Hundreds attend retirement ceremony

Nowadays, Tom Courtney gets more animated when talking about steelhead fishing than he does talking about a city he helped manage for 34 years.

He's not as good at catching the fish as he'd like. But he looks forward to the practice he'll get in the near future, now that he doesn't have a city to run.

It's a well-known sentiment among the hundreds who showed up to his farewell ceremony Thursday afternoon: A new rod, hand-made flies and an expenses-paid fishing trip were among his going-away gifts.

Courtney, 63, has spent more than half his life so far managing the day-to-day operations of the city of Twin Falls. Basically its CEO, he served at the whim of the 32 council members and 11 mayors he's worked with.

F&G names new director

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Idaho wildlife has a new boss. Virgil Moore, 59, of Boise, has been named director of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. The appointment was announced during a news conference Thursday morning in Boise.

"We're going to be able to hit the ground running fast and hard," Moore said in the phone conference with reporters, referring to his knowledge about department functions.

He replaces Cal Groen, who has retired. Moore previously was deputy director of field operations, a position he's held since 2007.

Moore comes to his new position faced with challenges, but says he has a few goals to help tackle them. He described the department's overall performance score as an eight.

The release of 2010 data by the U.S. Census allows us to shine light on population trends we can only guess at between decades. The Times-News looked at the percentage difference between people over 18 and under 18 to find the highest — and fewest — concentrations of kids in south central Idaho. Some of the highlights:

County percentages

No kids allowed?

The towns of Sun Valley and Ketchum had numbers significantly beneath the state average. Sun Valley had only 12 percent of residents under the age of 18, while Ketchum had 14 percent.

Kid boom

Dietrich had the highest concentration of kids under 18. More than 40 percent of the town's residents are still school age.

BOISE — As the spat that's becoming known around the Capitol as the "Slowdown Showdown" hit its second day, Democrats and Republicans again went after each other in a style that befits siblings in the family car's backseat.

Thursday morning's hearing in the State Affairs Committee was another good example of tit-for-tat politics.

Democratic Rep. Phylis King of Boise was pushing a resolution to promote adoption as a state policy. But when fellow Democrat Rep. Elfreda Higgins of Garden City moved to immediately send the measure to the House floor for a vote, Republicans refused — even though most GOP lawmakers support promoting alternatives to possible abortions.

Democrats are forcing bills on the House floor to be read in their entirety. This delay tactic is meant to pressure dominant GOP lawmakers into holding hearings on a cigarette tax hike to shore up education and Medicaid, as well as a separate proposal to

Buhl to pursue levy issue election May 17

Times-News

Buhl School District will seek voter approval of $571,903 in local funding during the May 17 elections.

The one-year supplemental levy issue would fund the district's maintenance and operations costs during the 2011-12 school year. If passed, it would cost property owners within the district $60.53 per every $100,000 of taxable property owned.

"This is the amount we need just to continue to operate," Superintendent Byron Stutzman said. "Otherwise there will need to be a serious butchering of this district."

What you didn't know about Diamondfield Jack

Diamondfield Jack didn't do it. That's hardly news, but Burley resident Clifford Hanks has some fascinating insights into how sheepherders Daniel Cummings and John Wilson were gunned down in the South Hills in what became the most famous murder case in south-central Idaho history.

"My sister found an old document in a trunk belonging to my great-grandmother that relates some of the story of murders that happened in 1896 in the Oakley-Albion area," Hanks said.

According to Hanks, the document was handwritten in pencil on old paper and held together with a pin; he's unsure whether his great-grandmother copied it or it was given to her. It's a first-person account by sheepherder Ted Severe, who discovered the bodies of Cummings and Wilson. (Hanks has posted it on his blog, Masterbias.wordpress.com)

Diamondfield Jack Davis was an itinerant Virginian who kicked around the West before the turn of the 20th century, spending most of his time mining. But after a failed prospecting venture in Silver City, Davis hired on with the Sparks-Harrell cattle company — a massive operation that ran livestock along the Idaho-Nevada border.

At the time, there was a range war brewing between cattlemen and sheepherders over disputed grazing land. It was Davis' job to keep the flocks out of cow country, and after a confrontation that led to the wounding of a shepherd named Bill Tolman, Davis was on the run. But he began working for Sparks-Harrell again the following year and almost immediately, Cummings and Wilson were found dead in their sheep wagon.

Severe found their bodies in late February 1896. Wilson had been shot in the mouth with a .44 caliber bullet fired from a .45 caliber gun, and Cummings was hit in the abdomen and left to die. Shell casings littered the site.

In the waistband of Cummings' trousers, Severe found a note — written with the head of a bullet. It began "If I die," and then the handwriting trailed off. The Cassia County sheriff took it as evidence, but it later disappeared.

Davis was an immediate suspect because of the Tolman shooting, and he was arrested in Arizona Territory trying to flee to Mexico. Tried and convicted in Albion, Davis was sentenced to hang on June 4, 1897, but reprieved on the brink of his execution because two other men had confessed.

After Davis had exhausted his appeals, another execution date was scheduled for July 3, 1901. But the Board of Pardons postponed it until July 17. Just before he was to hang, Davis' sentence was changed to life imprisonment.

"It has been told that the last time Diamondfield was standing on the gallows when the rider came with his stay of execution," Severe wrote.

Davis was moved to the state prison in Boise and eventually pardoned by Gov. Frank W. Hunt.

"The general public felt that justice had been meted out to the right man," Severe wrote of Davis. "But I among others was glad when the news came that he had at long last been pardoned."

Severe ends his saga with a chilling anecdote.

"After the trial had left the front pages and had been forgotten by many, a man who worked for the cattle company used to come and talk to me," Severe wrote. "This man seemed to have a great weight on his mind and conscience, especially when liquor had a little the best of him. The gist of his conversation went like this, and it was always the same: 'I never harmed you, did I Ted?'"

"I have seen the man with tears in his eyes. He'd go on: 'I saw that murder, Ted, it was horrible, the bloodiest thing I ever saw. We drew straws to see who did the killing, Ted, I was lucky I didn't have to do it and Ted you was going to be killed too but you was gone. 'I never harmed you, Ted, did I?'"

BLM seeks members for advisory board

Times-News

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management is looking to fill five open positions on its Twin Falls District Resource Advisory Council.

RACs are composed of citizens chosen for their expertise in natural resource issues — conservationists, ranchers, outdoor recreationists, government officials and others — and advise the BLM on various issues.

The Twin Falls District has two openings for ranching, energy, timber, off-highway vehicle or commercial recreation representatives; two openings for members of environmental, archaeological, historical, dispersed-recreation or wild horse and burro groups; and one opening for elected officials, state natural resource employees, tribal members, academics or the public at large.

Individuals may nominate themselves or others. Nominees must be residents of the district and will be evaluated on their training, education and knowledge of the council's geographical area. They should demonstrate a commitment to consensus-building and collaborative decision-making.

All nominations must be accompanied by letters of reference from any represented interests or organizations, a completed background information nomination form, and any other information that speaks to the nominee's qualifications.

Nominations are due by May 2 to Heather Tiel-Nelson, 736-2352 or hnelson@blm.gov.

House to debate cutting driver's ed

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Idaho would no longer help cover the cost of driver's education classes at public schools, under a bill before the 2011 Legislature.

Republican lawmakers advanced legislation Thursday to strip state funding from driver's ed classes, essentially ending the $125-per student subsidy for programs that have been offered through Idaho's public schools since 1948. The bulk of the money would be redirected into a public school rainy day account.

The changes would leave either students or schools to pick up the slack. Idaho's wannabe teen drivers already pay $180 to $200 of the total $325 cost of driver's ed classes, according to lawmakers behind the measure.

Republican Rep. Steve Thayne of Emmett contends his bill aims to spur debate about education spending.

"It's a matter of priorities," he said. "Should we continue to subsidize each student that takes driver's training from a public school or reallocate those funds back into the classroom?"

Student fees covered roughly half the total $2.3 million cost of public driver's education courses in Idaho schools last year. The state reimbursed school districts for the remaining $1.3 million, at a rate of $125 per student enrolled in the training courses, using money collected from driver's license fees.

The Republican-dominated House Education Committee advanced Thayne's bill on a party-line vote.

Critics, primarily Democrats, contend the legislation jeopardizes access to public driver's training courses and will put the cost out of reach for some families.

"Our rural students are driving and they have a lot of responsibilities, especially in our farming areas. They need to have the training," said Democratic Rep. Donna Pence of Gooding.

State law requires anyone under age 17 applying for a driver's license to complete a driver-training program. About 10,000 students took public driver's ed courses in Idaho school districts last year, according to the state Department of Education.

Supporters of the changes included operators of private driver's ed businesses, who contend the subsidies for public driver's ed programs create an uneven playing field. Private driver's ed courses cost between $325 and $350, lawmakers said.

Idaho Senate votes to limit agricultural nuisance claims

BOISE (AP) — Farmers and ranchers will win new protections from nuisance claims when expanding their operations in a measure headed to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter for signature.

Senate Republicans voted 32-2 Thursday to expand Idaho's "Right to Farm" law.

Under the bill, agricultural operations can't be dubbed a nuisance if they weren't nuisances when they began operations — even if they expand.

As Idaho's rural landscape fills with encroaching suburbia, Sen. Tim Corder argued the need to protect existing farmland and operations that sit on it remains.

Urban Democrats including Sen. Nicole LeFavour of Boise expressed concern about hurting local communities' abilities to manage odor, including from expanding dairies. She still voted for the bill.

Corder says local officials will still use existing regulations, including those governing smells, to make land-use decisions.

“I would like to see us at a 10,” he said. “I would be satisfied with a 9.5.”

“The economy is down,” he added. “One of the things we’ve got to do is make sure our organization is financially sound.”

Ways Moore plans to help make that happen include tackling wildlife issues and opening more dialogue with sportsmen, including organizing a state wildlife congress made up of sportsmen and conservation groups.

Moore said he wants to evaluate the management of elk and mule deer populations — Fish and Game's “bread and butter,” he said — and confront the wolf management issue.

“It’s not just about wolves but about predators,” he said. “Those predators are here to stay. We’ve got to understand and work to manage them.”

As part of courting more extensive conversations with sportsmen, Moore hopes to connect with the younger crowd through social media and other new technology.

“That’s the mindset we’ve got to get ourselves into. That’s the candy jar I want my hands in,” he said.

Moore's career includes having served as director of the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, and in Idaho as Fish and Game's chief of fisheries and head of education and information.

He was selected to his new post out of a pool of six finalists, including three other internal candidates.

