Final ed reform bill goes to governor

Price tag of changes to Idaho public schools: $20 million

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho House passed with a 44-26 vote on Friday the third and final bill of the controversial education overhaul that has dominated this year’s legislative session.

The proposal, which now goes to the desk of Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter, sets the stage to put millions of dollars more into classroom technology, allowing school districts to tap into salary dollars to pay for planned tech upgrades in the years ahead. It’s the final part of Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s “Students Come First” plan, which has Otter’s backing.

The other two bills, which re-vamp teacher contract negotiations and put merit-based pay incentives for teachers in place, have already been signed into law.

Randy Reddington said it’s time for him to shake things up a bit and do something challenging.

The longtime Rupert educator will be the first principal at Heritage Academy, a new Jerome charter school still in the process of finding a building and a teaching staff.

To Reddington, that challenge sounded just like the change he sought.

“One thing I’ve discovered is that the best way to teach kids is as if they are your only student in the classroom and you design your class around that,” he said. “This charter school’s goal is to have individualized learning plans so students can develop to the fullest extent of their abilities. A slight wind danced across the barren fields and played with the flame Paul Treglown held close to a tangled mess of whitish-gray weeds piled high in a ditch. He gave a quick nod toward fellow ditch rider Phil Murphy, then moved the torch close to the dead plants.

The flames jumped higher than Treglown’s head and burned through the jumbled weeds in a matter of seconds. Then the ditch riders moved toward a longer waterway. Treglown stayed on the ground, creating a long line of smoke and blackened ditch bank along the way while Murphy rumbled along in the truck, pulling a 250 gallon propane tank.

Friday was the fourth day of canal preparation for the Twin Falls Canal Co.

Watermaster Troy Jones said recent wet weather put crews a bit behind schedule, but water is expected to fill the High Line and Low Line canals next week. The canal company will start making water deliveries to farmers during the third week of April. Water from above Milner Dam flows into Murtaugh Lake and is diverted throughout the Magic Valley by an intricate canal network.

About 202,000 acres and hundreds of miles of ditches and canals must be cleaned out before water can run freely through Twin Falls Canal Co.’s system. Weeds must be burned and debris must be cleared completely. Treglown said he feels like he has walked across the entirety of Twin Falls — backward — at the end of each work day.

Blue Lakes Trout, pumpers announce water deal

Sale meant to ensure mitigation water, remove delivery-call pressure

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Three groups of Magic Valley groundwater pumpers will buy the majority of Blue Lakes Trout Farm’s production facilities, using associated water rights to satisfy current and future injuries done to the rights of more senior water users.

Under the deal announced Friday, pumpers will buy the Thousand Springs-area Blue Lakes Trout, Clear Lake Trout and Rim View Trout fish farms and all associated water rights. As currently flowing, that’s more than 400 cubic feet per second in Snake River Canyon springs. The “monumental” purchase should be completed by the end of this year and pumpers expect to control enough water to resolve all pending and future water calls in the Thousand Springs area, said groundwater attorney Randy Budge.

“It takes that first major fight off of the table permanently,” Budge said.

The other parties to the agreement include the North Snake and Magic Valley groundwater districts and the Southwest Irrigation District.

In addition to the water acquired, the sale essentially removes one party in a longstanding water call, Budge said. Both Blue Lakes Trout Farm and Clear Springs Foods have accused groundwater pumpers of harming their water rights in recent years, with state officials later confirming the injury. The pumpers expect to lease out the Blue Lakes fish farms to other producers, but with control of the rights they would no longer face its water call.

Though not a party to the talks leading up to Friday's agreement, the sale seems likely to resolve mitigation requested by Buhl-based Clear Springs Foods; company official Randy MacMillan said Friday that the sale "certainly creates some opportunity there."

The purchase price for the farms has not been disclosed. But the deal follows a similar 2008 agreement in which groundwater pumpers paid $10 million for 10 cfs from Pristine Springs, affecting another canyon fish farm, SeaPac of Idaho. That water has since been given to Blue Lakes Trout Farm as mitigation, meaning it will now be freed up for the pumpers to do with as they wish, Budge said.

The news comes just two weeks after the Idaho Supreme Court ruled on the handling of the Blue Lakes/Clear Springs water delivery call. The justices clarified some aspects of state water law, paving the way for Friday's purchase agreement. But they declined to weigh in on others, leaving further litigation a possibility.

Ending the cycle of lawsuits is a major goal of the sale.

"This agreement is the culmination of years of working to address the disputes which have jeopardized the trout farming industry, family farms, and the overall economic well-being of the southeastern part of the state," stated Kay Hardy, president of Blue Lakes Trout Farm, in a press release Friday. Referring to her father, trout-farm developer Earl Hardy, she continued, "We watched with sorrow as friendships and livelihoods were under constant pressure due to never-ending litigation that often produced no clear solutions."

Though the Southwest Irrigation District, largely in Cassia County, wasn't formally named as part of the Supreme Court case, board member Randy Brown said about two-thirds of the district is considered as using the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer and was thus obligated to mitigate the springs users.

The announcement continues a trend in south-central Idaho's water debates. The various parties emphasized the value of working together to resolve water calls outside of a harsh courtroom setting.

"The mutual respect allowed us to have conversations that were long overdue," North Snake Chairman Lynn Carlquist stated in the press release.

And Budge said it sets the stage for similarly negotiated resolutions to two other major pending water cases: one by a coalition of Magic Valley canal companies and irrigation districts, and another by the groundwater-using A&B Irrigation District against other pumpers. Supreme Court rulings are pending in both cases.

"Certainly ... I think we're attempting to establish some new and improved dialogue and communications and extend a hand with an olive branch in it," Budge said.

OAKLAND PARK, Fla. — A 66-year-old bank customer tackled a would-be robber Friday and restrained her until deputies arrived, the Broward County Sheriff's Office said.

When deputies asked the customer why she intervened, she replied she "was dying of cancer, figured she had nothing to lose and didn't want to see her (the robbery suspect) get away with it," said sheriff's spokesman Mike Jachles.

Asked if she was OK, she replied: "I'm fine. Thank you."

But the two men don't head home without the satisfaction and related stories of finding at least a few random objects in the canals and ditches each day. Murphy found a child's sled Friday morning and said small blowup swimming pools are dime-a-dozen ditch finds. The ditch riders described their best finds as a trampoline, hot tub, shopping carts galore and television sets. Animals sometimes stumble into the unexpected gash in the fields, and often the canal company must bring in backhoes to scrape the dead beasts out of the mud.

"We kind of enjoy it. There is something pretty enjoyable about all of this," Treglown said. "I am doing my job exactly like they did 100 years ago, except they had a horse and I have a pickup."

The ditch rider's job includes playing with fire and a willingness to get down in the mud or water when necessary.

Murphy sheepishly admitted to falling in the water every year.

"It's pretty easy to do," he said with a smile.

About 25 ditch riders prepare the canal company's waterways and then work at least six days a week in the summer as the water gurgles from Murtaugh Lake to fields that extend past Castleford to the west.

"It's going to be a good water year," Jones said. "These guys need to be good problem-solvers. They are out here alone and they deal with the farmers a lot. It's a lot of physical work."

Reform

"Reform is never easy," Otter said in a statement after Friday's House vote. "But in this case — as I and many others have been saying for years — it was necessary and appropriate. And we did it right."

Luna called it a "historic moment for the students and parents of Idaho."

"I commend members of the House for their foresight and courage in reforming our classrooms into 21st-century classrooms," he said. "This bill will provide Idaho teachers with the tools they need to ensure every student graduates from high school prepared for the world that awaits them."

It was passed against strong objections from within the education community over funding-related measures that could lead to larger classes and fewer teachers.

The bill puts $13 million toward classroom technology in the upcoming fiscal year 2012. It comes with a total price tag of $20 million when including other parts of the overhaul: the costs of more math and science requirements, and increasing starting teacher salaries to $30,000.

It also comes as schools face state budget cuts of $47 million next year as the state awaits an economic recovery.

Rep. Bob Nonini, R-Coeur d'Alene and the bill's sponsor, cast the debate as one in which the difficult economic times and changing world require a different mindset. Idahoans have already had to change their ways to do more with less, he said. "Now we must do it to education also."

Money was central to Friday's debate.

Costs associated with the reform package will only go up as the program grows and laptops are given to first teachers, then students. The cost for fiscal year 2013 is $60.69 million, an increase that reflects merit pay, laptops and training for educators.

"I'm concerned about the ongoing cost we may have here," said Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum.

Jaquet said that while the bill doesn't require school district consolidation, financial information provided to lawmakers covers $10.74 million of the plan's annual costs by suggesting that school districts in 10 counties be funded as if they were consolidated by county.

House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said the Legislature will set its budget each year in the future and can continue to look for the best options.

This upcoming year, for example, the plan's $13 million for classroom technology is coming from keeping on additional state tax auditors, he said.

"We'll be able to adjust to the conditions of next year," he said.

Bedke also said that $51.6 million in federal jobs money for schools Idaho receives provides another cushion to offset costs, commending school districts for only tapping $5.1 million of the $51.6 million this year and preserving the rest.

Some claim hole forced plane to land

PHOENIX (AP) — A Southwest Airlines flight from Phoenix to California was diverted Friday to a military base in Yuma due to rapid decompression in the plane, federal officials said.

Ian Gregor, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman, said the cause of the decompression wasn't immediately known, but some passengers on Flight 812 to Sacramento said there was a hole in the cabin that caused a rapid descent.

"It dropped pretty quick," said passenger Brenda Reese, who provided cellphone photographs of the cabin damage on the Boeing 737. The pictures showed a panel hanging open above the plane's middle aisle.

"It's at the top of the plane, right up above where you store your luggage," Reese told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. "The panel's not completely off. It's like ripped down, but you can see completely outside."

Reese said the plane had just left Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport when she awoke after hearing a "gunshot-like sound" in the cabin and oxygen masks dropped.

You are what you order

FDA rules would require menus to show calories

By Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Like it or not, many restaurant diners may soon know more about what they are eating under menu labeling requirements proposed Friday by the Food and Drug Administration.

The requirements would force chain restaurants with 20 or more locations, along with bakeries, grocery stores, convenience stores and coffee chains, to clearly post the number of calories in each item on menus. The new rules may also apply to vending machines where calorie information isn't visible on the package.

The calorie counts will apply to an estimated 280,000 establishments and could be on menus by 2012. Required as part of health overhaul legislation signed into law last year, they are designed to give restaurant diners information that has long been available on packaged goods cooked at home. The FDA estimates that a third of calories are consumed while eating out.

"We've got a huge obesity problem in this country and its due in part to excess calorie consumption outside the home," says Mike Taylor, FDA deputy commissioner for foods. "Consumers generally when you ask them say they would prefer to have that information."

But don't expect calorie shock when ordering at the movie theater, where a tub of popcorn can contain well north of a thousand calories — movie theaters are exempt, along with airplanes, bowling alleys and other businesses whose primary business is not to sell food, according to the FDA. Movie theaters pushed to be left out after guidelines published last year included them.

Alcohol will also be exempted, according to the agency. Margo Wootan, director of nutrition policy at the advocacy group Center for Science in the Public Interest, says that could be misleading to consumers.

"I think it's going to be confusing if customers see the calories for soft drinks and juice labeled on the menu but not other drinks such as beer and wine," she said. "It will make it seem like they are better choices."

Still, Wootan says the guidelines are a positive step.

"You won't have to get out of line and go back to some poster by the bathroom and look at some item in a tiny font size," she says. "It will be right there on the menu where you are getting your other information about what to order."

Many restaurants currently post nutritional information in a hallway, on a hamburger wrapper or on their website. The new law will make calories immediately available for most items.

Murtaugh folks talk over community goals

By Sky Buffat
Times-News correspondent

MURTAUGH — Murtaugh residents came together Thursday evening to discuss how the small town can make and accomplish its goals together for the future.

Forty-eight people showed up at City Hall to share their hopes for the eastern Twin Falls County town.

"This isn't a night to fix things that are broke," said Brad Perkins, owner of the town's True Value hardware store. "It's a night to get excited, make some goals and throw some ideas out."

While only 115 Idahoans call Murtaugh home, about 1,200 more live in the town's outskirts. City leaders mailed 447 flyers announcing the meeting to households within the 83344 ZIP code.

At times when the water is high in the Snake River, many visitors come through the small town in search of a heyday on the Snake's rapid-rich Murtaugh stretch. Other attractions Murtaugh residents would like to promote include the Magic Man Triathlon in June and the town's proximity to Murtaugh Lake.

"Murtaugh isn't just a city, it's a community," City Councilman Marc Barry said. "We want to find out what the lifeblood, the wants and needs, of our community really are."

"We've seen the communities around grow by 10 to 13 percent each decade," Barry said. "Murtaugh hasn't seen any net changes in four decades. We are excited about who we are regardless of who's here, we just want to be able to capture the changing dynamic and also hold fast to traditions."

Two main goals for the Murtaugh area were decided on during the meeting — beautification and economic growth. Needs expressed included a return of the town's annual Friendship Days celebration, a town website, a city RV dump, a local fueling station, a publication to promote Murtaugh and surrounding attractions, and participation in the upcoming May 7 Johnny Horizon cleanup day.

"I remember what this town used to be like," Tanner Stanger said. "Wherever it starts, I want that again for my kids. Whatever it takes, I'll stand behind it. I want people to come through here and really get why we live in Murtaugh."

With a location midway between Twin Falls and Burley, citizens said looking at how the city's area of impact can be managed to attract new residents would also be beneficial.

"The city's worked hard in developing our infrastructure," Barry said. "We could about double the number of users on our water and sewer system right now. It's a matter of perception, too. We want others to see who we are, to come and drink the Kool-Aid too."

A selection of volunteers and nominees formed a committee to provide leadership toward the city's new goals. A desire to include more of the town's Latino population was also expressed.

Two injured in accident near Filer

Times-News

Two people were hospitalized with minor injuries suffered in a Thursday vehicle accident near Filer.

Shortly after 8 p.m., Doug King of Wendell failed to stop at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 as he traveled westbound on 3800 North Road. According to Idaho State Police Trooper Nick Walker, King's white 2003 Ford Taurus collided with the right rear end of a gray 2007 Ford Explorer driven by California resident Sidney Harrison.

Upon impact, Harrison's northbound vehicle left the roadway and rolled into an empty field, landing on its roof. Two of three occupants in his vehicle were transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical center. None of the four occupants of King's Taurus were injured.

King was cited for failure to stop at a stop sign.

QUOTE

“If you put a major city through a trash grinder and sprinkle it on the water, that’s what you’re dealing with.”
— Seattle oceanographer Curt Ebbsmeyer, who is tracking the massive debris field moving across the Pacific Ocean from Japan since last month’s tsunami

Republicans make sure lawyers’ kids go to college

JEERS: Do you agree with U.S. District Judge Lynn Winmill’s decision last month to restrict participation in Idaho’s primary elections by those who aren’t Republicans or Democrats?

If not, you’re gonna to pay for it anyway.

The Legislature’s Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee voted last week to appropriate $100,000 in taxpayer money to compensate the attorneys who won the Republicans’ case.

Excuse us?

If the shoe were on the other foot, do you think the GOP-controlled joint committee would spend a nickel on the Democrats’ lawyers?

Most Idahoans — and 42 percent of them are neither Republicans nor Democrats, according to one survey — don’t want their freedom at the ballot box circumscribed by party bosses.

Paying off well-upholstered attorneys on the taxpayer’s dime is an outrage.

CHEERS: To the Idaho Fish and Game Commission, for hiring a pro as the next director of the Department of Fish and Game.

