Jerome Co. officials get advice on jail construction

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County commissioners have plenty of decisions to make before voters make a final one in November — choosing whether the county will get a new jail.

The county officials need to decide on the construction method for the new facility, whether to hire an architect to draw preliminary plans so the public has a stronger sense of what the new jail would look like, and where they'd build it.

Commissioners heard a presentation on Monday from architect Russ Moorhead of Lombard-Conrad Architects in Boise, and general contractor Scott Hedrick, about the options and benefits associated with different construction contracts and bidding processes.

The next step for the county comes today, when commissioners meet again to plan and make a decision. That decision may include hiring an architect for preliminary design work and deciding upon what construction method to pursue.

A proposed 120-bed jail would cost an estimated $8 million to $11 million. More-precise figures are expected to emerge before the November bond election.

Among the construction options outlined:

- Construction/management adviser: With this method, the county would hire an architect and a general contractor, but they would be chosen separately instead of as one proposal from a design-build team.

Both would report to the county, an arrangement that likely would give the county the most control over the project, Hedrick said.

Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall stressed the importance of the county maintaining a strong role in keeping the project on budget.

"It's important that the county maintain control over the process," he said.

- Design-bid-build: This method would require hiring an architect to design the jail, then putting the design out for a bid

TEST OF THE TIMES

As state eyes changes, Burley, Jerome high schools seek to break streaks of ISAT progress woes

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Before students head into computer labs to take the annual Idaho Standards Achievement Test, some school officials are handing out peppermints, hard candy and sticks of gum to enliven sleepy brains.

But a quick sugar rush isn't the only thing students get before taking a test meant to measure their teachers' effectiveness and ultimately determine if they'll graduate. Preparation for the ISAT starts early in the fall and is amped up a few weeks before testing begins in April.

Jerome High School English teacher Erica Rogers stopped in the middle of a Monday lesson on Julius Caesar to focus on vocabulary and grammar rules her sophomore students will face during their final year of ISAT testing.

See SCHOOLS, Main 2

Q: What is the ISAT?

The Idaho Standards Achievement Test measures students' language, reading and math skills starting in the third grade and continues until 10th grade. A science test is implemented in grades five, seven and 10. Students must pass with a proficient score before they are allowed to graduate.

Q: Why is it important?

ISAT scores reflect schools' Annual Yearly Progress (AYP), a measure of student achievement associated with federal No Child Left Behind mandates. If a school fails to meet AYP for five years, it must make significant changes to show it is making progress toward improvement.

Is radiation good for you? The old man and our fear of invisible rays

Twin Falls City Council shoots down CSI apartments

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council spared the residents of the Green Acres subdivision from new student-oriented apartments in a neighboring lot at a marathon meeting Monday night.

All five of the voting council members voted to pull the six-acre sliver — and potential lot for two 40-unit, two-story apartment complexes — from a larger motion to approve a new CSI zoning designation for the entirety of the college's 366 total acres. The larger motion was also approved 5-0.

Mayor Don Hall stepped down from the discussions because he works at CSI; Councilman Will Kezele was out of town.

Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka, who said she no longer works at CSI and did not excuse herself from the vote, said removing the six acres in question will allow CSI to look at other uses for the area and allow the council to readdress it later. The section is on CSI's east side.

The council faced a barrage of anti-complex testimony from neighboring homeowners and businesses concerned about increased traffic on what they said was an already dangerous road, and the potential nuisance of a 24-7 apartment complex, complete with its associated noise and light. Some business owners also worried about vandals.

Aside from CSI Vice President of Administration Mike Mason, who made the pitch for the complex, only two people voiced their support for the complex and both were students.

Sheree Haggan, CSI student body president, said the college needs more affordable housing within walking distance for its students. She further railed against the community members who she said stereotyped college students as animals, while all the community members were angels.

In other council news:

- The council approved two new events, both beginning the first weekend of May. The Celebration of Art Festival was approved to be held on the empty

T.F. County works to minimize St. Luke's relocation stress

Commissioners to look at extending doctor's lease, though questions remain

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls County commissioners have said they want St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center's move to its new Twin Falls hospital to have as little an impact on patient care as possible.

With Dr. David Christensen's practice, they're trying to act on it.

Christensen, an orthopedic surgeon, is leasing space in the St. Luke's clinic building on Shoshone Street, which, like many of the current St. Luke's facilities, is owned by Twin Falls County. Christensen is working to separate from the health system and go independent — which puts his location in jeopardy when the clinic reverts back to county control on July 1.

In response, the county will compare Christensen's current lease with St. Luke's to what the county can afford to do, trying to mimic the cost and benefits, the commissioners said at a meeting with Christensen on Monday.

