces hammered rebels with tanks and rockets, turning their rapid advance into a panicked retreat in an hours-long battle Tuesday. The fighting underscored the dilemma facing the U.S. and its allies in Libya: Rebels may be unable to oust Gadhafi militarily unless already contentious international airstrikes go even further in taking out his forces.

Opposition fighters pleaded for strikes as they fled the hamlet of Bin Jawwad, where artillery shells crashed thunderously, raising plumes of smoke. No such strikes were launched during the fighting, and some rebels shouted, "Sarkozy, where are you?" — a reference to French President Nicolas Sarkozy, one of the strongest supporters of using air power against Gadhafi.

Reports overnight indicated that the rebels were in flight from Brega and Ras Lanouf.

World leaders meeting in London agreed that Gadhafi should step down but have yet to decide what additional pressure to put on him.

"Gadhafi has lost the legitimacy to lead, so we believe he must go. We're working with the international community to try to achieve that outcome," U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton told reporters after the talks concluded.

German Foreign Minister Guido Westerwelle said it "has to be made very clear to Gadhafi: His time is over." But Germany and other countries have expressed reservations about the current military intervention in Libya, let alone expanding it.

France has struck a more forceful tone. Defense Minister Gerard Longuet told France-Inter radio that Paris and London believe that the campaign "must obtain more" than the end of shooting at civilians.

The rout of the rebels Tuesday illustrated how much they rely on international air power. Only a day earlier, they had been storming westward in hopes of taking Sirte, Gadhafi's hometown and a bastion of his support in central Libya. They reached within 60 miles of the city before they were hit by the onslaught from Gadhafi's forces, driving them back east to Bin Jawwad under barrages of rocket and tank fire.

Many of the ragtag, untrained volunteers who make up the bulk of the rebel forces fled in a panicked scramble. However, some of them backed by special forces soldiers from military units that joined the rebellion took a stand in Bin Jawwad, bringing up truck-mounted rocket launchers of their own and returning fire.

The two sides traded salvos for hours, drilling Bin Jawwad's buildings with shrapnel and bullet holes. The steady drum of heavy machine gun fire and the pop of small arms could be heard above the din as people less than a mile outside the village scaled mounds of dirt to watch the fighting.

But by the afternoon, rebels fled further east, their cars and trucks filling both lanes of the desert highway as they retreated to and even beyond the oil port of Ras Lanouf, roughly 25 miles away. Some loyalist forces had reached the outskirts of Ras Lanouf, where the thud of heavy weapons was heard and black smoke rose from buildings.

"If they keep shelling like this, we'll need airstrikes," said Mohammed Bujildein, a 27-year-old rebel fighter. He was gnawing on a loaf of bread in a pickup truck with a mounted anti-aircraft gun, waiting to fill up from an abandoned gas tanker truck on the eastern side of Ras Lanouf.

Alternative treats

Ingredient substitutions make baked goods accessible to all

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Does dairy give you a tummy ache? Can't tolerate eggs?

There's no need to give up muffins, cakes and breads. Common baking ingredients like flour, sugar, eggs and dairy have widely available substitutions. When used correctly, their additions make traditional baked goods safe for those with sensitive stomachs without sacrificing flavor.

Susan Sweet, owner of Susan Sweet's Gluten & Sugar Free Bakery in Shoshone, uses sugar and wheat flour substitutes for her cupcakes and other baked goods. Her go-to cookbook, "The Joy of Cooking" by Irma S. Rombauer and Marion Rombauer Becker, has been the inspiration for many of her converted recipes, she said.

And using alternative ingredients doesn't mean your baked goods will be inferior.

"I've made some waffles that my husband said are better than any waffle he's ever tasted," Sweet said.

So even if you don't have dietary restrictions, give these alternative ingredients a try.

Reporter Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or melissa.davlin@lee.net.

Can't have ... Eggs?

You have plenty of options. For each egg, use 1/4 cup of apple-sauce, mashed banana or canned pumpkin in sweet baked goods. If the recipe calls for more than one egg, you'll probably be able to taste the fruit, so keep that in mind while picking your weapon of choice.

For eggy dishes like quiche, firm tofu is a great bet. Find recipes online or in vegan cookbooks. Recipes vary, but as a general rule, use one pound of firm tofu, patted dry, in place of the eggs for a single-dish quiche.

Need something for savory baked goods like bread? Ener-G Egg Replacer is multi-purpose.

And feel free to combine substitutes, like Lil Morgan does.

"I might mix up a replacement, and then the egg substitute and an egg. I might put all three in there," said the Jarbidge, Nev., woman.

Milk?

You're not limited to just soy. Almond milk, rice milk, hemp milk and coconut milk are all great choices, and each comes in multiple flavors from several brands. For baking, stick with unsweetened varieties. You might have to play with the amount of milk you add to baked goods — some substitutes have different consistencies than dairy milk, said Lil Morgan, a home cook whose husband has food intolerances. Play around with it until the dough looks right.

Need buttermilk for a recipe? Take a cup of your dairy-free milk of choice and add a teaspoon of vinegar. Stir and let sit for five minutes, Morgan said.

If your recipe requires other kinds of dairy — like sour cream for a rich chocolate cake, cheese for a pizza or cream cheese for a cheesecake — there are plenty of dairy-free substitutes at Fred Meyer in Twin Falls and at some local health-food stores. You can eat your heart out without worrying about your stomach.

Pat Corle said her gluten-free flour blend, made of tapioca starch, brown rice flour, white rice flour and potato starch, can replace wheat flour cup-for-cup in standard recipes. The addition of xanthan gum prevents baked goods from falling apart in the absence of gluten.

Sodium countdown: 10 simple ways to lower your intake

By Bill Daley
Chicago Tribune

How much does one teaspoon of salt hold? More and more Americans will likely find out the hard way, now that federal officials want people to reduce their daily sodium intake to less than 2,300 milligrams, or about 1 teaspoon of salt.

And the new federal guidelines recommend a 1,500-milligram limit for people 51 and older; African-Americans; and people with hypertension, diabetes or chronic kidney disease. That's about half of the U.S. population.

Consuming too much sodium can raise blood pressure, increasing the risk of heart attacks, heart disease and strokes.

What to do?

10. Cook fresh. There can be extra salt in frozen, canned and processed foods.

9. Read the "Nutrition Facts" label on prepared foods like soup, breads and frozen meals. Compare sodium levels; choose the one with the lowest numbers. Look for "low salt" or "low sodium" labels.

8. Scan labels for the word "soda" (sodium bicarbonate or baking soda) or the symbol "Na" to see if the product contains sodium.

7. Drain and rinse canned foods, if possible, to remove some of the salt.

6. Use as little salt in cooking as possible, especially when using salty ingredients like cheese, olives, anchovies, mustard and soy sauce.

5. Fill the salt flavor "gap" when cooking by using black pepper or hot sauce, fresh or dried herbs, fresh lemon or lime juice, garlic, onions or ginger root.

4. Hide the salt shaker when eating.

3. Pay attention to serving sizes and the amount of sodium per serving, especially with prepared foods. Eating more means consuming more sodium.

2. Ask for your meal to be prepared without salt when dining out.

1. Check the drugs you take; some have high amounts of sodium. Carefully read the labels on all over-the-counter drugs. Check with your doctor or pharmacist if you have any doubts.

Easy as pie with Martha Stewart's latest cookbook

By Michele Kayal
For The Associated Press

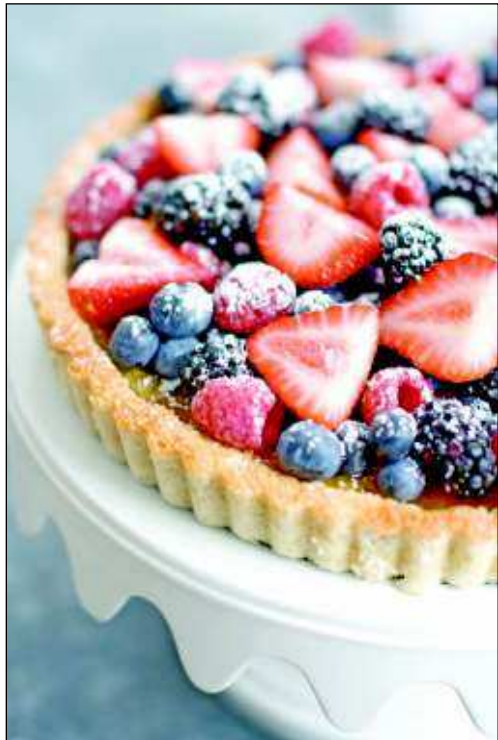

Whoever coined the phrase "easy as pie" clearly didn't bake much. Enter Martha Stewart ... again.