Virgil Moore, who began his career with Fish and Game 30 years ago tagging cutthroat trout on the South Fork of the Snake River, was appointed this week to succeed Cal Groen as the head of one of Idaho’s lightning-rod public agencies.

Moore’s work is cut out for him. He’s now Fish and Game’s frontman for wolf management, a thorny subject in a state where the wolf population has ballooned in the past 20 years, irritating some hunting groups that blame wolves for the decline of some of the state’s prized wild elk herds and confounding ranchers dealing with livestock losses.

In an agreement brokered by the U.S. Department of the Interior, stakeholders last month agreed to reopen the wolf hunting seasons in Idaho and Montana pending the approval of U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy.

Moore said Thursday the challenge facing his agency is finding ways to manage all predators roaming the Idaho’s forests, backcountry and ranges.

“It’s not just about wolves, it’s about predators and predator management and recognizing that those predators are here to stay,” he said.

Before his promotion, Moore worked as deputy director for field operations, a position he had held since 2007. In 2005 he was named director of the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, but he stepped down less than a year later to move back to Idaho for family reasons.

During Moore’s career in Idaho, he has served as bureau chief for fisheries and chief of the agency’s education and information division.

Moore knows the Idaho backcountry like the back of his hand, and more importantly understands the delicate politics of game management in this state.

JEERS: To state Rep. Steve Thayne, R-Emmett, for his 11th-hour effort to strip school districts’ driving training programs of state funding.

The House Education Committee voted this week that parents should pay more for the privilege of their kids’ driving, and that those families that can’t afford to pay more can opt to wait for their teens to turn 17, the age at which driver training is not required to get a license.

AAA Idaho estimates the legislation would double the cost for the 10,000 Idaho families whose kids take driving training in public schools.

Representing fewer than 6 percent of licensed drivers in Idaho, motorists aged 15 to 19 are involved in 2.6 times as many car wrecks as would be expected statistically. In 2009, nearly one out of every four crashes involved a youthful driver.

Currently, students pay $125 for programs administered by the schools. The driver training account reimburses the schools $125 for each student.

Harold Ott, representing the Idaho Rural Schools Association, says financially distressed rural areas might opt not to provide driver training without the current state reimbursement.

This isn’t a fiscal question and it isn’t an education matter: It’s a public safety issue.

Idaho ranks 16th among the 50 states in traffic fatalities per 100 million vehicle miles, ahead of Utah, Oregon and Washington. The last thing we need is more amateurs on the road.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hagerman heroes helped save husband

On March 26, my husband took me to Miracle Hot Springs. After getting out, he complained he didn’t feel well and thought he had heartburn. I went into Hometown Mart to get him a drink. When I returned, he was rigid, red and gasping for breath. I yelled for someone to call 911 and began CPR. A lady joined me and encouraged me to keep up compressions, but he was on the passenger side and I was not effective. A man got my husband out of the car and onto the pavement. The other lady placed her jacket under his head and I could get good solid compressions.

My husband started breathing on his own, so I stopped CPR, waiting for rescue to arrive. Suddenly, he stopped breathing again. I started CPR again; it was exhausting so the other lady and I took turns. Hagerman Rescue arrived and went into action. One man took over CPR; they set up the auto defibrillator. My husband had to be shocked twice.

Gooding Ambulance was 20 minutes out. Hagerman Rescue was spot on perfect as they saved my husband’s life. He was talking and coherent when put into the ambulance. He is alive and well today because of some heroes in Hagerman. I want to thank the lady who helped do CPR and the man who took my husband out of the car. And a big thanks to the Hagerman Rescue team.

A helping hand in the pouring rain

On March 21 while visiting Twin Falls for my son’s wedding, our alarm horn malfunctioned in our Jeep. We were staying in Motel 6 and with the constant sound of the horn blaring, we decided to drive it across the street to the Winco parking lot. It was pouring rain and a few cars drove past us, but before we knew it a very nice young man named Matt pulled up and got out to help us in the pouring rain and would not accept any money from us.

We want to say thank you to him for his assistance during a stressful time.

U.S. society disconnected from its troops

“An epidemic of disconnection.” That’s how journalist and author Bob Woodward has described the increasing distance between the small community of military personnel who are bearing the burden of war and American society in general.

For a while, the flags on porches and magnetic ribbons on cars gave plausibility to the notion that, irrespective of whether Americans supported the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, they supported the troops.

Those wars are now among the nation’s longest, and the American people are tired. Not tired of the repeated deployments in which literally 99 percent of them have no part. They have tired of even thinking about war and its consequences for the men and women who have volunteered to serve.

The wars in Afghanistan and Iraq did not remotely factor into the November elections. President Barack Obama gave them only a passing reference in his 62-minute State of the Union address in January. A February CBS News poll found a paltry 4 percent of respondents who thought the wars were the most important issue for the country. And that was before the public was distracted by an imperiled NFL season and a perverted obsession with Charlie Sheen.

Marine Lt. Gen. John Kelly lost his son, 2nd Lt. Robert Kelly, to a land mine in southern Afghanistan in November. Addressing a group of fellow Marines days later, he expressed his frustration at the epidemic of disconnection. “We are in a life-and-death struggle, but not the whole country,” the Washington Post’s Greg Jaffe quoted him as saying. “One percent of Americans are touched by this war. Then there is a much smaller club of families who have given all.”

“... the American people are ... tired of even thinking about war and its consequences for the men and women who have volunteered to serve.”

Army Col. David Sutherland is one of the 1 percenters. As commander of the 3rd Brigade Combat Team in Iraq’s Diyala province, Sutherland committed to visit every seriously wounded soldier and pay respects to every dead soldier in his unit, an effort movingly documented by the New York Times in 2007.

In 2008, Sutherland was assigned to the Pentagon as the Joint Staff’s chief of planning for the Middle East. His heart was still with the wounded he visited every day at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. During those visits, he began working with nonprofit organizations dedicated to helping wounded warriors and veterans.

Eventually, Sutherland’s accomplishments in coordinating services became known back at the Pentagon. In 2010, he became the first special assistant to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for warrior and family support. Now he travels the country, connecting donors in the private sector with needs that can be served by nonprofit organizations, and reconnecting men and women in uniform to the communities from which they came.

“We have to recognize that our returning veterans, our families, our families of the fallen, when they reintegrate back into civil society, they come back to their families, their neighbors and their communities, they don’t come back to government programs.” The Department of Defense and Veterans Administration have vital roles to play. But bureaucracies can’t coordinate and collaborate services at the local level.

“We recognize that, up front, government can’t do it all,” Sutherland says. “But independent organizations and group efforts within the communities make a significant difference.” It goes without saying that such efforts are also the antidote to the epidemic of disconnection.

“The signature wounds of Iraq and Afghanistan are post-traumatic stress, traumatic brain injury,” he said. “They manifest themselves in front of our families where we look the same but we act differently, and everyone expects us to come home and act the same. And the truth is that some understanding, some connection ... will enable us to (reach) that capacity for greatness that I’ve seen on the battlefield.

“I’ve seen valor on the battlefield, a series of noble acts over a period of time under the harshest of conditions. And I’ve seen valor when they come home.” Sometimes, though, valor isn’t enough. That’s when the connection to a community can make a difference.

“These kids are amazing,” Sutherland says, an album of battlefield memories flashing in his eyes. “They have so much to offer. They go places and do things that you can’t imagine. And they have individual and collective discipline. They have courage and they’re kind. And when that comes together, it’s phenomenal. And all they need is a little help. And that’s the community connecting.

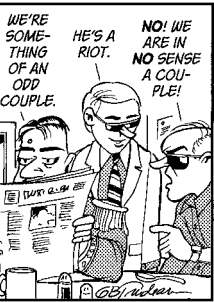

“They are gonna be contributing members of society for years to come — positive, contributing members of society. And it’s when they connect and they relate that you see ‘em thrive. And they have so much to offer. They are so unbelievable. And quite honestly, we owe it to ‘em.”

A connection to the nation they’ve served is the least we owe to them.

Western lawmakers try to lift wolf protections despite deal

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. — Lawmakers in the West said Friday they will keep pushing to lift federal protections for gray wolves despite a proposed settlement between environmental groups and the Obama administration.

The settlement would end a decade of lawsuits over the animals. But it faces significant legal hurdles that leave uncertain whether court approval will come before lawmakers act.

Approval is being sought from a judge who has twice ruled against attempts to lift wolf protections. Also, the deal faces opposition from some wildlife advocates who say their prior court victories are being squandered in a political compromise.

Given the uncertainties, U.S. Sen. Jon Tester, of Montana, told The Associated Press he won't wait to push through his legislation taking wolves off the endangered list in Montana and Idaho.

An identical measure already was approved by the U.S. House, through a provision tucked into the pending budget bill.

"That's ultimately the best solution," said Idaho Republican Rep. Mike Simpson, who authored the House provision. "I do think the language that we put in the bill will pass both the House and the Senate, and we're going to continue to keep it in (the budget bill.)"

The settlement agreement would lift protections at least temporarily for about 1,250 wolves and allow hunting in Idaho and Montana. But protections would be retained — for now — for almost 400 wolves in Wyoming and portions of Utah, Washington and Oregon.

An adult male wolf from the Lazy Creek pack north of Whitefish, Mont., is seen in 2004. A proposed legal settlement over the status of gray wolves in the Northern Rockies could be trumped by Congress, as lawmakers say they are not going to wait for the settlement to be finalized before pushing ahead with their bills to strip wolves of federal protection.

Wolf-fearing lawmakers want Idaho to declare emergency

BOISE (AP) — Wolf-fearing lawmakers want Idaho to declare a disaster emergency that could include enlisting local law enforcement officers to help eradicate packs of the predators.

Rep. Judy Boyle from west-central Idaho, one of Idaho's most active wolf opponents, told a hastily organized meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee that residents feel physically and psychologically threatened.

Environmentalists backing the deal say it could allow wolf populations to expand sharply in Oregon and Washington — an outcome Simpson said he hopes to avert. The deal also calls for a scientific review in several years that could put the species back on the endangered list if too many wolves are killed by hunting.

No wolves have been documented attacking humans, but the predators kill dozens or hundreds of sheep, cattle, hunting dogs and wild game, including deer and elk, annually.

Boyle wants a new law giving the governor authority to declare a disaster emergency that allows rapid steps to be taken against wolves until the species is delisted, or the emergency no longer exists.

Gray wolves once roamed most of the country but were largely exterminated from the lower 48 states by the early 1930s. A reintroduction program trapped some in Canada and released them in the U.S.

U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy in Montana has twice rejected attempts by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to declare wolves recovered in the Northern Rockies.

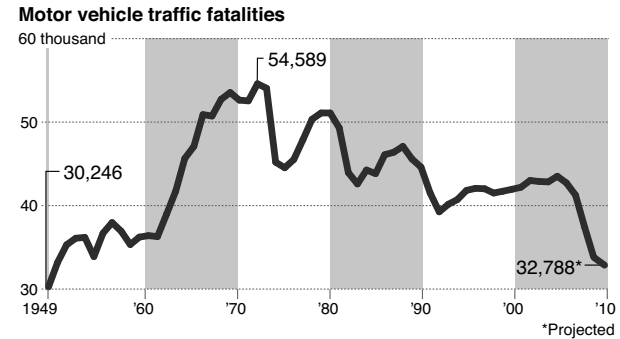

The proposed settlement was filed with Molloy on March 18. He held a hearing last week, but made no decision.

"I don't know when Judge Molloy is going to decide which way to go, whether to accept the settlement or not," Sen. Tester told the AP. He added that he was "looking for any opportunity" to pass a provision that would force the Department of Interior to lift protections.

Tester's proposal, like Simpson's, would shield that action from court review.

Highway deaths fall to lowest level since 1949

By Ken Thomas
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Highway deaths have fallen to levels not seen since the Korean War, helped by more people wearing seat belts, better safety equipment in cars and efforts to curb drunken driving.

The Transportation Department estimated Friday that 32,788 people were killed on U.S. roads in 2010, a decrease of about 3 percent from 2009. It's the fewest number of deaths since 1949 — during the presidency of Harry Truman — when more than 30,000 people were killed. Since 2005, highway deaths have fallen about 25 percent.

The Pacific Northwest region, which includes Washington state, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Alaska, saw fatalities fall 12 percent. Western states including Arizona, California and Hawaii also posted large declines.

Government officials said the number of deaths was still significant but credited efforts on multiple fronts to make roadways safer.

"Despite this good news, we are not going to rest on our laurels," Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said Friday. "The number of people killed in preventable roadway tragedies is still too high. We need to keep doing all that we can to make sure that vehicles are as safe as they can possibly be and drivers are making responsible decisions behind the wheel."

The numbers are projections for 2010. The government expects to release final data on deaths and injuries, including specific state-by-state totals, later this year.

Traffic deaths typically decline during an economic downturn because many motorists cut back on discretionary travel. The number of deaths fell in the early 1980s and early 1990s, when the U.S. economy was struggling.

But people spent more time in their cars last year, making the estimates more noteworthy. The number of miles traveled by American drivers in 2010 grew by 20.5 billion, or 0.7 percent, compared with 2009, according to the Federal Highway Administration. The number of miles traveled increased slightly in 2009 after declines in the previous two years.

Separately, the rate of 1.09 deaths per 100 million miles traveled is estimated to have hit a record low in 2010, the lowest since 1949. The previous record was in 2009, which had a rate of 1.13 deaths per 100 million miles traveled.

Pilot hurt after plane collides with trees

MOSCOW — An Alaska pilot is recovering from injuries suffered when his plane crashed after colliding with trees during a crop dusting run in northern Idaho.

Authorities say 31-year-old Morgan Stanton, of Fairbanks, Alaska, crashed his Cessna Friday afternoon outside the town of Palouse. The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating the accident. Local authorities say Stanton was spraying a nearby farm field moments before his plane clipped a line of trees then crashed to the ground.

The Moscow-Pullman Daily News reports Stanton suffered a broken arm, injured knee and a head injury and is being treated in the Pullman Regional Hospital in Pullman, Wash.

Officials study best time to treat milfoil

SANDPOINT — Local and federal officials are trying to reach agreement on the best time for treating Lake Pend Oreille in the annual battle against the pesky Eurasian milfoil infestations.

The Bonner County Aquatic Invasive Species Task Force announced this week it had identified more than a dozen treatment sites, including a few public beach areas. Some members of the task force are lobbying to treat the lake in early summer to avoid conflict with the busy summer beach and swimming season.

But officials with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service say the treatments are most effective when the water is warm, and treatments earlier in the season could conflict with the agency's management of bull trout habitat.

Tom Woolf, aquatic plants manager for the Idaho Department of Agriculture, told the Bonner County Daily Bee about $1.6 million has been set aside to manage milfoil infestations this summer in one of Idaho's most prized lakes.

Bill would limit location of wind farms

BOISE — Wind farms would be forbidden within two miles of a residential property without the owner's permission, according to a measure that proposes strict new limits on where the tall turbines could be built.

Its sponsor is Rep. Tom Loertscher, a Republican whose eastern Idaho district is near the epicenter of residents' concerns about the proliferation of wind turbines.

Loertscher's bill would also forbid counties from approving wind energy facilities whose spinning blades cast a flickering shadow on somebody else's property. He told the House Ways and Means Committee on Friday that such flickering shadows can be extremely disconcerting to drivers who may fear a semi-truck is bearing down on them.

WASHINGTON STATE

Officials try to trace radioactive milk

SPOKANE — That slightly radioactive milk found in Spokane could have come from anywhere in the state or northern Idaho.