"We will do everything to accommodate this gentleman because we don't want anything to happen to patient-care operations," Commissioner Terry Kramer said.

Christensen's location inside the Shoshone Street clinic may work in his favor, the commissioners said: The practice is on the second floor, which will already be kept open for the county assessor's operation. It may have been cost-prohibitive to keep the utilities and infrastructure active for one tenant on an otherwise vacant floor, Kramer said. For that reason, Christensen may lose use of the first-floor X-ray room.

The commissioners recommended the arrangement not be a long-term lease because the Shoshone Street clinic will likely be renovated to hold non-medical office space.

Kramer said Christensen is one of two doctors to approach the county about its soon-to-be-open medical facilities, though the other doctor was looking to expand his office space.

Commission Chairman George Urie was the only one to raise an issue with the lease: Will it interfere with the county's do-not-compete contract with St. Luke's regarding medical care? The commissioners all had different interpretations of how restrictive the do-not-compete is — or how restrictive St. Luke's may interpret it to be.

Kramer said he doesn't think a lease agreement with Christensen would violate the do-not-compete clause because Christensen isn't a competing hospital. He said he will raise the question with St. Luke's officials today in a previously scheduled meeting.

Radiation

being doubted, "if we get more radiation, we'd live a more healthful life."

He is the modern father of this provocative theory, which has riled and intrigued scientists for decades. He also lives it.

On a bookshelf next to his bed, just inches from where he sleeps, sits a jagged brown rock, about the size of a small bowling ball, dotted with flecks of uranium, spilling invisible rays.

Radiation is seen as a dangerous phantom — both poisonous and invisible.

And radiation is as much a political issue as a scientific one, with clashes among anti-nuclear activists, power companies, researchers and governments.

It stirs thoughts of cancers and birth defects, nuclear weapons and fallout, Three Mile Island, Chernobyl and now Fukushima Daiichi. Calling it beneficial seems like a hoax, a polluter's dream.

Yes, Luckey says, radiation is a poison. But high doses and low doses have opposite effects.

High doses kill andicken. Lab research and studies of atomic bomb survivors from Nagasaki and Hiroshima proved that. But, he says, low levels bolster the body and extend life spans. The effect is called hormesis, from the Greek word for excite.

"It's true of most agents on earth," says Luckey. "And it's true of radiation."

That method is very competitive, and a construction company has to be the low bidder to get the job, Hedrick said.

- Design-build: This method would require hiring a team of an architect for design work and a general contractor for construction, based on qualifications. They would then design a building working toward a budget figure that is agreed upon with the county.

Three earlier attempts for funding approval for a jail have failed, starting in November 2009 and most recently last November.

Stuff we didn't know about ourselves

Hey, Twin Falls County, you're a Mormon Outpost.

And you, Gooding County, you're Tractor Country. Minidoka County is Immigration Nation.

And Blaine County? Boom Town America, despite the 9.4 percent unemployment rate.

I'm always fascinated with how the rest of the world sees our quaint little corner of the cosmos. And nowhere more so than with the publication Our Patchwork Nation, the product of a collaboration among The Christian Science Monitor, PBS NewsHour and the Knight Foundation.

Co-written by journalist Dante Chinni and University of Maryland professor James Gimpel, it's a look — from afar — at the different kinds of communities that make up the 3,143 counties in America.

Twin Falls County — which is a little more than 33 percent LDS — along with Cassia and Lincoln counties, are "places (with) very high numbers of adherents to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints." Chinni traveled to Burley to interview local leaders for the book.

But the picture he paints of Cassia County — as a "resistance-is-futile, you-will-be-assimilated" kind of place — isn't the community I recognize. Heck, as recent political history of both the county and Burley vividly attest, nobody shies away from expressing different opinions.

Gooding, Camas and Elko counties are Tractor Country, defined as "white, rural and remote, with sparse populations and farming and agribusiness as their economic base." Jerome and Minidoka counties — Immigration Nation — "are places (that) have large Hispanic populations, lower-than-average incomes, and higher-than-average poverty."

I dunno, analysis-from-a distance rarely has the ring of truth.

If you doubt that, I'd recommend a trip to Twin Falls' Depot Grill, Shoshone's Manhattan

Cafe or Heyburn's Connor's Cafe on any weekday morning.

You'll find ham and eggs, biscuits and gravy and a short stack with bacon.

But the morning's special is always Talking Back.

Schools

"Tenth grade is a critical ISAT year for students," Rogers said. "They have to pass in order to graduate, and if they don't, then they go into remedial ISAT test-prep courses."

The stakes are high for schools, too.

A school that fails to meet Annual Yearly Progress requirements associated with the federal No Child Left Behind Act faces a variety of corrective actions that could culminate in school restructuring or forced administrative changes. Schools must meet certain standards for multiple student subgroups, including Latinos, the economically disadvantaged and the developmentally disabled.

