St. Luke's Magic Valley trails state, nation in patient survey

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

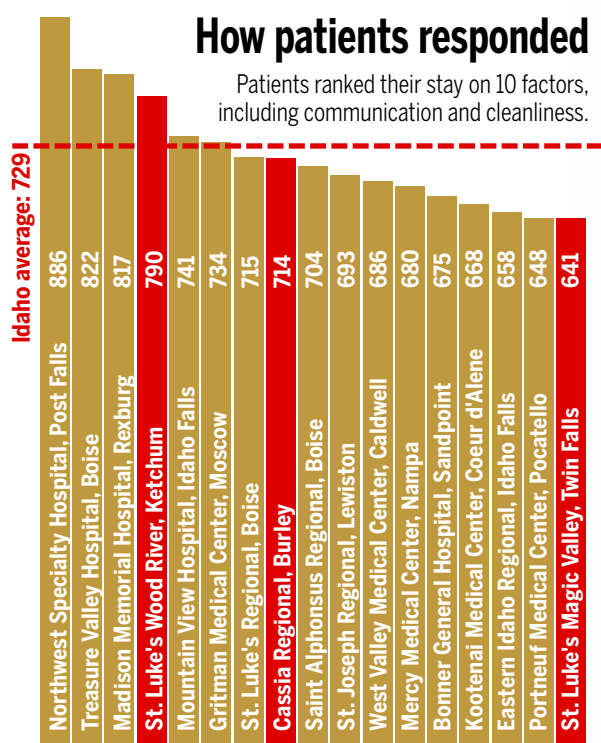

Patient satisfaction at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center lags behind other Idaho hospitals, according to a government survey of patients in Medicare and Medicaid programs.

When compared to other Idaho health care operations, the Twin Falls hospital's overall score comes out at the bottom for the state, a result based on surveys of patients who had overnight stays at hospitals between April 2009 and March 2010.

The numbers, compiled by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, give a glimpse into patients' attitudes toward their quality of care and overall hospital experience, giving separate scores in areas like noise levels and doctor communication.

The Twin Falls hospital's total score is 12 percent below the state's average, and 7.8 percent less than the nation's. Those figures don't include the Boise VA Medical Center, or other hospitals without enough patients for

T.F. schools begin to adapt to new reforms

Board approves rezoning board trustee districts for election

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Idaho's sweeping overhaul of public education is starting to trickle down to school districts and make waves through policy and human resources issues alike.

The Twin Falls School District Board of Trustees approved a resolution on Monday to quickly negate various policies that are out of order with new state laws.

Among them is the elimination of tenure for new teachers. In place of a system that based some decisions — including who is fired when enrollment drops — on teacher seniority, the education reform package will put all new public school teachers in the state on contracts that expire every two years.

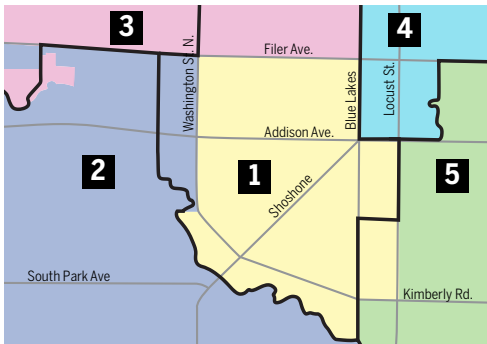

While the board took no action to change its policy for new teachers and those who haven't fulfilled a four-year requirement to achieve tenure, trustees said they need to move quickly to do so.

"As we make our way through the laws, this provides us protection," Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said.

Roads a major topic at State of the City

Clow blames Legislature for blocking local-option tax, hurting road funding

By Nick Coltraine
Times-News writer

From a self-described "old grump" to the Youth Council president, Twin Falls city roads were very much on the minds of the attendees to the third annual State of the City event.

And with several state lawmakers in the audience, including one who was a Twin Falls city councilman six months ago, Councilman Lance Clow took aim at the Legislature for blocking local-option tax as a solution to the city's road-funding woes.

"There are very few tools that local city governments have at their disposal other than outright property taxes, and we're limited in that by limitations established by the state (Legislature)," Clow said, launching into a spiel about the tax, a topic he has worked on with the Association of Idaho Cities.

Local-option taxes allow municipalities to tack on a tax within their district — provided it wins enough votes at the ballot box — for specified uses, such as roads. Currently in Idaho, only resort cities, such as Hailey, have that option. Hub cities, like Twin Falls, cannot even consider the option, despite having the similar problem of a regular influx of non-local taxpayers burdening local infrastructure.

"We have a problem getting that on the books because the Legislature doesn't want

Federal budget bill drops wolves from endangered list

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press writer

BILLINGS, Mont. — An attachment to the federal budget bill needed to avert a government shutdown would take gray wolves off the endangered species list across most of the Northern Rockies.

Wildlife advocates conceded Tuesday the wolf provision was all but certain to remain in the spending bill after efforts to remove it failed. Congress faces a tight deadline on a budget plan already months overdue, and the rider has bipartisan support.

It orders the Interior Department to lift protections for wolves within 60 days in five Western states. A federal judge in Montana has turned back three prior attempts by Interior officials to declare wolves recovered, under both the Bush and Obama administrations.

Protections would remain intact in Wyoming, at least for now. But wolf hunting would resume this fall in Idaho and Montana, where an estimated 1,250 of the animals have been blamed in hundreds of livestock attacks and for declines seen in some big game herds. Wolves also would be returned to state management in Washington, Oregon and Utah.

Lawmakers said they inserted the rider to circumvent a federal judge who repeatedly blocked people to have that choice,” Clow told the audience, including Twin Falls state Sen. Lee Heider and Reps. Stephen Hartgen and Leon Smith. “They think that if we’re allowed to have that choice, we might approve that tax. And to me, that’s wrong. I think we should have the right to make that choice.”

Clow’s statements came from an earlier question about Eastland Drive, one of several roadways that audience members asked about. Aside from the general failure of Eastland, the council faced questions about arsenic project-related road ills in south Twin Falls and potholes on Washington Street North.

City Manager Travis Rothweiler said the south town arsenic work should be done by mid-July, with Eastland work and general road maintenance being done at about that time.

Councilman David E. Johnson said city roads are a frequent topic at City Council meetings. The City Council drives the torn up streets also, he said, and the last winter was a rough one. But work is being done to remedy the situations, though the price may be steeper than the city and its taxpayers can stomach, he said.

“We don’t want to half-asphalt anything,” Johnson said, playing off an earlier pun. “That’s the bottom line. It’s a lot of money if you want to do it right, and the infrastructure in the city didn’t happen overnight the way it is today.”

He said more options are needed to pay for the infrastructure updates, especially since the city population — and city road use — doubles with non-local taxpayers every day. Johnson said Twin Falls residents are taxed enough locally, and outside help is needed.

The board also approved rezoning board trustee districts for the upcoming May 17 elections. The residential shift in Twin Falls has moved more of the town’s 42,000 inhabitants toward the city’s outer edges, further away from downtown. The district worked with Boise-based Quadrant Consulting to even up each of its five trustee zones by population. Each zone now includes approximately 10,000 people.

In other business, the school board approved a yearlong pilot program to install a uniform policy at Bridge Academy, TFSD’s alternative middle school. The uniforms still allow students to wear denim pants, but they must be worn with a belt and a tucked-in polo shirt.

The board also received information on a $225,000 grant from the J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation to help students in alternative high schools pay for dual-credit courses taken through the College of Southern Idaho. The pilot program started running classes this semester and is available for students at Magic Valley High School in Twin Falls and Silver Creek High School in Hailey. Students can receive scholarships to pay for the credits by participating in community service.

Collision at NYC airport shows risks of huge planes, congestion

NEW YORK (AP) — A frightening collision between one of the world's largest airliners and a commuter jet on a dark, wet tarmac at John F. Kennedy International Airport is underscoring worries about ground accidents as U.S. airports begin handling a new generation of giant planes.

A total of 586 passengers and crew members were aboard the two aircraft Monday night when the left wing of an Airbus A380 operated by Air France clipped a Bombardier CRJ-700 regional jet flown by Comair, spinning the smaller plane nearly 90 degrees. No one was injured.

The superjumbo Airbus is so immense — as tall as a seven-story building, with a wing span as wide as a Manhattan block — that its wing almost cleared the smaller plane. But not quite.

“It’s the sheer size of these aircraft and the congestion at these airports that’s the problem,” said Allan Tamm, a consultant with Avicor Aviation, based in Portland. “It’s a serious concern for all these airports trying to accommodate these aircraft. It’s going to happen more and more.”

The collision happened at one of the nation’s most congested airports on a rainy night when flashing lights reflecting off wet tarmac can obscure small aircraft. It comes as airports around the country are beginning to receive a new class of huge aircraft.

Fourteen airports have obtained waivers from the Federal Aviation Administration to receive the new Boeing 747-8, which falls in to the same new size class as the A380, The Associated Press reported this week. And Boeing is working with 13 more airports to get approval from the FAA, though not all of them may require waivers.

Other listed south-central Idaho hospitals fared better, with varying results:

- Cassia Regional Medical Center scored above the national average but 2 percent below the state average. Just 57 percent of patients said it’s always quiet at night. Hospital administrators were unavailable Tuesday for comment.
- Among the top performers was St. Luke’s Wood River Medical Center, which scored 8.3 percent higher than the state’s average.

The highest score went to Northwest Specialty Hospital in Post Falls. Vaughn Ward, its chief executive officer, said the hospital strives to exceed — not just meet — standards that are set.

“We try to create and build a culture that it’s about your patients,” he said. “It’s about your outcomes.”

In Twin Falls, St. Luke’s Magic Valley fared the worst in noise levels. Just 42 percent of respondents said their rooms were always quiet at night. The state’s average is 61 percent; the nation’s average is 58 percent.

proposals to hunt the predators, most recently through a ruling issued Saturday.

The legislation would block further court intervention.

“We needed to figure out a way to manage these critters just like we manage other wildlife, and this is the way to do it,” Sen. Jon Tester said in an interview with The Associated Press. “If you take a look at impacts wolves have had on domestic livestock, on our big game, it is not deniable that it has been extensive.”

Rep. Mike Simpson, an Idaho Republican who got the wolf provision in the House bill, said wolves would have remained on the endangered list “indefinitely” without congressional action. Simpson also said he wanted to curb the expansion of the animals into neighboring states.

Only a few dozen wolves so far have colonized Washington and Oregon. No packs are known to exist in Utah although individual animals have been seen there and in Colorado.

Wolves were wiped out across most of the United States during the last century under a government bounty program established to benefit the agriculture industry. They were reintroduced to Wyoming and Idaho in the mid-1990s, and at least 1,651 now roam the region.

Idaho and Montana officials were forced to cancel wolf hunts planned last year following a ruling from U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy. Molloy has criticized the injection of politics into the question of whether wolves are recovered.

If Congress succeeds in silencing the court’s say over the matter, the states will be able to move forward with plans to let hunters kill hundreds of wolves this fall.

Wildlife advocates had sought to stop the legislation through a settlement on the issue with the Obama administration announced last month. That settlement was scuttled by Molloy, who cited dissension among some environmentalists who characterized the deal as a politically motivated sellout.

The Sierra Club sent out an appeal Tuesday asking its members to supporters to take a “last stand” for wolves. But Mike Leahy, with Defenders of Wildlife, said the time to head off congressional action “has come and gone.” He said his group was turning its attention to the states, in hopes of averting overhunting that could drive wolves again to the brink of extinction.

“The real threat here is the states grinding down wolf populations in response to anti-wolf rhetoric over time,” Leahy said. “They can chip away at the population and manage them down to 100, 150 wolves if they want.”

Some wildlife advocates last month supported a court settlement on federal protections for wolves, but Congress acted on its own, via the budget bill, to remove those protections.

Montana Sen. Max Baucus suggested there were wolves to spare in his state, and that a hunt “just makes sense” to reduce a population that surpassed its minimum recovery goal a decade ago.

Wyoming lawmakers inserted language into the bill to uphold a ruling on wolves by another judge last year that was favorable to their state. However, the ruling said only that the government must reconsider Wyoming’s wolf management proposal — not necessarily accept it.

Wyoming Republican Rep. Cynthia Lummis said she hoped the rider would “clear away obstacles so that meaningful negotiations can continue” between the state and federal officials.

The Fish and Wildlife Service in the past maintained that Wyoming law is too hostile to the predators, because it would allow them to be shot on sight across most of the state. Negotiations between the agency and Wyoming over the last several months have yet to yield a deal.

Is that what you're wearing?

Several weeks ago, reader Rick Otto of Twin Falls wrote a letter to the editor of the Times-News complaining about the attire of those whom he encounters in public these days.

"It feels like there are no standards anymore, of any kind, for any occasion," he wrote. "It's all about what feels good to me now. The coarsening of culture continues unabated. If those folks who insist on wearing their jammies in public knew just how pitiful — not stylish or cool — they look, maybe they'd stop. Right now, all they're doing is telling society that they have no interest in participating."

Otto was subsequently criticized for elitism in letters to the editor and in online reader posts at Magicvalley.com. But I'm with Rick on this one.

Magic Valley, all of you had mothers — none of whom would have let you go out of the house looking as you do now.

tells the world you've just given up.

South-central Idaho has never been stylish, but until recently it had some standards. Well into the 1980s, my uncles all wore neckties — ugly neckties, but ties nonetheless — with their massive gabardine trousers.

Yet nowadays, the definition of Idaho stylin' is that we can't see your bellybutton gracing the size 44 camo pants that you've chosen to wear with your wife-beater.

Back in the day, Van Engelen's and the Idaho Department Store had a clue.

These were the retailers of your parents' youth. Well into the 1970s, they epitomized fashion — or at least as fashionable as pistol-packin' Idahoans such as Hermann Welker and George Hansen practiced.

But somewhere along the way, clothing manufacturers — most of them located in Macao and Bangladesh — stopped putting starch in their collars and ceased creasing their pants. It was a giant slide down the long, slippery slope that divides reasoned discourse from WWE Raw.

Today, Idaho style is whatever you want it to be. Which is to say, no style at all.

In his letter, Otto complained that he had recently stood in the checkout line at Walmart behind a big guy about 35 years of age who wore pajamas. I've stood in the very same queue.

And I can speculate that there were flip-flops upon this gentleman's feet and that the ends of his PJs did in no way justify the means.

Believe it or not, Idaho, your mother and mine used to dress up when they went to the grocery store — makeup and all.

Today, they'd prefer to stay home and go hungry.

T.F. man arrested in stabbing

JACKPOT, Nev. — A Twin Falls man was jailed Tuesday morning on an attempted murder charge after allegedly stabbing a friend at a jackpot, Nev., casino.

According to Elko County Sheriff's Lt. Marvin Morton, deputies were dispatched to Cactus Petes Resort Casino, where they and medical personnel found Buhl resident Nicholas J. Chapman lying on the ground, clutching his abdomen.

Morton said Chapman told deputies his friend, Yevgeny Jason Ovcharenko, 26, had stabbed him. Deputies noted the wound was about 4 inches deep.

Using surveillance footage, deputies determined Ovcharenko entered his hotel room and changed clothing. They were able to locate him on casino property and take him into custody. Morton said Ovcharenko waived his right to an attorney being present and indicated he was responsible for the stabbing.

Morton said the stabbing may have been the result of an argument, but neither Chapman nor Ovcharenko provided details.

Ovcharenko was transported to Elko County Jail on $50,000 bail.

Budget deal blocks wilderness plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A last-minute budget deal reached by Congressional leaders would block an Obama administration plan to make millions of acres of undeveloped land in the West eligible for federal wilderness protection.

Republican lawmakers had complained that the wilderness plan would circumvent Congress's authority and could be used to declare a vast swath of public land off-limits to oil-and-gas drilling.

An agreement reached Friday night to avoid a government shutdown includes language that prohibits the Interior Department from spending money to implement the wilderness policy.

Interior Secretary Ken Salazar announced the plan in December, reversing a Bush-era policy that opened millions of acres of Western lands to commercial development. The so-called "wild lands" policy would restore eligibility for wilderness protection to millions of acres of public lands.

Salazar calls the new policy a common-sense solution that would help the agency better manage public lands, waters and wildlife, but critics accused him of a land-grab that would lock up millions of prime acres in the West.

Rep. Rob Bishop, R-Utah, said the policy would "destroy thousands of jobs ... and create a paralyzing uncertainty for Western communities." Elected officials throughout the West have called for the plan to be halted, Bishop said.

