St. Luke's eyes temporary housing near new hospital

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

The big, brown chairs and couches in the spacious apartments are comfortable enough to sink into after a radiation treatment or a long night of waiting to hold a new baby after a premature birth.

There's a toaster and a television, curtains and a bed in each of the three St. Luke's Canyon Villa apartments on Martin Street, just 150 yards from St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls. Patients can walk across the street to receive treatment and can stay for a reasonable price — typically from $16 to $21 per night, depending on financial need.

The one- and two-bedroom apartments along Martin Street are rented from Valley House homeless shelter, which also provides transitional housing for its clients at the complex. St. Luke's will continue to rent the three units after its new Twin Falls hospital opens May 21.

But with the move comes a loss of proximity for patients, and St. Luke's Foundation Director Larry Baxter said plans are in the works to build temporary housing closer to the new facility to assist patients and families who need to stay for long periods of time and need to be near hospital facilities.

LITTLE FUNDING FOR FELLOWSHIP

Twin Falls nonprofit struggles to find money for new roof

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Stan Crowley knows firsthand that the Fellowship Hall helps people.

He first entered its doors in 1994 to seek help in overcoming alcoholism. It's a path familiar to other addicts who make their way to support groups each evening the modest Twin Falls building.

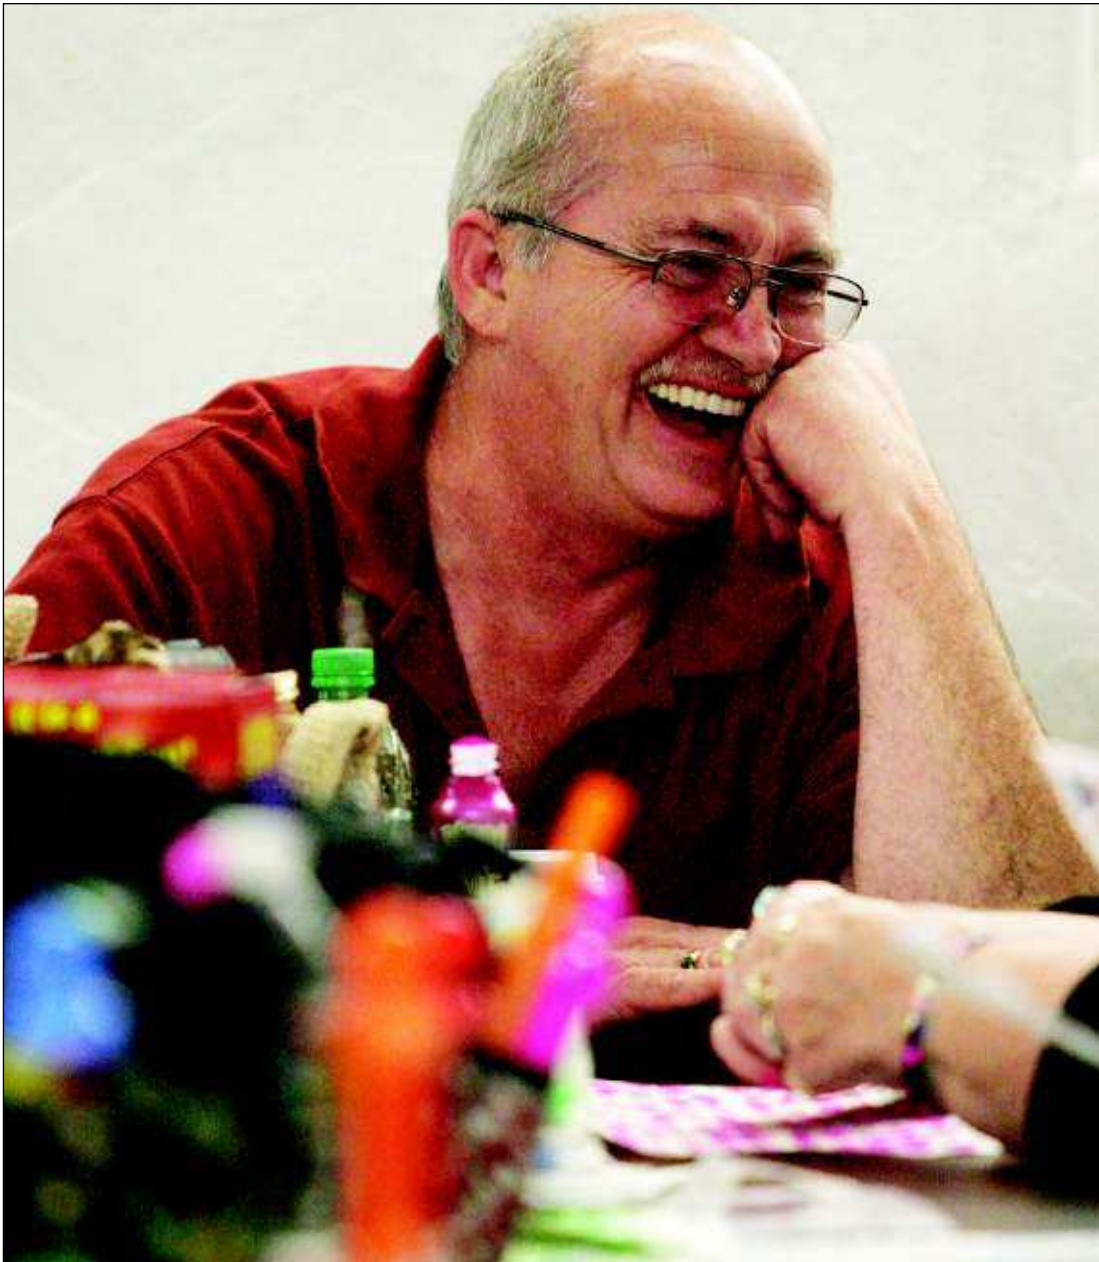

The Fellowship Hall, open since 1987, provides space for anonymous support groups regardless of the challenge their members face. People come in battling alcohol, methamphetamine, other narcotics and gambling, to name a few.

But the nonprofit has fallen on hard financial times in recent years, and its expenses have grown. In a couple of places inside the Second Avenue building, removed ceiling tiles show where roof leaks have opened.

Crowley, now vice president of the nonprofit's board, says the estimate to fix the hall's leaky roof has been put at $25,000. So far, the hall has raised less than $1,000, and the small, unaffiliated nonprofit isn't used to raising such large sums.

"The main purpose of being open is to give a safe environment for people in recovery," Crowley said.

Twin Falls gears up for roadwork

Council to look at road sealing plans

Times-News

The city of Twin Falls is gearing up for the summer roadwork season, with the council getting a peek tonight at about two dozen proposed sealing projects.

The number of projects depends on the bids that come in. The city has budgeted $550,000 for road sealing projects throughout the city. Road sealing aims to extend road life by preventing oxidation, which is why sealing may be done to roads that look fine, according to city staff.

It also has plans to spend about $400,000 on several road overlay projects, expected to start after July 4.

Also on the agenda:

- The council will give city staff more direction on the debate over whether the city should own downtown parking lots and possible weight limits for trucks on city streets. City staff is also asking to revisit the city's strategic plan and its development standards.

- The city library will ask to use its $18,319 rebate from Idaho Power to replace two outdated heat pumps on the roof of its 1939 building.

Using the rebate will mean the library can cover the remaining cost of pump installation, negating the need for a $26,000 capital improvement request from the city in the next budget year, according to a city staff report.

Digging machine arrives to aid rescuers at Lucky Friday Mine

By Shannon Dininny
Associated Press

MULLAN — Mining company officials brought in a remote-controlled digging machine Sunday to help try to reach a worker missing since a tunnel collapsed deep inside an Idaho mine.

The special digger must be disassembled before being taken more than a mile below the surface, where it will be put back together, according to Hecla Mining Company officials.

Officials said the machine should be underground by Sunday evening, but it was unclear how soon the process of reassembling the device would be finished or when rescuers would be able to put it to work.

The roof of a tunnel at the Lucky Friday Mine collapsed Friday as two brothers were working, trapping one of the men but the other was able to escape, according to officials and family members.

Officials have not had contact with 53-year-old Larry Marek, a 30-year mining veteran, since the collapse and his condition was unknown. The brother who escaped, whose name wasn't immediately available, wasn't injured.

Despite lobbyist's threat, Idaho's Exergy stands by wind projects

By John Miller
Associated Press

BOISE — A wind energy industry lobbyist pushing to extend Idaho's sales tax rebate for alternative power developers made it clear: If the extension died, Roy Eiguren told lawmakers on April 7, so would hundreds of millions worth of his company's projects.

"Your client would announce tomorrow that they are canceling those projects," asked Sen. Joe Stegner, R-Lewiston.

"That would be correct," answered Eiguren, lobbyist for Exergy Development Group.

The extension failed 18-17 in the final minutes of the 2011 session, but Exergy has retreated from its threat. James Carkulis, the company's founder, now says he'll follow through due to existing commitments, even if the rebate's death wipes out profit margins from more than 100 megawatts of wind power he's now hoping to install in southern Idaho.

"It will be more than likely unprofitable for Exergy," said Carkulis, who drives a 1979 Porsche 911, flies in a Swiss-made Pilatus turbo-prop and sponsors a Boise-based professional cycling

N. Idaho firefighters want historic bell back

The Associated Press

RATHDRUM — Northern Idaho firefighters in Rathdrum want their 114-year-old bell back.

The Northern Lakes Fire District earlier this week asked the Rathdrum City Council for the return of the bell that beginning in 1897 gave three tolls to summon firefighters and then three more to give the all clear.

The bell went into storage in the 1960s after being replaced by a civil defense horn. Since 1977 the bell has been on display in the Rathdrum City Park, with the clapper removed due to noise complaints.

Fire District Commissioner Larry Clark said the bell should be put on display at a new fire station being built this summer with $1 million the district has saved and another $1 million in federal money through the American Recovery Act.

“That bell means a lot to us and we’d like to establish it at the new station with a light on it under the flagpoles,” Clark told city councilors earlier this week.

“The fire bell is part of the heritage of both the city of Rathdrum and Northern Lakes Fire and represents more than just a piece of the past,” Clark said. “It is a memorial to firefighters of the past. It needs to be taken care of properly and this is the place to do it.”

Linda Hansen, who is battling cancer at St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, has been staying in the Canyon Villa apartments that are rented by the hospital to temporarily house patients during treatment. places as far as 6,000 square miles away,” said Mark Lopshire, St. Luke’s director of the Mountain States Tumor Institute.

“In many cases they have to come here daily for treatment, often as long as six to nine weeks. They can’t drive from Shoshone every day — nobody can afford that.”

Linda Hansen, 70, stayed in the current apartments twice in April, once on her birthday for a lumpectomy and the second time for a week of radiation treatment. She said she had stopped at a motel close to the hospital to reserve a room, but medical staff recommended that she stay in the St. Luke’s apartments. She said her time in the temporary housing was beneficial both “physically and psychologically.”

“You know you are surrounded by other people in the same shape you are — they are fellow sufferers,” she said. “They’ve provided everything here. It doesn’t look like a hotel room. It doesn’t feel like a hotel room.”

While only three apartments are being used at the moment, Lopshire said expanding to nine apartments will fit with the hospital’s expected patient increase. Over the past year, the Canyon Villa apartments booked 551 rooms, and Lopshire said the need for housing is sure to grow.

“It’s very important that we partner with everyone in the community to get the housing built, and that’s not just Twin Falls, but businesses and people in Challis, Wood River and Elko,” Lopshire said. “That’s where these people are from, so it’s important to reach out to those communities.”

Mine

No one answered the door at the homes of family members on Sunday, and a person who answered phone at one of the homes declined comment.

The machine will move material faster “without needing all the additional ground support to ensure the safety of our rescue teams,” the company said in the statement released Sunday morning. “In the meantime, rescue crews continue to safely advance and progress on the removal of material.”

Hecla President Phil Baker said earlier that the remote-control “mucker,” similar to a front-end loader, was being flown in from the East Coast.

A Marek family member, who spoke on condition of anonymity as per an agreement with the rest of the family, told The Associated Press that two of her brothers were in the mine; one got out and the other did not.

She said most of her family was at the rescue site. She described her family as longtime area miners, but declined to provide any more information.

The mine is tucked into the forested mountains of Mullan, a historic mining town of 840 people in Idaho’s Panhandle.

Company spokesman Mike Dexter said the two employees had just finished watering down blasted-out rock and ore when the collapse occurred about 75 feet from the end of the 6,150-foot deep tunnel. The cave-in area was 20 feet wide. Officials say it’s unclear if the entire 75-foot section collapsed, or only a portion of it, possibly leaving the miner trapped on the other side.

“We don’t know if the collapse went all the way to the end,” Dexter said.

The company said all mining activity has been halted for the rescue effort.

The mine employs roughly 275 workers, about 50 of whom were underground in various parts of the mine when the collapse occurred, company spokeswoman Melanie Hennessey said.

Glen Gotcher, 57, who worked in the mine for 28 years and spent the last seven working in the mill above ground, said the community is staying positive as they await word about the missing miner.

“This is something people are used to feeling, because when the rock burst happens, you can feel it all over town,” Gotcher said as he gathered with other miners at the Smokeshop Bar in downtown Mullan.

Others have died in the mine, but not recently, Gotcher said.

On its website, Hecla describes itself as the oldest U.S.-based precious metals mining company in North America and the largest silver producer in the U.S. It is headquartered in Coeur d’Alene, Idaho. Hecla currently produces silver from two mines, Greens Creek and Lucky Friday, a mine that has been operational since 1942 and is one of the nation’s deepest underground mines.

Baker said the collapse was in an area where mine material is watered down and cooled before being shipped to the next phase of processing. No cause for the collapse has been identified

“We’re not yet focused on how and why it occurred,” Baker said. “All of our efforts now are on rescuing the miner.”