Jerome High School hasn't met AYP in reading for the past six years, while Burley High School and the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind haven't met the proficiency standard in math during the same time frame. Jerome Middle School is also in its sixth year of missing an AYP mark, while five area schools have been given "new school status" — basically resetting their timeline to meet federal requirements.

Burley Principal Carolyn Hondo said during the four weeks before ISAT testing starts, students who are below proficiency at her school are identified from the previous year's test scores and are given half an hour every day of structured intervention time. Hondo said math classes have been moved to the mornings, after studies showed it's the best time to learn.

"We focus our teaching on the state standards and what's important," Hondo said. "As far as teaching to the test, I don't think we do that."

But from a teaching perspective, Rogers said it is difficult to teach to a test when she doesn't have a direct idea of what the ISAT will ask her students.

"There are the state standards, but language is such a big thing," she said. "We have made gains, but we haven't made the gains that will make us proficient. The most frustrating thing is that it counts so much for one test and doesn't show the significant gains (students) are making in my class."

Jerome High School Prin-

Q: What are the concerns?

The ISAT is given once a year and shows only proficiency in four different areas rather than the educational growth each student has made. A small percentage of students who don't do well on the test can bring a school's AYP down. Schools must meet certain standards for all students including Latinos, the economically disadvantaged and the developmentally disabled.

Q: What are the future plans?

Idaho State Department of Education spokeswoman Melissa McGrath said Idaho is working with a consortium of other states to build a new assessment to measure student growth and proficiency. The new testing method would give teachers assessment tools to use throughout the year — rather than at the end of the school year — to give a more accurate picture of student development.

cipal Eric Anderson said his school is rewriting curriculum in all content areas to better reflect state standards and new Common Core State Standards as a part of its restructuring process. An English lab has also been im-receiving citizen concerns of alcohol sales at the market — which are not planned for the initial events, but event planners are interested in adding later — the council clarified that the applicants must seek new approval for alcohol to be sold at the

Richfield schools propose $100,000 levy transfer

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Richfield School District isn't asking taxpayers for extra money, but voters still have an Election Day choice to make on May 17.

The school district is asking voters to approve transferring $100,000 from its existing 10-year plant facilities levy into its supplemental levy for the upcoming year.

The funding transfer, which would only be for one year, is needed to help the school district's operating expenses as funding has dwindled, said Superintendent Barbara Thronson.

"It's just a one-year deal because of the major cuts that Boise made," she said, adding that school district faces a 7.9 percent reduction in funding.

The transfer would take $100,000 from the $139,000 plant facilities levy — which can only be used for facilities and maintenance costs — and give district officials the increased spending options associated with a supplemental levy. Money transferred would go toward varied needs like personnel, technology, textbooks, Internet access and supplies, Thronson said.

Richfield voters approved the existing plant facilities levy in 2008, and also passed a separate, $225,000 two-year supplemental levy in 2010.

Thronson said the district is caught up with most of its major facilities projects, such as fixing the gym's roof, and needs the added flexibility.

She said the district is pleased with the community's past support of its proposals, even in tight economic times.

If the proposal fails, she said, the school board will have to take a look at its budget and make tough decisions.

"This is critical that they pass this," she said.

Two vie for south Blaine County schools seat

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Blaine County schools have faced criticism this year over how meetings are scheduled and conducted, and saw legislation introduced that could dramatically alter how they are funded.

Two south-county residents are willing to step up to those challenges, vying for a seat on the district's board of trustees on May 17.

Bellevue resident Hallie Kelly Star and Carey resident Shawn Bennion both emphasize that fiscal responsibility will be key for the district in coming years, whether the state modifies how levies provide its funding or not. The Legislature recently considered, but did not pass, a bill that would have required voters to reapprove every two years property tax levies that provide more than half the school district's funding.

"We dodged a bullet with the recent legislation," Star said. "We need to make fiscally responsible choices so we're never put in a position where we need to cut teacher salaries or lay people off."

Star advocates taking greater advantage of non-financial resources in the community, including volunteers and retirees. She said her experience working with the Lee Pesky Learning Center, as well as having a special-education kindergarten and a gifted fourth grader, have given her perspective on the district that is deeper than that of the average parent.

ties would be increasing public access to the board, providing more opportunities to express concerns and offer suggestions. She would also work to raise non-parent community members' level of investment in the school system.

"The school district in Blaine County is our largest employer; there is a great deal of connection between economic growth and great schools," Star said, noting that how a school district is perceived can have an effect on area property values.

Bennion said he is also concerned with how the community views the school board. "Some of them are questioning whether or not we're being responsible," he said.

