Taylor's charges stem from an alleged Feb. 7 high-speed chase through the city of Jerome and shooter Christopher Mark Taylor into Jerome County, during which he allegedly shot Jerome Police Officer Dennis Clark in the face with a shotgun, permanently blinding Clark in one eye. Taylor allegedly also pointed his speeding car toward another police officer, prompting the aggravated assault with a deadly weapon charge.

FULCHER OUSTED:

Xavier board OKs panel's decision

Bv Ben Botkin Times-News writer

Smiles were hard to come by at Xavier Charter School's board meeting on Monday - even among the victors of the Twin Falls school's legal battle between its trustees and its fired principal, Cindy Fulcher.

The school's five trustees were at the special meeting for one final, procedural vote legally necessary to close the chapter on the tenure of Xavier's first administrator since the school opened in 2007. The school board's vote was simply to

The panel was formed as part of an out-of-court settlement for a lawsuit that Fulcher filed in October against the board in a failed bid to keep her job. Both the school board and Fulcher had agreed to accept the panel's decision.

That was a point that Vice Principal Thad Biggers reminded the solemn-faced audience of students and parents who crowded into the school's library for the five-minute meeting.

Canyon jam plays its swan song

T.F. chamber drops annual concert amid declining attendance

By Amy Huddleston Times-News writer

It changed names and added new genres to bring in a bigger crowd, but the Snake River Canyon Jam has played its final song, after last year's attendance dipped to only 516 people.

In its twelfth year, the event formerly known as Jazz in the Canyon saw a continued decline in ticket sales. Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Shawn Barigar said the event's dwindling success may be partially blamed on the recession or the change in the event's structure. In 2009, the event left jazz exclusivity behind to add other musical genres after an audience survey indicated a desire for such a change.

The chamber inherited the event from two of Twin Falls' Rotary clubs in 2008 and coordinated it for two years with the Magic Valley Arts Council. Last year, the chamber took the Canyon Jam on alone and, despite the sunny weather, ticket sales were among the lowest on record, bringing in onfused about Ida-ho's blizzard of different license plates? So are some members of the Legislature, who tried unsuccessfully during the just-concluded session to cap the proliferation of tags at the more than 70 we have now (celebrating, among other things, Corvettes and the National Rifle Association).

But it's been ever thus in the Gem State. Between 1913 — the first year Idaho required license plates – and 1958, there were 43 different combinations, including black on cream (1916), cream on dark green (1919), light orange on silver (1923), black on deep yellow (1934), green on orange-yellow (1940), and - in 1943 and 1944 a blue-on-gray 1942 license tag with a window sticker.

The signature "Idaho Potatoes" slogan first showed up in 1928, with the license number printed over a background image of a spud. It then disappeared for 20 years, reemerging as "World Potatoes" in 1948 and finally "Famous Potatoes" in 1957.

The county prefixes (2T,

From 1934 through 1942, the same prefixes were used except that the B was changed to a P. That made Twin Falls County tags R6 and 6R, Jerome's H9 and 9H, Cassia's B7 and 7P and Blaine's A7 and 7A. The current code, from 1A (Ada) to Washington (W), began in 1945.

Because of specialized plates, just a little more than half of the tags on Idaho cars and trucks still bear those county designations.

My all-time personal favorite Idaho license plate is 1948's, which was black on aluminum with a colored spud decal between the numbers.

No mistaking that postwar Idahoans had just fallen off the potato truck.

T.F. council to look at downtown parking, road weight limits

City manager says periodic project update a goal for accountability

By Nick Coltrain Times-News writer

The city's role in downtown parking, weight loads for Twin Falls city roads and new development standards will come before the Twin Falls City Council in the near future.

City staff brought those items and a long-term plan before the council at its Monday night meeting to find out what's needed to solve the lingering issues. As planned, no decisions were made on any of the topics.

City Manager Travis Rothweiler said he wants to make big-topic reviews a periodic event, to hold himself accountable to the council and make sure staff is following its wishes and, by proxy, the community's wishes.

The debate on city-managed parking in downtown Twin Falls split into talks of meters and talks of lots, which Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka asked be reflected in two separate topics for eventual council debate.

For the road weight, the council asked to bring in shipping companies to the Trip Craig said no particular industry should be targeted in any potential regulation. Heavy trucks shipping sugar beets were named as a cause of extra road stress at prior meetings. The city doesn't currently regulate road weights past the state regulations.

The same spirit of publicprivate communication was evident in the development standards talk, where the council wanted local developers in on discussions to help review the old regulations, which pertain to road width in new developments in the city and "everything that goes into the development of property," Rothweiler said.

He said he believes it's a good practice to periodically review regulations and standards to see if opinions on them have changed.

In other council business, it gave the OK for the Twin Falls Public Library to use an $18,000 Idaho Power rebate on new rooftop heat pumps on its 1939 building. With extra cash in the library's current budget, the rebate will negate the need for a $26,000 capital expense request in the next budget year.

"It's going to save us money in the long run to approve this," Councilman Trip Craig said before the 6-0 vote, with Mayor Don Hall absent.

Credit agency gives warning over deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) - A key credit agency issued an unprecedented warning to the United States government Monday, urging Washington to get a grip on its finances or risk losing the nation's sterling credit rating. For the first time, Standard & Poor's lowered its long-term outlook for the federal government's fiscal health from "stable" to "negative;" and warned of serious consequences if lawmakers fail to reach a deal to control the massive federal deficit.

An impasse could prompt the agency to strip the government of its top investment rating in the next two years, S&P said. A loss of the triple-A rating would ripple through the American economy, making loans more expensive and credit more difficult to obtain.

The downgrade was interpreted as a rebuke to President Barack Obama and congressional Republicans, admonishing them to put politics aside and come up with a long-term financial plan as soon as possible.

"This is a warning: Don't mess around," said Robert Bixby, executive director of the Concord Coalition, a nonpartisan group that is pushing for deficit reduc-

Analysts at S&P have never before used the outlook to cast doubt on the nation's credit worthiness.

In response, stocks suffered their worst slide in a month. The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 245 points before recovering to close down 140 points for the day.

"The credit quality of U.S. debt is sacrosanct, and legislators will do everything within their power to avoid a downgrade," said Jack Ablin, chief investment officer at Harris Private Bank.

The government is on pace to run a record $1.5 trillion deficit this year, the third consecutive deficit exceeding $1 trillion.

But so far, S&P sees little chance that the White House and Congress will agree on a deficit-reduction plan before the November 2012 elections, and the rating agency doubts that any plan would be in place until 2014 or later.

Obama and congressional Republicans are sparring over how to reduce the nation's red ink. If Congress refuses to raise the nation's debt limit this spring, and the U.S. Treasury lost authority to borrow additional money, the government I would not be able to pay its bills and would default on its debt.

Both sides have proposed cutting $4 trillion from future deficits over the next 10 to 12 years.

The White House wants to reduce the deficit through spending cuts and by ending the Bush-era tax cuts for the wealthy. Republicans reject that, calling it a tax increase. They seek instead to narrow the deficit largely by overhauling Medicare and cutting spending elsewhere.