The Washington Department of Agriculture says the Darigold plant in Spokane that bottled the milk receives its supply from dairies across the state and the panhandle of Idaho. The radiation levels are below the level of public health concern and the agency says milk produced in the state remains safe to drink.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency this week said Japan's radioactive fallout is showing up in milk in Washington and California, most likely after a cow ate tainted grass or drank puddles of rainwater containing it. Iodine-131, the type that was found, is short-lived and decays fairly quickly, becoming harmless.

Daniel Stewart Rose

Aug. 2, 1926–March 28, 2011

RUPERT — On Monday, March 28, 2011, Daniel Stewart Rose, after fighting a brave battle against congestive heart failure, died with his loving family surrounding him.

Son of Daniel Webster and Emma Elizabeth Rose, he is survived by his wife, Peggy; daughter, Bonny (Jess) Spencer; son, Daniel M. (Tina) Rose; sister, Carol; six grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

He grew up in Inkoma, Idaho, in a family of six children. Called "Danny" by most friends and loved ones, he enjoyed racing his 1962 Chevrolet Impala SS at the Pocatello Speedway, pheasant hunting, playing golf, taking occasional trips to Jackpot, Nev., was a longtime league bowler with his wife, walking in the outdoors with his wife and loved spending time with his family.

Daniel served in the U.S. Navy during World War II aboard a destroyer in the Pacific Ocean. Later, he worked for the Union Pacific Railroad and made it his career, retiring in 1986. Daniel was devoted to his family and provided a good life for them. Daniel was married to his wife, Peggy, for 54 years, celebrating their Golden Anniversary in 2007.

Originally indoctrinated into the LDS faith, Daniel converted to Catholicism after marrying his wife, Peggy. He remained a devout Catholic for the rest of his days and was loved by all in his congregation. Daniel coached his son in Little League baseball, supported his daughter during her tenure in the Mi-Cadets and was a loving father and husband.

The funeral will be held 11 a.m. Monday, April 4, at St. Nicholas Catholic Church. Rosary and vigil services will be held at 5 p.m. Sunday, April 3, also at the church. Services will conclude with burial in the Rupert Cemetery. Services are under the direction of Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel.

AROUND THE WORLD

UNITED STATES

Union law likely on hold for 2 months

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin's polarizing union rights law is on hold for about two months after a judge said Friday that a restraining order blocking it will stay in place she while considers whether Republicans passed it illegally.

Republicans had been pushing the law through despite a boycott by Democratic state senators and weeks of protests that drew as many as 85,000 people to the state Capitol. But they suffered a defeat Thursday when the same judge declared the law was not enacted last week as Republicans had claimed.

Dane County Circuit Judge Maryann Sumi on Friday extended indefinitely a temporary restraining order preventing the secretary of state from putting the law in effect. She is considering a lawsuit that says Republican lawmakers didn't provide the proper public notice when they convened a special committee to amend the plan before its passage. The state has appealed the order to the Wisconsin Supreme Court, but the court has not indicated whether it will take the case and has no deadline for making a decision.

Republicans could try to get around the issue by passing the bill again, but party leaders said again Friday they have no plans to do that.

JAPAN

Official on 1st visit to tsunami-hit villages

RIKUZENTAKATA — Japan's prime minister laid eyes on the extensive damage in the northeast for the first time today as troops troled the decimated coastline in an all-out search for any remaining bodies swept out to sea by a tsunami three weeks ago.

More than 16,000 people are still missing after the disaster, which officials fear may have killed some 25,000 people. The magnitude-9.0 earthquake and ensuing tsunami also ravaged a nuclear power plant.

Prime Minister Naoto Kan went to the Fukushima Dai-ichi complex immediately after the wave knocked out cooling systems, leaving workers unable to control overheating nuclear reactors and allowing radiation to seep out.

But today marked his first visit to some of the dozens of villages, towns and cities wiped out in the March 11 disaster.

AFGHANISTAN

Afghans storm UN office; 7 foreigners killed

KABUL — Afghans angry over the burning of a Quran at a small Florida church stormed a U.N. compound in northern Afghanistan on Friday, killing seven foreigners, including four Nepalese guards.

Afghan authorities suspect insurgents melded into the mob and they announced the arrest of more than 20 people, including a militant they suspect was the ringleader of the assault in Mazar-i-Sharif, the provincial capital of Balkh province. The suspect was an insurgent from Kapisa province, a hotbed of militancy about 250 miles south-east of the city, said Rawof Taj, deputy provincial police chief.

Union Pacific, Idahoan Foods move to end dispute over accident

The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Union Pacific and Idahoan Foods asked Friday that a federal judge throw out their dispute over a 2009 derailment the railroad claimed was caused by dehydrated mashed potato product.

A motion filed by the companies' attorneys in U.S. District Court in Omaha requests the dismissal but does not give an explanation. Union Pacific spokesman Mark Davis declined to comment on whether a settlement was reached. Idahoan Foods' attorney Justin High called it an "amicable resolution."

The Omaha-based railroad sued Idahoan Foods LLC in October, claiming the company's workers caused a February 2009 derailment at its North Platte rail yard by neglecting to clean dehydrated mashed potato product off the wheels of some freight cars. The lawsuit was initially filed in state court but later transferred to federal court.

Union Pacific was seeking nearly $242,000 in damages.

Lewisville, Idaho-based Idahoan Foods makes dehydrated potato flakes that the company says rival the taste of homemade mashed potatoes, but the flakes apparently aren't as easy to transport as whole potatoes. Union Pacific said in its lawsuit that potato flakes stuck on the wheels of railcars loaded by Idahoan Foods rendered the rail yard's braking system ineffective before the derailment.

At Union Pacific's North Platte rail yard, workers use two hills to break apart some of the more than 150 trains that pass through the yard every day. After the cars are pushed up the hills, workers break apart the train and allow gravity to send railcars rolling onto a new track to join a train headed to their destination.

The railroad said in its lawsuit that Idahoan knew before the derailment that it needed to clean the wheels of its railcars before handing them over to Union Pacific.

Steve Strand, who has owned the Radio Shack in Hamilton, Mont. for seven years, poses in front of his store on Tuesday.

Despite criticism, RadioShack owner to continue gun giveaways

The Associated Press

HAMILTON, Mont. — A Montana RadioShack owner said he will continue to give away guns with satellite television subscriptions despite the corporation's insistence he halt the promotion.

Since October, independent dealer Steve Strand has been offering a gift card for a $125 pistol or $115 shotgun and a free background check to customers who sign up for two-year Dish Network packages.

Those not interested in the firearms can opt for a $50 pizza gift certificate.

RadioShack Corp. officials called Strand on Tuesday and ordered him to pull the promotion, he told the Ravalli Republic newspaper. Strand refused, saying he is within his rights as a le-

"They feel like maybe we're spoiling their brand name. I think I'm bringing a lot of attention to their brand."

— Montana RadioShack dealer Steve Strand, on the company's reaction to his offer of free guns to new Dish Network subscribers gal dealer and is now seeking legal representation.

"RadioShack has taken the position that we're tarnishing their brand image with the promotion," he said. "I don't think this is a negative impact. I don't think they understand the way of life in Montana."

A statement last week from RadioShack Corp. said Strand's offer does not follow the corporation's marketing practices.

In an attempt to appease the company, Strand has taken down the sign in his window that said: "Protect yourself with Dish Network. Sign up now, get free gun."

In its place is a sign advertising a website Strand set up detailing the promotion, www.GetaGun.net.

Dish Network spokesman Marc Lumpkin said Strand is an independent retailer and can offer whatever promotion he wishes.

"We've not objected to what he's offering. We're neutral on his decision to offer the firearm promotion," Lumpkin said.

He said Dish Network is reviewing Strand's marketing materials but declined to say whether the promotion has resulted in an uptick of subscriptions.

Strand had planned a similar promotion with DirecTV later this month, but after word of the promotion made international headlines, DirecTV said it would not participate in the giveaway.

The attention has resulted in calls from people out of state asking if they can take advantage of the promotion, Strand said.

He's gotten just two negative calls, one from the corporation and one from a RadioShack store owner in New York, he said.

"They feel like maybe we're spoiling their brand name. I think I'm bringing a lot of attention to their brand," Strand said.

Libya-owned bank got 73 loans from Fed after Lehman collapse

By Donal Griffin and Bob Ivry
Bloomberg News

NEW YORK— Arab Banking Corp., the lender part-owned by the Central Bank of Libya, used a New York branch to get 73 loans from the Federal Reserve in the 18 months after Lehman Brothers Holdings collapsed.

The bank, then 29 percent-owned by Libya, had aggregate borrowings in that period of $35 billion — while the largest single loan amount outstanding was $1.2 billion in July 2009, according to Fed data released Thursday. In October 2008, when lending to financial institutions by the central bank's so-called discount window peaked at $111 billion, Arab Banking took repeated loans totaling more than $2 billion.

Fed officials say all the discount window loans made during the worst financial crisis since the 1930s have been repaid with interest.

The United States has frozen assets linked to the regime of Libyan ruler Moammar Gadhafi and engaged in air strikes against his military forces, which are battling a rebel uprising in the North African country. Arab Banking got an exemption that allows the firm to continue operating while barring it from engaging in any transactions with the Libyan government, according to the Treasury Department.

"It is incomprehensible to me that while creditworthy small businesses in Vermont and throughout the country could not receive affordable loans, the Federal Reserve was providing tens of billions of dollars in credit to a bank that is substantially owned by the Central Bank of Libya," Sen. Bernard Sanders of Vermont, an independent who caucuses with Democrats, wrote in a letter to Fed and federal officials.

The letter was addressed to Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke, Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and John Walsh, acting comptroller of the currency. The figure refers to the aggregate amount of loans the bank received under federal lending programs. Arab Banking, known as ABC, owed about $4 billion to the Fed under other bailout programs in the fall of 2009, data released in December show.

"ABC has a robust balance sheet, is amply capitalized and currently maintains a comfortable liquidity position," the company said in an emailed statement. "ABC currently has no outstanding loans under any Federal Reserve, or other, emergency

Debunking 5 myths about shopping

By Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — If you think a super-sized container of peanut butter is always a better deal than a tiny version, think again. Bigger is not always cheaper. And don't count on getting a bargain on designer goods at an outlet or off-price chain.

Here are five common but mistaken assumptions about bargains — plus tips for avoiding getting fooled into paying too much.

MYTH NO. 1. Bigger packages and larger quantities are more economical than buying small.

Often, yes. But Tod Marks, a senior project editor at Consumer Reports, says smaller sizes are actually cheaper about one-fourth of the time. He recommends checking the unit prices — cost per ounce or other element of the package — to find the best deal.

BOTTOM LINE: Read the fine print, and don't assume.

MYTH NO. 2. Black Friday, the day after Thanksgiving, is the best day of the year to buy clothes, housewares, electronics and gifts.

Sure, the promotions on that ballyhooed day are quite alluring, particularly on TVs and other electronics. But are the bargains so amazing that you should wake up at the crack of dawn and join the crowds? Definitely not. Many of the biggest deals, particularly on

THE SERIES

This is part three of our four-part "Money Myths" series by the Associated Press. On Thursday, we featured, "5 money myths that can derail the inexperienced," followed on Friday by "Ten myths about college financial aid and the truths behind them." On Sunday, we'll wrap up the series with "What's better: Owning a home or renting?" which seeks to dispel myths behind home ownership.

TVs and computers, are very limited: Your chances of grabbing one of the 25 heavily advertised flat-panel TVs your store is selling at 50 percent off are slim.

In fact, many of the traditional marquee promotions — like January "white sales," when department stores discounted bedding and bath linens — have melted away. Michael Londrigan, chairman of the fashion merchandising department at LIM College in Manhattan, points to Macy's for an example: It now offers sales on bedding throughout the year.

Jodi Furman, who blogs about saving without sacrificing at www.LiveFabuLess.com, says Black Friday is more of an emotional event people get caught up in than it is an opportunity for special savings.

"You can find better deals during regular sales events," Furman says.

Retailers are now running significant promotions all year long, from free shipping to 50 percent discounts to buy-one-get-one-free, says Marks.

BOTTOM LINE: Go online, whether by computer or one of many dedicated smartphone apps, and compare, compare, compare.

MYTH NO. 3. Outlets sell mainly extras and leftovers from their own regular-price stores.

Actually, outlets vary by merchant. Some stock their outlets mostly with items direct from their own regular stores. But many others buy specifically for the outlet division or, like Brooks Brothers and Gap, have goods made specifically for these second-tier stores.

At Nordstrom Rack, for example, about 80 percent of the stock is purchased specifically for sale there and just 20 percent has been transferred from full-price Nordstrom department stores. But Colin Johnson, a Nordstrom spokesman, notes that much of the Nordstrom Rack stock is excess inventory from the same vendors whose goods Nordstrom stores routinely carry.

BOTTOM LINE: Check the label of anything you're considering buying to determine whether it was made for the outlet, says Marks. Or ask a salesperson.

lending program.”

Jack Gutt, a spokesman for the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, declined to comment. Arab Banking said Dec. 2 that Libya's stake in the Manama, Bahrain-based lender had increased to 59 percent.

“There was an uneasy detente between the United States and Libya” when the loans were made, said William Poole, senior economic adviser to Merk Investments and a former president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

The New York branch, on Park Avenue in midtown Manhattan, deals mainly in trade finance, according to its website. David Siegel is the branch's treasurer. The bank's chairman is Mohammed Husain Layas, chief executive officer of the Libyan Investment Authority.

Shopping

MYTH NO. 4. A weekly outing — with a list in hand — to Walmart, Target or another big box discounter is the best way to save on groceries.

Yes, shopping at Target or Walmart for a typical basket of 45 items will save you 15 percent to 25 percent, says Bob Buchanan, a retail consultant in St. Louis, Mo. But shoppers would do even better by scouring for deals at local grocery stores as well. Remember, too, that super-size stores can tempt you to go off-list and spend much more than you intend buying clothing, toys and other goods.

BOTTOM LINE: Furman recommends constantly

ty. The CEO is Bahrain-based Hassan Ali Juma.

Arab Banking reported a loss of $880 million in 2008 as it took a $1.1 billion charge tied to structured investment vehicles and derivative products known as collateralized debt obligations. Arab Banking recovered during the next two years, posting profits totaling $265 million. Libya previously shared the bank with the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority and the Kuwait Investment Authority, both sovereign investment funds. The Libyan Central Bank bought out the Abu Dhabi stake in 2010 and took majority control, which prompted Fitch Ratings in December to downgrade Arab Banking's credit rating.

In March, after the U.S. froze Libya's assets, Fitch downgraded the bank's credit rating again, this time to “junk” status.

comparing prices for specific items at discounters with grocers and other stores.

MYTH NO. 5. Food costs more at drug stores.

In reality, compared with grocery chains, many drug stores sell basics like milk, eggs and household cleaning and paper goods for less. The idea is that then shoppers will buy other more profitable items. Some drug chains, including Walgreens and CVS, have loyalty programs that — if used carefully and consistently — can net a shopper occasional savings up to 80 percent, says Furman.

BOTTOM LINE: Drug stores are becoming increasingly like mass retailers so include them in your rounds when you're buying staples.

Wood River students to compete in Boise

Four Wood River High School students are heading to Boise Thursday through April 9 for state competitions for Family Career and Community Leaders of America.

A national student organization, FCCLA is part of family and consumer sciences classes at the high school. These students took first place at the district FCCLA.

BLM geologist to speak on Bonneville Flood

One of the defining moments in history in the Rupert area came in the form of the catastrophic Bonneville Flood, according to Steve Lubinski, a geologist for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Lubinski will speak about the ages-old, massive flood at 10 a.m. April 9 at the Historic Wilson Theatre community room. The event is a fundraiser for the Wilson Theatre.