He said recent state-level changes mean hard decisions are ahead, including how the board will determine guidelines for merit-based pay for teachers, and how to balance the use of technology with personal attention by teachers.

"The state is pushing technology, and I'm all for technology, but technology can't replace the teacher," Bennion said.

Bennion emphasized the importance of infrastructure, saying that the public hasn't fully bought into energy-saving upgrades that the schools are in the midst of. He also advocates additional security measures, noting that many rooms in the Carey school his kids attend can be accessed easily without passing a front office.

He would like greater focus placed on getting kids into postsecondary education, and is pleased that a leadership program tried first in Carey, called "Leader in Me," will be expanded to other Blaine County elementary schools this year.

Police: Child's food search results in mom's arrest

BOISE (AP) — Police say a southern Idaho woman has been arrested on a felony warrant about a month after her child wandered into a Boise restaurant searching for food.

Jail records show 29-year-old Kristin Rainey-Cox, of Meridian, remained in custody early Monday and faces a charge of injury to a child. She was arrested Saturday following an investigation that started on March 23, when police say her child walked into a Boise restaurant looking for food.

During the investigation, police say they obtained evidence that the child had been left alone with strangers on more than one occasion and had also been present when drugs were used. The child, who is under the age of 10, is now in the custody of the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Mary 'Jean' Billingsley

Feb. 26, 1910-April 24, 2011

Our beloved grandmother, Mary "Jean" Billingsley, 101, of Twin Falls, was called home by the Lord on Sunday, April 24, 2011.

She joins her beloved family, husband, Dale; sons, Max and Don; daughter, Gwen; her parents; three brothers; and two sisters.

Grandma's life was full of caring for her loved ones. She taught us how to cook, can, crack the bull whip, crochet, knit and sew. Some of her favorite things to do were camping, fishing, reading, doing crosswords and word search puzzles, tending to her flowers and garden, and being out in the fresh air. Mary enjoyed taking out-of-town friends and family to see all the wonders of the Magic Valley area. She taught us the meaning of love and touched everyone's hearts deeply.

She leaves behind her eight very loved grandchildren, Susan, Kurt, Evelyn, Karl, Elaine, Glen, Gerad and Anita; 17 great-grandchildren; 10 great-great-grandkids; and her special friend, Sherry.

Visitation will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, April 29, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A graveside service will be held at noon Saturday, April 30, at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Mary was the recipient of Paint Magic for many years and the family would like to thank them for all their loving assistance. Those who wish to leave a memorial contribution may do so in Mary's name to Paint Magic Inc., P.O. Box 2616, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

All services and arrangements are under the direction of the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls. Those wishing to share condolences may do so at www.magicvalleyfuneral-home.com.

Phyllis Leona Gestrin Houk

Jan. 29, 1934-April 22, 2011

KETCHUM — Nature has reclaimed one of its most precious and beautiful flowers.

Phyllis Leona Gestrin Houk was born in Arling, Idaho, on Jan. 29, 1934, to her proud Finnish parents, Otto and Elena Gestrin. She passed away peacefully at home on Good Friday, April 22, 2011.

The youngest of seven children, she had a wonderful life growing up on the family ranch and being with her large and extended family in Long Valley. After graduating from the University of Idaho in 1955 (Tri-Delta Sorority) she taught first grade at Garfield Elementary School in Boise for 10 years. It was there that she met and married Ferrol Houk. They later moved to Ketchum, where they purchased and operated Bald Mountain Hot Springs Pool and Motel. After his death in 1975, she continued running the business until her retirement in 1996.

Phyllis loved life and was especially proud of her flower garden in front of the pool on Ketchum's Main Street. Her favorite pastime and a respite from the 24/7 life was traveling. She and her husband Mike Roundy were fortunate to have been able to travel on all seven continents. Someday, they will be traveling together through eternity. Also, one of Phyllis' favorite things was watching, from our deck, as the para-gliders became airborne above Baldy and landing in a field not far from our residence.

Phyllis is survived by her loving husband, Mike; her brother, Albert (Donna) of Donnelly; her stepdaughter, Karla of Alaska; her two sisters-in-law, Dorothy Gestrin and Betty Gestrin, also of Donnelly; and many relatives and friends who will miss her dearly.

A special thanks to our good friend Jerry Croce for sharing his precious little dog, Lucy, with us; she was Phyllis' sunshine.

There will be a celebration of Phyllis' life in Ketchum and also in Valley County to be held at a later date. If you wish, donations may be made to The Hospice of the Wood River Valley, P.O. Box 4320, Ketchum, ID 83340, the Blaine County Animal Shelter or any charity of your choice.

Cremation will be under the direction of the Wood River Chapel in Hailey. Friends and family are welcome to visit www.woodriverchapel.com to leave condolences.