Hecla Mining has been expanding its Lucky Friday Mine in the Silver Valley, spending $200 million in recent years to increase silver production by about 60 percent and extend the mine’s life beyond 2030.

The company appears to have a good record of health and safety at Lucky Friday. There have been no fatalities dating back to 2000, according to a Mine Safety and Health Administration database. The federal regulator has cited the mine for violations, but none in the last year specifically tied to the kind of accident that occurred Friday.

In 2009, the company agreed to pay $177,500 in fines for violating federal clean water laws at Lucky Friday. EPA investigators said the mine exceeded discharge levels for metals such as lead, zinc, cadmium and suspended solids between September 2008 and February 2009. Discharges flow into the South Fork Coeur d’Alene River above the town of Mullan.

Wind

team. “That said, we are a company that strongly believes in honoring our contractual obligations.”

Idaho’s rebate, originally passed in 2005, will expire on June 30 — not just for Carkulis and other wind developers who emerged as a lobbying force over the last three months, but also for other alternative energy wildcatters building landfill gas, anaerobic digesters and geothermal power projects.

The brinksmanship Exergy employed to keep it alive is nothing new to the Idaho Legislature, especially when millions are at stake.

Grocery chain Albertson’s Inc. did it in 2005, threatening then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne’s administration it would move elsewhere without lucrative concessions. Lawmakers went along, but Albertson’s was sold just months later to an out-of-state competitor.

Stegner, who opposed the extension on grounds that companies should sink or swim in a free market, believes wind companies’ threats to blow out of Idaho may have been hyperbole to scare lawmakers. With wind developers, a majority in the Senate just didn’t blink.

“It’s logical that companies are going to tell us that they are vitally important,” Stegner said. “The responsibility of the Legislature remains one of a certain amount of caution and a certain amount of suspicion when it comes to these types of tax incentives.”

On Friday, Eiguren said his response to Stegner’s question reflected his discussions with Carkulis at the time.

“I obviously would not have said what I said had he not told me that,” Eiguren told The Associated Press. “Since the vote, James has been re-evaluating the projects.”

Other companies are, too. Scott Montgomery, the Salt Lake City-based developer of Cedar Creek Wind, told lawmakers he’d have to “seriously evaluate” his 133-megawatt project in eastern Idaho without the state break. Armand Eckert, who is developing a 20 megawatt wind farm near Buhl, said small projects like his will be hurt, because they already require more than a decade to recoup their investment.

Still others say the rebate isn’t the make-or-break issue.

On the Idaho-Nevada border, where RES America is developing its 400-megawatt China Mountain project, the British company says the gusts that roar through the area, coupled with economical transmission to ship electricity to customers in Nevada, make its project competitive without the rebate.

“While the rebate is a helpful tool, it is not essential for this project,” said Suzanne Leta Liou, an RES manager.

According to a Boise State University study last month, a 160-megawatt wind farm will qualify for $12 million in state tax rebates while generating $77 million in state and local taxes over 25 years. Wind developers argue this tradeoff benefits the public.

But Stan Hawkins, a former eastern Idaho Republican state senator who practically lived in Boise this winter to champion stricter limits on Idaho’s wind industry, argues turbine developers have expanded thanks to state and federal incentives like tax credits, cash grants and favorable depreciation rules.

These help make non-polluting wind projects more competitive with coal- or natural gas-fired electricity, but Hawkins insists the proliferation of tall, white turbines is driving up utility customers’ rates and encroaching on private property rights of neighbors who live in their shadow.

“This is creating a wealth machine for risk takers that foists the risk on ratepayers and taxpayers,” he told the AP. “Tax avoidance, essentially, that’s what this is all about.”

Companies like Exergy and its partners including General Electric can also sell potentially lucrative renewable energy credits to utilities in places like California and Washington, to help them meet their home states’ renewable mandates. Last week, for example, Seattle City Light bought the credits from a 22 megawatt Idaho wind farm in Elmore County from 2015 to 2029 for $1 million annually.

At that rate, Exergy and GE would reap more than $8.4 million annually from their 183 megawatt development near Hagerman.

Carkulis said the comparison is unrealistic, since no two companies have the same models or receive the same deals. All the incentives combined — the renewable credits, the state and federal tax breaks, and the price developers get for their power — make a project profitable, while losing just one can turn the equation on its head, he said.

There are limited ways for the Fellowship Hall to raise money. It doesn't charge rent to support groups using its rooms; it just takes a portion of donations collected at the meetings, not to exceed $15 per meeting.

"It's hard to make ends meet," Crowley said.

He said the hall realizes that those needing help are often financially stretched themselves and sometimes just out of prison, often without jobs or permanent homes.

The Fellowship Hall needs $1,500 a month for basic expenses like utilities and upkeep.

"It's a month-to-month deal," he said. "There was a point where we had $60 in our bank account."

Crowley's still around, now volunteering his time to keep the nonprofit going.

Secretary and Treasurer Michelle Shaddy counts money before Friday evening bingo at The Fellowship Hall in Twin Falls.

Others come, get help, and aren't heard from again.

"It's serving its purpose," Crowley said. "People come here and get sober, and a lot of them you don't see any more."

Eleven-member Coeur d'Alene family makes sweet music together

By Nick Rotunno
The Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Lindy Osborn is a rosy-cheeked 11-year-old who plays the piano, violin, flute and viola.

Her teenaged sister, Katelyn, has mastered the violin, piano and guitar.

A third sibling, Kiersti, is a true wunderkind: Just 9 years old, she already knows the cello, accordion, clarinet, flute — nine instruments altogether.

"Our youngest is 2 years old. He's constantly asking us to put on music. He can sing," said Andy Osborn, 49, guitarist and father of the family. "They all enjoy music very much."

Andy and his wife, Suzanne, are raising nine children at their Coeur d'Alene home — six girls and three boys. Every Osborn, no matter how young, is a musician. Cellists and flutists, pianists and guitarists, the talented family is nothing less than a small-scale orchestra, often performing together — mom and dad, too — at community events or festivals.

"We practice individually alone every day," said 15-year-old Katelyn, the oldest of the Osborn nine. "And then we practice before a concert with everybody else."

Those family rehearsals are usually two hours or longer.

Recently, the Osborns entertained residents at Heritage Place in Coeur d'Alene. In February, they played an Inland Northwest Bluegrass Association event in Spokane, with 300 people listening to their 20-minute set.

A typical Osborn concert might include classical compositions, fast-paced fiddling (always a crowd-pleaser) and a collection of church hymns. Sometimes they'll gather for an informal performance, harmonizing on a local street corner while pedestrians stroll past.

"It's fun watching the audience's reaction. Sometimes people will be walking by and they'll just start dancing," Andy said. "We have had a positive response almost every single time that we have played. People will come up and thank us for coming and sharing our music."

Some of the older children —

Katelyn, Lindy, Kiersti and 12-year-old Luke — have formed "The Osborn String Quartet," featuring two violins, a viola and cello. The four youngsters once played for a wedding party alongside the Spokane River.

"(The quartet) gives them more opportunity to play for the public," Andy said.

The kids also play in the Coeur d'Alene Youth Orchestra, which will host a free concert on May 2 at the Kroc Center.

Osborn musicians start young. Little Faith is 4 years old, Elisa is 5, Janae is 7 and David is 8.

Lindy was just 6 or 7 when she learned piano. She remembers her dad playing guitar for the kids, strumming the strings every now and then.

"When he got the guitar out we always wanted to play it," Lindy recalled.

Of the four instruments she regularly plays, violin is her favorite, she said.

Tax Day 2011: Super rich see big drop in taxes

Nearly half of U.S. households pay no income taxes

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As millions of procrastinators scramble to meet Monday's tax filing deadline, ponder this: The super rich pay a lot less taxes than they did a couple of decades ago, and nearly half of U.S. households pay no income taxes at all.

The Internal Revenue Service tracks the tax returns with the 400 highest adjusted gross incomes each year. The average income on those returns in 2007, the latest year for IRS data, was nearly $345 million. Their average federal income tax rate was 17 percent, down from 26 percent in 1992.

Over the same period, the average federal income tax rate for all taxpayers declined to 9.3 percent from 9.9 percent.

The top income tax rate is 35 percent, so how can people who make so much pay so little in taxes? The nation's tax laws are packed with breaks for people at every income level. There are breaks for having children, paying a mortgage, going to college, and even for paying other taxes. Plus, the top rate on capital gains is only 15 percent.

There are so many breaks that 45 percent of U.S. households will pay no federal income tax for 2010, according to estimates by the Tax Policy Center, a Washington think tank.

"It's the fact that we are using the tax code both to collect revenue, which is its primary purpose, and to deliver these spending benefits that we run into the situation where so many people are paying no taxes," said Robertson Williams, a senior fellow at the center, which generated the estimate of people who pay no income taxes.

President Barack Obama outlines his fiscal policy during an address at George Washington University in Washington.

The sheer volume of credits, deductions and exemptions has both Democrats and Republicans calling for tax laws to be overhauled. House Republicans want to eliminate breaks to pay for lower overall rates, reducing the top tax rate from 35 percent to 25 percent. Republicans oppose raising taxes, but they argue that a more efficient tax code would increase economic activity, generating additional tax revenue.

President Barack Obama said last week he wants to do away with tax breaks to lower the rates and to reduce government borrowing. Obama's proposal would result in $1 trillion in tax increases over the next 12 years. Neither proposal included many details, putting off hard choices about which tax breaks to eliminate.

In all, the tax code is filled with a total of $1.1 trillion in credits, deductions and exemptions, an average of about $8,000 per taxpayer, according to an analysis by the National Taxpayer Advocate, an independent watchdog within the IRS.

More than half of the nation's tax revenue came from the top 10 percent of earners in 2007. More than 44 percent came from the top 5 percent. Still, the wealthy have access to much more lucrative tax breaks than people with lower incomes.

Obama wants the wealthy to pay so "the amount of taxes you pay isn't determined by what kind of accountant you can afford!"

N. Carolina gets worst of deadly storms that ravaged swath of U.S.

By Brock Vergakis
and Emery P. Dalesio
Associated Press

ASKEWVILLE, N.C. — A tornado-spewing storm system that killed at least 45 people across half the country unleashed its worst fury on North Carolina, where homes broke apart, trees snapped and livestock were swept into the air. Residents in the capital city and rural hamlets alike on Sunday mourned the dead, marveled at their own survival and began to clean up devastated neighborhoods.

Observers reported more than 60 tornadoes across North Carolina on Saturday, but most of the state's 21 confirmed deaths occurred in two rural counties. A thunderstorm spawned a tornado that killed four people in southeastern Bladen County, then kept dropping tornadoes as it hopscoched more than 150 miles, eventually moving into Bertie County and killing 11 more.

Heavy winds swept some homes from their foundations, demolished others and flipped cars on tiny rural roads between Askeville and Colerain, Bertie County Manager Zee Lamb said. At least three of those who died were from the same family, he said.

The winds ripped to shreds the doublewide mobile home in Askeville where Justin Dunlow had sought shelter for his 3-year-old daughter, 5-year-old son and himself. The 23-year-old roofer, whose own mobile home nearby also was destroyed, lay on both children as the storm did its worst.

"I just started praying, and the wall fell on top of us and that's what kept us there," he said. "I can replace the house, but I can't replace my babies. And that's what I thought about. I'm alive. My babies are alive."

In Bladen County, Milton McKoy had thought his mobile home in Ammon was out of the storm's path before he saw a tornado over the tops of pine trees, lifting pigs and other animals into the sky.

"It looked just like 'The Wizard of Oz,'" said his wife, Audrey.

The couple took shelter in the laundry room as the tornado snapped trees and carried off several homes in the neighborhood. When they stepped out, it took them a moment to figure out the twister had turned their own home around, leaving them in the backyard.

The violent weather began Thursday in Oklahoma, where two people died, before cutting across the Deep South on Friday and hitting North Carolina and Virginia on Saturday. Authorities said seven people died in Arkansas; seven in Alabama; seven in Virginia; and one in Mississippi.

More than 240 tornadoes were reported from the storm system, including 62 in North Carolina, but the National Weather Service's final numbers could be lower because some tornadoes may have been reported more than once.

Saturday was North Carolina's deadliest day for tornadoes since 1984, when 22 twisters killed 42 people and injured hundreds. The state emergency management agency said it had reports of 23 fatalities from Saturday's storms, but local officials confirmed only 21 deaths with The Associated Press.

FAA gives tired air traffic controllers an extra hour to rest

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government said Sunday it is giving air traffic controllers an extra hour off between shifts so they don't doze off at work, a problem that stretches back decades. But officials rejected the remedy that sleep experts say would make a real difference: on-the-job napping.

"On my watch, controllers will not be paid to take naps. We're not going to allow that," Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said.

That's exactly the opposite of what scientists and the Federal Aviation Administration's own fatigue working group say is needed after five cases disclosed since late March of sleeping controllers. The latest one occurred just before 5 a.m. Saturday at a busy regional radar facility that handles high altitude air traffic for much of Florida, portions of the Atlantic Ocean and the Caribbean Sea.

Several other countries, including Germany and Japan, permit controllers to take sleeping breaks and they provide quiet rooms with cots for that purpose.

"Given the body of scientific evidence, that decision clearly demonstrates that politics remain more important than public safety," said Bill Voss, president of the Flight Safety Foundation of Alexandria, Va. "People are concerned about a political backlash if they allow controllers to have rest periods in their work shifts the same way firefighters and trauma physicians do."

It has been an open secret in the FAA dating to at least the early 1990s that controllers sometimes sleep on the job. Toughest are the midnight shifts, which usually begin about 10 p.m. and end about 6 a.m.