In a news release Thursday, Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter thanked Groen for his four years as director of Fish and Game.

“Virgil has some big shoes to fill,” Otter said. “But given his long experience at the department, I believe he can ably handle these new responsibilities.”

“This is family,” Moore said. “I’m looking forward to working with that family and the extended family of sportsmen.”

put a referendum before voters in 2012 on whether public schools chief Tom Luna's disputed education reforms should be repealed.

House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, said he thinks his side is getting its message across.

“What we have done is made legislators uncomfortable,” Rusche said Thursday afternoon. “That’s not necessarily a bad thing.”

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter told reporters he'd leave it up to legislators to decide how long they felt was appropriate to meet to resolve the public's business.

But Otter, who made holding the line on taxes a key theme in his 2010 reelection campaign after his failed 2009 bid to hike gasoline taxes and vehicle registration fees, clearly wasn't excited about the Democrats' push for hiking the cigarette tax by $1.25, from 57 cents a pack.

“What about the people who because of obesity have health care problems, probably more so or equal to what we're suffering in tobacco-related illnesses?” Otter said. “Where do you end that discussion? You have to start with all of it. You can't just single out one product.”

Giving in to Democratic demands isn't an option, said House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley.

“You're just not going to be forced into going there,” he said.

Still, Bedke didn't begrudge the minority party for employing what limited tactics are available to its 13 members as they go up against a 57-member Republican supermajority.

“We would not be above employing these tactics if the shoe were on the other foot,” Bedke said, adding he still thinks the 2011 Legislature will be done by next Friday.

On Thursday morning, Democrats had an opportunity to take their battle beyond the procedural and drop a real stink bomb during the debate over a proposal to extend Idaho's 6 percent sales tax rebate to alternative energy companies.

With 25 conservative Republicans against it, there were enough Democrats to kill the measure, which would have been a blow to Bedke, who helped negotiate a compromise on that bill. They might have used that as a bargaining chip, in exchange for being given hearings on their bills.

After all, Republicans the previous evening weren't above killing a Democrat-sponsored measure — to benefit disabled children — to protest the minority's delay tactics.

When a reporter pointed this out, Rusche said his caucus wouldn't have wanted the rebates, worth tens of millions for wind, geothermal and other alternative energy developers, to be sacrificed as a political hostage.

“We could gum things up, but we won't do it to the extent that it undermines good public policy,” Rusche said. “We're protesters, not anarchists.”

Replica of historic Idaho biplane going to Florida

LEWISTON (AP) — A flight-worthy replica of a biplane built to commemorate Idaho's first powered flight in 1910 has been sold and is headed to Florida.

The replica 1909 Herring-Curtiss Pusher Model D is going to the Fantasy of Flight at Polk City in central Florida after the attraction's founder, Kermit Weeks, purchased it for $60,000.

“Most of his planes are maintained in airworthy condition and every day they fly for people who come to the theme park,” James Otey of Lewiston told the Lewiston Tribune.

“We were hoping it would stay in Lewiston, obviously,” Otey said, adding the offer made by Weeks was too good to turn down. “It was considerably more than anything we had been able to find locally.”

He said it took more than two years for local airplane enthusiasts to build the replica of the aircraft that gave Idaho its first powered flight on Oct. 13, 1910, at the fairgrounds in Lewiston in northern Idaho.

One of those enthusiasts is Dean Wilson of Clarkston,

Wash., who said Fantasy of Flight has another version of the Curtiss Pusher from England that was flown by Weeks.

“He has a fantastic museum and is a good pilot, a world acrobatic champion,” Wilson said.

Otey said the Idaho plane will likely remain at the Lewiston-Nez Perce County Regional Airport for six months before being shipped south.

He said hundreds of thousands of people will likely view the plane at its new home.

Courtney

In his time, he's overseen triple-digit layoffs of city staff when the state changed municipal tax structure, the updating of the city's sewage treatment plant after it was hit with numerous federal fines for polluting the Snake River, and the securing of the city's water rights for decades to come.

But to hear him tell it, it was the luck of working with a pool of talented city workers that overcame those obstacles, not direct actions on his part — illustrating why “humble” is among the most frequent traits others who know Courtney ascribe to him.

“I don't know if it's being humble or being realistic,” he said. “I've never felt it was right for one person to take credit for what took a lot of people.”

Local government is a team sport, Courtney said, and Twin Falls has “very good employees” — a trademark not a lot of communities can claim, he added.

One story he recounts is from last November: A water line broke on Falls Avenue the night before Thanksgiving, a frigid time when temperatures barely hovered above zero.

“I'm standing at the top with lots of clothes on and I'm shivering, and here we've got guys in the hole with running water and they're just intent on fixing this break,” Courtney said. “And I've got stories like that from every department.”

But the stories he doesn't recall, or take credit for, include when federal law in the early 1990s demanded a $25 million filtration system for the city's water source because it was classified as surface water. Councilman Lance Clow directly credits Courtney's ability to get people to examine all the options as the reason the city decided to drill new wells at the same source, eliminating the need for the expensive system and saving the city more than $22 million in the process.

Clow also attributed Courtney's emphasis on examining options as the reason the latter survived in his job for so long. The average city manager stays in the job for less than eight years; the typical city management career is for less than 20, according to the International City Managers Association.

Courtney would always give the City Council options — sometimes making his preferred path obvious, but ultimately letting the council make the decision — and deal with the politics of the decision, Clow said. Courtney also never shot down a council member's idea, he added.

“He knows that if there's a will, there's a way to get it done,” Clow said.

State Rep. Leon Smith, who was Twin Falls' mayor when Courtney was hired as city manager in 1980, said he wasn't thinking at the time about if Courtney would make it in the job for 30 years. It was a risk just promoting him from assistant city manager then, as a young professional who “looked like a kid right out of college,” Smith joked.

“It was just a leap of faith, but we made it, and it was the best decision I ever made on City Council,” Smith said.

It was a decision with 30 years of direct impact, with ripples to be felt in Twin Falls for decades to come.

Now, former Assistant City Manager Travis Rothweiler will step up to take the city's top position, succeeding Courtney.

In retirement, Courtney will spend more time visiting his grandkids in Spokane, Wash., and Kimberly, and better acquaint himself with the intricacies of steelhead fishing. But Twin Falls is still the only place he says he ever wants to call home, and is where he'll continue to live.

Now, he jokes, it's up to Rothweiler to keep it that way.

EDITORIAL

When spite gets in the way of good government

“Power confuses itself with virtue and tends also to take itself for omnipotence.”
— Sen. J. William Fulbright, The Arrogance of Power (1966)

Now let's see if we understand this correctly:
For 52 of the 57 Republican members of the Idaho House of Representatives, poking a finger in the eye of opposition Democrats is more important than helping disabled children with special needs get access to early intervention services.
A Senate-passed bill to do that failed 52-15 in the House on Wednesday in retaliation for Democrats' stalling tactics as the Legislature nears adjournment. Republicans acknowledge that the sole reason it didn't pass was because the legislation's sponsor, Rep. Phylis King of Boise, has a “D” behind her name.

In an effort to get hearings on their proposals for a cigarette tax hike and a referendum on public schools chief Tom Luna's education reforms, House Democrats on Wednesday began forcing bills to be read in their entirety, a tactic meant to slow progress to a crawl.

That's a rather juvenile strategy unlikely to get Democrats what they want, and it's costing taxpayers $30,000 for each day the Legislature in session.

But that's no excuse for Republicans holding special-needs kids hostage.

The three-ring circus that has become the first session of the 61st Idaho Legislature continued Thursday when the House State Affairs Committee spiked King's proposed resolution to promote adoption as state policy, despite the fact that most GOP lawmakers support promoting alternatives to abortion.

These are the actions of a Republican Caucus that believes it's accountable only to itself.

Idahoans don't ask a lot of their lawmakers: fiscal responsibility, integrity and a willingness to do their homework and listen.

Oh, and one other thing:
Behaving like adults.

Five myths about gas prices

Gasoline prices have been steadily climbing for several months, and Americans are feeling the pain at the pump. The possible culprits are as plentiful as the proposed solutions. But what is really driving prices up? And what, if anything, can be done about it? Let's take a moment to fill up on information about our fuel.

Robert Rapier

1. Fighting in Libya is sending gas prices higher.

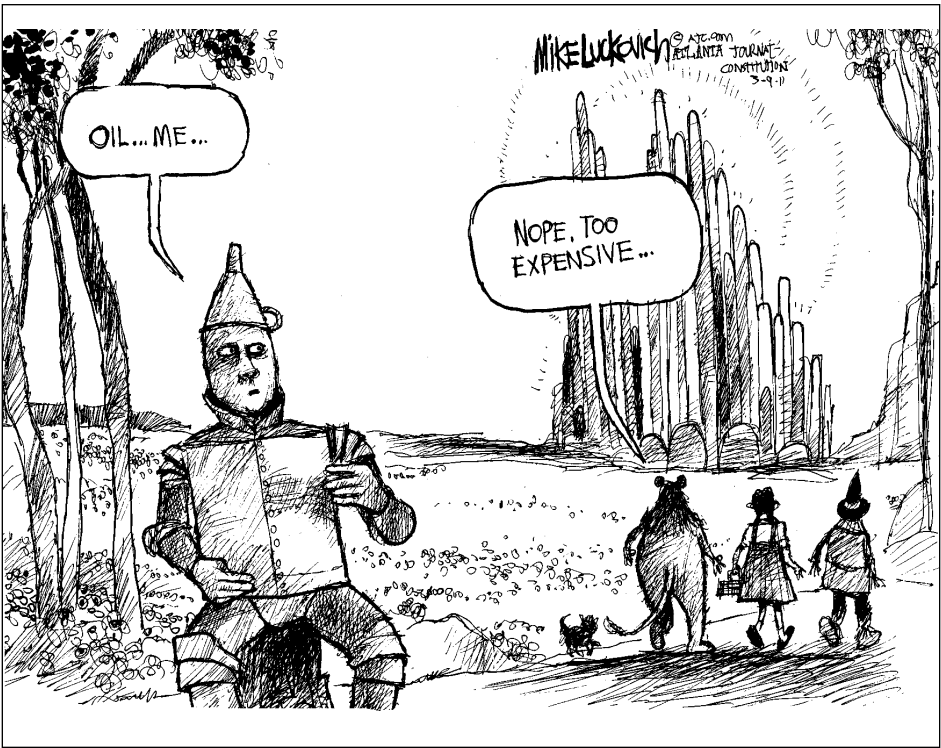

Libya is not a big enough global oil supplier for the battles there to have a meaningful effect on gas prices. We import less than 50,000 barrels per day from Libya — a tiny fraction of the 9.2 million barrels per day the United States imported in 2010. Worldwide, of the 86 million barrels consumed globally each day less than 2 percent come from Moammar Gadhafi's regime.