"The longer this initiative has been out in the public, the more concerns I hear about the impact it will have on ranching, energy production, recreation and even the Bureau of Land Management's own ability to manage their lands," said Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho.

The initiative oversteps the Interior Department's authority, Simpson said, adding: "Only Congress has the authority to create new land designations."

A spokeswoman for Salazar declined to comment Tuesday. But in a statement last month the agency said that as a Westerner himself and a former Colorado senator, Salazar believes the wild lands policy is a practical approach that restores balance to the management of public lands.

The plan has drawn support from conservation groups and recreation business owners, who say conservation of public lands is good business. The groups cite the impact of tourism on Western economies.

The new policy by itself does not itself create any wild lands designation, nor does it require that any particular lands be protected, said Bob Abbey, director of the Bureau of Land Management. Designation as wild land can only be made after public comments and review and does not necessarily prohibit motor vehicle use or the staking of new mining claims, Abbey said.

Most people won't notice these big budget cuts

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It's touted as the biggest one-time rollback of domestic spending ever, but most folks will be hard-pressed to notice. After all, it's just 1 percent of what the government will lay out this year.

The number of security officers at airports won't be reduced. National park campgrounds won't close. There will still be enough meat inspectors to prevent temporary plant closures. Disadvantaged schools won't see cuts in federal aid.

And stiff cuts to grants for community action agencies serving the poor were averted.

Basically, the things most people expect from the government won't change very much if Congress approves the cuts unveiled Tuesday, the details from that late-night deal that kept federal operations going.

For starters, the budget cuts come after two years of generous increases awarded to domestic accounts when Democrats controlled both Congress and the White House. And they total only $38 billion out of the $3.8 trillion the government will spend on everything this year, including Social Security and other retirement programs.

If the government were a family living on $60,000 a year, that's equal to a $600 cut.

Democrats had earlier warned the original House measure — it would have cut more than $60 billion — would have had draconian effects including widespread furloughs of federal workers, temporary shutting of meat processing plants, delays in processing Social Security applications and a big cut in the maximum Pell Grant for college education. Most of the more stringent cuts originally passed by the House have been reversed, and the maximum Pell Grant still will be $5,550 for the next academic year.

Remaining are items like $14 billion in cuts to accounts previously used for congressional earmarks, a $2.9 billion cut to President Barack Obama's high-speed rail initiative and $812 million from construction of new courthouses and other federal buildings.

But there will be no more Pell Grants for summer school. Local police chiefs will find it harder to win federal grants for equipment upgrades and emergency preparedness training — they were cut by $1.2 billion. Non-profit groups looking to open new community health centers will have $600 million less to compete for. And it just got more difficult for rural towns seeking grants to build new drinking water and wastewater treatment plants. Grants for them were cut by $1 billion.

Such cuts won't seem like the end of the world to many, though, as the government faces a $1.6 trillion deficit for the current fiscal year.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — On a memorable day in space history, NASA began its goodbyes to the shuttle program Tuesday, announcing the aged spacecraft will retire to museums in Cape Canaveral, Los Angeles and suburban Washington and sending a test-flight orbiter to New York City.

It was an emotional day — the 30th anniversary of the first shuttle launch and the 50th anniversary of man's first journey into space by Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin. Just two more shuttle flights remain, and the head of NASA choked up as he revealed the new homes for the spacecraft in an event at the Kennedy Space Center.

“For all of them, take good care of our vehicles,” NASA Administrator Charles Bolden, a former astronaut, said with a catch in his voice. “They served a nation well, and we at NASA have a deep and abiding relationship and love affair with them that is hard to put into words.”

The choice of homes for the spaceships — sometimes described as the most complex machinery ever devised — was hotly contested. Twenty-one museums and visitor centers around the country put in bids.

The winners will have to come up with an estimated $28.8 million to ferry the shuttles to their new homes and put them on display. Across the country, cheers erupted at the four winning facilities and groans at the locations that lost out.

Fort Sumter marks somber 150th anniversary of start of Civil War

By Bruce Smith

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Booming cannons, plaintive period music and hushed crowds ushered in the 150th anniversary of America's bloodiest war on Tuesday, a commemoration that continues to underscore a racial divide that had plagued the nation since before the Civil War.

The events marked the 150th anniversary of the Confederate bombardment of Union-held Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbor, an engagement that plunged the nation into four years of war at a cost of more than 600,000 lives.

Several hundred people gathered on Charleston's Battery in the pre-dawn darkness, much as Charleston residents gathered 150 years ago to view the bombardment of April 12, 1861.

About 4 a.m., a single beam of light reached skyward from the stone works of Fort Sumter. About a half hour later, about the time the first shots were fired, a second beam glowed, signifying a nation torn in two. Nearby, a brass ensemble played a concert called “When Jesus Wept” as hundreds listened, some in folding chairs, others standing.

Fifty years ago during the centennial of the Civil War, there was a celebratory mood. But on Tuesday, the 150th anniversary events were muted. Even the applause seemed subdued.

At the White House, President Barack Obama captured the somber mood in a proclamation that the date would be the first day of the Civil War Sesquicentennial.

“On this milestone in American history, we remember the great cost of the unity and liberty we now enjoy, causes for which so many have laid down their lives,” the statement released by the White House said.

Alluding to the war's ultimate end in 1865, Obama added: “When the guns fell silent and the fate of our Nation was secured, blue and gray would unite under one flag and the institution of slavery would be forever abolished from our land.”

“We are the United States of America — we have been tested, we have repaired our Union, and we have emerged stronger,” his proclamation added.

Tim Pawlenty says ‘I’m running’

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty may be running for president, but he's not ready to be official about it.

Pawlenty moved quickly Tuesday to knock down a CNN story that appeared to show him officially entering the race.

During an airing of Piers Morgan Tonight, taped earlier in the day, the talk show host remarked on Pawlenty's low standing in early polls. He asked if Pawlenty would consider being real estate tycoon Donald Trump's No. 2 on a ticket. The former governor laughed and responded, “I'm running for president.”

Later in the interview, Morgan asked Pawlenty to clarify if that was an official announcement.

“I've got an exploratory committee up and running and we'll have a final or full announcement on that in the coming weeks,” said Pawlenty, who formed an exploratory committee last month. “It won't be too much longer. But everything is headed in that direction.”

After the show aired, Pawlenty spokesman Alex Conant took issue with the way in which CNN promoted the interview throughout the afternoon and in Morgan's online blog. That blog included a video clip of the portion of the interview.

It was listed under the headline, “Tim Pawlenty says ‘I'm running for President’ and comments on Trump as possible opponent.”

Oversized oil load blamed for outage in Idaho towns

LEWISTON (AP) — The heaviest truckload to ever travel across U.S. Highway 12 in northern Idaho was blamed for knocking out power to hundreds of residents and delaying traffic longer than allowed by state transportation officials.

Idaho officials say the rig carrying Imperial Oil's oversized shipment of refinery equipment clipped and snapped a guy wire for a high-voltage power line, setting off a chain reaction that shorted a power line and cut the electricity Monday night to 1,300 customers in the towns of Pierce and Wierpe.

The oversized load was also blamed for snapping a tree branch and at one point for delaying traffic for an hour, which is three times longer than was allowed under the state's permit.

"No one was hurt," said Pius Rolheiser, a spokesman for Imperial Oil, told the Lewiston Tribune Tuesday.

The oil company was conducting a test trip for the equipment, which departed Lewiston on the first leg of a weeks-long journey across Idaho, through Montana, to the oil sands in southern Alberta, Canada.

The Idaho Transportation

Department ordered the load to stay put at a turnout 12 miles west of Kooskia until the trucking contractor can file a report.

The rig weighs 490,000 pounds, stands three stories tall and 24 feet wide and stretches roughly 250 feet long from the pull truck to the push truck. It is the biggest load ever to traverse one of the state's most scenic stretches of highway.

"We're going to do everything we can to accomplish this move safely and flawlessly," Rolheiser said moments before the 245-ton load left Lewiston.

Imperial Oil, a subsidiary of ExxonMobil Corp., wants to use the scenic roadway to haul dozens of similar loads across Idaho, into Montana and north to the Kearsy Oil Sands.

Officials in Idaho and Montana issued permits for the test run before deciding how to handle the dozens of other proposed shipments.

Conservation groups and residents who live along the route have sued in federal court to block the shipments. That includes the Idaho Rivers United's lawsuit against the U.S. Forest Service.

DC becomes first to offer Internet gambling in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The District of Columbia is becoming the first U.S. jurisdiction to allow Internet gambling, trying to raise millions of dollars from the habits of online poker buffs and acting ahead of traditional gambling meccas like New Jersey and Nevada.

Permitting the online games was part of the 2011 budget and a 30-day period for Congress to object expired last week, said D.C. Council member Michael A. Brown, who authored the provision. The gaming would be operated by Intralot, a Greece-based company, and would be available only to gamblers within the borders of the district.

Officials were not sure when the gaming would be up and running, though DC lottery officials said they were in talks with their vendor and expect to know more within weeks. Though other states have contemplated legalizing online poker, experts said the district would be the first jurisdiction in the country to do it.

The move to legalize the games comes despite a 2006 federal law that effectively banned Internet gambling. The law prohibited banks and credit card companies from processing payments from gambling companies to individuals. But the law is murky, and gambling experts say it created enough grey areas to open the door for a deeper expansion into the multibillion dollar industry.

"There was really no clear law that said we could not do this," Brown said Wednesday.

D.C. hopes to tap those millions to help offset budget cuts and help social services programs, Brown said. Conservative estimates from D.C.'s chief financial officer indicate the district could bring in around $13 million to $14 million through fiscal year 2014, according to Brown's office.

The gambling green light is no doubt good news to poker players, but D.C. would be authorized to offer other games of both skill and chance. It would be up to lottery officials to come up with regulations and decide which games to permit.

"Anytime you're cutting budgets and you want to save some programs, you're looking for different pieces from different pots and you hope that you get to the number that restores those budget shortfalls and that's what we're trying to do with this," Brown said.

A lamb looks through a fence on Frank Shirts' ranch in Wilder on March 15. After lambing season in the early spring, ranchers like Shirts move the lambs and other sheep to higher ground on public and private land to graze for the summer. The decision to phase out domestic sheep grazing on 70,000 acres of bighorn sheep habitat in the Payette National Forest cost Frank Shirts his best range.

WSU researcher tests vaccine to save lives of bighorn sheep

BOISE (AP) — A Washington State University wildlife disease researcher produced an experimental vaccine that appears to have protected four bighorn sheep against deadly pneumonia.

Subramaniam Srikumaran, the WSU professor in Pullman, says his findings are a promising but concedes years of work remain to help safeguard wild bighorn herds from periodic die-offs that have plagued the species in Idaho.

His research comes at a time when domestic sheep that roam the same habitat as bighorns are blamed for spreading disease to their more vulnerable wild cousins. That's led federal managers to close sheep grazing allotments in Idaho's Payette National Forest to protect the wild sheep. That move has angered the region's ranchers, who see the federal government as protecting wildlife over their livelihoods.

Srikumaran told the Lewiston Tribune this week that he developed the vaccine in his laboratory, then gave it to four bighorn sheep. They all survived after being exposed to a pathogen that causes pneumonia. Sheep not given the vaccine died within days of exposure. He acknowledged the sample size of inoculated bighorns was small, but "100 percent is something convincing to me."

Idaho bighorn numbers have dwindled by half since 1990, to about 3,500. Die-offs such as ones where 300 sheep died in 1995 and 1996 in Hell's Canyon have contributed to the declines. And most scientists believe contact between the wild sheep and domestic sheep during the spring and summer has contributed to transmission of deadly pneumonia.

Last year the Payette National Forest approved a plan that will reduce domestic sheep grazing by nearly 70 percent.

Some see a vaccine along the lines of what Srikumaran is working on as a solution to allowing historic ranching activities and wild sheep to coexist in the high country — not just in Idaho but in other states including Washington and California, where similar efforts to separate the animals are under consideration.

Wildlife biologists following the debate say a solution remains elusive, despite the positive rumblings from Srikumaran's lab. For instance, relying on a vaccine given to wild sheep can be problematic, because it probably would require capturing all the wild animals that live in steep and remote terrain.

Once they're captured, the questions continue, said Keith Lawrence, director of the Nez Perce Tribes wildlife program.

"How do you know who has got it? How do you control the dosage? (There) is lots of difficulty with that," Lawrence said. "That is why until we get all this stuff figured out, separation is the key."

That's one reason why Srikumaran is also working on a method that would treat the domestic sheep that are rounded up annually instead of the bighorns.

"We are trying to eliminate the disease-causing bacteria from the throats of domestic sheep," he said.

California governor signs law setting highest renewable energy goals in U.S.

MILPITAS, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Jerry Brown on Tuesday signed legislation requiring California utilities to get one-third of their power from renewable sources, giving the state the most aggressive alternative energy mandate in the U.S.

California utilities and other electricity providers have until the end of 2020 to draw 33 percent of their power from solar panels, windmills and other renewable sources.

"There are people who think we can drill our way to happiness and prosperity," the Democratic governor told hundreds of workers and other supporters at a solar panel manufacturing plant near San Jose. "Instead of just taking oil from thousands of miles away, we're taking the sun and converting it."

Previous California law required utilities to get 20 percent of their power from renewable sources.

Supporters of the higher standard said it will reassure investors and keep money flowing to develop alternative energy sources. They say that will lead to cleaner air and job growth in the green energy sector.

"By the end of the decade, our goal is to make solar cost-competitive with other forms of energy, all other forms of energy," Energy Secretary Steven Chu told the crowd at the SunPower Corp./Flextronics plant. "This would be a game-changer for us, opening up a world of export opportunities, and California's innovators and businesses can help us achieve this goal."

Critics of the legislation said sticking with traditional energy sources such as coal and natural gas would be cheaper, keeping costs down for business and residential ratepayers. Business groups point to estimates that the higher standard could drive up electricity costs for Californians by more than 7 percent, despite language in the legislation to limit cost increases.

The California Republican Party pointed to one study that suggested the average Californian's energy bill would go up 19 percent under the new standard.

Minnesota bill seeks to ban covert filming of farming operations

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota has become at least the fourth state to consider legislation that would make it illegal to make audio or video recordings at an animal facility without permission, an industry-led backlash against undercover videos made by animal rights groups that have exposed cases of alleged mistreatment.

Bills were introduced last week in the Minnesota House and Senate. No committee hearings have been scheduled yet.

The bill's chief Senate sponsor, Sen. Doug Magnus, R-Slayton, told the Star Tribune of Minneapolis for a story published Friday that the bill is "aimed at people who are harassing and sabotaging these operations."

"These people who go undercover aren't being truthful about what they're doing," Magnus said.

Livestock and crop operations, hatcheries, research facilities and kennels are among facilities covered by the bill. Producing video or audio recordings at facilities, or even possessing them, would become illegal.

Under the bill, a first offense would be a gross misdemeanor and any subsequent offenses would be a felony. Should the bill become law, the Minnesota Sentencing Guidelines Commission would determine the specific penalty, according to Chris Van Guilder, a spokesman for the Minnesota Senate Republican Caucus.

Animal rights advocates say the proposal would have a chilling effect on whistleblowers trying to call attention to cases of animal cruelty.

Idaho's deepening food stamp crisis

The number of Idahoans who now depend on food stamps isn't just high — it's scary. According to the Wall Street Journal, the head count of Idahoans taking food stamps has climbed every month since October 2007, hitting 223,347 in December. Back in 2007, 87,232 people got food coupons.

Let's put that into context: 223,347 is a number equivalent to 14 percent of Idaho's population; that's more people than live in Boise.

The growth in food stamp use is so dramatic that Idaho's major supermarket chains say they're having trouble handling all the people who come in to restock their pantries on the first of the month.

The latest food stamp numbers have been known for months. We wonder why they apparently weren't considered by the Legislature when it decided to suspend the annual increase in the grocery tax credit and slash Medicare by $35 million.

“This is a pick-you-up-by-the-bootstraps type of state, which is why the food-stamp participation has been low,” Rose Andueza, program manager of Idaho's Division of Welfare, told the Wall Street Journal. “But I think now people have just run out of options.”

Idaho's economy has fallen more steeply than most states' as two mainstays, technology and construction, nosedived. As a result, food stamps in the state, which typically bristles at federal programs, have drawn broad political support. Last June, Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter suspended for at least one year a federal provision that blocked people with assets such as a boat from eligibility for food stamps.