Scientists say it would be

LaHood

surprising if controllers didn't doze sometimes because they are trying to stay awake during the time of day when the body naturally craves sleep.

Studies show that 30 percent to 50 percent of night-shift workers report falling asleep at least once a week while on the job, according to Dr. Charles Czeisler, chief of sleep medicine at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Six of eight present and former controllers interviewed by The Associated Press acknowledged they briefly fell asleep while working alone at night at least once in their careers. Most of the controllers asked not to be identified because they didn't want to jeopardize their jobs or the jobs of colleagues.

Much more common is taking a nap on purpose, they said. On midnight shifts, one controller will work two positions while the other one sleeps and then they switch off, controllers said. The unsanctioned arrangements sometimes allow controllers to sleep as much as three hours or four hours out of an eight-hour shift, they said.

The FAA does not allow controllers to sleep at work, even during breaks. Controllers who are caught can be suspended or fired. But at many air traffic facilities the sleeping swaps are tolerated as long as they don't affect safety, controllers said.

"It has always been a problem," said former controller Rick Perl, who retired last year.

Winds-stoked wildfires threaten more Texas communities

The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Strong winds and tinder-dry conditions presented more challenges Sunday for firefighters battling a spate of wildfires threatening communities across Texas, including a blaze in Austin that destroyed several homes and prompted an aerial water attack.

Authorities said a homeless man was arrested late Sunday in the Austin fire, charged with reckless endangerment after starting a campfire in hazardous conditions. The southwest Austin fire was being blamed for destroying at least eight homes and damaging as many as 10 others.

The man was being held on $50,000 bond, said Austin Fire Department spokesman Chayer Smith.

Meanwhile, the Texas Department of Public Safety said a volunteer firefighter who died Friday had been hit by a vehicle after fleeing a fire truck trapped in a wildfire-consumed pasture between Fort Worth and Abilene.

A preliminary autopsy report from the Tarrant County medical examiner in Fort Worth said Eastland volunteer firefighter Greg Simmons died of blunt force trauma, Senior DPS Trooper Phillip "Sparky" Dean told The Associated Press on Sunday.

Eastland officials initially said the 50-year-old firefighter died after being overcome by smoke and falling into a ditch.

The wildfires have ravaged more than 1,000 square miles of mostly rural terrain in the last week, prompting Gov. Rick Perry to ask President Barack Obama for federal help.

"Texas is reaching its capacity to respond to these emergencies and is in need of federal assistance," Perry said in a statement Sunday. "I urge President Obama to approve our request quickly."

Wildfires have spread across more than 700,000 acres — about the size of Rhode Island — in drought-stricken Texas. About half a dozen massive fires were still burning.

Calmer winds gave firefighters a chance to get a handle on a few massive fires Saturday, and some residents were able to return to their homes — or what was left of them. Winds intensified again Sunday to 20 to 25 mph from the south with gusts to 30 mph, giving new life to even some fires that had been declared fully contained, the Texas Forest Service said.

Several wildfires 70 to 80 miles west of Fort Worth around and south of Possum Kingdom Reservoir had burned about 32,000 acres and may have destroyed more than 50 homes as of Sunday, said Forest Service spokeswoman Victoria Koenig.

A workman does repairs at the Framingham History Center behind a statue of a Union soldier, March 25 in Framingham, Mass.

Unlike in South, Civil War sites, events long ‘forgotten’ in North

By Russell Contreras
Associated Press

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. — The gravesite of a Union Army major general sits largely forgotten in a small cemetery along the Massachusetts Turnpike.

A piece of the coat worn by President Abraham Lincoln when he was assassinated rests quietly in a library attic in a Boston suburb. It's shown upon request, a rare occurrence.

A monument honoring one of the first official Civil War black units stands in a busy intersection in front of the Massachusetts Statehouse, barely gaining notice from the hustle of tourists and workers who pass by each day.

As the nation marks the 150th anniversary of the Civil War, states in the old South — the side that lost — are hosting elaborate re-enactments, intricate memorials, even formal galas highlighting the war's persistent legacy in the region. But for many states in the North — the side that won — only scant, smaller events are planned in an area of the nation that helped sparked the conflict but now, historians say, struggles to acknowledge it.

"It's almost like it never happened," said Annie Murphy, executive director of the Framingham History Center in Framingham, Mass. "But all you have to do is look around and see evidence that it did. It's just that people aren't looking here."

Massachusetts, a state that sent more than 150,000 men to battle and was home to some of the nation's most radical abolitionists, created a Civil War commemoration commission just earlier this month. Aging monuments stand unattended, sometimes even vandalized. Sites of major historical events related to the war remain largely unknown and often compete with the more regionally popular American Revolution attractions.

Meanwhile, states like Arkansas, Virginia, North Carolina and Missouri not only established commissions months, if not years ago, but also have ambitious plans for remembrance around well-known tourist sites and events. In South Carolina, for example, 300 Civil War re-enactors participated last week in well-organized staged battles to mark the beginning of the war.

To be sure, some Northern states have Civil War events planned and have formed commemoration commissions. Connecticut's 150th Civil War Commemoration was set up in 2008 and has scheduled a number of events and exhibits until 2015. Vermont, the first state to outlaw slavery, started a similar commission last year to coordinate activities statewide and in towns.

And some Massachusetts small non-profit and historic groups are trying to spark interest through research, planned tours and town events.

But observers say those events pale in comparison to those in the South.

That difference highlights Northern states' long struggle with how to remember a war that was largely fought on Southern soil, said Steven Mintz, a Columbia University history professor and author of "Moralists and Modernizers: America's Pre-Civil War Reformers." For Northern states like Massachusetts, Mintz said revisiting the Civil War also means revisiting their own unsolved, uncomfortable issues like racial inequality after slavery.

"We've spent a century and a half turning (the war) into a gigantic North-South football game in which everybody was a hero," Mintz said. "In other words, we depoliticized the whole meaning of the war. And insofar as it was captured, it was captured by the descendants of the Confederates."

Sons of Confederate Veterans, a group open to male descendants of veterans who served in the Confederate armed forces, boast 30,000 members across the Old South.

The Sons of the Union Veterans of the Civil War has 6,000 members.

Kevin Tucker, Massachusetts Department Commander for the Sons of the Union Veterans, said some Northern descendants don't even know they're related to Union veterans. "I found out after my father did some research and discovered that my great-great-grandfather had collected a Union pension," said Tucker, of Wakefield. "Until then, I had no idea."

Mark Simpson, 57, South Carolina commander of Sons of Confederate Veterans, said his family knew for generations about his great-great-grandfather's service in the Confederacy. "I visit his gravesite every year and put a flag down," Simpson said. "He is real to me."

Mintz said the North has another factor affecting its Civil War memory: immigration from Italy and Eastern Europe at the turn of the 20th century. He said those populations, and more recent immigrants, sometimes struggle to identify with that war compared to more contemporary ones.

Gas in 6 states, nation's capital tops $4 a gallon

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Add New York to the growing list of states where gas prices are topping $4 per gallon.

On Sunday, the Empire State became the sixth state to top $4 for the average price of a gallon of gas, joining Alaska, California, Connecticut, Hawaii and Illinois, according to AAA's Daily Fuel Gauge. The average price of gas also rose to more than $4 per gallon in Washington, D.C., on Saturday.

The next states to join the list could be Michigan, which has gas for $3.95 per gallon on average, and Indiana, where the average price is $3.94. Nevada, Washington and Wisconsin are close behind.

Hawaii has the highest price in the U.S. at $4.48 per gallon. Wyoming has the lowest, at $3.54.

The national average for gas has increased for 26 straight days, and is now at $3.83 per gallon. That's up 29 cents from a month ago. Retail surveys suggest motorists are reacting to higher prices now by buying less fuel. Still, the government expects pump prices to keep climbing this summer as vacationers take to the highways.

STAT OF THE DAY

The number of drivers in Sunday's NASCAR Sprint Cup series race to finish within .145 seconds of winner Jimmie Johnson.

AP photo

Jimmie Johnson (48) crosses the finish line slightly ahead of Clint Bowyer (33) to win the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series auto race at Talladega Superspeedway, Sunday in Talladega, Ala.

Johnson wins at Talladega by .002

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Jimmie Johnson won a Talladega two-step Sunday, edging Clint Bowyer by about a foot with a big push from Dale Earnhardt Jr.

The official margin was 0.002 seconds, tied for the closest finish in NASCAR Sprint Cup history.

The tag-team race came down to an eight-car sprint — actually, four pairs of cars — with only the guys at the front of the duos having a chance to win the Aaron's 499.

After laying back most of the day, five-time series champion Johnson came on strong at the end for his 54th career victory and first of the season.

"We were just the lucky guy at the end with a good run," Johnson said. "We had some big mo on our side, and off we went."

Coming out of the fourth turn, the No. 48 car dipped right next to the yellow line, surged past Hendrick Motorsports teammates Jeff Gordon and Mark Martin and got to the finish line just ahead of Bowyer in a four-wide dash down the long finishing straight at Talladega Superspeedway.

"What a bummer," said Bowyer, who led a race-high 38 laps. "I saw him coming."

Earnhardt, the fourth Hendrick driver, finished fourth and essentially gave up a chance to claim his first win since 2008 by deciding he was more comfortable pushing Johnson than getting pushed.

"I can't thank Junior enough," said Johnson, who gave Earnhardt the checkered flag as a reward for being such a team player. "He made the decision that my car was faster leading. And the way these things are finishing up, the lead car's going to get the win. In some respects, he was more worried about the team having a good performance than anything."

Kevin Harvick, who was Bowyer's pusher, wound up fifth. Carl Edwards almost got into the mix as well, going right up against the outside wall with Greg Biffle on his bumper but didn't have enough room to pull it off, finishing sixth.

Biffle was seventh, while Martin dropped back to eighth.

The finish matched the closest since NASCAR went to electronic timing — Ricky Craven edging Kurt Busch in 2003 at Darlington — and made up for a day of lackluster racing with this new tandem style, which the drivers began using at the season-opening Daytona 500 and really perfected at this 2.66-mile trioval.

Twenty-six leaders swapped the top spot 88 times, tying the record set in last year's spring race at Talladega. Many of those changes were carefully choreographed by pairs who were merely trying to stay out of trouble, conserve their cars and give themselves a chance at the end.

"If you didn't like that finish and forget about the race, there's something wrong with you," Bowyer said. "It always seems to fix itself at the end of these restrictor-plate races. We always have a hell of a finish."

Hendrick Motorsports claimed the first four spots in qualifying, only the third team in NASCAR history to sweep the first two rows in a Cup race. They were all right there at the end.

"With as crazy as it gets in these closing laps, sometimes a third is almost like a victory at these type of race tracks," Gordon said.

The finish overshadowed the mundane riding-around that came before it.

Rather than run together in huge drafting packs, which used to be the norm at the restrictor-plate tracks, the drivers figured out they can run even faster in pairs. So, everyone cut deals before the race, usually with teammates, and swapped radio frequencies so they could make changes on the fly if needed once the green flag dropped.

One guy in the pairing would run out front for a while, then they'd switch positions before the driver doing the

Oakley duo surging ahead in girls all-around

Times-News

Oakley cowgirls McKenzie Zollinger and Jacee Bedke continued their hot starts to the season over the weekend in Rupert.

Zollinger kept hot on Bedke's heels in the race for the top spot in the all-around standings in District VI.

Zollinger came into the weekend with four wins and left Rupert with four more individual titles, claiming victories on both nights in barrel racing and goat tying, and now trails Bedke by seven points. Bedke only has one event win on the season but has kept her edge courtesy of a bevy of Top 10 finishes, including no worse than fifth in any of the events won by Zollinger.

Both Bedke and Zollinger compete in five events and are also partners in team roping.

For the cowboys, Jade Wadsworth of Kimberly put an end to the four straight wins by Garrett Alger of Filer in steer wrestling with firsts on Friday and Saturday.

After finishing three straight weekends of rodeo, the cowboys and cowgirls of District VI will take this weekend off and return to action in Burley April 29-30.

Latham wins on last lap in MVS season opener

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

It's going to be Latham — no, wait, it's going to be Pohlman — or is it?

Bobby Latham III nudged Jeff Pohlman on the final lap of the Mr. Gas Late Models main event Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway, then completed the pass to win the showpiece race of the season opener.

Pohlman made a bold move to take the lead with two laps remaining in the race, but Latham had a move of his own still in reserve and brought it out on the final lap.

"I kind of felt him back there a few times," Latham said. "Then he got inside of me and just kind of muscled his way by, but I just stayed with him. Then it came down to the last lap I just kind of poked him back. He had been poking me all race but I got him just enough to get him out of the way and come home with the win."

Latham, a former Late Models Series champion, proved he hasn't forgotten how to drive in the series at MVS.

"I knew about the only way I was going to get by him was to put a nose to him and try and move him a little bit," Pohlman said. "I should have backed off a little bit after that and left him on the outside of me so when we went into the next corner he couldn't do what he did. But he did what he had to do and I did what I had to do. It was great race though, a lot of fun."

T.J. Woodhall placed third. Dan Pehrson was unable to start the main event race after suffering heavy damage to his car in the heat race when Enrique Contaras made a hard hit to the rear end of Pehrson's car.

The Budweiser Super Stocks race saw Kris McKean about to run off with the main event win until Casey Pehrson spun him in Turn 4 just before they were to take the white flag. The caution came out with McKean stalled on the track, and the race win was immediately awarded to Daniel Shirley, who was in third behind McKean and Pehrson.

For the Project Filer Streets Stocks, Kendall Woll made the comeback of the night to take the main event win. After spinning out early in the race, Woll charged into the lead at Lap 11 and Bobby Latham III (39) was able to get around Jeff Pohlman and back into the lead after nudging him out of the way on the final lap of the Mr. Gas Late Models main event race Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway.