So why are gas prices up? Though Gadhafi's fate is largely irrelevant to the oil market, unrest throughout the greater Middle East is not. The Persian Gulf region produces almost 24 million barrels of oil per day, more than 25 percent of global oil consumption. The Arab spring that has brought protests to Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain and Yemen makes markets nervous, and when markets fret over a possible disruption to oil supplies, gas prices rise — whether the disruption materializes or not.

2. Tapping the Strategic Petroleum Reserve is a smart way to reduce gas prices.

The U.S. government maintains a 727 million-barrel oil reserve — 38 days' worth at current levels of consumption — to protect against potential supply disruptions. But just about every time prices rise, politicians want to access the oil in the reserve to increase supply and bring prices back down.

But tapping the SPR makes the government an oil speculator, and any nation running record deficits that becomes a commodity trader is playing a dangerous game.

“... why are gas prices up? Though Gadhafi's fate is largely irrelevant to the oil market, unrest throughout the greater Middle East is not.”

The SPR exists to buy time in a true supply emergency. If we use it as a political tool to keep voters happy by stemming rising gas prices, we may be forced to buy back oil at even higher prices.

3. Oil companies produce less in the spring to make gas prices increase.

Almost every year, gasoline prices rise in the spring. At the same time, refineries produce less fuel. This isn't because oil companies want to keep inventories low to drive prices higher. It's because what's in our gasoline — specifically, butane — changes from season to season.

Butane is a cheap ingredient in gasoline that boils at low temperatures. In winter, this isn't a problem. But in summer, butane evaporates from gas, polluting the air while leaving us with less fuel in the tank than we paid for. As temperatures rise, refineries replace butane with more costly ingredients and draw down winter inventories just as beach season begins.

4. The Obama administration is driving up gas prices.

Sen. Mitch McConnell,

R-Ky., says EPA regulations are a “back-door national energy tax” that pushes prices up. Former Alaska governor Sarah Palin says the White House drilling moratorium shows President Barack Obama's “culpability in the high gas prices hurting Americans.”

But even if domestic supplies were developed, American presidents couldn't really control oil prices. The U.S. government has estimated that there are 18 billion barrels of oil in the outer continental shelf of the lower 48 states that are off-limits to development. That may sound like a lot, but it is only about 2 1/2 years of supply for the United States, and it would take several years to allocate leases and drill exploratory wells. Even if the estimated 10 billion barrels of oil in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge were available for development, today's policy decisions would have no impact on gasoline supplies for as much as a decade.

5. Americans can't live without cheap gas.

Yes, Americans love to drive, and Americans love cheap gas. But across an ocean, there's a continent filled with people a lot like us who've lived with high gas prices for years. They're called Europeans.

While U.S. gasoline heads toward $4 per gallon, Europeans have been paying much higher prices for years because of high taxes on fuel. This month in Britain, gas hit $9.76 per gallon. Because gas is so dear, Europe's per capita energy use is half that of the United States, leaving Europe less vulnerable to oil price shocks yet not undermining its citizens' standard of living.

The United States, built on cheap oil, is much less densely populated than the Old World, with more wide-open spaces to traverse. But that doesn't mean we can't embrace some of the things that have helped Europeans keep their gasoline bills down — such as high-speed rail, public transportation and green energy.

In fact, Americans have shown that they can adjust their behavior when faced with sticker shock at the pump. As gas prices rose from $2.31 per gallon in 2005 to $3.30 per gallon in 2008, sales of the Toyota Prius eclipsed those of the Ford Explorer, and public transit use reached a 50-year high. When it costs $30 to fill up a Geo Metro with regular, all options are on the table.

Understanding the true risks of nuclear energy

On March 11, two natural disasters struck Japan: a 9.0-magnitude earthquake and resultant 10-meter tsunami. As the Japanese people struggle with their losses and the beginnings of recovery, our prayers are with them.

Japan relies heavily on nuclear energy to generate its electricity, with 54 reactors nationwide providing nearly a third of its power. The earthquake affected 11 of those reactors, which immediately shut down. The power station at Fukushima Daiichi, the site of six reactors, suffered the most severe blow from the quake and tsunami.

We have all witnessed the efforts of the operators of Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station to limit damage to their reactors and stored used fuel. More importantly, we've seen the nearly around-the-clock work they've performed to minimize potential harm to the public.

In the U.S., we are witnessing and participating in two tests. The first is a test of nuclear energy technology. How does this technology stand up to Mother Nature's worst? We as a nation will evaluate this in a number of ways, including examining the cost of the loss and disposal of the damaged plants, and the costs of evacuating the public within a 12-mile radius. Most importantly, we must judge the technology on how its defense-in-depth limited the public's exposure to harmful levels of radiation.

Radioactive gases and particles were released and high radiation fields created as a result of fuel damage in three reactors and potentially in one or more used fuel storage pools. We must understand how many people received radiation exposure and whether the exposure was harmful. It's important to compare those levels with exposure we all get from natural sources by living on the surface of the Earth, as well as exposure that results from voluntary activities like flying in airplanes, undergoing X-rays, CT scans and other medical procedures that employ radiation and radioactive materials for our benefit.

The second test will be how we as a nation interpret nuclear energy's public safety performance during the test in Japan, and how we let that interpretation impact our energy decisions. Will we continue our practice of romanticizing or demonizing energy technologies? Will we consider that all large-scale industrial activities have risks and that the risk is never zero?

The 1979 reactor accident at Three Mile Island — caused by a mechanical malfunction and operator error, not near-simultaneous natural disasters — damaged one-half the reactor core and killed or injured no one in the general public. France, Japan, Russia, Korea, China, India and other nations witnessed TMI, understood it, interpreted it and chose to expand their use of nuclear energy. For reasons beyond TMI but certainly influenced by it, we in the U.S. chose differently.

All countries that use nuclear power as a key component of their diverse energy portfolios well understand that Fukushima Daiichi is more serious than TMI. And thoughtful questioning is under way. What will these other nations do after there's a better understanding of the events in Japan and the impacts on public health and safety? What will we in this country do? Will our decision reflect a reasoned, realistic approach to meeting ours and the world's energy needs?

Despite the critics, TARP worked

WASHINGTON — It isn't often that the government launches a major program that achieves its main goals at a tiny fraction of its estimated costs. That's the story of TARP — the Troubled Assets Relief Program. Created in October 2008 at the height of the financial crisis, it helped stabilize the economy, used only $410 billion of its authorized $700 billion and will be repaid most of that. The Congressional Budget Office, which once projected TARP's ultimate cost at $356 billion, now says $19 billion. This could go lower.

You would hardly know.

Almost everyone loves to hate TARP. It's a favorite political sport of liberals, conservatives, Republicans, Democrats — and the public. A Bloomberg poll last October asked how TARP had affected the economy. The results: 43 percent said it weakened the economy; 21 percent said it made no difference; only 24 percent said it helped, with 12 percent unsure one way or another. Commentators in newspapers from The Wall Street Journal to The New York Times disparage TARP.

Wrong.

One lesson of the financial crisis is this: When the entire financial system succumbs to panic, only the government is powerful enough to prevent a complete collapse. Panics signify the triumph of fear. TARP was part of the process by which fear was overcome. It wasn't the only part, but it was an essential part. Without TARP, we'd be worse off today. No one can say whether unemployment would be 11 percent or 14 percent; it certainly wouldn't be 8.9 percent.

That benefited all Americans. TARP, says Douglas Elliott of the Brookings Institution, "is the best large federal program to be despised by the public."

The source of outrage is no secret. Bankers are blamed for the crisis and reviled. The bank bailout — TARP's first and most important purpose — was instantly unpopular. Most Americans, says Elliott, "believe that taxpayers spent $700 billion and got nothing in return."

What this ignores — aside from being factually incorrect — is that an alternative being promoted at the time was widespread nationalization of banks. The cost would have been many times higher; the practical problems would have been enormous. As it was, TARP invested $245 billion in banks (and about $165 billion into the other programs). The extra capital helped restore trust. Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve increased its lending; the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. guaranteed $350 billion of bank borrowings. Banks resumed dealing with each other because they regained confidence that commitments would be honored.

Some TARP critiques reflect desirable oversight by Congress, the Government Accountability Office and a special Treasury inspector general. But some criticisms are broad generalities that, on inspection, are highly suspect. One common allegation is that TARP will encourage more reckless risk-taking because big financial firms know they'll be bailed out if their gambles backfire — a problem economists call "moral hazard." Bankers keep profits but are protected against losses, which are assumed by the public. This is a serious issue, but TARP's legacy is actually the opposite. During the crisis, huge losses were suffered by investors in banks and financial institutions. It wasn't predictable which would survive and which wouldn't — or on what terms. The same would be true in the future. Indeed, TARP's extreme unpopularity compounds uncertainty, because it suggests that politicians will recoil from more bailouts. The moral hazard is more imagined than real.

Idahoans set to get free air cooling units

A near perfect Scratch-n-Dent miracle air cooler is actually being given away free to the first 4,236 local readers who call to beat the order deadline and get their first miracle air cooler to stay cool for just pennies a day

Save money: uses 95% less electricity to blast out cold air with no windows, no vents and no freon

Universal Media Syndicate

UMS - Everyone wants to stay cool this summer. But just turning on your air conditioner sucks the money right out of your pockets.

Well today, for the first time ever nearly perfect Scratch-n-Dent models of the MIRA-COOL™ air cooler are actually being given away free to local readers for the next 48 hours starting at precisely 8:30am this morning.

The only thing today's readers have to do is call the Toll Free Hotline with their order for their first nearly perfect MIRA-COOL air cooler before the 48-hour deadline. The first 4,236 readers who do are instantly getting their second MIRA-COOL air cooler absolutely free.

“This is all happening because we have strict quality control. Most people think we’re way too hard on ourselves, but that’s how we’re able to set aside hundreds of these nearly perfect units to give away free,” said Chris Gallo, Operations Director.

“These are the newest MIRA-COOL air cooler models. Chances are you will never find the flaw, it could be on the top, side or bottom, but it’s usually smaller than a thumbnail. Since they work perfectly and get labeled basically new, we are giving them away free,” Gallo said.

These MIRA-COOL air coolers actually roll from room-to-room so you can turn down the central air conditioning and stay cool anywhere. That way, everyone who gets them first can beat the sweltering heat and immediately start saving on their electric bills.

