Judge steps down from prison suit

Winmill says he won't risk suggestion of impropriety

By Rebecca Boone Associated Press writer

BOISE - A federal judge has agreed to step down from a potential class action lawsuit over conditions at an Idaho prison at the request of its operator, Corrections Corp. of America.

Chief U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill has been handling the lawsuit brought by inmates at the Idaho Correctional Center. He announced Tuesday that he was recusing himself after CCA attorneys claimed his staff improperly approached an ACLU attorney about taking the case.

Winmill stressed that there was no improper conduct, and the staffer that contacted the attorney was simply doing her job as a pro bono coordinator – a court worker who finds attorneys to take cases for no charge. But he said he wouldn't risk even the suggestion of impropriety, and so would step down.

The Idaho inmates claim the Boise-area prison is so violent that it's called "Gladiator School" and that the guards use inmateon-inmate violence as a management tool and then deny injured inmates adequate medical care to cover up the violence. Nashville, Tenn.-based CCA says prisoner safety is its top priority and that it works closely with Idaho officials to meet standards. The company manages about 75,000 inmates at 64 facilities in 19 states and the District of Columbia.

The case originally started as a lawsuit brought by inmate Marlin Riggs, who couldn't afford an attorney and asked the court to appoint one. ACLU attorney Stephen Pevar agreed to take the case at no charge after he researched it and determined it could qualify for class action status.

Times-News

A Glenns Ferry woman was cited for following too closely after she allegedly caused a four-vehicle interstate crash during rush hour in Meridian.

According to an Idaho State Police report, Kimberly Steed, 31, struck a vehicle she was following near the Interstate 84 Locust Grove overpass, causing a 5 p.m. chain-reaction crash involving three other vehicles owned by Trea-

Five ISP personnel and an ITD Incident Response unit, the Meridian Fire Department and Ada County paramedics responded to the pile-up. The investigation is ongoing.

and that he pursues primarily class action cases "because they are the best vehicles for achieving structural and systemic reform and constitutional compliance, the primary goal of the ACLU?

Pevar said he only told the court's pro bono coordinator about the issue of class certification to explain to her why he would need several weeks before he could decide whether to take the case. That's exactly the type of communication that should occur between a pro bono coordinator and attorneys, he said.

In the months since the lawsuit was filed, CCA attorneys have asked that the lawsuit be split into two cases: Riggs' claim and the up. portion of the case that could become a class action suit. Recently, the ACLU attorneys agreed that such a split could occur, and they asked that Winmill continue to handle both cases.

CCA attorneys, however, contend that amounts to "judge shopping." They say it all gives the appearance that Pevar only took on the Riggs case so he could have a class action lawsuit before Winmill.

Melissa Scott met her future husband in the mid-1990s, according to Marie Claire. Doc Scott, who held a doctorate from Stanford University, asked her if she had any hobbies. Stamp collecting, she said. Turns out, he collected stamps, too.

"... that was our common thing, and from there things just kind of developed," she said. By 1998, they were an item. Scott ordained her as his administrative pastor, though she had no formal theological training. Two years later, they wed in Reno. He was 70; she was 32. A month later, he was diagnosed with cancer. "I'm the fruit of his lifelong ministry. He birthed me," Melissa Scott told the magazine.

According to Marie Claire, she's a markedly different preacher from Scott, who was prone to off-color rants about everything from UFOs to his ex-wife ("the devil's sister," he called her). Her sermons are more pedagogical, often involving whiteboards crammed with Hebrew and Aramaic Scott claims she's taught herself 20 languages.

That said, Melissa Scott posed nude, as Barbie Bridges, for Penthouse lensman Earl Miller and famed erotic photographer Suze Randall.

At the time, Scott was married to Paul Pastore, who worked for an exoticdancing agency called Fantasy Creations before launching a porn distribution outfit called Barbie Bridges Enterprises.

Undeterred by the publicity, Melissa Scott pastors on. "Only three chapters (of the Bible deal with) God's perfection," she told Marie Claire. "The rest deals with man's fall and bringing man back. I want people to be able to start over, start a brand-new life. How do you do that if you're condemning them? God is a god of second chances." Apparently.

Trump, 'You're hired'?

KANSAS CITY, Mo. -This much is known about Republicans: "The Donald's" latest flirtation with a run for the Gov. Mitt Romney. Huck-White House – he'll let America know whether he's launching a presidential campaign "sometime single point, 46 to 45 perprior to June."

And his announcement will happen on his hit TV show "The Apprentice."

Whether he should be taken seriously or not is another matter entirely. As might run as a third-party with almost anything involving Donald John Trump, opinions are split as plainly as Republicans and Democrats are today.

"At this point, this is a brilliant PR effort," Missouri Sen. Roy Blunt, a fellow Republican, said Wednesday in Kansas City. "Let's see if he really becomes a candidate or not."

Others, however, think Trump's moment may have arrived. Mix Trump's wicked candor and successful business acumen with a country struggling with debt and weary of mealy-mouthed politicians, and he might be the perfect match, they argue.

"He's a good metaphor for what people are looking for today," said Kansas state Sen. Julia Lynn, a Republican. "He's transformed the American dream."

