Otter swaps health care block

Gov. trades nullification bill for his own executive order

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on Wednesday vetoed a bill legislators passed to prevent the federal health care overhaul from taking root in Idaho, opting instead to issue his own order to block "Obamacare."

Otter, a vocal opponent of the federal health care changes, issued an executive order that prevents state agencies from putting the new program in place or aiding federal agencies in that effort. His order also bars the state from receiving federal money tied to the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

"No one has opposed Obamacare more vehemently than me," Otter wrote in his veto letter. "I truly believe the insurance mandate is an unconstitutional overreach by Congress and the President."

Unlike the vetoed bill, Otter's order will allow the state to continue working on a state health insurance exchange. Otter said that's crucial to prevent the federal government from controlling the state's insurance market and setting up a separate exchange in Idaho.

Idaho has a deadline of Jan. 1, 2013, to show to the federal government that it can implement an exchange in 2014.

Dual-credit classes get boost from project

Grant gives non-traditional students new chance at college courses

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Before Carissa Cantu took a dual-credit class in the fall, she wasn't planning to attend college. Her parents didn't complete higher-education degrees, and like many high school students, Cantu didn't know what she wanted to be when she grew up. Everything was confusing — scholarships, applications, federal student aid, and the question of what to study was overwhelming to the 19-year-old senior at Magic Valley High School. But a $225,000, three-year pilot project has now provided her with college experience and planning help, and will do the same for other alternative-school students in Twin Falls and Hailey through the College of Southern Idaho's dual-credit program.

The grant, from the J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation, gives non-traditional high school students at MVHS and Silver Creek Alternative School an opportunity to take a dual-credit course and pay for it by doing community service. Dual-credit

A banner water year, but area should stay safe from flooding

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

With this springtime's showers, water levels are rising, setting the stage for watchful eyes along Idaho waterways. Above-average precipitation means higher waters for most of south-central Idaho, but flooding is unlikely. From Oct. 1, 2010, to the present, Twin Falls received a total 9.24 inches of rain and melted snow, compared to its usual 7 make it impossible for insurers to operate affordable health coverage to individuals and small employers in Idaho," Otter wrote.

Idaho is one of 27 states that have sued the federal government over the health care changes, including a provision that requires all U.S. residents to purchase insurance by 2014.

The governor agreed with the principle behind the vetoed bill, but said the state needs the ability to explore its own answers to the health care issue.

"I also agree with the Legislature and the sponsors of this bill that now is not the time to implement Obamacare," Otter wrote. "However, it is equally unacceptable to forego exploring viable state solutions to our healthcare needs and allowing the national government to assert more control over Idahoans."

In a statement, Idaho Department of Health and Welfare Director Richard Armstrong agreed with his boss.

"I am confident that Idaho's expertise and can-do attitude will design an exchange that provides better access for families and employers, while also preserving the health insurance marketplace," Armstrong said.

Jail

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Stewart emphasized the talks' informal nature. The process is "so early, (the sheriff's) basically just had a conversation." Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter is looking at all options for fiscal responsibility concerning current inmate overflows at Twin Falls County Jail and planning for further growth, she said.

Gough emphasized that his department is looking at a new jail, not a new office, though he also said everything is very preliminary.

"We're just baby-stepping for now," he said.

McFall said he is still interested in the outcome of the regional jail talks because it could help his county, and representatives from his office have attended regional jail meetings in the past. But the current proposal would require an investment from his county for something that wouldn't solve its long-term problem of operating an out-of-regulation jail, McFall said.

"If we had a good jail but it was overcrowded, this would be a good solution," McFall said.

In November, voters rejected for the third time proposed funding to build a new Jerome County Jail and sheriff's office. County officials are now eyeing a fourth attempt with more specifics on costs.

classes through CSI regularly cost $65 per credit, but the alternative students will pay by donating three hours of their time per credit to a community project or organization of their choice.

CSI Instructional Dean John Miller said money is often the biggest barrier students experience when considering dual-credit classes.

"It's the No. 1 thing that creates haves and have-nots for the students that take dual credit," Miller said. "I think it's important that students are somewhat vested in the process. Typically, alternative schools are underserved for dual-credit and tech prep courses."

While CSI received the grant after an MVHS dual-credit political science class finished in the fall, Cantu still had the opportunity to apply the scholarship to the class, making it possible for her to take.

"It's just nine hours of community service. I wouldn't have been able to pay for it," she said. The class not only made her feel more comfortable with the thought of college, she added, but gave her some insight into a possible career in criminal justice.

provides students with support from a CSI mentor. Cantu said she will receive help with advising, career exploration and guidance through the mazes of financial aid and scholarships.

"It's a critical thing for our students to have someone help them get started," said MVHS counselor Jane Reis. "This population needs an extra boost."

Cantu's dual-credit instructor, Melanie Hutchinson, said studies show students who complete college credits before they graduate high school are more likely to go on to higher education and complete a degree. Often the ability to complete a dual-credit class with a solid final grade gives students the confidence to enroll in more college courses.

"I found these students very capable of completing the college material," Hutchinson said. "The great thing was that for some students, this was their final class and they finished in time to start taking CSI classes in January."

ISP seize marijuana, other items in traffic stop

A routine traffic stop in Jerome County turned into a substantial drug haul for the Idaho State Police.

Robert Rhall, 20, of Blue Lake, Calif., was stopped for speeding on Interstate 84 north of Twin Falls shortly after noon, Tuesday. According to an ISP release, an officer searched Rhall's car and seized nearly half a pound of marijuana, about 17 grams of psilocybin mushrooms, drug paraphernalia and $1,650 in cash.

Rhall was arrested and booked into Jerome County Jail on felony possession of a controlled substance and misdemeanor possession of drug paraphernalia, according to ISP.

The Hansen School District will host two public meetings to discuss its one-year, $190,000 supplemental levy issue election on May 17.

Last year, Hansen voters twice rejected a proposed two-year, $300,000 supplemental levy issue, leading to what school officials called "deep cuts" to district programs.

The outcome of this year's levy vote will determine future material purchases and staffing levels, according to a district release.

What that translates to in river channels is yet to be seen. Peak river flows don't usually hit until late May.

"That could be a bit of a concern around the Hailey area," Breidenbach said, adding that stream gauges that monitor water levels can be accessed online by the public.

Downstream from Hailey, the Big Wood River flows into Magic Reservoir, which is likely to reach full capacity in early May.

As a result, water will likely be let out into the Big Wood below the reservoir for minor flood-control releases.

"That's going to bring the water level up in the Big Wood River as it flows through Lincoln and Gooding counties, but these levels aren't going to be very high," Breidenbach said.

And those discharges aren't expected to reach the levels of flooding seen in 2006, he said, adding that preparation is key.

"If you have property along the Big Wood River, you should prepare for some higher water levels," he said. "Just move things back and you should be OK."

"The real flood problems are going to be further upstream, so I think that's good news for the Magic Valley," Breidenbach said. "You'll have plenty of water for the irrigators this summer."

It's been about a year since the U.S. Geological Survey overhauled its automated data system, providing new ways for the public to get stream measurements in real time.

Jackie Frey, emergency services coordinator for Twin Falls County, said it's important to take full advantage of the online information to stay informed and be proactive.

Brian Olmstead, general manager of Twin Falls Canal Co., was keeping a close eye on Rock Creek this week — if it floods, that water can end up in his canal system. While water levels rose, he said, it wasn't to a level that required emergency actions.

"We watched the weather forecasts and stream flow pretty closely," he said.

Former Buhl youth pastor held in La. for alleged child sex crimes

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

A former youth pastor at Buhl's Calvary Assembly of God has been accused in Louisiana of committing more than 60 felony sex crimes against children. Angelo Deboray "Doogie" Golatt, a youth pastor at the Buhl church in 2006, faces 50 counts of aggravated rape, six counts of juvenile molestation, four counts sexual battery and two counts attempted aggravated rape. His alleged crimes happened between 2003 and 2007. Golatt, 28, has been held in Louisiana's Rapides Parish Jail on $480,000 bond since his March 29 arrest. In Louisiana, aggravated rape is defined as an adult participating in sexual intercourse with a victim younger than 13 years old, and is punishable by the death penalty or life in prison. In December 2006, Golatt was arrested in Jerome County on two counts of sexual abuse/exploitation of a vulnerable adult, and later pleaded guilty to a reduced battery charge. Jerome County Sheriff's Detective Rick Cowen said the sheriff's department issued a warrant for Golatt's arrest in September 2007 for a misdemeanor probation violation. Since the violation isn't a felony, the department couldn't extradite Golatt once he moved to Louisiana. Cowen said he is aware of an ongoing investigation into Golatt, but said no allegations have been made against him locally. "If there are victims or people out there with information, we urge them to contact the department," Cowen said. Rapides Parish Sheriff's Detective Steven Phillips told the Times-News that all alleged victims are males between the ages of 9 and 19, who knew Golatt from his time working as a youth leader for the Donahue Family Church in Pineville, La. Phillips said the charges have not yet been turned over to the parish's prosecuting attorney because the investigation is ongoing. Current Assembly of God Pastor David Royer wasn't the Buhl church's pastor when Golatt worked there, but said he will discuss the issue with the church's board. Assembly of God Southern Idaho District Superintendent Doyle Fulkes said a background check on Golatt would likely have been completed before he came to Buhl. But since Assembly churches operate as "sovereign bodies," the district doesn't keep those records. Fulkes said Golatt is not a certified pastor with the association. "Since he isn't credentialed with us, we wouldn't keep records on him, either," Fulkes said. Calls made to the Donahue Family Church were not returned. Blair Koch may be reached at bkoch@magicvalley.com or 735-3295.

CSI board approves building method for technology center

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

With a 3-2 vote, the College of Southern Idaho's Board of Trustees on Monday decided to diverge from its usual bidding process to select who will build and design the college's new $7 million technology center. The college will bid out different facets of the building's design and construction to general contractors, after Idaho Division of Public Works representative Elaine Hill told trustees in March it's the Legislature's preferred process for such projects. CSI came under fire in 2009, when documents showed that Twin Falls-based construction firm Starr Corp. and architecture firm CTA began work as the tech center's "design-build" team before CSI's board opened the project to other prospective bidders. CSI has been required to re-bid the project to receive a $4.4 million federal grant for it. On Monday, Board Chairman Thad Scholes defended the process of selecting a design-build team for building projects, saying CSI has had great success with the method, with projects finishing on time and under budget. "I think the community had an issue with the selection process, not design-build," Scholes said. Scholes and Donna Brizee voted against the general contractor method, with Karl Kleinkopf, Bob Keegan and Allan Frost voting in favor. CSI will also use the general contractor process to build the planned $1 million Head Start building in Jerome. Amy Huddleston may be reached at ahuddleston@magicvalley.com or 735-3204.

Shoshone awards bid to seal leaky roof

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Small fixes loomed large at Shoshone's Tuesday City Council meeting. The council picked a bid from Strunk Roofing to stopper a leaky roof. The drips make it inside City Hall via a tar roof that shears away from a metal portion of the building's flat roof. "When it heats off, it kind of sloughs off the side there, the metal cap," City Clerk Mary Kay Bennett said. Strunk's plan will be to add another small metal piece near the problem area to direct the water off the roof rather than inside the building. Previously, the city had tried filling in the gap with more tar with poor results. The work will cost the city $595 for one side, with a pending bid for another area. The metal cap that created the leak covers the original lava rock wall of the building. When a fire destroyed the building that once connected to City Hall, engineers recommended putting the metal cap and siding on to reinforce the still-standing wall.

In other business, retired engineer Everett Aplet, who has been helping the city research the re-writing of its noise ordinance, presented some details about decibel levels. Aplet has worked with meters to help create detailed guidelines for the ordinance. At the fairgrounds, he said it takes about 95 to 105 decibels of noise to reach the nearest property line. At 105 decibels, he blew the protective fuses on his speakers. He also said he has taken readings from around Shoshone for comparison, though with dogs, trains and lawnmowers, nowhere was as quiet as expected. "We have quite a noisy city," Aplet said. City Maintenance Supervisor Aaron Aggeler also let the city know he plans to purchase a slightly more expensive asphalt for re-paving purposes. Though there are cheaper materials than the one he chose, Aggeler said his choice will last longer. One ton of the material costs about $550. Last year, the city purchased the minimum bid of one load, comprised of 30 tons.