Stewart's latest cookbook — simply named "Pies and Tarts" — offers more than 150 recipes whose clear instructions, gorgeous photos and brevity (all recipes fit on one page) take the intimidation out of pastry. Organized by category from "classic" (think apple) to "free-form" (no pie plate handy?) to "artful" (double lattice crusts, shingled leaves), the book lets users pick pies according to their skill and occasion.

From savory tarts to mile-high meringues, the range of pastries offered makes the book useful for dinner or dessert, winter or summer, weeknights and weekends. Mini chicken potpies with herbed crust make a hearty winter meal, while vegetable tartlets filled with zucchini and tomatoes are an elegant summer lunch.

Everyday desserts such as the fruit tart with a cookie-like crust can be made all year long with whatever's in the market, and free-form galettes — in which the dough is simply rolled and folded over a mound of fresh fruit — are easy enough for a busy Tuesday night.

Even special occasion desserts like billowy Key lime pie with graham cracker crust and dainty tartlets filled with persimmon and caramel cream appear straightforward. For the holidays, you've got Neapolitan Easter pie filled with wheat berries and ricotta and a berry tart snuggled into a macaroon-like crust of coconut and egg white. And it is flour- and dairy-free for Passover.

True to the formula of Stewart's books, an instructional chapter offers the 1-2-3 of crust making, excellent tips about freezing ingredients so you're ready when guests pop by, and a graduated lesson on mastering pie-making skills from single-crust affairs to dried-fruit compotes with star-lattice designs.

Who knows? Maybe it was Stewart who called pie-making "easy."

This simple berry-topped tart sports a coconut crust that is both chewy and crispy, a pudding-like vanilla-almond filling and mounds of fresh fruit. Start to finish: 1 hour

15 minutes (plus cooling). Servings: 8. Recipe from "Martha Stewart's New Pies and Tarts," Clarkson Potter, 2011.

For the crust:

2 cups unsweetened shredded coconut
1/2 cup sugar
2 large eggs, separated
1 tablespoon vanilla extract

For the filling:

1/2 vanilla bean, halved lengthwise
1/2 cup vanilla soy milk
4 tablespoons sugar, divided
2 teaspoons arrowroot or cornstarch
2 tablespoons almond paste
1 cup almond flour
1/2 cup soy cream cheese (preferably Tofutti)
5 tablespoons apricot jam
4 cups mixed fresh berries, such as sliced strawberries, blueberries and raspberries

Heat the oven to 350 degrees.

To prepare the crust, in a medium bowl combine the coconut, sugar, the 2 egg whites, vanilla and salt. Press the mixture into the bottom and up sides of a 9-inch round fluted tart pan with removable bottom. Set aside.

To make the filling, scrape the seeds from the vanilla bean into a small saucepan, then add the pod. Set over medium-high heat, then stir in the soy milk and 2 tablespoons of the sugar. Bring to a boil.

In a small bowl, whisk together the 2 egg yolks, arrowroot and remaining 2 tablespoons sugar. Add the hot soy-milk mixture in a slow, steady stream, whisking until combined.

Return the mixture to the pan, and whisk over medium heat until thickened, about 2 minutes. Discard the vanilla pod.

In a large bowl, use an electric mixer on medium to beat the soy-milk mixture and almond paste for 5 minutes. Beat in the almond flour and soy cream cheese. With an offset spatula, spread the mixture evenly over the crust. Bake for 15 minutes.

Cover the edges of the tart with foil. Bake until set, another 15 to 25 minutes. Let the tart cool completely in the pan on a wire rack. Unmold.

In a small saucepan over medium, heat the jam until loose. With an offset spatula, spread the jam evenly over the tart. Arrange the berries on top, and serve.

Wheat?

There are so many wheat-free and gluten-free alternative flours: brown rice flour, sweet rice flour, millet, potato starch, amaranth, corn flour — the list goes on.

Whatever you do, don't replace wheat flour with a single alternative flour cup-for-cup, Jarbidge, Nev., home cook Lil Morgan said. If you use only brown rice flour for your bread, or only tapioca starch for your cookies, you are setting yourself up for a dry, tasteless disaster.

Instead, use a blend. Wheat-free bakers have their own preferences, but generally, you want a mix of both whole-grain flours (like brown rice, buckwheat, quinoa and teff) and starches (like white rice flour, arrowroot powder and cornstarch).

Try Pat Corle's go-to gluten-free blend: One cup of white rice flour, one cup of brown rice flour, 1/2 cup of potato starch and 1/2 cup of tapioca flour.

"It's a basic recipe," the Hansen woman said. Corle uses it cup for cup in recipes that call for standard flour.

Morgan, whose husband has celiac disease, said cup-for-cup substitutions don't always work for her, because the flours have different weights. She plays around with recipes until she finds a ratio that satisfies her.

"It's hard getting the right consistency," she said.

A note about xanthan gum and guar gum: As the name suggests, gluten-free flours don't have gluten, a protein found in wheat, barley and rye. Gluten gives dough elasticity and helps baked goods keep their shape. Many gluten-free recipes call for xanthan gum or guar gum, which mimic gluten in baked goods. Those recipes specify the amount to add, but if you're converting a standard recipe to gluten-free, Corle recommends 1 teaspoon of xanthan gum for every two cups of flour mix for cookies and cakes, and 2 1/2 teaspoons of gum for every three cups of flour for bread. And make sure you add it to the dry flour mix, not to the wet dough, Corle said.

Sugar?

Sugarless sweeteners can be liquid (like agave nectar or honey) or dry (like xylitol or stevia).

Sugar replacements have distinctive tastes. Lil Morgan often mixes sweeteners so one taste doesn't overpower another.

"You can tell if you've used too much," Morgan said of stevia.

Despite her name, professional baker Susan Sweet stays away from refined sugar, preferring agave instead. Sweet recommends using 3/4 cup agave for every 1 cup of sugar that a recipe recommends, then reducing the liquids in the dough.

"That is supposed to compensate for the liquid nature of the agave as opposed to the solid nature of the sugar," Sweet said. "I've had real good success following those guidelines."

Symbolizing the eternity of love.

‘Modernist Cuisine’ – 2,438 pages, 6 volumes, $625

By Gene Johnson
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — Nathan Myhrvold didn’t just go to school; he worked on the quantum theory of gravity with Stephen Hawking. He didn’t just get a job; he became Microsoft’s first chief technology officer. As a hobbyist, he didn’t just get into grilling; he rocked several top prizes in the World Championship of Barbecue.

So it’s unsurprising that when Myhrvold decided to write a cookbook, he didn’t just write a cookbook.

He outfitted his kitchen laboratory in Bellevue, Wash., with hundreds of thousands of dollars’ of whiz-bang equipment, including a centrifuge, freezers, humidity-controlled smokers and special evaporators. He brought together dozens of people, including top chefs, and spent the next three years turning slabs of meat into pincushions for digital thermometers and cutting expensive cookery in half to demonstrate how it works.

The result is the 2,438-page, six-volume, 46-pound, $625 “Modernist Cuisine: The Art and Science of Cooking.” Astonishing in its scope, audacious in its ambition and breathtaking in its photography, the work traces the development of cooking from prehistoric spit-roasted meat and early agriculture to the seemingly magical foods of the modernists — dishes that change temperature as you bite into them, gels that transform liquids into solids, edible dirt — and then tells you how they’re made.