Lubinski will show how the Bonneville Flood affected the area around Rupert and south-central Idaho in general.

“Rupert has a rich geological history, which has definied the landscape as we see it and interact with it today,” Lubinski said. “From the broad Snake River

Plain, to the fresh lava flows at Craters of the Moon National Monument, to the thousand springs of the Snake River Canyon and the rich wind deposited soil that fuel our agricultural economy, geology tells the story of our earth’s history.”

The public is invited to learn of the effects that hundreds of cubic miles of flood water had on the Snake River Canyon and surrounding areas, and how this immense flood shaped not only the canyon, but also the way we live today.

Admission is $5 per person. Tickets will be available at the Wilson Theatre office, 610 Fremont St. in Rupert or at the door.

Bangerter receives M.V. Young Woman award

Kelsi Bangerter of Jerome is the 2012 Magic Valley Distinguished Young Woman award-winner.

She was chosen at the scholarship program, formerly known as Junior Miss, that took place March 12 at Buhl High School.

Bangerter received nearly $2,000 in awards and scholarships. She was chosen from 11 young women from all over the Magic Valley.

Competing for more than $5,000 in scholarships, the girls were judged in five categories: interview, talent, scholastics, fitness and self-expression. The program’s goal is to honor young women who excel in all these areas and encourage them to continue on the path of excellence by completing their educations and assuming roles of leadership in their communities and professions, thereby setting an example for other women to follow.

Bangerter will join 42 other winners from around the state of Idaho as they advance to the state competition in Idaho Falls in October. Five judges will select one contestant to advance to the annual National Finals competition in June 2012 in Mabel, Ala.

Bangerter is a junior at Jerome High School, where she is a member of the advance speech and drama teams. She is an alumna of the Hugh O’Brian Youth Leadership program and is actively involved in student government. She enjoys being involved in her church, family and community.

During the self-expression portion of the program, Bangerter was asked to complete the sentence, “There is more to life than...” She responded, “There is more to life than the here and now; we must remember that the choices we make today will have consequences that will affect our destiny.”

When asked to express her feelings about winning, she stated, “I can’t believe I was chosen from all of these outstanding young women. All of these girls deserve to be where I am. I’m so honored.”

If a car runs a red light and no one’s around ...

Q I have watched cars stop at a stoplight and then proceed through the red light because no one was coming. I have seen this three times in the past couple of months. Is there a rule of driving I have missed that makes this legal?

— Dave

A Yes, it’s called the “tree falls in the woods with nobody around” rule.

The truth of the matter is that unless they turned right on a red light, which is legal unless posted, there is none. The only other exceptions to being allowed to ignore the red light would be if they were directed to by an authorized person (police, usually) or if in a funeral procession.

You could sign a citation against the driver, but usually it comes as such a shock that the person ran the light that most people forget to look for a license plate number and who was driving. I need to add that you are not permitted to run the red light to get that information, either. If you are able to at least get the plate number and call the vehicle in, then there might be a chance an officer in the area can locate the vehicle while it’s still moving. If you get the green light and are still able to follow the vehicle while you call the police, that would be another great option. I would suggest that you don’t confront the driver of that vehicle for safety reasons, of course.

The same rules apply as we have talked about before, that you would have to be the citing officer since you witnessed the violation.

POLICEMAN DAN
Dan Bristol

A If you were going for a world record then 15 would be the newest record I could find. I’m sure that’s not going on here, though.

Idaho Code 49-715(2) reads: “No bicycle or human-propelled vehicle shall be used to carry more persons at one time than the number for which it is designed and equipped.

“An adult rider may carry a child securely attached to his person in a backpack or sling or in a child carrier attached to the bicycle.”

If the bike is not designed for two, then one is the number of riders — but that does not mean it has to be the loneliest number (bad song reference).

Officer down

Please put these officers, killed in the line of duty, and their families in your prayers. God bless these heroes.

- Game Warden Pilot Daryl Gordon, Maine Dept. of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife.

- Trooper Kevin P. Dobson, New York State Police.

- Deputy Robert Britton, Smith County Sheriff, Texas.

- George Warrell Jr., Cassia County Sheriff (not in the line of duty but will still be missed as a law enforcement brother).

They fought the good fight, now may they rest in peace.

Q How many people can legally ride on a bike? I have seen bikes loaded with kids at times going down the road.

See you next week. Email your questions to police-mandan@yahoo.com.

Dan Bristol is the Heyburn Chief of Police.

Nonagenarian on the way to dancing to 100

DEAR DR. GOTT: I will be 93 this month and have been blessed with good health all my life. My recent medical checkup was good, and everything was normal. However, during the past year, I have noticed my walking has become somewhat laborious and stressful. Even a small incline on the street makes walking more difficult. I have a little dog, and she needs to be walked.

My physician ordered an ultrasound of both legs, and the result was normal. He also prescribed pentoxifylline to increase the circulation in my legs. I go to an exercise class three times a week and even dance a couple of times a week. My right leg is slightly swollen and feels very firm in comparison to the left leg.

ASK DR. GOTT
Peter Gott

Holding you in high esteem as a doctor of medicine, I wonder if you could recommend anything to improve my walking to normalcy.

DEAR READER: We could all take a lesson from your lifestyle! It’s extremely important to remain as active as possible, and you are certainly a testimony to that.

Circulation can become impaired as we age, which is why your physician prescribed pentoxifylline, the generic form of a drug that improves blood flow and helps reduce symptoms of vascular disease such as you may be experiencing. Of extreme importance is that your personal physician be informed of any and all prescription medication as well as over-the-counters you may also take that might have been prescribed by another physician or specialist, because there are 33 (138 brand and generic) medications (such as aspirin and atenolol) known to interact with some brand-name drugs in this class.

I might question whether you eat foods that contain a lot of sodium (salt) or add it to your food, which might cause leg edema (swelling). We often fail to read labels to determine how much sodium is included, or we arbitrarily add salt to foods prior to tasting them to determine whether it is even a necessary additive. If appropriate, stay away from chips, salted nuts and other snack items that might have a high salt content. When you sit (between dancing and exercise), do you elevate your legs? These two simple measures alone might decrease the swelling and allow for easier walking. Beyond that, you might ask your physician his views on a mild diuretic that will remove excess fluids from your system and be sure that he checks your blood pressure on your next visit.

I am not making light of your situation by any means but I feel you are ahead of the game to be in the condition you are at the tender age of 93. Try my suggestions, speak with your physician and, above all else, keep up your lifestyle as long as you can. You’re incredible.

Readers who would like related information on medication (not longevity) can order my Health Report “Consumer Tips on Medicine” by sending a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order made payable to Newsletter and mailed to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. # Finding family

genealogy points
to the temple

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Cherie Wardell loves her family, even those whom she has never met. That's why she spends between two and four hours a day researching her genealogy.

"I know they existed," she said. "I'd love to meet them one day."

When she finds all she can about them, Wardell, a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, brings her ancestors' names to the Twin Falls temple where she and her husband, Daniel, do proxy baptism and other work for them.

The Wardells, of Kimberly, are not unlike many others, both inside and outside the church, for whom genealogy is a favorite pastime. For some it is an obsession.

The LDS church, the leader in genealogical research and archiving (it has the world's largest genealogical center in downtown Salt Lake City and retains some 35 billion images of genealogical information in Utah's granite vaults) has centers in Twin Falls and Burley to help church members and non-members research their family history. The centers are overseen by a combination of area stakes and operated by volunteers who rotate shifts during the week. About 40 volunteers serve at the Twin Falls Family History Center.

John Cox, director of the Twin Falls center, said genealogy has come a long way over the years as new technology has opened avenues previously unknown.

The church has its own genealogy website, FamilySearch.org. It's similar to the popular Ancestry.com, but users can access it on the Web for free. People also can come to the center to access Ancestry.com, if they don't already have a subscription at home. The center, not unlike the one in Burley, also contains thousands of files of microfilm, microfiche, genealogical books and other resources to help both the novice and savvy genealogist.

But even with all the resources, sometimes researchers hit stumbling blocks.

"We're stuck in some spots trying to find a grandmother," Wardell said, sitting in the Twin Falls center on Thursday. She and her husband were researching her great-grandmother's history. They found that her line likely came from the Azores.

"The lack of records is probably the most daunting challenge," Cox said.

What about death records? "They're a fairly modern thing," he said, noting that the further back in time you go, the only records

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints encourages its members to keep personal histories and research their genealogy. For Mormons, genealogy leads to the temple, where they take their ancestors' names to perform proxy baptism and other work for them. Del Traveller, area spokesman for the LDS church, said work at the Twin Falls Temple, pictured here, has remained steady since it opened in August 2008.

available might be probate or tax records, and sometimes not even those. Other places to look are in church records, which most faiths have kept over the years, land transaction records, wills and family Bibles.

As for wills: "You can find out other people's kids are by finding out whom they left their stuff to," Cox said.

The Social Security Index is another good place to start, he said, if you're looking for information since the 1960s.

Cox said genealogy can seem daunting, but it's not that difficult to learn once you get the hang of it.

He said the best thing for anybody to do is to write down what you know, keep your own personal history and learn from those still living.

"You get the hang of it pretty quickly," he said, noting that the people at the centers are able and willing to help anyone who comes in searching for their ancestors.

And they're not just for Mormons. A number of non-LDS people use the centers. They don't have to worry about being preached to, Cox said. Besides a few information cards at the entrance, there is no proselyting at the centers.

"We want everyone to feel comfortable and welcome here," he said.

For Latter-day Saints, genealogy points to the temple, where they take the names of their ancestors to perform proxy baptisms and other work, called "ordinances."

Mormons believe that all persons, living and dead, must be baptized by priesthood authority, which they believe was given by angels to Joseph Smith in the late 1820s, in order to enter heaven.

The deceased, according to Mormon belief, have the opportunity as spirit beings to accept or reject what has been done for them. In Mormon theology temple ordinances also unite families not only for time but for eternity.

Mormons have an interest for all

IF YOU RESEARCH

The LDS church operates two family history centers in the Magic Valley, providing resources for members of the church and non-LDS as they research their family history.

Twin Falls

The center, 399 Maurice St. N., is open:
9 a.m.-9 p.m., Tuesday-Thursday
10 a.m.-3 p.m., Saturday
Information: 733-8073.

Burley

The center, 224 E. 14th St., is open:
9 a.m.-4 p.m., Monday of God's children, Cox said, not only those living today.

"We really do believe that families are forever," he said. "This is the process by which we help make that happen."

Wardell said she's felt spiritually impressed to research her family history.

"I feel like it's my job," she said. "I think they want me to do it for them. Thoughts come into my head, 'You need to find me.'"

So far Wardell has researched her mother's genealogy as far back as 1079 A.D. Finding out about her father's family has been more of a challenge, she said, but at times she's encouraged when unexpected doors open for her, such as making contact with a living relative she didn't know existed. Such was the case when she found a great aunt through Ancestry.com. Her aunt has helped further her research, she said, providing information or pointing her in other directions.

"It's been exciting to see so few names grow to so many," she said.

So far she's researched her father's line back to the 1800s.

"I believe in the hereafter, I really do," Wardell said. "And I'm excited to meet them (family members) in the hereafter. ... I want them to know that I think about them, that I love them."

Credit-card kiosks ease donations at churches

By Ron Orozco
McClatchy Newspapers

FRESNO, Calif. — Long ago, people gave God parts of their livelihood — goats, sheep, wheat and barley. Much later, they began plopping money into collection plates.

Now, some churchgoers are swiping their bank cards at machines that look a bit like ATMs.

"It's easier," says John Muscianes, who attends New Covenant Community Church in northeast Fresno, Calif. "I don't have to write a check. It's convenient."

Places of worship have provided more options for tithing and offerings in the past decade. (A tithe is generally the 10th of one's income that is donated to a religious organization in weekly or monthly installments.)

Some install links on their websites for worshippers to give online. Some provide options for automatic deductions from checking accounts.

Now comes a new twist: Machines rolling into churches — called giving kiosk units.

SecureGive, a company in Augusta, Ga., has been selling them since 2007, but sales have taken off only in the past year. Now about 325 churches nationwide use them.

"A lot of people just don't carry checkbooks," says Stuart Baker, director of sales and marketing for SecureGive. "We're moving into a cashless society. From a practical standpoint, it allows people to do what they already want to do — give."

New Covenant Community Church has provided online giving through its website for a number of years. It installed a giving kiosk unit in the sanctuary foyer in late November.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Jan van Oosten, says so many people use debit cards these days that "the kiosk is the way to go."

New Covenant's unit is a sleek silver pedestal topped with a computer screen, numeric keypad and magnetic strip reader. Prompted by on-screen instructions, congregants swipe their bank cards and punch in some numbers. After they're done, a receipt spits out. The donation is tax-deductible.

Quincey Hollman says using the unit fits her lifestyle. She uses her debit card rather than cash or checkbook and pays bills online.

"I'm so thankful for this," says Hollman. Plus, she adds, she's grateful her donation is recorded on her monthly bank statement.

So far, New Covenant's giving kiosk is averaging about a dozen users on Sundays, when two services are held.

In Visalia, Calif., Gateway Church has been providing a giving kiosk unit in its sanctuary foyer for nearly three years. Officials say they're pleased with the results.

Unitarian Universalists host guest speaker

The Rev. Emily A. Champagne will speak at 10 a.m. Sunday to the Magic Valley Unitarian Universalist Fellowship, meeting at the Twin Falls Senior Center, 530 Shoshone St. W. The topic will be “The Gospel of Thomas: Why it is so Threatening to Traditional Religion.”

Champagne will discuss in more detail an observation that there is a close connection between teachings attributed to Jesus in the Gospel of Thomas and those in two New Testament gospels. This observation may suggest that Jesus’ earliest followers were more concerned with the way we treat one another than with later theology about his birth and death.

Champagne graduated from Starr King School for the Ministry and later received master’s degrees from Graduate Theological Union and Claremont Graduate University. She served several churches as a parish minister and presently has a community ministry teaching and speaking about the Bible and liberal religious values.

A program for children and child care for toddlers and babies are provided.

Information: 734-6552 or www.mvuu.org.

Cost is $25 for a family, $7 for 12 and up, $3 for ages 4 to 11 and free for under 4. Tickets will be available at the door. Proceeds will be used to help send youth to church camp.

Presbyterians hold used book sale

The First Presbyterian Church, 209 Fifth Ave. N. in Twin Falls, will hold a used book sale from 4 to 8 p.m. Tuesday. All books will be $1 each. Proceeds will go toward the purchase of a Heifer Ark.

Heifer’s mission is to end hunger and poverty while caring for the earth. For more than 60 years, Heifer International has provided livestock and environmentally sound agricultural training to improve the lives of those who struggle for reliable sources of food and income. Heifer is currently working in more than 50 countries, including the United States, to help families and communities become more self-reliant. Every gift of an animal provides direct benefits such as milk, eggs, wool, fertilizer and indirect benefits that increase family incomes for better housing, nutrition, health care and school fees for children. Recipients pass on the gift of offspring of their cows, goats and other livestock to others in an ever-widening circle of hope.

Christians in Malaysia to preserve ‘defaced’ Bibles

By Julia Zappei
Associated Press writer

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — Five thousand Bibles that were defaced by authorities will be preserved as “museum pieces” at Malaysian churches, a reminder of problems encountered by Christians in this Muslim-majority country, officials said Thursday.