Fox off to hot start in District V rodeo

Times-News

Darby Fox is at it again.

District V high school rodeo kicked off the season in Glens Ferry and it was no surprise that one of the local cowgirls that ended in the reserve spot last season already has put in a strong claim for the top all-around spot.

Competing in her home rodeo, Fox picked up points in all five during the weekend. Among those were four first place finishes — twice in pole-bending, once in barrel racing and once in team roping alongside Haillie Taylor of Hailey.

On the boys side, Garrett

Webb from Wendell was a double winner in calf roping, and Greyden Anderson of Jerome recorded the only time in steer wrestling of 16.77 seconds.

There were no qualified rides in either performance in bareback, saddle bronc or bull riding.

The district moves to Jerome this weekend, with a 7 p.m. start on Friday night and 5 p.m. on Saturday.

Pineda shines as Mariners snap losing skid

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Michael Pineda pitched six strong innings and Brendan Ryan had a two-run tiebreaking single as the Seattle Mariners snapped a four-game losing streak with a 3-2 win at Kansas City on Sunday.

Pineda (2-1) limited the Royals to one run and three hits over six innings. He struck out five and walked four while lowering his earned-run average to 2.33.

Jamey Wright pitched two hitless innings, while walking two. Brandon League gave up a run in the ninth on Wilson Betemit's single but finished for his third save.

Jeff Francis (0-1) is still searching for his first victory with the Royals. He was charged with three runs on six hits, while walking none and striking out one in 6 1-3 innings.

INDIANS 4, ORIOLES 2

CLEVELAND — Grady Sizemore homered in his return for Cleveland after major knee surgery, and the Indians gave the Orioles their seventh straight loss.

Sizemore, Cleveland's hustling All-Star center fielder and leadoff man, hadn't played since last May, when he was forced to have microfracture surgery on his left knee.

Carlos Santana and Travis Hafner also homered for the first-place Indians, who have won seven in a row at home and 11 of 13. Fausto Carmona (1-2) worked seven strong innings, allowing one earned run and five hits.

Chris Perez pitched a 1-2-3 ninth for his fifth save.

RED SOX 8, BLUE JAYS 1

BOSTON — Jacoby Ellsbury hit a three-run homer, Jarrod Saltalamacchia drove in three runs and Jon Lester pitched a solid six innings to carry the Red Sox.

The win gave Boston consecutive victories for the first time this season.

Lester (1-1) gave up one run, six hits and three walks while striking out five.

TWINS 4, RAYS 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Brian Duensing allowed two runs over seven innings, Matt Tolbert had an RBI triple and the Twins stopped a four-game losing streak.

Duensing (1-0) scattered seven hits, walked two and struck out five.

Jason Repko had an RBI single and Tolbert drove in a run with triple during a three-run fifth against Jeremy Hellickson (1-2).

ANGELS 4, WHITE SOX 2

CHICAGO — Dan Haren pitched into the seventh inning for his fourth win of the season, Maicer Izturis had three hits and the Angels completed a three-game sweep.

Haren (4-0) joined teammate Jered Weaver as the only four-game winners. The right-hander allowed two runs on seven hits over 6 1-3 innings, striking out six and not allowing a walk.

ATHLETICS 5, TIGERS 1

OAKLAND, Calif. —

Kansas City Royals shortstop Alcides Escobar (2) throws to first after forcing out Seattle Mariners baserunner Brendan Ryan (26) during the seventh inning of Sunday's game in Kansas City, Mo.

Trevor Cahill pitched eight solid innings, Josh Willingham broke out of a slump with a two-run single in the fifth and Oakland on its second straight at home.

YANKEES 6, RANGERS 5

NEW YORK — Eric Chavez, filling in for an ailing Alex Rodriguez, singled home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and the New York Yankees hit three homers off previously untouchable Alexi Ogando.

Robinson Cano, Russell Martin and Curtis Granderson all went deep to help the Yankees take two of three in an early rematch of last year's AL championship series, which Texas won in six games to capture its first pennant.

NATIONAL LEAGUE DODGERS 2, CARDINALS 1

LOS ANGELES — Matt Kemp hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning to end the Dodgers' five-game skid.

Kemp homered to center field on the first pitch he saw from Ryan Franklin (0-2). Andre Ethier led off with a double off Trevor Miller, extending his major league-leading hitting streak to 14 games.

PADRES 8, ASTROS 6

HOUSTON — Will Venable hit a two-run single in a four-run eighth inning and San Diego rallied for a victory.

Heath Bell got his 38th consecutive save the hard way. He loaded the bases with one out in the ninth and then got the last two batters on a strikeout and groundout.

PIRATES 7, REDS 6

CINCINNATI — Andrew McCutchen opened the game with a homer against slow-starting Edinson Volquez, then singled home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning, rallying Pittsburgh to a win over the Reds.

McCutchen and Jose Tabata started the game with back-to-back homers — only the third time that's happened in Pirates history. McCutchen singled off Logan Ondrusek (2-1) for the winning run.

ROCKIES 9, CUBS 5

DENVER — Dexter Fowler hit a two-out, two-run double to ignite a four-run eighth inning and Colorado won for the eighth time in nine games.

Marcos Mateo (0-1) gave up a leadoff single to Ryan Spillborghs to open the eighth. The Rockies snet 10 batters to the plate in the inning.

NATIONALS 8, BREWERS 4, 1ST GAME NATIONALS 5, BREWERS 1, 2ND GAME

WASHINGTON — Danny Espinosa followed up a three-run homer in the opening game with a bases-loaded triple in the seventh inning of the second to lead Washington to a double-header sweep.

In the opening game, Ivan Rodriguez also hit three-run homer and Jason Marquis pitched into the eighth inning.

DIAMONDBACKS 6, GIANTS 5, 12 INNINGS

PHOENIX — Stephen Drew drove in Justin Upton with one out in the 12th inning.

PHILLIES 3, MARLINS 2

PHILADELPHIA — Carlos Ruiz hit the go-ahead sacrifice fly in the eighth inning after an error by the Marlins defense.

Ryan Howard began the eighth by reaching on an error by left-fielder Logan Morrison. Ben Francisco followed with a single off Ryan Webb (0-2), and Raul Ibanez put runners on the corners with a groundout. Ruiz followed with a soft fly to center.

METS 3, BRAVES 2

ATLANTA — New York's new No. 2 hitter Josh Thole had two run-scoring singles, Dillon Gee came up from the minors to earn the win and the Mets ended their seven-game losing streak.

Canucks push defending champ Chicago to the brink

CHICAGO — Mikael Samuelsson scored the go-ahead goal in the third period, Roberto Luongo made 30 saves and the Vancouver Canucks moved within a victory of sweeping defending Stanley Cup champion Chicago, beating the Blackhawks 3-2 on Sunday night.

The Canucks, with the best record in the NHL during the regular season, lead the Western Conference first-round series 3-0 and can finish it off Tuesday night at the United Center.

Christian Ehrhoff and Daniel Sedin also scored for the Canucks, eliminated by the Blackhawks in the first round the previous two seasons.

Duncan Keith and Patrick Sharp had power-play goals for the Blackhawks, but it was a night of missed chances for Chicago. The Blackhawks had seven power-play opportunities overall, including a 5-on-3 in the first period when they led 1-0, but were turned away by Luongo and the Canucks' penalty kill.

Samuelsson, who missed Game 2 with an illness, scored on a second rebound at 6:48 of the third after a first attempt by Henrik Sedin went off goalie Corey Crawford.

RANGERS 3, CAPITALS 2

NEW YORK — Brandon Dubinsky broke a tie with 1:39 left and New York beat Washington to cut the Capitals' lead to 2-1 in the Eastern Conference series.

After the Rangers managed only one goal in two losses at Washington, Dubinsky, Vinny Prospal and Erik Christensen figured out young Capitals goalie Michal Neuvirth.

Henrik Lundqvist was sharp again, making 24 saves. New York got 35 shots through on Neuvirth after a combined 47 in the opening two games.

Alex Ovechkin had a goal and an assist, and Mike Knuble also scored for the Capitals.

Game 4 is in New York on Wednesday night.

PREDATORS 4, DUCKS 3

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Mike Fisher scored the go-ahead goal at 10:21 of the third period, and Nashville took advantage of Bobby Ryan sitting out the first of his two-game suspension by beating Anaheim to take a 2-1 lead in the Western Conference series.

The NHL suspended Ryan on Saturday for stomping Predators defenseman Jonathon Blum's foot late in the Ducks' 5-3 victory Friday night. Ryan also will miss Game 4 on Wednesday night in Nashville.

Martin Erat had a power-play goal and an assist, David Legwand and Jordin Tootoo also scored, and Ryan Suter had two assists for Nashville. Teemu Selanne scored twice, Matt Beleskey added a goal, and Corey Perry had two assists for Anaheim.

Upsets out West: Lakers, Spurs lose

LOS ANGELES — Chris Paul had 33 points, 14 assists and seven rebounds, and the New Orleans Hornets pulled away down the stretch, stunning the two-time defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers with a 109-100 victory in their playoff opener Sunday.

Carl Landry scored 17 points and Jarrett Jack added 15 for the seventh-seeded Hornets, who overcame Los Angeles' major size advantage with a phenomenal game from Paul. The star playmaker scored 17 points in the fourth quarter, leading a late 8-0 run.

Kobe Bryant scored 34 points for the Lakers, who opened the postseason with the same halfhearted effort that comprised much of their regular season after three straight exhausting trips to the NBA finals.

Game 2 is Wednesday at Staples Center.

GRIZZLIES 101, SPURS 98

SAN ANTONIO — Zach Randolph had 25 points and 14 rebounds, Shane Battier hit the go-ahead 3-pointer with 23.9 seconds left, and Memphis earned the first playoff victory in franchise history.

Randolph, who scored nine in the fourth quarter and punished San Antonio under the basket, might have saved his hardest contact for a chest bump with Mike Conley after the final buzzer. The Grizzlies bench spilled onto the court, waving towels and leaping back into the locker room.

San Antonio had a chance to force overtime, but Richard Jefferson missed an open 3-pointer as time expired. Tony Parker led the Spurs with 20 points, but they sorely missed All-Star Manu Ginobili, who continued to rest his sprained right elbow.

CELTICS 87, KNICKS 85

BOSTON — Ray Allen hit a go-ahead 3-pointer with 12 seconds left, Paul Pierce shut down Carmelo Anthony and the Boston Celtics rallied to beat the New York Knicks.

New York led 85-84 before Anthony was called for an offensive foul for pushing Pierce with 21 seconds remaining. Allen, who led the Celtics with 24 points, sank the decisive basket from beyond the left arc.

The Knicks then rushed downcourt and Anthony missed a long 3-point attempt with 2 seconds left. The superstar forward went 1 for 11 from the field in the second half.

THUNDER 107, NUGGETS 103

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Durant scored 41 points, Russell Westbrook had two crucial late baskets among his 31 points and the Oklahoma City Thunder pulled out the win.

The Thunder leaned heavily on their two All-Stars, who both scored their most points in the postseason.

Westbrook had the go-ahead jumper from the right side with 1:06 left, as several Nuggets looked for it to be waved off with several hands near the rim anxious for a tip-in. Kenyon Martin then missed a jumper from the left wing before Westbrook struck again to make it 104-101 with 22.4 seconds left.

Rookie Steele wins Texas Open by one shot

SAN ANTONIO — Rookie Brendan Steele shot a 1-under 71 on Sunday, overcoming relentless wind and fellow first-year PGA Tour player Kevin Chappell to win the Texas Open by a stroke.

The leader by one heading into the final round, the 28-year-old Steele stayed steady throughout the day, and finished at 8-under. He gave a small fist pump, then thrust his arm downward and smiled broadly to celebrate his first Tour victory.

"I was a lot more calm today," Steele said. "When you've got the one shot lead it's not even your tournament. There's so many guys that could still win with a good round, without you even doing anything wrong, that I didn't feel as much pressure."

The tournament featured the Tour's highest scoring average, 73.665, so far this year and Steele's 280 overall was the highest winning score at the Texas Open since a 283 won the 1934 edition.

COOK WINS OUTBACK PRO-AM IN PLAYOFF

LUTZ, Fla. — John Cook birdied a playoff hole to win the Outback Stea-house Pro-Am on Sunday, edging Jay Don Blake.

Cook, who shot 9-under for the tournament, picked up his second Champions Tour win this season after winning the Mitsubishi Electric Championship at Hualalai in January. He had a two-stroke lead over Blake before posting a double bogey on the 18th hole after Blake birdied.

His second shot into the water forced Cook to drop, and a two-putt gave him a 6 on the par-4 18th.

MANASSERO WINS MALAYSIAN OPEN

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — Italian teenager Matteo Manassero eagled the par-5 10th hole Sunday to rally for a one-shot win over Frenchman Gregory Bourdy at the Malaysian Open.

Two days before his 18th birthday, Manassero shot a 4-under 68 to finish with a 16-under total of 272.

Bourdry had eight birdies in a 67 that also included a double bogey and a bogey.

Rory McIlroy settled for third, two shots back, after he had a double bogey on 12 and a bogey on the final hole to finish with a 69. McIlroy had led after the second round as he tried to bounce back from his Masters collapse.

Martin Kaymer, the world's top-ranked player, was eight shots back in a tie for ninth while Masters champion Charl Schwartzel finished another stroke behind after a 70.

pushing overheated his car.

The most important thing was staying together. During an early pit stop, Johnson stayed in a little longer to make some adjustments on his car. Earnhardt just idled in his box, waiting to go back out with his partner.

Of course, bumping cars from behind and pulling off choreographed switches at 190 mph didn't always go smoothly — especially when the second driver in a tandem can't see a thing.

Busch can attest to that. He twice got into cars while pushing, totally blind to what was going on in front of him.