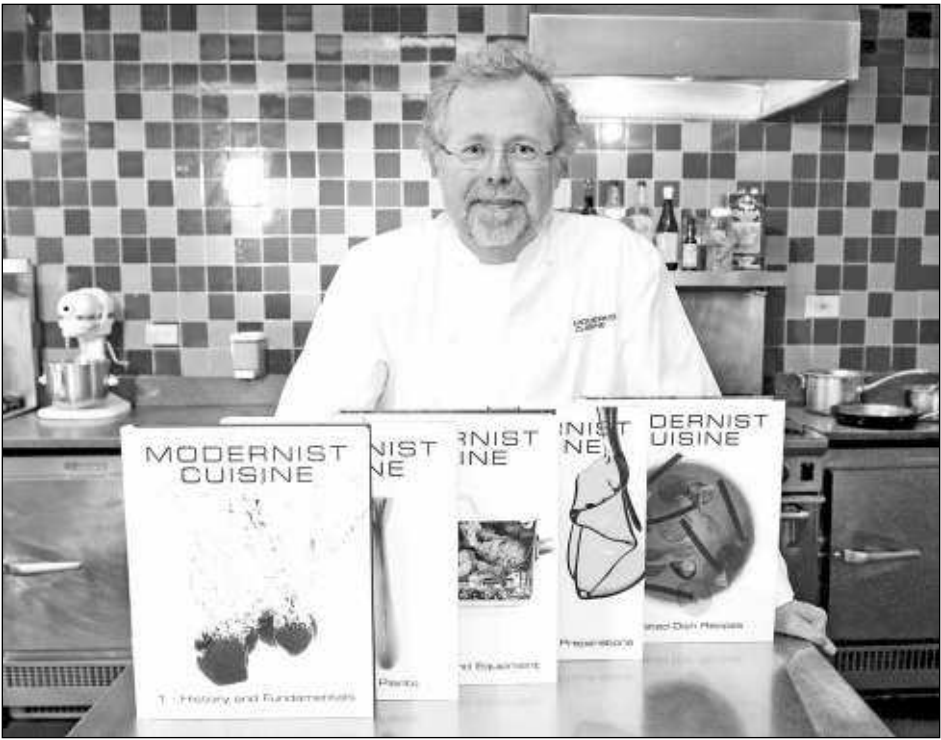

“I didn’t believe it made sense to tell part of the story,” Myhrvold said in a recent interview. “It seemed to me there was a huge value in having all of this material all in one big work, all cross-referenced, so that sure, if you want to do a recipe, you can just do a recipe. But if you care about why something happens, you can figure that out, and if you want to know the why behind the why, by God we can point you at that too.”

Released this spring with an initial press run of 6,000 copies, “Modernist Cuisine” comes at what might seem an odd time. The Slow Food movement, with its emphasis on back-to-the-land simplicity, is widely popular. Alice Waters, one of the movement’s most prominent figures, recently dismissed modernist cooking by saying such food “doesn’t feel real to me.” And in a New York Times review of “Modernist Cuisine,” prominent food writer Michael Ruhlman suggested the style is limited to a “splinter group of passionate chefs who care about this difficult and expensive form of high-end cooking.”

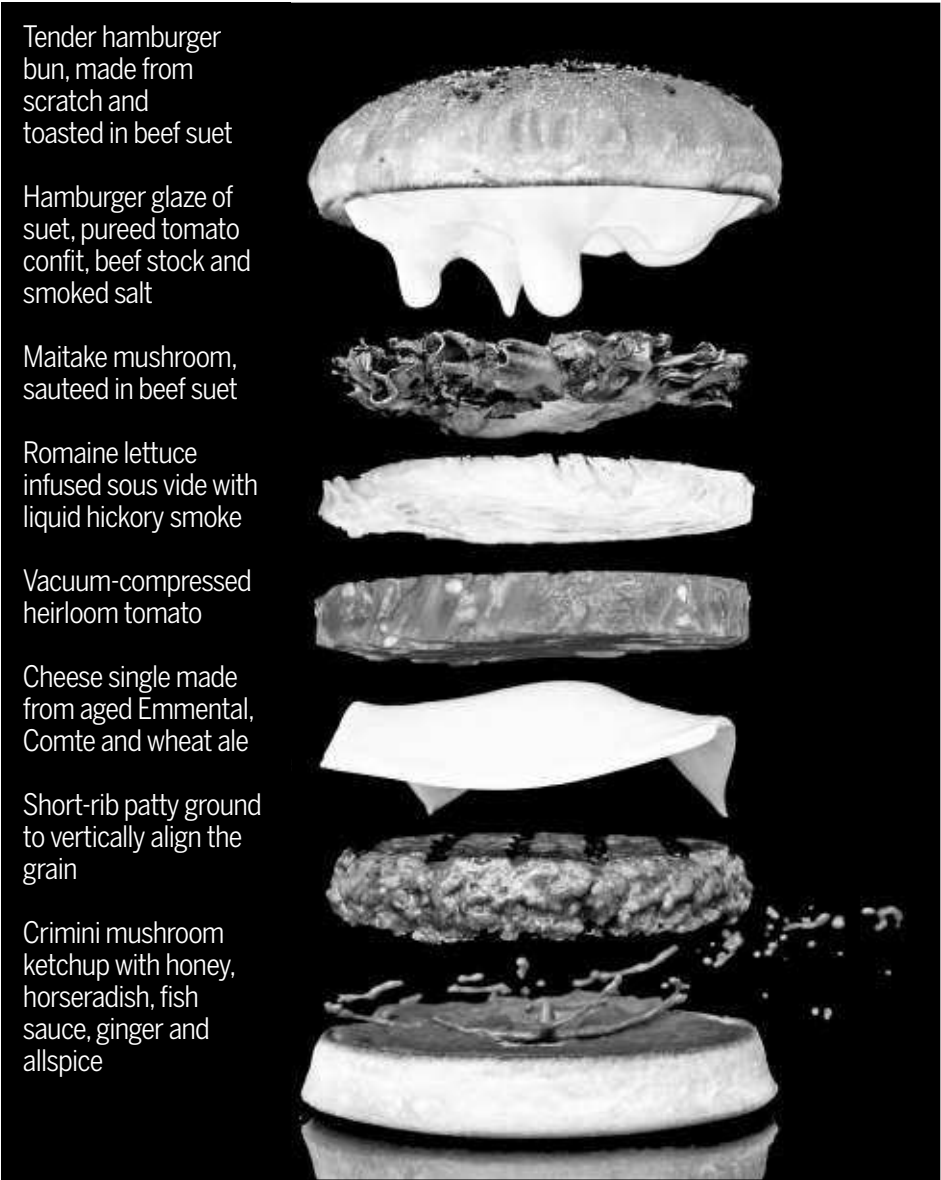

Myhrvold argues persuasively that such criticisms are irrelevant. First, the book is largely about new techniques, and there’s no reason modernist chefs can’t also have sustainable, organic or healthy values. Secondly, he readily concedes that modernist cuisine isn’t for everyone, especially those for whom convenience is key.

But one of the book’s accomplishments is helping readers — even those who might never try a modernist recipe — understand what might otherwise just seem like bizarre food. Much like avant garde art or architecture, modernist cuisine — also known as “molecular gastronomy” — seeks to challenge and surprise diners by showing them what can be done with food. Most buildings aren’t the Guggenheim in Bilbao, Spain; most meals don’t involve centrifuged pea butter.

In other words, Myhrvold says, it’s nothing to be scared of. Most of the tools in the typical home kitchen once were technological breakthroughs, and many traditional ingredients — including baking powder and baking soda — are no less synthetic than certain staples of the modernist kitchen, such as the calcium salts in gelling ingredients. Myhrvold hopes the ultimate legacy of the book is to help some of the new methods trickle down

Nathan Myhrvold, author of ‘Modernist Cuisine: The Art and Science of Cooking,’ poses with books from the work at the Institute for Culinary Education in New York.

This computer-generated image is a stacked hamburger illustration from ‘Modernist Cuisine.’

“It seemed to me there was a huge value in having all of this material all in one big work, all cross-referenced, so that ... you can figure that out, and if you want to know the why behind the why, by God we can point you at that too.”

— Nathan Myhrvold, author of ‘Modernist Cuisine: The Art and Science of Cooking’

into broader use.