Trump was tied for the lead with former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee in one national poll last week. This week, a McClatchy Newspapers-Marist Poll put his prospects in a somewhat dimmer perspective. He trailed President Barack Obama in a hypothetical matchup by 54 to 38 percent.

That wasn't nearly as competitive as two other Huckabee and former Massachusetts abee trailed Obama 48 to 43 percent, while Romney trailed the president by a cent, a statistical tie.

America has been down this road before with multimillionaire businessmen who want to be president.

Trump has hinted that he contender, but no one seems to know exactly what he'll do.

"I got to say, (he's) as serious as ... I've ever seen him," ABC's George Stephanopoulos said Tuesday after a contentious interview with Trump. "I've been skeptical about this from the very start."

Paragon owner Brandon Fairbanks said he started working with Xavier in 2008, and had a year-tovear contract with the school before February 2010, when Xavier and Paragon entered into a four-year agreement.

Fairbanks said there would be no penalties or extra payments if Xavier broke the contract three years early, adding that Paragon will work with the school to possibly bring professional services in-house before the start of the 2011 school year. In Paragon's place, Xavier – which still lacks a top-level administrator after it fired Fulcher – would have to tab someone to handle school finances, yearly audits and other tasks typically handled by a financial manager and support staff.

Fairbanks said hiring employees to fill Paragon's role again.

Luna seeks applicants for tech task force

Times-News

Applicants are being sought for a task force to assist with implementing the technology components of Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's education overhaul.

Luna's plan to bring more technology into Gem State classrooms will start with teachers receiving laptops in the fall. Other tech-related changes will be phased in during the coming years.

The task force will consist of at least 28 members who will study and develop plans to bring computers to individual students in high schools, and aid in developing plans to provide more online classes. The task force will begin to develop online plans after the State Board of Education determines the number of required online courses students must take to graduate.

Luna's plan has come under fire from educators and others, as concerns include that changes will be funded by a reduction of state money provided for teaching positions. Efforts are currently under way to ask voters in November if Luna should be recalled and his education reform repealed.

Construction contracts have been the elephant in the living room of the CSI board for the past few years, and were partially responsible for the election of trustees Karl Kleinkopf and Bob Keegan over long-serving incumbents last November. By making the bidding process free, open and competitive, the board further nurtured the financial credibility of the college.

Kleinkopf, Keegan and Trustee Allan Frost voted for accountability. Taxpayers in the CSI community college district should be in their debt.

ho Division of Public Works representative Elaine Hill told trustees in March that's the Legislature's preferred process for such projects.

The college will also employ the general contractor process to build the planned $1 million Head Start building in Jerome.

CSI came under fire in 2009 when documents showed that Twin Fallsbased construction firm Starr Corp. and architecture firm CTA began work as the tech center's "design-build" team before CSI's board opened the project to other prospective bidders. CSI has been required to re-bid the project to receive a $4.4 million federal grant for it.

spending often simply ask Americans if they favor cuts. But what if the question was put this way: Unless spending is cut now, in just a few years your family will have to pay $4,000, $9,000 or almost $16,000 a year more, depending on your income, in federal income taxes than you do today. Given that information, do you support federal spending cuts?"

olls about federal

Few would say no. Faced with the prospect of such soaring tax liabilities, most respondents would favor even larger and more immediate cuts than Congress is debating now.

Most Americans are unaware that they will be paying higher taxes of similar amounts in a few years. That's because the federal government is hiding the true cost of its spending choices by running recordbreaking deficits.

Massive deficits aren't just irresponsible. They're dangerous. They easily lead to debt crises, like the one that hit Greece last year, or wildly increased interest payments. Either would force Congress to raise taxes on American families to get its finances under control - if it doesn't cut spending soon.

Deficits of the size Congress is running also dupe voters and taxpayers alike into accepting a larger government than they can afford.

The situation is similar to homebuyers purchasing bigger houses than they otherwise would have because of low introductory mortgage interest rates. When the rate

There is little doubt that politicians in Washington don't want to raise rates to levels anywhere near 85 per cent. They know the economic and political fallout would be too severe. That's why continued deficit spending is so attractive to many of them. But unless Washington lawmakers substantially cut spending, they will ultimately have no choice but to raise rates substantially.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, if Congress chooses to spend at the levels called for in President Obama's 2012 budget, interest expense alone will consume 20 percent of all tax revenue by 2021.

Combined with spending on other mandatory entitlement programs - Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid - almost all tax revenue will be spent before Congress can spend a dime on anything else.

In that situation Congress would have to raise tax rates sharply just to spend on basic necessities such as national defense. That future tax hike would be the result of decisions made by lawmakers to borrow way too much and do nothing to reform costly entitlements today.

And without fundamentally altering the nation's budget trajectory, taxes would have to continually rise to keep pace with spending.

There is still time for Congress to reverse course and avoid economy-devastating tax hikes by cutting spending and fundamentally changing entitlements. But time is running short.

If Congress and the president continue to pass the buck on serious spending cuts, future tax days will soon become continually more painful for American families year after year. And the cause of that pain will be obvious to all.

At that point Americans will make their opinion on the matter known through the only poll that really matters to politicians: the one taken on Election Day.

This letter is not about assigning blame on our state legislators nor about restoring our teachers' pay that was reduced 6.7 percent last year. It's about ensuring the boys and girls attending Buhl Public schools receive at least the same quality of education for the coming school year as they have this year.