Jayci Lillian Darrington

Dec. 1, 2009-April 22, 2011

DECLO — Our sweet baby girl, Jayci Lillian Darrington, was called home to her Father in Heaven way too early on Friday, April 22, 2011.

She was called home to touch the lives of thousands here on earth and be an example on the other side. He needed somebody that was feisty, unpredictable, loving and perfect. Jayci's last and best adventure is where her life on earth ended, swimming with the angels.

Jayci was born Dec. 1, 2009, to her eternal parents, Layne and Krissy Darrington, and big sister, best friend, and partner in crime, Ellie June. Jayci was full of life and always one step ahead of you. She had a perfect obsession and love for the water — wherever it was, she was there also. Jayci Lillian will never be forgotten and live on in our hearts forever.

Jayci Lillian is survived by her parents, Layne and Krissy Darrington; and big sister, Ellie June Darrington; her grandparents, Val and Teresa Darrington of Declo, Gayla and Fred Hough of Orofino, and Dana Lott of Kamiah; her great-great-grandparents, Jay and Lillian Nielsen of Twin Falls; Bob and June Tyler of Rupert, and Glenn and LaDawn Clark of Buhl. She is also survived by many aunts and uncles that loved her more than anything. She will be greeted in heaven by Marcine Weeks; great-grandparents, Leroy and Minnie Darrington, Demar Lott, and Robert Cotten, with so many others right there beside them.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, April 28, at the Declo LDS Stake Center, 213 W. Main St. in Declo, with Bishop Steve Durfee officiating. Burial will be in the Declo Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 27, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 12:30 until 1:45 p.m. Thursday at the church.

Ann Wilson

June 30, 1913-June 30, 1913

HAILEY — Ann Wilson, age 97, was taken home by her Savior Jesus on Friday, June 30, 1913, as she was surrounded by her family at Blaine Manor in Hailey.

Ann was born June 30, 1913, in Indian Territory, Okla., to T.L. Lawson and Katie Mae Fletcher Lawson. She was very proud of her Chickasaw heritage. Ann and family moved to Idaho in 1939. They worked on several farms in the Magic Valley until buying their own farm south of Wendell in 1955. On the farm, there was nothing she seemed incapable of doing, from being the mechanic, milking cows, driving combines and hay balers, to raising large gardens. In addition to managing everything outside, she always kept a beautiful home and was an accomplished seamstress sewing clothes from scratch as well as many beautiful quilts.

Once she had semi-retired from farming in 1968, she had too much energy to sit still for long so she obtained her Idaho Real Estate License and sold real estate for 20 years. Above all, she loved her family and was always available at a moment's notice. We will miss her vivacious spirit, beautiful laugh and contagious smile.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Earl Wilson; son, JayDee Wilson; grandson, Rick Wilson; son-in-law, Norman McCullum; and six brothers. Ann is survived by a son, Leonard (Dottie) Russell of San Antonio, Texas; daughters, Elizabeth McCullum of Sun City, Ariz., and Earlene (Paul) Gibbs of Bellevue, Idaho; sister, Virginia Metzler of Terlton, Okla.; sister-in-law, Jane Lawson of Wendell; daughter-in-law, Lee King of Wendell, 10 grandchildren; and 16 great-grandchildren.

A private service will be held Wednesday, April 27, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home.

The family would like to extend their warmest thanks and appreciation for the care Ann received from the staff at Blaine Manor. The care, love and dignity they provide to people during the twilight of their lives is a work worthy of praise and admiration. Thank you.

*Mother
The light, the spell-word of the heart,
Our guiding star in weal or woe,
Our talisman — our earthly chart
That sweetest name that earth can know.
We breathed it first with lisping tongue
When cradled in her arms we lay;
Fond memories round that name are hung that will not, cannot pass away.
We breathed it then, we breathe it still,
More dear than sister, friend or brother;
The gentle power, the magic thrill,
Awakened at the name of "mother."*

Alice Marie Martin

Aug. 2, 1924-April 23, 2011

BURLEY — Alice Marie Martin, of Burley, passed away peacefully at Warren House on Saturday, April 23, 2011, at the age of 86 years. This had been her home for the past 2½ years as her health slowly declined.