Officials see no letup in the need for food assistance until Idaho's economy rebounds, and that isn't expected until 2013 or 2014, according to Donald Holley, an economics professor at Boise State University. The Idaho Foodbank plans to give out 10 million pounds of food in the fiscal year that began July 1, double what it distributed in fiscal 2007.

Which leads us to wonder why the recently adjourned first session of the 61st Idaho Legislature was far more interested in tax breaks for the private sector than in helping Idaho families.

Two-fifths of Idaho students live in families with low enough incomes that they qualify for free or reduced-price school lunches. In the Bliss School District, it's 71 percent. At Shoshone, it's 67 percent. At Hansen, it's 66 percent. And in Glenns Ferry, it's 63 percent.

In order to receive food stamps in Idaho, a family of four can have a household income no more than $2,389 a month. For a single wage-earner, that works out to an hourly salary for $14.93 an hour.

But according to the Idaho Department of Labor, the average entry level wage in the eight counties of south-central Idaho is $8.67 an hour. The median wage is $13.83 an hour.

Folks, we don't have just an economic emergency in Idaho. We have a human crisis.

Before Idahoans talk about any other public policy issues — schools, health care, higher education, corrections — they need to discuss families having enough to feed their kids.

Bombing doesn't get the job done

No one following the record of air power as an instrument of national whim should be surprised that Moammar Gadhafi's army remains apparently uncowed, even driving Libyan rebels back in headlong retreat despite an onslaught of NATO bombs and missiles. In fact, history is repeating itself in more ways than one.

Andrew Cockburn

The very first bombing raid ever occurred almost 100 years ago on Nov. 1, 1911, when an Italian airman hand-dropped four 4.5-pound bombs on forces defending Tripoli against Italian invaders. This momentous event went down well with the press: “Italian Military Aviator Outside Tripoli Proves War Value of Aeroplane,” headlined The New York Times. But it had little effect on the fighting, thus commencing a pattern of disappointment that has recurred with monotonous regularity in subsequent conflicts, irrespective of advances in technology. Precision bombing, touted as an instrument of victory in World War II and Vietnam, turned out to be anything but, leaving the wars to be decided by foot soldiers on the ground.

The 1999 NATO air campaign against Serbia is often cited as a turning point in this sorry narrative. Despite the fact that it lasted 11 weeks rather than the three days predicted by NATO commanders, not a single U.S. serviceman was killed. Furthermore, the attacks ended when the Yugoslav leader, Slobodan Milosevic, agreed to withdraw from Kosovo, thus permitting the return of hundreds of thousands of ethnic Albanian refugees freed from the threat of Serb persecution. Not only had the operation apparently vindicated liberal interventionists in the Clinton administration, but it also indicated that at long last, air power alone could win a war.

Subsequent inquiry gravely tarnished this shining example. The Serbian army deployed in Kosovo had been the principal target of bombs and missiles, yet at the end of the conflict allied military observers were surprised to see Serb formations withdrawing in good order, morale and equipment apparently intact. And despite contemporary official claims that more than 300 tanks had been destroyed, the actual number, according to sources on the command staff and an internal Air Force study, was 14. Most strikingly of all, the cease-fire terms were almost identical to those accepted by Milosevic before the war.

Nevertheless, the rapid eviction of the Taliban from Afghanistan in 2001 appeared to refute the doubters finally and unequivocally. A combination of very precisely guided bombs and missiles, deployed in conjunction with unmanned surveillance drones and select teams of Special Forces target designers on the ground, were deemed to have destroyed large numbers of enemy and routed the rest. Dangerously, this rapid triumph convinced then-Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld that his preference for brief campaigns waged with few troops and high-tech precision weaponry had been totally vindicated, with disastrous consequences on planning for the invasion of Iraq.

As it turned out, the Taliban had not been destroyed (the number of wounded left by its retreating forces was tellingly small). For the most part, they stood down when their sponsor, Pakistan's ISI intelligence agency, ordered a tactical retreat. In more recent years, the Taliban has steadily re-extended its grip over much of Afghanistan despite constant and heavy air assault.

None of these salutary qualifications appear to have had much effect on air power enthusiasts in the current administration, particularly those veterans of the Clinton years who cherish warm, if inaccurate, memories of the Kosovo campaign. So the hard lessons will have to be learned all over again: Jet fighters flying at 15,000 feet — standard altitude in these conditions — have great difficulty spotting targets such as tanks, especially when they make some effort to hide or camouflage themselves. Additionally, in the last week, forces loyal to Gadhafi have reportedly taken to moving in pickups identical to those used by the rebels, rendering the task of airborne targeteers even more difficult. For even minimal success, U.S. personnel acting as ground spotters are indispensable, and they, of course, will require further troops to protect them and train local allies — a role now reportedly being delegated to the CIA.

It is worth bearing in mind that following that inaugural bombing raid in 1911, for which the invaders had such high hopes, and despite the infusion of ever-larger numbers of Italian troops, the war lasted an additional 20 years.

Andrew Cockburn is the author of, most recently, “Rumsfeld: His Rise, Fall and Catastrophic Legacy.” He wrote commentary for the Los Angeles Times.

Wrong prescription for No Child Left Behind

Before we get into why the Obama administration is making a mistake with its No Child Left Behind revisions, let's get this out of the way upfront: Congress should rework the law. Almost a decade after its passage, No Child could use some freshening. It especially should give schools more credit for passing a substantial number of students, even if some groups are failing.

But the administration's suggestions put at risk many disadvantaged kids. Barack Obama had been a fresh Democratic voice on education. Now, he and his team are verging on consigning kids in so-so public schools to mediocrity.

I'm talking here about their proposal to remove the “Washington stick” to prod so-so schools. Under No Child, Washington requires those schools — as well as the flat-out failing ones — to create an improvement plan. If they don't progress, they face federal sanctions.

The administration still would require an improvement plan and the possibility of federal sanctions for the 5 percent of schools that the law regards as failing campuses. But this would end for mediocre schools, where most disadvantaged students attend.

Education Secretary Arne Duncan discussed this shift in a recent telephone interview. Our exchange went like this:

Me: Who would be responsible for intervening with mediocre schools?

Duncan: “It depends upon their level. If you see huge gaps, they will be caught in our accountability system. We will look to see if schools are moving. If they aren't, they fall to the federal government.”

Me: But what about campuses that are just so-so, that are not high-performing or low-performing?

Duncan: “States and local districts will have responsibility for them. We want states, districts and parents stepping up. I'm looking to them to provide support.”

In theory, letting states and districts decide about intervening may make sense. And it certainly will appeal to states-righters.

But a primary reason No Child came about, why civil rights groups especially backed the law, was that many districts didn't expect enough from their kids. Year after sad year, students went from blah school to blah school. And minority kids fell farther behind white kids, in what's known as the “achievement gap.”

Then came No Child, which insisted Washington track kids in every ZIP code so those in mediocre schools, as well as poor ones, wouldn't be left behind. The law sought to ensure every kid could attend a good school through requiring campuses to make “adequate yearly progress.” If they don't, they need a plan.

No Child hasn't worked perfectly, but data show students have progressed since accountability became the norm. Disadvantaged students, in particular, have improved on the respected National Assessment of Educational Progress.

Writing recently on the National Journal's website, Sandy Kress, the Austin, Texas, attorney who worked with George W. Bush and Ted Kennedy in crafting No Child, pointed to these NAEP results:

● In the 2000s, reading scores for 9-year-old blacks have gone up an astonishing

21 points; they've gone up 14 points for Hispanics.

● In the 2000s, after a decade of stagnation, math scores for 9-year-old blacks have gone up 13 points; they've gone up 21 points for Hispanics.

● In the 2000s, after a decade of stagnation, math scores for 13-year-old blacks have gone up 11 points; they've gone up 9 points for Hispanics.

● (Sadly, eighth-grade reading remains stuck decade to decade for all students, a challenge we must all take on.)

Indeed, we still have struggling schools. That's why Obama's absolutely right to keep the Washington stick for the 5 percent of failing schools.

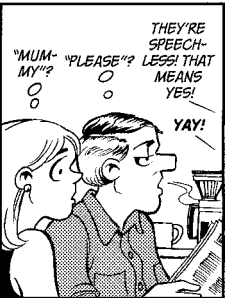

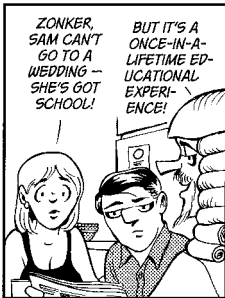

But without Washington prodding the merely not-good schools, kids from poor homes could get stuck in mediocrity from kindergarten through high school.

Which leads to this question: When are the civil rights groups that backed No Child going to speak up again for those kids, who stand to lose the most if these changes take place?

Kids Bowl Free comes to Filer's Cedar Lanes

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

FILER — What started three years ago as a way to help boost kids' summer vacations during the economy's downward spiral has turned into an annual event featuring nearly 1,000 bowling centers across the United States and Canada, with thousands of youth participating.

The Kids Bowl Free tour bus will be traveling the country, kicking off the summer event at bowling centers along the way.

The official Kids Bowl Free Bus Tour kicks off April 10 in Atlanta and the bus will travel more than 14,000 miles in 5 weeks, cross country.

On April 20, the tour bus stops at Cedar Lanes, 405 HWY 30, in Filer.

"The day the tour bus comes is the first day of our Kids Bowl Free season, which runs through the end of September," said Cedar Lanes Owner Juliet Ridgeway. "What's really exciting is that we are the only small community the tour is stopping in."

Although there is no cost to register children to be able to bowl two free games each day through summer Ridgeway said shoe rentals still apply, although the alley is offering a summer-season shoe rental for $10 per child.

"This is a great chance for kids to have something to do, everyday through the summer months," Ridgeway said.

In addition to the tour bus making its only stop in a rural community, the event is marked with The Kids Bowl Free Celebrity and Local Heroes Challenge.

"We're taking names of who we should invite to bowl in the challenge," Ridgeway said. "Local celebrities can include radio DJ's, TV personalities, reporters, sports figures and local politicians. Ideas of local heroes include: teachers, parent teacher groups, doctors, former and active members of the military, coaches, police officers, fire & rescue personnel."

"What's neat is that winners will get a cash prize for the local charity of their choice," Ridgeway said.

Nominations for celebrities and heroes to participate in the event can be made on Cedar Lanes' Facebook page.

The program is a supporter of the Presidential Active Lifestyle Award Challenge.

Since it is officially working with PALA, bowling is not only a recognized, qualified recreational activity to use to qualify for PALA, but bowling participation in the program will be reported regularly to the White House.

In addition to more active kids, the program has been a smart business move for Cedar Lanes.

"Bowling is recreational so when families start reining in their spending its the kind of activity that gets pulled," Ridgeway said. "We've had families become more regular bowlers, and they started with the Kids Bowl Free program. We're very excited to be part of the program again and look forward to a very busy summer."

Report finds more Idaho women running businesses

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Women-owned businesses in Idaho have increased nearly 41 percent since 1997.

That is one of the findings in the American Express OPEN State of Women-Owned Business report, a comprehensive study released at the end of March.

Dr. Sue Phillips, who owns and operates a chiropractic office in Twin Falls and runs and teaches at the Twin Falls Institute of Holistic Studies isn't surprised that more women are become their own bosses.

"When I first started practicing, there were only 4,000 women chiropractors in the nation," Phillips said.

With females accounting for nearly 50 percent of all chiropractic students, the gap between the number of practicing males and women practicing in the field is closing.

Phillips

According to the 2010 Annual Salary and Expense Survey by "Chiropractic Economics," at www.chiroeco.com, the number of females responding (as currently practicing) increased to nearly 23 percent, from 16.4 percent in 2009.

"I think women are taking their place in our society in higher numbers than ever," Phillips said.

Although Phillips, 70, had spent many years as a registered nurse before earning her degree as a chiropractor she knew early on that she would rather be self-employed.

"I don't know what I would have done as an employee. My personality is better suited to running my own businesses. At the institute, most of the students are female, although we do have four men matriculating currently," Phillips said. "This field is a good one for women because they can make their own hours, there is flexibility available."

Robin Dober, 47, owner of Hands On, in Twin Falls, said it was an entrepreneurial spirit, not the desire for a flexible schedule, that led her to be a business owner.

Ada County awards lease, horse races to resume at Les Bois

By Cynthia Sewell
Idaho Statesman

Les Bois horse race track has a new operator.

The Board of Ada County Commissioners on Monday awarded the lease to Treasure Valley Racing. Treasure Valley Racing is a partnership between five local businesspeople — Harry Bettis, James Grigsby Jr., Bob Rebholtz, Larry Williams and Linda Yanke — and Alabama-based Greene Group, which operates a simulcast center in Post Falls.

The county held a live auction Tuesday for the lease agreement. Treasure Valley Racing was the only bidder. Under the lease agreement, Treasure Valley racing will pay Ada County $75,000 annually to lease the facility plus .25 percent of the total live and simulcast handle in excess of $10 million.

Ada County Commissioners Vern Bisterfeldt and Rick Yzaguirre voted to award the lease agreement to Treasure Valley Racing. Commissioner Sharon Ullman voted against the motion, citing concerns about the Greene Group.

Bettis and some of his partners were heading out to Les Bois Monday afternoon to inspect the track's condition. The group plans to start racing this summer; it will set an opening date after it determines how much work the facility needs. The season is likely to begin in July and run through August.

As resale stores grow, shoppers happy to sell as well as buy

By Sandra M. Jones
Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — Resale and consignment shops, emboldened by the Great Recession, are expanding as Americans cling to their bargain-hunting ways.

No longer relegated to back alleys, these second-hand stores are moving into prime locations, taking over spaces once occupied by mainstream retailers Linens 'N Things and Circuit City, now bankrupt, and teen clothier Abercrombie & Fitch.

And they're going national. Bellevue, Wash.-based thrift-store chain Savers Inc. is taking on its biggest expansion in decades, spurred in large part by the cheap retail real estate left behind by big-box stores wiped out in the recession.

The movement mirrors the aftermath of the 1990s recession, when discount shopping at the likes of Target and T.J. Maxx came into vogue. Only this time, instead of pairing a Gap T-shirt with an Armani suit, the most recent financial crisis has made it fashionable to combine the likes of a new J. Crew sweater with a "gently used" Tory Burch skirt.

Thanks to Craigslist and Amazon, people are just as comfortable selling goods these days as buying them, said Ken Nisch, chairman of JGA Inc., a retail design firm in Southfield, Mich. And that is good news for secondhand stores that need a steady supply of used merchandise.

"Customers are becoming merchants and merchants are becoming customers," Nisch said. "Retailers need to figure out how to create consumer liquidity, and this is a way to do

"I think the perception is that owning your own business, you have more flexibility," Dober said. "But for me, the opposite is true. My business consumes my life."

In addition to her ceramics and art shop, Dober also has a software consulting business.

"I enjoy the creativity; helping others tap into their own creativity," she said. "That is the funnest part."

Jeannie Fields, of Buhl, is one of many new business owners in southern Idaho.

She's opening The Cup Cake, in Twin Falls, in May.

Although Fields has been an employee, she enjoys the freedom of choice that comes with running her own business.

The Cup Cake will feature an extensive selection of gourmet cupcakes available for purchase at the shop and she'll also cater special events, like corporate events, weddings, reunions and more. Her bakery, at 1563 Fillmore Avenue North, Unit 1B, will also feature specialty teas and European-style espresso.

After being laid off and then marrying and moving to Buhl, Fields said opening the store will fill a niche need in the community and provide her with a paycheck.

"When you work for a corporation, you have to answer to its culture. There is nothing

Anew, who opened the store in 2009 after losing her job as an insurance broker. "I don't know if any of us will ever feel that kind of security again."

Runway Revival opened next to the Barney's Co-op in Chicago in October, moving into a shuttered Abercrombie & Fitch store. Owner Sheila Hermes furnished the 4,000-square-foot shop with gold clothing racks and a glass display case that she purchased from a Chicago Barneys last year when the retailer shut down and moved across the street.

"People want the opportunity to buy at a lower price, but they also want it to be digestible," Hermes said. "It's gotten to the point that at times we have more coming in than we can put out on the floor. I don't want my store to be packed. I want it to be organized and feel like a boutique."

Indeed, the line between new and used is blurring. The little secret of retail: Personal shoppers at luxury and department stores are boosting their own sales by encouraging customers to sell their old designer duds and use the money to come back and buy something new.

Savers, the West Coast resale chain, has been watching the demographic of its customers change in recent years. About 70 percent of its customers have some college education, compared with 50 percent before the recession, the company said. Also, their average annual income has risen to $45,000-to-$65,000, from $35,000 to $45,000 before the recession.