The good news is the MIRA-COOL portable air cooler is not an air conditioner, so it only costs about a penny an hour to operate.

These remarkable air cooling units are being called a miracle because they use 95% less electricity than a typical room air conditioner, yet blast out ice cooled air without any windows, vents or freon.

They even come with two sets of reusable ice blocks. Everyone is getting the MIRA-COOL because all you do is fill it up and plug it in to stay cool for just pennies a day.

So what’s the catch? “Well, only the first 4,236 local readers who call 1-888-414-6575 to beat the order deadline for their first near perfect Scratch-n-Dent MIRA-COOL air cooler are getting their second one free,” said Gallo.

“We’re sorry, but we just don’t have any more than that to give away free to readers of this publication,” Gallo said.

You just won’t find these MIRA-COOL air coolers in the national chain stores. That makes the first MIRA-COOL air cooler a real steal for just ninety-eight dollars and shipping since when you cover only shipping of the second MIRA-COOL air cooler the entire product cost is free.

This free giveaway is the best way to slash summer cooling bills and stay cool all summer long. The MIRA-COOL air cooler rolls from room-to-room to keep you cool so you can turn down the air and save a ton of money on cooling bills.

“You see, with a central air conditioner you are paying to cool areas of your home that you’re not using. And window air conditioners are even worse because they weigh a ton so they’re a hassle to move,” said Gallo.

But the MIRA-COOL air cooler actually rolls from room-to-room so it’s easy to stay cool in any room of the house for ■ RELIEF IS ON THE WAY: Everyone wants to stay cool and save money on their energy bills this summer. These trucks are being loaded full of MIRA-COOL air coolers and soon will be ready to go. The MIRA-COOL air cooler is a real steal at just ninety-eight dollars and shipping on each because the first 4,236 readers who call to beat the 48-hour order deadline for their first MIRA-COOL air cooler are actually getting their second MIRA-COOL air cooler absolutely free.

And here’s the best part. Readers of this publication who beat the 48-hour order deadline are getting one free. The MIRA-COOL air cooler only uses about 1¢ an hour of electricity, so when you turn down the air the potential energy savings are absolutely incredible.

“We’re trying to make sure no one gets left out, but you better hurry because we only have 4,236 MIRA-COOL air coolers to hand out to today’s local readers for free,” confirms Gallo.

Getting the MIRA-COOL air cooler is the smart way to slash summer electric bills and still stay cool all summer long. And getting the second one free is like putting around two hundred bucks in your pocket and you can keep everyone in your family cool.

“We’re bracing ourselves for all the calls because everyone wants to save on their electric bills and stay cool this summer. But those that really want to stay cool will be telling our operators they want two and they’ll get two more free,” said Gallo.

“So when the lines are busy keep trying or log onto www.MIRA-COOL.com. We promise to get every call. Then we’ll have a delivery truck out to you in no time at all so you can stay cool and start saving on your energy bills right away,” Gallo said.

“You’ll instantly feel the ice cooled air in any room. You will never have to be hot and miserable again,” he said. ■

Annual audit gives Filer Mutual solid financial outlook

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Annual audit results have given Filer Mutual Telephone Company a solid financial report.

Daniel Owens, with the Minnesota based accounting firm of Owens Thielen and Company, summarized the company's 2010 audit results Tuesday evening for an audience of patrons and the board of directors. Owens focused on key areas of company activity.

Revenue increased from $5.3 million in 2009 to $5.5 million in 2010. This is partially due to the sale of Internet services to an additional 200 subscribers and the subsequent jump in revenue from $591,000 to $733,000.

Filer Mutual has a 7.3 percent or $2 million investment in cell phone service provider Syringa Networks and Syringa Wireless based in Pocatello. Filer Mutual received about $300,000 in income from Syringa Networks. An additional $600,000 investment was also made in Syringa Wireless. Filer Mutual absorbed a $500,000 loss in 2009.

"Syringa Network continues to be a very strong company," Owens said. "Syringa Wireless had better income this year, because of reconstruction of debt."

Filer Mutual, as well as other entities in the telecommunications industry, have felt the impact of economic conditions.

General Manager Steve Cowger reported that the federal government has also added to uncertainty in the future by advocating cutbacks as well as investment in a national broadband plan.

"Our industry is in turmoil because the federal government is looking at migrating the direction of broadband away from the telephone and more toward a super-fast Internet," Cowger said. "We all have to embrace that idea and move ahead with it, but they haven't made any of the rules up yet and don't know where we're going with this thing."

He went on to say that the Federal Communications Commission is trying to get rulings passed that would reduce or eliminate inter-carrier compensation.

"That's revenue we get from handing a phone call off from us to someone else," Cowger said. "We have a lot of things we're facing but want to continue being proactive in providing the best services possible."

One of several possible options that would help the company maintain its 100 year tradition of service is to increase Internet connection speeds with fiber optics to the home. Approximately $1.4 million in physical plant additions completed last year include a broadband pipe project running from the east side of Rock Creek to Filer and 11 miles of fiber optic cable placed in the community of Rogerson, the Jackpot School and Filer Intermediate School.

In other business, incumbents John Pitz and Carl Jones ran unopposed for an additional three-year term on the board of directors.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke at a meeting with the Senate Banking Committee on Capitol Hill in Washington on March 1. The Fed has identified banks that drew emergency loans during the financial crisis.

Fed names banks that took out emergency loans during crisis

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — For the first time in its 98-year history, the Federal Reserve on Thursday identified banks that borrowed from its oldest lending program, naming those that drew emergency loans during the financial crisis.

The Fed was forced to make the information public after the Supreme Court rejected a bid by major banks to keep it secret.

The central bank lent up to $110 billion through its emergency "discount window" at the height of the crisis. At the time, banks were turning to the Fed as a lender of last resort because their credit had frozen up. The Fed argued then that naming banks that used its discount window could cause a run on them, endangering the institutions and defeating the program's purpose.

The documents released Thursday provided details about which banks borrowed from the program from August 2007 through March 2010. Big U.S. banks, such as Wachovia and Morgan Stanley, took out short-term loans of $6 billion and $1.25 billion, respectively, in the fall of 2008, the documents showed.

Some of the largest foreign banks used the program, too. Barclay's borrowed $1 billion.

Smaller institutions also drew from the discount window during the financial crisis. The Savings Bank of Maine and the Bank of Yazoo City in Mississippi both did so, the documents show.

Washington Mutual Bank took out $10 billion worth of short-term, mostly overnight, loans in the week leading to its failure. Its collapse was the biggest for a bank in U.S. history.

One day before it failed, Washington Mutual took out a $2 billion overnight loan, the documents show. The day it failed, Sept. 25, 2008, Washington Mutual took out another one-day $2 billion loan. JPMorgan Chase ended up buying the bank.

Few loans are being made now because most banks are in much better health. And both the financial industry and the economy have strengthened.

Bloomberg L.P. had sued the Fed, seeking details about the Fed's discount window lending as well as other Fed loans made during the crisis. A similar lawsuit was later filed by News Corp.'s Fox News Network LLC. Other news organizations, including The Associated Press, filed legal briefs in support.

The Fed had said that some of the information being sought was made public in December. At that time, the Fed revealed details about all its crisis lending — except those involving commercial banks that borrowed from the discount window.

Most of the Fed's crisis-era lending — more than $3 trillion — came through those other programs. Fed documents showed it gave trillions in emergency aid to U.S. and foreign banks as well as other companies. The disclosures were required under the financial overhaul law enacted last year.

Under the law, the Fed must provide information on any commercial banks that draw emergency loans from its discount window, beginning in late 2012.

Under settlement, work-at-home business coach to change practices

Times-News

BOISE — Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden announced Thursday that Accelerated Mentoring, LLC, of Boise, has entered a legal settlement requiring it to change its business practices.

The company sells services to assist consumers in operating their own internet-based, at-home businesses.

Formerly known as Internet Sales Institute, LLC, the company sells Internet-based training, software and personal coaching to help people set up e-commerce businesses.

The settlement terms apply to future business activities of Accelerated Mentoring and its owner, Clancy Yohman of Boise.

The settlement resolves complaints that Accelerated Mentoring made false claims about the amount of money consumers could earn from investing 10 to 15 hours a week in an online business.

Consumers paid Accelerated Mentoring between $1,200 and $17,500 to learn how to operate work-at-home businesses. The Attorney General's Office received 17 consumer complaints about Accelerated Marketing.

Accelerated Mentoring engaged in telephone solicitations without first registering with the Attorney General's Office, as required by Idaho law.

Wasden said the company is now registered as a telemarketer, as required by the settlement agreement.

The settlement agreement prohibits Accelerated Mentoring from telling consumers that they will earn a specific amount of money if they buy products from the company and requires the company to maintain a privacy policy for customer information.

Under the settlement, Accelerated Mentoring must disclose the material terms of a customer's purchase, comply with all aspects of the Idaho Telephone Solicitations Act, including the federal Do Not Call law, and answer complaints from the Attorney General.

In addition, the agreement prohibits Accelerated Marketing from collecting on any outstanding debts for purchases made while it was not registered with the Attorney General. The company also must allow its customers at least three days from receipt of their written contracts to cancel their purchases.

The company paid the Attorney General $10,000 in legal fees and investigative expenses.

The company did not admit any wrongdoing.

Ten myths about college financial aid and the truths behind them

Prospective students and their parents tour the campus of Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, on March 19.

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Applying for college financial aid can be intimidating. A slew of myths and misconceptions only complicates matters.

Families have to educate themselves about this complex world and stay on top of it. Their homework lasts from the beginning of the college selection process in the junior year of high school through at least the receipt of financial aid packages in the spring of senior year. Colleges don't spell out everything they need to know, so it's important to be able to ask informed questions and see past any false assumptions.

Those who avoid the pitfalls can potentially save tens of thousands of dollars. But if they're not diligent, parents can set back their finances and even their retirement prospects.

Here's a look at 10 common financial aid myths and the truths behind them:

1. Savings hurt opportunities for financial aid.

There's only a slight penalty for savings.

The formula that colleges use as a guideline for setting awards calls for parents to contribute a maximum 5.64 percent of their assets per year toward the cost of college. (If the amount is in the student's name, he or she is expected to contribute 20 percent.) And parents can shield a significant amount of savings from that calculation — typically about $50,000 but with slightly higher allotments for older parents. If the older parent is 50, for example, the family can shield the first $52,900 of assets. If 55, it's $60,200.

Assuming that savings penalizes more than helps is "dead wrong" in the vast majority of cases, says Lynn O'Shaughnessy, a personal finance journalist and author of "The College Solution: A Guide for Everyone Looking for the Right School at the Right Price."