The tome’s price tag does raise an immediate question: Who buys a $625 cookbook? Much of the material is directed at professional chefs, who are far more likely to have access to the specialized equipment required for some of the techniques. There are only so many people who are going to make gelled spheres of carbonated mojito or foie gras parfait, or spend 30 hours making a mushroom Swiss cheeseburger with tomato confit, smoked lettuce and mushroom-based ketchup.

But Myhrvold says chefs with a modernist bent should be able to learn how to do so without apprenticing at cutting-edge restaurants like elBulli, in Spain, or The Fat Duck, in England.

For professionals, $625 — or $462 on Amazon.com — might not be too much for access to information that cost millions of dollars to produce, including a detailed primer on food-borne pathogens which reveals that much of what government officials have to say about food safety is off-base. Many might find “Modernist Cuisine,” co-authored by Fat Duck alumni Chris Young and Maxime Bilet, worth its freight simply for explaining how to preserve costly truffles in carbon dioxide.

But there’s plenty to fascinate home cooks, too, from discourses about how traditional cooking methods work to the debunking of conventional wisdom and easy suggestions for improving your own culinary chops. Want to turn your standard electric oven into the heating equivalent of a wood-fired pizza oven? Stick in a three-quarter-inch slab of steel, preheat as hot as the oven will go, and cook your pizza on the hot steel under the broiler for 2 minutes or less. The oven door doesn’t even need to be closed, because it’s the steel and the broiler — not the hot air in the oven — that’s cooking the pizza.

Want to dramatically improve your charcoal grill? Put a short cylinder of reflective sheet metal around the coals. The coals primarily heat food by infrared light, which means the obtuse angles and black paint of ubiquitous kettle-shaped grills are all wrong.

Spring brings better produce

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

With spring here, it's time to watch the grocer for seasonal — and therefore tastier — produce, such as asparagus, fennel, watercress, radishes and avocados. And once you find them, you might as well combine them into a seasonal salad.

For added fresh flavors, we use a medley of parsley, cilantro, dill and basil. Meanwhile, savory and salty smoked trout (sold in the refrigerator case near the smoked salmon) makes the salad substantial and satisfying without being heavy. Smoked mackerel also would be good.

MARINATED SPRING VEGETABLE AND SMOKED TROUT SALAD

Start to finish: 1 hour 45 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 4.

1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Zest of 1 orange
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 pound asparagus, bottoms trimmed

1 head fennel, thinly sliced
1 bunch watercress, cut into 2-inch pieces
1 large handful torn mixed soft herbs, such as parsley, cilantro, dill and basil
8 ounce-package smoked trout
2 radishes, thinly sliced
1 avocado, pitted and sliced

In a large bowl, whisk together the vinegar, garlic, oil, orange zest, mustard, salt and pepper. Add the asparagus and fennel, tossing to coat. Cover and set aside at room temperature to marinate for 1 hour.

Toward the end of the marinating time, heat the oven to 400 degrees. Line a baking sheet with foil.

Remove the asparagus and fennel from the marinade and arrange on the prepared baking sheet. Reserve the marinade. Roast the asparagus and fennel for 20 minutes, or until tender when pierced with a fork. Allow to cool for 15 minutes.

In a large bowl, toss together the watercress and herbs. Drizzle some of the reserved marinade over the greens and toss to coat evenly. Arrange the fennel and asparagus on serving plates or a platter. Top with the watercress and herb mixture. Use a fork to flake

Think spring. Think asparagus. Think healthy soup.

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Global markets and high-tech shipping methods have put asparagus on our tables virtually year-round, yet most of us still associate it with spring.

But whenever you eat it, asparagus is a nutritional powerhouse. It is low in calories (about 5 calories per stalk) and is packed with vitamins A, C and E, and folate.

Green, purple and white varieties of asparagus are common, though green is the least expensive and most readily available. Green asparagus has a fresh, woody flavor, while purple varieties tend to have a more fruity flavor. White asparagus is milder in flavor and should always be peeled before cooking.

When shopping for asparagus, look for firm stalks with tight tips. Fresh asparagus should snap when bent. Though best eaten the day purchased, asparagus can be refrigerated, wrapped in a damp cloth inside a plastic bag, for three days.

Though not essential, peeling tough-skinned stalks with a vegetable peeler will help ensure that the tips and otherwise thicker stalks cook at the same rate. And be sure to rinse all asparagus thoroughly before cooking to remove any lingering sand.

For this simple asparagus and potato soup, all the vegetables are roasted at high heat, caramelizing their natural sugars and enhancing the flavors. They then are pureed until smooth and combined with thick, nonfat Greek-style yogurt, which gives the soup a creamy quality that belies its low-fat nutritional profile.

To top off the soup, shreds of sweet and salty prosciutto ham are crisped in a skillet to create a garnish that has all the appeal of crumbled bacon, without all the grease.

ROASTED ASPARAGUS AND POTATO SOUP

Start to finish: 1 hour (15 minutes active). Servings: 4.

6 cloves garlic
1 1/4 pounds asparagus, bottoms trimmed, cut into 1-inch pieces (about 3 cups)
2 cups peeled and diced Yukon Gold potatoes
1 medium sweet onion, cut into 6 wedges
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1/2 teaspoon salt, plus more to taste
1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper, plus more to taste

2 ounces prosciutto, chopped
3 cups chicken broth, divided
6 ounces nonfat plain Greek-style yogurt
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon minced fresh tarragon

Heat the oven to 425 degrees.

Place the garlic on a square of foil and sprinkle with 1 teaspoon water. Fold the foil into a packet. Set aside.

In a large bowl, combine the asparagus, potatoes, onion, oil, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon of black pepper. Toss to coat. Spread the vegetables over 2 large, rimmed baking sheets. Place the packet of garlic in one corner of one of the sheets. Roast, stirring occasionally, until the asparagus pieces are soft and the potatoes are tender, 35 to 45 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a small skillet over medium, crisp the prosciutto, about 5 minutes per side.

When the vegetables are roasted, empty the garlic onto the baking sheet with the other vegetables and cool for 5 minutes.

Transfer half of the vegetables into a blender. Add 1 1/2 cups of the broth, then blend until smooth. Transfer to a large pot. Repeat using the remaining vegetables and remaining 1 1/2 cups of broth. Warm the soup over medium heat.

Whisk the yogurt, lemon juice and tarragon into the soup. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Crumble the prosciutto and use to top each serving.

Farley Granger, best known for Hitchcock film roles, dies at 85

Los Angeles Times

Farley Granger, a handsome young leading man during Hollywood's post-World War II era who was best known for his starring roles in the Alfred Hitchcock suspense thrillers "Strangers on a Train" and "Rope," has died. He was 85.

Granger died of natural causes Sunday at his home in Manhattan, said a spokeswoman for the New York City medical examiner's office.

In a career that began as a teenager when he was discovered in a local play by a casting director for producer Samuel Goldwyn, Granger made his film debut as a Russian youth in the 1943 film "The North Star."

He went on to star in movies such as Nicholas Ray's 1949 noir masterpiece "They Live by Night," Anthony Mann's 1950 crime drama "Side Street" and Luchino Visconti's 1954 period romantic comedy "Senso."

"Slim and handsome, he possessed a sensitivity that could suggest a dark side to his characters as well as their vulnerability," film reviewer Kevin Thomas, then a Los Angeles Times staff writer, wrote in 2003.

Granger, in 1948

In the 1948 film "Rope" with James Stewart, Granger and John Dall play two young friends who commit a murder and hide the body in their apartment. Hitchcock famously shot the film in uninterrupted 10-minute takes.

In Hitchcock's 1951 classic "Strangers on a Train," Granger plays a tennis champion whose chance meeting with a suave psychopath on a train threatens to destroy his life.

"He played sensitive, romantic and sometimes doomed heroes," Thomas said Tuesday, noting that Granger "had a natural elegance and grace."

Gerhard John Bertus

Oct. 22, 1917–March 28, 2011

Born Oct. 22, 1917, to Monno Bertus and Anna Williams in Tacoma, Wash., Gerhard John Bertus was the first child of three and the only son.