The credit report called the two proposals a "starting point" of the process, but warned that the gap between the parties remained wide.

S&P took no position about how to reduce the

CREDIT RATERS WIELD POWER

NEW YORK — News that Standard & Poor's was cutting its outlook on U.S. debt rattled financial markets

Monday. Cooler heads might recall that this is the same agency, along with Moody's Investors Service, that told investors that billions of dollars of securities tied to iffy home mortgages were safe bets right before they collapsed and helped set off the biggest financial crisis since the 1930s.

"It's a sad state of affairs when one of the agencies that blew up housing is telling the U.S. to get its fiscal (affairs) in order," said money manager Michael Lewitt, who lashed out at high U.S. debt in his book "The Death of Capital." "They're not wrong here, they're late," he said. S&P spokesman Catherine Mathis said the agencies were "very good" at rating government debt, citing a recent International Monetary Fund report. It found that all the government debt that defaulted since 1975 had received a rating of "non-investment grade," or what's called deficit or how to change spending and revenue plans.

"junk," at least a year earlier.

"But for any plan to be credible, we believe that it would need to secure support from a cross-section of leaders in both parties," S&P said in its report.

A lower credit rating would drive up the U.S. government's borrowing costs. It could lead to higher interest rates on everything from mortgages to car loans and threaten to slow U.S. economic growth.

Ablin said the credit worthiness of the country is the underpinning on which all other asset classes are valued.

"If all of a sudden the credit quality of U.S. Treasurys isn't as high as people perceive, we could see erosion of confidence," he said.

Radiation near reactor soars

Levels far too high for workers

TOKYO (AP) - A pair of thin robots on treads sent to explore buildings inside Japan's crippled nuclear reactor came back Monday with disheartening news: Radiation levels are far too high for repair crews to go inside.

Nevertheless, officials remained hopeful they can stick to their freshly minted "roadmap" for cleaning up the radiation leak and stabilizing the Fukushima Dai-ichi plant by year's end so they can begin returning tens of thousands of evacuees to their homes.

"Even I had expected high radioactivity in those areas. I'm sure (plant operator Tokyo Electric Power Co.) and other experts have factored in those figures when they compiled the roadmap," Chief Cabinet Secretary Yukio Edano said.

Officials said Monday that radiation had spiked in

Obamas paid $453K in taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Barack Obama and his wife, Michelle, are reporting income of $1.728 million for last year, much of it from the sale of the president's books. They paid federal taxes of $453,770.

The Obamas, joining the flocks of Americans filing their taxes near the end of the federal filing period, were entitled to a refund of $12,334 after federal withholding and other payments totaling $466,104.

Joan Tanner Shrum

April 8, 1931-April 22, 2011

GLENNS FERRY – Joan Tanner Shrum, 80, of Glenns Ferry, passed away peacefully surrounded by loving family on Friday, April 15, 2011.

A viewing will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, April 22, at Rost Funeral Home McMurtrey Chapel in Mountain Home. The funeral will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, April 23, at the Glenns Ferry High School, and burial will follow at Glenn Rest Cemetery in Glenns Ferry.

Joan and twin sister, Joyce, were born to Alta Rowse and April 8, 1931. Joan found being a twin to be "ever-somuch fun." In grade school, she and Joyce switched spots so that Joyce could enjoy double art classes and she could take double music lessons. They dressed alike, and were fondly called "The Tanner Twins."

At age 12, the Tanner family moved into the "Tanner Home" at 250 S. 10th E. in Salt Lake City, Utah. The Tanner family filled this three-story, five-bedroom, five-fireplace home with beautiful music, lots of laughter and endless love.

Joan graduated from East High School and attended the University of Utah. The Tanner Twins participated in many campus activities and Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. They sang in the Homecoming Quartet contests, winning first place two years in a row. The twins also wrote the music for the Greek Spring Chorus competition. Joan accompanied the Kappas and Joyce directed them to first place two years in a row. Joan proudly wore her member of the Spurs, Cwean and Mortar Board and was elected student body historian. In college days, the Tanner Twins worked summers as waitresses at the Grand Canyon. In addition to providing musical entertainment, they wrote and planned shows. At 5 foot 8 inches, the twins stood out not only for their beaut, but for their exceptional musical talents as well.

Joan met Paul Shrum at the university on a blind date and, following her graduation, married him June 10, 1952. Paul was commissioned in the U.S. Air Force as a pilot, and they spent several years in Germany. Later, Paul and Joan moved with their three children to Paul's hometown of Glenns Ferry. Joan and Paul raised four children, Kris (Randy) Mall of Boise, Paul D. (Debra) Shrum Douglas Floyd Tanner on of Mountain Home, Steve moved into the Syringa (Pam) Shrum of Dallas, Texas, and Jack Shrum of Glenns Ferry. She was also a proud Grandma Joan of 13 and great-grandma of 4.

Joan enjoyed working in her garden, tending to each flower with love and apprewent everywhere together ciation. Joan was a skillful seamstress as well. Her fingers worked magic on Krissie's dresses, her boys' torn jeans and special projects for loved ones. Joan taught for 19 years. She brought her love of music and athletics to Glenns Ferry High. There she established the female gymnastics, drill team and track programs. Joan loved teaching and, as always, went above and beyond her duties by registering for summer classes and spending Billie produced handmade were active members of the countless hours with students outside the classroom. Joan was a respected and well-loved member of the Glenns Ferry community. She accompanied the community choir for many years and was a leader of PEO, Art Guild and Beta Sigma Phi.

Joan is survived by her husband, Paul; her children white WRA sweater, was a and their families; her twin sister, Joyce (Robert) Stalnaker; sister, Gayle (Ken) Cromer; brother, Floyd (JoAnn) Tanner; and brother, Bruce (Stephanie) Tanner. She was preceded in death by her parents; and brother, Douglas Jr.

The family wishes to express a special thanks to Amy from Horizon Home Health and the doctors and nurses of St. Luke's (Meridian) for their compassionate care. The family requests that donations in Joan's memory be made to the Three Island Senior Center, P.O. Box 263, Glenns Ferry, ID 83623.

onday's news that the Twin Falls Area Chamber is pulling the plug on the annual Snake River Canyon Jam doesn't mean the end of music in Cen-

At least it shouldn't. Private sponsors and local service clubs might consider going back to the June festival's roots.

For the first few years of its history it was Jazz in the Canyon, which attracted artists such as Curtis Stigers and Paul Tillotson. At its peak, it drew more than a thousand people to an all-day Saturday concert - and more to jazz events across Twin Falls on the previous two evenings.

It worked because Twin Falls has a strong community of jazz musicians and the College of Southern Idaho offers an acclaimed jazz program. There was — and still is an audience for jazz here.

Then too, the original sponsoring organization the Twin Falls Rotary Club - invested heavily in the success of the festival and in the process attracted other sponsors. It became a true community event.

For cost reasons, sponsors stopped importing marquee acts for the Saturday night concert, and the crowds thinned. The same thing befell Boise's Gene Harris Jazz Festival when it ceased bringing in the likes of Ramsey Lewis and Dave Brubeck.