We all know how important education is to our community. Buhl has a core of dedicated teachers and administrators, as well as an outstanding elected school board who have worked hard to cope with the reduced education funding these past three years.

On May 17, our School board is asking the Buhl community to support a supplemental levy. It's essential that we, the voters, take the time to educate ourselves as to the ramifications for our kids if the levy is not passed. Please study this issue and vote "yes" on May 17. Buhl students deserve our support. It is the right thing to do.

End corporate welfare as part of the solution

Scot Lehigh, in his op-ed, pointed out several issues which should be obvious to all. Tax cuts for the rich have decimated tax revenues and Rep. Ryan would offset revenue losses with cuts to Medicare and Medicaid. The result would be higher medical costs for seniors who live on fixed incomes.

Rep Ryan has a plan to cut $6 trillion from the budget over the next 10 years. We know who will be affected. Programs which benefit the middle class will be severely reduced. There is no mention of increasing revenues. We all need to tighten our belts, but eliminating corporate welfare should be part of the solution. Why should GE, Exxon and Chevron pay zero taxes?

Rep. Ryan was completely honest when he said, 'This is not a budget, it's a cause." It's been estimated that his cause would result in a loss of 700,000 jobs. Should the country be about fairness for all or a continuation of the shift of wealth to the top?

the wake of the uprisings in the Muslim world this year, as secular, nonviolent protests, led by educated vouth focused on redressing longstanding local grievances, showcased democracy's promise and seemed to leave al-Qaida behind.

Indeed, the pristine spirit of the Arab Spring does represent an existential threat to al-Oaida's extremist ideology. But al-Qaida leaders also know that this is a strategic moment. They are banking on the disillusionment that inevitably follows revolutions to reassert their prominence in the region. And now al-Qaida is silent no more - and is taking the rhetorical offensive.

In recent statements, Ayman al-Zawahri, Osama bin Laden's second-in-command, and Qaida surrogates have aligned themselves with the protesters in Libya, Egypt and elsewhere, while painting the West as an enemy of the Arab people.

In North Africa, al-Qaida in the Islamic Maghreb claimed that while protesters flooded the streets of Tunis and Cairo, it had been fighting in the mountains against the same enemies. Anwar al-Awlaki, a Yemeni-American cleric affiliated with al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula, declared that in the wake of the revolutions,

"our mujahedeen brothers ... will get a chance to breathe again after three decades of suffocation" and that "the great doors of opportunity would open up for the mujahedeen all over the world."

Zawahri has denounced democracy, arguing that toppling dictators is insufficient and that "justice, freedom, and independence" can be achieved only through "jihad and resistance until the Islamic regime rises."

The chaos and disappointment that follow revolutions will inevitably provide many opportunities for al-Qaida to spread its influence. Demographic pressures, economic woes and corruption will continue to bedevil even the best-run governments in the region. Divisions will beset the protest movements, and vestiges of the old regimes may re-emerge.

Al-Qaida and its allies don't need to win the allegiance of every protester to exert their influence; they have a patient view of histo-its Western allies should not be shy about working with reformers and democrats to shape the region's trajectory - and ensuring al-Qaida's irrelevance in the Sunni Arab world, the heart of its supposed constituency.

In countries where autocrats have been toppled (as in Egypt and Tunisia), we must help shape the new political and social environment; in nondemocratic, allied states (like the region's monarchies), we need to accelerate internal reform; and in repressive states (like Iran, Libya and Syria), we should challenge the legitimacy of autocratic regimes and openly assist dissidents and democrats.

This is not about military intervention or the imposition of American-style democracy. It is about using American power and influence to support organic reform movements.

The United States Agency for International Development and advocacy organizations can help civil society groups grow; human rights groups can organize and assist networks of dissidents: and Western women's groups and trade unions could support their counterparts throughout the Middle East. Wealthy philanthropists and entrepreneurs who are part of the Middle Eastregion's youth, while technology companies interested in new markets could part ner with anti-corruption groups to aid political mobilization and increase government accountability and transparency. Hollywood and Bollywood writers and producers should lionize the democratic heroes who took to the streets to challenge the orthodoxy of fear.

A focused campaign to shape the course of reform would align our values and interests with the aspirations of the protesters. More important, it would answer the challenge from al-Qaida to define what happens next and reframe the tired narratives of the past.

In 2005, Zawahri anticipated this battle for reform and noted that "demonstrations and speaking out in the streets" would not be sufficient to achieve freedom in the Muslim world. If we help the protesters succeed, it will not only serve longterm national security interests but also mark the beginning of the end of al-Qaida.

Juan C. Zarate, a senior adviser at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, was the deputy national security adviser for combating terrorism from 2005 to 2009. He wrote this for The New York Times.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't miss repeat of Easter cantata

On April 15, we were privileged to attend an Easter cantata sung by 80 voices, accompanied by a small or chestra, a narration that beautifully told the story of Christ's life and resurrection. It was well organized with lovely pictures of the Savior shown on a large screen that tied the whole story together throughout the entire hour presentation. It was one of the best performances we have seen in all of our years in the valley done by local people.

Our congratulations to the director, Carolee Remington, assisted by Kristie Dewsnup and Marie Hansen and narrator Rich Bevan. The hall was packed and it was such a success that those in attendance gave the group a standing ovation at the end.