IN OTHER BUSINESS

On Monday, the CSI board also:

- Approved increasing salaries for first-year faculty from $38,500 to $39,000 or $39,500, depending on how the final budget numbers for the coming fiscal year turn out. Other employees will be considered for raises based on faculty and staff rank increases and degree completion.
- Approved a process that will result in adopting the board's first bylaws to guide officer duties, meetings and other responsibilities. The board reviewed draft bylaws that were revised on April 15. The bylaws must still be reviewed by other college officials before they receive final board approval.

Gooding Scouts help craft business cleanup

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Boy Scout troop leader Ray Goodman attended Monday's Gooding City Council meeting to present an idea to the council and supervise five Scouts taking notes in the audience for their communications merit badges. His scouts ended up offering their own ideas regarding a presentation by the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization. Jan Rogers, SIEDO executive director, spoke to the council about Operation Facelift, which seeks donations from communities to help improve the appearance of their downtowns. Rogers said communities from Burley to Glenns Ferry have shown an interest in the program. Each community raises its own money and develops its own plan to improve facades. Any money raised remains in the town it came from. "Here's the worst-case scenario: We'd get soap and water. We put gloves on and we wash the windows and the buildings along Main Street," Rogers said. "Even if we do that, we'll look so much better." Rogers said she is also looking to get service groups and individuals interested in donating time and elbow grease. "It's a regional concept, but it's a community project," she said. So far, she's got at least a few supporters. During her presentation, one of Goodman's Scouts suggested setting up donation boxes inside local businesses to raise money for Gooding's facelift. Mayor Duke Morton said he looks forward to seeing how SIEDO's idea takes root in Gooding. "I really appreciate this, and I really look forward to working with people and seeing if we can get something going," Morton said. As for the Boy Scouts, Goodman asked the council to pull together a list of projects upcoming Eagle Scouts can collaborate on. This summer, Goodman said about three teenagers will begin the service projects required to become an Eagle Scout. Next summer will see seven more potential Eagles. Goodman is hoping to combine their projects to create one big change for Gooding, such as a new pavilion or grilling area in a park. "Maybe 10 service projects could end up being one big project," Goodman said. Morton said the city would work on crafting such a list. Also Monday, the council approved a sign for Gooding's community garden and waived the application fee, though Councilman Michael Arkoosh suggested larger lettering. "I want old-guy lettering on there," he said. When seconding waiving the fee, Councilman Mel Magnelli declined to second Arkoosh's idea for giant letters. The council also set work sessions for finalizing airport leases and policies and revising the city's vehicle use policy.

Otter puts Idahoans ahead of ideology

Near the end of a political career spent showing the federal government where to get off, Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter did something surprising on Wednesday. He vetoed a bill to block portions of the year-old federal health insurance overhaul in the state. Otter, a Republican, said that while he’s among the strongest opponents of national health care, legislation approved in the 2011 session would require Idaho to forego the creation of an insurance exchange. That, he explained, could open the door for the feds to step in and develop the system. All of which is surprising since Otter was the first governor in the country to sign a law requiring his state to sue over the federal health overhaul, branding it a government overreach. But on Wednesday, Otter effectively offered up a smokescreen by issuing an executive order to prohibit Idaho from implementing the health care law while still allowing the state to develop its own “health care solutions.” In case you don’t recognize it, that’s a figleaf. The Legislature considered and then rejected a sterner measure during the just -adjourned session to declare the 2010 national health care law “null and void.” To do so, Attorney General Lawrence Wasden warned, would be unconstitutional. Opponents argued the bill could slash millions of dollars worth of federal benefits to Idahoans who receive Medicare and Medicaid. Instead, lawmakers passed a watered-down bill barring state employees from cooperating in the health care reform law. That meant little, except potentially excluding Idahoans from benefits the rest of America will enjoy. Legislators were full of sound and fury the past few months, oftentimes signifying little. “Nullification light,” as the bill Otter vetoed was dubbed, was a prime example. But that would have hurt Idahoans. Good for the governor for putting their interests ahead of political posturing.

Facebook should lead energy revolution

We just set a world record for the most comments on a single Facebook post in one day! Our supporters posted no less than 80,000 comments in at least 11 languages on our Facebook Unfriend Coal page in the past 24 hours. Meanwhile, Facebook has less than eight days left on the clock if it is to pledge to go green by Earth Day. The company is doing commendable work in energy efficiency, but it’s still running data centers on coal and nuclear power with no plan to move to clean, safe renewable energy. An official from the Guinness World Records in London will verify the comments record in a week or so, though we smashed the target of 50,000 comments after only 12 hours. This world record shows that people want Facebook to go green. Facebook users want the company to lead a new energy revolution by committing to running its data centers on clean, safe renewable energy, instead of coal and nuclear power. VERONICA LEONARD Buhl (Editor’s note: Veronica Leonard is the lead volunteer for Greenpeace Idaho.)

There may be as many as 6,600 mislabeled or unmarked graves at Arlington National Cemetery, and the closest thing to accountability so far is that two cemetery officials were allowed to retire. Bankers who threw the economy into a melt-down remain Too Big to Resign. Invade a country based on faulty rationales, then bungle the occupation? George W. Bush bestowed the Presidential Medal of Freedom on three architects of the war in Iraq. No wonder voters are angry: Nobody’s ever wrong. Nobody’s ever sorry. Then last week, someone was. Henry Krakowski, chief of the Federal Aviation Administration’s Air Traffic Organization, resigned after a string of frightening instances of air-traffic controllers asleep at the switch — literally. Krakowski, a Boeing 737 captain and former vice president of United Airlines in charge of safety who did aerobatic stunts on the side, was in charge of the country’s 15,000 controllers. In January and again in April, a controller at Seattle’s King County International Airport dozed off a total of three times, twice during the same shift. At Reno-Tahoe International Airport in Nevada, an airborne ambulance with a sick patient on board circled the runway for 16 minutes while a controller got his 40 winks. The lapse that embarrassed the FAA the most occurred at Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport, 20 minutes from the Capitol. As the most frequent of fliers, members of Congress were outraged that two jets had to land on their own when they couldn’t rouse anyone. There are a lot of officials at fault for the Rip Van Winkles in front of blinking radar screens, all the way up to Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood. Pitifully, LaHood called for extending from eight to nine hours the minimum time between shifts, a gesture unlikely to make much of a difference. At 27 airports, instead of one controller on the night shift, the FAA says there will now be two. The one fix that could make a difference immediately is managing the inevitable fatigue of the late shift. Firemen, emergency-room doctors and others burning the midnight oil rest during their time on duty. In some European countries, air-traffic controllers get a quiet room with a cot. Earlier this year, a working group of officials from the FAA and the National Air Traffic Controllers Association looked at research by the Air Force, NASA and sleep experts and recommended that controllers be allowed to take naps while colleagues covered for them.

They were ignored. When it came up again during the recent trouble, LaHood shot it down: “On my watch, controllers will not be paid to take naps.” If Krakowski offers a class in accountability, there’s a senator who probably should attend. Thanks to a Freedom of Information Act request by the website smokinggun.com, we learned last week the grisly details of a reckless, unauthorized landing by Oklahoma Republican Sen. James Inhofe last October at a Texas airport near his vacation house on South Padre Island. Flying his own Cessna, Inhofe chose to disregard the giant X marking the runway as closed. He sent workers running for their lives as he “sky-hopped” over them and six vehicles. One was reportedly hit by debris, others felt the “backwash of the propeller” and still another, according to a supervisor, almost “wet his britches” he was so scared. A senator wants to land where a senator wants to land. According to the FAA report, Inhofe noticed the X, but “still elected to land.” Airport manager Marshall Reece said, “I got over 50 years flying, three tours in Vietnam, 23,000 hours, I can assure you I have never seen such a reckless disregard for human life in my life.” Inhofe offered various explanations: he thought he had “unlimited” use of the airport space, landed to the side of workers, and is only being criticized because an airport official he didn’t name “hates” him. One entity that doesn’t hate him is the FAA, which had every reason to ground him and take action for what might be considered, to quote its safety manual, “deliberate, willful violations which involve gross negligence, recklessness, recidivism” — Inhofe had two previous accidents, both very minor — “or flagrant disregard of” FAA rules. Instead, Inhofe submitted evidence that he’d gone for remedial training, the equivalent of traffic school. Unlike senators, who don’t have to say they’re sorry and play by different rules, Krakowski stepped up, setting a land record for speed — less than a month between public outrage and packing it in. We should name an airport after him. Margaret Carlson is a Bloomberg News columnist.

Will voters passively go along with the fraud?

Your lead article of April 9 (“What Idahoans Got”) invites response. Your coverage puts way too benign a twist to the product of this legislative session. What this just-ended session reveals is a GOP majority — at least most of them — as a self-promoting, self-protecting lot, deliberately denying, downplaying and ridiculing strong, articulate and reasonable constituent input that went against the party line. Right now, the GOP majority rides high, having shoved down the throats of Idahoans Luna’s mess that masquerades mockingly under the title “Students Come First.” Its Orwellian parallels taunt us. Maybe the Idahoans who have been gulled by Luna’s manipulations one day will realize what they have sanctioned when they begin losing their local school districts, and find that “public education” in Idaho is not much more than a cash-cow for out-of-state corporate interests that see Idaho taxpayers as easy-to-con chumps. The actions of the GOP majority on the Luna bills and other narrow-interest legislation, reveal much about many of their members: arrogant, dismissive, obviously intent on exacting an ideological program regardless of the extent or strength of opposing views. I am particularly outraged by the comments of one local state senator whose words you carried in your pages. He sniffed disdainfully that those of us who spoke out against Luna’s statist and fiscally untenable plans, did not have “complete information.” Yet nowhere did I see that same first-term legislator make any effort to publicize information he claimed we lacked. That is a conspicuous failure to act as a concerned, responsive legislator. His words and subsequent votes, as well as those of many of his GOP colleagues, show them to be reflexive partisans, slavishly mouthing the party line and demonstrating not one bit of legislative courage or integrity. Their blandishments and nostrums cannot mask the true nature of their actions. One wonders what their pay-off will be. An unfettered majority is a dangerous thing. They begin to believe they can do what they wish. They begin to see themselves as accountable to no one — especially the voters they so self-righteously claim to represent. My greatest fear is that Idaho voters will passively go along with the fraud, comforted by the mistaken belief that their own legislators would never act against their constituents’ interests. GRENVILLE E. Five myths about why women earn less than men

This year, Equal Pay Day fell on April 12, meaning that women had to work nearly three and a half additional months in- to 2011 to earn what men earned in 2010. If these extra 102 days of work are extend- ed over 40 years — about how long people will work between schooling and re- tirement — women need to work more than 11 addition- al years to earn as much as men. Since the establish- ment of Equal Pay Day 15 years ago, the gap has barely budged, with women mak- ing between 74 percent and 77 percent of what the guys earn. To understand this in- justice, let's first dispense with some of the miscon- ceptions about why guys get bigger paychecks.

1. Women earn less be- cause they enter low-pay- ing fields and become moms.

While it's true that men tend to enter higher-paying fields than women, that dif- ference alone does not ex- plain the gender wage gap. Even when they work in the same occupations, men earn more. For instance, the median weekly salary for full-time male pharmacists was $1,954 in 2009, com- pared to $1,475 for female pharmacists, according to the Institute for Women's Policy Research. And men even earn more than women in traditionally female- dominated occupations. For example, full-time female registered nurses earned an average of $1,035 per week, whereas men earned $1,090 — or an extra $2,860 per year.

2. The wage gap is not an issue for today's young women.

Young women today have opportunities their mothers and grandmothers never had and they are seizing them — women are now more likely than men to at- tend and to graduate from college, while Census data analyzed by the New York-based Reach Advisors sug- gests that childless, never- married women in their 20s out-earn their male peers in some major metropolitan areas.

3. The "he-cession" re- duced the pay gap between men and women.

Men were hit first by the recession, as the construc- tion industry received the first blow. But as the down- turn continued to unfold, the service sector (which employs 20 percent of all female workers and 13 per- cent of male workers) was hit hard. In addition, as states made drastic cuts to their budgets, jobs in edu- cation and public services — which employ more women than men — have also faced drastic cuts.