Changing to an all-music format a couple of years ago didn't save the festival. Only 516 people showed up last year; the chamber lost $2,000.

In its heyday, Jazz in the Canyon brought visitors and revenue to Twin Falls. There's no reason it couldn't do so again

Some suggestions:

- Tie the festival to CSI's jazz program, which includes students from throughout Idaho and has contacts with the wider jazz community. That might mean moving the event to April or September.
- Most high schools in south-central Idaho have jazz bands. Make them an important part of
- Make music a bigger part of the Perrine Bridge Festival, the annual mid-September celebration of BASE-jumping in north Twin Falls that has evolved into a broader celebration.
- Take advantage of two new spectacular venues on the canyon, the Canyon Crest Event Center and The Pinnacle, which houses the Twin Falls Center for the Arts and the Elevation 486 restaurant. Both buildings have the facilities to accommodate crowds and live music.

None of which will happen unless someone in the community steps forward and takes on the unglamorous job of finding new sponsors. That could be a group of individuals or a service organ-

Three months later, Mondale lost 49 states, and liberal politicians learned a valuable lesson. In the decades since, national Democrats have often promised to raise taxes - but only for the rich, and never for the middle class.

Ross Douthat

Bill Clinton wrote the playbook: "We will lower the tax burden on middle-class Americans," he pledged in 1992, "by asking the very wealthy to pay their fair share." In 2008, Barack Obama imitated Clinton, campaigning on a promise to raise taxes for the richest 5 percent while cutting them for everybody else.

Last week, in his address on deficit reduction, the president followed the playbook once again. In the throat-clearing section of the speech, Obama promised "tough choices" that put "everything on the table." But his tax proposals were aptly summarized by The Atlantic's Clive Crook: "The rich can pay for it all."

As it happens, they can't. Squeezing the wealthy buys some short-term deficit reduction: over the next decade, President Obama's plan could trim (almost) as much off the deficit as Paul Ryan's controversial Republican budget - $4 trillion, give or take.

But that $4 trillion is just a fraction of America's projected long-term debt. The whole point of the Ryan plan is that the real deficit reduction starts at year 10, when his Medicare reforms are nhased in keep going deeper into the red.

Does a plan to cut the deficit with middle-class tax increases exist? In a sense, it does. It's called the "current law baseline," a Congressional Budget Office projection in which the Bush-era tax rates aren't renewed in 2012, the Alternative Minimum Tax (which is supposed to hit only the rich but increasingly bites into middle-class paychecks) isn't indexed for inflation, and Medicare payments to doctors are slashed by 20 per-

This projection has become a touchstone for liberal wonks - "the graph that all budget discussions should start with," The Washington Post's Ezra Klein wrote last week. titlements to keep the country solvent.

All we need to do instead is let taxes rise and keep on rising. This is how the "current law baseline" cuts the deficit: Thanks to inflation and bracket creep, its tax code gradually subjects more and more Americans to rates that now fall only on the wealthy.

Today, for instance, a family of four making the median income - $94,900- pays 15 percent in federal taxes. By 2035, under the CBO projection, payroll and income taxes would claim 25 percent of that family's paycheck. The marginal tax rate on labor income would rise from 29 percent to 38 percent. Federal tax revenue, which has averaged 18 percent of GDP since World War II, would hit 23 percent by the 2030s and climb even higher after that.

Such unprecedented levels of taxation would throw up hurdles to entrepreneurship, family formation and upward mobility.

They could have ugly po-Historically, the most successful welfare states (think Scandinavia) have depended on ethnic solidarity to sustain their tax-and-transfer programs. But the workingage America of the future will be far more diverse than the retired cohort it's laboring to support. Asking a population that's increasingly brown and beige to accept punishing tax rates while white seniors receive roughly $3 in Medicare benefits for every dollar they paid in (the projected ratio in the 2030s) promises to polarize the country along racial as well as generational

The Republican vision for entitlement reform, President Obama said last week, would lead to "a fundamentally different America" than the one we inhabit today. He's right: asking the elderly to pay more for their health care, as Paul Ryan proposes to do, would transform the American social contract, and cause no small amount of pain.

But what Obama didn't acknowledge is that the alternative path could lead to a different country as well – a more stagnant and balkanized society, in which our promise to the elderly crowds out the fundamental promise of America itself.

Idaho gets suckered into failed ideas

On Saturday, April 9, the article regarding education reform was only lacking one large proponent - the notion that almost all of the one-on-one initiatives put into place around the country have now been dropped.

Idaho is always getting suckered in after other states have tested ideas and left them. The one-to-one computer programs are decades old and, as programs are being eliminated, we are just now acquiring one. Money and corporation influence is a sad addition to education and, as the K-12 company and others get involved, we see more money being thrown at projects that have no educational studies proving they work, just the opposite.

A direct quote from an article published last year by Brian Goodwin ("One-to-One Laptop Programs are No Silver Bullet") is "some school systems that ushered in one-to-one laptop programs amid great fanfare have begun to scrap them because of budget cuts (Lemagie, 2010); mushrooming maintenance costs (Vascellaro, 2006); and concerns about how students are using the computers (Hu, 2007)."

Another article, "Saying no to school laptops," Wall Street Journal, also states no academic achievement for students in the programs. Unfortunately, Idaho is now labeled as the sucker state. Companies can come in and dump the last of their failing programs on unsuspecting public patrons who trust their elected officials. Meanwhile these elected politicians are receiving money from these same companies. Districts should be reading the articles like the one above and educate themselves on how to best create an environment for higher student achievement. I only hope everyone thinks twice about re-electing those who were for this initiative, including Mr. Otter and Mr. Luna. SHERI THOMAS

Denney sends wrong message to lawmakers

Speaker of the House Lawerence Denney made a spiteful decision at the end of the session to strip Rep. Leon Smith (R-Twin Falls) and Rep. Tom Trail (R-Moscow) from their committee seats in transportation and agriculture.

Denney admitted it was punishment for not voting with leadership on procedural votes. In doing so, he removed one of the most highly qualified individuals in the state of Idaho from the Transportation Committee. Rep. Smith holds a degree in engineering (certified in three states), worked for five years as a design engineer on highways and bridges, served on the Idaho Transportation Board for seven years, and served on the House Transportation Committee for 13 years. He is replaced by a relative newcomer to the Transportation Committee.

Speaker Denney is meanspirited and sends the message that a legislator cannot disagree with his opinion or he/she will be punished. What a sad state the Idaho Legislature in under the leadership of people like Denney and his buddy, Rep. Mike Moyle (R-Star).

he juiciest story behind the Middle East uprisings doesn't concern Col. Muammar el-Gaddafi's "voluptuous" Ukrainian nurse or CIA bags of cash. Rather, it's the tale of how a nonviolent revolutionary strategy crafted by Serbian students and an octogenarian American scholar came to challenge dictators in Egypt, Tunisia, Bahrain and many other countries.

This "uprising in a bottle" blueprint was developed by the Serbian youth movement, Otpor, to overthrow Slobodan Milosevic in 2000. One of Otpor's insights was that the most effective weapon against dictators isn't bombs or fiery speeches. It's mockery. Otpor activists once put Milosevic's picture on a barrel that they rolled down the street, inviting people to hit it with a bat.