For those who didn't get to see it, the cast and directors have decided to do it again that U.S. laws are wildly inconsistent on the subject of gambling, with different jurisdictions outlawing different types of wagers. In fact, lawmakers in California and a handful of other states are seeking to legalize – and tax online betting within their borders, which will only add to the confusion. Rather than encouraging a bustling underground economy for U.S. bettors, Congress should repeal the 2006 law in favor of a legal but tightly regulated online gambling industry.

ously false allegations. Then judges are allowing these questionable complaints to be filed with the assumption that there is no reason not to believe the alleged victims. This is completely unfair.

What is worse is judges are setting outrageously high bonds on many of these accused individuals without any real justifiable reason to do so other than what seems to be personal opinion. I mean, how can you seriously justify a $100,000 bond on someone when there's no real physical or substantial evidence to do so and the individual is also low income.

As far as I recall, according to our Eighth Amendment rights, judges are forbidden from imposing excessive bail on citizens in the community. Yet this practice here in our own community continues to be allowed.

As long as this is allowed, we will continue to see mass incarceration and overcrowding in our jails. This practice by those in power is affecting many in our community. Leaving mothers to work and raise children alone while their husbands sit idle awaiting trial. It's a tremendous burden on any family to have to endure in this already bad economy.

I feel everyone in our community needs to demand more from our local and state government and let them know the lives of our citizens are worth more than the money they make them in jails and prisons. And if everyone is truly innocent until proven guilty, I would sure love to see it for once

Amazon failure takes down sites across the Internet

Bv Peter Svensson Associated Press writer

NEW YORK - Major websites including Foursquare and Reddit crashed or suffered slowdowns Thursday after technical problems rattled Amazon.com's widely used Web servers, frustrating millions of people who couldn't access their favorite sites.

Though better known for selling books, DVDs and other consumer goods, Amazon also rents out space on huge computer servers that run many websites and other online services.

The problems began at an Amazon data center near Dulles Airport outside Washington and persisted into the afternoon. The failures were widespread, but they varied in severity.

HootSuite, which lets users monitor Twitter and other social networks more easily, was down completely, as was questions-and-answers site Quora.

Weak muscles can cause various problems

DEAR DR. GOTT: Four years ago, I was told that I have both neuropathy and myopathy. I'm finding it more difficult to walk and even to lie down comfortably. Is there anything new I can take to eliminate the nerve- and muscle-damage discomfort I'm experiencing?

I take one 300 mg gabapentin at night. I'll be 74 this year and take no other drugs.

DEAR READER: Neuropathy, as you know, is caused by damage to nerves. It can occur anywhere in the body, but it is most common in the extremities, especially the feet and legs. Unfortunately, you don't specify what type of neuropathy you have, and there are many from which to choose.

Peripheral neuropathy is the most common form so this is the type I will assume you have. To begin with, it isn't a single disease but a symptom with numerous possible causes. It results in communication problems between the central nervous system and the remainder of the body. It may be caused by an injury, infection, diabetes, vitamin B deficiency, hypothyroidism, liver or kidney disease, or other conditions.

The feet and hands may be numb, may tingle, and there may be pain involved. A person may lack coordination, experience muscle weakness or paralysis if motor nerves are affected. Bladder or bowel difficulties might occur.

Initial treatment may be with over-the-counter pain medication, anti-seizure medications such as the gabapentin you are taking, antidepressants or a lidocaine patch.

There are a number of steps a person can take on the home front. At the top of the list - discontinue smoking if you currently do so, followed by foot and hand care. Massage the extremities gently or have someone else do it regularly in an attempt to improve circulation. Avoid the pressure of poorly fitting shoes, crossing your knees, or resting on your elbows for extended periods of time. Speak with your physician regarding the use of over-the-counter topical creams containing capsaicin rubbed onto painful areas; discuss acupuncture and biofeedback.

As Brandi Hosman went to the front of the class, she walked with a cane. She explained to her audience that a car accident left her with a small balance problem and some memory issues.

Throughout Hosman's twominute speech, her classmates laughed at almost everything she said. And Hosman couldn't have been happier.

Jerome students act big for 'Bye Bye Birdie'

By Melissa Davlin

Times-News writer

JEROME - The giggly female students stood in a group, clasping their hands and grinning as they burst into song.

"We love you, Conrad, oh yes we do!" they sang, fluttering their eyelashes.

After their ode, "Bye Bye Birdie" director and Jerome High School theater teacher Shane Brown stopped rehearsal. Someone's flat, he said, and this song needs to be high-pitched. And annoying.

"You really need to be, like, overly cheesy, too," offered Michael Rexroat, who plays Albert Peterson.

But cheese isn't the only ingredient of an over-the-top musical like this one. The teen actors combine acting, talented singing and dancing to live piano music, adding an extra challenge to their fun spring show.

In "Bye Bye Birdie," teen idol Conrad Birdie is drafted into the Army. His publicity team picks fan Kim MacAfee to receive a goodbye kiss from Birdie on "The Ed Sullivan Show," but the event causes problems for both Birdie's management and the MacAfees.

With its celebrity hype and air-headed fan club, this story isn't one for subtlety.

Actors always need to have big voices and motions, Tom Crozier said.