Women also did not fare well during the mortgage meltdown because they were more likely than men to be targeted by predatory lenders and consequently to have subprime loans. The Consumer Federation of America found that at every income level, women were more likely to receive sub- prime loans than men. Women of color were espe- cially disadvantaged.

4. Only sexist employers discriminate against women.

Pay discrimination is not necessarily the result of sexist beliefs. In fact, dis- crimination is often carried out by well-meaning people who are not even aware of it. All of us are affected by unconscious biases that affect how we evaluate men and women's expertise and skills. In a famous study of symphony auditions, econ- omists Claudia Goldin and Cecilia Rouse found that women musicians were more likely to be hired or promoted when they audi- tioned behind a screen so that judges could not know whether they were a man or woman. Were those evalu- ating musical talent sexist? More likely they were sim- ply succumbing to uncon- scious biases. Since then, numerous studies have shown that even with iden- tical resumes and qualifica- tions, men are viewed more favorably than women.

5. Closing the wage gap will create economic equal- ity between women and men.

Wealth — the value of your assets minus your debts — is a much more comprehensive and accu- rate way to measure a per- son's economic well-being than income. Regardless of how high one's income is, without wealth people are a paycheck away from eco- nomic disaster. Perhaps not surprisingly, single women have less than half of the wealth of single men.

Even if men and women had the same incomes, women would have less wealth for two reasons. First, women are more likely to be single parents and have to support more peo- ple on one income, leaving less left over to save and in- vest. Second, women are still less likely than men to work in jobs that come with fringe benefits — such as employer-sponsored retire- ment plans, subsidized health insurance and paid sick days — that either put wealth in people's hands di- rectly or provide things that people would otherwise have to pay for themselves.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Fast highway speeds troublesome

I can't see driving 85. It's remarkable that the Texas government is in the process of upping its speed limit to 85 mph on more than 500 miles of main roads.

Perusing through some of the Texas newspaper com- ments indicates that there is a strong majority in favor of this action. One notable commentator said, "They've never had a problem on Ger- many's autobahn (where there is no speed limit), so why not raise it here?" Per- haps this particular observer has not yet examined some of the autobahn's recent troubles:

Two summers ago, on a day when "heavy rain sud- denly gave way to blinding sunshine, catching mo- torists unaware," more than 65 people were injured in a massive pileup, including 10 critically. In early April of this year, 50 more cars were involved in another massive autobahn pile-up, caused in part by a blinding sand- storm, created by plowed neighboring agriculture fields. This fiery crash left 10 dead and almost 100 in- jured.

One of my co-travelers has observed that I often drive like a country bump- kin. Perhaps it's because, while negotiating local roads, I think of these dicey situa- tions and my own beloved ones lost in fiery crashes. And my personal grief is not isolated, as our country loses more than 30,000 motor travelers a year to road deaths; many of them on high speed rural roads.

However, since I'm mostly unfamiliar with Texas roads, maybe there's something safer about them that I'm not considering. It would be nice to hear from Dallas to see what that insightful Times-News frequent letter contributor Max Hatfield's take is on this. As for myself, I can't see how a dawdling country bumpkin like me can be reasonably expected to merge safely from high- way ramps onto the Inter- state with oncoming traffic buzzing at 85 and even faster!

Oil, gas on the rise, but will it continue?

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Price is supposed to be based on supply and demand but speculation of disaster in the Middle East is pushing fuel prices higher and higher.

Over the last month, the cost for a gallon of regular unleaded has risen $0.24, in Idaho, now sitting at $3.68.

Idaho and U.S. gas prices continue to rise, the result of a bullish market where investment dollars and future uncertainty in the Middle East and Northern Africa have overshadowed supply and demand fundamentals, according to AAA Idaho.

Fuel in the Gem State remains well below the $3.84 average U.S. price, but both represent sizable increases of 16 cents and 18 cents, respectively, since just April 1, the travel organization said.

BY THE NUMBERS

Average price of regular unleaded today, six months ago and one year ago, by city:
Twin Falls: $3.69, $2.46; $3.15
Burley: $3.69; $2.98; $3.14
Source: AAA/ Oil Price Information System

“Headline grabbing events in the Middle East and Northern Africa have led investors to bet heavily that an investment in crude oil will be a profitable one as oil prices move higher,” said AAA Idaho Director of Public and Government Affairs Dave Carlson. “But these same investors are overlooking evidence that demand is down and that supplies worldwide are adequate.”

Investment dollars and future uncertainty have driven crude oil prices up about 30 percent, or $26.59, in just seven weeks, despite demand actually decreasing over the same period.

A report from SpendingPulse showed domestic gasoline demand for the previous week was down 1.8 percent week-on-week and 3 percent versus the same week in 2010, raising questions about a Department of Energy report that showed a draw-down of 7 million barrels of gasoline stocks. And an increase in interest rates in China and a declaration by an OPEC official on Monday that crude oil market is oversupplied may signal a change in investment behavior.

“Though it may not be likely that market sentiments will switch from bullish to bearish overnight, it does suggest that there may be some light at the end of the tunnel for motorists who are tired of seeing gasoline prices move higher every day,” Carlson said.

Diesel continues to be more expensive as well. In Twin Falls diesel price is now at $4.27 a gallon, up from $3.22 a year ago.

Carlson said that AAA has been told by the Oil Price Information System that diesel produced in the U.S. makes its way to Europe where most of the vehicles use diesel, and there’s an even bigger profit motive.

“If that’s true, that would mean that tight supplies here in the U.S. would warrant higher prices here. A year ago, diesel in the U.S. was priced at $3.06; diesel in Idaho was priced at $3.22 a year ago,” Carlson said.

Prices remain below the historic July 19, 2008 high of $4.16 a gallon for regular unleaded and $4.85 for a gallon of diesel but that doesn’t make paying for it now any less painful.

Job seekers, employers meet at career fair

From housekeeping to door-to-door pest control sales, job seekers attending the ninth annual Southern Idaho Career Fair on Wednesday had a variety of opportunities to explore.

“What caught my attention was the Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Department,” said Twin Falls 17-year-old Kari Smalls. “I’m looking at getting into probation or law enforcement so the department was one of the places I really wanted to check out.”

Small’s friend, Athena Makay, 18, hoped to find employment to carry the new mom through studies at CSI.

fall,” Makay said. “I’m hoping to find something in culinary arts, vet tech or art.”

Both teens took home a small stack of applications to fill out and return to prospective employers.

“I’m really hoping to get a job from attending,” Makay said.

Dozens of exhibitors ranging from business, industry, colleges and universities, military and government agencies were represented.

For some, the fair was an opportunity to let the public know they are hiring again.

“We’re actually looking to fill a number of positions, including a few internships,” said Brad Weiser, Townsquare Media Idaho regional operations manager. “The internships aren’t paid but it’s a great way for college and high school students to get some experience and get their feet in the door, sometimes that is all that’s needed to get started in a career.”

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

INL to lay off 50 armor makers

IDAHO FALLS — Idaho National Laboratory officials say about 50 of the lab’s armor-making workers will be laid off by September 2012 because the U.S. Army doesn’t need as much tank armor.

INL’s human resources director Mark Holubar said the laboratory will continue making armor for the Abrams tanks, but the Army isn’t ordering as much of it.

Deputy Laboratory Director for Management Juan Alvarez says more layoffs across the laboratory may come. Alvarez says the current fiscal mood among lawmakers means the lab will have to do more with less, and that means personnel cuts may be necessary.

Idaho phone companies appeal lawsuit

BOISE — A consortium of Idaho telephone companies is asking the state’s highest court to revive its lawsuit against the Idaho Department of Administration, Qwest Communications Co. and others.

The consortium Syringa Networks sued the state in 2009 claiming the Department of Administration illegally handed Qwest a $60 million contract to install the broadband infrastructure for the Idaho Education Network, a project to link public schools, universities and businesses in Idaho.

But last month Ada County 4th District Judge Patrick Owen dismissed Syringa’s lawsuit, finding in part that the consortium failed to file an administrative appeal of the state’s contract decision before it sued.

Now Syringa Networks is asking the Idaho Supreme Court to decide if it was legally required to exhaust all administrative remedies before turning to the courts.

Ameristar completes stock repurchase

Ameristar Casinos, which operates Cactus Pete’s and the Horseshu casinos in Jackpot, spent nearly $458 million to repurchase over 26 million shares of common stock from the estate of Craig H. Neilsen.

The company bought the stock at $17.50 per share.

The shares represent approximately 45 percent of Ameristar’s outstanding shares and 83 percent of the Neilsen Estate’s ownership in the company.

Thomas Steinbauer, Chief Financial Officer of Ameristar, said, “We are very pleased to complete the repurchase of shares from the Neilsen Estate and the recent opportunistic refinancing of our long-term debt on favorable terms within just seven weeks. The successful completion of these strategic transactions enhances our financial flexibility and allows us to focus on meaningful growth opportunities in the future. Moreover, excluding certain one-time costs, we expect the share repurchase to be immediately accretive to Ameristar’s earnings and free cash flow per share.”

CSI center offers eBay selling class

Class size is limited so early registration is suggested.

Jobless entrepreneurs hire themselves with startup businesses

By Darrell Smith
McClatchy Newspapers

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Starting a business is a risky proposition at the best of times. Census figures show that three of 10 new businesses never reach the two-year mark, and half never turn 5 years old.

During a recession, it might seem almost foolhardy.

But as unemployment hovers at nearly 9 percent nationwide, more and more people are deciding that the recession is exactly the time to roll the dice and create their own jobs.

Leigh Mastrantonio of Granite Bay, Calif., had been contemplating the idea for some time. She returned to Northern California last fall from Las Vegas — where she had been working in the devastated construction market — and started her home-based management consulting firm, In2Focus.

“I found it was time to strike out on my own,” she said. “If not now, when?”

In 2010, Americans created 565,000 businesses a month, according to the Kansas City-based Kauffman Foundation’s annual Index of Entrepreneurial Activity, released in March. That was the highest startup rate in 15 years.

The foundation even coined a phrase for the phenomenon: “jobless entrepreneurship.”

Hard-hit areas like California and Nevada are among the leaders. For every 100,000 adults in California, 470 started businesses last year, trailing only Georgia and Nevada, according to the report.

Sacramento’s U.S. Small Business Administration offices are “getting a lot of interest from startups,” said district director Jim O’Neal. “We’re getting a phenomenal response. Out of necessity, a lot of people are looking to start businesses.”

Obama calls GOP Medicare plan radical but predicts accord on deficits

PALO ALTO — President Barack Obama said Wednesday that congressional Republicans are pushing a radical plan to trim Medicare and Medicaid, ramping up the rhetoric as he and Congress approach crucial decisions on spending and the nation's debt.

"I think it's fair to say that their vision is radical," Obama told a town hall gathering at the headquarters of Facebook, the huge social network company.

"I don't think it's particularly courageous," he said of the GOP plan to convert Medicare to a voucher program and make big cuts to the federal-state Medicaid program for the poor.

"Nothing is easier than solving a problem on the backs of people who are poor, or people who are powerless, or don't have lobbyists, or don't have clout," Obama said.

Other Democrats have called the GOP plan radical, but the president generally has used less pungent language. Even as he sharply criticized the Republicans' spending proposals Wednesday, he said he believes the two parties can reach an accord on long-range plans to cut deficits by about $4 trillion over the next decade.

One year after the BP oil spill disaster: A day of remembrance dawns on the Gulf Coast

NEW ORLEANS — Relatives flew over Gulf of Mexico waters on Wednesday where 11 oil rig workers died a year ago, residents gathered in quiet prayer vigils onshore and President Barack Obama vowed to hold BP and others accountable for "the painful losses that they've caused."

Somber remembrances marked the one-year anniversary of the rig explosion that caused the worst offshore oil spill in American history. But all is not bleak. Beaches, restaurants and hotels are filling up again, and experts say the resilient Gulf is on the mend.

The disaster began on the night of April 20, 2010, when the Deepwater Horizon rig burst into flames and killed the 11 men. The rest of the crew evacuated, but two days later the rig toppled into the Gulf and sank to the sea floor. Over the next 85 days, 206 million gallons of oil — 19 times more than the Exxon Valdez spilled — spewed from the well.