Otpor's strategy mirrors one promoted by a rumpled Boston academic named Gene Sharp, who is little known in America but inspires tremors among dictators abroad. Sharp's guide to toppling despots has been translated into 34 languages so far and was widely circulated in Egypt last year in Arabic.

After Otpor toppled Milosevic, it began to hold seminars for pro-democracv activists from other parts of the world, including many from the Middle East.

"About 15 of us went to Serbia from Egypt," Mohammed Adel, one of the leaders of Egypt's awesome April 6 Youth Movement, which helped lead the way in overthrowing President Hosni Mubarak, told me a few days ago. "The methods we learned from Serbia are what we are using in Cairo."

A crucial lesson, he said, is the power of nonviolence: "If somebody is beating you, don't attack him. Don't use any violence against them. Just take photos of them and put them on the Internet."

Toppling dictators is only one application of this kind of grass-roots movement. One of the most exciting trends in the struggle against poverty and social pathologies such as crime is the use of similar youthowned movements to change cultural norms from the bottom up.

Tina Rosenberg, a longtime writer and journalist who contributes to the Opinion section of nytimes.com, offers a brilliant look at bottom-up initiatives to achieve social change in her new book, "Join the Club." My favorite example has to do with teenage smoking.

From the 1970s through the 1990s, nothing seemed to work to dissuade teenagers from smoking. Television commercials warned that smoking kills you or turns your teeth yellow, but teenagers felt in-vulnerable. And with adults united in disapproval of teenage smoking, what better way for adolescents to rebel than to cough their way through a cigarette?

Then in the late-1990s, some frustrated antismoking campaigners showed teenagers how cigarette companies were manipulating them into addiction. Starting in Florida, the teenagers then designed a series of funny and withering commercials, many based on prank phone calls.

One depicted a couple of teenagers telephoning an ad agency that promoted cigarettes. The kids tried to give the agency a prize for killing teenagers in large numbers, flummoxing the staff.

In one multistate commercial, a young man calls a cigarette company and says that he is a dog walker. Then he explains his business proposition: He wants to sell dog urine. "Dog pee is full of urea, and that's one of the chemicals in cigarettes," he explains.

"It is likely that never before in the history of public health had anyone done a media campaign based on prank phone calls," Rosenberg notes — but it worked.

The youth campaign spread to other states and avoided any goody-twoshoes message of "don't smoke." It channeled kids to rebel against tobacco instead of rebelling by using tobacco. Florida had the biggest one-year drop in high school and middle school smoking of any state in two decades. The high school smoking rate dropped in half in less than a decade.

The team effort to change culture isn't new. It's part of the model of Alcoholics Anonymous, Weight Watchers, microfinance lending groups and many initiatives to chip away at poverty, crime and gang violence. Rosenberg cites a housing project area in the District of Columbia, Benning Terrace, where 53 people had been killed in gang violence over two years. Then a group of local exconvicts and former drug addicts intervened and began working with the gangs.

The ex-convicts had street cred that the police and social workers didn't, and they worked with young people to make gang violence "uncool." There wasn't another gang-related killing for 13 years.

Another example is an extraordinarily successful effort to improve the performance of black college students in calculus. Started at the University of California, Berkeley, after black students there earned an average grade of D+ in calculus, it puts black and Hispanics into small groups to provide peer support, and participants by some measures now outperform white and Asian students.

Sometimes the most powerful force for social change is a bunch of irreverent and wise-cracking students, working together.

In a span of 12 hours, workers engaged in the time-consuming task of shoring up tunnels to prevent further collapse had placed timber supports in only an additional four feet.

"The amount of work needed to do the four feet, given the increase in height, is tremendous;" said Melanie Hennessey, a spokesman for miner owner Hecla Mining, adding the speed of the advance depends on the material rescuers encounter.

"It's been very different every day," she said. "That's because of the complexity of the fallen ground."

The Lucky Friday Mine is tucked into the forested mountains of Mullan, a historic mining town of 840 people in Idaho's panhandle. Like mining areas around the world, it's not immune to accidents, some of them tragic.

Last June, a miner was killed in the Galena Mine in nearby Silverton after a rock slab fell on him.

And in 1972, 91 miners were killed in a terrible fire about 3,700 feet underground inside the Sunshine Mine between Kellogg and Wallace.

Hecla Mining officials said Monday workers had advanced a total of 39 feet into the collapsed area, which could be as long as 75 feet. The ground that fell is up to 25 feet high and 20 feet wide, more than twice as high as previously thought. Hecla officials said that's made shoring up the tunnel to make it safe for rescue workers more complex and time-consuming.

Mitt Romney and his books

ast week was the one we've been waiting for! Decades into the future, you will be able to tell your grandchildren where you were when Mitt Romney announced that he had formed a presidential exploratory committee.

Who knew he needed to explore? He was running on his Christmas card, for Lord's sake.

My job today is to give you a run-through of every book Mitt Romney has ever written. Fortunately, there are only two: "Turnaround," which is about his stint as the leader of the troubled 2002 Salt Lake City Olympic Games, and "No Apology," his campaign tome, which used to be subtitled The Case for American Greatness but is now Believe in America.

Perhaps three. When the new paperback edition of No Apology came out in February, early readers noted that not only had Romney added a new subtitle but also a new preface, ranting about the founders-hating big spenders who are now running the country. And, most notably, he had also changed some critical chunks of the original to make the text more Tea

Party-friendly. For instance, paperback Romney has now noticed that the Massachusetts health insurance law that he championed as governor does have some flaws, all of which are because of antifreedom provisions that the Democrats in the State Legislature put in. Also, the stimulus was way, way worse than he originally thought.

We all know that Mitt has a habit of, um, mutating to the political winds. So even in its earlier incarnation. the book had a decidedly uneven tone. "Despite my affiliation with the Republican Party I don't think of myself as highly partisan," Moderate Mitt wrote toward the end. This comes after 300 pages of unrelenting attacks on Barack Obama and every member of his party since Andrew Jackson. He blames Bill Clinton for everything from cutting military spending to presiding over an administration during which "birth to teenage mothers rose to their highest level in decades." I'm sure this week's Romney does not regard that as a partisan statement even though teenage birth rates actually fell spectacularly during that exact period. The book is heavy into policy and rather sparse on personal history, except for the parts that relate to his dad being a successful businessman and Mitt himself being an entrepreneurial hero along the dealmaking, business-closing, job-slashing private equity line. Romney's earlier book. "Turnaround," had some great stories about his Mormon ancestors, including a great-grandmother who single-handedly drove her children to Mexico in a covered wagon during the Indian wars. "At one point along the way, she came across freshly slaughtered U.S. Cavalry horses. She paused only long enough to pry the shoes from the wasted horses, re-shod her own wagon horses, and journey on," he wrote. Truly, No Apology could use a whole lot more of Hannah Romney and a whole lot less about the causes of the decline of the Ottoman Empire. mention in No Apology of the fact that Romney once drove to Canada with the family Irish setter strapped to the roof of the car. I regard this as a critical oversight, although perhaps it was Seamus that Romney was thinking of when he chose his title.