The announcement is the latest twist in a dispute between Christians and the government over tens of thousands of imported Bibles seized by Malaysian customs authorities, some since early 2009. The books violate a government ban on non-Muslim texts that use the word “Allah” as a translation for God.

After Christian leaders voiced anger over the detention of the Bibles, the government agreed earlier this month to release them, but stamped many with serial numbers and government seals that stated they were meant “for Christians only.”

Authorities say the use of “Allah” in Christian literature could confuse Muslims or be used to convert them.

The Bible Society of Malaysia, which imports and distributes Bibles, collected a shipment Tuesday of some 5,000 “defaced” books, said Rev. Simon Wong, the society’s general secretary.

The Bibles “cannot be sold to Christian buyers” in their current state, the society said in a statement. “Instead, they will be respectfully preserved as museum pieces and as a heritage for the Christian Church in Malaysia.”

Wong said they would serve as a reminder of their spat with the government.

Anger among Christians over the problem could hurt the government in much-anticipated elections next month for the state legislature in Sarawak, where Christians account for more than 40 percent of the population. Nationwide, Muslims comprise nearly two-thirds of Malaysia’s 28 million people, while Christians are about 10 percent.

Malaysian Christians say the ban on their use of “Allah” is unfair because the Arabic word is a common reference for God that pre-dates Islam.

Sometimes soaring is for the birds

One day a few years ago we had a guest, of the uninvited variety.

I know — scary. But this time it was OK, because this uninvited guest ate like a bird.

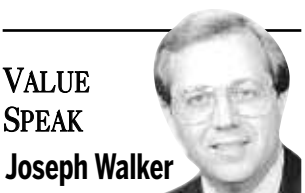

In fact, this uninvited guest was a bird — a sparrow, to be more precise, and a small one at that. Somehow the little bird had flown into our open garage, where it perched to rest from the rigors of — well, whatever it is that sparrows do. At least, I assume that’s why it came in. I don’t know for sure because I didn’t see it until I went to leave. Then I heard the bird before I saw it.

“What’s that?” I asked when I first heard the gentle thump-thump-thumping.

“It sounds like Joe is outside playing basketball,” my wife, Anita, said.

“Nah,” I said. “That doesn’t sound like basketball going on out there. Besides, Joe broke the unbreakable rim, remember?”

Anita paused and listened more intently. “It’s coming from the garage,” she said. “Maybe it’s one of the little kids.”

We looked at each other and the same thought popped into our minds simultaneously.

“Jonathan!”

We hustled out the door. Jonathan, our youngest, was as cute as a little terrorist could be. “If he’s making holes in the wall again —” I said as I peered into the garage. No Jonathan. No children at all. But there was that sound again, coming from right — up — there —

And that’s when I saw the sparrow. It was flying anxiously (do sparrows know any other way to fly?) just inches below the plaster-board ceiling of our garage. It was clearly trying to get out but couldn’t see that the way out was not up but down and out through the open garage door. So the bird continued flapping its wings and bumping its little head against the ceiling.

“Poor thing,” Anita said. “It must be terrified.”

“Well, maybe I can terrify it right out of here,” I said as I moved toward where the bird was hovering. I tried to shoo it out, but only succeeded in herding it into the small open space between the opened, rolled up door and the ceiling. Then I tried to show the bird how to glide down a few feet so it could get outside, but that only seemed to frighten it more (can you imagine the sight of a 6-foot 4-inch, 200-and-many-pounds man zooming around a garage trying to show a sparrow how to glide? It isn’t pretty).

“Why don’t we just leave for a few minutes,” Anita suggested. “I’m sure he’ll figure it out eventually.”

So we went back into the house, where we continued to hear the ongoing struggle between sparrow and plasterboard. Then suddenly, it was silent. We peeked into the garage, and our uninvited guest was gone.

“See?” Anita said. “I told you he’d figure it out.”

“Yeah,” I said. “But how many bumps on the head did it cost him?”

I’ve thought about that little sparrow through the years, and I’ve decided that birds aren’t much different from people in many respects. Just like that sparrow, we often encounter situations and circumstances that we don’t know how to handle. Because we think we were born to soar ever upward, we don’t even consider the possibility that something good might happen if we stop flapping around and just glide down a little bit.

But life has a way of teaching us — one way or another — that there are any number of legitimate directions in which we can travel, including down. Once we figure out that we can make progress without banging our heads against ceilings trying to force our way up, we can usually save ourselves a lot of grief.

Not to mention a few headaches.

Gateway’s congregation can also use the unit to pay for church events that charge fees, such as summer and winter camps and men’s and women’s breakfast meetings.

“People are used to swiping a card,” says the church’s finance director, Chris Williams.

He says it is important that churches continue to provide options for worshippers to give, but he says he understands anyone who hasn’t warmed up to the idea of giving at kiosks.

“This church has been around a long time,” he says. “We still have a good percentage of people from a generation that went to church and gave money by putting it in a basket.”

“I can do cashless, but I still like to write out a check.”

LDS CONFERENCE

Welcome to Conference

The 181st annual General Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be held today and Sunday.

Today, general sessions begin at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The priesthood session for men and boys ages 12 and older begins at 6 p.m. Sunday general sessions begin at 9:30 a.m. (with the weekly half-hour broadcast of “Music and the Spoken Word”) and 2 p.m.

All sessions are held in the Conference Center at 60 W. North Temple St. in Salt Lake City and have a duration of about two hours.

Ticket holders should be in their seats a half an hour prior to the start of each session. No one younger than age 8, including infants carried by parents, will be admitted. Sunday dress is encouraged. Language-translation headsets and American Sign Language interpretation are available.

Unoccupied seats are released to people in long lines of standby conferencegoers. Those wishing to stand by should arrive early and look for the end of the line that forms at the north gate of Temple Square. (Lines on the Conference Center premises are typically for ticket holders.) Overflow seating for all sessions is available in the Tabernacle, Assembly Hall, both Temple Square visitors’ centers and the Joseph Smith Memorial Building.

All general sessions of the conference also be aired on Mormon Channel (radio.lds.org online). BYU Television can be viewed at byu.tv online.

For information on live Internet streaming of sessions, visit lds.org online.

The priesthood session can only be viewed at LDS meeting houses that are equipped to receive church satellite broadcasts, or at the Conference Center and church facilities on Temple Square.

Church film crews discover (and build) a little piece of the Holy Land in Utah

By Cody Clark
Daily Herald

There's a little piece of the Holy Land in Utah County. It's not because county commissioners have negotiated a land swap with Israel. Technically speaking, all of the dusty paths or grassy hillsides where Jesus Christ is believed to have walked among the Jews during his mortal ministry are still thousands of miles away. Starting in June, however, the distance will be swept away in the blink of a camera lens.

As the snow in the mountains melts and the temperature climbs toward its summertime peak in the triple digits, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is preparing a site in the south Utah County town of Goshen for a 30-day film shoot that, starting in June, will transform central Utah into the backdrop for the greatest story ever told. (If you enjoy acting, or think you'd make a good extra, there's still time to potentially get involved by completing an application online.)

The transformation won't just be for 30 days, though. The church hopes to use the site over and over again for many years. Executive producer John Uibel said that, instead of building sets that will look like ancient Israel for the length of a film shoot, “We're trying to make it look awesome for 20 years.”

The church isn't making a feature-length film about the life of Jesus (such as “King of Kings,” or “The Greatest Story Ever Told”). Church crews will, however, be filming a great many of the familiar stories that make up such films.

“We are telling complete stories from the New Testament,” said Uibel, an employee of the church's media services department. What they won't be doing is creating characters and plotlines to tie everything together. Instead, the finished product will be a sort of library of New Testament film clips.

Eventually, Uibel said, the footage could be used at church visitor's centers, in broadcast presentations, for proselytizing

AUDITIONS

The LDS Church is casting the portions of its New Testament films project that will be shot this year. Open-call auditions for the project already have been completed, but audition videos are still being accepted, and people interested in working as extras can still apply. purposes, for church teaching, and more: “Essentially, whatever we need to use it for.”

Ideally, said Uibel, what readers see on the page when they read the New Testament is what they'll get on the screen when the church is finished. (Uibel said that finished clips could begin to circulate as soon as the end of this year.) “We're filming essentially the King James Version as it reads,” he said. No embellishment. No framing stories. Just what's in the Bible. Or as Uibel put it, “The dialogue is the dialogue. The setting is the setting.”

Uibel said that the First Presidency authorized the project in High-profile Mormons Huntsman and Romney are seen as likely presidential candidates

By Cody Clark
Daily Herald

Whether it's in two years or six, the next president of the United States after Barack Obama could be a Mormon.

As political speculation heats up regarding which Republican candidate will eventually challenge Obama in the 2012 presidential election, two of the most frequently discussed potential nominees are members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Romney

Former Massachusetts governor Mitt Romney was a major contender for the Republican nomination in 2008, carrying more states than any other candidate but eventual nominee John McCain, and many pundits believe he'll give it another shot in 2012.

Huntsman

Former Utah governor Jon M. Huntsman Jr., who stepped down from his post as U.S. ambassador to China in January, is a rising star in the Republican Party. His name has started to crop up in discussions of potential nominees almost as frequently as Romney's.

At the end of January, Washington Post writer Chris Cillizza rated Romney and Huntsman as being among the “best-known” potential Republican candidates, alongside Sarah Palin, Newt Gingrich, Mike Huckabee, former Minnesota governor Tim Pawlenty, South Dakota senator John Thune, and sitting governors Haley Barbour of Mississippi and Mitch Daniels of Indiana. (Thune has since declared that he will not mount a presidential bid.)

When Huntsman resigned his ambassadorship in January, calls poured in at LDS Church headquarters in Salt Lake City seeking comment about his potential presidential

Report outlines church's ongoing disaster relief efforts

By Cody Clark
Daily Herald

Just about anywhere that disaster strikes in the world, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints contributes to relief efforts.

Sometimes the church sends relief supplies, and sometimes, as with the disastrous earthquake that struck Haiti on Jan. 12, 2010, or the devastation caused by Hurricane Katrina in 2005, the church provides assistance on a broader scale, organizing teams of missionaries and volunteers to assist wherever necessary.

In March, church officials announced that the church would participate in disaster relief efforts in Japan following the magnitude 9.0 earthquake and tsunami that rocked the island nation March 11. Elder Jeffrey R. Holland of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles told media members, “We have great concern for everyone. Our prayers are being offered for them, and substantial financial help has already been committed to the nation.”

Just last year, the church was busier than usual. Church publicists reported in March that more than a quarter-million people died, worldwide, as a result of natural disasters and disease outbreaks in 2010, a higher death toll than at any other time in the last 25 years.

According to its annual Welfare Services Emergency Response Report, the church pitched in around the globe, responding to 119 disasters in 58 different countries.

Among other efforts, the church participated in responding

King James Version turns 400

Break out the birthday cake — the really, really big birthday cake. Big enough for 400 candles, that is. With the calendar turning over to 2011, it has been 400 years since the first printing of the King James Version of the Holy Bible. In honor of King James's special day, enjoy this look back at milestone events along the way from zero (and before) to 400.

1384 — English theologian and lay preacher John Wycliffe completes the first English-language translation of the Bible. Wycliffe based his translation on the Vulgate, a Latin version of the Bible created in the fourth century by St. Jerome.

Wycliffe died of a stroke shortly after completing his translation work. He was eventually declared a heretic by the Roman Catholic Church and, almost 50 years after his death, his remains were exhumed, burned and scattered.

1455 — German printer Johannes Gutenberg, inventor of the first movable-type printing press, prints a Latin Bible 1,272 pages in length. Gutenberg printed 180 copies of his Bible. Today, fewer than 50 are known to exist, slightly less than half of which are complete copies.

1525 — English scholar William Tyndale completes the first English-language translation of the Bible to be based on Greek and Hebrew texts. The continued growth of printing makes Tyndale's Bible the first English-language Bible to be widely distributed, albeit not the first complete English-language Bible as Tyndale never finished his translation of the Old Testament. In addition to carrying out what many of his day viewed as a debasement of sacred scripture, Tyndale endangered himself by publicly criticizing the controversial divorces of King Henry VIII.

1535 — Anglican priest Myles Coverdale, later Bishop of Exeter during the reign of King Edward VI, produces the first complete English-language translation of the Bible. Coverdale used Tyndale's texts extensively in preparing his own translation.

1536 — After being arrested, jailed and tried on a charge of heresy, Tyndale is executed by being strangled and burned at the stake. His last words are widely reported to have been, "Lord! Open the King of England's eyes!" The King James translators, like many other Bible translators after Tyndale, used his work extensively. A recent Brigham Young University study estimated that about 84 percent of the King James Version is drawn from Tyndale's work, while the same is true for about 76 percent of the Old Testament.

1539 — The Great Bible, the first English-language Bible authorized (by King Henry VIII) for public use, is printed. The Great Bible was edited by Myles Coverdale, under the commission of Sir Thomas Cromwell, the most trusted advisor and administrator of King Henry VIII at the time.

1560 — The Geneva Bible is the first English-language Bible to be printed with an "apparatus," or reference guide (including notes in the margin, maps, tables, illustrations and verse comparisons), to improve the Bible study of lay readers, and also the first to have numbered verses.

early 2010. One of the first steps taken was to find a location where filming could take place. "We looked in many more remote areas than Goshen," he said. "Really from Logan to St. George and some areas beyond."

Land o' Goshen

Tiny Goshen, with a population of fewer than 900 as of the 2000 census, ended up being more or less exactly what church location scouts had hoped to find. The church has owned the property in Goshen where filming will take place, formerly a family farm and ranch, for a number of years.

Just five minutes long, the Good Samaritan film, which can be viewed online at lds.org (search "Good Samaritan" and click on the second result, a link titled "Video: 'Parable of the Good Samaritan'"), illustrates both what the Goshen site does offer, and what it doesn't.

Long-term Jerusalem

On the other hand, the digital effects unit won't have to work as hard as you might think. On a parcel of ground roughly the size of two side-by-side football fields — essentially a small corner of the larger property, which encompasses approximately 800 acres — the church is building an elaborate set that will allow it to film events that took place in Jerusalem and other Biblical cities and villages.

"We're creating an urban Jerusalem environment," Uibel said, without actually attempting to replicate the city itself. Instead, the set will be a patchwork assemblage of streets, alleys, courtyards, marketplaces, buildings and other locales mentioned in the New Testament gospels.

The church frequently builds sets, in places like its Provo motion picture studio, but doesn't often keep them around. "In the past when we've done this kind of thing," Uibel said, "we've done it the traditional filmic way. We build sets, then bulldoze them, build sets, then bulldoze them."

The Goshen set will be more permanent, with the idea that the church can use it again and again, either for additional Bible-based film footage, or for other church productions.

aspirations.

In a Feb. 1 posting on the public affairs department's blog, church spokesman Lyman Kirkland issued a general reminder that, "The church is strictly neutral in matters of party politics and will not comment at all on the personalities and platforms of candidates, whether or not they are members of the church and irrespective of their party affiliation."

Kirkland also cited the church's official policy on political neutrality, which reads in part, "The church's mission is to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ, not to elect politicians. The church's neutrality in matters of party politics applies in all of the many nations in which it is established."

In other words, church leadership won't have any-

Daily Herald

The church's movie set, which will look like old Jerusalem when complete, is being built in the small town of Goshen, Utah.

The Goshen set will be more permanent, with the idea that the church can use it again and again, either for additional Bible-based film footage, or for other church productions.

Brigham Young University film and theater professor Eric Samuelsen said that, on the evidence of past church productions, it's more or less a given that whatever combination of sets, locations and effects is used in the New Testament films project, it will be visually impressive.