FAA issues new rules for how controllers handle flights with first lady, vice president aboard

Aircraft carrying the first lady or vice president will receive a higher level of scrutiny from air traffic controllers following an aborted landing of a plane carrying Michelle Obama this week, the Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday.

From now on flights carrying Mrs. Obama or Vice President Joe Biden will be handled by an air traffic supervisor rather than a controller, the agency said in a statement. The new rules apply to approaches and departures handled by a regional air traffic facility in Warrenton, Va., and takeoffs and landings at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland where the presidential fleet is based.

Flights with the president on board are already required to be handled by a supervisor

Also on Wednesday, the National Transportation Safety Board said it has opened an investigation into the aborted landing Monday at Andrews of a plane carrying Mrs. Obama.

ARMY PRIVATE SUSPECTED IN WIKILEAKS BREACH HAS BEEN MOVED TO FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAN.

The Army private suspected of illegally passing U.S. government secrets to the WikiLeaks website was transferred Wednesday to an Army prison in Kansas from the Marine brig in Virginia where he has spent the past nine months.

Pfc. Bradley Manning, suspected of having obtained the classified documents while serving as an Army intelligence analyst in Iraq, is awaiting a determination by the Army on whether he is mentally competent to stand trial.

An Army spokesman at the Pentagon, Col. Tom Collins, said Manning arrived safely at the Joint Regional Correctional Facility at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., on Wednesday afternoon. Over the coming five to seven days he will undergo an in-depth physical and behavioral assessment by Leavenworth staff, Collins said.

Shortly after the Pentagon announced its decision to transfer Manning, the soldier's lawyer, David Coombs, wrote on his blog that his client's treatment at Quantico was substandard.

"While the defense hopes that the move to Fort Leavenworth will result in the improvement of Pfc. Manning's conditions of confinement, it nonetheless intends to pursue redress at the appropriate time for the flagrant violations of his constitutional rights by the Quantico confinement facility," Coombs wrote.

Hate crime charge filed against ex-Rutgers student in webcam case; roommate committed suicide

TRENTON — A former Rutgers University freshman who prosecutors said used a webcam to spy on his roommate's same-sex encounter was charged Wednesday with a hate crime and accused of deleting tweets and texts to cover up his tracks.

including bias intimidation and invasion of privacy in events that predated the suicide of 18-year-old Tyler Clementi, who in death started a national conversation on the perils of bullying.

Ravi had already faced invasion of privacy charges along with another Rutgers student, Molly Wei. It took prosecutors months to present their case to a grand jury alleging that Ravi targeted Clementi because of his sexual orientation and tried to broadcast the encounter online to intimidate his roommate.

The cascade of events started the day Ravi "learned the name of his roommate," Middlesex County Prosecutor Bruce Kaplan said in a statement, not elaborating. The charges do not link the alleged spying to Clementi's suicide.

Online poker prosecutions turn $6B industry into a shaky bet; players worry about future

LAS VEGAS — America's multibillion-dollar run at the online poker tables has been interrupted by what could be a killer hand: federal prosecutions of the three biggest websites.

The government has blocked U.S. gamblers from logging on to the offshore sites, which are accused of tricking and bribing banks into processing billions of dollars in illegal profits. Now gamblers who dreamed of enormous prizes in Las Vegas, or even used online poker to make a living, can't access online bankrolls that in some cases reach six figures.

Some predict the American online poker industry, estimated to be worth up to $6 billion, may fold under the weight of the investigations as it threatens amateur and professional players, televised tournaments and the marketing machine that helped Texas Hold'em emerge from smoky casinos to become a dominant form of gambling on the Internet.

Scenic drives

Enjoy southern Idaho by way of the byway

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — If you’re doubting that spring has sprung, try driving the Thousand Springs Byway. Green and white are currently the colors of choice along this 67-mile stretch of roadway that takes passersby through open rangeland, lush farmland and, of course, the Thousand Springs. The green farmlands and white waterfalls are what stood out in my mind during a recent drive. But in some places purple, white and yellow flowers grabbed my attention. The best thing about the byway is that it’s not just a drive. There are a number of places to stop and recreate along this stretch that goes from about Buhl to Bliss.

Water flows from springs at the Ritter Island unit of Thousand Springs State Park near Hagerman, just one of the things to see in the area. ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Spring has sprung in Hagerman, where in some areas ground flowers and other blossoms can be seen. ANDREW WEEKS/Times-News

See a fish

Nestled in the backcountry near the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area are two fish hatcheries: the Hagerman State Fish Hatchery and the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery. Currently, nearly 1.4 million steelhead are being raised in the national hatchery, said project leader Bryan Kenworthy. The site has 66 raceways where the fish grow before being released into the wild. The state hatchery, located near Riley’s Pond, also grows trout and offers a show pond where visitors can view golden trout, rainbow trout, tiger muskie and sturgeon. For the price of a quarter, you can purchase food to feed to the fish. Information: national hatchery, 837-4896; state hatchery, 837-4892.

Catch a fish

Kenadee Wareham screamed in delight as she ran to her friends to show them the small rainbow trout her mother, Cindy Brown, caught on a recent Tuesday afternoon. She held it up, posing for a photo, the fish wiggling on the line. When the photo was taken, she let the fish drop. Now it was her mom’s turn to grab hold of the fish, this time to pull out the hook. “The kids have been bugging me for a while to take them fishing. Today is awesome so I thought we’d come,” Brown said. She was talking about Riley’s Pond and the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area, located off State Fish Hatchery Road. “We come here all summer,” Brown said. The small waterfront is home to golden and rainbow trout, sturgeon, pelicans, muskrats, birds and a variety of butterflies. Fish are stocked frequently during summer, and the small lake is a favorite place to catch trout 8 inches long or larger. Also, don’t forget to stop at the nearby fish hatchery and see its show pond. Information: 837-4892.

Learn about a horse

Last year the raging Long Butte fire destroyed about 4,300 acres of the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument. Afterward, authorities closed the monument, trying to get natural plants to again grow in the area. Last Saturday, the monument reopened to the public. The beds is where the fossil remains of the Hagerman Horse and other prehistoric creatures have been unearthed. It is believed the horse lived during the Pliocene epoch, about 3.5 million years ago. Today, a number of fossils are still embedded in the banks of the Snake River and give a glimpse to what life might have been like before the Ice Age. There’s also a must-see visitors center in downtown Hagerman, where you can see a replica of the skeletal remains of the famous horse and other fossils retrieved from the area. Information: 837-4793.

A replica of the Hagerman Horse skeleton, seen here, and other fossils are on display at the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument Visitors Center in downtown Hagerman. ANDREW WEEKS/Times-News

The best thing about the byway is that it’s not just a drive.

View a waterfall

You likely won’t see thousands of springs at Thousand Springs State Park, an area that offers an abundance of waterfalls along the Snake River Canyon, but it’s an impressive stop nonetheless. Water from the springs comes from the Snake River Plains Aquifer, one of the largest groundwater systems in the world. Water travels hundreds of miles under southern Idaho’s porous volcanic rock and emerges from the springs into the cliffs, where it then cascades to the river below. Beginning Monday, a waterfall will pour near the cliffs above the Idaho Power plant, creating flows of 300 feet per second. The marvel only happens every four years for just a few days, but this time people will be able to view the waterfall until about October as the power company does construction work at its Hagerman plant. The best place to view the waterfall is from lookout points along U.S. Highway 30. Information: 837-4505.

Go for a swim

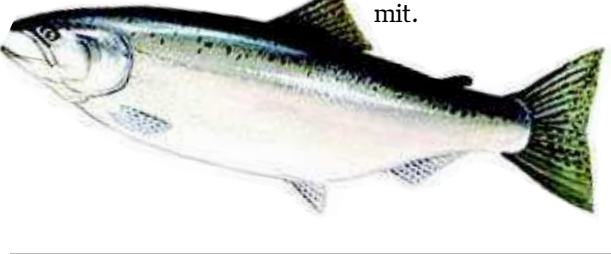

Does all that water you’re viewing from the falls make you want to take a swim? No worries. That’s why there’s at least three natural hot springs in the area — Banbury Hot Springs, Miracle Hot Springs, and Thousand Springs Resort. There’s nothing quite like soaking in a geothermal pool, and that — and more — is just what the springs offer to families wanting to spend a relaxing time together. When you’re done, dry off and find the many other things to do in the area. Information: Thousand Springs, 837-4987; Banbury, 543-4098, and Miracle, 543-6002.

Spring chinook season opens Saturday

Times-News

Grab your fishing poles, anglers. You can start fishing for chinook salmon on Saturday, when the season opens on a number of rivers. The fish might try your patience this year, however, as the Idaho Department of Fish and Game reports that not many chinook have yet arrived in Idaho. Schill to address M.V. Fly Fishers Idaho Fish and Game biologist Dan Schill will address the Magic Valley Fly Fishers on his studies of red-band trout in the ultra-remote high desert streams of southern Idaho and give an overview of angling methods for catching them. His presentation will take place during the Magic Valley Fly Fishers regular monthly meeting at 7 p.m. today at Rock Creek Restaurant, 200 Addison Ave., Twin Falls.

Schill has been conducting wild trout studies for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game in a variety of research and management positions since 1982 and is currently the state's fisheries research supervisor. He has authored more than 30 peer-reviewed papers on trout populations or trout fisheries, including a study of catch-and-release on the Yellowstone River in Yellowstone National Park that demonstrated cutthroat trout in the river were caught an average of 9.7 times per season.

Loop road opens at Craters of the Moon

The scenic 7-mile loop road at Craters of the Moon National Monument, 18 miles west of Arco, is now clear of snow and open to vehicle traffic.

Access to most campsites and trails remain difficult due to snow and ice. All caves also are still closed due to hazardous snow conditions. Spring storms may temporarily close the road, so visitors are advised to check conditions at 527-1335 or www.nps.gov/crmo.

F&G hosts Trapper Education class

Idaho Fish and Game will hold a two-day Trapper Education class from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. May 7 and 8 at the Magic Valley Region Office, 324 South 417 East, Jerome. The class is structured as a 16-hour program. Students will spend part of their time in the classroom learning about safety, history, ethics and responsibility, species-specific techniques and furbearer management. The rest of the time will be in the field working on specific sets, trapping equipment and safety, set locations, habitats, and fur handling. It also will include instruction on skinning, fleshing, cleaning, stretching and drying pelts. The class costs $8 and students will need to register by calling the Jerome Fish and Game office, 324-4359.

Paddlefish snaggers put in back-wrenching hours to land a dream fish

By Brent Frazee
McClatchy Newspapers

WARSAW, Mo. — It had been two hours since Steve Liles started jerking a heavy weight and three big treble hooks through the murky water of Lake of the Ozarks, and he was starting to feel the pain. "This will make an old man out of you," joked Liles, 43. "This paddlefish snagging is work. "I'm spoiled. I'm used to fishing for crappies. This is a little different than that." A fishing rod as stiff as a pool cue, 100-pound test line, 16-ounce sinkers, 10-ought hooks — yeah, that's a little different than the ultralight equipment Liles uses for crappies. When you're going after the biggest fish in the lake, you don't go to battle with a switch and a prayer. Try fishing with that stuff all day. You too will feel the pain.

But it's worth it, Liles will tell you. When you go snagging at this time of the year at Lake of the Ozarks, there's always a chance of hooking into a giant. "It's like looking for a needle in a haystack," Liles said. "But they're out there. "I had my wife out here three years ago and she hooked into a big one. She got it halfway in and said, 'I can't do it anymore. My arms are burning.' "I told her, 'If you want to be a spoonbill snagger, you have to reel in your own fish.' She did and it weighed 72 pounds. "She still talks about that fish."

Now Liles and his friend, Albert Bailey, who both live in Peculiar, were looking for a fish like that. And about two hours into the trip, they found one. As Liles maneuvered his boat through an armada of other snaggers Wednesday morning, he felt his line come to an abrupt stop. He was snagged — and on something other than a stump, rock or brush pile. The braided line raced out of the reel as the giant made a run, and Liles held on. He and the fish played tug-of-war for a few seconds, but eventually Liles got the upper hand. He looked down to see a giant gray creature slowly float to the surface, and he got excited. "That's a good one," he said to Bailey. "We've got to get it in the boat." Bailey scrambled for a gaff, then hooked the monster and struggled to lift it over the rail and flop it to the floor of the boat. Once the paddlefish was in, Liles finally exhaled and celebrated the moment. "We don't have a scale, but I'm guessing that fish will go 60, 65 pounds," he said. "That's what we came out here for." Moments later, Bailey also snagged a paddlefish, though it was much smaller than the first. "You measure mine in inches, not in pounds," Bailey said with a laugh. Still, the two fishermen went home with plenty of meat for future fish fries, and memories of another successful snagging trip. They are two of many who look forward to April, when the Missouri paddlefish snagging season is in full swing. Thousands of fishermen descend on Lake of the Ozarks, Truman and Table Rock lakes and their tributaries in search of the fish of a lifetime. They keep chiropractors in business. They spend long, back-wrenching hours trying to snag into one of the monsters.