But, according to the book, No Apology refers to Romney's objections to President Obama's alleged habit of going around the world, asking other countries to forgive America for its faults. This Obama apologizing tour is an article of Tea Party faith, but one that PolitiFact analyzed a while back and found it to be false. ("Yes, there is criticism in some of his speeches, but it's typically leavened by praise for the United States and its ideals.")

There is not much evidence of actual humor, although Romney says that when he visited the Clinton White House, he prankishly protested being given a visitor's badge that had a red A on it, saying,

Preventing Spring Lawn Diseases

When it comes to dealing with lawn diseases, the old saying holds true: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." It's easier to prevent lawn diseases than to cure them. As winter gives way to spring, following these basic guidelines for a strong lawn will help you protect your lawn from fungal diseases.

Nutrient deficiency can weaken grass plants, so feed your lawn regularly, at least 2 times per year to keep your lawn strong and vigorous. If your lawn is used often for activities – kids, pets, parties - feed 3-4 times per year with Scotts Turf Builder Lawn Fertilizer. A nourished lawn is better able to fend off diseases.

Many diseases infect lawns when the grass blades are wet. To keep grass blades dry, water only if needed and water deeply so you can go longer between watering.

Watering in the morning is great since the grass blades dry quickly during the day. Especially avoid watering at night, as the grass blades will stay wet all night long, encouraging leaf diseases.

Mowing regularly at the right height helps prevent diseases. Mowing too short weakens the grass plant, making it more susceptible to infection. Most grass types should be mowed using a high mowing setting - 3-4 inch height. Mow often enough so that no more than 1/3 the height of the grass blade is removed at one time.

To control lawn diseases such as brown patch and dollar spot - or help prevent them if you have had disease problems in previous years - apply a fungicide made for lawns. Scotts® Lawn Fungus Control provides systemic disease prevention and control. You can apply any time on all lawn types. Just be sure to follow the directions on the label.

KETCHUM – This rustic log home tucked away in the Sawtooth National Forest has a Bavarian flavor, with its hip roof, outdoor balconies and window boxes filled with flowers.

Yet Lisa Vierling and Michael Stoneback's home, eight miles past the ski lifts on Warm Springs Road, retains characteristics of what is believed to be one of the first "home camps" or homesteads in Ketchum.

Welcome to Croney Cove. This seven-acre compound boasts a few buildings — including a brothel – from the roughand-tumble days when Maud Baugh provided a laundry for area miners and the Lewis ore wagons rolled past on their way to mines in Atlanta. It also pays homage to Tegernsee, a resort town aside a beautiful German lake that serves as Ketchum's sister city, in large part due to Vierling's efforts.

Croney Cove was settled in 1890 by Williams Warfield, for whom the hot springs across the road is named, Vierling said.

Baugh bought the place a few years later, building bathhouses that used geothermal water on the property, a hotel, gambling casino, restaurant and brothels for the miners from the nearby Blue Kitten, Rooks Creek and Thompson Creek mines.

"I don't know how many miners there were in the area, but one of the mines had a 16-hole privy, so I'm guessing they had a couple hundred at least," Vierling said. "Later the Board family did logging around here and (Wood River Valley resident) Ivan Swaner's mother cooked for miners and lumberjacks and opened summer camps for the people who came up from Twin Falls.

"I've talked to people who met Maud as children. They said she was scary - she dressed in flour sacks, picked her teeth and had

And Vierling supplemented the antique light fixtures she brought home from her European travels with light fixtures that she found in the ground around Croney Cove.

"We found a treasure trove of things we could use buried in the ground," she said. "People had been using this site as a dump for years – we hauled nine big truckloads away before we could even see the cabin. The fireplace was covered in so much brush we didn't even know it was there. And as I uncovered the garden, I even found a marble walkway."

Vierling salvaged a China sink for $5, carrying it home on the plane. She brought home antique faucets and antique Bavarian cabinets, which her husband replicated.

Sustainable living guru's guide to life split from the company in October and has since begun advocating for a "greater system of well-being."

His new book, "Planet Home" (Clarkson Potter.

His message is this: "What you do at home can impact the world around you, and the world around you can impact what you do at home."

The son of a wealthy businessman and an actress-turned-socialite, Hollender, 56, grew up on Manhattan's Park Avenue and spent summers in the Hamptons. He drifted from Vietnam War protests in Southern California to a vear at Hampshire College in Massachusetts to a brief stint in London before finally landing in Toronto.

Eventually, after a string of nonprofit and for-profit ventures, he founded Vermont-based Seventh Generation with fellow entrepreneur Alan Newman and wrote a book called "How to Make the World a Better Place." He has since become an avid blogger, a board member for Greenpeace and the Environmental Health Fund, and a co-founder of the American Sustainable Business Council.

Clematis needs pruning; the question is when

There's a lot to like about clematis, one of the earliest vines to green up in the spring. It's easy to grow, blooms in profusion and is hardy, with some varieties lasting over 50 years.

Here are edited excerpts of a phone conversation with Hollender.

What do you hope people learn from "Planet Home"?

First, we wanted to help A Pirst, we wanted to help people navigate through the complex maze of making responsible and sustainable decisions, which meant thinking about what actions really matter.

Second, it was an effort at introducing the systemic approach to green living. This effort begins when you put your 2-year-old in the bathtub and wash her hair with wonderful organic shampoo but forget that you cleaned the tub with a toxic chemical.

How do you feel about the high cost of ecofriendly living?

A Historically, it has been true that green living is generally a wonderful thing for the most affluent and arguably does the least for those who need it the most. However, I think this is in the early stages of changing. Not only are large retailers like Wal-Mart, Target and Costco beginning to deal with the cost-premium issue, but other areas of green living that focus on the local economy, such as farmers markets, are really beginning to see some traction.

What have you discovered about cleaning products that would surprise people?

The dangerous effects of the chemicals in these products that we don't think about, like chlorine, can be shocking. When you mix a chlorine-based cleaner with an ammonia-based cleaner, it produces a gas that will quickly send you to the hospital and possibly kill you. Products are way overpowered for the job they have to do, but we want immediate results so we pull out the heavy guns and don't pay attention to the collateral damage. But it will take a few years of testing before the wasps are released across the United States, Hoelmer said.

BREWING UP A BUSINESS

Seattle's Best founder pioneered trading with coffee farmers, then married one

By Melissa Allison The Seattle Times

SANTA ELENA ESTATE, Costa Rica – Jim Stewart ranks high among Seattle's coffee elite. He founded what is now Seattle's Best Coffee in the late '60s, when only a handful of U.S. roasters envisioned coffee as a gourmet

But when he travels to Costa Rica with his wife, she is the coffee maven.

"I was born in a coffee tree." said Luz Marina Trujillo, who hails from a coffee family in Colombia. She has worked the past 22 years turning a mediocre coffee farm in Costa Rica into one of the country's most respected coffee estates.

Truillo decided early that she wanted to sell directly to roasters, negotiating with them on price and quality. Direct trade has become fashionable because it cuts out a middleman - often putting more money directly into farmers' hands and helping flew to six coffee-growing roasters forge long-term relationships across cultural boundaries.