"It's going to look great," Samuelsen said. "It's going to have state-of-the-art cinematography, state-of-the-art lighting and first-rate visual effects work."

That doesn't mean that no expense will be spared. Uibel said that he can't discuss the amount of money being spent, but that, "I guarantee you, it's not as much as you would think."

Must have beards

There may not be any movie stars involved, but the church is hoping to use a mixture of professional actors and people who may not have extensive (or any) acting experience, but who do have the right look.

"Primarily we're looking for people with Mediterranean features," Uibel said. "Anybody who looks like they could step out of the pages of the New Testament. Men with beards are always a plus."

Christensen said that quite a few Utah residents will likely be hired for work both in front of the camera and behind it. "We have a really good film community here," he said.

In particular, Uibel said, the production will probably recruit most of its extras locally. The casting process hasn't been limited solely to the Beehive State, or even to North America.

Uibel said that the church already has conducted several rounds of auditions, but that people interested in acting jobs can still add their information to the casting database online at ldsavd-casting.blogspot.com/2010/05/new-testament-project.html.

The shooting schedule is still being finalized, but Uibel said that one of the first things to be filmed will probably be a depiction of Jesus's birth. Other stories being prepared are the account of the Wise Men visiting the boy Jesus and his parents; Jesus's baptism by John; Jesus's nighttime visit with Nicodemus, one of the Pharisees; Jesus's raising of the dead daughter of Jairus; and Jesus's defense of the woman taken in adultery.

"We'll also do Jesus's cleansing of the temple," Uibel said, "which is something the church has never re-created before."

If everything goes according to plan, Uibel said, "by the end of the year there should be some finished pieces that have gone through post-production."

Of course, you never know what setbacks might come up. "If you go to Jerusalem, one of the things that jumps out at you is the olive trees," Samuelsen said. "There's nothing quite like an olive tree."

The deficiency of olive trees in Goshen, and Utah in general, Uibel said, could be a tough nut to crack. On the other hand, there are some stands of old-growth juniper at the Goshen site.

"With a little help and the right lighting," he said, "that might be an olive grove."

dent, Obama is likely to be a formidable opponent in 2012. That's not necessarily a reason to lie low, Bigelow said. Even if Huntsman and Romney both run and neither becomes the Republican nominee, he said, they would still be "breaking down barriers for Mormons to be taken more seriously as candidates in 2016 and beyond."

Patterson said he expects the potential Republican candidates already in the field to begin declaring by the end of summer, if not sooner.

"It probably will happen in the next few months," he said.

Bible

1568 — The Church of England, in seeking to supplant the Geneva Bible — perceived, mostly in its study helps, to have been contaminated by Calvinism — produces the Bishops' Bible. The project was both largely carried out and overseen by Matthew Parker, Archbishop of Canterbury.

A significantly revised edition of the Bishops' Bible, printed in 1572, became the primary base text for the King James Version.

1604 — King James I of England convenes the Hampton Court Conference to address the concerns of leading Puritans within the Church of England. The conference results in James's commissioning of the third official translation of the Bible into English (following the Great Bible and the Bishops' Bible).

The work of translation was assigned to 47 scholars, who followed what by then had become an established pattern of translating the New Testament from Greek texts, while using Hebrew texts for the Old Testament. The project also included a translation of the Apocrypha, or 14 lesser, non-canonical books of the Bible, from Greek and Latin texts, which was also common practice at the time. Though included in the KJV initially, the Apocrypha would eventually be stricken from its text in 1666.

1611 — The original printing of the Authorized Version (later the King James Version) of the Bible is carried out by Robert Barker, the royal printer. The first Authorized Version printings were sold in looseleaf format for 10 shillings, or bound for 12.

1666 — In keeping with a 1644 decree of the Long Parliament (which sat from 1640 to 1648) forbidding the reading of the Apocrypha at any function of the Church of England, the Authorized Version begins to be available in editions that exclude the 14 books of the Apocrypha included by the original King James translators. In the 1880s, leaving out the books of the Apocrypha became largely standard.

1830-1833 — Joseph Smith completes the bulk of his work on what he termed an inspired translation of the Bible, using the King James Version as his base text. Smith continues to pursue the project until his martyrdom in 1844. Portions of his translation are later included in the LDS edition of the King James Version and in the LDS volume of scripture the Pearl of Great Price.

1885 — The Revised Version (also called the English Revised Version) is printed, becoming the first and only official revision of the King James Version authorized by the Church of England.

1979 — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints completes a landmark project to create its own edition of the King James Version. The LDS edition includes a variety of study helps and is cross-referenced with the church's other volumes of sacred scripture, the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price.

Say what? New book gathers quotations about LDS religion

By Keri Stevens
Daily Herald

What famous broadcaster said Mormons in Utah look “so innocent”? What reality TV celebrity said she peered out at the Los Angeles temple every night as a way of grounding herself?

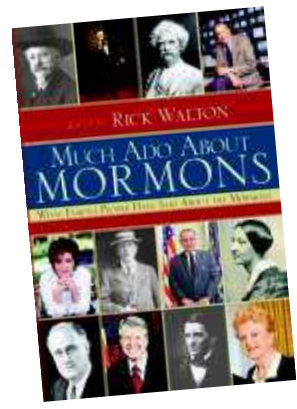

You can find the musings of Mike Wallace, Sharon Osbourne and many other public figures in the new book “Much Ado about Mormons” (Covenant Communications, $15.99), due in bookstores in early April.

Compiled by Provo author Rick Walton, the book has 128 pages of quotes from well-known people, arranged chronologically, showing a range of viewpoints about Mormonism through the 19th, 20th and 21st centuries. Personal thoughts of public figures such as Susan B. Anthony, Buffalo Bill Cody, Mark Twain, President John F. Kennedy and Walter Cronkite are featured, along with those of dozens of other people. Some are quite long and detailed, and there are explanations about where each quote came from.

“It’s fun to read,” Walton said, noting the quotes shouldn’t be taken too seriously. “I don’t think the opinions of a famous person matter more than the opinions of a normal person. The only thing that matters is the opinion of God. But it is kind of fun to see what people think about us as Mormons. I think the most compelling thing is what they see in us that is positive.”

Walton is a children’s book author, and as an adjunct professor teaches a fiction writing class and children’s book publishing class at Brigham Young University.

After coming across several accounts of interactions or thoughts about Mormons in his personal historical reading, he decided to continue researching and record what he found. He searched numerous biographies for mentions of Mormons and eventually decided to compile and

As quoted in “Much Ado about Mormons”

“When I was a boy on the farm in Illinois there was a great deal of timber on the farm which we had to clear away. Occasionally we would come to a log which had fallen down. It was too hard to split, too wet to burn and too heavy to move, so we plowed around it. That’s what I intend to do with the Mormons. You go back and tell Brigham Young that if he will let me alone I will let him alone.”

— Abraham Lincoln, 1863

“Good out of evil. One must thank the genius Brigham Young for the creation of Salt Lake City, — an inestimable hospitality to the Overland Emigrants, and an efficient example to all men in the vast desert, teaching how to subdue and turn it to a habitable garden.”

— Ralph Waldo Emerson, 1863

“One of the first things I bought for the house was a big old-fashioned telescope, which I kept in the living-room area. And the first thing I did every night when I came home was go to the spyglass and look out across the city to the Mormon temple on Santa Monica Boulevard. On top is a golden angel blowing a horn that glints at sunset. It was my ritual, a way of anchoring myself. And at night, with the city lit up, it was breathtaking. And I built a hot tub on the top terrace where you could sit and look out at it all glittering beneath you.”

— Sharon Osbourne, 2005

“When you come out here (to Utah) and talk to people, you look in their eyes, they’re so damned happy. Everyone looks so innocent. Maybe there’s something we’ve been missing.”

— Mike Wallace, 2005

edit his book.

“There were two things I was looking for. First, they had to be well-known, or at least moderately well-known. Not everyone is going to recognize everyone in the book,” Walton said. “Second of all, I made sure I had primary documents.”

If he came across a quote that was quoting someone else’s story, he wouldn’t include it because he didn’t feel comfortable using secondary sources. Another qualifying factor for a quote to make it in the book was that it had to be at least moderately positive.

“We hear so many negative things sometimes that I don’t think we need to hear more of that,” he said. “And positive is relative, too, because Mark Twain’s (book) ‘Roughing It’ was kind of poking fun at the Mormons, but he also pokes fun at himself. And it is kind of funny. We should be able to laugh at ourselves sometimes, too.”

Walton said he hopes the book isn’t used to support or squash someone’s testimony but will be read for entertainment.

“We’re still a religion that is relatively young and in some cases a little insecure about our place in the world,” he said. “We kind of like it when people like us. It shouldn’t matter, but it does sometimes. We like it when people see us as who we think we are.”

Starting small with food storage

Daily Herald

Now is a great time to assess your short- and long-term food storage goals.

If you don’t have any extra food stored yet, take heart. There’s no need to run out and buy a year’s supply of wheat and sugar all at once. Instead, consider amassing food little by little, gradually working up to a three-month’s supply of food you actually consume, with the goal of longer-term storage something to work on in the future.

In 2007, the LDS Church had a subtle shift in its food storage guidelines, with the new magic number for food storage becoming three months. Beginning in March of that year, with the church-wide distribution of a new pamphlet entitled “All is Safely Gathered In: Family Home Storage,” the church modified its food storage counsel to recommend that church members build up a three-month supply of “food that is part of your normal, daily diet.”

Members are additionally counseled to:

- Store drinking water (an important step in any emergency preparedness plan)
- Create a financial reserve
- Gradually accumulate a “longer-term supply” of certain foods, such as grains and beans, that can be safely stored for many years.

But the recommendation of a three-month supply is the only one that now incorporates a specified time frame.

The shift away from the intimidating one-year standard reflects counsel given by then-church President Gordon B. Hinckley in general conference in April 2002.

“I fear that so many feel that a long-term food supply is so far beyond their reach that they make no effort at all,” Hinckley said in an address to LDS priesthood members. The solution, he said, was to “begin ever so modestly,” starting out with a week’s supply, then gradually building that up to a month’s worth, and then — aha! “to three months!”

In a 2007 interview with the Daily Herald, Kevin Nield, then director of Bishops Storehouse Services for the church, said that the First Presidency made the change to encourage church members to begin storing food and water, as well as saving money.

The revised counsel, Nield said, “offers hope by showing that it is possible for most church members to prepare for adversity, starting modestly by storing a few items of food, filling a few leakproof containers with water and saving a few coins each week. The pamphlet helps eliminate the perceived complexity of home storage.”

‘Men of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir’ tops classical charts

By Cody Clark
Daily Herald

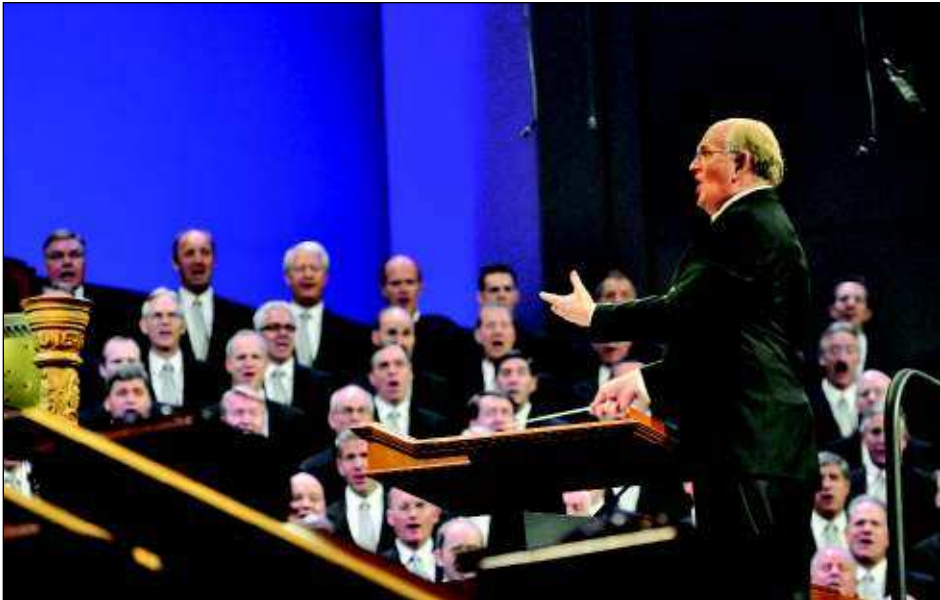

The Mormon Tabernacle Choir is known for its touring, but the signature vocal ensemble of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has never gone on another tour quite like the trip it took on Feb. 12.

They didn’t venture very far, and they didn’t take the entire choir. Instead, the women stayed at home while groups of the choir’s men visited four Deseret Book stores in Utah.

The men presented mini-concerts, which might have seemed a bit odd — no lady vocalists, don’t forget — except that the purpose of the four-city simul-tour (performances were given at noon in Ogden, Midvale, Salt Lake City and Orem) was to promote “Men of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir,” the chart-topping choir CD released at the end of December.

“We do a lot of recording,” said choir general manager Scott Barrick. “As we continue to explore options for repertoire, we try to look for something new and fresh.”

“Men of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir,” the 21st recording to come from the ‘Men of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir,’ the 21st recording to come from the choir since it created its own label in 2003, is definitely different. It’s the first choir album to exclusively feature a select group of choir members — the men — as opposed to the choir’s full roster.

choir since it created its own label in 2003, is definitely different. It’s the first choir album to exclusively feature a select group of choir members — the men — as opposed to the choir’s full roster. In this case, however, it would appear that different is good.

“Men of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir” jumped up to No. 1 on the Billboard classical charts (which exclusively track choral and orchestral music) in its first month of release, and even crept into the Hot 200 (which tracks all releases regardless of genre).

Shotwell, Canyon Ridge beat Minico

Alex Schamber of Canyon Ridge celebrates after scoring a run in the second inning of the Riverhawks' 10-2 win over Minico on Friday.

RYAN HOWE/
Times-News

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

With a 4-1 record to start the season, Canyon Ridge already has a solid softball team. Now it's all about fine-tuning.

"I think we've got some talent," Canyon Ridge coach Lyle Hudelson said after his Riverhawks beat Minico 10-2 on Friday. "Our biggest thing right now is we need to clean up on the little things."

One of those little things could be developing a killer instinct when an opponent is on the ropes. After Canyon Ridge jumped out to an 8-0 lead in the third inning, the Riverhawks seemed to let up some.

Hudelson credited Minico for never rolling over, and also admonished his own team about how to finish a game out.

Lauren Shotwell earned the win for Canyon Ridge, striking out six and issuing just two walks.

Offensively, Canyon Ridge got production throughout its lineup as all but one batter registered at least one hit. The only one who didn't, Kylee Kuest, drew two walks.

Catcher Karly Hudelson drove in four runs and Shotwell was 2-for-4 with two RBIs. Kylee Barker had two RBIs, while Courtney Cunningham and Alex Schamber each drove in a run.

"We need to clean up on some base running. That seems to be our nemesis right now," Hudelson said. "We're working on it."

Minico dropped its second straight game to start the season. Of the 20 runs the Spartans have allowed in their first two games, 10 have been unearned.

"We have a lot to improve on, but I feel like from the first game we've improved a lot and I think we're coming along," said Minico pitcher Hanna Munns. "We're trying to work things out and get our nerves out. I think we're going to be pretty good."

Munns and Cheyana Hawkes drove in Minico's two runs.

"We have to communicate more," Munns said. "That was one of our goals that we talked about and I don't think we achieved that today."

The same two teams meet for a doubleheader starting at noon today at Minico High. Hudelson said Emma Stephens will pitch the first game, giving the sophomore some quality innings while giving Shotwell a well-deserved rest.