First, the No. 22 car nudged the rear bumper of Landon Cassill's machine on lap 28, sending him into Brian Vickers, whose car smashed into the outer wall at the start of the backstretch. Fortunately, Vickers entirely missed a wave of cars bearing down on his sliding vehicle.

Busch was at the center of things again on the second crash of the day. He appeared to clip Brad Keselowski from behind when the lead car slowed, sparking a five-car melee that also took out Daytona 500 winner Trevor Bayne, David Ragan, Marcus Ambrose and Kasey Kahne.

"Just one of those deals here at Talladega," Keselowski said.

"I just got on the wrong end of it."

Kahne tried to nurse his smoking car back to pit road, but finally had to bring it to a stop and hustle out.

"The car just got some flames in the back because of the oil, I guess," he said. "I sucked up a little bit of black smoke, but that was it. I stink, too!"

The 20-year-old Bayne had another disappointing finish since his improbable Daytona win in just his second Cup start. The youngster hasn't finished higher than 17th since then.

He certainly had a car that was strong enough to contend at Talladega, qualifying a career-best 11th and running up front three times for five laps.

"I thought we were kind of out of harm's way there but, obviously, we weren't far enough back out of it," Bayne said.

Another Busch, Kurt's little brother Kyle, was taken out in a third wreck that was a virtual copy of the first two. Joey Logano bumped the No. 18 car, sending it spinning hard into Matt Kenseth and taking out two other cars, as well.

"So much is out of your hands here," Kenseth said. "It's a frustrating type of racing, to say the least. It would be nice to be able to see and control your own destiny a little more."

“Sometimes, bipartisanship is not so good.”

Just how are Luna’s reforms workable for small districts?

If you’re a school board member or an administrator in, say, Dietrich, Bliss, Richfield or Wendell, you’ll be acutely interested in the State Board of Education meeting scheduled for Friday in Moscow. Because what the trustees do there will have a lot to say about how — or if — small Idaho school districts can do their jobs.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s education reform package, passed by the Legislature and signed by Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter, has scrambled the way local school districts get state funding.

Our view: In Idaho, local school districts get paid for every day students show up for class. What happens when they don’t? What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Under the old system, a school district got paid for every day one student attended one class. No more.

In Luna’s brave new world, If a student takes online courses at home, the district won’t be compensated for those hours.

That’s a problem. How are small districts supposed to keep the lights on the teachers paid, and still adapt to the high-tech changes being mandated by Luna’s “Students Come First” initiative?

The board has only a few months to determine how many online courses will be mandated, and some members were less than pleased to hear Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s recent pronouncement that his opening bid would be four online classes required for graduation from high school.

Not, we think, until some fundamental issues are resolved.

Average Daily Attendance, the metric that allows Idaho school districts to function, no longer makes sense in a system in which students can take online courses over which the district has no control but for which they still must pay.

What happens, for example, if all 316 students at Wendell High take four online classes? And then eight? And then 12, or 15? And as a consequence, let’s say half of those students don’t turn up at school two or three days a week.

That’s an existential question for small Idaho school districts, and one that Luna hasn’t addressed convincingly. Which means the State Board of Education must.

Luna’s education reform package is a nice theory that became a law less than three months after it was proposed. Nobody, so far, has tended to the details.

Make 70 the new 65

It’s time for a 21st-century retirement age. If 40 is the new 20 and 50 is the new 30, why shouldn’t 70 be the new 65? The last time Washington politicians tinkered ever so gingerly with the government-sanctioned retirement age, Ronald Reagan was in office and Generation X-ers were all in diapers. Since then, American life expectancy has increased by half a decade and continues to rise — while the “traditional” retirement age (established eight decades ago) has only recently begun phasing up to 67 and the official “early” retirement age (established four decades ago) remains stuck at 62.

There is simply no good reason 21st-century workers should operate under obsolete 1930s-era expectations and 1970s rules. We’re living longer, working longer and, in general, holding down jobs that are far less physically taxing than those of previous generations.

The reasons we should update these relics of our teetering federal entitlement programs are myriad. Demographic, actuarial and fiscal realities demand it. As powerless blue-ribbon entitlement reform panels have warned for years, the number of younger workers supporting Social Security beneficiaries is dwindling. It’s a global phenomenon. The Economist magazine reports that, based on declining fertility rates, “by 2050 there will be just 2.6 American workers supporting each pensioner and the figures for France, Germany and Italy will be 1.9, 1.6 and 1.5 respectively.”

This amounts to a budget-busting wealth transfer scheme whose lousy “investments” cannot be sustained unless basic structural reforms are made. Shared sacrifice means that every able-bodied worker — including federal employees and elected officials — must get with the times. Americans can no longer feel entitled to some 20 to 30 years of subsidized retirement, often collected over the course of many more years than retirees actually spent paying into the system.

Raising the traditional and early retirement ages will mean extending workers’ taxable earning years, fueling economic growth and putting a dent in our unfunded-liabilities crisis by delaying payouts. Some senior citizens’ lobbying groups fret that today’s workforce wouldn’t be able to handle longer careers. Tell that to Betty White or Joan Rivers or Helen Mirren.

More to the point, as domestic policy analyst Andrew Biggs of the American Enterprise Institute observes, “Perhaps the best evidence that future Americans can work longer is that past Americans did: Despite poorer health, shorter lives and more strenuous jobs, in 1950 the typical individual did not claim Social Security until age 68.5. In 1950, more than 20 percent of Americans worked in physically demanding jobs; today only about 8 percent do. While today’s technology-driven service economy places demands on older workers, it is hard to imagine that things were easier when Americans typically worked on farms or in factories.”

This week, after rejecting the austerity measures of his own blue-ribbon fiscal responsibility panel last fall and attacking serious GOP attempts to address the impending bankruptcy of both Social Security and Medicare, President Obama will unveil his entitlement reform package. Yep, Barrycome-lately and his teleprompter are ambling down the grim-rose path. The main feature of the president’s “bold” plan? Higher taxes on the nation’s top wealth producers and earners. Translation: Same old, same old class-warfare cowardice.

For their part, both Republican House Speaker John Boehner and House Minority

Whip Steny Hoyer, wary of incurring the wrath of senior voters, have tiptoed, pirouetted and backtracked on updating the retirement age. They’ve promised to put “everything on the table” now — as long as everyone agrees later to kick the can down the road. Again.

As many entitlement reformers have noted, the very first American to benefit from Social Security, Ida May Fuller, collected nearly $23,000 in government pension benefits after paying in less than $25. At the rate we’re going now, my kids and the Obamas’ kids will never see a dime of what they are forced to put in. They’ll already be waist-deep in the red as they enter their prime earning years. A truly modern government pension plan would follow the private sector by moving from a defined benefits plan to a defined contributions system — and by injecting free-market competition to improve returns.

Instead, we are dooming a generation of reverse Ida May Fullers who have no choice on where best to “invest” their automatically confiscated payroll taxes. The dawdlers and demagogues in Washington aren’t “winning the future.” They’re robbing it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Lack of integrity evident in Lawrence Denney

Speaker of the House Lawrence Denney made a stupid mistake when he gave the axe to Rep. Tom Trail of Moscow and Rep. Leon Smith of Twin Falls. Smith and Trail know more about agriculture and transportation than Denney and his sidekick, Rep. Mike Moyle of Star, could possibly ever know. Smith served many years on the Transportation Board.

This is another example of Lawrence Denny’s childish, spiteful and mean-spirited ways. When Denney all but pardoned his buddy and tax cheat Phil Hart, he showed the citizens of the state about his total lack of integrity. It is agree with him or hit the road. What an outrage!

PENNY GLENN STUBBS
Nampa

Leon Smith followed his conscience with vote

In firing Leon Smith from his position as chairman of the Transportation Committee, Speaker Denney said he doesn’t tell members how to vote but he expects them to support the party’s position on procedural matters.

Nice bit of denial there, but the truth of the matter is that supporting the party on procedural matters can and often does determine whether a measure will make it to the floor for the vote he says he doesn’t tell anyone how to make. If the party doesn’t want a measure to make it through, procedural matters can stop it cold, so if the party requires support on procedure what is really happening is that it very much is telling members how to vote. It just happens a tad before the measure can come to a vote on the floor.

Leon Smith committed the grievous sin of following his conscience and acting in the best interests of the citizens of this state rather than those of the party. He did not think inside the little narrow box that is party ideology and for his troubles got fired. This is quite a badge of honor for Mr. Smith.

Perhaps now that we have closed primaries, Speaker

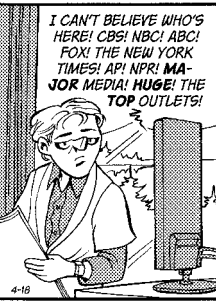

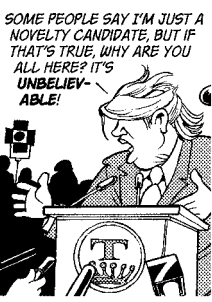

Denney and his cohorts can find a way to purge the party of we Republicans who, like Leon Smith, dare to think independently, so the party can rely on only a “pure” vote during primaries. He purged Leon Smith, surely he can find a way to purge the rest of us. Perhaps a loyalty oath from members at large before they can become registered voters will do the trick.

In the meantime, having received a ringing endorsement from Speaker Denney, Leon Smith is assured of my vote in the next primary and general elections should he run. It is to be hoped that he does; he is a rare breath of fresh air in an otherwise hidebound party.

13 killed in Syrian protests after Assad vows reform

By Tara Bahrampour
The Washington Post

BEIRUT — Protests in Syria turned violent Sunday night when security forces shot at demonstrators in two towns, killing at least 13 people and detaining many more, activists said.

The shootings came at the end of a day in which thousands of people took to the streets in towns and cities across Syria, calling for an end to President Bashar al-Assad's regime, a day after he vowed to lift emergency laws that have been in place for almost 50 years.

Nine people were killed in and around the central city of Homs, where security forces opened fire without warning in two areas, said Razan Zeitouneh, a human rights activist and lawyer who talked to witnesses there.

"The army suddenly started to shoot the people," she said, adding that the victims included mourners at a funeral for a demonstrator killed the day before. "There was no use of fire or anything by the people. We talked to many eyewitnesses, and they were peaceful protests."

In the coastal city of Latakia, four people were killed after protesters attempted to take over a main square, said Wissam Tarif, director of Insan, a human rights organization, including two who doctors said had been shot in the head and one who was beaten.

"First, security shot in the air," said Tarif, whose organization used satellite phones to talk with witnesses after mobile phone communication was shut down in some parts of Syria. "Then snipers took out people from a distance. Security used electrifying tools, sticks and beating people with rifles on the head."

Hospitals in both cities were packed with injured people and families looking for missing loved ones, he said, adding that his organization had confirmed 86 arrests and expected the numbers of detainees to be in the hundreds.

Tarif said that security forces were also detaining wounded people in hospitals and that one doctor was arrested on suspicion of speaking to the media by phone. Independent confirmation of the events was impossible, as members of the foreign media have been expelled from Syria.

Demonstrations also took place in the cities of Aleppo, Daraa and Banyias.

The violence, which occurred on the 65th anniversary of Syria's independence from French rule, came as protesters nationwide chanted "freedom, freedom" and "The people want to topple the regime." Protesters say their demands have evolved from asking for reforms to demanding the president's ouster.

The demonstrations occurred despite Assad's promise on Saturday that the emergency laws would be replaced by a new set of statutes.

Ivory Coast warlord admits heavy toll in battle for capital

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — A renegade warlord who began the battle to wrest Ivory Coast's commercial capital from soldiers who fired rockets and mortars on a poor neighborhood said Sunday that a lack of military coordination cost too many lives, infrastructure damage and unnecessary looting.

Ibrahim Coulibaly, whose so-called "Invisible Commando" suddenly emerged two months ago to fight soldiers loyal to strongman Laurent Gbagbo, denied rumors his fighters might challenge the authority of the government installed at the cost of thousands of deaths and injuries.

In an exclusive interview Sunday with The Associated Press, he called himself a general, used his nickname IB, and pledged his allegiance to democratically elected President Alassane Ouattara.

Gen. Ibrahim Coulibaly, known as IB, is seen during an interview in the PK18 neighborhood of Abobo district, Abidjan, Ivory Coast Sunday.

has interviewed witnesses who say the contrary, including two residents and two fighters involved in the incident. "It was a mini-battle that went on overnight from March 31 to April 1. There were a lot of bodies but I don't know how many of us died," one of the commanders said.

Pro-Ouattara forces had seized the state television station, a symbol of Gbagbo's power that had been broadcasting hate speech, when Coulibaly arrived with his men, one commander said. He said Coulibaly wanted to broadcast a message announcing he was taking power at the head of a transitional military government, and that caused the shooting.

The infighting among pro-Ouattara forces allowed Gbagbo's soldiers to retake the station on April 1 and it was back on the air April 2.

On March 31, everyone was saying that Gbagbo could last only a few more hours after tens of thousands of soldiers deserted him. Gbagbo was not arrested until April 11.

His comments come as many still are celebrating Gbagbo's capture, by pro-Ouattara forces not including Coulibaly's, and now must start the difficult task of rebuilding, starting with that of a national army including former Gbagbo and Ouattara forces. There are fears that old rivalries put aside while different groups had a common cause in toppling Gbagbo may now come to a head.

Coulibaly dismissed that thought: "It's true there have been problems but I think the time has come to get together to rebuild this new army to allow President Ouattara to better govern the country."

He said Ivory Coast needs reconciliation and healing and pointed to South Africa as an example to learn from.

"There are so many stories, tales, lies and rumors," he complained.