His early childhood was spent in Troutdale, Ore., where his parents owned a small dairy. Losing his mother at age 8 to a sudden illness and working with his father on the dairy farm helped to form his strong work ethics. He lost his father at age 17 and moved to Tacoma to live with his aunt. He graduated from Stadium High School there and worked at various jobs, including a bleach processing plant.

With the bombing of Pearl Harbor, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy and served in the Atlantic on a destroyer as a radioman. He met his bride, Helen Joan Funk, during this time and they were married in 1944.

Four children followed over the next 15 years, David Monno, John Reinhardt, Christine Elizabeth and Ann Isabel. John supported his family through employment with the Sioux Honey Association. His talents with fixing and maintaining machinery and his strong work ethic helped him progress within the company.

After a transfer to their Anaheim, Calif., plant and later a transfer to their Wendell, Idaho, plant, he finished his career as the plant manager.

His retirement years were spent with his loves, his wife, Joan; his kids and grandkids; fishing; and woodworking.

After a frightening pedestrian accident involving disabled son, John, he contributed to Wendell's spotlight fund by offering hand-made bird houses as donation incentives.

John entered Heaven's door early on Monday, March 28, 2011, from his home in Wendell. Now he's walking with the Master Carpenter and the Fisher of Men.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his sisters, Margaret and Jean; and his wife, Joan. He will be missed by his children, David (Jenna) Bertus of Sagle, Idaho, John R. Bertus of Wendell, Idaho, Christine (Douglas) Schrenk of North Bend, Wash., and Ann (Bob) Fraser of Victoria, B.C., Canada; his grandkids, Sgt. Perry (Michele) Bertus, Christopher J. Bertus, Megan C. Schrenk and Elizabeth (Matthew) Olson; and great-grandson, Tyler Bertus; and will be fondly remembered by many nieces and nephews, his special friends and neighbors.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, April 1, at the Living Waters Presbyterian Church in Wendell, with Pastor Jim Keegan officiating. G. John Bertus will be buried next to his bride at the Wendell Cemetery.

Funeral services are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service Wendell Chapel.

Are you throwing sodium out with the soup water?

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

How much of the sodium in a can of soup is absorbed by the solid contents, and how much remains in the liquid? I would think the solid contents would absorb so much of the salt that there would be less in the liquid. You guessed it: To reduce sodium, I eat the solids and throw out the liquid.

That's probably impossible to answer, says Anna LaBarre, a registered dietitian in Durham, N.C., with the Rice Diet Program, which works with patients on weight loss and heart disease through a whole-foods, no-salt-added diet. For one thing, the solids in soup vary so much. The pasta in a chicken and noodle soup might absorb a very different amount from the vegetables in a minestrone.

The only study LaBarre knew of that comes close looked at canned beans. That study found that if you rinse canned beans, you can remove as much as 40 percent of the sodium. But the liquid in canned beans is very different from the stock in a canned soup.

You also might be losing valuable nutrients by discarding the soup liquid. When you boil vegetables, much of the nutrients end up in the cooking liquid. But if you consume the liquid, you still get the benefits. That's why soup can be such a healthful food.

Instead of discarding the liquid, LaBarre suggests that it would make more sense to simply find a low-sodium canned soup and eat the whole thing. When you look at the labels, make sure it says "low-sodium," which means it has no more than 140 milligrams of sodium per serving. If it says reduced-sodium or lower-sodium, it may still be too high in sodium.

And if the low-sodium soup doesn't taste as good to you at first, be patient: Your taste buds adjust to less sodium. Within a couple of weeks, it will probably taste much better to you.

Filer softball beats Buhl

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

FILER — This win has been a long time coming for Filer's group of 10 seniors.

After being beaten up and swept by the Buhl Indians the past two seasons, Filer offered a little payback Tuesday, beating Buhl 10-2 in convincing fashion.

"We've been working for this our whole high school career," said Filer starting pitcher Taylor Barlogi.

Barlogi was in the circle the last time Filer beat Buhl her freshman year, but since then it's been all Indians in the battle between the two Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference rivals, including losses of 16-0, 13-3 and 15-5 last season.

"It's of course always a great feeling to beat Buhl. We've been through tough times here at Filer the last few years, but I have a feeling that this is our year," said Filer coach Todd Mansfield.

"It's been a long time coming and they're due."

Barlogi pitched seven solid innings with her only hiccup coming in the first inning as Kendyl Hamilton jacked a two-run homer. After settling down, Barlogi struck out six and gave up only four more hits the rest of the game.

"She (Hamilton) usually hits one homer off me. That one ball got away from me and it was a meat ball for her," Barlogi said. "It always makes you a little nervous giving up a home run in the first inning, but I was able to get back into the game and settle down and we got a great win today."

Knotted up 2-2 through five innings, Filer exploded in the bottom of the sixth for seven runs on eight hits — important insurance runs against Buhl's usually potent lineup.

"With these guys you never like to be in that spot, up by only a run or two, so it was great for our bats to get going that inning," Mansfield said.

THE SPUDMAN CHALLENGE Times-News writer to train for triathlon

I have no idea what I've gotten myself into. For the past four years, I've covered the Spudman Triathlon in Burley. Each year somebody tries to convince me to put down my notebook and give it a try.

"Maybe next year," I always say, never intending to actually train for the 1.5-kilometer swim, 40-kilometer bike ride and 10-kilometer run.

Since this year is the Spudman's 25th anniversary, I've been thinking of cool new ways to commemorate the race and provide special coverage. Then I heard a rumor that someone had signed me up. Oh boy.

Growing up, I always envisioned a career as a sportswriter. One of my heroes was George Plimpton, with his unique style of participatory journalism. To my knowledge, no local sports reporter has ever done the Spudman.

I pitched the idea to my editors, and they bought it — of course they did, they're not the ones who have to train. I suggested that my colleague Stephen Meyers do it instead. But that would be too easy, they said, because he's already a runner. That's no fun.

So that's it. I'm starting from scratch, training for the Spudman and writing about it.

The race is July 30, exactly four months from today. From now until then, I will provide a series of articles and columns for the Times-News, as well as additional stories and blogs at Magicvalley.com. In addition, I have created a Facebook account (search: Times-News Ryan Howe) to make this an interactive experience. Feel free to post comments, encouragement, condolences, questions and story ideas.

Follow my progress from overweight couch potato to Spudmuffin.

For experienced triathletes, I hope this series will entertain, as a newbie fumbles his way into your world.

For folks like me, whose sofa cushion is permanently contoured to the shape of my fanny, I hope to prove that if I can do this, just about anyone can. If you live vicariously through me, great. If you feel inclined to train along with me, even better. We can take this journey together.

I had no idea where to begin, so to help kick start my training I called upon local race guru Alice Schenk, who besides being a super human being might also very well be superhuman.

Harrellson rises from comic relief to cult figure

By Will Graves
Associated Press writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky center Josh Harrellson could hear the murmurs when the NCAA ruled freshman big man Enes Kanter permanently ineligible in January.

The thought was the Wildcats were done without the highly recruited Kanter. That they couldn't thrive relying on Harrellson, a little-used reserve who played all of 88 minutes as junior, to serve as their only post presence.

Harrellson tried not to take it personally. He knows better than most how good Kanter is and even offered to give up his senior year if it meant Kanter — sidelined for accepting improper benefits while playing for a Turkish club team two years ago — could take his place.

"I wanted him to play more than anybody," Harrellson said. "Well, maybe coach (John Calipari) wanted him to play more."

And the rest of one of college basketball's most ardent fan bases.

Harrellson was considered too goofy, too slow, too inconsistent to be considered a legitimate threat at either end of the floor.

This is the same kid who once skipped a game as a freshman in high school to go deer hunting, who had

Twin Falls girls, Burley boys win

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — After remaining undefeated on the young season by winning their doubles match against Burley on Tuesday, Twin Falls juniors Carly Athay and Rachel Webster proudly wore their Idaho State Tennis Championships sweatshirts. It's a simple reminder of where they've been, and where they hope to go.

"We're hoping to perfect our strategy and our games," Webster said. "We definitely want to be first at districts and go to state, and just play the best we can."

Athay and Webster, who went to the state tournament last year and took the eventual state champs to a third set, helped the Twin Falls girls score an impressive 5.5-0.5 victory over Burley on Tuesday. The Bruins swept all singles and girls doubles matches.