But the lure — the dream of catching a fish almost as big as some humans — keeps them coming back. The Missouri state record is 139 pounds, 4 ounces, a fish snagged at Table Rock in 2002. But each year, a few fish in the 100-pound class are caught. Bailey came close to that mark years ago when he snagged a 90-pound paddlefish on the Osage River at Taberville, Mo. "I've been snagging in this area before Truman Lake was even built," he said. "My dad and I would come down here and snag off the bank when this was just a river. "We'd catch some big fish. But there still are big fish out there." On Wednesday, many fishermen had paddlefish tied to the side of their boat, a snagger's status symbol. "It's hard to believe that fish like this live in our reservoirs," Liles said. "I think that's why this spoonbill snagging is so popular. "You have a chance of catching a giant."

Recession-busting rimfires

In these inflationary times, everyone is looking for a bargain. If you're a dedicated shooter, there is no greater value for your shrinking dollar than today's versatility king, the humble .22 rimfire. Like any true classic, the .22 rimfire's virtues have only improved during its 120-plus years of existence. Here's what the various iterations of the .22 casing has to offer.

Short and CB short

This cartridge features the shortest casing and the lightest bullet of the breed. It also shares the distinction of being the oldest metallic cartridge still being commercially loaded today. The 22 Short served as the original chambering in Smith & Wesson's introductory pocket revolver, the model No. 1, and was marshaled by some Union soldiers. Nowadays, loaded with the traditional lead round nose bullet, the 22 Short is favored by international and Olympic rapid-fire pistol competitors for its low recoil and report and premium accuracy. These same traits make the 22 Short CB (conical ball) ideal for introducing fledgling shooters to the sport. Each of my daughters and stepdaughters were introduced to the joys of plinking with the same Marlin single shot rifle, Ruger Single Six revolver, and a hefty supply of 22 Short ammo. The lowly 22 CB Short really comes into its own as a pest eliminator, particularly in crowded suburban settings. One friend loves the 22 CBs for zapping trapped weasels, skunks and feral cats intent on raiding his pigeon coops.

SHOOTING THE BULL Rich Simpson

22 Long Rifle

This is easily the best selling cartridge in the world today. Practically every type of rifle, pistol and revolver has or is currently being chambered for this worthy round. By varying the powder charge, bullet weight and style, the 22 LR can metamorphose into an efficient target, standard velocity, high velocity and even hypervelocity round. The target loads are pricey, specialty ammo loaded to subsonic velocities (below the speed of sound) and tailored to keep their waxed lead bullets in the X-ring. Innovative Subsonic 22LR ammo is becoming increasingly popular with small game hunters wanting to enhance the accuracy and minimize the game-alerting muzzle blast of their hunting rifles. It also maximizes the efficiency of today's sporting and military muzzle suppressors. The biggest sellers are the standard and high-velocity rounds, particularly those marketed in the bulk or value packs. Their 36-40 gr lead or plated bullets are offered in round nose or hollow point form, with the high-velocity hollow points providing the best performance for anchoring small game. For maximum clout in the field or for personal defense, many shooters load the hypervelocity rounds, typified by CCI's Stinger and Quik-Shot, Remington's Yellow Jacket, and Mexico's Aquila Super Maximum. Although the prices just rose slightly, a bulk pack of 500-550 rounds can be had for less than $20. That's a lot of bang for one Andrew Jackson. My personal favorite for hunting and plinking is Federal's Champion Value Pack.

They are wonderfully accurate, deadly on small game, and seem to have fewer misfires than most other brands. This weekend, why not dust off the ole 22, load the kids in the car, buy a recession-busting bulk pack of 22s and enjoy the uniquely American freedom of plinking the afternoon away. As Ted Nugent reminds us, "You can't do this in France!" Good shooting. Rich Simpson may be reached at rsimpson29@hotmail.com.

Question: Julie wrote: "My home was in foreclosure. The "foreclosure solution" agency advised me to file a Chapter 13 bankruptcy pro se (without lawyer representation). Now I am receiving notices from the court that I must file additional forms or my case will be dismissed. I don't understand what forms they mean. What can I do?"

Answer: There are agencies that claim to be able to save homes in foreclosure . . . for a hefty fee. If the agency is unable to negotiate a "work out" with the lender, they typically advise debtors to file a bankruptcy, and some will provide instruction on how to file. Many of these agencies are operating illegally as it is against the law for them to provide legal advice. Under the new laws, bankruptcy has become extraordinarily complex and cannot be accomplished by merely filling out forms. Any bankruptcy lawyer will tell you that it is virtually impossible for a layperson to successfully file a Chapter 13 case, obtain Plan confirmation and Discharge without the benefit of lawyer assistance because the applicable statutes and court rules are too numerous and complex for even a very intelligent layperson to understand and apply. You need to retain experienced bankruptcy counsel immediately.

Guide finds high-water walleyes

By Dennis Anderson
Star Tribune

ON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER, Minn. — Last week, amid warnings of floods and impending floods, Dick “The Griz” Grzywinski backed his john boat toward this very flush river near Red Wing, Minn. The launch ramp itself was invisible, swamped.

“I’ve never seen the river this high,” Griz said.

Then he dumped his boat into the Mississippi, essentially launching it from a parking lot.

This would be the second day in a row Griz was on the big river. Wednesday near Red Wing, Minn., he and a friend boated 83 walleyes and sauger. The biggest walleye weighed a hefty 4½ pounds, the largest sauger was a pound more. The latter was a relative monster: The Minnesota sauger record is 6.275 pounds.

“There’s a lot of water in the river right now, and a lot of current,” Griz said as he angled his boat into midstream. “But the fish are biting.”

The river bore no obvious boundaries. Trees that once grew from high ground were wrapped in waves of current. Docks floated helter-skelter with both ends in deep water. And river shacks stood meekly, as if fearing inundation, water rising all around them, seemingly by the minute.

Griz took all of this in: the gauzy clouds that framed a sun that shone brightly in a cobalt sky; the temperature that was headed toward the middle 60s; the slight wind from the southwest.

Then he gunned his outboard, and said, “Better’n sittin’ at home.”

Which it was, and by the time Griz settled his big john along a juncture of current seams, anything we would catch seemed almost a bonus.

Geese were in the air, honking. Pairs of wood ducks darted among flooded timber. Bald eagles perched on bare tree limbs. And in the backwaters swam buffleheads, bluebills, mallards and the odd canvasback and redhead; ducks each.

A bona fide good guy, Griz can regale you between bites with tales of Billy Martin, the onetime Twins manager and a longtime fishing pal, and can talk, too, about how to fish Mille Lacs or Leech or Winnie or Lake of the Woods, all waters on which he’s earned a living, guiding.

In general, however, he’ll admit he’s as baffled as anyone about the oddball ways in which life unfolds.

Except, that is, for river fishing, which for him poses no mystery whatsoever.

— Dick “The Griz” Grzywinski

He’s been doing it since he was a kid, growing up poor on St. Paul’s East Side, fishing first on the St. Croix, then the Mississippi. A Huck Finn type, in grade school on pleasant spring days he simply walked out the door and hitchhiked to the nearest moving water.

Casting from shore until dark, he later thumbed it home, a stringer of fish in tow.

“Griz, you gettin’ em?”

Fish with Griz virtually anywhere in Minnesota, and all day, every day, you hear this question from anglers in nearby boats. Of whom there usually are plenty. With his shock of silver-black hair and trademark beard, he’s easy to spot at the tiller of an outboard.

Some of these fishermen watch him from a distance, through binocular, trying to steal Griz’s methods. Others virtually tie up alongside him, thinking where he fishes is his secret.

Which it is, partly. But there’s more.

Griz rigs his minnows, for example, with a surgeon’s precision, impaling them exactly the same way every time. And his jigging method is unique.

Which is why he catches so many fish — sometimes in summer on the Mississippi in a single day a dozen or more walleyes over 10 pounds, all released.

For which clients and ne’er-do-well friends like me are grateful.

“I got one guy who saves all his extra money every year, just to go fishing,” Griz said, partly amazed, partly amused.

He spoke not between bites Thursday. But during them.

Because there were few “between bites.”

Walleyes and sauger?

A few hours into our spring outing on a very watery Mississippi, we stopped counting at 52.

Spinner baits offer old school fun, even for veteran anglers

By Ray Sasser
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Two weeks ago, when the weather was pretty much ideal for shallow-water bass, I tied on an $8 spinner bait, turned the trolling motor on and started covering water. The fish responded even better than I expected.

Spinner baits were once my favorite bass lure, but these days I usually select a slow-moving plastic worm or lizard. Those require less effort than a spinner bait, which must be constantly retrieved.

Two weeks ago, I remembered how much fun a spinner bait can be. The fish slammed that high-dollar lure so hard that they managed to bend the stainless steel wire shaft, causing the lure to spin erratically on retrieve. That made me a little mad until I considered how many fish I’d already caught. Then I clipped the banged-up lure off my line, tied on another one just like it and got the same result.

At one point, I’d pulled into a spot that always seems to produce fish and was plumbing the depths with a plastic lizard when I noticed schools of bass fry, fish that were hatched just weeks ago.

In schools numbering in the hundreds, the tiny fish were moving cautiously through dense cover right next to the bank. As I watched, a school of fry ventured too far from cover and immediately paid the price when a three-pounder crashed through their midst.

I laid down the lizard, picked up the spinner bait and caught five bass in 10 casts. The shimmering fry and their nervous skittering resembled the flash of the spinner bait blades, and I

RAY SASSER/Dallas Morning News

The spinner bait doesn't resemble anything a bass might eat but it puts out good vibrations and plenty of flash.

USING A SPINNER BAIT

Here are some tips to improve your spinner bait fishing beyond the idiot realm:

Use a lure with tandem blades for fishing in the shallows.

Single spinner lures are generally used for slower retrieves in deeper water.

Elongated, willow leaf blades work best around grassy cover because they don't hang up as readily. A more oval Colorado or Indiana blade creates more vibration.

The pulse of a good spinner bait can be felt through the rod. If the spinner becomes misaligned, it's not effective. If you can't feel the pulse, jerk on the lure to try to get it functioning again. Otherwise, you've wasted a cast.

Spinner baits come in a variety of weights, from a tiny eighth-ounce model to a huge three-quarter-ounce model.

Midsized lures like the three-eighths and half-ounce are practical for most anglers.

Vary your rate of retrieve. Fish that are following a lure often bite when the lure slows down or speeds up.

If you're getting bites without catching the fish, add a trailer hook for better hookups.

Remember that the trailer hook makes the lure less weedless.

suspect the vibrations were similar as well.

My first spinner bait certainly didn't cost $8. It was an H&H. When I started buying them about 1962, $8 would buy 32 H&Hs, unless you caught them on sale. I usually bought them one at a time.

H&H Lure Co. is still in business in Baton Rouge, La., and still makes spinner baits. Why shouldn't they? According to the company website, more than 200 million of these lures have been sold. They look a lot like the originals except they come in more colors, more sizes, and there's even a twin spin model. The cheapest price I

Defense secretary makes trip to Iraq

Many of the positive changes and progress that has taken place in Iraq over the past few years has been a direct result of the efforts of the service members deployed there, said Secretary of Defense Robert Gates during an April 7 visit with soldiers from United States Division-Center at Camp Liberty, Iraq.

His audience included members of the 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team, currently deployed from Idaho.

“The difference that you and those like you have made in this country is evident around you every single day,” said Gates, noting the strides the U.S. military has made since 2007.

Because of those efforts, he said, the U.S. drawdown in Iraq is continuing as scheduled and that any continued presence beyond December would have to come from a direct request from the Iraqi government.