2. Our income is too high to qualify for financial aid.

Household income is the single most important factor in the aid equation but not the only one. Even families making in excess of $150,000 a year can qualify for need-based aid.

Other factors that may entitle reasonably well-off families to aid are a larger family size, more than one child in college, heavy unreimbursed medical expenses, impending job loss or divorce.

3. Having a lot in retirement accounts and home equity means little or no aid.

Money held in most retirement accounts isn't counted against you. Federal and state financial aid guidelines don't consider home equity, either.

4. Only top athletes, poor or straight-A students get aid.

Most scholarships are awarded based on other criteria besides athletics. More than two-thirds of all families qualify for some form of financial aid, according to Mark Kantrowitz, publisher of the FastWeb and FinAid websites about college aid.

Middle-income students are likelier to win scholarships than lower-income students. Nearly 14 percent of students with family incomes of $50,000 to $100,000 were awarded scholarships to four-year colleges in 2007-08, according to Kantrowitz.

Brilliant students don't win all the academic scholarships, either. B students receive some, depending on the school, as do many students with financial need. Plus there are plenty of private scholarships based on community service, leadership and extracurricular activities.

5. Applying for financial aid will hurt admission chances.

Most colleges practice need-blind admissions, Kantrowitz notes. That means they accept students without considering their ability to pay. Colleges then try to offer enough aid to meet the student's full financial need, based on data submitted via the Free Application for Federal Student Aid.

6. The big, prestigious colleges give more aid.

This varies widely. Some colleges with relatively small endowments still give significant financial aid awards. And they may offer more generous grants in order to attract top-level students who otherwise would go elsewhere.

It's best to work closely with a school's admissions and financial aid departments to determine what may be available. You can also get an idea how much merit aid to expect from a college by searching through its Common Data Set. These statistics are provided on a university's website and include useful information about admissions and financial aid awards.

7. State schools are always cheaper.

Your state university likely has a significantly lower price tag than most private schools. But a lower sticker price doesn't necessarily mean a lower out-of-pocket cost, especially because many private schools offer significant aid awards.

O'Shaughnessy cites the example of a California student who's paying $7,000 a year to attend an elite college with a listed total cost of attendance of about $53,000. The student received a great financial aid package because his father is unemployed, and the family mortgage was underwater.

8. Going deep into debt to pay for college is unavoidable.

It's true that few families can afford college without taking on some debt. Only a third of 2008 college graduates did so debt-free, according to FinAid. Their average student loan debt was $23,186.

9. Loans are not a form of financial aid.

When colleges provide financial aid, it's important to know that they're referring to more than just grants and scholarships. Otherwise it may come as a shock when an aid package arrives.

10. A financial aid award is always final.

Private colleges increasingly will bump up the amount offered in their financial aid packages. It's a practice designed to help recruit mostly top students, especially those with better offers in hand. Few colleges discuss this openly, however, or disclose how many financial aid awards are successfully appealed.

Are sweats linked to vitamin D?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 71 years old. Just as a precaution, my doctor has me on vitamin D (2,000 IU). According to your article in October 2010, this is too much. I am wondering if the sweats I am having are coming from this. They occur with little exertion, like vacuuming or other minor chores. My face, hair and neck are dripping with sweat. I usually stop what I am doing until I cool off. My husband looks at me and can't believe it. I am very healthy, except for taking simvastatin, which I have been on for years.

I read your column every day and enjoy it very much. I'll be looking for a response from you.

DEAR READER: Vitamin D is a fat-soluble essential nutrient required for the growth and development of strong teeth and bones and for the absorption of calcium and phosphorous from the intestines. It is available in fortified milk products, egg yolks, salmon, tuna and other foods. A common source of supply is through exposure to the sun, followed by dietary supplements. In fact, one of the greatest supplemental sources is cod-liver oil (the stuff your mother made you take as a child), which contains 1,360 IU per tablespoon. According to the Office of Dietary Supplements and the National Institutes of Health, a 71-year-old female should take 800 IU daily. The tolerable upper intake level for adults is 4,000 IU daily. There is still debate regarding proper dosage, with some researchers saying that higher amounts are safe and appropriate.

Excesses can cause diarrhea, constipation, drowsiness, weakness and more. Deficiency can result in osteoporosis, fractures and rickets in children. So the question arises as to why your doctor wants you on 2,000 IU daily. Do you have a parathyroid gland disorder; a family risk of colon cancer or type 2 diabetes or heart disease; osteomalacia (a softening of the bones); osteopenia; or osteoporosis and don't want to take a bisphosphonate because of potential side effects?

To my knowledge, sweating isn't linked with excessive vitamin D intake. Instead, it may be a sign of a hormonal condition, infection, cancer or an anxiety disorder, although each person responds to prescription medication and supplements in a different manner. On the other hand, simvastatin has been linked to a feverish feeling, nausea, loose stool and more. Whatever the cause, your drenching sweats may be a sign that something is going on. Follow up with your primary-care physician, who may order some routine laboratory testing.

Ruth Ann Anderson

Feb. 25, 1952 – March 29, 2011

FILER — Ruth Ann Anderson, 59, of Filer, Idaho, went to sleep Monday, March 28, 2011, and was called home Tuesday, March 29, 2011.

Ruth Ann was a person who told you what she thought (normally before she thought). She always fought for what she believed in, even when she wasn't sure what that was. She was always willing to greet you with a smile as long as you made her happy. She never really had a problem with life even when it got too tough. Like she always said, "When it's too tough for everyone else, it's just right for me."

A wake will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 9, at the home of her son, Patrick, at 500 Stevens St. in Filer.

Richard 'Dick' Maestas

May 5, 1917–March 29, 2011

GOODING — Richard "Dick" Maestas was born May 5, 1917, in Fruita, Colo., to Joe and Eleanor Maestas. He was the eldest of 12 children. He married his beloved, Faye Marquez on Dec. 31, 1940, in Alamosa, Colo. They celebrated 69 years of marriage together. He died Wednesday, March 29, 2011, on the first anniversary of Faye's funeral.

Dick and his family moved to Gooding from south-central Colorado in 1947. He farmed for 20 years and also worked for the U.S. Department of Agriculture inspecting potatoes in the winter. After he left farming, he continued with the Department of Agriculture and worked for the Idaho Crop Improvement Association. He retired for the last time in 2003 at the age of 86.

He was a charter member of the Gooding County Sheriff's Posse and a member of the Gooding County Search and Rescue. He was an active member of St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Gooding and a member of the Knights of Columbus. Dick and Faye were honored as the grand marshalls of the Gooding Fair and Rodeo Parade in 2002 and the Founder's Day Parade in 2007.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Faye; parents, Joe and Eleanor Maestas; brothers, Lloyd and Charles; and sisters, Eleanor Velasquez and Estelle Pate. Dick is survived by his six children and their spouses, Richard and Marie Maestas of Los Altos, Calif., Guy and Karen Maestas of Surprise, Ariz., Carl and Lynne Maestas of Meridian, Idaho, Elizabeth and Mitch Johnson of Pocatello, Idaho, Marian and Pete Brooks of Gooding, Idaho, and Ken and Keri Maestas of Clarkston, Wash.; 13 grandchildren; Kristin, Nicole, Yvette, Cindy, Geoff, Alana, Rick, Katie, Corinna, Brent, Breinn, Samantha and Dylan; eight great-grandchildren, Sierra, Jacob, Raquel, David, Malori, Sarah, Emily and Kevin; and his siblings, Alice Troyano, Maxine Doss, Jo Thomaidis, Eileen Varin, Carmen Maestas, Leslie Renner and Henry Maestas.

The family would like to thank the staff of Bennett Hills Rehabilitation and Care Center of Gooding for their kindness and compassion.

A rosary will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday, April 3, at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church. The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, April 4, also at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church. A private family burial will follow in the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding. Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service Gooding Chapel.

Al Kenner

Aug. 2, 1960–March 30, 2011

BURLEY — Alma Hartsell Kenner Jr., known as "Al" to his family and friends and a loving child of God, went to be with the Lord (whom he loved and dedicated his life to) Wednesday, March 30, 2011, at the young age of 50. He bravely fought the battle of cancer, never giving up his faith and always trusting in the Lord.

Al was born Aug. 2, 1960, at Cottage Hospital in Burley, Idaho, to Alma Hartsell Kenner Sr. and Mary Jane Johannsen Kenner. He was educated in Burley and Murtaugh and graduated from Murtaugh High School. Al completed seven years of college, attaining degrees in theology and accounting. He was a gifted creative writer and, in his younger years, loved to roller skate and play tennis.

Most important to him was his love for God. He truly witnessed this by the way he walked in love. No matter what battles in life he was facing, he always showed compassion and love and tried to help others. Al was a very thoughtful and loving individual and had a forgiving spirit. He instantly forgave and quickly forgot. In all of his pain and suffering, he never failed to think of others. He never lost his sense of humor and his quick wit. He had the incredible ability to make you laugh.

He was a loving son and brother. Even though he never married or had children of his own, he was a father figure and a wonderful uncle to all of his nieces and nephews. He loved family "get togethers" and outings and enjoyed picnics, barbecues and fishing. He will be truly missed. For those who loved him so greatly, Al would want to remind the members of God's family that this life is just temporary and that he is now with our wonderful and loving Lord and Savior and that we will all meet again.

He is survived by his mother, Mary J. Kenner of Burley; his siblings, Patricia Kenner Hicks (Jim), Linda Kenner, and Christine Barth, all of Burley, and Michael L. Kenner (Marsha) of Heyburn; and many nieces and nephews who adored him. He was preceded in death by his father; and a brother-in-law, John Barth.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, April 2, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, where friends and family may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, April 1, and one hour prior to the service Saturday. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery.

Magic Valley's cover bands find identity

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

On Friday and Saturday nights, bars from Burley to the West Side are hopping with bands playing rock and country classics. But with cover bands crowding the Magic Valley music scene, what do musicians do to stand out? Song selection is part of the equation. Twin Falls band Wild Nights sticks mostly with older rock music, said band member Doug Albrethsen.

"I would say probably half to 60 percent of our stuff is '50s and '60s," he said. When his bandmates do play country, it's usually from the '80s on. Twin Falls' fledgling BraunBand also plays country music but sticks with classic songs, member Gary Braun said. BraunBand also has a female vocalist, giving it a chance to do male-female duets — something many other bands don't do. Bryon Hildreth of Copperhead said his bandmates change up their setlists and play to the crowd — if the audience is older, the musicians start out with songs from that generation. Later in the night when younger partiers show up, they change their music accordingly. "We kind of play it by ear," Hildreth said.