As they attract new customers, the chain is opening new stores at a rate of about 20 a year.

"We've seen our largest customer conversion and transactional gains in our history in the last three or four years," said Kenneth Altermann, president and CEO of the closely held company. "What has happened is so many more people have been exposed to our type of retail."

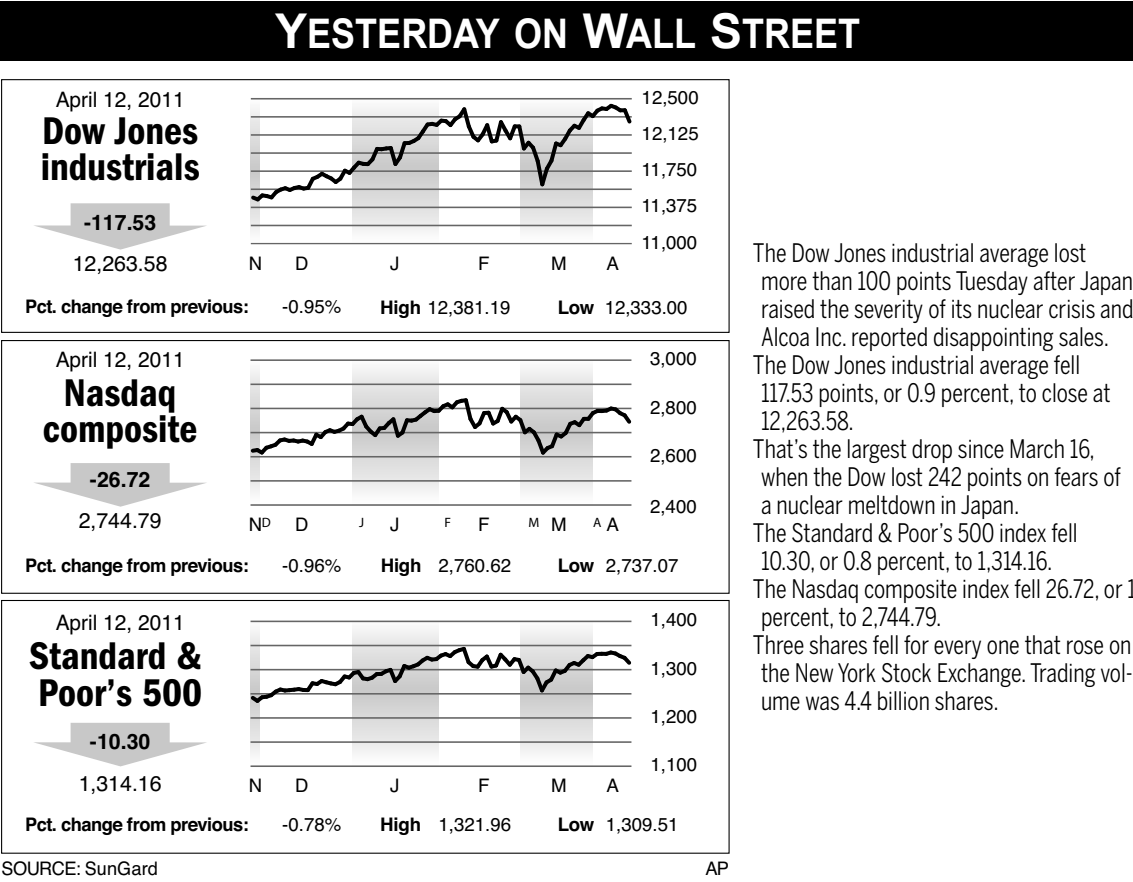

wrong with that, but I prefer being able to chose how I can be involved in the community and be able to make creative decisions."

According to the American Express report the number of women-owned Idaho businesses is estimated to grow to 36,300 during 2011, up from 32,873 in 2007.

The Idaho Legislature passed a law this session that allows the operators to run as few as 15 live dates at the track. The last time horses raced at Les Bois was in August 2008.

In the past nine years Les Bois has had three operators.

lent and Protective Association, said he is "very optimistic" about the new operator.

"We have spoken with this group several times. They are going to be an outstanding group for running the racetrack and moving it forward," Buckley said.

Reprisals rock Ivory Coast after strongman deposed

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press

GUIGLO, Ivory Coast — The young man in civilian clothes didn't have the right answers for troops loyal to Alassane Ouattara and they suspected he was a fighter backing his rival for the presidency. So one of the soldiers kicked the man in the teeth.

Fifteen minutes later, an Associated Press reporter saw his body, the chest torn open by bullets, dumped outside this western town.

Reprisal killings erupted as Ouattara's fighters made a lightning assault to force his rival Laurent Gbagbo from power. And although Gbagbo was captured Monday in Abidjan, Ivory Coast's commercial capital, suspected Gbagbo supporters are still being rounded up in cities and villages, especially in western Ivory Coast.

Former Ivorian President Laurent Gbagbo, center, and his wife Simone, are seen in the custody of rebel forces loyal to election winner Alassane Ouattara at the Golf Hotel in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, Monday.

Parishioners are reporting the kidnappings of dozens of young men in San Pedro, said a Catholic priest in the cocoa-exporting port city in southwestern Ivory Coast. He asked not to be named, explaining: "We are all in danger."

"Every day the (U.N) peacekeepers are collecting and burying bodies," he said.

said. "There is lots of dense bush here. Who knows how many bodies there are."

Like others, he said young men are being targeted, especially those between 20 and 35.

San Pedro was attacked by pro-Ouattara fighters on April 1 as Gbagbo's soldiers retreated without resistance, firing into the air.

A resident said the only resistance came from a feared Gbagbo support group called the Young Patriots, who sacked the abandoned army base, donning camouflage uniforms and taking weapons.

The pro-Ouattara fighters pushed the youths back from barricades at the entrance to the city and chased them to the Cathedral of St. Pierre downtown. Near the cathedral an unknown number of Young Patriots were killed, the priest said.

Then the invaders surrounded the cathedral with all-terrain vehicles, shot open the gate and fired into a crowd of 5,000 residents who had taken refuge there. The priest said the refugees belonged to the Bete, Guere and other tribes that support Gbagbo.

The pro-Ouattara forces stopped shooting after one man was killed and several people were wounded, he said.

A woman at the cathedral who was too scared to give her name said her neighbor, the headmaster of the Catholic primary school, was killed Monday night at his home because he belonged to the wrong tribe.

"We have a very toxic and explosive mix here of political, ethnic, religious and land rivalry," the priest said. "The recent tumultuous events have brought long-simmering conflicts to a head. Who knows where this will end."

U.S. urges N. Korea to free detained American

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government on Tuesday called for North Korea to release an American citizen reportedly detained there several months ago.

State Department spokesman Mark Toner said that Swedish officials had visited the American as the U.S. does not have diplomatic relations with Pyongyang. Toner gave no details about the arrest, when it happened or the identity of the individual, saying the person had not signed a privacy waiver.

He urged North Korea to treat the citizen "in a manner consistent with international human rights law."

Sweden's Foreign Ministry spokesman Teo Zetterman confirmed that its diplomats were representing the U.S. in the case.

Several Americans have been arrested in North Korea in recent years. In August, former President Jimmy Carter brought home Aijalon Gomes who was sentenced to eight years' hard labor for crossing into the North from China. He had been detained for seven months. In 2009, journalists Laura Ling and Euna Lee were arrested for trespassing in North Korea and released only after former President Bill Clinton made a similar trip to Pyongyang.

U.S. holds to limited Libya role

By Matthew Lee and Raf Casert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite rebel setbacks and an increasingly public rift with NATO allies, the U.S. will stick to its plan to remain in the back seat of the Libya air campaign, the Obama administration insisted Tuesday after three weeks of air missions that have failed to turn the tide against Moammar Gadhafi.

France's defense minister declared that without full American participation, the West probably would not be able to stop attacks by Gadhafi loyalists on besieged rebel cities.

U.S. officials said they were comfortable with their role and had no plans to step up involvement, even as British and French officials said Washington's military might was needed to ensure the mission's success. The Americans said NATO could carry out the operation without a resumption of the heavy U.S. efforts that kicked it off last month.

"The president and this administration believes that NATO, and the coalition of which we remain a partner, is capable of fulfilling that mission of enforcing the no-fly zone, enforcing the arms embargo and providing civilian protection," White House spokesman Jay Carney told reporters.

A FOOD FIESTA

Cooks from Argentina, Mexico fuse flavors for new cafe

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Nadina Keller hails from Buenos Aires, Argentina. Martha Avila and her sister Beatriz grew up in the quiet colonial-style town of Durango in northern Mexico.

Together they are introducing Sun Valley visitors and residents to a fusion of flavors from their native lands. But they're not content to leave it at that. This trio is mixing the foods of their homelands with flavors and textures of Italy, Spain, India, Japan and other cultures, as well.

"For me, food is a mix of flavors, techniques and my own personality, which come together to create what I call 'the language of cuisine,'" said Keller. "It is a great way to travel without leaving your home."

Find recipes from the chefs on Food 4

The three opened Sayvour cafe in a former sushi restaurant behind Ketchum's Broschovsky Gallery in The Courtyard at 360 East Ave. in December.

The new cafe offers home-baked chocolate croissants, cinnamon rolls, brownie pops and lunch items, as well as take-out dinner items such as macaroni and cheese, pappardelle Bolognese and chicken mole. An array of edible gifts includes hot chocolate packaged like an ice cream cone with marshmallows on top resembling ice cream.

The trio offers wine and tapas — such as marinated salmon skewers, lemon chicken skewers and beef tenderloin bits — from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursdays; sushi on Fridays; and special Valentine's Day, Chinese New Year's and other dinners. And they're not afraid to tackle special orders.

Recently, for instance, they prepared three dinners at their restaurant for a group of fishermen. The first night included an Argentinian grill dinner of tenderloin, ribeye steak, blood sausage and chili chorizo. The second was a New Orleans dinner and the third a fusion of Italian and Spanish dishes such as paella and cioppino.

"We like to do theme parties. And we love to explore the world of food and research and experiment with flavors," said Martha Avila. "That's one of the nice things about having our own business. The sky's the limit."

When next-door business neighbor Nicole Kohn wanted a blue polka dot cake with French piping for a little girl's birthday, the three obliged without batting an eye.

"Their food is wonderful, their quality excellent, and they're so creative and versatile. It's really great for such a small community to have such a treasure — and that's coming from a former New York food snob," Kohn said.

The three also host cooking classes, ranging from sushi to Argentinian and Mexican food.

Pair to open microbrewery in Ketchum

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

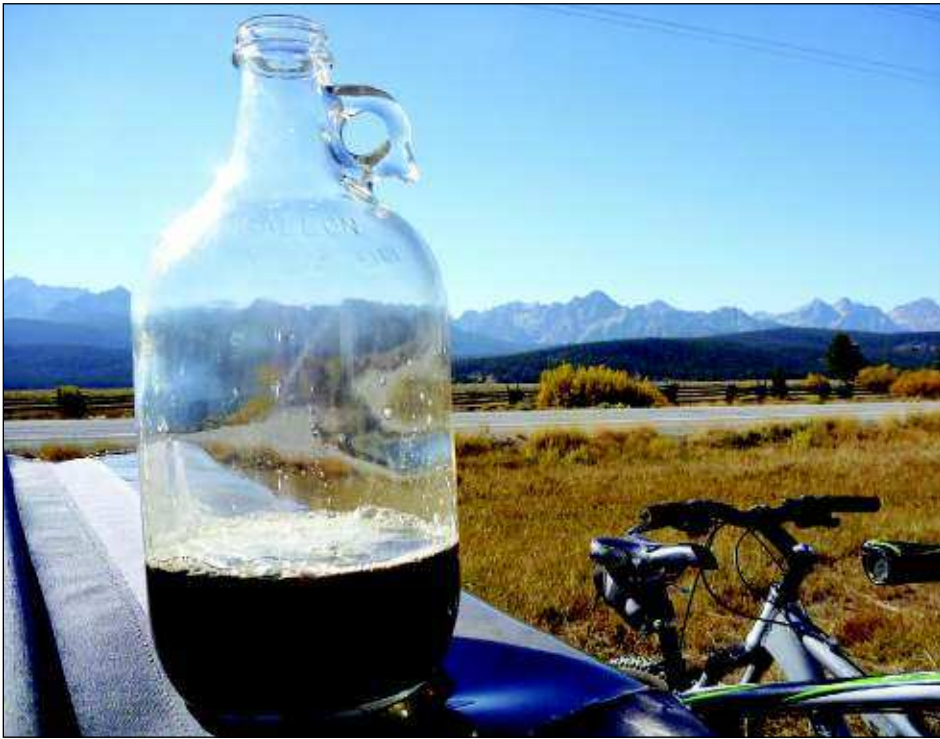

HAILEY — When Paul Holle and Kevin Jones each moved to the Wood River Valley about three years ago, they began to wonder why there weren't more craft breweries nearby. After meeting through mutual friends, they came up with their own answer: Start their own.

Sawtooth Brewery doesn't have a public location yet — the beer is mostly being made in the Sun Valley barn Holle lives in — but beer enthusiasts are already looking forward to their planned opening day, Nov. 11.

"People are so excited to get their own local brewery," said Holle, the head brewer. He and Jones will soon begin selling a Founder Growler as a way to raise money and spread the word, and they said they expect those to sell out quickly, because of the interest already expressed.

"We want people to buy those to show their support to help make this brewery happen. They'll get that glassware, which will be a collector's item."

Meanwhile, Jones, the brewery's business manager, has been taking samples to restaurants and pubs.

Whiskey Jacques and Grumpy's in Ketchum, Wise Guys' Hailey and Ketchum locations, and the Kasino Club in Stanley have all signed on to have taps of Sawtooth Brewery beer, and Jones hopes to have a lot more on board by November.

The brewery also hopes to have a downtown Ketchum location where guests can see the brewing process, enjoy a pint or two, and try a sampler tray to determine which beer they like best. Because of ceiling height and structural requirements for breweries, that site isn't yet determined, but Jones said he's examining several possibilities.

On tap year-round will be five brews: a cream ale, a rye IPA, a pale ale, an amber ale and a coffee stout. The cream ale has proved the most difficult to master so

CONNECT WITH THE BREWERS

Find Sawtooth Brewery on Facebook (just search for its name) to chat with the brewers, see an image of their Founder Growlers and hear about what the brewers are testing now. They hope opening day for their eventual taproom location will be Nov. 11.

You can also visit their webpage at SawtoothBrewery.com, call them at 806-1368, or email them at kevin@sawtoothbrewery.com or paul@sawtoothbrewery.com.

They welcome interest from the public as well as potential business investors and restaurants that would like to carry their beer on tap (at about $125 per keg).

Meanwhile, fans will soon be able to buy a Founder Growler, a German-made glassware growler with metal and ceramic details. The $100 cost includes two free fills once the brewery opens, plus $1 off unlimited fills for two years; proceeds help finance the brewery's launch.

How to keep a kitchen organized

By Jura Koncius
The Washington Post

Do you know where your crab mallets are? Amy Zantzinger knows where hers are. Her zeal for arranging pantry shelves and freezer drawers is rewarded with a comfortable, orderly and beautiful environment for cooking and entertaining. Here are some of her organizing secrets.

Like with like

Zantzinger's No. 1 rule for kitchen organization is keeping all like things together. Then, when she's looking for something, it's in an obvious place. She has a designated drawer for measuring spoons and cups, a cork-lined slotted knife drawer, and a cabinet with three narrow roll-out drawers for platters.

Shelf liner

Ribbed clear plastic shelf liner is perfect for the bottom of deep pot drawers. It makes a nice cushion for pans and protects drawers from getting scratched.

Easy access

If you have children, consider stocking a cabinet where they can reach their own dishes and glasses. The Zantzingers built cabinets down to the counter with no back-splash to bring them closer to kid level. Consider installing a lower refrigerator drawer as well, and stock it with water and chocolate milk.