As the drawdown continues, Gates said he doesn’t want to see the Army as a whole lose out on the experience and knowledge that soldiers have gained, especially at the company level.

“I gave a speech at West Point and I talked about both this war and the war in Afghanistan being, essentially, the captains’ wars,” said Gates. “These are fundamentally small-unit wars.

Spc. Travis Stanek, of Boise, with B Troop, 2nd Squadron, 116th Cavalry Regiment, 116th Cavalry Brigade, United States Division-Center, asks Secretary of Defense Robert M. Gates a question about recent Department of Defense policy.

We’re not dealing with corps in the field, or divisions in the field, but, at the largest the brigade and a lot at the battalion and the company and the platoon level.”

That has led to increased responsibilities at lower levels.

“A lot of younger officers, company grade officers – and NCOs for that matter – have been given a lot of responsibility, a lot of independence, a lot of freedom to innovate,” said Gates. (They have had) to do things differently and deal with a whole range of issues, everything from shooting the enemy to holding village (meetings) or building roads or a hundred other things like that.”

That experience level has led to an unprecedented level of readiness within the military, said Gates.

“We now have the most battle-hardened – and senior military guys will tell you – best military that we have had. I’d hate to see us squander it after we’re out of active combat by not having innovative, open-minded personnel policies that take advantage of the experiences that you all have had in places like Iraq.”

Gates said that one way to ensure that experience isn’t wasted is by having those soldiers teach others and pass on their experiences.

“Some of the things that I’ve talked about are increased opportunities to go back to school, get a degree or a graduate degree,” he said. “Maybe to teach at one of the service schools or any of a variety of experiences so that you’re not just plucked back down into a cubby hole somewhere in the Pentagon.”

Gates also discussed other issues such as recent unrest in places like Libya and how that may affect other areas within the Middle East.

He said he doesn’t expect any repercussions from the situation in Libya in Iraq.

“The difference that you and those like you have made in this country is evident around you every single day.”

– Secretary of Defense Robert M. Gates, speaking to a group of soldiers in Iraq, including some from Idaho

“Iraq is already where a lot of these other countries want to be,” Gates said. “That is, having elections where anybody can run, having people from multiple sectarian groups running and then having a pretty good democratic government.”

Other areas touched on by Gates during a question-and-answer session with soldiers from the division included possible changes to Army policy, such as opening combat arms positions to women.

“Frankly, the policy hasn’t caught up with the reality in some respects,” said Gates. “I’m confident that this is an area that is going to change. The timescale of the change, I have no idea.”

But no matter the changes to come, Gates said his big reason for visiting was simply to say “thank you.”

“I don’t know how many trips I’ve made to Iraq, maybe 14, and this will probably be my last one,” he said. “I just wanted to come and say thank you and tell you that working with you all has been the greatest privilege and the greatest honor of my life.”

4-H teens want to ‘Get Your Goat’

The Minidoka County 4-H Teen Association is trying to “Get Your Goat” for an outstanding cause.

The 12th-annual Get Your Goat fundraiser will be held Friday. Association members will travel around the Mini-Cassia area with their goats, asking businesses or individuals to show their support by donating at least $10 to send the goats somewhere else.

This year, the money will help host eight 4-H teens and two chaperones from Wisconsin for a week in June. Minidoka County 4-H teens plan to take them to Pomerelle, Kane’s Kove and Lake Walcott. There will also be day trips to Twin Falls, Boise and Sun Valley.

Tours of a cheese plant, sugar factory and potato processing plant are also on the schedule.

To deliver a goat or to donate money for the exchange, call 436-7184.

W.R. youth ask shoppers to Bag It

Youth from across the Wood River Valley will volunteer today to educate the public about the implications of plastic bag use, and help distribute 2,000 reusable bags to the community.

The Wood River High School Environmental Club has worked extensively to reduce or eliminate the use of plastic bags in the valley. Its involvement began last year during the first “Just Bag It!” campaign, when members hosted information tables at partnering stores.

Two students, Chase England and Lex Shapiro, then went on to design the winning logo for the program.

Today, they will be joined by students from St. Luke’s YAK! and The Sage School, as well as city employees, for the second “Just Bag It!” event.

Just Bag It! is a part of the Hailey Community Climate Challenge, which is funded by a three-year grant from the Environmental Protection Agency to the city of Hailey. Partners in this year’s program, Albertsons, Atkinsons’ and King’s, will leave their single-use plastic bags in the back and offer a free reusable shopping bag to their first 1,000 customers today.

These durable bags are made completely from recycled plastic bottles and are water-repellent for easy cleaning.

The student volunteers will remind shoppers to grab their own bags from their cars, educate the public on the importance of plastic bag waste reduction, and engage shoppers in a penny pledge.

By making a commitment to shop with reusable bags, communities can reduce local litter and landfill problems while reducing the need for the oil, manufacturing and transportation of both plastic and paper shopping bags.

Surgery declined for senior – should she get 2nd opinion?

DEARDR. GOTT: I have reached my 79th birthday and have been diagnosed with pelvic prolapse, affecting mostly my bladder. However, my OB-GYN describes it as bladder, bowel and cervix. Owing to my heart skipping occasionally, I went through an EKG and all stress tests and blood testing preparing me for surgery. I was given approval for the surgery until my OB-GYN told me that she would not perform the necessary surgery as it would be a long procedure and she didn’t want to put my body through that much stress.

A pessary was ruled out because it did not work for me. So, for the time being, I have decided to live with the situation but am now asking your advice on whether I should get a second opinion or do nothing? What problems do you think I would encounter later on? It is not that easy to talk about, but in doing so, I find it is not all that uncommon.

DEAR READER: Pelvic prolapse is a weakening of the muscles and ligaments of the pelvic organs with the end result being that the organs slip downward out of their normal position. As you have determined, this is a rather common condition that affects almost 50 percent of all women who have had children.

Symptoms include loss of bladder and bowel control, an increased sensation of urgency to urinate with a sensation of being unable to fully empty the bladder, repeat infections and excessive vaginal discharge.

To document the diagnosis, there are bladder-function tests plus pelvic floor strength tests, ultrasound, MRI or cystoscopy.

Because there are several types of prolapse, I will explain them briefly. If the anterior vaginal wall and bladder fall, the condition is known as a cystocele. If the posterior vaginal wall and rectum fall, the condition is known as a rectocele. If the uterus falls, a person has uterine prolapse. Small bowel protrusion through an area between the vagina and rectum is an enterocele.

Initial treatment might begin with medication. For example, menopause causes a decrease in estrogen levels in a woman’s body that results in a weakening of vaginal muscles. Estrogen-replacement therapy can re-strengthen those muscles;

however, this therapy is not appropriate for all women. That decision must be left to each patient’s primary-care physician or gynecologist.

The next step might be physical therapy to include either biofeedback or electrical stimulation – then surgery. The procedure depends on what specific type of prolapse a person has.

I don’t know your full medical history and can only suggest you return to your surgeon with a list of questions. Bring a trusted family member with you who might have a different perspective on the situation. Ask why the doctor has chosen not to perform the procedure after all your testing. Perhaps she found something in the test results that she failed to share with you. Then, if you remain dissatisfied, ask for a referral to another specialist for a second opinion. Bring all your test results when you go. He or she will either agree with the first doctor, or will feel your quality of life is compromised enough that the procedure should be performed.

Dr. Peter H. Gott is a retired physician and the author of several books, including “Live Longer, Live Better,” “Dr. Gott’s No Flour, No Sugar Diet” and “Dr. Gott’s No Flour, No Sugar Cookbook.”

Weather spotter workshops held in Gooding, Eden

Gooding County Disaster Services and the National Weather Service are co-sponsoring a Severe Weather Spotter Training Workshop at 7 p.m. today at the Gooding County Planning and Zoning meeting room, 145 Seventh Ave. E. in Gooding. The session may last up to two hours.

Jerome County Emergency Management and the NWS will also hold a similar workshop at 7 p.m. April 28 at the First Segregation Fire Department in Eden. Hosts are Jerome County Emergency Manager Clint Black and Robert Diaz, warning coordination meteorologist.

Today's workshop is for anyone in Gooding, Twin Falls, Jerome and Lincoln counties who is a current weather spotter, firefighter, law enforcement specialist, land management employee, emergency services technician, transportation operator, outdoor recreationalist or just a weather enthusiast.

Training will include definitions and climatology of severe weather, training on cloud and storm recognition, storm hazards and safety tips, and weather reporting procedures.

Across the Magic Valley, 200 volunteer weather spotters, CoCoRaHS spotters and cooperative observers provide valuable weather information which is fundamental in helping the NWS protect lives and property. However, 200 is not enough. Forecasts are often based on observer data, and warnings for severe weather have even been issued based on information received from trained volunteer spotters, cooperative observers and/or relayed by a HAM operator.

Everyone is invited. Please bring a friend, relative or other interested weather enthusiasts.

Ula Keller Cutler

Oct. 28, 1921-April 19, 2011

Ula Keller Cutler, 89, passed away peacefully in her sleep from natural causes Tuesday, April 19, 2011.

Ula was born Oct. 28, 1921, in Mink Creek, Idaho, to James Leo Keller and Jennie Sophia Erickson Keller. After losing her father at age 4 and her mother at age 13, Ula grew up with her cousins. Ula married Keith McClaren Cutler on Dec. 15, 1941. They are the parents of three children. Following Keith's death, Ula married Morton Cutler on March 8, 1961. They were later sealed in the Logan Utah Temple on March 6, 1982. They are the parents of one child.

Ula was a happy, people-loving person who enjoyed passing time with friends and family. She served several years as a volunteer in the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Auxiliary. She especially loved her children, grandchildren and felt tremendous joy in their lives and accomplishments, posting their photos in her home and introducing them to her many friends whenever she had the opportunity.

She was always an optimist and would often hum a happy tune and present a ready smile. She enjoyed being outdoors and regularly suggested that the family gather for picnics, play and spend time together. Ula also had a strong testimony of the of the gospel of Jesus Christ and, while less able to move around in her later years, was very happy and excited to have a temple close to her home and in view of her front window. Ula loved all of her children with a pure and unconditional love, and she will always be remembered for having a ready ear and an encouraging word.

Mom, we love you and will miss you dearly, and we look forward to being united again with you in the eternities.

She is preceded in death by her parents; and husbands, Keith Cutler and Morton Cutler. She is survived by her children, Charles Leo Cutler (Carolyn), Terry Lynn Thode (Brad), Katharine Ann Gibson (George) and Jeffrey Morton Cutler (Chantel); nine grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

The family wishes to express a special thanks to all of Ula's caregivers at Wynwood Brookdale Senior Living Center for all of their help and kindness and for friends and ward members for their loving service.

A viewing for friends and family will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 23, at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 847 Eastland Drive N. in Twin Falls. The funeral for Ula will follow immediately at 11 a.m. in the chapel with Bishop Rustin Hatch conducting. A graveside dedication service will take place at 2:30 p.m. at Sunset Memorial Park. His adolescent and teen years were spent herding sheep, shearing and caring for livestock. His main interest was in tinkering with old cars. MLB seizes day-to-day control of Dodgers

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball is taking the extraordinary step of assuming control of the Los Angeles Dodgers, a team increasingly paralyzed by its owners' bitter divorce.

Once among baseball's glamour franchises, the Dodgers have been consumed by infighting since Jamie McCourt filed for divorce after 30 years of marriage in October 2009, one week after her husband fired her as the team's chief executive. Frank McCourt accused Jamie of having an affair with her bodyguard-driver and performing poorly at work.

Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig told Frank McCourt on Wednesday he will appoint a trustee to oversee all aspects of the business and the day-to-day operations of the club.

At the same time, Frank McCourt was preparing to sue MLB, a baseball executive familiar with the situation told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity because McCourt had not made any statements.

"I have taken this action because of my deep concerns regarding the finances and operations of the Dodgers and to protect the best interests of the club," Selig said in a statement.

A person familiar with Selig's thinking said the commissioner may choose to force a sale. The person spoke to the AP on the condition of anonymity because Selig's statement did not mention that.

"I consider it a sad day for baseball and a sad day for the Dodgers," general manager Ned Colletti said.

Dodgers manager Don Mattingly had his 50th birthday Wednesday. He said he saw the news on television and then Colletti talked to the team.