Alice was born Aug. 2, 1924, in Buhl, Idaho, to Porter Moffitt and Kate Marie (Webb) Molesworth. She was the only daughter in a family with five sons. Living and growing up on a farm with five rambunctious brothers (two older and three younger), Alice could hold her own. After graduation from Buhl High School, she attended Albion Normal College in Albion, where she obtained a two-year degree in elementary education. She then taught fourth grade in Jerome for several years. A friend there encouraged her to write to her Marine brother in combat in the Pacific Theater during World War II. That friend was to become her sister-in-law, as she later married that Marine. William Jay Martin of Oakley, Idaho, and Alice Marie Molesworth were married on May 16, 1948. They moved to Burley, where she has since resided. Upon the disabling heart attack of her husband in 1973, Alice transitioned from being a housewife and mother to also being a college student. She obtained her bachelor's degree from Idaho State University in elementary education with the help of a regional scholarship from the Soroptimist Club. She then taught fourth grade for the Minidoka County School District until her retirement.

Being a member of the Burley United Methodist church, Alice was always faithful in her church attendance. She taught Sunday school while her children were growing up. In her later years, Alice enjoyed sharing rides to and from church with her friends. She was a member of the Idaho Retired Educators Association and enjoyed the fellowship and the variety of the programs there. She loved to do word find puzzles, read books and magazines — especially Readers' Digest. She thoroughly loved spending quality time with her family, friends and neighbors. She spent a great deal of time talking on the phone, always concerned how everyone was doing.

Alice Martin is survived by her two daughters, Rebecca (Charles) Gummerson of Burley and Julie Dunlap of Springfield, Ore.; two brothers, Donald (Jeanie) Molesworth of Twin Falls and Dale Molesworth of Tucson, Ariz.; seven grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. Alice was preceded in death by her husband, William Jay Martin; her son, Timothy Jay Martin; her parents; and three brothers, Harold Molesworth, Howard Molesworth and Robert Molesworth.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, April 28, at the Burley United Methodist Church, presided over by the Rev. Karen Puckett. Visitation will be held from 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. at the church, 450 E. 27th St. in Burley. Interment will follow at Pleasant View Cemetery.

The arrangements are under the auspices of the Rasmussen Funeral Home of Burley; please direct all condolences there.

The family would like to especially extend a heartfelt "thank you" to the wonderful and truly caring staff of Warren House and Intermountain Home Care, both of which treated her like she was part of their own families.

Lotteries, recalls and missed insurance payments

Last week’s revelation that eastern Idaho’s 4,387-student Blackfoot School District may resort to a lottery in order to determine which teachers lose their jobs is just the latest in the series of events that highlight the rift between labor and management in our state’s K-12 education system. However loudly Blackfoot District board members raise their voices to emphasize that such a lottery would be “a last resort,” the reality is that mere mention of the word trivializes the jobs that good teachers do every day and implies that there’s no real difference between good and bad teachers.

Meanwhile, back in Twin Falls, Xavier Charter School fired its principal for withholding information regarding a potential hire while at the same time not quite being able to figure out a way to get its employee’s health insurance premiums paid by the due date. Unfortunately, Xavier’s Board of Trustees refused to hold themselves responsible, instead placing blame squarely on the backs of those they had hired. And in the midst of this spat, once again it’s the teachers that find themselves “guilty by association” and having to spend their time answering questions from angry parents.

And finally, area residents again had the opportunity to express their unrequited angst against State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna by signing their names to recall petitions being circulated throughout the state. Not content to let area children enjoy Easter egg hunts last weekend, organizers of the recall drive scheduled their petition drives to occur at the very same locations as the egg hunts. “Find an egg, lose a superintendent” may well have been their marketing strategy. And what a poorly conceived strategy it was.

Each of these three stories results in exactly the same thing — it causes us to focus on the dysfunctionality of public education in Idaho rather than on the thousands of teachers that daily connect with students in order to exchange knowledge and help those kids learn to think. These teachers deserve far more than the possibility that their careers become short-circuited in a “teacher lottery.”

The Blackfoot School District needs to quite simply try harder to differentiate teacher performance. The Xavier Board of Trustees need to publicly take responsibility for their actions. And — as important as a recall drive is to practicing democracy — it’s well past time to stop interrupting our kids’ Easter egg hunts to gain 158,107 signatures.

The education of our students in kindergarten through high school will be far more successful if teachers are valued and if they work together with administrators and school board members in pursuit of a common goal.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Standard & Poor’s had a role in crash

Dear Mr. Jefferson:
I recently reread your article about irrigating the Tree of Liberty. I think, however, your choice of candidates is a bit limited. May I suggest the entire organization of Standard & Poor’s?

In case you did not know, these are the same hoodlums who fraudulently labeled mortgage bond investments as Triple A when those investments were in fact comprised of worthless pools of junk mortgages. These co-conspirators helped to crash our own country and world’s economy and have not borne any responsibility for it. Now, S&P has the cheek to question the credit worthiness of the United States and to admonish our government in its struggle to control the national debt when S&P in fact caused the debt.

Mr. Jefferson, please add Standard & Poor’s to your list.