Misery in Misrata becomes symbolic of Libyan civil war

By Ned Parker and Patrick J. McDonnell
Los Angeles Times

MISURATA, Libya — The doctors rushed through a white outdoor tent where several pale, bloodied men were being operated on. Inside the Hikma hospital, a similar scene prevailed.

One patient, blood dripping from his mouth, was being propped up by two companions. Nearby rooms were packed with seemingly catonic men, their faces swollen and bruised.

Seventeen people had died on Sunday in Misurata, the doctors said, many of them victims of rocket attacks from government forces loyal to longtime Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi. The doctors called it a relatively quiet day, one with no roaring battles.

Still, the civilian death toll had increased once more in this besieged rebel-held western Libyan city, which has been attacked repeatedly by Gadhafi's forces for much of the two months since protests began against his ruthless four-decade rule.

The misery in Misurata, Libya's third-largest city, has become symbolic of the civil war splitting Gadhafi loyalists and rebel forces, who have established their de facto capital in the eastern city of Benghazi.

If the rebels keep Misurata, they hold the major port in western Libya and block the leading coastal highway connecting the nation's capital, Tripoli, to Gadhafi's home region of Serte. A rebel-held Misurata thwarts any chance for Gadhafi to cling to power by pushing for a future partition between eastern and western Libya.

Yet despite international airstrikes to protect civilians from Gadhafi's forces, the fighting in Misurata continues, a war of attrition, one with painful costs for the city's residents and migrant workers who have been unable to flee.

Rockets and missiles from Gadhafi's forces have pounded the city in recent days. The locals accuse Gadhafi loyalists of, among other things, lobbing cluster bombs.

On Sunday, more than 50 Libyan families blocked the road to the port demanding they be evacuated along with 900 migrant workers, no longer able to take the daily mayhem. The street by the port is called the road of death because of the unceasing rocket fire. Up to 40 people were killed waiting on a breadline near the port last week, according to local residents.

Misurata officials said they understood that some here could no longer take the daily attacks. "There are a growing number of people who'd like to (leave)," said rebel spokesman Saddoun El Misrati.

International relief officials on a boat preparing to dock in Misurata on Sunday delayed its arrival for hours out of fear that pandemonium would erupt at the port among those seeking to flee.

International Organization for Migration official Jeremy Halsam, supervising the departure of migrant workers, said that the exodus is still largely one of foreigners; but that could change at any moment.

"Everyone has their breaking point," he warned, "their trigger that makes them say this is enough."

At night, the electricity here is cut, and streets are pitch black. Incoming rockets momentarily light the roadways and a deadening boom follows.

One man driving through the streets late Sunday called Misurata "the city of the dead." Another worried aloud what would happen if too many residents flee. "If we leave, then there is no one to protect the town," said Ali Hanousi.

Every few blocks, groups of men, many of them in their early 20s, manned checkpoints near sand-filled barriers, which are aimed to absorb the force of rockets. The men searched cars for suspected Gadhafi loyalists.

Some got through anyway. At 6 p.m., a car rushed by the Hikma hospital, spraying gunfire before speeding off.

Japanese government under fire over disaster plan

By Ravi Nessman
and Yuri Kageyama
Associated Press

TOKYO — A blueprint for ending radiation leaks and stabilizing reactors at Japan’s crippled nuclear plant drew a lackluster response Monday, as polls showed diminishing public support for the government’s handling of the country’s recent disasters.

The plan issued by Tokyo Electric Power Co. over the weekend, in response to a government order, is meant to be a first step toward letting some of the tens of thousands of evacuees from near the company’s Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power plant return to their homes.

Those forced to flee due to radiation leaks after a catastrophic earthquake and tsunami on March 11 knocked out the plant’s power and cooling systems are frustrated that their exile will not end soon. And officials acknowledge that unforeseen complications, or even another natural disaster, could set that timetable back even further.

“Well, this year is lost,” said Kenji Matsueda, 49, who is living in an evacuation center in Fukushima after being forced from his home 12 miles from the plant. “I have no idea what I will do. Nine months is a long time. And it could be longer. I don’t think they really know.”

Pressure has been building on the government and TEPCO to resolve Japan’s worst-ever nuclear power accident, with opposition leaders urging Prime Minister Naoto Kan to resign.

“Japan has never before faced a crisis like this. We are doing our utmost,” Kan said in response to criticism Monday in Japan’s parliament.

Polls by several Japanese national newspapers released Monday showed widespread dissatisfaction, with more than two-thirds of Japanese unhappy with how Kan’s administration has dealt with the nuclear crisis.

“Nothing concrete,” said a headline in the Mainichi newspaper of the plan. “The nuclear timetable does not show enough consideration for the residents,” said the Nihon Keizai, a financial newspaper.

A majority of those surveyed in the polls by the Mainichi, Nihon Keizai and Asahi newspapers expressed support, though, for tax increases to pay for reconstruction of areas devastated by the tsunami.

Goshi Hosono, an adviser to the prime minister and member of his nuclear crisis management task force, said the government would closely monitor TEPCO’s implementation of its crisis plan and hoped it could be carried out ahead of schedule.

The timetable’s first step focuses on cooling the reac-

Shinya Yamaguchi and his son Naohiro, 2 months old, evacuees from the March 11 tsunami, pose next to cherry blossoms Sunday in Natori, Miyagi Prefecture, Japan.

tors and spent fuel pools, reducing radiation leaks and decontaminating water that has become radioactive, within three months. The second step, for within six to nine months, is to bring the release of radioactive materials fully under control, achieve a cold shutdown of the reactors and cover the buildings, possibly with a form of industrial cloth.

Nuclear safety officials described the plan as “realistic,” but acknowledged there could be setbacks.

“Given the conditions now, this is best that it could do,” said Hidehiko Nishiyama of the government’s Nuclear and Industrial Safety Agency, adding that conditions at the facility remain unstable.

Explosions, fires and other malfunctions have hindered efforts to repair the stricken plant and stem radiation leaks.

“There is no shortcut to resolving these issues. Though it will be difficult, we have to go step by step to resolve these problems,” he said.

Even with the announcement of the timeline, it remained unclear when evacuees might be able to return home.

The area would need to be decontaminated, including removing and replacing the soil, Nishiyama said.

Hosono said the evacuees would not have to stay in gymnasiums for such a long period, but would be moved into temporary housing.

Some evacuees were unswayed by TEPCO’s plan.

“I don’t believe a word they say,” said Yukio Otsuka, 56, a private school owner whose home is about three miles from the power plant. “I don’t trust them. I don’t believe it is possible. We have really drawn the short stick on this one.”

8 NATO troops killed in Afghanistan

Los Angeles Times

KABUL, Afghanistan — In one of the deadliest days for foreign forces in Afghanistan this year, eight NATO troops were killed in three separate incidents Saturday, authorities said.

Three died in two separate bomb attacks in the south, according to NATO statements. The nationalities of those killed were not immediately released.

Earlier in the day, five NATO service members and four Afghan soldiers were killed in a suicide attack by a Taliban bomber who dressed like an Afghan soldier to infiltrate a joint Afghan-U.S. base on the edge of the eastern province of Laghman.

A Taliban spokesman said the group plans to target Afghan officials, including security forces, allied with NATO and the U.S.

Attacks by insurgents wearing Afghan security forces uniforms are not uncommon, but the death toll from such attacks has not been as high recently.

For many generations, menopause was as shrouded in mystery as anything else related to the female reproductive system — even friends would dance around the topic while they offered a sympathetic ear.

Today, menopause is an afternoon on "Oprah," on the covers of popular women's magazines, even joked about in those cubicle printouts that proclaim, "It's not a hot flash, it's a power surge!"

"It was one of those things that people didn't look forward to, so they didn't talk about it," said Carol Penagos of Hailey. "Now we're opening up about the alternatives, and it's so much easier to go through."

She had a difficult time with menopause, often having five or 10 hot flashes every day that left her red-faced and dripping with sweat. She would get irritable, snapping at her husband when he didn't understand. "It was like, get away from me, I don't want to be around anybody. Your body's changing so much that there's pain, then there's seclusion, low self-esteem, all of that was going on."

Penagos, 51, used hormone replacement therapy for several years until the symptoms started easing. Jenny Stireman, a nurse practitioner in the OB/GYN department of St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center, said patients like Penagos have benefited from therapeutic advances showing that smaller doses of hormones are still effective, with fewer of the side effects associated with them in the past.

Stireman recently held a seminar called "Menopause and Marvelous" that encouraged women to look at their body changes as a natural progression to a new, exciting stage of life.

"I think of it like puberty, just at the other end of the spectrum," Stireman said. "In the media, it seems like women have always looked at menopause like, 'I'm getting old and it's the end of me.' Now that our life span runs into the 80s, I'm

A FEW THINGS TO TRY

Although the exact mechanism of menopause is undetermined, medical professionals do know certain things that can trigger or worsen the symptoms.

- Avoid red wine and caffeine, and try to maintain a healthy body weight — which can be difficult because of a menopausal woman's slowing metabolism. Whether you're losing weight or not, exercise can also reduce severity of symptoms.
- Consider natural alternatives, like the over-the-counter herbal medication Estroven, regular yoga, acupuncture or acupressure, and eat lots of products made from soy, which contains natural estrogens, said nurse practitioner Jenny Stireman.
- Don't be reluctant to check out hormone replacement therapy if other alternatives are not helping you. "The idea that all hormones are bad is probably the biggest misconception," said Dr. Don Smith, OB/GYN. He noted that treatments today are relying on lower doses of medication. "There's no real new therapies, (but) the pendulum has swung to less is better."

FREE DAY:

Times-News reporter Melissa Davlin reaches for a rope on the Lily Pad obstacle course, part of the College of Southern Idaho's ropes course, in 2010.

Ropes course offers high-flying workout

Times-News

Here's a free chance to get up in the air.

The College of Southern Idaho's recreation department is inviting anyone to experience CSI's Ropes Challenge Course — as much or as little as they want — from 1 to 7 p.m. May 7.

The course, east of CSI's Child Care Center on Frontier Field Road, consists of numerous elements low to the ground, as well as high elements. All participants who choose the latter work with trained facilitators and are fastened at all times by ropes looped through overhead pulleys to prevent falls.

Course facilitator Ted Keyes organized the public event as a way for more people to know what the ropes course is all about. One of the largest of its kind in the western U.S., it has been developed and expanded over the past 10 years to help people challenge themselves, work better as teams, overcome their fears and have fun.

The free day is first-come, first-served, and facilitators say they'll accommodate as many people as they can work with safely.

'Ride the Rails' for fun and fitness in Shoshone

Times-News

Since mid-January, participants in the North Side Fitness Challenge have lost 684 pounds. To celebrate, they're inviting the public to walk in their "Run the Rails" fun run on April 30.

Lincoln County Community Health is hosting the event, which has various local sponsors.

The 5K run/walk is the finale of the 16-week North Side Fitness Challenge. The fun run is not timed, and the route winds its way through historical downtown Shoshone.

"Our program is not about competing; it's about meeting personal fitness goals. We want people to finish the route — we don't care if it takes 20 minutes or three hours," Reena Josoff of Lincoln County Community Health said in a press release. "We'll be there to cheer them on."

Participants in the North Side Fitness Challenge are pre-registered for the fun run, but others need to register. For a form, stop by Shoshone Family Medical Center on Apple Street in Shoshone or call Rachelle Livingston at 320-3174. Or register the morning of the race.

Registration begins at 9 a.m. April 30 at the Lincoln County Community Center. Cost is $15 for ages 5-12, and $20 for ages 13 and older. That includes a T-shirt for completing the route. Youth must be accompanied by adult participants.

Flag football or fighter fitness: choices around the clock

Times-News

Here's your chance to sample new ways to move.

A "24 Hours of Fitness" marathon — put on by College of Southern Idaho's physical education and recreation department — will raise money for CSI's Relay for Life team, which benefits the American Cancer Society.

Organizer Scott Rogers has lined up instructors who will teach 24 one-hour sessions starting at midnight April 29 in the CSI Gym and Recreation Center. A few examples: spinning, a Zumba dance party, indoor flag football, yoga, strength training, fighter fitness and family fun fitness.

The event also raises awareness of some of the activities people can do at the CSI Rec Center, Rogers said.

The cost to participate? Whatever you want to donate to the Relay for Life team.

The "24 Hours of Fitness" marathon is open to the public. Information: Rogers at srogers@csi.edu or 732-6470.

'Everyone' wants a pill for some z's

By Leslie Tamura
The Washington Post

With almost a third of Americans reporting sleep problems, it's not surprising that sales of Ambien, Sonata and similar sleep aids are high: It's a $1.8 billion market.

Pharmacists filled close to 48 million prescriptions for such non-benzodiazepines — or "Z drugs," so nicknamed because most of their chemical names start with the letter Z — in 2009, according to health-care research company IMS Health. That's more than twice as many as were filled in 2002.

"Everyone is looking for something to help them sleep," said Lawrence Epstein, an instructor at Harvard Medical School and medical director of Sleep HealthCenters, a network of medical centers and clinics for people with sleep disorders.

Z drugs — Ambien was the first to reach the U.S. market, in 1992 — are less likely to cause dependency and side effects than the older generation of benzodiazepines such as Ativan and Dalmane. Both classes of drugs activate the neurotransmitter that induces sleep, the gamma-aminobutyric acid (GABA) receptor complex.

But the benzodiazepines also relax muscles and reduce anxiety — effects that can be beneficial but have the potential to cause respiratory failure and other muscle-related problems. And they often left users feeling drowsy for hours after awakening.

Z drugs are more targeted; designed to activate a specific part of the GABA complex, they get you to sleep with fewer concerns about dependency and side effects.

Analysts expect patients to use more prescription sleep aids as generic versions of Z drugs continue to emerge.