The Twin Falls band sticks to country and keeps the noise level down. "We don't play overly loud," he said. "There's a lot of bands that just turn it up and it's just ridiculously loud." Jarrett Roach, lead vocalist and guitarist for Copperhead, has been in five or six other cover bands. "I don't think this band's a lot better than the rest of them I've been in," he said, adding they're hoping to get better, learn more songs and play bigger gigs. Hildreth agreed with those goals. "These local clubs keep us pretty busy," he said, but Copperhead would like to play in other areas as well. Instruments also set some cover bands apart. Wild Nights has a keyboardist, while

What rhymes with spurs? Hagerman's gathering draws cowboy poets, musicians, storytellers from around the West

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

Bobbie Hunter was surrounded by cowboy poetry. She lived on a working ranch with her husband in a town that held its own cowboy poetry gathering. But it wasn't until 2003 that she took notice. "In my own town of Emmett, they held a cowboy poetry gathering for eight or nine years, but I just couldn't be bothered," Hunter said. "The first time I went I was just captivated in the first five minutes." Since that gathering, Hunter has become a staple at other festivals around Idaho celebrating the history and art of cowboy poetry. She's even moved to the other side of the mic, composing and performing her own poetry at festivals like today's Hagerman Cowboy Poetry Gathering, which continues Saturday. This is the Hagerman gathering's fifth year. The original was the brainchild of Ken Wellard, who wanted to create a gathering closer to home for his poet mother, Eunice Wellard.

AUTHENTIC POETRY

- What: Wrangle an evening listening to tales of cowboys and ranch hands at the fifth Hagerman Cowboy Poetry Gathering. You'll celebrate the history of the West, from modern ranch ballads to classic tall tales. Spurs not required.
- When: Evening performances 7-10 p.m. April 1-2; day performances are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.
- Where: American Legion Hall in Hagerman.
- Who: Performances are family friendly, but this is the Old West and tales could be populated with outlaws and their traditional demise at the end of a rope. Anyone interested in stepping up to the mic is welcome during the day, provided performances are kept clean and within the 12-minute limit.
- Admission: $10 for evening performances; no charge for day performances.

"I joined the cowboy poets to get her poetry recognized," Wellard said. When his mother could no longer travel around the state to gatherings, Wellard decided to bring the gatherings to her.

"She said, 'You're crazy. You won't get five people to this place,'" Wellard said. The first year brought 30 people. By the fourth year, that number was up to 200. Hunter has attended the Hagerman gathering since the beginning, missing it only once. "It has just grown by leaps and bounds," she said. "We have so many talented people." Wellard organized Hagerman's gathering following the pattern of St. Anthony's successful festival, now in its 23rd year. During the day, Hagerman's gathering is set up like a free open mic show, with anyone who's interested allowed on stage for 12 minutes at a time. The three-hour evening shows today and Saturday feature more professional performances broken up into smaller sets. "The secret, we feel that makes it successful, is a three-hour succession. Bands BraunBand drummer Rick Kuhn also plays accordion. BraunBand also features steel guitarist Mike Remming.

"He has a tendency to bring songs into the band that have really unique steel guitar leads in them," Braun said.

"I've known people — I'm one myself — who would like to have my own style. I look at it more as art."

— BraunBand drummer Rick Kuhn

Kuhn, who used to play music full time, said today's audiences don't necessarily appreciate creativity as much as familiar, solid music.

"I've known people — I'm one myself — who would like to have my own style. I look at it more as art," he said. "But I know other people look at it more as a commercial thing that they do, and they try to please the general taste."

Those bands play for the crowd. Bar crowds know what they like, and often, that's "Sweet Home Alabama," "Old Time Rock N' Roll" and "Taking Care of Business."

"I don't care if I ever hear those songs again," Kuhn added.

The Pioneer Club's Debbie James said talent and personality differentiate bands. The Twin Falls bar rotates between seven or eight bands, James said, and most of them are cover bands. Copperhead stands out to her because of Hildreth, the lead singer.

"Bryon has an amazing set of vocals," she said.

And in the end, James said, the band's stage presence and energy matters as much as the music it plays.

"We always have a good crowd," James said.

Which is a long time to sit, but we put on about 15 performers in that time," Wellard said. "It's a tremendous variety."

For all that success, the woman who sparked the gathering has remained behind the scenes. Wellard performs his mother's poetry, incorporating his humor and writing, but she has never taken to the stage herself.

In addition to performers like Wellard and Hunter, who writes about life as a ranch wife, the festival features a heavy rotation of ballad-style country music.

Wayne Nelson of American Falls, who's been performing cowboy poetry for about 26 years, said the music plays as big a role in preserving Western history as the poems.

"They play the old acoustic-type music, and it's a whole lot of fun," he said. "I might be biased because I've played guitar my whole life. But a poem to me is just like a song without music."

Nelson will be at the Hagerman festival, reciting his poem about the true story of two outlaws hanged off a bridge in American Falls. Nelson said he loves good stories, but it's not the only thing that keeps him and others coming back to poetry gatherings.

"Almost 100 percent of the time, once somebody goes to one of these things they come back," he said. "It's not what people would call first-class poetry, but it's written from the heart, it's recited from the heart. It's very authentic because people are actually telling the truth about themselves."

Philharmonic concert highlights Burley conductor, Rexburg horn soloist

By Ramona Jones
Times-News writer

Magic Philharmonic Orchestra's spring concert next week will feature music ranging from contemporary to classical, under the baton of guest conductor Deana Christensen. The centerpiece: a musical and witty whodunit plot.

The concert is set for 7:30 p.m. April 8 at the King Fine Arts Center, 2100 Parke Ave. in Burley.

French horn soloist Dan North will perform a solo in Mozart's "Horn Concerto No. 1 in D, K. 412" and will narrate "The Composer is Dead," a piece with music by Nathaniel Stookey and Lemony Snicket text.

North, a native of Pocatello, is in his 24th year as director of bands at Madison High School in Rexburg, where he conducts the Symphonic Band, Percussion Ensemble, Jazz Bands, Pep Band and Marching Band. He received a bachelor's degree in music education from Idaho State University and a master's degree in music education from VanderCook College of Music in Chicago. North is a past president of Idaho Music Educator's Association and has served more than 10 years on its state governing board. He often performs with Yellowstone Brass and with several Rexburg-area orchestras and bands.

Christensen is vice principal at Burley Junior High School and has played violin, viola and French horn in Magic Philharmonic. She grew up in Tacoma, Wash., and began with the violin. She received a bachelor's degree in music and education at Central Washington University in Ellensburg and a master's in education administration from University of Idaho. She has participated with other musical groups including Wilderness String Quartet, B.A.S.I.C. and various musicals, and has conducted several high school and pit orchestras.

"The Composer is Dead" was created as a "Peter and the Wolf"-like introduction to the instruments in the orchestra and could be categorized as an expansive adaptation of a children's book. The piece was commissioned by the San Francisco Symphony and premiered in 2006.

In the mystery, everyone seems to have a motive, everyone has an alibi and nearly everyone is a musical instrument. The narration has witty characters in the orchestral instruments with each section (the violins, the trumpets, the flutes, a tuba and others) being interrogated in search of the culprit. Expect a fun whodunit plot.

Other highlights: The concert will include selections from "Sound of Music," "Second American Folk Rhapsody," "March Militaire" and "Espa Rhapsody."

The Magic Philharmonic Orchestra consists of about 70 members with most of the musicians from the Mini-Cassia area, including several band students from area high schools. The orchestra performed its first concert in the spring of 1983 and some of the musicians have played with the group since its beginning.

Admission to the concert is $8 for adults, $3 for students and $20 for families. Tickets are available at Welch Music and Book Plaza in Burley, the Book Store in Rupert, or at the door.

If you go once, you'll go again and again. Just like all those other skeptics.

The founder's own mother thought he was crazy, but Hagerman's fast-rising Cowboy Poetry Gathering has reached its fifth year and is drawing cowboy poets, musicians and storytellers from around the West today and Saturday. "It's not what people would call first-class poetry," a cowboy poet told our reporter. But listeners get hooked anyway. "It's very authentic because people are actually telling the truth about themselves." Willing to go out on a limb? Whether it's fast and furious string-band music or sultry Imperial Court classics, you can expect hot passion from Red Chamber, a Chinese stringband that plays Twin Falls tonight. Across town, shops and galleries downtown will throw a First Friday party with live music, food sampling and an artists' reception.

If you're near Hailey tonight, catch the Company of Fools' free party — a perfect place for pranksters' April I hoopla, adult style. If the kids are along, take them to Ketchum's steampunk version of "Pinocchio," which is on stage all weekend with its robotic donkeys, flywheels and zeppelins.

Burley High School thespians are on stage this week with their production of "Bus Stop," a classic play that you might know better in its Marilyn Monroe movie version filmed in Sun Valley. The younger set can become the next Andy Warhols as a "Pop Art" kid-class series launches in Twin Falls on Saturday.

It's a good time for country music lovers, with longtime local band Renegade releasing its CD at a Saturday-night party and free concert, and with "Nashville Star" finalist Charley Jenkins performing a fundraiser in Twin Falls on Wednesday.

And for a huge segment of Magic Valley, there's an attraction with all of the fanaticism and none of the noise of country music: Desert Sage Quilt Guild's two-day show in Filer this weekend. I'm betting the quilt show — a surprisingly interactive affair — has been on fans' personal calendars for months.

Maria Nussbacher collects some of her artwork including an oil painting called 'Shattered' which did not make it into the 2010 Student Art Show at College of Southern Idaho. This afternoon, CSI art students' work will undergo a judge's scrutiny again, in preparation for the annual show's April 12 opening.

Today, pro's judgment will whittle artwork for CSI show

Times-News

This afternoon will bring joy and disappointment to College of Southern Idaho art students.

They've submitted about 300 pieces of their artwork — in two- and three-dimensional forms of all kinds — but only a third of those will make the cut for exhibition in CSI's annual Student Art Show.

Boise State University ceramics instructor Caroline

Earley will be in Twin Falls today to make the hard choices. This year, she's the one-woman jury who sorts the artwork and brings triumph or dismay to its creators.

The result? About 100 pieces of student-made art will be displayed in the Herrett Center for Arts and Science during CSI's Student Art Show, April 12 to May 7. CSI art instructor Milica Popovic expects the show to have a mix of drawings, paintings, prints, photographs, design, mixed media, sculptures and ceramics.

The show will open with a reception for the artists from 7 to 9 p.m. April 12 and will be on display, with free admission, until May 7. The Herrett Center is open Tuesdays through Saturdays and is on the north side of the CSI campus on North College Road.