"It's hard to imagine it would happen somewhere like the Dodgers, but there's crazy stuff going on everywhere. You're seeing monster major banks going down, so obviously it can happen," Mattingly said before the game against Atlanta at Dodger Stadium.

Baseball officials could not recall another instance in modern times when the commissioner seized control of a team from its owner. Before Tom Hicks sold the Texas Rangers last year, Selig appointed McHale to monitor the Rangers but technically left Hicks in charge of the franchise while McHale worked behind the scenes.

Even when suspending George Steinbrenner from the Yankees in 1990 and forcing Marge Schott to sell her controlling interest in the Cincinnati Reds in 1999, the commissioner's office allowed the owners to choose their successors as the controlling executive.

"This is one of the great franchises. It's hard to imagine a mess like this ever having happened," former Commissioner Fay Vincent said. "It's a very sad situation. I feel very bad for baseball and for Bud."

Selig said he will appoint his representative within a few days.

Twin Falls residents Layne Hampton, 16, left, and his father Jason Hampton pose in their living room Wednesday with a replica they made of the Stanley Cup out of a wok, pet bowls, and an old oil drum as they watch the Washington Capitals play the New York Rangers on television.

Twin Falls father, son craft their own Stanley Cup

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

Sporting his playoff beard and proudly wearing his white, red and blue Alexander Ovechkin jersey, Jason Hampton settled in to watch his beloved Washington Capitals take on the New York Rangers Wednesday with his own Stanley Cup sitting in the living room.

Amazing what you can do with an oil drum, some dog food bowls, a drill, and some nuts and washers.

Diehard hockey fans who moved from the Washington D.C. area in 2006, Jason and his son Layne spent three hours last week building a replica Stanley Cup.

"We had all the materials last year, but by the time we got around to building it, they were already out of the playoffs," said Jason Hampton. "This year we kind of thought, 'If we build it, it (a championship) will come.'"

At 15 pounds and 36.5 inches, the Hampton's replica stands one and a half inches taller and about 20 pounds lighter than the real Stanley Cup, which is also called "The Cup," "Lord Stanley's Cup" and "Hockey's Holy Grail."

The base of their trophy is a 30-gallon oil drum they received from their neighbor. Jason and Layne painted the drum silver and stacked three dog food bowls on top of each other for the neck. They attached a wok to the top by drilling a hole and using nuts and washers.

"We put a rubber washer inside, so we can drink out of it if they win," Jason Hampton said.

A hockey fan since high school, Jason owned Capitals season tickets when he and his family lived in Maryland and for a few years attended all of the team's home games. He would take Layne to practices, where they would meet players and get autographs.

"To me, hockey is the last true team sport. You have superstars on the team, but they're all equal. It's 21 guys and they're all equal," Jason Hampton said.

Unfortunately their hockey watching is now relegated to the television, with the nearest pro teams some 700 miles away in San Jose, Denver and Vancouver.

"There are times when you go to school, they'll have days where you're supposed to wear a sports jersey, and I'm the only one wearing a hockey jersey," said Layne Hampton. "It isn't too big here, but I've been a fan all my life basically."

These fans didn't etch the team names of the past Stanley Cup winners into their replica — "I can't draw," quipped Layne — but the last addition they'll make to their trophy is a Washington Capitals sticker if they win the Stanley Cup.

"Oh if they win, we'll tie the thing to the top of our van and drive around town," Jason Hampton said. "It'd be pretty fun. I don't think people around here would understand what we're doing."

"We're hockey nerds."

CSI baseball facing most important stretch of the season

When the College of Southern Idaho baseball team tries to send its sophomores out in style this weekend, there are some who think that will be the main source of motivation.

That's because, to them, there's not a heck of a lot left to play for before the Region 18 Tournament.

My opinion: Huh?

With first place basically out of reach and third place all but safe, motivation could conceivably be an issue. But there's more at stake in the next eight games than meets the eye.

David Bashore

Salt Lake is ranked No. 1 in the nation. Western Nevada has only lost one Scenic West Athletic Conference home series in its six seasons. The unranked Golden Eagles play both in succession the next two weekends — the Bruins here Friday for CSI's final home series, then a trip to Carson City, Nev., next weekend.

But this eight-game stretch isn't about trying to overhaul the two teams and claim hosting rights and/or the top seed for the Region 18 Tournament.

For that to occur, CSI would need to win its last 12 games, have Salt Lake and Western Nevada split against each other on the final weekend of the season, and see both drop at least two games in their other series — Salt Lake against Eastern Utah, Western Nevada against Southern Nevada.

There's a better chance of me joining my colleague Ryan Howe in the Spudman Triathlon field (read: zero). But a certain amount of pressure rests on the clubhouse at Skip Walker Field nonetheless.

CSI needs to build some momentum heading into the region tournament. Its offense has been in a funk but seems to be coming around. The pitching staff has its rock-solid entities and others that are consistently inconsistent.

If they want to make some noise at the region tournament, the Eagles need to make a statement, and it needs to start this weekend. Show the two frontrunners that they can play with, and beat, both teams and give them something to think about when the trip to West Jordan or Carson City comes in three weeks' time.

Four wins out of eight would accomplish that, and more likely wrap up the third seed for the region tournament as well. That means both playing the last-place team in the first round and potentially avoiding the top seed on its home field in the second round.

Combine those two elements, and the road could be set for CSI to be- come the kind of team several, my- self included, still believe it can be. Championship caliber.

NFL, locked-out players close mediation talks for now

By Jon Krawczynski
Associated Press writer

Executive vice president Jeff Pash, the NFL's lead negotiator, said U.S. Judge Magistrate Arthur Boylan told both sides they probably won't convene again until May 16 because he has a few other matters on his judicial calendar.

U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson is expected to decide well before then on the players' request for an injunction to immediately lift the lockout, now in its 40th day. Her decision will almost certainly be appealed, but it could give the winning side leverage as the clock ticks on the 2010 season.

Also coming up: U.S. District Judge David Doty on May 12 is scheduled to hear the players' request for damages after he ruled in March that the NFL did not maximize revenues for both sides when it renegotiated $4 billion in TV contracts with the labor dispute looming.

"There's a lot of uncertainties right now," Pash said. "I think when we're back together we'll know more. People's legal positions will be clearer."

Both sides said the sessions with Boylan were positive and productive.

"I think everybody believes it was helpful and that's really where we are," said Jim Quinn, an attorney for the players.

Hall of Fame player Carl Eller agreed.

"I do feel very positive about the 2011 season," Eller said. "I think everybody has come here with the idea to have a 2011 season and it's just not been easy to get to that point. So I think everybody's been working hard toward that goal. Seeing them work to that end makes me much more optimistic. I would certainly say we're going to have a 2011 season."

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell said the league is planning to start the season on time despite the lengthy process of navigating the legal system.

"We're planning to play a full season and we're going to negotiate as hard as we can to get that done," Goodell told Giants season-ticket holders in a conference call during a break in mediation session at the federal courthouse

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Justin Masterson remained unbeaten in four decisions and the Cleveland Indians, after being stymied for five innings by Luke Hochevar, rallied to beat Kansas City 7-5 on Wednesday night.

Masterson (4-0) shut down the Royals after allowing two runs in the first. The right-hander, who was 6-13 a year ago, gave up six hits and walked five in six innings.

Thunder throttle Nuggets

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Durant scored 23 points, Russell Westbrook added 21 and Oklahoma City built a big first-half lead on the way to a 106-89 victory over Denver in Game 2 on Wednesday night.
The first-round playoff series shifts to Denver on Saturday night with Oklahoma City leading 2-0.
The Thunder relied heavily on their All-Star duo in Game 1, getting a combined 72 points from Durant and Westbrook. But they got contributions from everyone to build a 26-point lead early in the second quarter.
Ty Lawson scored 20 points to lead Denver, which got as close as 10 in the fourth quarter.
Nene and Raymond Felton added 16 points apiece for the Nuggets.

Sam Young had 17 points for the Grizzlies, who opened the series with their first franchise playoff win.
Young's 3-pointer with 14.9 seconds left made it 89-87 before George Hill sealed the win at the free throw line.

Dodgers

Former Atlanta Braves and Washington Nationals chief executive Stan Kasten is a possible candidate, the person familiar with Selig's thinking said. Reached by telephone, Kasten declined comment.

MLB Executive Vice President John McHale Jr. is another possibility as is Corey Busch, the baseball team executive said.

Busch, a former San Francisco Giants executive vice president under Bob Lurie, helped negotiate the McCourts' acquisition of the Dodgers.

In December, Superior Court Judge Scott Gordon in Los Angeles invalidated a March 2004 post-nuptial agreement giving Frank McCourt sole ownership of the team, allowing Jamie to seek one half of the franchise.

Selig's move came after The Los Angeles Times reported this week that Frank McCourt had arranged a $30 million loan from Fox, the team's television partner. Selig has not approved a $200 million loan from Fox to the club, which was first proposed by the Dodgers last summer, and the Times said the money was needed to make payroll.

"As the 50 percent owner of the Los Angeles Dodgers, I welcome and support the commissioner's actions to provide the necessary transparency, guidance and direction for the franchise and for Dodgers fans everywhere," Jamie McCourt said in a statement.

The Dodgers have not won the World Series since 1988, the longest barren stretch for the franchise since winning its first title as the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1955.

"I commend baseball Commissioner Bud Selig's (wrestling) control of the Dodgers and bringing integrity back to the game," Los Angeles County Supervisor Michael Antonovich said. "It is my hope that the commissioner appoints a representative from the O'Malley family to oversee the team's business affairs during the investigation — a return of the O'Malley family to the Dodgers would be a home run for fans and the Dodgers."

The McCourts purchased the Dodgers from Fox, a subsidiary of Rupert Murdoch's News Corp., for $430 million in 2004. Payroll dropped in both 2010 and 2011; even though it stands at nearly $104 million, the Dodgers were 12th among the 30 teams on opening day.

"My office will continue its thorough investigation into the operations and finances of the Dodgers and related entities during the period of Mr. McCourt's ownership," Selig said. "The Dodgers have been one of the most prestigious franchises in all of sports, and we owe it to their legion of loyal fans to ensure that this club is being operated properly now and will be guided appropriately in the future."

Selig's move might be seen by some as a precedent should the New York Mets have additional financial problems.

With owners Fred Wilpon and Saul Katz under pressure from a lawsuit tied to the Bernard Madoff swindle, the Mets borrowed $25 million last year from Major League Baseball.

Unlike the McCourts, Wilpon is a longtime friend of Selig.

Associated Press writers Beth Harris and John Antczak contributed to this report.

Caps rally from three down to edge Rangers in 2 OT

NEW YORK — Jason Chimera scored 12:36 into the second overtime and the Washington Capitals completed a three-goal comeback to beat the Rangers 4-3 and push New York to the brink of elimination Wednesday night.

New York scored three times in the second period to take a 3-0 lead and seemed poised to head back to Washington all even in the series for Game 5 on Saturday. But the top-seeded Capitals rallied to take a 3-1 lead and can advance to the second round with a win at home.

Alexander Semin started Washington's rally, and Marcus Johansson scored twice in the third to make it 3-3.

The Rangers built their big lead on a goal by Artem Anisimov and tallies just 7 seconds apart by Marian Gaborik and Brandon Dubinsky. Henrik Lundqvist was the hard-luck loser after making 49 saves.

PENGUINS 3, LIGHTNING 2, 2OT

TAMPA, Fla. — James Neal scored 3:38 into the second overtime to give Pittsburgh a 3-1 lead over Tampa Bay in the Eastern Conference series.

Neal gathered a loose puck along the boards and sent the winning shot past goalie Dwayne Roloson, who had 50 saves for Tampa Bay. Marc-Andre Fleury stopped 29 shots — 12 in the extra periods — for the Penguins.

Game 5 is Saturday in Pittsburgh. Martin St. Louis scored late in the second period and Sean Bergenheim added his first career playoff win with less than 4 minutes remaining in regulation as Tampa Bay rallied from a 2-0 deficit for the second straight game. But unlike Game 3, when Pittsburgh's Tyler Kennedy countered with the winning goal just 31 seconds after the Lightning tied it, Tampa Bay took this one into overtime.