"Emma is throwing well. She's earning some time. She's doing some great things for us, and it's nice to have that complement to Lauren," Hudelson said.

Small schools enjoy the competition at Angie Wyatt

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

FILER — Lined up on the starting line with reigning cross country state champion Mackenzie Chojnacky right on your shoulder can be a little intimidating.

But it's exactly what Sasha Kent of Richfield wanted.

The Angie Wyatt Track and Field Invitational in Filer gave Kent and the rest of the small schools an opportunity to run, throw and jump against the bigger schools in the Magic Valley and provided a measuring stick for just where these athletes stood in the region.

"My friend Keegan (Cennarrusa) and I really wanted our coach to let us come to bigger meets to get better," Kent said. "After cross country and realizing how much competition is out there especially in this area, it's kind of hard to go back to our conference meets only."

Chojnacky swept the 1,600 and 3,200 meter races, while Kent finished second and third respectively.

"Even though losing stinks, I'd rather lose and run better than win and get a bad time," Kent said. "Mackenzie's amazing. I tried to stay up with her as long as I could. It doesn't matter if I place the best; it's a chance to see how far I can push myself."

Chojnacky's Tigers won the girls competition with a score of 138 to hold off Canyon Ridge (114) and Buhl (88.5). Buhl took the team title on the boys side, scoring 111 to edge out Canyon Ridge (90).

Elenes Ramos of Buhl

once again swept the sprints, just edging out Cole Valley Christian's Jacob Ybara in the 400 meters.

"I had heard of that kid and knew he was good, so I was kind of scared," said Ramos, who beat Ybara by a step. "I could feel him behind me. It was kind of scary, but it was a good day. I left it all out on the track."

Kimberly's Alan Cazeau, Ramirez's main rival on the track, finished second in the 100 meters, but got revenge in the long jump, winning with a mark of 20 feet, 11 inches.

"It helps me. It pushes me to have someone a little faster to run against," Cazeau said of Ramirez. "The long jump felt good today. I just busted one today. It wasn't my farthest, but it was pretty good. There's a little bit better competition today, which was fun."

No matter the competition, Whitney Amoth of Buhl just wins.

The senior shot putter has the best mark in the state regardless of classification and won Friday with a toss of 41-3.

Cameran Bartlett of Jerome won the boys shot put with a mark of 46-1 — a personal best and a stepping stone to his goal of making it back to state as a sophomore.

"It was cool making it to state as a freshman, but I finished fourth to last and I said, 'you know, I'm going to come back next year and take it all,'" Bartlett said. "This is a good step towards that and a good win at a meet like this."

BYU's Fredette, Notre Dame's Brey get AP awards

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — Jimmer Fredette became a one-name star in his senior season at BYU.

Leading the country in scoring helped as did being on a team that spent the second half of the season ranked in the top 10.

On Friday, Fredette — excuse me; Jimmer — was selected The Associated Press' player of the year.

"It's been quite a ride and it's been a lot of fun and I wouldn't take anything back," Fredette said. "I had quite the career at BYU. There were a lot of ups and downs, but there were a lot more ups this year."

Brey

The Cougars won the Mountain West Conference regular-season title and lost to San Diego State in the tournament final. A No. 3 seed in the NCAA tournament, they lost to Florida in overtime in the round of 16 and finished with a 32-5 record.

"I just knew right from the beginning we could have a very good year with the guys returning, and it was one of the most talented teams I've ever played on," said Fredette, who averaged 28.5 points. "Then we started to play well and beat Arizona, and I knew from there we could be a force. That's what happened because we stayed hungry all year, and that's what separated us from other teams."

Notre Dame's Mike Brey was selected the coach of the year as he led the Fighting Irish to a second-place finish in the Big East and a No. 5 ranking in the final poll.

"The personality of this group was so stable whether it was a big win or a loss, they stayed stable," said Brey, who has been at Notre Dame for 11 seasons. "When they had great wins it didn't change them. When they had a tough loss it didn't change them. Stable is the word."

Fredette received 48 votes from the 65-member national media panel that selects the weekly Top 25. The voting

Golden Eagle softball takes three from CNCC

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Mikkel Griffin's got her swing back.

On Friday the College of Southern Idaho sophomore rediscovered the form that separated her as the greatest power hitter the Golden Eagle softball program has ever seen, hammering three home runs and driving in 12 as CSI throttled visiting Colorado Northwestern in a tripleheader, all three coming in run-rule fashion.

The Golden Eagles (30-13, 24-6 Scenic West) blasted 27 hits in a 24-2 drubbing, then won the next two games 12-0 and 14-0. It was a stunning turnaround from poor pitching performances and weak offensive approaches in a series loss at Southern Nevada last week.

"We just worked on hitting balls hard," said Griffin, who pushed her power totals to 23 home runs and 82 RBIs on the season. "I don't know that we would have come out focused on this one if we had walked all over Southern Nevada. Maybe getting our butts kicked was what we needed for this week."

With Friday's effort Griffin is now poised to smash CSI's single-season school record for home runs and runs batted in. She could even do it today — Megan Zimmermann's marks of 24 homers and 85 RBIs are well within reach.

Griffin didn't do it alone, either. The 3-4-5 part of CSI's lineup — Griffin, Marina Groenewegen and

Douglas, strong pitching key to CSI baseball sweep

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

It's a beautiful day for a baseball game. Let's play ... three?

Not exactly the line Ernie Banks made famous, but expectation of a vast difference in weather conditions between Friday and today pushed one of the College of Southern Idaho baseball team's games with Colorado Northwestern up a day, causing the teams to play a seldom-seen tripleheader.

It set up a vicious grind, but the Golden Eagles came through unscathed, winning all three against their fellow Scenic West Athletic Conference visitors.

CSI (19-12, 11-8 Scenic West) had to rally in its final at-bat to win the opener 4-3 before cruising to 7-2 and 4-0 wins to close out the day.

"We came out lackadaisical in the first game, expecting that they were someone to be walked all over, but they proved they're not that kind of team," said CSI pitcher Tyler Vavra, who struck out 10 in a two-hit shutout to close the day. "This is a great first step for us to build some momentum. We just need to come out with more intensity and with a little more of a chip on our shoulder."

Kimberly baseball team tops American Falls

Times-News

A day after taking two from Filer, the Kimberly baseball team traveled to American Falls, winning 6-2 behind another solid pitching performance.

Clay Mathews had a strong outing, allowing only two runs on five hits and Seth Morris hit a bases-loaded single to bring in two runs in the second inning for the Bulldogs.

Skylar O'Donnell hit an RBI triple and Cody Casper-son added a double for Kimberly (7-0, 1-0 SCIC), which plays Buhl on Tuesday.

JEROME SWEEPS WOOD RIVER

The Jerome baseball team swept visiting Wood River Friday, winning 2-1 and 18-3 in the Great Basin Conference tilts.

After stranding five runners in the first two innings of Game 1, the bats came alive for the Tigers in Game 2 as they pounded 11 hits.

"We left too many runners stranded in that first game, but I'm proud of the way the guys stuck it out and finally executed at the plate to get the wins," said Jerome coach Tom Bobrowski.

The Tigers move to 4-2, 2-0 GBC on the season.

MINICO 2-1 AT BUCKS BAGS

Two days down and one to go, the Minico High baseball team is 2-1 at the Bucks Bags tournament in Boise.

On Thursday, Andrew Frank and Jordan Nessen each went 3-for-4 with two RBIs to lead Minico in a 16-6 win over Borah. Casey Christiansen was 2-for-4 at the plate with three runs scored and three RBIs, and Nate Hanks earned the win on the mound for Minico.

On Friday, Minico defeated Mountain Home 6-4 as Christiansen went 3-for-3 with two runs scored and an RBI. Sager Nevarez started on the mound, giving up four earned runs on three hits. Shay Chandler came on in relief to earn the win.

Also on Friday, Minico suffered its first loss of the season, dropping a 10-4 game to Ontario. Andrew Frank went 3-for-4, while K.J. Redder and Slade Winnill each hit 2-for-4 for the Spartans.

"We had some opportunities, we just didn't get clutch hits when we needed them," said Minico assistant coach Mike Hoey.

Minico (8-1) finishes Bucks Bags play with a 10:30 game today against Timberline.

WOOD RIVER SWEEPS JEROME

Wood River profited from two big innings to sweep Jerome 10-8 and 17-8 in a Great Basin Conference doubleheader at Jerome on Friday.

The Tigers (3-2, 0-2 Great Basin) led 8-2 with two outs in the seventh inning of Game 1 but committed five errors and allowed eight runs to cross. That bled over into the nightcap where they committed seven more errors, and Wood River scored 10 in the fifth inning to break it open.

"It takes 21 outs to win the game and we played for 20," Jerome coach Adam Reynolds said of the opener. "We can't win if we make 13 errors in a day, but I think the girls understand that now." Jerome plays Canyon Ridge next Friday.

76ers clinch playoff spot with win over Nets

PHILADELPHIA —

Thad-deus Young scored 22 points, Elton Brand had 21 and the Philadelphia 76ers clinched a playoff spot with a 115-90 victory over the New Jersey Nets on Friday night.

True Holiday scored 17 points and Andre Iguodala had 14 to lead the Sixers back to the postseason after missing out last year. The Sixers won 27 games last season under Eddie Jordan and a long rebuilding process appeared on the horizon.

Enter coach Doug Collins.

He came out of the TNT broadcast booth to shape the Sixers into winners again. The Sixers have gone 37-23 since a 3-13 start and can finish with a winning record for the first time since 2004-05. Philadelphia hasn't won a playoff series since 2003.

HEAT 111, TIMBERWOLVES 92

MINNEAPOLIS —

Dwyane Wade scored 32 points, LeBron James added 27 points, 10 assists and six rebounds, and Miami turned a tight game into a rout in the third quarter.

Chris Bosh added 24 points and 11 rebounds for the Heat, who trailed at halftime but opened the third quarter with a staggering 25-1 run to take control. Miami reduced its magic number for clinching the Southeast Division to one, with Orlando's victory over Charlotte on Friday preventing the Heat from wrapping it up.

ROCKETS 119, SPURS 114, OT

HOUSTON — Kevin Martin scored 33 points, including nine in overtime, and Houston extended San Antonio's losing streak to six games.

The Spurs hadn't dropped six in a row since April 10-20, 1997.

PACERS 89, BUCKS 88

INDIANAPOLIS — Danny Granger scored 17 points and Indiana solidified its playoff position while pushing Milwaukee to the brink of elimination in the Eastern Confer## ence race.

The Bucks trailed the entire second half but could have won in the closing seconds, when Drew Gooden missed a 3-pointer at the buzzer.

WIZARDS 115, CAVALIERS 107

WASHINGTON — Andray Blatche tied a career high with 36 points and had a career-best 19 rebounds, Jordan Crawford added 21 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds, and short-handed Washington beat Cleveland.

The Wizards played without John Wall, who was suspended for one game due to his part in a scuffle against Miami earlier this week.

MAGIC 89, BOBCATS 77

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dwight Howard had 26 points and 14 rebounds, and Jameer Nelson chipped in 15 points and six assists to lead Orlando.

Quentin Richardson added 14 points off the bench for the Magic, who snapped a two-game losing streak by improving to 3-0 against the Bobcats this season. Orlando has won 13 of the last 15 meetings with Charlotte.

BULLS 101, PISTONS 96

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Derrick Rose scored 13 of his 27 points in the first quarter and had a key assist in the final minute to lead Chicago.

GRIZZLIES 93, HORNETS 81

NEW ORLEANS — Zach Randolph scored 28 points, Tony Allen added 17 and Memphis held New Orleans to a season-low 12 points in the first quarter.

HAWKS 88, CELTICS 83

ATLANTA — Al Horford capped his 35th double-double with a key tip-in with 7.9 seconds remaining to lift Atlanta.

The Hawks' lead was only three points when Horford tipped in a miss by Joe Johnson.

Rafa to test Djokovic's unbeaten 2011 record in Key Biscayne final

KEY BISCAYNÉ, Fla. (AP) — The capacity crowd expected a classic instead of a clunker, and so when Rafael Nadal began to pull away from an erratic Roger Federer, a chant broke out. “Ro-ger! Ro-ger!” fans shouted, trying to inspire a comeback. Then came a response. “Ra-fa! Ra-fa!” The din didn’t change the course of the match. Nadal advanced with surprising ease Friday night, drubbing Federer 6-3, 6-2 in the semifinals of the Sony Ericsson Open. Nadal usually receives a trophy when he beats Federer. This time, the reward is a chance to play Novak Djokovic — No. 1 vs. No. 2 — for the title Sunday. Djokovic stretched his winning streak to 25 consecutive matches by beating Mardy Fish in the other semifinal, 6-3, 6-1. Three-time Grand Slam champion Maria Sharapova seeks her first Key Biscayne title today when she plays 2009 champion Victoria Azarenka.

Getting defensive the goal for both Butler, VCU

HOUSTON (AP) —That Butler and VCU proudly wear the same small-conference, lovable underdog label is readily apparent.

Less obvious is their shared devotion to the not-so-sexy practice of hard-nosed, aggressive defense — long a trademark of Butler's game but much more of a surprising late-season development from the running, gunning Rams.

"That's what's got us here. For five straight games, we've been playing great defense," VCU forward Jamie Skeen said Friday. "If we play great defense again against Butler, we can probably come out with the win."

Eighth-seeded Butler (27-9) plays VCU, which has gone from the "First Four" to the Final Four, in the national semifinals Saturday night.

"It's more of a challenge because you know everybody is looking at their defense, how good they are," VCU point guard Joey Rodriguez said. "We want to come out and try to prove to people we can play defense just as good as them."

Virginia Commonwealth (28-11) is a shooter's dream team, a roster full of guys who think they're in range as soon as the bus nears the arena. (It's no coincidence TV analyst Steve Kerr joined the Rams for a shooting contest during practice at last weekend's Southwest Regional.)

The Rams have launched 895 3-pointers this year — no, that's not a misprint — and are shooting an unbelievable 44 percent from long range just in the NCAA tournament. They've finished with 12 3s in three of their first five games, with Brandon Rozzell making six on his own against Georgetown and Bradford Burgess doing the same against Florida State.

But don't mistake VCU for the Globetrotters.

The Rams are not exactly Wisconsin wannabes, ranking 238th (out of 336 teams) in field goal defense and 134th in scoring defense. They're 298th in rebounding margin. Yet they're in the Final Four because they shut down Southern California, Georgetown, Purdue and Florida State before man-handling top-seeded Kansas.

The Jayhawks, once the top-ranked team in the country, managed just 61 points while shooting 35.5 percent overall and 9.5 percent from 3-point range, all season lows. After not trailing by more than two points the entire tournament, Kansas was down by 17 before halftime.

Overall, Virginia Commonwealth is allowing an average of 62 points in the tournament, almost five fewer than their season average. They're holding opponents to 39 percent shooting, well below their season average of 44 percent.

"They keep teams off balance," said Matt Howard, Butler's leading scorer and rebounder. "You have to be prepared for multiple looks. They're going to press. They'll play a little bit of zone. Then they also have a good man-to-man. I think when you're really scoring the ball really well, too, that gives you energy defensively. I think you can make an argument they've scored as well as anybody."

"When you're able to score and get into those different defenses, I think that really helps their defense."

Lewis in strong position for first victory at halfway point

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Stacy Lewis persevered through more desert heat to shoot a 3-under 69 at the Kraft Nabisco Championship, opening a three-shot lead Friday over Yani Tseng, Brittany Lincicome and Jane Park.