Information: 732-6655 or csi.edu/herrett.

CBS ‘Survivor’ contestant to speak at CSI

Times-News

Alexis Jones may not have won the 2008 “Survivor” season on CBS, but being a contestant was a springboard to a motivational speaking career.

A Los Angeles-based model with a master’s degree in communications management, Jones is the featured speaker at this year’s “Change for Children” fundraiser sponsored by College of Southern Idaho’s Student Senate. She’ll speak at 7 p.m. April 15 in the college’s Fine Arts Auditorium.

When she’s not on the lecture circuit, Jones is a lifestyle and image consultant and founder of the empowerment organization I Am That Girl. Her Twin Falls presentation, said CSI student body president Sheree Haggan, will be inspirational and fun for all ages.

The annual “Change for Children” raises money for various causes — this year, for the CSI Refugee Center. And this year, the event covers two consecutive evenings. At 7 p.m. April 16, a talent show will feature local vocalists, dancers, poets and comedians, including Magic Valley’s Got Talent winner Laura Taylor, an acoustic musician.

Admission either or both nights will be by donation. Audience members will have a chance to win door and raffle prizes from about 100 local businesses both evenings.

Information on Jones: alexisjones.com.

‘Showcase’

Jazz musicians slate night of original compositions

Times-News

You’ve never heard this jazz before.

The College of Southern Idaho’s Jazz Club will present “Jazz Composers Showcase,” an evening of original compositions, at 7:30 p.m. April 15 in the CSI Fine Arts Recital Hall. The concert will feature music by Seattle musicians Bill Anschell on piano and Chad McCullough on trumpet; Salt Lake City drummer Steve Lyman; Brigham Young University-Idaho professor Aaron Miller on bass; and CSI music professor Brent Jensen on saxophone.

Magic Valley’s jazz aficionados are already familiar with Jensen, who hosts weekly “Jazz at CSI Java” jam sessions on Thursday afternoons, and with Miller, who’s a Twin Falls native. Here’s an introduction to the showcase’s other musicians:

Anschell, one of the Seattle area’s in-demand jazz pianists, received a Golden Ear Award as the “Northwest Jazz Instrumentalist of the Year” in 2005, and in 2006 his trio was named “Best Northwest Acoustic Jazz Ensemble.” Golden Ears are administered by Earshot Jazz based on open voting by the Seattle jazz community. For more: billanschell.com.

McCullough has been on the Seattle music scene for more than a decade, and has been involved in bands and projects throughout the country and internationally. He has performed with Jim Knapp, Hadley Caliman, Don Byron, Claudio Roditi, Michael Shrieve, Wynonna Judd and Michael W. Smith.

For more: chadmccullough.com.

Lyman has toured with some great musicians. In the U.S., most notably in New York, Lyman has performed at the Blue Note and Smalls jazz clubs; in Europe, at the BBC studios in London, the Blue Note in Milan, New Morning in Paris, Berns Hotel in Stockholm and venues throughout Spain, Germany, The Netherlands, France and the United Kingdom. For more: stevelyman-drums.com.

Admission is free, but organizers suggest a $5 donation to the CSI Jazz Club at the door. Information: Jensen at 420-7066 or bjensen@csi.edu; or visit www.bjensenjazz.com.

Sign up your kids for writing camps

Times-News

Registration is under way for Idaho Writing Camps, a week-long program of creative writing and self-exploration for students entering grades three through nine.

The camp runs June 13-17 at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls, and Aug. 1-5 at The Center in Hailey. For a listing of grades and times, and to register, visit The Cabin’s website at www.thecabinidaho.org.

In 2004, the Idaho Writing Camps program was chosen by the National Endowment for the Arts as one of 10 models in the nation for summer arts education. It was the only program selected in literature or writing, camp promoters said.

Students use the natural world, paintings and sculpture, local history and their own experience as inspiration for their creative work. Professional writers lead the workshops, and students have opportunities to share and publish their work in an anthology and on The Cabin’s website. Each young writer receives a free copy of the anthology, Words Work Wonders.

Idaho Writing Camps is a program of The Cabin, a Boise nonprofit that aims to inspire a love of reading, writing and discourse throughout the region.

Ellis pitches Bruins past Bobcats

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Twin Falls' 14-2 victory over Burley in the teams' Great Basin Conference opener on Thursday was a perfect example of feast or famine.

On one side, Burley is in desperate need of consistent pitching. The Bobcats are nursing injuries in the bullpen while waiting for other pitchers to step up.

On the other side, Twin Falls has so many available arms, it doesn't know what to do with them.

Having a deep, talented pitching rotation is a good problem to have for the Bruins, who improved to 7-1 overall (1-0 GBC).

"We've said all along, our pitching is going to set the tone for us," said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir. "Looking at our pitching rotation, we've got eight or nine guys that we feel confident that are going to throw strikes and give us a chance to win. It's been really good for us because the competition is there in practice. It's going to be fun to watch."

On Thursday it was T.J. Ellis' turn on the mound. The senior allowed two earned runs on four hits in four innings of work.

"T.J. felt good, but he didn't have his best stuff," Stadelmeir said. "He had to battle some adversity, but with that kid, he's a competitor and he's going to find a way to get it done."

Ellis got plenty of run support from his teammates. Cy Sneed, who normally puts his stamp on a game from the mound, did his damage at the plate Thursday, going 3-for-4 with two doubles, a home run and three RBIs.

"We have a small, scrappy team with a lot of speed and we've got a couple guys who we really need to clutch up and drive the ball. That's something I've really worked on, to be able to do that," Sneed said.

Jayson Welker drove in two runs, Ryan Fuchs had an RBI and a pair of hits, and Ellis had a three-run double that pushed the Bruins' lead past the 10-run mark needed to end the game in the fifth inning.

Burley starter Luke Bloxham kept the Bobcats in the game until he injured his elbow in the third inning. With their bullpen already thin due to injuries, the Bobcats could ill afford to lose another pitcher.

"He was working pretty good for us and that hurt having to pull him," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "Then we started issuing some walks and you can't do that to Twin because they'll make you pay for it."

Burley (2-4, 0-1) scored its runs on Spencer Rice's two RBIs. But the Bobcats made too many mistakes against the reigning conference champs.

"We weren't patient at the plate and we had a couple base running mistakes that killed us and took us out of innings," Kunz said. "You can't do those mental things. You've got to play clean. They (Twin Falls) are going to get theirs, but we can't take ourselves out of innings or give them extras."

Kunz said he wouldn't allow the team's injuries to be an excuse.

"Twin's not going to feel sorry for us, neither is anybody else," Kunz said. "We're not going to feel sorry for ourselves. This is an opportunity for (other) kids to play. We've just got to pick it up and find a way to do it. That's the only option."

The same two teams will meet for a doubleheader Saturday at Twin Falls.

KIMBERLY CRUISES

Filer errors aid Bulldogs in two-game sweep

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — For his first outing of the season, Seth Champlin just wanted to throw strikes.

Mission accomplished.

The Kimberly junior struck out seven without a walk and allowed only four hits and a solo homer to lead the Bulldogs to a 12-2 victory over Filer in Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference play.

"I felt good actually for my first outing. I slowed it down a bit and was able to get strikes," Champlin said. "That's all I was looking for today and it worked out for me."

Filer, however, had trouble keeping the ball over the plate. Starting pitcher Jordan Brown battled wild throws all game, walking 10.

The trouble started right away for Brown, who walked his first three batters in a rough first inning for the Wildcats.

Kimberly's Dally Charters, Seth Morris and Champlin all scored on a dropped pop fly and Jordan Gentry crossed the plate after a passed ball.

James Higginbotham was also walked and came around to score on an RBI single from Clay Mathews.

"We did a good job just sitting up there and being patient. They did the damage themselves, so we didn't have to do a whole lot," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers.

The Bulldogs added three runs in the fourth inning as Jordan Gentry and Ridge Lee had an RBI single and triple, respectively.

Morris scored three runs in the game and Gentry finished 2-for-3 with two runs scored.

spot came on Brown's solo shot in the third inning. Otherwise, it was a forgettable day for the Wildcats, who committed four errors.

"We just didn't show up today. We didn't make routine plays and weren't even into the game until the third inning," said Filer coach

Lance Richardson.

It was more of the same for Filer in Game 2 as the Wildcats were pummeled 15-4.

Champlin swung a big stick, driving in six runs with a home run and a double. Higginbotham smacked two home runs and Casperson and Daniel Stray each added doubles.

Kimberly (5-0, 1-0 SCIC) travels to American Falls for a single game today, while Filer (1-2, 0-1) plays Wendell on Tuesday.

"It was really good today to get off to a good start in conference play," Myers said.

The unexpected foursome arrives for Final Four

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — VCU arrived at the Final Four with its team, its bandwagon and its T-shirt. "There goes my bracket," it says — an oh-so-fitting statement printed in gold letters and sandwiched between the school logo and the picture of a crumpled-up piece of paper.

Indeed, almost anyone who wins an office pool this year will limp home to their victory. Hardly anyone saw this coming.

But for VCU, Butler, Connecticut and Kentucky, all of whom got their first look at the court tucked inside of Reliant Stadium on Thursday, this is a time to act like they expected it all along, to focus on winning a national championship that hardly seemed likely when the first ball was tipped back in October.

Back then, VCU was listed as a 5,000-1

longshot in Vegas.

Butler was figuring out how to replace NBA-bound forward Gordon Hayward and dream up a second act after almost winning it all last year, only six miles from its tiny campus in Indianapolis.

Connecticut was picked 10th in the Big East.

Kentucky was gearing up for a transition year after losing five key players to the NBA and freshman Enes Kanter to eligibility issues while awaiting a killer recruiting class for 2011-12.

"I never thought we'd be sitting here," Butler coach Brad Stevens said when asked what he thought of his team's prospects in February, when the Bulldogs were 14-9 with a three-game losing streak. "But the season starts in October and it goes until at least March 1. You're supposed to get better. It's hard. But if you have guys willing to work through it, it can happen."

In the first semifinal Saturday, eighth-seeded Butler (27-9) will play 11th-seeded VCU (23-11), in a matchup of underdog mid-majors that some might consider more fitting for the Maui Invitational than a Final Four bracket.

In the second game, it's No. 3 Connecticut (30-9) vs. No. 4 Kentucky (29-8) in the rematch of a game that really was on the schedule in Maui. UConn won 84-67 back on Nov. 24. A trip to Houston wasn't on anyone's mind back then.