Popular Pacific Northwest roasters like Stumptown Coffee and Caffe Vita publicize their buying visits to coffee farms, sharing coffee discoveries through online photos and customer events. Vita were current. even posts online videos accompanied by the music of David Byrne and Brian Eno.

Many say direct trade beats fair trade, a formal program that tries to ensure fair prices to farmers. To slap a fair trade label on coffee, you must pay fees to a certifying agency, something the informal direct trade model does not require.

Few had heard of direct trade when Jim Stewart started doing it in the late '70s, because he was tired of the mystery that some brokers created around coffee buying.

"Every time I'd buy a bag of coffee, they acted like there might never be another bag of coffee. It had the aura of a fraternity" he said.

Stewart did not tell the farmers he was coming, and was not even sure the phone numbers he had for exporters

One of his first stops was Costa Rica, where he got off a bus in a rural area expecting to see a sign for the exporting company he sought. Instead, there was a town square and, luckily, a policeman who was kind enough to drive him three miles to the exporter's office.

In six weeks, he visited Guatemala, Costa Rica, Panama, Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil and Indonesia _ and formed bonds that still last.

At the time, Stewart owned a small roaster with a popular shop on the Seattle waterfront called the Wet Whisker. He sold coffee, but not bia, where Stewart traveled on coffee business. He met Trujillo's family, toured their farms, and won them over with his charm and ponytail.

Buying coffee directly from farmers is not as simple - or as dreamy - as it sounds.

Roasters wax romantic about their trips along bumpy roads to coffee plantations in the tropics, the only place coffee is grown. They love the warm weather, the welcoming people and the passion they share with farmers for great coffee.

But trading also means the roasters have to figure out how much coffee they need, how much they will pay for it and where to store large volumes - things they paid brokers to do before they were bitten by the direct trade bug.

Direct trade is still a young salmon _ and eventually, in movement; most roasters continue to go through brokers, who do not seem to mind when a roaster decides to negotiate with growers directly.

"It is possible that we are losing some business, but there is still plenty of coffee to be sold," said John Cossette, vice president at Royal Coffee in the Bay Area. "If we are the importer on a direct trade deal, we still have to charge a fee for our services." If a roaster wants to be more involved with pricing and quality, Cossette said, "It's all good, as with him and they began to they say."

Idaho Power's PCA filing asks for June rate decrease COst Adjustment (FCA)

Customers could see overall drop of 3%

By Blair Koch Times-News writer

Even though Idaho Power needs to raise $14.7 million for pension funding and fixed cost recovery, customers should see their rates decrease on June 1.

The PCA annually ad-

This year's PCA anticipates average rates to decrease by 4.78 percent, a reflection of surplus energy

This year is the third time the filing called for rate decreases since 1992. Rates lowered in 2006 and 2010.

In March, Idaho Power submitted two rate increase proposales with the IPUC: the annual FIxed and a filing for pension funding obligations, calling for a 1.47 percent average increase.

If all of the requests are approved by the IPUC, customers will experience an overall rate reduction of more than $25 million, or an average 3.03 percent.

"We are pleased to be in a position to reduce our customers' rates as our state works toward economic recovery."

The combined effect of Idaho Power's March and PCA filings means residential customers will see a 1.45 percent rate decrease, small genral service customers will get a 0.45 percent decrease, irrigators will see a 4.72 percent decrease and large power service customers will have their rates lowered 6.47 percent.

Genetically engineered alfalfa: What it means to you

The Moscow-Pullman Daily News top feed choice for dairy

If you're not a farmer of forage crops or in the business of feeding cattle, you may never have given much thought to alfalfa. It's green, cows eat it, end of story. But if you're passionate about your food choices - particularly if you are an avid supporter of organic agriculture then I'm betting you'll want to give this crop some serious consideration, starting about now.

What is alfalfa, and why should I care?

Alfalfa, a relative of the pea plant, is fourth largest commodity crop grown in the United States. It is most commonly harvested as hay for feeding livestock, and its high protein content and superior digestibility make it a cows. What does that have to do with me, you ask?

In January of this year, the federal government gave farmers the green light to grow genetically engineered (GE) alfalfa. Hot on the heels of GE corn and soybeans, which now dominate our national food supply, GE alfalfa threatens to strike another blow at the organic industry as we know it. These mega-volume crops have been manipulated by scientists to resist the spraying of glyphosate herbicide (commonly known as Roundup) so that fields can be sprayed en masse, killing any plant that isn't counted as a "commodity." In theory, this sounds pretty convenient, but the reality is grim.

Alfalfa

How does this impact the organic industry?

Like its corn and soy predecessors, GE alfalfa can crosspollinate non-engineered alfalfa, and this means big trouble for organic farmers. Current organic certification regulations prohibit GMOs from organic products. In effect, if livestock are fed alfalfa that has been accidentally cross-pollinated by a nearby GE crop, the resulting meat and milk can no longer be marketed as organic, and this equals significant financial losses for producers. As the use of GE alfalfa expands, it will become more and more difficult to confirm the absence of modified genes within a crop, squelching the economic viability of both growing organic alfalfa and buying it to feed organic liveand higher prices will be passed along to consumers.

the National Organic Coalition, put it this way: "Organic farmers and others are now left, once again, having to take healthy fats. Not to mention, all the precautions while biotech takes little responsibility."

What can I do?

Often, when we start talking about the national food supply using a lot of doomsday rhetoric, it feels like there is little we can do as individuals. After all. there aren't many citizens out there who actively support GE agriculture, and yet it continues to expand its scope. It's especially maddening because GE ag is a way for mega corporations to actually own varieties of seeds, putting farmers forever in the palm of their hands. But don't give up hope just yet. There are actions you can take to avoid and oppose

When it comes to meat, wild game is an excellent choice. Besides being abstock. wild game aren't inundated with as many pesticides and funky feed additives as domestic animals. If you're not a hunter and aren't sure where to find wild meat, talk to your local fish and game department to make a connection with hunters who may be willing to share their harvest.

Go native

If going wild isn't for you, try going native. Instead of buying meat and milk from cows raised on crops that may be contaminated with GE pollen, seek out farms that grow native grasses to feed their livestock. Growing native is better for the environment, produces healthier animal genetic engineering. Here are products, and virtually eliminates the risk of GE contamination. Search websites like eatwild.com and Local Harvest localharvest.org to find a native, grass-based farm near

Found Dogs:

An adult male Labrador/ Chesapeake mix was found in Filer 4-14-11. He is light brown and was not wearing a collar. Call to identify.

Avail. for Adoption:

Did you know that Black Dogs are generally the last to be adopted and are euthanized in shelters in much large numbers? People may consider them too "plain", or simply don't notice them because their dark color makes them disappear in their kennels. Whatever the reason, black dogs are not given the attention they deserve. So PLEASE give our black dogs a chance!

Piper is a 10-month-old Blue heeler mix. She has beautiful blue dapple markings and a docked tail. She was relinauished to the shelter because her owners could no longer take care of her. Piper does great with small children and likes other dogs.