Fridge aesthetics

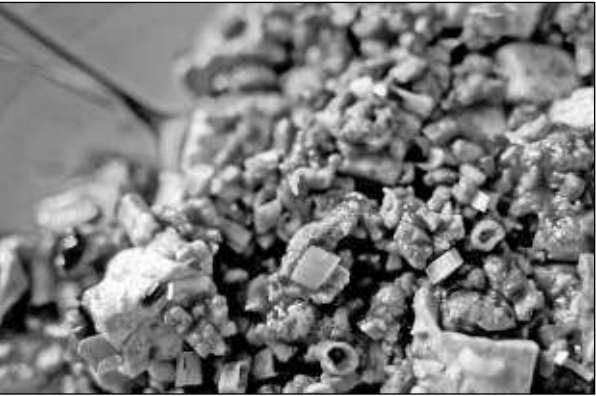

Have you considered artfully arranging the contents of your refrigerator and freezer shelves? When you open the door, it will be a calming experience.

Coffee station

Zantzinger calls her morning coffee station a "modern version of an appliance garage." She has corralled her coffeemaker, filters, toaster and mugs in one cabinet. It has a pocket door that can be kept open during breakfast time and closed the rest of the day for an uncluttered look.

Fruit display

An arrangement of fresh fruit on a counter adds color and encourages healthful snacking. Zantzinger displays fruit on a tiered white ceramic stand.

A light stir-fry friendly to vegetarians

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon cornstarch

Tofu is a wonderful ingredient for vegetarians, and it's useful for reducing the amount of meat in a dish. Here, it also picks up the flavor of the sauce.

Vegetarians can substitute a mixture of mushrooms for the pork, with equally delicious results.

BLACK BEAN PORK AND TOFU STIR-FRY

4 servings

- 1 to 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1-inch piece peeled ginger root, finely chopped or grated
- 2 medium cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 6 scallions, white and light-green parts, cut crosswise into thin slices (1/2 cup)
- 8 ounces lean ground pork
- 8 ounces medium-firm or firm tofu, drained and patted dry, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 tablespoon Chinese black bean sauce
- 2 teaspoons low-sodium soy sauce
- 2 teaspoons toasted sesame oil
- 1/2 cup no-salt-added chicken broth

Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a large, well-seasoned wok or nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Add the ginger and garlic; stir-fry for 2 minutes, then add the scallions and stir-fry for 1 minute. Add the ground pork, breaking up any clumps with a spoon. If the pork is sticking, add the additional tablespoon of oil. Stir-fry for 5 to 6 minutes, until the pork is cooked through.

Add the tofu; stir gently to incorporate.

Stir together the black bean sauce, soy sauce, toasted sesame oil and broth in a liquid measuring cup. Pour the liquid mixture into the wok or skillet, and stir to coat evenly.

Whisk together the water and cornstarch in a small bowl. As soon as the liquid in the wok or skillet starts to boil, stir in the cornstarch mixture. When the sauce thickens, remove the wok or skillet from the heat.

Divide among individual plates; serve immediately.

A 25-minute meal you can tweak forever

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

This is an almost-no-recipe kind of dish that you can tweak to your heart's content: Adjust the amounts of spice. Use chicken cutlets instead of pounding out your own (and shave the prep time by at least 5 minutes). Use already-flavored hummus, such as the extra-garlicky or red pepper kind. But be sure to follow the directions for lightening the hummus with water or ice cubes; it has a positive impact.

The original recipe calls for heating the spiced hummus in the microwave, but we found that individual portions were warmed by the residual heat of the just-cooked chicken. Again, it's up to you.

Serve with pita bread and sauteed vegetables. Adapted from "Chicken and Egg: A Memoir of Suburban Homesteading With 125 Recipes," by Janice Cole (Chronicle, 2011).

PAPRIKA CHICKEN WITH HUMMUS

4 servings

4 boneless, skinless chicken breast

- halves (about 1 1/4 pounds; may substitute 4 boneless, skinless chicken breast cutlets)
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 1 1/2 teaspoons pimenton (smoked Spanish paprika)
- 1/4 teaspoon coarse sea salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1 cup homemade or store-bought hummus
- 1 teaspoon sweet Hungarian paprika
- 1/4 teaspoon ground turmeric
- 2 tablespoons water (may substitute ice cubes; see note)
- 1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 or 2 limes

Trim the chicken breast halves of all visible fat; remove the tenderloin strips and reserve for another use.

Arrange the chicken between two large sheets of parchment paper or plastic wrap. Pound with the flat side of a meat mallet, a heavy pan or a rolling pin until each piece is flattened evenly and about 1/2 inch thick.

Stir together the cumin, pimenton, salt and pepper in a small bowl. Rub the mixture over both sides of the chicken.

Stir together the hummus, sweet paprika and turmeric in a small microwave-safe bowl until well mixed. Stir in the water to lighten the mixture, or use ice cubes.

Heat the oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Add the chicken breast halves and cook, in batches if necessary, for about 4 minutes, then turn them over and cook for 2 to 4 minutes, until they are lightly browned and no longer pink at the center. Reduce the heat to medium if the chicken is cooking too fast.

Meanwhile, if desired, cover the hummus mixture and microwave on high for 40 to 90 seconds or until warm. Cut the lime(s) in half for squeezing.

Divide the hummus equally among individual plates, spreading it to approximately half the size of the chicken pieces. Place the chicken partially over the hummus. Sprinkle with lime juice to taste.

Serve warm.

Note: Blending ice cubes into the hummus will create an even lighter texture. Place 3 or 4 small ice cubes or 1 or 2 large ones in a blender, along with the hummus and spices. Puree for 20 to 30 seconds until lightened in color.

A spring asparagus salad fit for the Easter table

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

In this salad, bright green vegetables work to enhance the spring feel of your Easter table. The Mediterranean flavors of citrus, artichoke, olive oil and feta cheese pair wonderfully with lamb, but will work equally well with goose or ham. This dish can be served at room temperature, chilled or warmed.

ARTICHOKE AND ASPARAGUS SALAD

Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 8.

2 bunches asparagus, bot-

- toms trimmed
- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons white balsamic vinegar
- 1 teaspoon lemon zest
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh thyme
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- Two 14-ounce cans artichoke hearts, drained
- 1/2 cup crumbled feta cheese

Bring a large pot of water to a boil. Set a large bowl of ice water next to the stove.

Place the asparagus in the boiling water and blanch until bright green and just tender, about 4 minutes. Transfer the asparagus to the ice water to cool and stop the cooking. Drain well.

In a large bowl, whisk together the mustard, salt, pepper, lemon juice, vinegar, lemon zest, thyme and oil. Gently toss the drained asparagus spears and the artichoke hearts in the dressing. Serve sprinkled with the feta cheese.

2011: The year of the fish

By Jennifer LaRue Huget
Special to The Washington Post

There's something, er, fishy about the new Dietary Guidelines for Americans 2010. Unlike the 2005 version, the newly updated edition of the federal government's official guide to healthful eating lists increasing seafood intake among its key recommendations.

By "fishy," I don't mean suspicious. Besides being delicious, fish and shellfish, which together constitute "seafood," can confer lasting health benefits.

The benefits

Like red meat and poultry, fish provides the protein essential for maintaining healthy muscles and other tissues. Most of us get more than enough protein. What really makes fish worth eating are its omega-3 fatty acids. New research shows that these healthful fats may help prevent age-related macular degeneration, a disease that impairs vision. But their benefits extend far beyond that.

- Heart health. Omega-3 fatty acids, specifically eicosapentaenoic acid (EPA) and docosahexaenoic acid (DHA), help prevent cardiovascular disease and sudden cardiac death. Penny Kris-Etherton, professor of nutrition at Penn State, says these healthful fats can reduce heart arrhythmia, the leading cause of sudden cardiac death. The effect can take hold mere weeks after a person adds more fish to his diet, she says. Omega-3s may also lower triglycerides and blood pressure and prevent blood clots that can cause stroke.
- Child development. Omega-3 fatty acids contribute to fetal growth and brain development in early infancy, says Bethany Thayer, a spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association.

tion. When women consume omega-3s — especially DHA — from at least 8 ounces of seafood per week, the dietary guidelines say, their babies may have heightened visual and cognitive development.

Kris-Etherton adds that research shows kids who eat more fish may have slightly higher IQs than those who eat less. "A couple of IQ points, you question whether that can make a big difference," she says. "But it might have some bearing on test-score results."

How to eat more

- Can it. For convenience, you can't beat canned tuna and salmon (which also are good sources of Vitamin D and, if you buy the bone-in kind, calcium, Kris-Etherton says). Keep in mind, though, that if you limit yourself to these you'll be getting more sodium than you need and missing out on the wide range of options in the fresh-seafood case.

- Try milder fish. Don't like fishy taste? Try mild-flavored fish such as cod, flounder, sole and tilapia, which take well to baking, poaching or steaming, Thayer says, more so than grilling. But she notes that these don't deliver as big a dose of omega-3s as fattier fish.
- Go beyond the fillet or steak. You can add fish to soups or salads, Thayer suggests. Get kids to eat more fish with homemade fish strips or fish tacos. Or simply coat strips of cod or had-dock in seasoned bread crumbs and bake them in the oven. Thayer herself is partial to salmon topped with fruit salsa. (You'll notice that nobody suggests battering and frying, which adds unneeded calories and often unhealthful fat.)

Consumer concerns

- Best for omega-3s. Some seafoods have more of these than others. The best are: salmon (wild and farmed), Pacific

HOW MUCH FISH?

8 ounces: The amount of seafood most of us should eat each week. That's two 4-ounce servings, more than twice what most of us typically manage (3 1/2 ounces).

12 ounces: The weekly amount recommended for women who are pregnant or breast-feeding.

4 ounces: The amount of fish in a small can of tuna, which means one or two tuna sandwiches get you halfway to your weekly goal.

oysters, anchovies, herring, sardines, trout and Atlantic and Pacific mackerel.

- Mercury. Some people avoid fish for fear of consuming methyl mercury, which may harm the developing nervous system of an unborn baby or young child. Some fish contain more mercury than others, including large fish such as albacore tuna that "are great big and hang around the ocean a long time, eating smaller fish," says Kris-Etherton.

Pregnant women in particular should steer clear of the top four mercury-containing fish: tilefish, shark, swordfish and king mackerel (also known as golden bass). As for tuna, the dietary guidelines say women who are pregnant or breast-feeding can eat any kind of tuna they like but should stick to no more than 6 ounces of white tuna per week because it contains more mercury.

- Cholesterol. Shrimp is a "very lean source of protein," Thayer says, but some people shy away because it is loaded with cholesterol. (It's also lower in omega-3s than other seafood.) Thayer and Kris-Etherton agree that the science is fuzzy on how eating shrimp affects cholesterol levels in your body. American Heart Association guidelines call for consuming less than 300 mg per day of cholesterol; 4 ounces of shrimp deliver about 160 mg.
- Safety and freshness. Cook fish until its internal temperature measures 145 degrees on a food thermometer, Thayer advises. Just checking to see if it's flaky isn't good enough. And the best way to tell whether fish is fresh is to give it a sniff. "If it smells fishy, it's probably not fresh," she says. "It should have just a faint smell of the sea."

Eating lighter: Salad that makes the most of broccoli rabe

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

Broccoli rabe, or rapini, can be intriguing and off-putting at the same time. To make the most of its bitterness, precook it in plenty of boiling salted water for 2 to 3 minutes, and drain. Then combine it with ingredients that play off its natural taste, such as sauteed garlic and Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese.

Potatoes have a mellowing influence, and for this recipe you'll need to find the season's new-crop potatoes. If you can't find pre-cut, bagged broccoli rabe, buy in bunches and trim off just the bottom of the stems, leaving the stalks 3 to 4 inches long and breaking up any multi-stemmed stalks.

BROCCOLI RABE AND NEW POTATO SALAD

6 to 8 servings

2 pounds white potatoes, preferably new-crop
Salt
3/4 pound trimmed broccoli rabe, stalks cut to 4 inches or smaller, multi-stemmed stalks broken apart
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
1 medium clove garlic, finely chopped
2 tablespoons chopped chives, plus more for optional garnish

1/4 teaspoon sugar
Freshly ground black pepper
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

Put the potatoes in a large pot. Add enough water to cover them by 3 inches. Bring to a boil over high heat, then reduce the heat as needed to maintain a steady boil for 15 to 30 minutes or until the potatoes are easily pierced with a fork or a metal skewer. Drain. Carefully peel and cut the potatoes into 3/4-inch chunks (while they are still fairly hot). Transfer to a large bowl.

Meanwhile, bring a large pot of salted water to a boil over high heat. Add the broccoli rabe and cook for 3 minutes. Drain immediately.

Whisk together the vinegar, mustard, garlic, chives, sugar and the salt and pepper to taste in a small bowl. Slowly whisk in the oil to form an emulsified dressing. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. Pour over the warm potatoes, then add the broccoli rabe and toss gently to combine. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Garnish with additional chopped chives if desired.

Serve warm or at room temperature.

Per serving (based on 8): 150 calories, 4 g protein, 23 g carbohydrates, 5 g fat, 1 g saturated fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 105 mg sodium, 3 g dietary fiber, 2 g sugar.

Credit Card Debt?

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill

CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

CreditGUARD of America, a non-profit licensed debt management service provider, is making a new program available to lower debt payments and become free of all credit card debt in only three to five years. Consumers need only $2,000 or more in total credit card debt and are falling behind on any account, to cut their payment by 35% to 50%, and reduce or eliminate interest charges altogether.

Over 200,000 families, located throughout the U.S. have regained financial independence with CreditGUARD's licensed, bonded and insured service. CreditGUARD of America has received high marks in consumer surveys showing high consumer satisfaction and confidence. The CreditGUARD debt management program can lower your monthly payments by hundreds and save you thousands!

One such case is Sandra L. who proclaimed "CreditGUARD cut my monthly payment by $656 and saved me over $29,206.53 in interest. They saved my way of life and gave me back my piece of mind! Now I can see myself on my way to becoming debt free." or Jeffrey C. who said "CreditGUARD of America helped me consolidate 3 of my credit cards into one affordable payment. They are now saving me nearly $200 a month. Now I will be debt free in 2 years or less"

Celebrity chef Jamie Oliver during a Los Angeles scene from the second season of 'Jamie Oliver's Food Revolution.'

Oliver unbowed after ‘Food Revolution’ snags in L.A.

By Michael Hill
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Turns out Jamie Oliver's revolution won't be televised — at least not from Los Angeles school kitchens.

The second season of the crusading Brit's healthy eating reality show, "Jamie Oliver's Food Revolution," started poorly when the city school district barred his cameras, a serious snag for a program that focuses on school lunches. The Los Angeles Unified School District, which previously had a bad experience with an unrelated reality show, more or less treated Oliver as if he was a cast member of "Jersey Shore."

"I think we swam into a minefield," Oliver told The Associated Press. "I'm really disappointed that I couldn't get in there at all. I'm disappointed that as public servants, they feel they have the right to not be transparent."

But the trouble didn't end with school officials. There are signs in the first episode (aired on ABC on Tuesday) that the people of Los Angeles — the city where Fatburger was founded — aren't fully embracing the revolution either. Only a modest crowd comes out to watch Oliver fill a school bus with a week's worth of the sugar added to the flavored milk served in L.A. schools (actually 57 tons of white sand).

Oliver dejectedly tells the camera: "This is cold-shoulder stuff."

So did L.A. prove too much for the chef? Hardly.

Oliver remains focused on the multi-national healthy food campaign that has consumed him for more than five years. During an interview shoe-horned between a late-arriving flight from London and an appearance on David Letterman's show, the father of four was passionate and ticked off as he talked about the lousy food fed to too many school children and politicians too short-sighted to tackle the problem.

"You only have to affect 2 percent of the population to make radical change," Oliver said, "and that's what we're talking about, really."

In a TV landscape cluttered with sudden-death cook-offs and flamboyant chefs, Oliver's latest show has an unusual recipe for success — asking strangers to do what's good for them.

For the second season of "Food Revolution," that entails Oliver jousting with school bureaucrats, trying to help parents and kids make better choices and lobbying for healthier food at a local hamburger joint. It's not easy. In one scene, the fast-food operator goes wide-eyed when Oliver suggests he make burgers with grass-fed, black Angus beef that costs $1.30 per 6-ounce patty (Oliver said he eventually was able to get the price down to 65 cents).

Oliver had better luck in Huntington, W.Va., where he first took his healthy food crusade. At least there he was allowed into the schools. But there were bumpy moments, too, as he tangled with reluctant school officials and kids who preferred pizza and chicken nuggets to his fresh-made coleslaw.

A Huntington school district spokesman later said that though the show was an ordeal, the process was worth it. Oliver calls his first U.S. stop in the food revolution a success.

"The dream was to do what we did. And eventually we pulled off everything we wanted to pull off," he said. "In L.A., you know, it's a completely different kettle of fish. I was banned from every school before I even touched down on the airport."