The Bruins return both of their girls doubles teams that qualified for state last season — Athay and Webster, and Natalie White and Kayla Ash.

"I feel like we communicated really well," said Athay. "We work really good together. When we communicate, that helps and we keep each other up."

Webster said that playing together for the second year "is definitely an upper hand, because people who haven't been playing long together don't know how to communicate or how the other person plays. We're both used to each other's style, how we volley and how we play our ground strokes."

Karin Olsen, Haley Hutchinson and Brittani Pierce each won singles matches for Twin Falls.

"The first set you have to get used to how they play, so by the second set I did better," said Olsen, a sophomore. "So far (the season) is going good. We haven't had very many practices because of the weather, but I think we're all having fun and we're trying our best."

For the boys, Burley narrowly defeated Twin Falls 3.5 to 2.5, with three matches coming down to a third set.

Burley swept boys doubles, with the teams of Korrd Carpenter and Christian Hansen, and Brandon Bean and Carygn Harris.

Day of reckoning as players detail drug use

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One by one, they walked down the aisle of Courtroom 10 and took a seat on the witness stand for their public day of reckoning.

First Jason Giambi, the 2000 American League MVP. Then his brother Jeremy. And finally Marvin Benard, Barry Bonds' San Francisco Giants teammate.

In the biggest mass confession to steroids use in baseball history, the trio testified Tuesday at Bonds' trial. They all said they purchased and used performance-enhancing drugs from Greg Anderson, the trainer who is in jail for his refusal to testify against Bonds.

"I understood what it was. A steroid," Jeremy Giambi said.

All three had told their stories to a grand jury in 2003, and many details of that testimony were published by the San Francisco Chronicle the following year. And the Mitchell Report in December 2007 detailed the rise of baseball's Steroids Era.

But that was on paper. On Tuesday, the players were forced to answer questions in public from a federal prosecutor about how, when and why they took performance-enhancing drugs.

While Jason Giambi was a cleanup hitter for most of his career, the former Oakland and New York Yankees star led off the athlete testimony on the afternoon of the trial's sixth day. Now a 40-year-old first baseman for the Colorado Rockies, he said he first met Anderson when the trainer accompanied Bonds on the All-Star tour of Japan following the 2002 season — just before the onset of drug testing in baseball. Giambi and Bonds were separated by only an empty locker in the All-Star clubhouse, and Giambi was aware that Anderson worked with Bonds.

When they returned to the U.S., Jason Giambi flew from his home in Henderson, Nev., to meet Anderson in the Bay Area, and Anderson said he would have Giambi's blood tested to determine whether he was deficient in

Mathews leads Kimberly sweep of Glenns Ferry

Times-News

Kimberly pitcher Clay Mathews tossed a complete game in his first outing of the season, allowing two runs on four hits with five strikeouts and a walk as the Bulldogs downed Glenns Ferry 5-2. Kimberly also took in Game 2, beating the Pilots 13-3 in six innings.

“For being early in the year, Clay pitched really well,” said Kimberly coach Tom Myers.

James Higginbotham led the offensive attack for Kimberly in Game 1 going 2-for-3 with two doubles and driving in three RBIs. Seth Champlin also had a double.

In Game 2, Glenns Ferry held a 3-2 lead into the home half of the fourth when Kimberly exploded for six runs and never looked back. The middle of the lineup (Seth Morris, Seth Champlin, Jordan Gentry) was responsible for driving in 11 runs as the Bulldogs pounded out 12 hits. Champlin had five RBIs and added two more doubles and Higginbotham had a hom run and picked up the win in relief.

Kimberly (3-0) hosts Filer on Thursday.

Mansfield, Tasha Nelson, Katie Williams and Moriah Boone each singled and Erin Tyree hit a two-run double to open up the rout of the Indians, who got two runners on in the seventh, but couldn't bring anybody home.

“We have many new faces out there and in that sixth inning the wheels just fell off for us,” said first-year Buhl coach Derek Brinkman.

Boone finished 2-for-4 with two runs scored and a triple and Hamilton was 1-for-3 with the two-run homer. The Indians fall to 2-1 (0-1 SCIC), while Filer improves to 4-0 (1-0 SCIC) — a good start for a team that has occupied the bottom of the league standings in recent seasons.

Baylor center Brittney Griner (42) is defended by Texas A&M forward Kelsey Assarian (40) during the first half of an NCAA women's college basketball tournament regional final, Tuesday in Dallas.

Texas A&M beats Baylor for Final Four

DALLAS — Sydney Carter scored 22 points and Texas A&M finally beat Baylor, 58-46 on Tuesday night to send the Aggies to their first Final Four in school history.

Texas A&M (31-5) had lost eight straight games against its Big 12 rival, including the previous three this season.

When it counted most, the Aggies scored the first seven points in the Dallas Regional championship and led throughout the game.

Baylor (34-3) and All-American post player Britney Griner will have to settle for the Big 12 regular season and tournament trophies the still-young Bears already won this season.

Griner, the 6-foot-8 standout sophomore coming off a career-high 40 points, had 20 points and nine rebounds.

CONNECTICUT 75, DUKE 40
PHILADELPHIA — Maya Moore scored 28 points, including the 3,000th of her career, to lead top-seed Connecticut to a 75-40 win over Duke on Tuesday night and another trip to the Final Four.

UConn is now two victories away from winning its third straight national championship that would match the school's own run from 2002-04 and Tennessee's from 1996-98.

Next up is Notre Dame on Sunday in the national semifinals. The two Big East teams are plenty familiar with each other, having played three times this season already. UConn won all of those matchups including a 73-64 victory in the Big East tournament championship game.

Once again rural Storrs, Conn., is the center of the college basketball world as both the men's and women's teams are in the Final Four. It's the third time in the past seven years that both programs have advanced this far with 2004 culminating in dual titles.

Thunder squander late lead but edge Warriors in OT

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Durant scored 39 points, Russell Westbrook hit the winning free throw with 11.4 seconds left in overtime and the Oklahoma City Thunder finished their longest homestand of the season with a 115-114 victory against the Golden State Warriors on Tuesday night.

Durant scored eight of Oklahoma City's nine points in overtime, but served as a decoy to create room along the right side of the lane as Westbrook drove to the basket and got fouled.

Westbrook missed his first free throw, but made the second to put the Thunder on top.

Monta Ellis' jumper from the top of the key was wide right at the final buzzer.

Stephen Curry led Golden State with 35 points, David Lee had 24 points, and 15 rebounds and Ellis had 20 points and 11 assists.

CAVALIERS 102, HEAT 90

CLEVELAND — In an unbearable season of losses, Cleveland got the win it wanted most. The Cavaliers took down LeBron James.

Despite blowing a 23-point lead, the Cavs battled back and beat the Miami Heat 102-90 on Tuesday night, getting a dose of revenge against James, who was making his second homecoming visit to Cleveland since leaving the city as a free agent last summer.

J.J. Hickson scored 21 points and Anthony Parker had 20 for the Cavs, who were embarrassed by James and the Heat 118-90 on Dec. 2 — a night when Cleveland fans unleashed their hatred on the superstar.

This time, James left the floor hanging his head. He finished with 27 points, 12 assists and 10 rebounds.

ROCKETS 112, NETS 87

NEWARK, N.J. — Kyle Lowry had 16 points, 10 assists and seven rebounds and the Houston Rockets moved within two games of the final playoff berth in the Western Conference with a victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Kevin Martin added 20 points as the Rockets (39-35) posted their sixth win in seven games and inched closer to idle eighth-place Memphis (41-33) with eight games left in the regular season.

Brook Lopez had 22 points for the Nets, who lost their third in a row and seventh in eight games. Deron Williams missed his sixth straight game for New Jersey (23-50), which has lost 50 games for the second straight season.

Alabama bats Colorado to advance to NIT title game

NEW YORK — JaMychal Green scored 22 points, Trevor Releford scored the go-ahead basket in the closing seconds, and top-seeded Alabama withstood a late rally to beat Colorado 62-61 in the NIT semifinals Tuesday night.