Lewis finished at 9-under par after several big putts during the second round, coolly reaching the halfway point of the LPGA Tour's first major in strong position to chase her first victory.

Tseng, the defending champion and the world's top-ranked player, had a 68. Lincicome shot a 72, and Park a 70. Michelle Wie had a 67, matching the day's best round, to reach 3 under.

The leaders all managed to thrive on dry, speedy greens during a second windless day at Mission Hills, with the temperature topping 100 degrees by midday.

HOUSTON OPEN

ner after two rounds at the Houston Open.

Kirk was 9-under par, and played his last few holes just as the wind picked up in the afternoon and made scoring more difficult. Kim shot a 64, the lowest round of the day, and Wagner had a 67.

Padraig Harrington (69), first-round leader Jimmy Walker (74) and Josh Teater (72) were 7 under.

The tournament has attracted several top players prepping for next week's Masters.

Phil Mickelson (70) and Lee Westwood (72) were part of a large group at 4 under and Ernie Els (72) and Fred Couples (72) were among the players at 1 under.

MISSISSIPPI GOLF RESORT CLASSIC

SAUCIER, Miss. — Jeff Sluman matched the Fallen Oak record with a 6-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead over Tom Lehman in the Mississippi Gulf Resort Classic.

Sluman holed a 9-iron shot from 154 yards for an eagle in his bogey-free round.

Nick Price, David Frost and Dan Forsman were two strokes back at 68.

TROPHÉE HASSAN II

AGADIR, Morocco — Defending champion Rhys Davies of Wales shot a 1-under 70 for a share of the second-round lead with Dutchman Joost Luiten in the Trophée Hassan II.

Luiten had a 69 to match Davies at 6-under 137 in the European Tour event.

Hamlin and Johnson have Martinsville figured out

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Denny Hamlin and Jimmie Johnson have combined to win the last nine races at Martinsville Speedway, a streak that's annoyed most of their competitors.

Could it really be that two guys are that much superior, and the 41 others have no chance at winning on NASCAR's oldest active track?

Nope, insisted Johnson. The secret to winning at Martinsville is nothing more than accepting the 0.526-mile paper clip-shaped track as it is and not trying anything fancy.

"There's one way to drive this place and that's it," said Johnson, a six-time Martinsville winner.

Richard Petty is the all-time wins leader at Martinsville with 15 victories, followed by Darrell Waltrip with 11. Then came the heyday of Rusty Wallace, and then Jeff Gordon, with seven wins apiece.

But only two drivers have mastered Martinsville since 2006, when Johnson began a run that lasted until Hamlin caught him. Hamlin is a four-time Martinsville winner, including the last three visits to his home state.

Johnson credits that domination to the two of them knowing exactly what to do from the moment their car hits the track in Friday's first practice.

"A lot of tracks have a lot of other options, but there's one very specific line you have to run and when a guy finds it, and he can set his car up to it, you go and go and go for years," Johnson said. "That's what Denny has been able to do, and what we've been able to do and Jeff has done. So I really think it falls into that category."

"You go to a big track and there are three or four lanes to run on, you can move around and find somewhere that works for your setup if you missed it, (and) for your own driving style. That's not the case here."

Hamlin didn't disagree about what it takes to win at Martinsville, and that he and Johnson have been the only two drivers of late to get in on the secret.

Final Four doubleheader

Butler vs. Virginia Commonwealth and Kentucky vs. Connecticut

Calhoun, Calipari never really see eye to eye

HOUSTON (AP) — Nobody will dispute that they are great coaches, and the latest evidence lies in the teams they guided to this year's Final Four.

Nobody will argue that John Calipari and Jim Calhoun are saints, either.

The men on the sidelines for the Kentucky-Connecticut Final Four matchup have had their share of trouble — with each other, the programs they run and the NCAA.

They are a microcosm of everything that's right and wrong in college basketball — a coach-driven game where good leaders can elevate programs and players to new levels but the road to success often produces its fair share of cringeworthy dealing.

Calipari leads the fourth-seeded Wildcats (29-8) against Calhoun and the third-seeded Huskies (30-9) in the second semifinal Saturday. Both coaches coaxed a turnaround out of their young, struggling teams to make unexpected trips to the game's biggest stage — the third for Calipari and fourth for Calhoun.

On the eve of the game, their histories were as lively a topic as the success of their teams.

One of the first questions Calipari fielded Friday was whether he is the 2000's version of former UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, a coach who did a lot of winning in his day but did it with his phone number firmly entrenched on the NCAA's speed dial.

The question slid off the Wildcats coach as smoothly as good Kentucky bourbon.

"I respect everything that Jerry did — his kids, how they played, all those things," Calipari said. "But, no, I think I'm the 2011 John Calipari. I don't know what that means, and I hate to talk in the third party. But I am who I am."

Unlike Calhoun, Calipari has no qualms about how many of his players have had startlingly brief college careers and, indeed, views that as something of a feather in his cap. He recruits the best players, replaces them just as quickly — goodbye John Wall, hello Brandon Knight — and gets them to accept different, sometimes uncomfortable roles to come together as a team.

He is back in Houston, where three years ago he won two games at the regional to lead Memphis to the Final Four, only to leave that school a year later, just as the program was running into NCAA problems involving the recruitment of Derrick Rose.

Calipari's first Final Four visit, with Massachusetts back in 1996, also has been scrubbed by the NCAA. Which led to another tongue-in-cheek question: How does it feel to be coaching in your first Final Four?

"I don't deal with that," said the 52-year-old coach, who spent four years in the NBA between his stints at UMass and Memphis. "We've been here three times. Those players played those games and did what they were supposed to. I'm so proud of what they've all accomplished."

Kelsey Bryant — combined to go 24-for-31 with eight doubles, four homers and 28 RBIs.

The pitching was solid as well. CSI's three hurlers scattered 11 hits over three games and allowed just two unearned runs — both came in the first inning of the first game when Groenewegen's throw to first base sailed well high and to the fence.

"We wanted to prove what kind of team we really are," said Groenewegen, who upped her season RBI total to 73.

"When we make mistakes, we just forget about it and know we're not going to let it happen again. We wanted to hit the ball at the plate, pitch and play good defense, and all of us did a really good job."

The teams played three due to poor weather forecasts for today. The fourth game of the series is scheduled for 11 a.m. today, weather permitting.

The momentum swung when the Eagles finally got some of the good breaks that have eluded them to this point in the season. Walks and a key error allowed them to plate those three runs to win Game 1, then Spartan pitcher Adam Thompson made a big mistake with the bases loaded in the second inning of Game 2.

Thompson left a fastball out over the plate and CSI first baseman Ben Douglas made it hurt, crushing it over the wall in left-center field to break the game open.

"I didn't think it was going to go out when I first hit it. I was just digging to try and make sure I could get two (bases)," Douglas said of the first CSI homer at Skip Walker Field this season. "The ball doesn't usually carry like that in this ballpark, but I guess I got all of it. Once we got to that lead I thought we really started to settle down."

Douglas drove in six of CSI's 15 runs on the day, while Chase Harris doubled three times in the triple-header. What impressed most, though, was the efficiency of Vavra and Game 2 starter Michael Renner.

Finally enjoying some run support, Renner faced the minimum amount of batters in six scoreless innings of work, mixing in nine strikeouts, two hits and a walk — three baserunners that were rubbed out on a double play and two pickoffs.

Vavra was even more dominant in going the distance, making up for a couple of poor outings that ballooned his ERA above four.

"I love pitching with the lead," the Calgary, Alberta, sophomore said. "The last two weekends I haven't gotten out of the fifth inning, so I really wanted to get that complete game today, to get as many innings as I can ahead of the conference tournament."

The two teams will play a single game today, weather permitting, at 11 a.m.

was done before the NCAA tournament.

Kemba Walker of Connecticut was second with 11 votes. Nolan Smith of Duke had five and Jared Sullinger of Ohio State one.

"To see Jimmer progress and become a leader of his team, that will be his basketball legacy," BYU coach Dave Rose said. "He is driven not just to be the best player he can, but it was how he helped his teammates to win. He always found a way. That's what I'll remember most."

Fredette is the first BYU player to win the award and the first from the Mountain West since Andrew Bogut of Utah in 2005.

Next up for the 6-foot-3

Fredette is the NBA draft.

"I just feel like as long as I can get into the right situation I can be successful, but it's all about the situation," he said. "Hopefully when I get in that situation I'll prove that I can play and earn the respect of my teammates, coaches and general manager, everybody involved, and hopefully play well for them."

Brey led the Fighting Irish to a 27-7 record, their second-most wins in a season. Their 14-4 mark in the Big East tied their record for conference victories. Notre Dame was a No. 2 seed in the NCAA tournament, losing to Florida State in the third round.

Brey drew 28 votes, 14 more than runner-up Steve Fisher of San Diego State.

IF APRIL 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Find ways to expand your horizons and improve your appearance during your birthday week. Right now, everyone seems to look at you through rose colored glasses, but you can't always get by on your charm. Take precautions to mend fences, pay bills and settle disputes now, so that you won't have any loose ends that can trip you up in the second half of April. Early July may be the most satisfying time for a vacation or uncommitted romantic fling. In August you must once again watch your p's and q's, as people in general will be more exacting and critical of your actions. January might be the best time to launch your important plans or make key decisions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you reach the end of your tether, just stay there. You won't be able to overcome your limitations through brute force or rebelliousness. You may be briefly frustrated by a lack of cooperation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This isn't the time play to games. If you can't make an informed decision based on logic and facts, then make no decision at all. You may be casual about something that requires precision.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Inflated egos are like balloons filled with hot air and easily brought down to earth. You may feel that others are luckier and more talented than you, but the people you compare yourself with may be exaggerating.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Remain on your toes, like a boxer in the ring. A passing tempest in a sizable teapot can be avoided, but any storm system could circle around and come at you from another unexpected direction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't commit or omit. Be aware that people could be grouchier than usual under these stars. This is not a good time to ask for a favor or begin a fling. You may be pinned in a corner by your own mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Just wait out a period of unrest. The deck is stacked against you if you embrace a new financial obligation or instigate a major change. Don't make a promise under these stars as it may be regretted later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you show off, you can be shown up. Any flamboyance on your part might result in disapproval from key contacts. A yen for instant gratification is best satisfied by spending time with a time-tested partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tread water. Familiar habits and rituals provide comfort when you find it impossible to begin something new. This isn't an advantageous time to sign contracts, make major purchases or break bad habits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is true that a fools and their money are soon parted. Your enthusiasms and desire to show off your generous nature could outweigh your common sense. Restrain your desire to gamble with assets.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Create your own oasis of tranquility. With rings on your fingers and bells on your toes, you can have music wherever you go. Your best bet is to keep yourself busy doing whatever it is you do best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't throw the dice and hope for the best. Gambling on an uncertain outcome might not be wise at this juncture. Your loved ones may be more critical and demanding than usual, so patience is needed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): People do not like being taken for granted. Usually they won't react badly when their good will is abused, but this weekend the worm may turn. Don't risk a relationship by being insincere and careless.

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

DEAR ABBY: I have 10-year-old twin boys. “Frank” is popular with the boys in his class, while “Jake” has only one close friend, “Tommy.” When Frank is invited to parties, sleep-overs, movies, swimming and play dates, Jake is left out and never invited. Tommy is a great kid, but comes from a family that isn’t very social. We invite Tommy to our home, but Jake isn’t invited back.

I feel terrible when I see how sad Jake is when his brother is constantly going off to do fun things and he’s left at home. We try to keep Jake busy with enjoyable activities when this happens, but it’s not the same.

While Frank has a right to have his own friends, sometimes I feel I should say something to the parents about how much their leaving Jake out is hurting his feelings and self-confidence.

— HEARTBROKEN MOM IN MISSOURI
DEAR HEARTBROKEN MOM: I don’t recommend saying anything to the parents of Frank’s friends because it could backfire. Boys that age pick their own friends, and if Jake was forced on them, no one would be happy about it — including Jake. Instead, continue inviting Tommy over and explore activities outside of school where Jake can shine in his own right. That will do more for his self-confidence than tagging along with his brother where he really isn’t wanted.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My son “Marshall” is 36. He’s handsome, has a great job, is a wonderful son and would be a tremendous “catch.” The problem is Marshall has no interest in marriage or even dating. He was in a relationship six or seven years ago that ended badly. Since then, he has decided he doesn’t want any woman getting close to him. He hasn’t been on a date since.

Marshall spends his time hunting, fishing and playing/watching sports with his single and divorced friends. It doesn’t help that the divorced friends tell him he’s doing the right thing by staying single, and how they wish they had done the same thing.

Every time I raise the subject, he tells me he’s happy with his life and doesn’t want to change. How do I get through to him? My husband says we should let him do what he wants because it’s his life. But I have trouble accepting that my son wants to stay single the rest of his life. Help!

— PROTECTIVE MOM IN OHIO

DEAR MOM: That’s understandable. You come from a generation in which marriage was the norm. However, in the decades since you were married there has been a slow (but steady) erosion in the percentage of Americans who think marriage is important. Your son may have much to offer, but if he isn’t interested in closeness, intimacy and partnership, he probably wouldn’t be very good at it. So trust him, love him, and don’t push him. Marriage, when it’s a good one, is wonderful. But it is no longer a must, and more and more people are concluding it isn’t for everyone.

DEAR ABBY: You often refer your readers who are troubled to doctors and clergy. Another reference to consider is the Human Resource professionals at their workplace. We offer a variety of programs to assist our employees with financial and family issues. We want healthy and happy employees.

— HELPING HANDS IN CORTE MADERA, CALIF.

DEAR HELPING: With mental health services stressed to the max because of cutbacks, this is certainly a worthwhile option. Thank you for the suggestion.

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

Ans: OUPHC LAOGN CNRUHC TPIYSG

(Answers Monday)

Yesterday's Jumbles: FLICK PLANK REFUSE NOODLE
 Answer: After today, Jumble will no longer be featured in newspapers — APRIL FOOLS

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

by David L. Hoyt and Jeff Knurek

WHAT ONE GETS WHEN THEY CARPOOL WITH SOMEONE WHO WON'T STOP TALKING.

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

“Those magnificent men in their flying machines.”
— Lorraine Williams

At the halfway point of the 2010 Canadian Trials, the eventual winners (team Gartaganis) and their opponents were running neck and neck. After that, Gartaganis ran away with the match, with the help of deals like today's.

Both tables reached five clubs, but in the other room the defense started routinely with a spade to the ace and a diamond switch. Nick Gartaganis won this, ruffed two spades in dummy, drew trump, and led up to the heart honors to chalk up an easy 400.

Just as the Vugraph spectators were beginning to speculate on the fate of the contract on the highly unlikely trump lead, Piotr Klimowicz selected the club three for his opening salvo. Declarer won this in hand and played a heart. On this trick, Klimowicz made his second nice, and highly necessary, play by ducking the ace. If he wins the heart ace, declarer can come to three heart tricks — but more importantly, the hearts give him entries to ruff out diamonds. He gets home with six clubs, three hearts, and two diamonds.

Now declarer, in dummy with the heart king, called for a spade, and it was Gordon Campbell's turn to shine, sitting East. He “rose” to the occasion when he ducked his spade A-K-Q to allow partner to win the and play another trump. After that, it was all over — wriggle as he might, declarer was always going to lose the two aces, and either a second heart or a second spade.

ANSWER: Double. This double goes under many names, but is essentially a takeout double for the unbid suits. Call it competitive, responsive or Snapdragon, but it comes to the same thing — it suggests values and the unbid suits. Ideally, you would have more tolerance for partner's suit.