Oliver says all he wanted to do was see where the food for 650,000 school children came from. Oliver briefly found his way into a preparatory high school run by a non-profit under contract with L.A. schools, but was booted once the district found out. Barred from schools, he asked parents and kids to bring school food samples to him. Unwrapping the plastic from a breakfast pastry, Oliver doesn't try to hide his disdain: "We're not happy, No?"

far, because of its combination of lager yeast and ale yeast.

What the brewers are most excited to share, though, are their seasonal brews "and what we're calling 'irregulars,' which are beers I want to make," Holle said. Both men said they couldn't name a favorite of their brews, because their tastes change with the season.

And sharing microbrewed beer is at the heart of why they are taking this business risk.

"We're excited to interact with people, get people introduced to craft beer if they don't already drink it. It's really about the social aspect of beer for us," Jones said.

They say they have been received with open arms by other southern Idaho breweries, including Sun Valley Brewing Co. and River Bend Brewing Co., both in Hailey.

"People aren't really rivals. We see each other as pushing the industry forward and encouraging people to try new beers and move beyond the light American lagers to something that's made and produced locally," Holle said.

bay leaves.

To prepare the sauce, mix cream cheese, which has been sitting at room temperature, with cream, sugar and pecans in a food processor. Add sherry and cinnamon.

Open the peppers on one side and stuff them with the meat mixture. Serve hot or at room temperature, spooning a dollop of sauce over the peppers as you do. You can return the dish to the oven to heat if you prepare ahead of time. Garnish with fresh pomegranate seeds before serving.

de leche, flan and chimichurri — a traditional tangy herb sauce from Argentina that's usually combined with grilled meats.

Someone expecting to learn how to cook up a batch of enchiladas in Martha Avila's Mexican class would have been in for a surprise. Instead, Avila showed the students sitting at the big copper bar overlooking the kitchen an array of dishes representative of Mexico's three regions. The menu included a Bean and Cheese Duo Cream Soup — "a soup version of refried beans" that sports a barista's artistry.

It also included Crepes with Cajeta (a Mexican caramel) and pecans; Toritos, or yellow wax peppers stuffed with shrimp and seasonings; Camarones Tikin-Xic, a shrimp or pork marinated in a mix of annatto seed paste and orange juice; and Chiles en Nogada, a stuffed poblano dish that is a fall tradition sporting Mexico's national colors.

"I don't cook Tex-Mex with sour cream and cheddar cheese — what we call 'American cheese,'" said Martha Avila, who had been vacationing in Idaho long before she moved here to live, thanks to her aunt Martha Moyle, who lives in Burley.

"True Mexican cooking is different in the north than the south. And it's different in the central part, as well. The south has black mole; the central, green mole made with pumpkin seeds. There's so much we can explore and try and taste!"

10 tips for a cleaner, safer kitchen

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

We looked for the best advice on cleaning the busiest — and maybe dirtiest — room in the house: the kitchen. For a list of what we should clean, how and when, we asked a bunch of germ experts.

The biggest surprise? People with pets are six times more likely to get salmonella-based infections. The culprit is pet bowls, particularly the water bowl. We often dump it in the sink before we start handling food.

Thanks to our sources: Benjamin Chapman, the extension food-safety specialist for N.C. State; David Sweat, foodborne-disease epidemiologist with the North Carolina Division of Public Health; Douglas Powell, professor of food safety at Kansas State University; and Dean Cliver and Linda Harris with the University of California-Davis.

1. Microwave

Fill a bowl with 2 cups water and a whole lemon, cut into slices. Place it inside and microwave for 2 minutes, then wipe it out with paper towels. The hot water softens food spills, and the lemon cuts grease and keeps the microwave smelling fresh.

2. Stove and oven

Spray stove spills with an all-purpose cleaner and let stand 10 minutes for easier cleaning. Oven spills aren't a food hazard if you regularly heat the oven to 400 degrees. Cover a fresh spill with salt until you have time to clean it.

3. Counters

Clean regularly with an all-purpose cleaner. Spray with a weak bleach solution and air-dry if needed.

4. Dishes and dishwashers

If you hand-wash dishes, air-dry in a rack. Dirty or wet dish towels can recontaminate clean dishes. To reduce soap buildup in a dishwasher, occasionally fill the soap dispenser with baking soda or place a small cup of vinegar on the top shelf, then run the

WANT TO SANITIZE?

Professional kitchens use a sanitizing solution made with 1 teaspoon household bleach in 4 cups of water. It's sprayed on counters and cutting boards. Experts disagree on the need to use it at home, but if you do, do it correctly: Let sprayed surfaces air-dry — drying with dish towels may recontaminate the surface. Always clean before you sanitize. If chlorine comes in contact with dirt or soil, it can no longer sanitize. Don't use more than 1 teaspoon chlorine — stronger isn't better. And change it about every five days. Chlorine dissipates quickly.

5. Sink, drain and faucet handle

Clean regularly with household cleanser, especially after washing or rinsing raw meat. Don't forget to clean the faucet handle.

6. Refrigerator

Every day, wipe down the handles, including the underside. Every week, throw out anything that's past its date or shows age. Every 3 to 6 months, empty shelves and clean the inside with 1/4 cup baking soda in 1 quart warm water, then spray with a bleach solution and air-dry.

Remove drawers and clean under them. Before you return the food, wipe jars to remove drips. Clean the rubber gasket inside the door to ensure a tight seal. Vacuum the coils in the back and empty and clean the drip pan if necessary.

7. Pet bowls

Find a place besides the kitchen to clean turtle or frog habitats and empty pet bowls, or clean and sanitize the sink before you start washing fresh food.

8. Cutting boards

Most scientists believe wooden cutting boards are safest, as long as they are kept clean, sanitized and dry. Studies have shown wood hampers bacteria growth, while bacteria thrive in scars on plastic. Either way, keep them clean by running them through the dishwasher, or sanitize by spritzing with a weak bleach solution. Always change boards or clean with soapy water after preparing raw food — even vegetables. They grow in dirt, after all.

9. Sponges and dish towels

Change dish towels daily, or more often if they're wet or dirty. You can microwave a wet sponge for 2 minutes, but the time varies depending on the power of the microwave (and if the sponge is dry, it could catch fire). Instead, put sponges on the top rack of the dishwasher at the end of every day.

10. Cross-contamination

You know you're not supposed to put cooked food on the same surface you used for raw food. But it's not just a problem with cutting boards. You touch all kinds of things while you're handling raw food: Salt and pepper shakers, cabinet handles, etc. Pay attention to what you touch so you can wipe things down. Tip: It's not necessary to rinse raw meat and chicken — it just spreads bacteria.

Do it now or bake it later: An easy Easter biscuit

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

With all the other things that need to get on the table, sometimes worrying about a yeasted dinner roll is just too much. So these biscuits come together fairly quickly and can be chilled until it's time to bake them. Just drop the mixture onto a baking sheet, throw in the fridge, then bake when you're ready.

Alternatively, bake them off ahead of time and warm them just before dinner. When making the biscuits, be sure that the butter and the milk are cold for the best texture and shape.

ONION-PARMESAN DROP BISCUITS

Start to finish: 45 minutes. Servings: 12.

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 2 small yellow onions, finely chopped
- 2 shallots, minced
- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 5 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 12 tablespoons (1 1/2 sticks) cold unsalted butter, cut into small cubes
- 1 1/2 cups grated Parmesan cheese, divided
- 1 cup milk, cold

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a baking sheet with cooking spray.

In a medium saute pan over medium, heat the olive oil. Add the onions and the shallots and saute until very soft and caramelized, about 10 to 12 minutes. Transfer to a shallow dish and chill for 10 minutes.

In the bowl of a food processor, pulse together the flour, baking powder and salt. Add the cold butter and pulse until the butter is the size of peas. Add the chilled onions and 1 cup of the parmesan cheese and pulse to distribute. Add the milk and pulse just until the dough comes together.

Drop the dough in 1/2 cup mounds onto the prepared baking sheet, then sprinkle each mound of dough with a bit of the remaining 1/2 cup of Parmesan cheese. Chill or bake immediately. Bake for 18 to 20 minutes, or until golden brown and cooked through.

Yes, lamb can make a light soup

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

I've lost my taste for fatty cuts of lamb, which are out of step with how I cook and eat today. Luckily, it's easy to buy lean portions of boneless leg of lamb that can be cut into strips for stir-frying or grilling, cubed for kebabs or diced for a soup. The last is what I've done here.

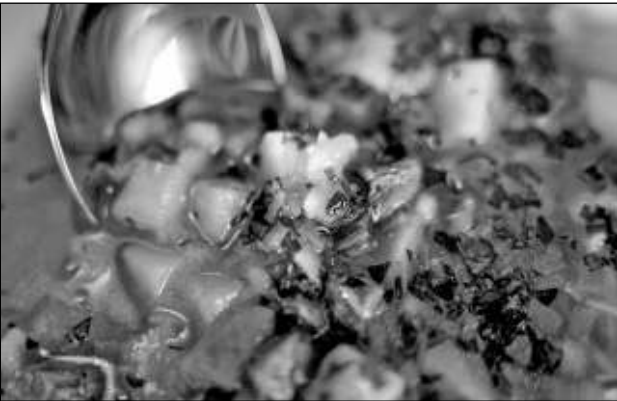

Leeks and potatoes are the main ingredients, with a parsnip thrown in for sweetness and cumin for a little background flavor. Pearl barley brings substance and a slight thickening to the broth.

The soup can be made a day in advance.

LAMB, LEEK AND POTATO SOUP

Makes about 9 cups (8 to 10 servings).

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 pound boneless leg of lamb, trimmed of all fat, cut into 1/2-inch dice
1 1/4 pounds leeks (see note)
Salt
1 1/2 teaspoons ground cumin, or to taste
Freshly ground black pepper
4 cups low-sodium or homemade chicken broth
2 cups water
1/4 cup pearl barley
1/2 pound all-purpose potatoes, peeled and cut into

TRACY A. WOODWARD/Washington Post

1/4-inch dice
1 large parsnip, peeled and woody core removed, the remaining flesh cut into 1/4-inch dice
1 or 2 tablespoons chopped fresh

Heat the oil over medium-high heat in a 4-quart soup pot. Add the lamb in batches, taking care not to crowd the pieces. Sear for a few minutes, stirring a few times, until the lamb loses its raw look. Use a slotted spoon to transfer to a clean plate or bowl. Repeat to sear all of the lamb.

Add the leeks and salt (to taste) to the pot; reduce the heat to medium. Cook for 4 to 5 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the leeks are soft. Add the cumin and pepper to taste; cook for 1 minute. Add the broth, water, barley and cooked lamb; cover and bring to a boil, then reduce the heat to medium or as needed to maintain a low boil. Cook for about 1 hour, until the barley is tender.

Add the potatoes and parsnip; cook covered for 15 to 20 minutes, maintaining a slow boil, until the vegetables are tender. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Divide among individual bowls. Garnish with chopped parsley, if desired.

Note: To clean the leeks thoroughly, first trim away the dark green parts and root end. Cut the leeks lengthwise in half and rinse in cold water. Cut the leeks crosswise into thin slices and submerge in a large bowl of cold water to soak for 20 minutes. Use a strainer to remove the leeks from the water; pat dry.

Shrimp plays second fiddle in this saute

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

In many shrimp dishes, peas are a minor ingredient. Here, the vegetable stars and the shrimp is an accent.

The marriage of flavors makes it all work. Pancetta adds depth. Sweet onions complement the sweetness of the peas and shrimp.

To make it all look right, the shrimp are cooked whole to preserve their flavor and moisture, then cut into smaller pieces so everyone gets their fair share.

Pre-diced pancetta is available in many supermarkets; sliced pancetta works just as well.

Serve over rice for a complete meal.

1 medium (4 ounces) sweet onion, cut into small dice (1 cup)
2 cups frozen sweet peas, cooked just until tender, then drained
Freshly ground black pepper
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/4 cup no-salt-added chicken broth
1 teaspoon cornstarch

Heat the oil in a large, shallow skillet or saute pan over medium-high heat, until the oil shimmers.

Add the pancetta; cook for 3 to 4 minutes, until the pancetta loses its raw look. Push the pancetta to the edges of the skillet or pan. Add the shrimp in batches, taking care not to crowd them. Cook for 2 or 3 minutes, turning them once, until the shrimp turn pink and opaque. They do not have to be cooked through at this point. Transfer to a plate as the batches of shrimp are done.

Eating lighter, for a taste of the Middle East

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

The dish has the look of a white chili and the flavors of the Middle East. It's a nice change from the long-cooked, chili-pepper-flavored versions.

Ground white-meat chicken is available at many supermarkets. If you can't find it, use a food processor to grind your own from boneless, skinless chicken breasts.

Ground white-meat turkey can be substituted.

Serve over white rice or on its own, with pita chips on the side.

This can be made a day in advance and refrigerated.

CILANTRO CHICKEN AND CHICKPEA 'CHILI'

6 or 7 servings

2 to 3 tablespoons olive oil
1 1/2 pounds ground white-meat chicken
1 small onion, cut into 1/4-inch dice (3/4 cup)
1/2 large red, orange or yellow bell pepper, seeded and cut into 1/4-inch dice (1 cup)
Salt
1 tablespoon ground cumin, or to taste
2 teaspoons ground coriander, or to taste

TRACY A. WOODWARD/Washington Post

1 1/2 cups cooked no-salt-added chickpeas, drained
3 cups no-salt-added or low-sodium chicken broth
2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice (from 1/2 to 1 lemon)
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro

Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a 4-quart pot, preferably nonstick, over medium-high heat. Add half of the chicken; cook for 4 to 5 minutes, stirring, until the chicken loses its raw look. Use a slotted spoon to transfer the chicken to a clean bowl. Repeat with the remaining chicken, adding a tablespoon of oil as needed.

When all of the chicken is cooked, add the remaining tablespoon of the oil to the pot. When it is hot, to medium-low so the mixture is barely bubbling at the edges. Partially cover and cook for 15 minutes.

Combine the lemon juice and cornstarch in a measuring cup, then stir it into the pot. Increase the heat to medium-high; once the mixture begins to boil and thicken, remove from the heat.

Stir in the cilantro. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Divide among individual bowls; serve hot.

Ellen Gayle (Flinn) Newnham

Dec. 10, 1934-March 13, 2011

Ellen Gayle (Flinn) Newnham went to meet her Savior on March 13, 2011.

She was born at home in Buhl, Idaho, on Dec. 10, 1934, to Clifford Stroud and Juanita Baughman. She attended school in Buhl, Idaho. Gayle married Donald Flinn on March 21, 1952, and from that union they had six children. Gayle raised her family in Filer, Idaho, working as a waitress and cook in various restaurants. She eventually owned and operated Flinn's Inn Restaurant in Filer. After the closure in Filer, she and Don moved to Buhl and purchased a new spot for Flinn's Inn, the old Sportsman Cafe. Unfortunately, soon after opening, it burned to the ground. After the devastating fire, she opened Flinn's Inn Cafe on Broadway in Buhl and operated it for several years until shortly after her husband's death.

Gayle married Donald Harney and remained married until his death in 1997. In her later years, Gayle took to the challenge of learning how to use the computer and, from that challenge, she found a cherished friend and eventually husband, Harry Newnham. Gayle and Harry were married June 3, 1999. They enjoyed living their life to the fullest; spending as much time as they could traveling, laughing and being around family. Gayle also became best of friends with Harry's mother, Norma Vierra.

She never missed an opportunity to be camping in the outdoors or on a bank fishing with her family. She was an active member of the Buhl Moose Lodge for more than 50 years and never forgot the day that she traveled to Chicago to receive her College of Regent's degree. One of her favorite pastimes was bowling with her first husband on city leagues, continuing to bowl even after Don's passing. Gayle was a very proud member of the "Buzzin' Dozen" card group, never missing the opportunity to socialize with the gals. Up until recently, she enjoyed passing her time as a volunteer at the hospital. She was a member of the United Methodist Church of Buhl for several years.

She was preceded in death by her husbands, Donald Flinn, Donald Harney and Harry Newnham; her brother, Robert Stroud; her sister, Virginia Lambert; and her parents.

Cremation is under the direction of Farmer's Funeral Chapel. A service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, April 15, at the United Methodist Church in Buhl. A graveside service will follow at the Buhl Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the Magic Valley Multiple Sclerosis Society or Shriner's Hospital for Children in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Margaret B. Woodward

May 22, 1916-April 10, 2011

PAUL — Margaret Bodily Woodward, age 94, passed away in her sleep Sunday, April 10, 2011, in Kimberly. She was six weeks short of her 95th birthday.