"If you don't look big on stage, you don't have as big of a presence," said Crozier, who plays Mr. MacAfee. But with its obnoxious characters, silly humor and horde of fainting teen girls, this play especially calls for exaggeration.

Rapid-fire repartee is natural for this cast

By Emily Katseanes Times-News correspondent

During a rehearsal of a Shakespeare play, it wouldn't be uncommon to hear directors urging their actors to be more dramatic with their movements, more precise with their language or more pronounced with their deliverv.

But during a rehearsal for the College of Southern Idaho's production of "Much Ado About Nothing," director Laine Steel was urging his actors to get a little sillier.

"You're acting like you're really angry at these guys when you're really not," Steel said. "Get into the winkwink, nudge-nudge aspects of the play."

It's a suggestion the cast doesn't fight. Offstage, the actors crack wise about as much as the characters in Shakespeare's play about gossip, lovers and the mix-ups the two make when they meet. That relationship between the

A new series of primitive-skills classes launches Tuesday at the Herrett Center in Twin Falls, taught by guys with a truly goofy devotion to hurling darts and sharpening obsidian. BURLEY - Secondhand? Maybe. But their audience will be the luckiest people in the world. The Mini-Cassia Community Concert series is bringing Barbara Streisand and Frank Sinatra impersonators Sharon Owens and Sebastian Anzaldo to Burley's King Fine Arts Center on April 29.

Ladies will be amazed at the Sinatra come-hither stare. (Your husband won't be jealous, just laughing his head off.) Gents will love hearing "I've Got a Crush on You."

It's just the way they were.

But with Owens and Anzaldo on stage, you will be charmed. It's witchcraft. American impersonators bringing to life two best-selling, classy singers, and throwing in some believable banter. It works. You can check out samples of their performances on YouTube; search "Barbra and Frank."

Cowgirls' poetry: Western storyteller gives free talk

By Karen Bossick Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - The ink on Teresa Jordan's college degree was scarcely dry when she set out driving more than 60,000 miles through Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Texas, Nebraska, Oregon, North Dakota and other Western states.

The Ivy League graduate combined interviews with more than a hundred women who worked on ranches and rodeos with her own photographs of the women, and with historical images from their scrapbooks and newspapers.

Her efforts culminated in "Cowgirls: Women of the American West" - a historical study that The Washington Post said "celebrates the pluck and grit of these overlooked women."

Today Jordan is a celebrat ed Western author, artist and storyteller who has spun tales at such diverse venues as the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Elko, Nev., and conferences on world affairs.

She will share her storytelling in a free presentation, "How to Train a Goldfish and Other Stories from the Open Road," at 6 p.m. Thursday at Hailey's Community Campus, 1020 Fox Acres Road.

Jordan said she'll draw on stories from "the American outback," as well as a tale from "not-so-rural" Butte, Mont.

John Daniel, a friend and Western author himself, said Jordan's storytelling is special in that she's able to give the sense of a story happening, rather than being told: "Teresa's is one of the principal voices defining the new oral tradition of the American West."

"She's one of our classic Western contemporary writers and storytellers," agreed Jenny Emery Davidson, director of the College of Southern Idaho's Blaine County Center, which is hosting Thursday's presentation. "I saw her speak as a visiting professor at the University of Utah. And, even when she was doing a reading, it rolled into storytelling. She's very dynamic, organic and engaged with the audience." In addition to "Cowgirls," Jordan has written and illustrated a host of books, including "Field Notes from Yosemite," "Field Notes from the Grand Canyon: Raging River, Quiet Mind," "Great Ghost Towns of the West" and "Home Land: Ranching and a West that Works."

She is perhaps best known for her memoir, "Riding the White Horse Home," which draws on her experiences growing up on a ranch in the Iron Mountain country of southeastern Wyoming.

A eulogy for agriculture, it tells the stories of men and women who mustered a living amidst physical hardship and killing loneliness in a land scoured by a relentless wind. She takes readers on a journey from the time her great-grandfather bought the ranch in 1887 until her father was forced to sell it four generations later when the agricultural crisis of the 1970s and '80s forced so many ranchers off their land.

"I became a writer, in part, to keep a hold on the land through its stories, if not through its soil," said Jordan, who now lives in Salt Lake City.

That said, Jordan has little time for nostalgia or romanticizing the past: "I know first-hand the complicated family dynamics that combined with economics and harsh weather to push people off the land."

She has captured such stories in her book "Graining the Mare: The Poetry of Ranch Women," which features stories and poetry from some of the women featured at the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Elko, which Jordan's husband, Hal Cannon, helped found. In doing so, she's given voice to a woman who as a girl was lowered into a well every day to dip water during a horrific drought, and to another who was praised as "lucky" for tying her hay bales tight, simply because she was a woman.

"Many years ago, I heard a story about a woman homesteader who was so lonely that she wrote poems on scraps of paper, sewed them onto tumbleweeds and released them to the prairie wind. I suspect this is apocryphal – I've since heard several variations. But as my grandfather used to say, 'If it ain't true, it oughta be? The story touches that part of the human spirit that not only struggles to understand its deepest concerns but also wants to share them," Jordan said.

She is currently writing something she calls "The Year of Living Virtuously (Weekends Off)." It's a yearlong meditation organized around a list of 13 virtues that Benjamin Franklin developed while in his 20s in hopes of mastering them.