"That game showed what we could be and certainly what John needed to fix," UConn coach Jim Calhoun said of Kentucky's John Calipari. "It turned out, I needed to fix some things, too, but it was later because the problems showed up in the Big East."

CSI squads gear up for CNCC

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

What happened in Vegas didn't exactly stay there. The Golden Eagles at least brought the lessons home. Unable to do much of anything positive in pressure situations during a series loss at Southern Nevada last weekend, the College of Southern Idaho softball team piled on the pressure this week in practice.

"We ran a lot of drills where if they made a mistake, they ran," said CSI coach Nick Baumert. "Hopefully that puts them in some pressure situations and maybe that pays off for us down the road."

There doesn't figure to be a lot of pressure this weekend.

The CSI softball and baseball teams welcome Colorado Northwestern to town today. The Spartan softball team is 1-26, while the baseball team is 3-23. Both squads occupy last place in the Scenic West Athletic Conference standings.

But with CSI softball effectively having to win out to harbor any lingering chances of hosting the Region 18 Tournament, there's not going to be any resting on the laurels this weekend as the Golden Eagles pursue a bounce back to quality play ahead of next week's trip to conference leader Salt Lake.

"That's some incentive to go out there and play well," Baumert said of the lack of wiggle room.

The CSI baseball team similarly has a little remaining room for error in the chase for first place.

After dropping three of four at Salt Lake, which is ranked No. 1 in the nation despite being in second place in the conference standings, and following that up with four home losses to Western Nevada, the Eagles find themselves in third place, eight games out of first.

"Hopefully that means that we can just go out there and play," CSI coach Boomer

Matt Anderson had an RBI double in the second inning for Wendell, but the Trojans failed to muster much with runners in scoring position.

Reds slip past Brewers

CINCINNATI — Ramon Hernandez hit a two-out, three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning Thursday, rallying the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-6 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers in an opening-day flashback to their NL Central title season.

The Brewers became the first team in 42 years to open the season with back-to-back homers when Rickie Weeks and Carlos Gomez connected off Edinson Volquez. Ryan Braun also had a solo shot, helping Milwaukee take a 6-3 lead to the ninth.

That's when the Reds reverted to their winning ways of 2010. Their first six wins last season came in their final at-bat, tying the major league record. Hernandez connected off closer John Axford (0-1).

Walker said. "I hadn't seen us play tight all season before last week. Even at Salt Lake, with all those tight games, there was a certain looseness that we all had. It's tough to keep that mindset, but that's what we need to have.

"We were staggering a little earlier in the week but we've had a great couple of days of practice."

With Eastern Utah coming in next week, CSI baseball looks to build some momentum ahead of fourth-place Southern Nevada's visit in two weeks' time. The Eagles may have to do so without No. 1 reliever Tyler Duffin, who hurt his shoulder during a weightlifting session earlier in the week. Walker said he does not expect Duffin to be available this weekend.

Doubleheaders are scheduled for 1 p.m. starts at both Eagle Field and Skip Walker Field. Due to poor weather forecasts for Saturday, it's possible that a third game could be tacked on at either site today, according to CSI Athletic Director Joel Bate, but that determination will not be made until this morning.

Found Dogs:

A female Pitbull was found in Buhl 3-28-11. She is brown and is about 4-months-old. She was wearing a collar but no tags. Call to identify.

Avail. for Adoption:

Did you know that Black Dogs are generally the last to be adopted and are euthanized in shelters in much large numbers? People may consider them too "plain", or simply don't notice them because their dark color makes them disappear in their kennels. Whatever the reason, black dogs are not given the attention they deserve. So PLEASE give our black dogs a chance!

Deuce is a handsome Labrador. He is middle aged, probably about 5-years-old, and is solid black. Deuce is very mild and sweet. He will make a nice family companion. Come meet him today.

Kate is a black lab mix puppy that is about 5-month-old. She has white on her feet and is very cute. Kate is not going to get very big. Her build is short and stocky. Kate is a fetching fool! She loves to have people throw balls for her! She is very sweet and has been waiting patiently to find her forever family.

Annie Oakley is a black border collie mix puppy. She is about 14-weeks-old and is very cute! Annie loves to play with the other dogs, and loves human companionship as well. Come meet her today.

Calamity Jane is an adorable border collie mix puppy. She is about 14-weeks-old. Jane is mostly black with a white diamond on her chest. She is so cute!

The adoption fee is $75 and includes spaying/neutering and the first set of vaccinations.

DEAR READERS: It's April 1, the day I get to share some of the occasional letters I receive from folks who are pulling my leg. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 23 years is threatening to divorce me on the grounds that I'm "unreasonable." Is it unreasonable for me to attempt to keep my socks oriented to the proper feet? When I put my socks on the wrong feet, I run around in circles and become disoriented. I know women don't have this problem because they wear pantyhose — so it's impossible to put them on the wrong feet.

I sewed a bit of red yarn on the tops of my right socks so I could keep them straight. My wife says I'm crazy, but I insist, "Right on right; left on left."

So tell me, Abby — must I run in stupid circles and endure moments of disorientation and embarrassment? Or should I forgo the red yarn and hang in there with my wife to preserve our marriage?

— DISTURBED

KENTUCKY MAN

DEAR DISTURBED KENTUCKY MAN: And a happy April Fools' Day to you, too. The red yarn is preferable to the yarn you have spun for me. (It's also preferable to running in circles like a decapitated chicken.) And you're mistaken about women's pantyhose. Ask any woman who has put hers on backward.

DEAR

ABBY

Jeanne

Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm concerned about my youngest son, "Sammy." From the moment he gets up each day until the time he retires at night, he spends almost the entire time playing in the sandbox in our backyard.

My wife and I are alarmed by his bizarre behavior, and incidentally, so is his wife. What should we do?

— WORRIED DAD

IN GEORGIA

DEAR WORRIED DAD: Be sure to brush him off if he ever runs a marathon to prevent diaper rash.

DEAR ABBY: Lately I've been having some strange dreams. I cannot explain how I come up with this stuff. The other night I had a doozy: whips, chains, whistles, yo-yos, circus midgents, a duck, a Romanian peasant woman, and my grandmother riding by on a bicycle giving me the finger. Please advise.

— CALIFORNIA

DREAMIN'

DEAR CALIFORNIA DREAMIN': What a coincidence! I had that very same dream last night. Your grandmother sure gets around.

DEAR ABBY: I hate bothering you because I know you're busy, but I have been getting the runaround from my TV provider. I have asked them repeatedly to send someone over to fix my set, but they keep saying it can be fixed by remote control. I've got a black screen and it just doesn't work. Can you come over to fix it?

— MISSING JERRY

PITTSBURGH

DEAR MISSING JERRY: I help people solve relationship problems, but the one you're having with your TV set does not qualify. Sorry.

DEAR ABBY: I prefer to sleep facing in; my husband prefers to sleep facing out. My problem is when he's gassy — which is often — it puts me "in the line of fire." We've talked about how to deal with this problem, but haven't been able to come up with a solution. Any suggestions?

IF APRIL 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The future looks rosy from where you stand today. Your popularity is higher than usual, so the next several weeks are a good time to meet, greet and impress prospective employers or potential romantic partners. Issues from the past could cause setbacks in May and July, however, so be prepared to keep your nose to the grindstone and avoid taking on any additional obligations that are not entirely necessary. In September you might be able to charm your way to the top, and the end of the year could bring a permanent improvement in circumstances or a release from restrictions.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Remain politically correct. Sweep away unnecessary debris in your closets, your mind or in your social life. Commit to making desirable changes without aggravating or alienating your allies and partners.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A problem might be turned into an asset. By concentrating on being a team player and by being willing to compromise, you can shift opinions. The boss might be a perfectionist, but you can be humble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Even hard-boiled eggs can crack under pressure. Just because you think that you are tough-minded doesn't make you immune to the demands of a picky person. An opportunity could have a drawback.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be challenged to deal with people who are highly competitive. Snap decisions and judgments that you make now might slow you down later. Do not make a financial commitment or a loan.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Brim over with excellent ideas. Gather fresh perspectives by reading the newspaper, a blog, or talking over your plans with a friend. Don't ignore problems from the past or overlook lingering obligations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Knock-knock! Who's there? You might experience demands on your wallet and one might be an opportunity in disguise. But there is a good chance that there is an unpleasant request from the past, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The ties that bind could also gag. You should avoid signing contracts or entering into agreements for the next several days. Pass up an opportunity to go on a blind date that could create a controversy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Perform as promised. Nip problems in the bud before they can grow any bigger by doing what you promised to do. You may be assured that there is no problem, but someone might change their tune.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do something good for your own good. Be generous towards people who need help or hook up with people who can inspire you to do big things. Today's feel-good atmosphere can heal old wounds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Necessity is often the mother of invention, but might be the father of education. Start a new course of study. Right now, you can gather helpful information that will prevent a calamity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The carrot and the stick might distract you from the pitfall. Like Pavlov's dog, you might be conditioned to act in certain ways. Fight against ingrained responses to stimuli and think for yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Act in haste, repent at leisure. You may feel the urge to jump into action with something merely to prove your ability to act independently. You would be wise to avoid anything that could offend others.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“No more the smith his dusky brow shall clear,
Relax his pond’rous strength, and lean to hear.”
— Oliver Goldsmith

In today’s deal you might relax when dummy comes down, imagining you had 12 top winners and that the only issue was how to play for the overtrick. But because you have only 11 sure winners unless spades split, you should focus on how to generate that extra trick if things go wrong. Sometimes in situations of this sort it is right to run the long suit and play for opponents to discard incorrectly, but here both opponents can probably release hearts comfortably enough, and your own hand comes under some pressure. Accordingly, it looks right to test spades early.

You win the heart lead in hand with the king and start by cashing the spade ace — in case the suit is 5-0. When you next lead a spade to dummy’s king, the bad break is revealed. You could now rely on either player to hold the club ace singleton or doubleton. However, far better is to play East for the club ace, in which case you can bring him under irresistible pressure.

The play is simplicity itself. At trick four you lead a club toward your queen (which East must duck), then run the diamonds, throwing the heart ace and a spade.

In the four-card ending, East can keep the guarded club ace and his two spades, but finally the heart queen squeezes him down to a bare black honor. No matter which card he lets go, you pitch from the other black suit and establish your 12th winner in comfort.

ANSWER: There is nothing terribly wrong with a call of two diamonds here. But since your plan was to rebid one no-trump had that been sufficient, you do not want to distort your hand by bidding something else now. And beware! A call of two no-trump here would show 18-19, not 12-14. (Had East overcalled one spade, you could have sensibly bid one no-trump, of course.)