Deuce is a handsome Labrador. He is middle aged, probably about 5-years-old, and is solid black. Deuce is very mild and sweet. He will make a nice family companion. Come meet him today.

Kate is a black lab mix puppy that is about 5-month-old. She has white on her feet and is very cute. Kate is not going to get very big. Her build is short and stocky. Kate is a fetching fool! She loves to have people throw balls for her! She is very sweet and has been waiting patiently to find her forever family.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"For her own breakfast she'll project a scheme, Nor take her tea without a stratagem."

— Edward Young

WEST ♠ K 8 7 2 ♥ 5 In today's deal from last year's ♦ A Q 2 Gold Coast Tournament in Queensland, Steve Hamaoui de-clared four hearts. West kicked off with the club ace, then continued

Declarer inferred that West's decision to lead a club marked the diamond ace offside, and the spade honors were surely split. It seemed likely that West had been reluctant to lead a spade from three or four to an honor. If East had the spade king, there was no way to keep him off lead, but just in case he had the spade queen, declarer crossed to a top heart at trick three and led a low spade from dummy to his jack! Can we all honestly put our hands on our hearts and say we would have risen with the queen? Once West won the spade king, the hand was over. In fact, West had to cash the diamond ace to prevent Hamaoui from making overtricks on a deal where almost everyone else in four hearts went down at least a trick.

By contrast, at the table where the winners of the Senior event were defending, West led a low spade. Declarer went up with the ace, drew trumps ending in dum-my, and ran the diamond 10, hoping for a miracle. It was not to be; West won and led a low spade to his partner's queen for the club shift. That set up five defensive winners and gave East-West a great result.

ANSWER: Many players would add up their 11 points and make a simple overcall in hearts. A better way to look at this hand is that facing a passed partner, you have a six-card suit and a hand with very few controls. This argues for pre-emption, not a simple overcall, so bid two hearts. The action makes it far harder for your opponents to bid accurately, while not putting your side at significant

DEAR ABBY: Large numbers of veterans are returning home with a wide range of psychological difficulties, many struggling with severe physical injuries or traumatic brain injuries. One in 10 soldiers reports mental health problems, while 30 percent of U.S. troops develop serious mental health problems within three to four months

Post-traumatic stress is a natural human reaction to horrific experiences. The symptoms of PTSD are greatly reduced if appropriate treatment is provided quickly to those in need. Individuals who suffer from traumatic brain injuries also experience consequences such as anxiety, depression, substance abuse and marital difficulties. And children whose parents suffer from PTSD are more likely to develop symptoms of anxiety and depres-

Give an Hour is a nonprofit organization that has established a national network of more than 5,300 licensed mental health professionals who provide free mental health services to U.S. troops, their families and communities affected by the current military conflicts in Afghanistan and Iraq. Each one gives an hour each week to provide free mental health services to military personnel and their families. In addition, these volunteers work to educate the public and the military community to reduce the stigma so often associated with mental health issues. Give an Hour offers immediate access to services for people who might fail to seek help through the military or Veterans Administration. Parents, siblings, unmarried partners and other loved ones are typically not covered by military insurance. However, they, too, are often adversely affected and can benefit from the professional help our organization offers. Thank you for helping to spread the word about our services. LAUREN ITZKOWITZ, DIRECTOR OF

PUBLIC RELATIONS DEAR LAUREN: I salute your efforts. The service that Give an Hour is offering is vital, and I'm pleased to alert readers that it is available

Readers, in addition to providing easy and free care for as long as it's needed, this organization is following the example of service embodied by so many of our military men and women. There are providers in all 50 states, Washington, D.C., Guam and Puerto Rico. To find one, log on to www.giveanhour.org and use the ZIP code search. If there is no provider in your area, the organization can be contacted at info@giveanhour.org, and a provider will be located for you.

DEAR ABBY: My elderly father has been a widower for many years. His neighbor, also his age, recently lost her husband, and they have been spending a lot of time together. He takes her shopping, she cooks for him, etc. My concern is twofold: One, this woman is not in good health, and I can't bear to see Dad heartbroken again when she dies. My second concern is the woman and her husband never even invited Dad over for a cup of coffee after Mom died, but now that she's a widow, she all of a sudden wants to be "neighborly." I'd like to ask her why. Would I be out of line?

- LOOKING OUT FOR MY DAD DEAR LOOKING OUT:

Yes, you would. Your question would likely be regarded as hostile by both your father and the neighbor because that's the way it comes across While you may feel protective, please recognize that your father is an adult and, presumably, able to take care of himself. At this point in his life he doesn't need you to look out for him. Only if asked should you venture an opinion like the one you have confided to me.

IF APRIL 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: When opportunity knocks in the next six to eight weeks, be sure to open the door. Whatever is good for you should grab your attention while whatever is bad for you will seem less attractive. You can obtain wise counsel from professionals and successfully initiate anything that has lasting significance, like a new job or relationship. Between now and early July, you can excel at anything that requires sympathy or imagination, or simply put a new health regimen into motion that offers lasting benefits. Avoid the pursuit of romantic dreams or far-fetched fantasies in October when your accuracy and evaluations of people and situations could be out of kilter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The first step is the hardest. Minor setbacks may deter you. You may feel lethargic and sluggish but just making the slightest effort towards moving forward will go a long way towards improving your overall outlook.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be the ray of sunshine that brightens everyone's day. Not everyone is in the best of moods today, but a warm smile and friendly demeanor will melt the ice and make your world a little more pleasant.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Unless there is a big red "S" on your chest, you are not a superhero and it is not your responsibility to solve the world's problems. Stay out of other people's troubles unless help is specifically requested.

CÂNCER (June 21-July 22): You can't have your cake and eat it, too. Conditions beyond your control may have you feeling helpless and underappreciated. Find other matters to occupy your attention and by evening the original matter will be forgotten.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If the choices are fight or flight, choose flight. Arguing with someone who refuses to see your side is pointless, as well as infuriating. You'll go much further by being a team player than looking out for No. 1.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You've achieved status through hard work and a good track record, not by giving in to trivial challenges and gimmicks. Don't lower yourself to treating your position as a competition or you are destined to lose.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stay in the middle of the road. Don't take sides or get involved in the squabbles of others. Keep your mind focused on your own tasks and stay out of potential trouble. Take time out to spend with a lover or close friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be on your best behavior to lure potential mates into your web of romance. You won't meet anyone by sitting around the house or wallowing online, so get out and about for the best results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you play with the bull you get the horn. Don't let a few successes go to your head. No matter how good you are, there's always someone better, so keep your feet on the ground and ego in check.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Great things come from the most modest beginnings. A mighty oak grows from an acorn, and resounding success comes from a mere idea. Brainstorm and draw up a blueprint for your future happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sometimes, the best place to be is wherever you're at. You exude charm and people want to be around you today. Play it cool and don't press a touchy issue or your followers may leave you PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't sweat the small stuff. You can confidently ignore minor squabbles and problems that have no bearing on you or your current objective. Focus on finance and getting the most bangs for your buck.

Not the inclines of Heartbreak Hill that have doomed so many runners before him.