Releford finished with 13 points for the Crimson Tide (25-11), who advanced to play Wichita State on Thursday night for the title. The Shockers beat Washington State 75-44 in the other semifinal game at Madison Square Garden.

Alabama trailed 61-60 with 12 seconds left when Releford slipped by Marcus Relphorde along the baseline and scored the go-ahead basket. After a time-out, Colorado got the ball into the hands of star sophomore Alec Burks, whose off-balanced shot at the buzzer clanked off the rim.

WICHITA STATE 75, WASHINGTON STATE 44
NEW YORK — Garrett

Stutz came off the bench to score a career-high 24 points, and Wichita State romped past Washington State in another impressive performance that put the Shockers in the NIT championship game.

Stutz also had 11 rebounds for Wichita State (28-8), which surpassed the 1954 team for the most wins in school history.

Cowboys WR Bryant sued for $850,000-plus

DALLAS (AP) — In the 18 months before Dez Bryant signed with the Dallas Cowboys, he apparently spent like a superstar.

He bought at least seven men's watches and two more for women. He paid $65,500 for a diamond cross made of white gold and $60,000 for a custom charm. He ordered a set of dog tags made of white gold and diamonds, and all sorts of other rings, earrings, bracelets and necklaces in various shades of gold, nearly all crammed with diamonds.

And finally, according to a pair of Texas lawsuits, Bryant ponied up for tickets to Cowboys and Mavericks playoff games, and to see LeBron James play. He also acquired some cash, at least $35,000.

Bryant got it all through a line of credit set up by his adviser, the lawsuits say, all with the understanding that he'd settle up once he signed his first pro contract.

But eight months after striking a deal that included $8.5 million guaranteed from the Cowboys, Bryant is facing two claims from people who say they are tired of waiting to get paid. A man from the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and a New York company, are seeking a total of $861,350, plus interest and attorneys fees.

Bryant's attorney, state Sen. Royce West, declined comment on the specifics in the lawsuits, calling them "sheer allegations."

"What we're seeing is Dez Bryant being singled out," West said. "There are lawsuits. They will be resolved."

Bryant is a dazzling receiver and punt returner, but his character and maturity have often been questioned. That's widely considered the reason he went from a likely top-10 pick in last year's draft to No. 24.

Since he joined the Cowboys, he's made plenty of off-the-field headlines. He spent $54,896 on a single meal, and then there was the Dolphins executive who got punished for asking in a pre-draft interview whether Bryant's mother was a prostitute.

Just last week, Bryant got into a ruckus at an upscale Dallas mall. A shouting match with an off-duty police officer, stemming from him and his friends wearing their pants too low, led to him being banned from the premises for a few days.

The latest revelation, about debt Bryant ran up be-

Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Dez Bryant apparently began living the lifestyle of a wealthy professional athlete months before he became a first-round draft pick, loading up on gold and diamond jewelry plus tickets to watch LeBron James play, all on the promise of paying for it once he signed with an NFL team.

fore he was drafted, raises the question of how much more he's spent since then.

Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said the team had no comment.

for tickets and $11,000 in loans.

Hunt said in the lawsuit that a buy-now, pay-later system was set up by David Wells, Bryant's adviser and a co-defendant in the case. Hunt said he's known Wells for more than 10 years, and that they used a similar arrangements the year before with Wells' cousin — Michael Crabtree, the stand-out receiver at Texas Tech who was a first-round pick of the San Francisco 49ers.

"Mr. Crabtree ended up doing exactly what he said he would do, so my client felt pretty comfortable," said Hunt's attorney, Beth Ann Blackwood.

Bryant and Wells signed 17 receipts from January 2009 to July 2010, the lawsuit said. The longest wait between purchases was 2 1/2 months.

Smart's rise no shock to those who know him best

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press writer

When Shaka Smart found out his social studies teacher was also a basketball coach, the seventh-grader would hang around his desk every day, talking about Magic Johnson or the latest move he was perfecting on the playground.

"He was this effervescent, bubbly, bouncy, chatty little guy," Kevin Bavery remembered Tuesday. "He was clearly different and driven and passionate."

Still is.

By taking VCU, a team many didn't even think belonged in the NCAA tournament, to the Final Four at just 33, Smart has become the coach of the moment, the prospect at the top of everyone's wish list. There is substance behind that stylish name, however — a maturity, perspective and vision that are trademarks of the game's greatest coaches.

If Smart and Butler's Brad Stevens are the cornerstones of the future, their generation's Dean Smiths or Coach Ks, Smart's friends and mentors say the game will be in good hands. The young coaches face each other Saturday night, when VCU plays Butler in the most unlikely of national semifinals, a matchup of mid-majors in a game usually reserved for powerhouses.

"Shaka and Brad are two young guys who were given an opportunity, and they've absolutely ran with it," Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said. "I think it's good for our game because they're good guys who are good coaches."

Smart grew up in Oregon, Wis., a village of fewer than 10,000 people about 10 miles south of Madison. His father, who named him after 19th-century African warrior Shaka Zulu, left the family early, and he was raised by his mother. She didn't have many rules, but her sons knew better than to bring home a bad grade.

"And sometimes a bad grade was as high as a B," Smart recalled. "So I had to excel in the classroom. I didn't really have a choice."

Smart's love for basketball began with his grandfather, Walter King, who lived in Chicago and would send Smart packages of basketball-related articles. King died early Tuesday at 90.

A standout point guard Smart dreamed of playing Division I basketball, maybe getting a shot at the NBA. After a few trips to all-star shootouts in Chicago, however, he realized he likely would get very little playing time, and would probably be better off at a Division III program.

Accepted at Harvard, Yale and Brown, Smart instead chose to take an academic scholarship at Kenyon College, a small private school in Gambier, Ohio, and play for Bill Brown.

"Bill Brown is probably the closest I had, definitely the closest I had to a father figure in my life," Smart said. "Going to Kenyon was an easy decision."

Smart spent two years at California, working camps in his free time. It was at one of those camps that he caught the eye of Dayton coach Oliver Purnell, who offered him a job as director of basketball operations.

Two years later, Smart was hired as an assistant at Akron by Keith Dambrot, LeBron James' high school coach.

Smart joined Billy Donovan's staff at Florida in 2008. A year later, he was hired by VCU.

"I remember sitting with him quite a bit when he was an assistant at Akron and I was an assistant here, and he was one of those guys who came across and you could tell he was pretty darn good at this thing," Stevens said.

Smart said he has taken bits and pieces of his schemes from his different mentors.

But it is his own personality, his confidence, that has made the mixture so special, as unique as his first name.

"He's like a best friend," VCU point guard Joey Rodriguez said. "You can talk to him about anything. When you've got a guy like that leading the way, it's easy for us to come out here and perform and have a good time."

Schenk has participated in 22 of the 24 Spudmans, finished three Ironman races and 31 marathons. She's has logged more than 44,000 miles — that's like crossing the United States 15 times — and was once the fastest woman marathoner in Idaho.

"Do you need a doctor's approval?" Schenk asked. "Has it been that long?"

Depends. How long ago was "never"? I played football and basketball in high school, so the farthest I've ever run is 100 yards, or until the next whistle.

"Do you swim?"

I took swim lessons when I was 7.

"Do you own a bike?"

I haven't ridden a bike since the neon green Huffly I got for my 10th birthday.

Still, for unknown reasons, Schenk agreed to help me train.

She has no idea what she's gotten herself into.

likes to wear regardless of the unpredictable Bluegrass weather. Many felt there was no way the Wildcats could be considered a legitimate Final Four threat with Harrellson as the enforcer. But the end of Kanter's season became the beginning of Harrellson's renaissance.

The player considered an afterthought in October is owning March while leading the Wildcats to their first Final Four in 13 years. Kentucky (29-8) plays Connecticut (30-9) in Houston on Saturday for a spot in the national title game.

"When Josh heard Enes couldn't play, he changed his mentality," said Kentucky guard DeAndreiggins. "He started to do all his extra stuff to make him better."

Technically, Harrellson

didn't have a choice. Calipari's punishment for Harrellson running off at the Twitter was to make him run until he puked on the court. He ordered Harrellson to endure conditioning drills before each practice.