Margaret was the youngest child of James Richard Bodily and Margaret Charlotte Cole Bodily. She joined four older brothers on May 22, 1916, in Whitney, Idaho. She was proud of the fact that she lived just down the road from President Ezra Taft Benson. She went to school in Whitney through her sophomore year, then went to Preston for her junior and senior years of high school. She graduated from Preston High School in the spring of 1934. She received her bachelor's degree from Utah State College, now Utah State University, in 1938. Before she could be certified to teach in Idaho, she had to attend summer school at the University of Idaho in Moscow. She taught that fall in Ucon, Idaho.

Margaret met the love of her life in 1938 while she was home from school at Christmas time. Margaret and Boyd Woodward were married in the Logan Utah LDS Temple on Jan. 30, 1940. After the wedding, Margaret returned to Ucon High School to finish the school year and Boyd stayed in Franklin to farm with his father. Taking care of her family, church activities, school and community activities gave her lots of opportunities to satisfy her interests and kept her busy. She also spent many hours doing genealogy.

She was always learning something new to make her home more appealing to her family. She took courses in tailoring, upholstering, refinishing furniture, also keeping up to date on the new technics in sewing clothing for her family. They lived in Franklin until 1962, when they bought a farm in Paul. That fall Margaret went back to Margaret was preceded in death by her husband of 70 years; her parents; four brothers and their wives; one grandchild; and three great-grandchildren.

She is survived by eight children, Rodger (Ruth) of Paul, Wayne of Tri-Cities, Wash., Joyce Johnston (Pete) of Twin Falls, Lyle (Kathy) of Reno, Nev., Ellis (Deon) of Spokane, Wash., Arlen (Judy) of Paul, Alaine Mackay (Scott) of Drummond, Mont., and Dell (Zelma) of Paul; 49 grandchildren; and 90-plus great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, April 16, at the Emerson LDS Church, 127 S. 950 W. of Paul, with Bishop Bruce E. Hansen officiating. Burial will be at the Paul Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church. Unexpected way to dress up basic chicken breasts

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

I'm a big believer in tart-ing up the basics.
And when it comes to weeknight cooking, my most basic of basics is the boneless, skinless chicken breast. I can do practically anything I want to it, season it however I like, cook it however I like. And providing I don't overcook it, it always emerges a winner.
For this recipe, I was inspired by dukka, a classic Egyptian spice blend typically sprinkled on cooked meats and vegetables. I came up with my own easy-to-make version, because I'm guessing the chances of stumbling upon it in the typical American grocer are slim.

I then used the dukka to dress pan-fried chicken cutlets served over bread spread with hummus. The entire thing then gets topped with chopped hard-cooked egg. It probably sounds a little unusual, but the result is tremendously good. I've served it to numerous people who were skeptical, but quickly won over.

The recipe prepares entree-size portions, but is easily adapted for a starter. Instead of slicing the baguette into large oblongs, slice it into small rounds and cut the chicken into smaller pieces. It becomes a sort of Middle Eastern crostini.
And looking to save time? Did you know you can buy already hard-boiled eggs? Odd, but true. And they aren't all that bad. If you'd rather boil your own, place eggs in a saucepan and add enough cool water to cover them by about 1 inch. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a bare simmer. Cook for 15 minutes, then transfer the eggs to an ice bath.

CHICKEN DUKKA

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 1 tablespoon sesame seeds
- Kosher salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon whole black peppercorns

- 1/2 teaspoon smoked paprika
- 4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts (about 1 1/4 pounds)
- Ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 16-ounce tub hummus
- 12-inch baguette, sliced into 8 long oblongs
- 4 hard-boiled eggs, diced

To make the dukka, in a mortar and pestle or small coffee grinder, combine the sesame seeds, 1/2 teaspoon of salt, the cumin, peppercorns and paprika. Crush or grind well. Set aside.
One at a time lay each chicken breast on a cutting surface and slice across the center horizontally to create 2 thin halves. Sprinkle each cutlet on all sides with a bit of salt and pepper. Set aside.

In a large skillet over medium-high, melt the butter. Add the chicken cutlets and cook for 4 minutes per side, or until an instant thermometer registers 165 degrees.
Spread a bit of the hummus over each piece of bread, then top with a piece of chicken. Spoon diced egg over the chicken, then sprinkle with the dukka.

STARTING STRONG

Wood River softball whips Burley twice

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two things can always be counted on during the spring in Wood River Valley: lingering snow and a slow-starting Wolverine softball team.

This year could be the exception — at least in terms of the softball.

Wood River blasted Burley in a doubleheader on Tuesday, winning 16-0 and 15-6. The Wolverines improved to 4-3 (4-0 Great Basin Conference) on the season, which is one of the program's better starts in recent years, according to head coach Dale Martin.

"This is the first time in many years that we have a winning record this early in the year," Martin said. "I'm excited about this team. We have a ways to go, we're still making a lot of mistakes. We'll go to work on them and see what happens."

The Wolverines, who were just able to get on their home field last week, racked up 21 hits in the two victories and kept the pressure on Burley's defense, which committed 15 errors.

"The name of the game is pitching and hitting, and we're hitting the ball real well," Martin said. "We flat can hit the ball."

Ali Levy pitched a five-inning no-hitter in Game 1 with four strikeouts and one walk. Madison Gove and Levy combined to allow just two hits in Game 2. The pitchers are among five seniors for the Wolverines, who have rallied together after losing two key players who decided to focus on basketball this spring.

"There's no one player who is carrying us," Martin said. "They're all playing really well."

Wood River's Sydney Tidwell, who is batting almost .700 for the season, was 3-for-4 in Game 1. Kori Paradis went 2-for-3 in Game 2.

Burley struggled to get on base all day, and when it did, the Bobcat base runners often failed to capitalize.

"(Wood River) came out with an attitude to play the game, and once they started hitting the ball we kind of got down," said Burley coach Tim Campbell. "I know that we have better players than what we're showing. It just doesn't seem like there's a drive, a killer instinct, a desire to win."

Burley dropped to 2-6 overall and 0-5 in Great Basin Conference play. The Bobcats have a three-game series with Jerome starting Friday at Jerome.

Wood River will compete in Kimberly's Lady Dawg Classic this weekend, although Martin said the Wolverines will be shorthanded as four players have other school-related commitments.

Legal team for NFL players meet with judge

By Jon Krawczynski
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — With the lockout at one month and counting, attorneys for NFL players sat down Tuesday with the federal magistrate who will oversee court-ordered mediation with the league later this week.

Attorneys and Hall of Fame defensive end Carl Eller met with U.S. Magistrate Judge Arthur Boylan for about four hours.

Boylan "was very open" and "it was a very constructive session," said Michael Hausfeld, the lead attorney representing Eller and a group of mostly retired players in their antitrust lawsuit against the owners. Other attorneys declined comment.

The meeting came on the same day the NFL released its 2011 preseason schedule, led by the Hall of Fame Game between Chicago and St. Louis in Canton, Ohio, on Aug. 7.

Whether the games are held remains an open question. The NFL's attorneys are scheduled to meet with Boylan on Wednesday before mediation begins on Thursday, the first talks since collective bargaining negotiations broke down March 11, followed hours later by the NFL's first work stoppage since 1987.

Boylan has a reputation as a problem-solver, though what he can accomplish after more than two weeks of mediated talks fell short last month in Washington remains to be seen. He has been a magistrate since 1996 and presided over numerous mediations, including a $195 million settlement between Boston Scientific and about 4,000 claims involving heart defibrillators and pacemakers made by Guidant Corp. in 2007.

He'll need to be at his best in this session because the rancor between the two sides has grown increasingly bitter as the dispute landed in court.

"If the parties would rather take their shot for litigation, you could make them sit there forever and there still won't be an outcome," said Seth Borden, a labor law expert at McKenna, Long and Aldridge in New York.

U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson ordered the mediation on Monday. Nelson is still considering an injunction request from the players to lift the lockout imposed by owners after the players dissolved their union, clearing the way for the court fight. Players including MVP quarterbacks Tom Brady and Peyton Manning filed the injunction request in federal court here along with a class-action antitrust suit against the league.

Retirees, including Eller, filed their own lawsuit, and the cases have been consolidated.

Nelson's decision on the injunction could swing leverage in the case one way or the other, so it is unclear how eager either party will be to enter into serious settlement discussions pending her ruling.

"Both parties are going to go into this (mediation) balancing what they might be able to accomplish through direct negotiations against the prospect of getting something worse than that possibly if the judge is going to rule," Borden said.

Verdict still out as Bonds jury deliberates

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Jurors in the Barry Bonds case remained mostly out of sight on day 3 of their deliberations. They never entered Judge Susan Illston's courtroom on the 19th floor of the Phillip Burton Federal Building, spending about six hours behind closed doors Tuesday without reaching a verdict.

Except for a couple of quick breaks and a timeout for lunch, that was it.

No questions for the judge. No readbacks of testimony. And no clues as to which way, if any, the eight women and four men who will decide the home-run king's fate are leaning.

With each passing hour Wednesday, speculation mounted as to whether the jury even will be able to reach a verdict on the four charges: three counts of making false statements to a grand jury in 2003 and one count of obstruction of justice.

Only the dozen jurors really know what's going on.

"I would say it is still early to be thinking about a hung jury," said Douglas Tween, a former trial attorney in the Justice Department's antitrust division and now a principal at Baker & McKenzie. "A general rule of thumb is one to two days of deliberation for every week of trial, so I don't think this case is unusual at this point."

Following 25 witnesses who testified over the better part of three weeks, the jury must decide whether Bonds is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt on each count. He is charged with lying to the grand jury when he denied receiving steroids and human growth hormone from personal trainer Greg Anderson and

Bruins' star Eric Harr out 4-6 months

Three-sport junior to have shoulder surgery

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Twin Falls' starting shortstop and No. 2 pitcher has been shut down for the season.

Three-sport junior Eric Harr will have surgery in the coming days to repair a torn labrum he sustained in his left shoulder toward the end of the Bruins' basketball season in February. He aggravated the injury diving to catch a ball early in the baseball season.

Harr visited a specialist in Boise on Wednesday and now awaits surgery with an estimated recovery time of four to six months. That means the Times-News 2010-11 Boys Basketball Player of the Year will likely miss the chance to travel this summer with his Idaho Select squad, where he would have been seen by numerous college scouts.

It also means he's doubtful to play football for Twin Falls this fall, where he was expected to be a starter.

"It's kind of up in the air on football now," said Matt Harr, Eric's father and the Bruins' boys basketball coach. "It doesn't look good."

CSI athletes eye four-year programs

Women's basketball, volleyball add new players to rosters

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Today marks the first day of the late signing period for players inking National Letters of Intent with NCAA programs. But College of Southern Idaho women's basketball players Laurel Kearsley and Felicity Jones won't be reaching for a pen just yet.

Kearsley and Jones, along with fellow sophomore Taylor Altenburg, are still weighing their options with four-year programs. If certain NCAA Division I teams miss out on players they hope to sign, doors could open for CSI's sophomores.

"It's kind of a waiting game a little bit for our kids," said CSI women's coach Randy Rogers. "... These kids want to play and they want to go to a good fit for them"

Kearsley has taken a couple recruiting trips and plans to visit Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where former CSI teammate Emiliya Yancheva was a reserve this past season. Kearsley's also drawing interest from Northwest Nazarene University in Nampa.

"NNU is really, really after her," said Rogers.

Portland State and Northern Colorado are in the mix for Jones, while Altenburg has an offer from Alaska Fairbanks and has received interest from several other schools, according to Rogers.

CSI's other sophomores — Holly Checketts, Kylie Hardison and Tina Fakahafua — aren't pursuing opportunities to play at the next level.

Rogers said five or six freshmen from the 2010-11 squad will likely return next season, but the players won't likely sign until late April. Freshman guard Guili El-Mir has withdrawn from school and plans to return home to Australia and pursue a career in law enforcement.

Rogers has commitments from two high school players to join the program next season. Chelsie Pitt of Bishop Gorman High School in Las Vegas and Megan Tanner of Utah's Bonneville High School are

Wood River baseball holds off Jerome

Nick Brunker swung the hot bat and Jake Freeman closed the door on the Tigers as Wood River beat Jerome 9-8 Tuesday in Great Basin Conference baseball action.

Brunker finished 3-for-3 with two doubles and three RBIs to help Wood River carry a four-run lead into the seventh inning.

But Jerome took advantage of walks and a hit batsmen to score three runs before Freeman came in on relief to strike out the side with the tying run on third.

"It was a wild game, back and forth like it always is when we play Jerome. We struggled on the mound a little bit in the final inning, but found a way to win," said Wood River coach Matt Nelson.

CANYON RIDGE SWEEPS POCATELLO
 Behind Lauren Shotwell's

seven strikeouts and some clutch hitting by Alex Schamber, Canyon Ridge took two from Pocatello Tuesday, winning 3-2 in extra innings in Game 1 and 10-3 in Game 2.

Schamber hit the game-tying RBI single in the seventh inning of Game 1 and Karly Hudelson's triple drove in the winning run in the eighth.

The Canyon Ridge bats broke out in Game 2 as Schamber went 3-for-4 with a double, Hudelson drove in three runs and Kylee Kuest had two RBIs in the rout.

"We had a pretty good day today. That was the best pitcher we've seen all season and it was definitely a pitcher's duel that first game. We were finally able to get to her in Game 2," said Canyon Ridge coach Lyle Hudelson.

Harr

 Harr was slated to play shortstop and be in the Bruins' pitching rotation on the baseball diamond.

"You just don't replace a kid like Eric Harr," said Twin Falls baseball coach Tim Stadelmeir. "He's a huge asset to our club. ... With a guy like him, you really feel for him. He just wants to be out there. Eric is a tough kid and a competitor and was trying to battle through it. I just hope that he has a quick recovery."

The top priority for Harr is to heal in time for the basketball season. He led the Bruins in points (18.4 ppg), assists (2.8) and steals (2.0) this past season, while averaging 5.6 rebounds per game.

"He should be 100 percent for basketball season," said Matt Harr.

Times-News writers Stephen Meyers and Diane Philbin contributed to this report.

 both 5-10 forwards who "can step out and shoot it a little bit," said Rogers.

Finding a true center who can rebound and score in the paint is the top recruiting priority for Rogers.

CSI men's basketball

While CSI guard Pierre Jackson (Baylor) and center Kenny Buckner (Boise State) will each sign a National Letter of Intent this afternoon, several other Golden Eagles are still weighing their options.

Point guard Darius Smith visited Eastern Illinois last weekend and is in the process of determining additional campus trips. Reserve guard Issiah Grayson will visit Bethune-Cookman University on April 21 and is also considering Cal-State Bakersfield.

Freshman Mitch Bruneel spent some time at Boise State this past weekend and is also setting up a trip to Utah State. CSI men's coach Steve Gosar said he'll sit down with Bruneel soon to discuss whether the 6-5 forward will return to CSI for his sophomore season or make the jump to a four-year program.

Gosar will meet with all of his freshmen next week to discuss their future in the program. In the meantime, Gosar said, "Every day's an interview."

CSI volleyball

The Eagles added another piece for the 2011 season, getting a commitment Tuesday from 5-foot-11 outsider hitter Emily Ottinger of Palmdale, Calif. Ottinger pounded down 252 kills as a senior at Quartz Hills High School.

"She's just a strong banger who can rotate all six positions," said CSI volleyball coach Heidi Cartisser.

Two of CSI's sophomores plan to sign with four-year programs today. Sophomore setter Barbara Alcantara will sign with Fresno State, while Elisa Brochado will sign with UNLV.

Dama Cox is still considering options, but will likely sign with Florida A&M in the coming days. The signing period continues through May 18.

Werth, Nationals top Phillies

WASHINGTON — Jayson Werth homered and doubled to lead the Washington Nationals to a 7-4 victory Tuesday night in his first appearance against Philadelphia since leaving the Phillies as a free agent.

Werth doubled leading off the fourth inning and scored, starting a three-run inning that gave the Nationals the lead for good. His solo home run in the fifth gave Washington a 5-1 lead.

Werth signed a $126 million, seven-year contract with the Nationals in offseason. Phillies fans made up a large percentage of the sparse crowd at Nationals Park, and they booed him each time he came to bat — or fielded a fly ball in right field.

BRAVES 5, NATIONALS 0

ATLANTA — Tommy Hanson pitched four-hit ball over seven innings for his first victory, Jason Heyward and Brian McCann homered, and Chipper Jones drove in two runs to lead Atlanta past Florida.