The politics of wishful thinking

WASHINGTON — In the Great Budget Debate, Democrats and Republicans are closer than you might think. Neither is proposing a balanced budget anytime soon; both peddle soothing myths to convince supporters that they’re upholding either “liberal” or “conservative” values. Meanwhile, the public seems largely clueless about the enormity of the problem. In 2021, the Congressional Budget Office reckons that even after a full economic recovery the remaining deficit will equal almost 5 percent of gross domestic product. In today’s dollars, that’s $750 billion. It’s the hole that needs filling.

We won’t make much progress until (a) Democrats concede that spending control requires genuine cuts in Social Security and Medicare, which now total $1.3 trillion annually and represent 35 percent of federal outlays; and (b) Republicans acknowledge that, even after significant spending cuts, tax increases will be needed to balance the budget. Last week, there was little sign of either. President Obama rebuffed Social Security and Medicare cuts. Most Republicans held fast on taxes.

What we have instead is a public relations war. Both parties propound brands of wishful thinking designed to make it seem that they’re accomplishing more than they are.

Start with the Republicans. House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan’s plan fulfills the no-tax-increase requirement. Yet, deficits shrink. How does he do that? Well, he doesn’t touch Social Security, the government’s biggest program with $9.9 trillion of projected spending from 2012 to 2021. He does propose a voucher program for Medicare, but it doesn’t take effect until 2022 and empties the 77 million Americans now 55 and over. Ryan isn’t picking a fight with seniors.

He achieves big savings by assuming deep cuts to most of the federal government beyond Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid. Ultimately, it would shrink to almost nothing. That’s defense, food stamps, highways, federal courts, basic research ... and much more. Altogether, these programs constitute about 12 percent of GDP. By 2022, Ryan’s plan would reduce them to 6 percent of GDP; by 2050, they’d be about 3 percent, estimates the CBO. The United States would virtually disarm, dismantle much of the social safety net and starve important federal responsibilities, from environmental regulation to the FBI. This isn’t likely to happen — and shouldn’t.

Democrats are as bad or worse. Remember that Obama’s original budget for 2012 envisioned deficits of $9.5 trillion over the next decade (2012-2021), according to the CBO. So Obama’s now-promised additional $4 trillion of savings over 12 years — with another $2 trillion of deficits — barely touches the problem. Rhetorically, Democrats finger familiar villains to explain and cure the deficits. These don’t withstand scrutiny.

One is: the Bush tax cuts for the rich. The trouble is that Obama’s budget already assumes higher rates (39.6 percent) on incomes exceeding $200,000 (individuals) and $250,000 (couples). Suppose we get tougher on the very rich. One proposal would raise rates to 45 percent on incomes from $1 million to $10 million, with rates increasing to 49 percent on incomes of $1 billion. Over a decade, tax revenues would grow about $900 billion, says the advocacy group Citizens for Tax Justice. Assuming the money materialized, it’s a lot — but only a tenth of the decade’s deficits.

Another liberal villain: the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. They’ve cost $1.26 trillion from 2001 to 2011, reckons the CBO. Again, a lot of money. But it, too, pales next to all spending ($29.8 trillion) or deficits ($6.2 trillion) over the same period. Here, too, Obama’s budget already assumes big cuts.

Our budget problem is conceptually simple. Government’s spending commitments, driven by more retirees and uncontrolled health costs, vastly exceed the existing tax base. There is an argument about how fast changes should be made to protect the economic recovery. There should be no argument over the need for changes to prevent a debt crisis: Too many Treasury bonds frighten investors and drive up interest rates.

But it also matters how we do this. By policy and procrastination, both Democrats and Republicans would largely exempt today’s elderly from changes and shift the burden to workers and the young. That’s not “liberal” or “conservative.” It’s expedient — and bad for America’s future. It suggests the young will pay even higher taxes and receive even fewer public services. It will make raising a family harder and possibly deter millions from doing so. It may endanger America’s security by shortsighted military cutbacks.

We still await a serious debate about which programs to cut and which taxes to raise. Congressional Republicans advance a radical plan for shrinking government — and are not candid about it. Obama defends the status quo of ever-bigger government — and is not candid about it. Perhaps these are negotiating positions and, needing to raise the federal debt ceiling, both sides will recognize their shortcomings. It’s a hope.

Save the Postal Service by ending home mail delivery

Lane Filler

The idea for reform currently getting the most attention in Congress is ending Saturday delivery.

The vast majority of American homes and businesses shouldn’t receive mail delivery at all. Most should pick up their stuff from P.O. boxes, as often as they wish. This would improve things in a number of ways:

- It would stop the financial bleeding. The Postal Service has cut 100,000 employees in the last two years, yet it still has 572,000 — one of the largest civilian work forces in the world. It can’t shrink fast enough to break even without massive changes.