A generic, less expensive form of Ambien (zolpidem tartrate) went on the market in 2005 and instantly "became a 'best-buy' drug from a safety, effectiveness and affordability point of view," said Jon Schommer, a professor at the University of Minnesota's College of Pharmacy in Minneapolis. In October 2010, a generic version of Ambien CR was introduced. Generic Lunesta is expected to hit the market next year.

Most Z drugs get you to sleep in less than an hour, according to the 2008 Consumer Reports Best Buy Drugs analysis, and their effects last at least four hours. Market leaders Ambien, Ambien CR and Lunesta can sustain sleep as long as six to eight hours. Epstein said both new and old classes of sleep aids add only 20 to 30 minutes to a night's sleep, on average, but even that amount makes most people feel more rested.

If you take one of these aids, doctors recommend you go to bed immediately and allow enough time to rest. After actor John Stamos appeared to be drunk on an Australian talk show in June 2007, he said he had taken a morning dose of Ambien to help with his jet lag.

"Now I know that Ambien is an eight-hour sleeping pill, so if you take it, you better get eight hours' sleep," Stamos told TV Guide.

The Food and Drug Administration has approved Ambien and Sonata for short-term treatment of insomnia, up to five weeks. Lunesta and Ambien CR are approved for long-term use, up to six months.

None of the Z drugs have been studied or FDA-approved for use longer than six months.

Sleep medications "are best used for a short-term intervention (for patients) where you can break their cycle, reset their sleep pattern and get them back on a more appropriate schedule," Epstein said.

With short-term use under the direction of a clinician, sleep aids should not cause big problems, Epstein said, but dependency and withdrawal effects remain concerns.

When patients stop taking sleeping pills, doctors say, they should do so gradually because they could experience "rebound insomnia," where their sleep problems get worse than they were before.

And patients should be aware that the most effective tactic is to attack whatever physical or emotional problems are causing sleeplessness.

"Sleeping pills are not going to cure you," said Charles Cutler, an internist in Norristown, Pa. "It's not like a shot of penicillin and you move on with your life."

"The overwhelming percent of patients with sleep disturbances have emotional concerns that are bothering them and keeping them awake," Cutler said. "There may be other things going on in your life that we have to fix."

Cutler says he feels comfortable prescribing sleep aids only when he has talked with patients about a variety of possible causes for their insomnia: an old mattress, watching television before sleep, sleep apnea, weight gain, financial strain, relationship problems, etc.

"We live in a society where people want sort of quick answers and quick solutions to sometimes complicated problems," Cutler said. "Sleeping pills are a short-term Band-Aid."

How to keep your joints healthy throughout your life

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

Even youngish joints can feel creaky and painful without proper care. Luckily, lifestyle changes can help you stay active longer. “With an average life expectancy of more than 70 years, it’s more important than ever for us to protect our bodies,” says Dr. Kevin Bonner, an orthopedic surgeon who practices at

Sentara Leigh Hospital in Norfolk, Va. Some tips:

- Stay fit. Strong muscles help keep joints stable and decrease stress on cartilage, or connective tissue. Vary workouts to include both cardiovascular and strength-training.
- Maintain a healthy weight. Every extra pound puts six to seven times that amount of pressure on your knees. That can destroy cartilage and result in painful bone-on-bone contact.

- Focus on posture. Slouching while sitting or standing leads to uneven weight distribution that can strain ligaments and muscles, according to the Mayo Clinic.
- Avoid damaging activities. People at high risk for arthritis may want to limit high-impact exercises (moves where both feet leave the ground at once). Former athletes who have suffered knee ligament tears, for example, may benefit more from low-impact workouts such as swimming and biking. If you’re experiencing knee pain, also avoid deep squats and lunges.

- Don’t overdo exercise. Never increase workout lengths by more than 10 percent per week. If you run 10 miles one week, don’t try to do 20 the next — make it 11.
- Learn proper form. Consult a coach or trainer at least once, particularly with activities requiring repetitive motions such as tennis, golf and weightlifting.

- Don’t skip your warm-up. Tight muscles around a joint increase injury risk. Stretch after workouts, too.
- Seek treatment. Don’t wait too long to consult a doctor about chronic joint pain or declining range of motion. You may suffer irreversible damage.

Menopause

periods for a year, is 51, Stireman said — and they’re reporting back to their younger counterparts.

“More than 50 percent of women who are menopausal say this is the happiest time in their life,” Stireman said, citing the results of a study published in a 1999 issue of the journal Menopause. Three-quarters reported making a healthy lifestyle change, in terms of diet, exercise or other factors.

Penagos said this has been true for her. She recently went back to school part time to get a nursing degree, and she frequently takes her two dogs on walks or bike rides just to enjoy being outdoors.

“It’s a fresh beginning, I just have this new outlook on life,” she said. “I feel young again; I’m not in my childbearing years anymore, I don’t have to worry about that aspect.”

Many women report decreases in libido as well as physical changes including thinner tissues and decreased natural lubrication that make sexual intimacy more difficult, despite no longer having to worry about contraception.

Penagos said that, just as talking about her symptoms with female friends and family members made it easier to go through, opening up to her husband about sexual difficulties made that easier as well. “I never thought I could do that, sit down and have that discussion with my husband,” she said. “(Now) I could be one of those Cialis commercials.”

All this frankness about menopause can be a double-edged sword, said Dr. Don Smith, an OB/GYN at St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center. Patients are more willing to talk about their symptoms, but they’ve also heard and read so much that some are less open to his advice.

“You can generally tell within two minutes of a consult whether you’re going to make any difference or not,” Smith said. And with more information available, women are comparing themselves with other women more.

“Menopause is obviously a normal thing; there are a lot of women who pass through gracefully without a glitch,” he said. But they can be unsympathetic to others whose symptoms have a greater impact on their lives. “They look at other women who struggle and have issues as ‘weak sisters.’”

It’s important to remember that each woman’s experience is different, said both health care professionals.

Marian Lloyd of Hailey said she expected menopause to be much worse than it was for her.

“It’s not necessarily as bad as people say it is, you just get hot every once in a while. You always feel like you want to take a shower,” said Lloyd, 58, who began getting hot flashes four years ago.

She said she didn’t hear much about her mother’s experience — that could have been connected to her mother’s Southern attitude about talking about private matters — but she has talked about menopause with her older sisters and friends. “You hear more about it, and then you learn more about it, and when you’re more educated on a subject, you can handle it better. Knowing someone else is going through it makes it easier.”

Jokes about power surges aside, knowledge and empathy have gone a long way toward making what once was whispered about behind closed doors into just another natural change that every woman can expect, even look forward to.

Friends get your back – your heart and brain, too

By Carolyn Butler
Special to The Washington Post

With no offense to my husband or the rest of my family, I really don't think that I could make it through the day — much less have weathered all the ups and downs of the last three decades or so — without my friends.

Whether it's comparing child-rearing notes with Puffin, gossiping over coffee with Hannah and Maggie, hashing out long-term goals with my power-walk partner Sara, parsing last night's festivities with Stacie or commiserating with Janet about a major setback, each of these women helps keep me balanced and sane.

My inner circle has been there for me in countless ways over the years, and I've always tried to reciprocate with as much time, support and love as possible.

Not that I ever need an excuse for a girls' night out, but research suggests that good friends may actually be great medicine: Strong social ties may help stave off memory loss as you age; reduce stress; boost immunity; help you lose weight and keep it off; and buffer against depression, among other health benefits. There's also a strong longevity link, says Carl Latkin, a professor of social and behavioral sciences at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health: "If you have supportive relationships, you're going to live longer."

In fact, a 2010 review of nearly 150 studies that was published in PLoS Medicine found that people with strong social ties had a 50 percent better chance of survival, regardless of age, sex, health status and cause of death, than those with weaker ties. This conclusion was based on information about more than 300,000 individuals who were followed for an average of 7.5 years. According to the researchers, the health risk of having few connections was akin to smoking 15 cigarettes a day, and more dangerous than being obese or not exercising in terms of shaving years off your life.

And numerous studies have shown that friends may affect your health even more than family members: The 2005 Australian Longitudinal Study of Aging found that close relationships with children and other relatives had little impact on longevity, while people with the most friends tended to outlive those with the fewest by 22 percent.

Close comrades seem to be a valuable advantage when it comes to battling specific medical conditions such as heart disease and obesity. A study of 2,230 breast cancer patients in China published in the Journal of Clinical Oncology recently found that social quality of life — including the strength of friendships — was the most important predictor of both cancer recurrence and survival. "It's very exciting, because we believe social quality of life is modifiable — it's something that we can change," says the study's lead author, Meira Epplein, an assistant professor at the Vanderbilt University School of Medicine.

Still, experts stress that it remains unclear exactly why the buddy system seems to convey benefits. "If you have a larger social network, is it material resources like those people taking you to the doctor and making sure you take your medication? Does that make a difference?" asks Latkin. "Or does having a confidant result in some emotional or psychological process that might increase well-being and reduce depression? In other words, are friends protecting you from bad things or promoting good things?"

Home remedies from the old days often find new converts

By Jacqueline Baylon
McClatchy Newspapers

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — In a carniceria on Franklin Boulevard, Valentin Curiel often stands off in a corner near the meat counter, waiting for customers who need his help — the mothers whose babies have colic, the insomniacs, the people with skin infections.

Curiel, who's in his 60s, grew up in Mexico when most families did not visit the doctor if they got sick. Instead, they relied on herbs, minerals and botanicals — and the advice of elders on how to use them.

Residents of south Sacramento, Calif. — many of them Mexican immigrants who've heard of Curiel from friends or relatives — tell him about their ailments and get his suggestions for cures.

"Some of the home remedies I know about really work," Curiel said.

Manzanilla, or chamomile, can soothe stomachache or insomnia when drunk as tea, he tells them. If the manzanilla doesn't work, he recommends hierba buena, or mint tea.

Dr. Hillary Campbell of Kaiser Permanente Medical Center, Sacramento, said she found a survey from the World Health Organization while researching alternative medicine. It suggested that 80 percent of developing countries use herbal medicine.

"And now most people using alternative medicine in Western society are those who have immigrated from developing countries," she said.

Many combine the home remedies with modern medicine, working with doctors who teach them to avoid bad combinations or overuse of alternative treatments.

Like Curiel, Rebecca Gonzalez's grandmother was known in her town in Mexico as the woman with the remedies and knowledge. Gonzalez said that back then, in the rural town, even if people wanted to go to a doctor it was impossible to find one.

"So part of it may have been necessity, but part of it may have been a way of life," she said.

Maria Dorais looks at herbs for sale at La Mexicana Bakery in South Sacramento, Calif. Dorais, who has medical insurance, said that she grew up never going to the doctor, as her grandmother knew about many plants that helped as remedies.

Gonzalez said she still relies on teas to help with a sore throat or insomnia before she'll go to a doctor or take a pill. And in the winter, to avoid getting sick, she said, she always has cinnamon or mint tea brewing.

But the Sacramento woman said she doesn't use all the handed-down remedies, among them softening the pain of tonsillitis by swallowing an egg yolk sprinkled with sugar. Or warming a banana peel and placing it on the bottom of her foot to soothe a sore throat.

"I am more cautious now and I probably would take the kids to the doctor for things that may seem more serious," Gonzalez said.

Dr. Ashby Wolfe of the department of family and community medicine at the University of California-Davis Medical Center said a lot of her patients are Latino and many have used some kind of alternative medication.

It's her routine to ask every patient.

"It is important that we as doctors ask if they are using alternative medications and pay attention to these forms of medications," Wolfe said.

Too much of an herb can become toxic, and it can be unsafe to take some of them with prescribed medications.

But alternative medicine can also complement prescribed medicines, Wolfe said.

A 2007 National Health Interview Survey found that 38 percent of adults reported using complementary and alternative medicine in the previous months.

Wolfe and Campbell both said they believe doctors don't get enough training in complementary and alternative medicines.

Curiel's training has come from experience. And the success of his advice relies partly on faith.

"Not all the home remedies that I know of work for everyone, but staying hopeful and positive definitely helps," he said.

For depression, Curiel suggests showering with palo de Brazil, or Brazilwood. He tells people it can heal the heart and calm the nerves just by holding it while in the shower.

For people who have skin infections or gastritis, he suggests a plant called cuachalalate that can be soaked in water and be rubbed on the skin. He also tells them to drink the leftover water as a tea.

Curiel treats his own diabetes with nopalitos, a cactus. He said it also can be used to lower the need for cholesterol medication and treat gastrointestinal disorders, skin ailments and viral infections. He tells people to cook the nopalitos and eat them on their own or drink them in a smoothie.

Gonzales said she believes her children will continue the home-remedy tradition.

"These remedies are part of their culture and they come with the story of 'This is what my grandmother did,' so maybe it will work," Gonzalez said.

SOME COMMON HERBAL REMEDIES

Chamomile

USES: Flowering tops of the plant are used to make teas, liquid extracts, capsules or tablets for sleeplessness, anxiety and gastrointestinal conditions such as upset stomach, gas and diarrhea.

Can be applied to the skin as a cream or an ointment for various skin conditions, or used as a mouth rinse to treat mouth ulcers resulting from cancer treatment.

THE SCIENCE: Has not been well studied in people so there is little evidence to support its use for any condition.

SIDE EFFECTS: Allergic reactions can include skin rashes, throat swelling, shortness of breath and anaphylaxis, a life-threatening allergic reaction.

Cinnamon

USES: Orally, cassia cinnamon is used for type 2 diabetes, gas, muscle and gastrointestinal spasms, preventing nausea and vomiting, diarrhea, infections, the common cold and loss of appetite.

Also used for impotence, bed wetting, rheumatic conditions, testicle hernia and menopausal symptoms.

THE SCIENCE: Cinnamon is a good source of manganese, an important component of a healthful diet. It contains a substance that activates formerly inhibited insulin receptors.