SABRES 1, FLYERS 0

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Ryan Miller made 32 saves for his second shutout of the playoffs and Buffalo beat Philadelphia to even the Eastern Conference series 2-2.

Jason Pominville scored at 9:38 of the first period to help the Sabres rebound from two straight losses.

It was Miller's third career play-off shutout and second of the series after he stopped 35 shots in Buffalo's 1-0 victory in Game 1.

Game 5 is Friday night in Philadelphia.

DUCKS 6, PREDATORS 3

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Corey Perry's short-handed goal at 1:17 of the third period put Anaheim ahead to stay and the Ducks beat Nashville tie the Western Conference series 2-2.

Game 5 is Friday night in Anaheim, with Ducks forward Bobby Ryan set to return from a two-game suspension.

Perry also had two assists. Cam Fowler had a power-play goal and had an assist, and Ryan Getzlaf, Brandon McMillan, Teemu Selanne and Saku Koivu added goals. Patric Hornqvist, Joel Ward and Matt Halischuck scored for Nashville, which blew a chance for its first ever 3-1 series lead.

Should Panthers make Cam Newton No. 1? Opinions vary

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The growing consensus among NFL draft analysts is the Carolina Panthers will take Cam Newton with the No. 1 overall pick.

Those pundits differ on whether that's a smart decision.

As the Panthers remain mum on what they'll do next week, there's no shortage of advice.

The most polarizing opinions involve the quarterback who dazzled in leading Auburn to the national title last season but carries plenty of off-field baggage and concerns.

"Cam Newton could be great. He could be a disappointment," ESPN's Mel Kiper Jr. said Wednesday. "High risk, high reward. So it looks like they're going to go Newton."

Kiper recently moved Newton to the top of his mock draft, even as he questions Newton's work ethic and continues to tout Carolina QB Jimmy Clausen.

Peter King of Sports Illustrated has Newton going to Carolina, too.

ESPN analyst Jon Gruden thinks the same and is bullish on Newton.

Others, such as Pro Football Weekly draft analyst Nolan Nawrocki, remain convinced the Panthers won't make the gamble.

"In my opinion, there isn't a true franchise quarterback and I think the Carolina Panthers see it the same way," said Nawrocki, who has written a scathing review of Newton.

There are safer alternatives. Alabama's Marcell Dareus would help fill Carolina's giant hole at defensive tackle. LSU's Patrick Peterson dazzled in workouts and would be the first cornerback to go No. 1.

Receiver A.J. Green of Georgia could finally provide Carolina with a complement and potential replacement for Steve Smith.

Newton is the wild card.

Combine the 6-foot-5 frame with his strong arm, speed and running ability, he has the potential to give the Panthers their first franchise quarterback in their 17-year history.

It's a compelling thought for a club that won two games and scored 16 touchdowns in 2010.

"He's got everything you want," said Mike Mayock of NFL Network.

"He's smart enough, he's a great athlete.

"It all comes down to me, how hard is this kid willing to work?"

Mayock's not alone. Questions about Newton's commitment are everywhere, as well as how he'll adjust from Auburn's simple, no-huddle, spread offense to a complex pro style.

Then there's the November 2008 arrest after he bought a stolen computer and the NCAA investigation into allegations his father solicited money during his recruitment.

"You can get away with ability in college. You can't get away with just ability in the NFL," Kiper said. "It's a completely different ballgame."

"Things came very easy to Cam Newton. I hope he doesn't think it'll come that easy in the NFL."

But while Gruden recently put Newton on the spot about his simple play calls in college during a recent TV segment, he believes he'll be able to adjust to a thick NFL playbook.

Study shows FC Barcelona players best paid in world sports

LONDON — FC Barcelona and Real Madrid have overtaken the New York Yankees as the best-paid global sports teams, according to a British study.

The review published Wednesday showed annual average pay during the 2009-10 season was $7.9 million at Barcelona and $7.4 million at Real Madrid.

The Yankees are paying their players an average of $6.8 million this season to rank third on this year's list.

The team last year topped the review, which is compiled by www.sportingintelligence.com and is being published by ESPN The Magazine.

The NBA's Los Angeles Lakers and Orlando Magic occupy the fourth and fifth spots, followed by English Premier League champion Chelsea.

Manchester City, Manchester United, Liverpool and Arsenal also are among

COULD THE BLACK SOX HAVE TAKEN THEIR CUE FROM THE CUBS?

CHICAGO (AP) — If Chicago has been willing to believe that a cow caused the Great Chicago Fire, maybe it will buy this one: The White Sox got the idea to throw the 1919 World Series after the Cubs did the same thing one year earlier.

That's the suggestion — more of a hint, really — from Eddie Cicotte, one of the infamous Black Sox banned from baseball after their tainted World Series against Cincinnati.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL
UMASS TO JOIN MAC STARTING IN 2012

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Massachusetts is coming to the Mid-American conference.

The school says its football team, currently part of the lower-tier Championship Subdivision, says it will join the MAC starting with the 2012 season.

The year after that, the Minutemen will be eligible to play in the conference title game and bowls.

In 2011, they'll stay in the Colonial Athletic Association. The Minutemen won't be eligible for the postseason.

The Minutemen will play home games at the home of the NFL's Patriots, 90 miles from its campus in Amherst.

Most MAC schools are in the Midwest, largely Ohio and Michigan. Buffalo and Temple, from Philadelphia, are also in the league.

Goodell, Packers CEO Mark Murphy, Falcons President Rich McKay and owners Pat Bowlen of Denver, Jerry Jones from Dallas and Jerry Richardson from Carolina attended Wednesday's session. Players Ben Leber and Mike Vrabel were joined by Eller and attorneys for the players.

Goodell said all parties involved remain committed to ending the NFL's first work stoppage since 1987.

"I think fans want solutions. I want solutions," he said. "I think the players want solutions and I think the teams want solutions. That's why we have to be working at it in negotiations and figuring out how to get to that point."

Players including MVP quarterbacks Tom Brady and Peyton Manning filed the injunction request along with a class-action antitrust lawsuit against the NFL. The lawsuit has been combined with two other similar claims from retirees, former players and rookies-to-be, with Eller the lead plaintiff in that group.

Nelson ordered the two sides into mediation while she considered the request and the two sides met with Boylan following 16 days of failed talks in front of a federal mediator in Washington.

"I think you can't sort of measure this like a stock table in what's going up or down on any given day but it's always a positive to be able to talk to people," Pash said.

Pash said he felt the talks were particularly productive between the league and retired players, and that the owners remain committed to improving benefits and taking care of their former players.

The league and players disagree sharply on how to divide more than $9 billion in annual revenue.

The owners initially wanted to double the money they get off the top for expenses from about $1 billion to about $2 billion, but that number dropped during the first round of mediation. The players have insisted on full financial disclosure from all 32 teams, and so far the league has not opened the books to their liking.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF BETTY J. McCracken, Deceased.

Petitioner, James B. Nutter & Company states and represents to the Registrar as follows:

1. Petitioner, James B. Nutter & Company's interest in this matter is that of a creditor of the estate of Betty J. McCracken.
2. Decedent, Betty J. McCracken, died on January 8, 2010.
3. Venue is proper because at the time of death, Decedent was domiciled in Jerome County, Idaho.
4. To the best of Petitioner's knowledge there are no living heirs.
5. No personal representative has been appointed in this state or elsewhere.
6. Petitioner has neither received nor is aware of any demand for notice of any probate or appointment proceeding concerning the decedent that may have been filed in this state or elsewhere.
7. The time limit for informal probate and appointment has not expired because not more than three years have passed since the decedent's death.
8. Upon information and belief, the decedent died intestate.
9. There are no known heirs with a priority of appointment as personal representative. If anyone qualified to act as such appears in this matter, it is requested that such individual be appointed as personal representative. In the event no person with priority accepts appointment, Petitioner seeks appointment as creditor of the estate of decedent.
10. Bond is not required
11. The total assets in the above estate are exempt from State of Idaho and Federal Estate Taxes. The total value of Decedent's estate is less than $1,000,000.00 which does not require the filing of State of Idaho tax returns or a Federal estate tax return.
12. The assets of the estate should be identified. Petitioner has a Deed of Trust on real property owned by the Decedent and seeks administration of the estate in order to judicially foreclose on the Deed of Trust.

WHEREFORE, PETITIONER REQUESTS THAT:

1. The Decedent's estate be informally probated.
 2. If no individual of higher priority is found, James B. Nutter & Company be informally appointed Personal Representative of Decedent, to act without bond.
 3. Upon qualification and acceptance, Letters of Administration by issued.
- Dated this 22nd day of December, 2010.

"All men are equal — all men, that is to say, who possess umbrellas."

— E.M. Forster

At the Gold Coast Tournament in Australia last year, the quarter-final teams match between a Polish squad and the Australian Juniors squad led by Barry Goren of the United States was dead level with one deal to go.

At one table the Poles played in four no-trump, while the Goren team played in five clubs. You would not fancy the Goren team's equity here, would you? If the no-trump game made, the Polish team would gain at least an IMP and win the match. In four no-trump the Polish declarer (North) won the heart lead and tested clubs. Then he followed the perfectly sensible but disastrous line of taking two diamond finesses against the 10 and queen. Since West had shifted to spades rather than continuing hearts at trick three, the defenders beat the game by only one trick.

Thus the fate of five clubs would determine the need for overtime. Andy Hung finessed the heart at trick one, won the heart return, and played three rounds of diamonds at once, ruffing low when the queen appeared.

Now came the top trump from dummy, but it was plain sailing from here on. Two rounds of hearts stood up, then came the spade ace and a spade ruff, followed by the fourth diamond, ruffed by West and overruffed by dummy. In the three-card ending, declarer led a plain card from dummy and ruffed it low. West could overruff, but then had to lead into the trump tenace at trick 12 to concede the contract.

ANSWER: When the opponents double you for penalties at a low level, unless you know they've done the wrong thing, you tend to assume they have a trump stack. Here, when East passes West's takeout double, you KNOW you're in trouble. Redouble for rescue. You have a fair chance to find an eight-card fit — maybe one not splitting so badly.

IF APRIL 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your restless desire for change may be best played out by working harder at achieving your material ambitions. Your star quality could help you make the connections necessary to climb higher on the ladder of success or to make astute decisions about investments or finances. Your golden opportunity might appear in the first half of June. That is the best time to begin anything of great importance, ask for favors or make crucial decisions. You can make lasting friendships or business contacts in July. In both December and January, lucky breaks can bring you opportunity or assistance in the nick of time.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): There is no “I” in “team.” Put your desires aside for the time being and devote energies toward the common good. Careful planning creates a rousing success. Good taste helps you make tasteful purchases.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Out with the old and in with the new. You won’t have time to dwell on the end of a comfortable routine as new protocols quickly move to the forefront. Your trustworthiness is a factor with authority figures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don’t let your lips write checks that your body can’t cash. Don’t get drawn into a contest of “anything you can do I can do better” for the sake of mere bragging rights. Deeds speak louder than words.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be sure to tie up any loose ends before moving on to the next project. Take on tasks one at a time for optimum efficiency. Embark on new endeavors with a fresh perspective and loads of enthusiasm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Eventually it all comes together. Your team will come out of a slump and each member will be clicking on all cylinders when tackling that new project. Trustworthy and dependable people are available.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The simplest solution often works best. Don’t overanalyze a situation when a quick fix will do. Keep things cordial when dealing with others and steer clear of touchy subjects. Spend only when necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The moment of truth is at hand. This is the time to seal the deal, eliminate a nagging responsibility, or discover valuable insight regarding your love life. Someone close might make a shocking revelation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can’t build a strong foundation on sand. Do your homework and gather information about a new project so that you have a sound foundation upon which to build. Use only reliable sources and avoid hearsay.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don’t expect too much. If you are hoping for the best case scenario, you may be disappointed. Remember that even small victories are good. Open your heart only to those whom you completely trust.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be constructive rather than destructive. You may be ready to blow your top at someone else’s errors, but you’ll both benefit if you teach others how to improve rather than tearing them down. Be patient.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): One is the loneliest number. For a time today, you may feel unwanted or unloved, but by evening you’ll realize it was all in your head. Frank discussions will clear the air regarding a misunderstanding.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stand your ground. There’s no need to go into panic mode if your original plan is altered. The lack of black ink in your bankbook should inspire you to improve that situation. Avoid frivolous spending.