Suspensions end for CSI hoops players

Future still uncertain for Brooks, Cothron

Bv Mike Christensen Times-News writer

The suspensions are over for College of Southern Idaho basketball players Jerrold Brooks and Luke Cothron.

Brooks and Cothron, a recent transfer, were suspended indefinitely on March 23, a day after they were arrested and charged with marijuana possession.

The two pleaded guilty on April 14 to reduced misdemeanor charges of frequenting a place where illegal substances are present. They will be sentenced on May 10.

Brooks While Cothron are no longer suspended from organized team activities at CSI, their future in the program is still unclear.

"I've still not decided what I'll do with them yet," CSI head coach Steve Gosar told the Times-News in a text message.

The Twin Falls County Prosecutor's Office has recommended the same sentence for each: a $100 fine, one year of probation, 20 hours of community service and 90 days in jail, though neither will have to serve jail time if they successfully complete probation.

prosecutor's recommendation would also require them to be subject to random drug tests during probation and complete substance abuse evaluations.

Brooks was a starting guard on CSI's 33-4 national championship squad, averaging 15.4 points per game. Cothron, a 6-8 forward from Huntsville, Ala., joined CSI's program in early March and did not participate on the 2010-11 squad.

According to Twin Falls police, the two were found on March 22 sitting in a vehicle filled with white smoke on the 1900 block of Bitterroot Drive in Twin Falls. Police said Brooks, who was driving, pulled the vehicle away when an officer approached, but was pursued and stopped. Brooks and Cothron were in possession of a container of 8.2

After a few weeks of running, coach Alice Schenk said it was time to start cycling, the second leg of the Spudman Triathlon that will span 40 kilometers on race day.

This is the event that makes me the most nervous, since I haven't ridden a bike since I was 10 years old.

"I found a bike for you to borrow," Schenk said. "It's a tri bike."

I thought that was great news — until I found out that "tri bike" and "tricycle"

At any rate, thanks to the Dowdle family of Burley, I now have a bike. It's a lot nicer than my last bike, which had baseball cards in the spokes.

I met local bike guru Ken Stephens of Rupert. Ken is 69 years old, but doesn't look a day over terrific. He recently went to his 50-year high school reunion and all his classmates were either dead or using oxygen tanks. Ken bikes, runs, swims and hikes. He eats a lot of fruits, vegetables, beans and something called kale.

Ken doesn't just compete in triathlons, he wins them. He's won his age division so many times his wall is covered from ceiling to floor with photos and awards, and he's dedicated an entire bookcase to his collection of ceramic spuds, which are given to the top three Spudman placers in each age division.

Last year Ken finished the Spudman in 2 hours, 34 minutes, 14 seconds. That's faster than two-thirds of competitors in the 25-29 age division. Inside a large windowfilled room in his home, Ken keeps a cover over a large tub of water. I suspect that's where he keeps his fountain of youth, but he insists it's just an exercise pool. Next to the pool Ken has a treadmill and bikes set up on trainers. Literally, Ken could do an entire triathlon and never leave the house. Ken also has a cool gizmo

LeBron, Heat roll over Sixers

MIAMI - LeBron James outscored Philadelphia's entire starting five in the first half by himself.

So did Chris Bosh.

So did Dwyane Wade.

And that pretty much tells the tale of a night the 76ers would rather forget.

No comeback required for the Miami Heat this time. They went wire-to-wire on the lead, and moved two wins from advancing to the Eastern Conference semifinals.

James scored 29 points, Bosh had his second straight double-double with 21 points and 11 rebounds, and Miami took a 2-0 series lead with a 94-73 victory over the abysmally shooting 76ers who managed their second-lowest playoff scoring total in the last 56 years on Monday night.

"It was a really complete game for us at both ends of the floor," James said.

Showing no signs of the migraine that he battled Sunday, Wade scored 14 points for Miami, now 17-3 in its last 20 games and halfway to winning its first playoff series since the 2006 NBA fi-

"I'm feeling a lot better," said Wade, who wasn't able to eat Sunday and was very low-energy at times before Monday's game. "I lost a lot of weight tonight ... but I think I did my job, to come out there and help my team get a win."

Thaddeus Young scored 18 points and Evan Turner added 15 for the 76ers, whose starters were outscored 76-29 by the Heat's first-string. Philadelphia shot 34 percent for the game, and after getting 42 points in the paint in Game 1, were held to 24 in that department

"We've had good defensive performances," Bosh said, "but I think today was our best of the season."

Miami has never lost a series after winning the first two games (6-0), and the Philadelphia franchise is winless in 16 tries after falling into an 0-2 postseason hole. And then there's this — only 14 teams have best-of-seven NBA series.

Lincecum pitches Giants to rout of Rockies

Notre Dame: No one to blame in student's death at practice

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The final investigation into the death of a student videographer who died after a 40-foot-high hydraulic lift he was atop blew over in a 53 mph gust during a University of Notre Dame football practice ended Monday without anyone involved being faulted or punished.

University officials acknowledged that their procedures and safeguards weren't adequate but said they couldn't find anyone to blame for 20-year-old Declan Sullivan's death. No one was monitoring wind speeds when the lift blew over, but it wasn't anyone's job to do that, executive vice president John Affleck-Graves

The Rev. John Jenkins, the university president, said he ultimately was responsible, but he doesn't expect any action to be taken against him.

"We did not find any individual who disregarded safety or was indifferent to safety. Consequently, there was not any individual discipline," Jenkins said.

The university's 130-plus page report found that while several members of the football staff were monitoring wind speeds before practice, they stopped checking after they went out for practice about 2:45 p.m. But Sullivan, a junior film student from Long Grove, III., checked later and saw a warning indicating the possibility of gusts up to 60 mph. He tweeted that the weather was "terrifying" and wrote: "Gusts of wind up to 60 mph today will be fun at work ... I guess I've lived long enough."

University investigators, however, couldn't determine whether Sullivan felt pressured to go up in the lift because other videographers said the tweets likely reflected his joking nature and he often used the word "terrifying."

Magic's Howard wins 3rd straight defensive award

San Diego Stauffer

Adams

ORLANDO, Fla. - Orlando Magic center Dwight Howard became the first player to win the NBA Defensive Player of the Year Award three straight seasons Monday — and the voting wasn't close.

Howard received 585 points, including 114 firstplace votes, from a panel of 120 sports writers and broadcasters. Boston's Kevin Garnett finished second with 77 points and Dallas' Tyson Chandler was third with 70.

Only Dikembe Mutombo and Ben Wallace, with four each, have now won the award more times. "I try to do the best I can on the defensive end. To dominate, change the game," Howard said at a press conference at the Magic's team facility. The 6-foot-11 Howard ranked second in the NBA at 14.1 rebounds per game and fourth in blocks with 2.38.

NASCAR restrictor-plate racing now a tag-team match

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) -Jimmie Johnson didn't mind a little tag teaming.

Of course, he won the race. Matt Kenseth thought it was a terrible idea.

Then again, he knocked out by a crash.

NASCAR drivers have always had a love-hate relationship with restrictorplate racing, essentially based on how they finish. It's the same for the fans, who moan and groan about how boring it is — until there's another nail-biter of an ending like the one at Talladega Superspeedway on Sunday.