"I don't expect, by the end of the year, to have arrived at a higher virtue or answered the great questions of life," Jordan said. "This exercise is a love song to questions. And, as another poet, Maya Angelou, reminds us, 'A bird doesn't sing because it has an answer. It sings because it has a song?"

Stan got his name because, as Hosman said, "he just stands there."

After performing, Hosman and her classmates huddled over her script, reminiscing about the highs of her performance (mistaking a date for a pizza deliverer) and hashing out ways to transform the lows (the joke about being a carrot).

Hosman wasn't the only one in the spotlight. Next up was Deb Seles, a former Chicagoan who introduced herself by saying she's an Episcopalian priest.

Seles performed an alternate ending to her priestess joke that ended with the accidental death of a Catholic priest. The class weighed the merits of both versions, but the father's death scene easily won out. Hill debated the ratio of background ex-

Nelson, Buhl teams shine in Declo

By Ryan Howe

Times-News writer

DECLO - When Alyssa Nelson of Wendell woke up Thursday morning, the last thing she wanted to do was compete at a track meet.

"I woke up this morning and I looked at the weather and I honestly did not feel motivated at all," Nelson said. "I got here and the wind is blowing like 42 miles an hour. But I was like, 'I've got to compete anyways?"

Good thing, because Nelson turned in a career day, winning four events at the Brad Matthews Invitational at Declo High School.

Although she didn't set any personal records, Nelson was good enough to take the triple jump, long jump, 100-meter hurdles and 300 hurdles.

"I just did my best and I ended up doing about the same as I do at other meets, so I was lucky," Nelson said. "I'm really happy right an girls have won the Brad hard. It's what we've wanted now."

Groenewegen

(Ariz.), I just knew that I needed to keep working. So I started staying late, taking more cuts, and it's that time I put in that's starting to pay off."

Griffin currently leads the team with 25 homers and 87 RBIs, good enough for second in the nation in both categories. But she wouldn't have gotten there without strong protection behind her, and Groenewegen is putting up picture-perfect cleanup hitter numbers by posting 18 homers and 80 RBIs.

It's a far cry from a season ago, where she circled the bases just once and drove in 16 runs while battling back from a broken hand suffered prior to the season. It took her almost a year to get the swing back, but it's back in a big way.

"The player we've seen this year is the girl I saw in Portland (Ore., while recruiting). When she hits it, she hits the ball hard," said CSI coach Nick Baumert. "She's been great in the four hole, giving Griff good protection, and Kelsev (Bryant) is no slouch right behind her. People see the numbers and obviously see Marina can swing the bat, but she's also played great think people miss that sometimes?

Groenewegen and six other sophomores - Griffin, Marie Williams, Latieshia Webster, Kelsey Bryant, Lyndi Miller and Jessica Albertson – will make their final home appearances this weekend. CSI will honor its sophomores before the beginning of today's 1 p.m. doubleheader against North Idaho College.

"It's crazy how fast the time goes. At the beginning of the season we kind of had it in the back of our minds that it was our last season and we wanted to go out with a bang, but it still came upon us really quickly," said Groenewegen.

While the sophomores go out, one freshman is getting a bit of a homecoming as Twin of time between meetings Falls High grad Brianna Bishop returns to town. In her first season for the Cardinals she's hitting .282 with seven doubles, three homers and 17 RBIs.

The final home weekend of the season features an added bit of spice. The Golden Eagles are essentially locked into the No. 2 seed for the Region 18 Tournament in three weeks, which will almost defense at third base and I certainly be held in Salt Lake City. But that doesn't mean there's not a lot to play for.

> First, it's sophomore weekend. Second, it's the battle for Idaho JUCO supremacy. Third, Cardinals catcher Shelby Gonzales, who has one home run and three RBIs more than Griffin, made the proverbial bulletin board when she told the Coeur d'Alene Press that with the way North Idaho was playing it would be the Cardinals playing Salt Lake for the region championship.

The Eagles could have fired back, reminding their rivals from the north part of the state about the four-game sweep CSI laid down earlier in the season. But they decided to be more diplomatic.

"I guess with the amount you can forget that, but a lot can change during the season," Baumert said. "We saw last week that Snow was a lot better than when we played them the first time and I expect North Idaho to be better than when we played them last time too. This time of the season is all about making sure you're still dialing in and getting better, and I think we're doing that."

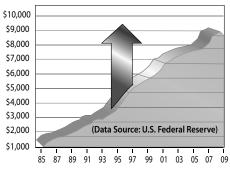

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

CreditGUARD of America, non-profit licensed debt management service provider, is making a new program available to lower debt payments and become free of all credit card debt in only three to five years. Consumers need only $2,000 or more in total credit card debt and are falling behind on any account, to cut their payment by 35% to 50%, and reduce or eliminate interest charges altogether.

Willis' birdie run brings him Heritage lead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. – Garrett Willis had a run do for four days?" he said. of six straight birdies for a 7-under 64 and a one-stroke lead Thursday at The Heritage.

Willis was a shot in front of Arjun Atwal, Matt Bettencourt, Chad Campbell and Tim Herron at Harbour Town Golf Links. Mark Wilson, Camilo Villegas and 2009 Heritage champion Brian Gay were two strokes back.