Calipari was trying to get Harrellson to quit. Harrellson did the opposite.

Suddenly the kid who admits he only picked up the game because he was tall and good at it, but couldn't play more than a handful of minutes without asking to come out, was running the floor alongside Calipari's latest batch of McDonald's All-Americans.

He scored 23 points and grabbed 14 rebounds in a win over Louisville on New Year's Eve and led the Southeastern Conference in rebounding, averaging 8.8 in league play.

"zinc" and "magnesium." When the results came back, Anderson informed Giambi his sample was positive for the steroid Deca-Durabolin.

"He told me that would trip the Major League Baseball test, and I should look into taking something else," said Jason Giambi, wearing a blue suit, white shirt with checks and black-red-and-white striped tie. "He said he would send me a package of things that I needed."

By mid-December, Anderson sent testosterone to Giambi along with syringes and vitamins.

"Did you understand that to be a steroid?" Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeffrey D. Nedrow asked.

"Yes," Giambi answered.

Steven Barson was a winner, while Dallas Hunt and Chris Delacruz won for Twin Falls.

The Bobcats and Bruins split their mixed doubles matches. Alex Greener and Makena Haynie won for Burley, while Tucker Smith and Emily Kemp were victorious for Twin Falls.

"It was the first time we've played together, so I thought it was pretty good for us," Greener said. "As a team, we're a young team. A lot of them are brand new, so it's their first matches and first year playing. But we're doing pretty good."

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 21 years, and the past eight or 10 of them haven't been good. I have tried to get my wife to go camping, out to dinner or to bluegrass concerts we both love. I can't convince her to do any of these things with me. But when her sister calls wanting her to go somewhere, she's gone and stays out all day.

About two years ago I started going out alone to clubs that feature bluegrass music on Fridays and Saturdays. I met a wonderful lady at one of them and we have gotten close. I have told her I love her. We have a lot in common, and she cares for me, too. I have not been unfaithful to my wife (yet), but I don't know how much more I can handle. I am lonely and miserable.

Abby, I don't know what to do. Please advise before I do something stupid. I'm an avid reader of your column and I trust your advice.

— TEMPTED DOWNSOUTH

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR TEMPTED: Marriage is like a garden. If it isn't tended and fertilized occasionally, it withers. It appears you and your wife stopped communicating not long after your 10th anniversary.

Sneaking around is not the answer to your problem. It's unfair to your wife and to the woman you say you love. So man up and offer your wife the option of intensive marriage counseling — if you want to save your marriage and your assets, that is. But do not pursue the extramarital relationship until and unless you are free to do so.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to a wonderful guy for four years, and I'm fortunate to have nice and caring in-laws. My only issue with them is the personal questions they ask — like how much money people make.

Abby, they know exactly how much their children make, as well as the amount of their son-in-law's salary. Once I'm out of graduate school and settled into my career, I know they will ask me.

I feel my finances are my personal business and no one else's — especially if my husband and I are living comfortably. How do I handle the situation when my in-laws ask me about my income? I don't want to be rude, but I think it's intrusive and too personal.

— NOT QUOTING FIGURES

DEAR NOT QUOTING: Start now and tell your husband — if you haven't already — how you feel about questions about how much people earn. That way he'll be less inclined to "spill" when his parents start pumping him for the information. When they ask you, say that you are not comfortable with that question because you feel it is too personal. Smile when you say it, and remember you are not obligated to answer every question someone asks of you.

DEAR ABBY: I have been estranged from our grandchildren for nine years. One of them is now 18 and we would like to reach out and contact her, but have no idea how to do it. We don't know what caused the estrangement with her parents, but we have never stopped loving our grandchildren. How do you contact someone who isn't in the phone book, is of age and across the country?

— BONNEY JEAN IN HAWAII

DEAR BONNEY: You have written to me for so many years, I feel like I know you. My heart goes out to you in this — I'm sorry to say — not uncommon predicament. A way to locate your granddaughter would be to do it via a Google search. I wish you luck.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"They draw, they sit, they shuffle, cut and deal, Like friends assembled, but like foes to feel."

— George Crabbe

Sitting South in the balancing seat, you are far too good simply to bid two hearts, and a jump to three hearts, while it should not be weak (or you might have passed), should be intermediate, say 13-16 with a good six-card suit. Accordingly, you should plan to double, then jump in hearts, to suggest close to a strong jump overcall in hearts, allowing North to appreciate his collection of 3 queens and a jack and raise to game.

West starts off accurately by cashing his side's two diamond winners and exiting passively with a trump. Declarer appears to need a minor miracle in spades or the doubleton club queen, but he can do much better than that. He draws trumps ending in hand and leads a low spade toward the queen. Assuming West can bring himself to duck, you take both club winners and exit from hand with the spade king, hoping to drop either the spade jack or 10 from East. If that happens, then West is on lead and either has to open up the spades to provide you with a discard for your club loser, or play a diamond to allow you to ruff on the board and pitch your club loser.

Assuming the spades are 5-2 rather than 6-1 (likely because West did not try to give his partner a spade ruff), this line succeeds whenever East began with a doubleton jack or 10, about a 50 percent chance.

ANSWER: If your partner had doubled in the direct seat, then raised you in a noncompetitive auction, he would be suggesting four trumps and a hand somewhat better than a strong no-trump. By contrast, since his balancing double promised less, this auction suggests about a 16-count and four trumps. Your soft cards make this decision easy — pass.

IF MARCH 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Find ways to improve your physical condition by being more enterprising and outgoing in the next few weeks. Groups and clubs might subtract quality time that you could spend with loved ones, so beg off from community activities. Planetary conditions in August dictate the wisdom of avoiding anything that could impact your financial security, such as taking on credit card debt or making a job change. A more inspirational attitude might kick in by September when you can put what you learned into action. Look forward to mid-December when your efforts may pay off with a raise or an auspicious opportunity might appear out of the blue.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You've got the power. You appear more appealing and desirable than usual, so people in general are more than willing to compromise. This could be a good time to ask for favors or to promote your cause.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try a little tenderness. It isn't necessary to be all work and no play. Go out with the guys or gals from work as a budding office romance could blossom or a new business contact might prove fascinating.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be cheerful about your chances. Singles might find the one they have been searching for in the least likely places and happy couples can share hours of romantic bliss under these very favorable stars.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Just because it is the middle of the week doesn't mean there is no time for fun. It is a fabulous evening for parties, entertainment, and love. You possess especially good taste so can buy something special.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When you fall in love, it helps to have a golden parachute to soften the landing. You can make helpful connections that not only help fatten your piggy bank, but also inspire you to be the best that you can be.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A relationship can escape from a rut. You can turn on the charm and sweep someone special off his or her feet. You appear a bit more appealing than usual and your judgment seems wiser than Saul's.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Forge an especially sweet alliance of affection. Under these benevolent stars, you can make a promise or commitment and know it will be fulfilled. This is a good day to let a loved one know your feelings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is no need to screen or block your calls. Speak what's on your mind and in your heart. You will find that it is easy to make your desires known and reciprocation from a lover.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone might whisper sweet nothings that mean something. There is a lot more sincerity in a conversation than you dare to believe. Plan to enjoy an evening of sensuous pleasures and delights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Passions won't be postponed. It could be time to make your move or gamble on your business savvy. The rung of a ladder is not meant to rest upon permanently, but is only a means to climb higher.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take pride in commitment and prosper. You are sure to get everybody's attention for your money-making ideas. When conversations stray to making promises you are sure to find a cooperative partner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pay attention to the poetry in your own parlor. This is a good time to make public appearances or invite people to share your joys. Explore the depths of passionate feelings between you and a loved one.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Patio Glider

Warm summer afternoons and evenings offer many opportunities to relax on the patio or porch. And nothing helps relieve the stress of a long, hot day like a cold drink and the gentle motion of a glider. Suspended in its own frame, the seat “glides” back-and-forth instead of rocking or swinging.

A good project for do-it-yourselfers of all skill levels, this glider measures about 53 inches long by 36 inches high by 24 inches deep.

The plan includes step-by-step instructions with 15 photos, full-size traceable patterns, exploded diagrams and a shopping list and cutting schedule.