Hanson (1-2) finally got a few runs to work with and the Braves turned in several nifty defensive plays, two of them diving stops by shortstop Alex Gonzalez. The Braves struggled offensively over their first 10 games, scoring three runs or

Oilers will pick No. 1 overall again

TORONTO — The Edmonton Oilers will pick first overall in the NHL draft for a second straight year.

The New Jersey Devils won the draft lottery Tuesday, but teams can't move up more than four spots, leaving Edmonton with the first overall pick.

The Devils will pick fourth, the New York Islanders fifth and the Ottawa Senators were bumped down to the sixth spot, with Colorado and Florida falling in order at second and third, respectively.

After finishing its season in 30th place, Edmonton held the highest odds of getting the No. 1 pick at 48.2 percent.

"Winning this first overall pick is an important moment for the organization and it's an integral part of the process moving forward," Oilers general manager Steve Tambellini said.

The NHL draft is scheduled for June 24-25 in St. Paul, Minn., where Ryan Nugent-Hopkins of the WHL's Red Deer Rebels is expected to be taken No. 1 overall.

STARS FIRE CRAWFORD AFTER MISSING PLAYOFFS AGAIN

DALLAS — This season, Marc Crawford guided the Dallas Stars to the most points of any team in NHL history that didn't make the playoffs.

It wasn't enough to keep his job, either.

Crawford was fired Tuesday after just two seasons in charge. Although Dallas' playoff bid went to the final minutes of the regular season, general manager Joe Nieuwendyk seemed to have already decided his club needed another coach to become a contender for the Stanley Cup.

"We have a lot of good things in place," Nieuwendyk said. "The hardest thing for Marc to probably accept (is) that I don't feel he's the guy going forward that takes us to the next level."

Nieuwendyk persuaded his bosses to dump Crawford with a year left on his contract. The significance is that the team is run by creditors who are trying to sell the club. By agreeing to this, they approved paying for a new coach, as well as picking up the remaining tab for Crawford unless he gets hired elsewhere.

RED WINGS & HOWARD SAYS HE'S CALMER THAN LAST YEAR

DETROIT — Red Wings goaltender Jimmy Howard says he feels calmer than he did as a rookie in the playoffs a year ago.

Detroit hopes that leads to a great performance Wednesday night at home against the Phoenix Coyotes in a first-round playoff rematch.

Phoenix forward Shane Doan says goalie Ilya Bryzgalov is probably the best player in the series and the Coyotes will be counting on him against Detroit's talented forwards.

The Red Wings will be without Henrik Zetterberg, whose injured left knee will keep him out of the series opener.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

IAAF adopts eligibility rules for hormone cases

LONDON — Female athletes with excessive levels of male hormones will require medical clearance to compete in women's events under new rules adopted Tuesday by track and field's governing body.

The IAAF became the first international sports federation on Tuesday to approve new rules on the eligibility of female athletes with "hyperandrogenism" — a condition involving overproduction of male sex hormones.

The rules are intended to avoid any repeat of the controversy which surrounded South African runner Caster Semenya, who was ordered to undergo gender verification tests and was sidelined for 11 months after winning the 800-meter world title in 2009.

The IAAF worked with the International Olympic Committee, which agreed last week to adopt new rules and urged all sports federations to enact similar measures.

The IAAF council, meeting in the South Korean city of Daegu that will host this year's world championships, said the rules will go into effect on May 1.

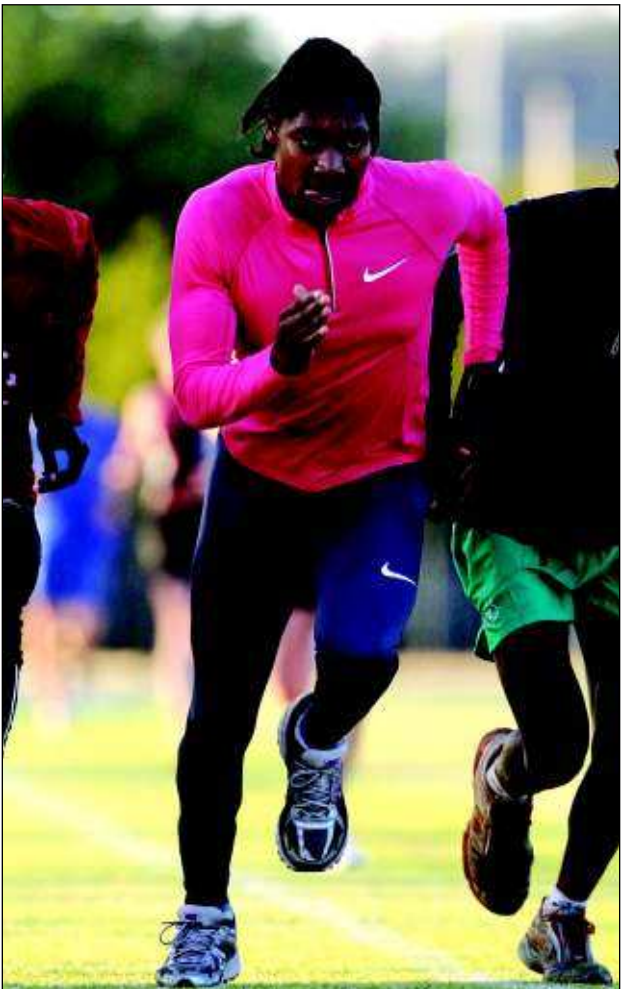

The rules are based on the grounds that the difference between sporting performance between elite men and women is "predominantly due to higher levels of androgenic hormones in men."

Women with hyperandrogenism will be eligible to compete in female competition if their androgen levels are below the men's range or, if within the male range, they have an androgen resistance which means they derive no competitive advantage, the IAAF said.

UConn's Walker to enter NBA draft

STORRS, Conn. — Connecticut's Kemba Walker says the school's decision to put his name and number on the wall of its basketball arena helped him decide it was time to head to the NBA.

"I think from that point out it did, because it was like coach just kicked me out," the junior All-American said. "It says 2008 to 2011 (on the banner), so it was like he's (saying), 'Let's get him out of here.'"

Walker announced Tuesday he will enter the June draft. He said he has not hired an agent, but has been talking to them.

"There's no chance that I'm coming back," Walker said before joking: "Coach, like he said, he doesn't have a scholarship for me."

The 6-foot-1 guard led the Huskies to a 32-9 record, including an 11-0 postseason run that ended with a national championship. Walker is expected to be a first-round pick, and perhaps the second guard chosen behind Duke's Kyrie Irving.

NFL releases preseason schedule

NEW YORK — The NFL is preparing for preseason games even though the owners and players remain at odds over a new contract.

Oil Stadium, site of the 2012 Super Bowl.

Lawrence Taylor declared low-risk sex offender

NEW CITY, N.Y. — Former pro football star Lawrence Taylor, who pleaded guilty in January to sexual misconduct and patronizing a 16-year-old prostitute, was declared a low-risk sex offender on Tuesday, meaning there will be no photo of the former New York Giants linebacker on public online sex-offender registries.

Rockland County Court Judge William Kelly said Taylor was not targeting children and was unlikely to commit the same crime.

"He would be awfully foolish to go out and do this again," the judge said. As to a posted photo, he said, "I don't see how that's going to make the public any safer."

Taylor has said the girl told him she was 19. The former NFL standout, who lives in Florida, did not attend the hearing.

Paul won't rule out playing for Jordan's Bobcats in 2012

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Chris Paul remembers every detail of the first time he met Michael Jordan. Now referring to him as his mentor, could Paul decide to return home next year and make Jordan his boss?

Paul won't rule it out.

"It would definitely be something to think about," the New Orleans guard said Tuesday when asked about the potential to sign with the Jordan-owned Charlotte Bobcats in 2012. "But right now it's all about trying to win a championship here with the Hornets."

In a phone interview with The Associated Press to promote the Jordan Brand Classic high school basketball All-Star game on Saturday in Charlotte, Paul alternated praise for Jordan while stressing that his immediate concern is the Hornets' impending first-round playoff series.

"I'm one of those people who tries to stay in the moment," the four-time All-Star point guard said.

"It is a characteristic of wisdom not to do desperate things."

This column tries to teach good habits. Normally I show deals where good technique succeeds and an incomplete plan will fail. But I would be remiss if I suggested that the technically superior line should always be followed. That approach ignores the human factor. Often one can infer that an approach other than the percentage play will have a greater chance of success. Does that sound obscure? Today's example will make the position clearer.

In this deal, from the North American Open Pairs Final, the eventual winners of the event found the right pressure play to get the most out of their no-trump game.

Lew Stansby's partnership with his wife, JoAnna, represents one of the country's leading mixed pairs — and they have had considerable success in the open game too. Here, in three no-trump, Lew won the opening heart lead with the jack and immediately led the club jack. He felt sure West would find himself unable to resist covering if he had the king. Naturally West played low, so Stansby went up with dummy's ace, played off the diamond ace, and overtook the spade jack with his ace. He then cashed the spade king and led his second diamond, crossing his fingers as he did so. When he finessed the jack and found the suit behaving, he had 10 tricks. This was a fine score, since 11 tricks was the limit in either clubs or diamonds.

ANSWER: There is some temptation just to blast to three no-trump, which rates to be the best game most of the time. However, a more subtle approach is to temporize with three diamonds, waiting for partner to bid three no-trump himself or raise hearts. If he now bids three spades, it will act as the fourth suit, allowing you to bid three no-trump next.

“Mommy, I can go to the store right now! Grandma didn’t send me a check, she sent me REAL money!”

Today is Wednesday, April 13, the 103rd day of 2011. There are 262 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On April 13, 1861, Fort Sumter in South Carolina fell as the Union commander, Maj. Robert Anderson, agreed to surrender in the face of the Confederates' relentless bombardment.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1598, King Henry IV of France endorsed the Edict of Nantes, which granted rights to the Protestant Huguenots. (The edict was abrogated in 1685 by King Louis XIV, who declared France entirely Catholic again.)

In 1742, Handel's "Messiah" was first performed publicly, in Dublin, Ireland.

In 1743, the third president of the United States, Thomas Jefferson, was born in Shadwell in the Virginia Colony.

In 1860, the Pony Express completed its inaugural run from St. Joseph, Mo. to Sacramento, Calif. in 10 days.

In 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt dedicated the Jefferson Memorial.

In 1958, Van Cliburn of the United States won the first International Tchaikovsky Competition for piano in Moscow; Russian Valery Klimov won the violin competition.

In 1960, the U.S. Navy's Transit 1B navigational satellite was successfully launched into orbit.

In 1970, Apollo 13, four-fifths of the way to the moon, was crippled when a tank containing liquid oxygen burst. (The astronauts managed to return safely.)

In 1981, Washington Post reporter Janet Cooke received a Pulitzer Prize for her feature about an 8-year-old heroin addict named "Jimmy"; however, Cooke relinquished the prize two days later, admitting she'd fabricated the story.

In 1986, Pope John Paul II visited the Great Synagogue of Rome in the first recorded papal visit of its kind to a Jewish house of worship.

Ten years ago: With the crew of a U.S. spy plane safely back in the United States, American officials gave their detailed version of what happened when the plane collided with a Chinese fighter on April 1; the U.S. said its plane was struck by the jet. (China maintained that the U.S. plane rammed the fighter.)

Five years ago: Confessed al-Qaida conspirator Zacarias Moussaoui expressed no remorse for his role in the 9/11 attacks as he took the stand for the second time in his death-penalty trial in Alexandria, Va. British author Dame Muriel Spark died in Florence, Italy, at age 88.

One year ago: World leaders concluded a 47-nation nuclear security conference in Washington, endorsing President Barack Obama's call for securing all of the globe's vulnerable nuclear materials within four years, but offering few specifics for achieving that goal. First lady Michelle Obama and Dr. Jill Biden made a surprise visit to Haiti, the scene of a devastating earthquake three months earlier.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old gay man who has been in a relationship for two years with a guy who just turned 30. My problem is he has not yet told his family about me.

He has been around my family, and they view him as part of the family. I want the same with his parents and sibling. I think he should have told them by now.

Is it OK to give him an ultimatum to either tell his family or I'll leave? I don't want to be a secret anymore, and I don't know how to handle this.

— OUT AND PROUD

IN BALTIMORE
DEAR OUT AND PROUD: It appears your boyfriend has not yet come out to his family — or if he did, it didn't go well. Although your family accepts him and the fact that you are a couple, the same may not be possible with his. Your boyfriend may need counseling in order to gain the strength to level with his parents and sibling. Because you are no longer willing to be kept under wraps, you do need to make that clear to him. But do not give him an ultimatum unless you are prepared to follow through.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My unmarried sister passed away unexpectedly two years ago. My brother, other sister and I had a difficult time locating her personal accounts and bills because she did everything online. This prompted me to begin writing down all my passwords for my computer and storing the list in a secure location. I have asked my husband of 29 years to do the same, but he refuses.

My husband has given me the information on our joint financial accounts, but insists that his email account is private.

I told him he doesn't have to give me the password. I just want him to write it down in the event something happens. I told him I have nothing to hide, but does he? He got angry, and we are barely speaking now.

Five years ago, I found out he was trading questionable emails with a divorced cocktail waitress, and now I'm concerned. He frequents bars after work, and I can't help but worry. Should I drop it or ask him what he's hiding?

— NOTHING TO HIDE IN OHIO

DEAR NOTHING TO HIDE: Folks who are secretive usually have something to hide. Your husband's past behavior coupled with his refusal to let you have the password to his email account indicates that he's not proud of what you would find. If you're willing to accept the status quo, drop the subject. However, if you assert yourself and pursue this, the first person you should talk to is your lawyer because you may need one.

DEAR ABBY: My mother was recently invited to a shower and was given specific instructions NOT to put her name on the gift. The reason? The honoree plans to issue one general thank-you to everyone because she "doesn't have the time" to send individual thank-you notes.

Abby, if someone takes the time and spends the money to buy a gift, shouldn't the recipient be gracious enough to write a personal note?

— THOUGHT I'D HEARD IT ALL IN OHIO

DEAR THOUGHT: Of course she should! If the honoree is so busy that she plans to forgo thanking her guests for their generosity, she should save everyone's time, money and effort and forgo the shower.

IF APRIL 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next four to six weeks, you are at your wisest and most fortunate while benevolent Jupiter slides through your spot in the zodiac. This is when people who are good for you come closer and those who aren't seem to fade into the woodwork. Make crucial decisions and initiate important projects now while Lady Luck smiles on you. Early September may be the best time for a fantasy-filled frolic with a new romance or to take a fun loving vacation. October and November are the two worst months to take chances or make crucial changes that involve your money or career.

Horoscope

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Wiggle away from the wrestling mat. You and a partner may vie for domination, but teamwork and compromise are the answer, not opposition. Questions require expert advice from a trustworthy source.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Air your aspirations. You will make the boss sit up and take notice if you put financial plans and career objectives at the top of your list. Your charisma will unlock a door previously closed to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good news travels fast. Although fascinating headlines and inspiring conversations keep you highly focused on business or the world of finance, time should be set aside for love and affection.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Bounce out of the back-ground. When your personality is brought to the foreground, you can use your natural charm to influence others. Avoid thinking that more possessions will bring happiness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Rhyme and reason rock! You might need to put ambitions at the top of the list for a few hours, but that doesn't mean you can't let your inner poet express romantic feelings later for the one you love.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Anything worth having is worth waiting for. You may be torn between achieving ambitions and treating a loved one to something luxurious. Measure your success by the size of the smile on a lover's face.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): That bee is your bonnet is buzzing about business. Your closest allies will have some innovative ideas that can take the sting out of any problem. Employ your street smarts for creative decision-making.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be as blissful as though you just won a blue ribbon. Your special someone might secretly think that you are the best in show. An authority figure in your life might expect a high level of professionalism.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Supersize your sweetest side. When you are kind and gentle, no one will want to bring you down by discussing his or her troubles. A significant other may be waiting at home to show-er you with love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let flattery go to your head. You may get a nudge in the right direction from an admirer, but what others think of you doesn't count. The joy you bring to others is what matters in the end.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): When you're the apple of someone's eye, it is easy to share a piece of the pie. Your business acumen helps you gain approval from higher-ups and your good taste in gifts gets a thumbs' up from a mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): When you are the cats' meow you get to lap up all the cream. Your adorable ways and attractive appearance are enhanced under these stars. This is a good time for lovers to purr with contentment.