Luke Donald, the world's No. 3 player, topped a group at 67.

Willis, the 2001 winner in Tucson in his first event as a PGA Tour member, planned to switch to a belly putter this week, but stuck with his longtime Scotty Cameron model putter he called "Old Faithful."

The decision was a good one as Willis moved in front with his birdie run. He broke free from the pack at 6 under with a 15-footer for birdie on No. 16.

The round was slowed by a rain delay of more than 2 hours, leaving 18 players who must finish today before starting the second round.

MLB New Dodgers exec says Selig's move 'irresponsible'

LOS ANGELES – A newly hired Los Angeles Dodgers executive criticized Bud Selig on Thursday, calling the baseball commissioner's move to take control of the team "irresponsible."

Vice chairman Steve Soboroff held a news conference during a 5-3 win over Atlanta in 12 innings at Dodger Stadium to assail Selig's actions.

Major League Baseball took over day-to-day operations of the Dodgers on Wednesday because owner Frank McCourt's troubled finances and unresolved divorce settlement have seemingly paralyzed the franchise.

"All this momentum is building and then all of sudden this letter comes in and says, 'You don't have any money. You don't have this or that.' I think it was irresponsible," Soboroff said.

'To me, if you're going to send somebody out here to take something over, you don't write a letter that says, 'Gee whiz, here's all these problems with you and here's everything else, but don't worry, later on in the week we're going to send somebody else out.' You do it the same day. ... What are you supposed to

Selig is expected to soon appoint a new head of the Dodgers.

IF APRIL 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may find that helping others can be one of the keys to fulfillment in the coming year. If you are single, late summer could bring someone new and interesting, but all that glitters may not be gold so don't rush into anything too quickly. Don't delay a vacation too late in 2011-by fall your work load may increase. Taking time alone to think things through will be your best course for making wise decisions this year. Your stars for much of this year should give you both luck and opportunities-next January could be the time to form a partnership or a strategic alliance.

19): Put the good in Good Friday. Even those who don't follow the Easter holiday can brighten their day by showing good humor. Pay attention to the symbols of rebirth as these may hold special significance for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't get caught with your pants down. Just when you think it's safe to slack off a new situation is sure to arise. Stay on your toes and don't let any oversights slip through the cracks. Remain alert.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends and family will be the main focus for the holiday weekend. Allow plenty of time to reach your destination because excess speed can create problems. Take your time to get the most enjoyment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A slow start can be countered by a strong finish. Your day may be a bit dull to begin with, but as the evening approaches, you'll find yourself in a relaxed and sociable atmosphere that will carry into the night.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): I think I can, I think I can.... Remember the little engine that kept chugging up that hill. Your passionate perseverance on a crucial project will carry you through to a prosperous conclusion. Stick with it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Slow and steady wins the race. Getting overwhelmed by the holiday rush will make you miserable. Plan ahead so that you set your own pace in your travels this weekend. Finish the old before starting the new.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Sometimes what looks too good to be true turns out better than you could have hoped for. A new romance may be compatible with you on more than one level. Good prospects need some time to develop.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Time for quick thinking. The tasks that require the greatest effort may provide the greatest satisfaction. A tough project looms ahead, but the sooner you start chipping away at it, the sooner it will be completed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't cut corners. Taking shortcuts to get a nagging task out of the way will get it done, but the lackluster approach will show. Take the time to do the job properly and take pride in the results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Find out what's so happy about happy hour. Get out on the town with the boys or the girls and let your hair down. Don't be a wallflower and you'll have no trouble filling your dance card this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): He who hesitates is lost. Go full steam ahead this weekend, whether you spend time cozying up with a significant other or get a head start on next week's projects. Now is the time for actions, not words.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It's time to bury the hatchet. Swallow your pride and make the first step towards reconciliation. Your businesslike attitude will not gain favor today, but you can't go to the other extreme and remain too vague.

NOTICE OF DECISION

As the Responsible Official, Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor Rebecca S. Nourse signed a Decision Notice and Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI) on April 19, 2011, approving the Iron Creek Roads Realignment and Reconstruction Project. The project area is located west of the town of Stanley, Idaho. The Forest Supervisor's decision is to approve the Proposed Action as analyzed and disclosed in the Draft and Final Environmental Assessment (EA) documents.

The proposed project will realign a 1/2 mile segment of National Forest System Road 70692, which accesses the Iron Creek Subdivision (T10N, R13E, Section 7, BM). The existing sinuous road alignment and culvert crossing of Iron Creek developed from the route of an old livestock ford. It is no longer safe or suitable for the use it receives and is incompatible with adjacent resources. The realignment will follow a direct route over a new channel-spanning bridge of Iron Creek. The former alignment, and routes branching from it, will then be closed and rehabilitated.

Copies of the EA and Decision Notice/FONSI are available at the Sawtooth National Recreation Area Headquarters Office, 8 miles north of Ketchum (208-727-5000); at the Stanley Ranger Station, 3 miles south of Stanley (208-774-3000); or at the Sawtooth Forest Supervisor's Office, 2647 Kimberly Road East in Twin Falls (208-737-3200). "That fellow seems to me to possess but one idea, and that is a wrong one."