SIDE EFFECTS: Its ant clotting properties can cause profuse bleeding in conjunction with other blood thinners if a patient is injured, menstruating excessively or has surgery.

Garlic

USES: High cholesterol, heart disease, high blood pressure and certain types of cancer, including stomach and colon cancers. Garlic cloves can be eaten raw or cooked. They can be dried or powdered and used in tablets and capsules. Raw, the cloves can be used to make oils and liquid extracts.

THE SCIENCE: Garlic may slow the development of atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries), and may slightly lower blood pressure.

SIDE EFFECTS: Breath and body odor, heartburn, upset stomach and allergic reactions all more common with raw garlic.

Aloe vera

USES: Clear gel from the leaves is often used as a topical ointment for burns and other conditions. The green part of the leaf that surrounds the gel can be used to produce a juice or a dried substance taken orally for diabetes, asthma, epilepsy and osteoarthritis.

THE SCIENCE: Topical aloe gel may help heal burns and abrasions. Other uses have not been heavily researched.

SIDE EFFECTS: Gel can inhibit healing of deep surgical wounds. Abdominal cramps and diarrhea have been reported with oral use, which can decrease the absorption of many drugs.

St. John's wort

USES: Sleep disorders, nerve pain and mental disorders such as depression and anxiety.

Also can be used as a sedative, to treat malaria and as a balm for wounds, burns and insect bites.

THE SCIENCE: Studies have shown varied degrees of success in treating depression.

SIDE EFFECTS: May cause increased sensitivity to sunlight. Other side effects can include anxiety, dry mouth, dizziness, gastrointestinal symptoms, fatigue, headache or sexual dysfunction.

The nature of the claim against you is for, among other things, judicial foreclosure of the real property located at 2150 Oakwood Court, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.
A copy of the Complaint is served with this Summons. If you wish to seek the advice of or representation by an attorney in this matter, you should do so promptly so that your written response, if any, may be filed in time and other legal rights protected.
An appropriate written response requires compliance with Rule 10(a)(1) and other Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure and shall also include:

1. The title and number of this case.
  2. If your response is an Answer to the Complaint, it must contain admissions or denials of the separate allegations of the Complaint and other defenses you may claim.
  3. Your signature, mailing address and telephone number, or the signature, mailing address and telephone number of your attorney.
  4. Proof of mailing or delivery of a copy of your response to Plaintiff's attorney, as designated above.
- To determine whether you must pay a filing fee with your response, contact the Clerk of the above-named Court.

PUBLISH: March 28, April 4, 11 and 18, 2011

Combined Public Notice
Finding of No Significant Impact on the Environment and Notice of Intent to Request for Release of Funds

City of Kimberly, Idaho
120 Madison West
P.O. Box Z
Kimberly, Idaho 83341
(208) 436-4151

These notices shall satisfy two separate but related procedural requirements for activities to be undertaken by the City of Kimberly.
Request for the Release of Funds
On or about May 4, 2011 the City of Kimberly will submit a request to the Idaho Department of Commerce, State of Idaho, administering agency for the release of Idaho Community Development Block Grant (ICDBG) funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383), as amended, to undertake the following project:
Project Title: Family Health Services Construction Project
Purpose or Nature of the Project: The demolition of an existing building and the construction of a 4,000 sq. ft. community medical center located in the City of Kimberly.
Location of Project: 132 Main Street North, Kimberly, Twin Falls County, Idaho
Estimated Cost of Project: $935,796
Finding of No Significant Impact
The City has determined that the project will have no significant impact on the human environment. Therefore, an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) is not required. Additional project information is contained in the Environmental Review Record (ERR) on file at City Hall located at 230 Madison West, Kimberly, Idaho where the ERR can be examined or copied weekdays 8:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.

Public Comments
Any individual, group, or agency disagreeing with this determination or wishing to comment on the project may submit written comment to the City for receiving and responding to comments. All comments received by May 3, 2011 will be considered by the City prior to authorizing submission of a request for release of funds. Comment should specify which Notice they are addressing.
Release of Funds
The City certifies to the Idaho Department of Commerce that David Overacre, in his official capacity as Mayor consents to accept the jurisdiction of the federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The Idaho Department of Commerce's approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA and related laws and authorities, and allows for the City to use ICDBG funds.
Objections to State Release of Funds
The Idaho Department of Commerce will accept objections to its release of funds and the City certification for a period of fifteen (15) days following the anticipated submission date or its receipt of the request (whichever is later) only if they are on one of the following bases:
A. The certification was not executed by the certifying officer.
B. The City has omitted a step or failed to make a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR part 58;
C. The City has committed funds or incurred costs not authorized by 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of the release of funds by the Idaho Department of Commerce.
D. Another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint of environmental quality.
Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedures at 24 CFR Part 58 and shall be addressed to:
Dennis Porter, Community Development Manager
Division of Economic Development
Idaho Department of Commerce
700 West State Street
PO Box 83720
Boise, Idaho 83720-0093
Telephone: 208/334-2650, Ext. 2145
Potential objectors should contact the Idaho Department of Commerce to verify the actual last day of the objection period.
/s/ David Overacre, Mayor
City of Kimberly
This Notice to the Public, the Finding of No Significant Impact, and the Request for Release of Funds can be provided in a format accessible to persons with disabilities and/or persons with limited English proficiency upon request.

Amendment of Section 13.24.035 B. Base Rates
The foregoing rates shall be based on a three-fourths inch (¾") diameter water connection equivalent. Basic rates for all other services different than three-fourths (¾") inch diameter water connection shall be calculated by the following formula:
Monthly Base Rate = 1.778 x BR x D
Where: BR = The standard base rate for a ¾-inch diameter water connection
D = Diameter of water connection in inches

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1775, Paul Revere began his famous ride from Charlestown to Lexington, Mass., warning American colonists that the British were coming.

In 1831, the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa was officially opened.

In 1910, suffragists showed up at the U.S. Capitol with half a million signatures on petitions demanding that women receive the right to vote.

In 1934, the first laundromat (called a “washateria”) opened in Fort Worth, Texas.

In 1942, during World War II, an air squadron from the USS Hornet led by Lt. Col. James H. Doolittle raided Tokyo and other Japanese cities.

In 1945, famed American war correspondent Ernie Pyle, 44, was killed by Japanese gunfire on the Pacific island of Ie Shima, off Okinawa.

In 1949, the Republic of Ireland was proclaimed.

In 1954, Gamal Abdel Nasser seized power, becoming prime minister of Egypt.

In 1978, the Senate approved the Panama Canal Treaty, providing for the complete turnover of control of the waterway to Panama on the last day of 1999.

In 1983, 63 people, including 17 Americans, were killed at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, by a suicide bomber.

Ten years ago: U.S. and Chinese diplomats began two days of talks over the April 1 collision involving a U.S. spy plane after Beijing and Washington staked out opposing positions on who was to blame for the incident.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush reshuffled his economic team, appointing Rob Portman his new budget chief. Chinese President Hu Jintao arrived in the Seattle area for talks with business leaders before heading to Washington, D.C. Suri Cruise, daughter of Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes, was born.

One year ago: Tens of thousands of Poles bade farewell to President Lech Kaczynski at a state funeral in Krakow. Brian Davis called a two-stroke penalty on himself on the first play-off hole to give Jim Furyk a victory at the Verizon Heritage. Rafael Nadal defeated Fernando Verdasco 6-0, 6-1 in an all-Spanish final to win the Monte Carlo Masters for the sixth straight year. Carrie Underwood became the first woman to win entertainer of the year twice at the Academy of Country Music Awards.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently invited to a relative's home because my nephew was introducing his fiancée, "Macy," to the family. I asked my nephew what gift Macy might like, and he suggested a sweater and told me her size. I bought her a lovely one — at least, I thought it was lovely.

After Macy tried it on, I was shocked when she handed it back to me and said she didn't like it. I couldn't exchange or return it because it had been purchased from a store where I live, and this store doesn't have a branch in their state. I took the gift home with me and got a refund. Now I don't know what to do.

Because Macy gave it back to me, does she forfeit the gift? Should I send her the amount of the store refund? Do I owe her anything as a substitute for the gift she refused? She will be a part of our family, and I need to know what to do if this happens again. I'd appreciate your thoughts.

—GIFT-CHALLENGED

DEAR GIFT-CHALLENGED: If ever I heard about someone who needs an etiquette book, it's your nephew's fiancée. Make it a thick one, because she appears to be clueless in that department. As to what to do if this happens again — you can prevent it from happening by not selecting any more gifts for her. A donation in her name to a favorite charity might work if you feel obligated to give her something.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: The love of my life, "Adam," is leaving for school in August. He's going to Portland, Ore., to pursue his studies in renewable energy engineering. My passion is nursing. I'm currently finishing up my college requirements and waiting to get into the program. My college credits won't transfer, so if I went with Adam, I'd either have to start over or wait until I got back home to resume.

I'm wary of long-distance relationships, but I don't want to be separated from Adam for two years. We have discussed taking turns flying out to see each other and staying in touch via phone and the Internet. But I still get sad thinking about the time we'll be apart. We are both determined individuals, and in the chaos of life we have managed to find a fairy tale. Everyone has given us their advice about our situation and it hasn't helped. Do you have any words of reassurance for us?

—LOVELORN IN PHOENIX

DEAR LOVELORN: You and Adam appear to be intelligent, focused and mature young people. Although you have built a "fairy tale" together, building a solid future will take some sacrifice on both your parts. Being apart will allow each of you to concentrate fully on your studies. If you love each other, and it appears you do, you will get through the challenge and emerge stronger than ever.

DEAR ABBY: I found out my high school sweetheart has cancer and only a short time to live. I would like to send her flowers and a message — but without the knowledge of my wife of 43 years. Is this a bad idea?

—OLD FLAME IN ILLINOIS

DEAR OLD FLAME: Frankly, I see no reason why you should sneak around to do it without your wife's knowledge. Tell her word has reached you that the woman is dying, that at the time you knew her she meant a lot to you, and you plan to send her flowers and a message. If your wife is so insecure that she would tell you not to, don't do it. But, please, don't beat around the bush or sneak around. You're all adults, and being secretive is childish.

TO MY JEWISH READERS: It's time to hide the matzo again — Passover begins at sundown. Happy Passover, everyone!

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"You know my methods. Apply them."

— Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

The Gold Coast Congress in Australia has just celebrated its 50th anniversary, so to mark that occasion, all the deals this week come from last year's tournament. Today's deal is from a pairs event, where undertricks and overtricks play an important role.

Consider today's deal as a defensive problem, looking just at the North and East cards. At every table but two, East failed to focus properly on the defense against four spades. As Sherlock Holmes said caustically, "You see, Watson, but you do not observe." If the heart eight is a true card, it must be a doubleton. In theory, West could have three hearts such as J-9-8, but would then have raised hearts rather than have made a negative double with such limited values. Accordingly, you can infer that declarer has at most three minor-suit cards.

A heart continuation is worse than useless, and a spade is clearly passive. So if you want to get active, you need to play a minor suit. You have no hope for an extra trick if declarer has two clubs and one diamond, or three clubs. But if he has two diamonds and one club, you had better shift to a diamond immediately before South disposes of his slow diamond loser by setting up a discard from the clubs. At the table Kieran Dyke duly shifted to a diamond for a near top.

ANSWER: There is a temptation to get active by leading the spade jack, but not only is this a dangerous lead in the suit, but also you may have a natural trump trick and thus do not need to get a ruff. I'd settle for the mundane low club lead and let declarer open up spades for himself. With two small hearts, I might be more inclined to lead spades.

IF APRIL 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The tiny aggravations you experience could be like the grit in an oyster that turns into a pearl. Between now and the end of May, you will several chances to make your life better and bigger. It is a good time to ask for favors or realize how your prayers have been granted. Because your judgment is better than usual, late May is an ideal time to set important plans into motion or to make sound decisions. In October, your desire for intimacy or excellence may blind you to the truth, so don't get suckered into a new relationship or investment without obtaining feedback from trusted advisers.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It's time to clear the air. An informal chat by the water cooler could dissolve the haze of misunderstandings you've had with a colleague. The object of your affection will serve as a calming influence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The tiniest crack can destroy the mightiest dam. You may feel helpless in regards to a new business contact that is a tough nut to crack. Use your wits to find a weakness that will get you in the door.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When too many facts about an issue are floating around, it might mean that someone isn't telling the truth. Use common sense to discern whom you should listen to and who is just blowing hot air.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Knowledge is a golden key. Your instinctive understanding of an issue is a valuable commodity. When faced with a tough decision, use a touch of sympathy to soften the blow and prevent hard feelings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): There is no "Book of Love." There is no user guide to help you find your perfect match. You must simply use your own common sense, best judgment and desire to find the one that you treasure the most.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sail the sympathetic seas of romance. Curl up with your loved one as your relationship truly gels. A quiet getaway with your significant other is just what the doctor ordered to recharge your batteries.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you've got it, flaunt it. Conditions are such that others find you are more interesting and alluring than you really are. A new romance you think is a passing fling is something far more lasting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The world is your oyster. Surround yourselves with energetic go-getters and feed off their positive energy. Take your time. Don't expect too much, too soon from a potential romantic interest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seek somebody to lean on. No matter what your objective or whether you are a workaholic or a homebody, two heads are better than one. Concentrate on building the framework for a lasting relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Comfort is important. If your new shoes don't fit right, don't wear them. If a new relationship makes you uncomfortable, move along. A lasting romance should seem effortless, not like a chore.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Raise the bar a bit higher. You've done well for yourself and achieved a moderate amount of success. Now is the time to go even further and plot a future that will be a resounding, lasting triumph.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love is in the air. Tonight may be the right time to say all the things left unsaid in a relationship. The lights of love will be green all night, so put the pedal to the metal and cruise the streets of romantic bliss.