- Samuel Johnson

Today's Gold Coast deal saw both North and South doing a great deal of bidding. In response to the splinter-jump to four clubs, South felt that his controls required him to make one slam-try below game, while North decided that his fourth trump and void must give 12 tricks some play. Thus an exceedingly delicate spade slam was reached. What is the best plan after a trump lead?

Best is to win the trump lead and crossruff, planning to ruff three clubs in dummy while cashing the diamond ace, then ruffing two diamonds in hand. After setting up the diamonds, declarer reaches a six-card ending with the lead in dummy.

Correct technique at this point (particularly because you believe from the opening lead that trumps rate to be 3-1) is to leave two trumps outstanding and to cash the diamond king, pitching your last club loser.

After West ruffs in, South can regain the lead whatever West does, draw the last trump, then cross to dummy with the heart king to pitch his losing heart on dummy's fifth diamond.

Declarer will go down only if West started with precisely 2-4-4-3 shape. In that case, East would ruff the fourth diamond and lead a club for the trump promotion. This line survives against all other 4-3 diamond breaks, whether or not trumps break.

After the slam made, it was either humorous or disconcerting for South to discover that his teammates had conceded 12 tricks as well — but they were defending three spades.

ANSWER: It may look tempting to jump to three diamonds now, but that should be a real gametry, not a pre-emptive attempt to keep the opponents out. If West competes to two spades, you can always reraise diamonds later. But the opponents' silence suggests partner may well have four spades. So bid two diamonds and await developments.

nappers in Lebanon freed American hostage Robert Polhill after nearly 39 months of captivity.

In 1994, Richard M. Nixon, the 37th president of the United States, died at a New York hospital four days after suffering a stroke; he was 81.

Ten years ago: Leaders of 34 Western Hemisphere nations meeting in Quebec agreed to stick with an ambitious plan to create the world's largest free-trade zone by 2005 and penalize any country that straved from the path of democracy. Two spacewalking astronauts, including Canadian Chris Hadfield, installed a massive Canadian-built robot arm on the international space station. In a boxing match in South Africa, Hasim Rahman stopped Lennox Lewis in the fifth round to capture the WBC and IBF heavyweight titles in one of the biggest upsets in boxing history.

Five years ago: The Iraqi parliament elected Jalal Talabani to another term as president. New Orleans Mayor Ray Nagin and Louisiana Lt. Gov. Mitch Landrieu won spots in a runoff election for Nagin's job (Nagin won the runoff). Italian actress Alida Valli died in Rome at age 84.

One year ago: The Deepwater Horizon oil platform, operated by BP, sank into the Gulf of Mexico two davs after a massive explosion that killed 11 workers. Classifieds 6 Friday, April 22, 2011

DEAR ABBY: My father is a state worker who has "furlough Fridays." My sister, "Dee," went home early from school last Friday because she wasn't feeling well and found him in bed with one of his co-workers. Mom was at work, so apparently Dad thought he was safe. If Mom ever found out, their marriage would be over. Dad is begging Dee not to tell.

Dee and I have been saving for a large HDTV for our bedroom. Dad is now offering to pay for it. He says he'll tell Mom he's helping us because we have been working so hard to save the money. Actually, he'd pay for the whole thing and let us keep our money.

Dee is all for it. She says we can use Dad's affair to get more from him in the future. I'm shocked and disappointed in my father, and while I don't want to see my parents' marriage destroyed, I don't feel right about letting him bribe us. What should I do?

- CALIFORNIA GIRL

DEAR CALIFORNIA GIRL: Your father is a piece of work. That he would attempt to rope his daughters in as co-conspirators shows the extent of his lack of character. And if you didn't realize it, you wouldn't have written to me.

Please do not go along with your sister's plan to accept the payoff. It's extortion. If you keep the secret, there is nothing to prevent your father from continuing his adulterous affairs. As difficult as hearing about this from you may be to your mother, if she should find out what's been going on — - and it ALWAYS comes out — - and realize her daughters were aware of it, her pain will be magnified.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance has a daughter in college. "Kimberly" emails her essays to her father, always saying, "I need you to spellcheck, check grammar and fix everything. Then send it back to me."

As a teacher, I have told him this is unethical. His daughter is working for a grade and there are resources available at the university. She has no disability and time is not an issue.

When this happens my blood boils. Am I wrong? Or is it wrong of her to expect Daddy to fix her papers so she can get a good grade? He thinks I'm overreacting.

- NOT FOOLED IN MICHIGAN DEAR NOT FOOLED: Of course you're not wrong. As well-intended as your fiance may be, by correcting his daughter's assignments he's preventing her from learning skills she will need once she graduates. Warning: If you plan to marry this man, be prepared for a future filled with him solving one problem after another for her, because he's not going to change and neither will she. A college girl being this dependent on Daddy isn't healthy.

DEAR ABBY: How long after you are married can you take a honeymoon? My husband and I dream of going to Venice so we can kiss on the Bridge of Sighs. We've heard if you do that, you'll be in love forever.

We're saving our money, but won't be able to afford to go until after our first anniversary. Is there a rule that a honeymoon must be taken within the first year of marriage?

- LIZA IN ALASKA DEAR LIZA: There's no such rule that I know of. Because it's your first big trip together as man and wife, call it a "deferred honeymoon" (after all, that's what it is), and you need not apologize for doing so.