- As much as traditional mail volume has been reduced, it ought to decline even more. There’s no reason for us to receive most bills by mail, or pay them that way either. The same is true of the mail for our invisible roommate “Occupant.” It’s an expensive and resource-intensive system that’s propped up by home mail delivery. Most of us would move all our dealings online if that delivery stopped.

- It would vastly reduce carbon emissions by eliminating deliveries and, as I’ll show in a second, create a new source of revenue that would actually drive mail prices down.

It probably makes sense to keep delivering mail to huge apartment and commercial buildings, because they’re essentially routes in and of themselves. But elsewhere, it’s silly.

There are two main arguments against moving most mail delivery to post office boxes: Having people go to the post office causes more driving than delivering the mail, and we’d have to build enough post offices to hold millions of new boxes.

Both can be solved with one letter, reading: “Dear supermarket owners, In each community you serve, each of you that submits high enough bids will be allowed to build and maintain 5,000 postal boxes in your store. Customers will come to pick up mail, and probably shop there an awful lot, so bid high. Yours truly, the United States Postal Service.”

Since we go to the supermarket constantly, no trips will be added.

It’s hard to change these big institutions with the times, but not impossible. We just have to think outside the mailbox.

LAWN & GARDEN

How to Control Weeds in Your Lawn

Weeds love all of the conditions that your lawn doesn't. Soil that's too dry or too wet, thin spots, underfed grass — they look like home sweet home to all kinds of weeds. If you keep your lawn healthy, you'll do a lot to keep weeds from taking over. Just follow these simple tips, and your lawn will look the way you always wanted it to.

Some people think that healthy lawns look like putting greens. The fact is, longer grass grows longer, healthier roots. By raising the setting on your lawnmower, you'll do a lot to help your grass grow thick and healthy. A thick lawn keeps weeds out.

Lawns need nutrients. Regular feeding helps them develop healthy roots and blades. Start with a spring feed around the first time that you mow. Follow with a late summer, fall, and Thanksgiving feeding, and your lawn will be as lush and beautiful as you've wanted it to be. If weeds have been well established in your yard, start out with a weed-and-feed product, such as Scotts® Turf Builder® with Plus2® Weed Control.

Lawns need water, but not too much or too little. Give your lawn a deep watering about once or twice a week. Frequent, shallow watering doesn't do much for lawns, but it's really helpful for weeds. Too little water stresses the lawn, and invites still more weeds to set up shop in your yard.

Maybe you have a battle going on in your yard, and the weeds are winning. In that case, you need to take more direct measures throughout the growing season. In the spring, feed your lawn with a product containing a pre-emergent. This will take care of grassy weeds. If your problem is dandelions, use Scotts® Turf Builder® with Plus 2® Weed Control. Spot-kill weeds when you see them with a weed-killer such as Ortho Weed-B-Gon MAX® Weed Killer for Lawns. It should take care of the weeds.

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Mike Tucker of Filer integrated rock groundcover into his garden three years ago after discovering that the redwood bark he originally laid there collected three inches high at his front doorstep in high winds.

DREW NASH/Times-News

Louise Koontz uses bark throughout the landscaping of her home near Kimberly. ‘It defines the flowerbeds and makes them look neater, more manicured than they would be without it,’ she says.

ROCK VS. BARK

Find your place in the groundcover debate

By Ariel Hansen ♦ Times-News writer

With spring getting into full swing, the flowerbeds and landscaping that survived the winter are calling out for attention. Once you have a plan for the placement of bushes and flowers, the finishing touch is an attractive groundcover. But which to choose: rock or bark?

Your neighbors, and Kimberly Nurseries president Dave Wright, shared their experiences with each to help you decide. Take our quiz, then see what your answers mean for you.

How windy is it at your house?

A: Very windy — sometimes I worry my pets will get blown into Oz, like Toto and Dorothy.

B: When we get the strongest winds, leaves and debris pile up against the house, but it’s usually not a problem.

C: It’s quite protected at my house, especially in my garden. I often read the Times-News out there without the paper getting caught by the wind.

What does your landscaping look like, primarily?

A: Larger trees, lawn or larger expanses you’d like covered up, maybe a few flowerbeds.

B: Small trees, large bushes, some flowers and pathways.

C: Lots of flowerbeds and small bushes; a lush landscape.

How often do you want to do maintenance on your groundcover?

A: As infrequently as possible, but I don’t mind making (or paying for) a big effort once or twice a decade.

B: It doesn’t matter to me, since I prefer to contract the job out to landscapers.

C: I’d rather make a smaller effort every year or two, with a little attention in between.

And how does your checkbook feel about this?

A: A large initial outlay that’s repeated just once or twice a decade. Rip off that Band-Aid and get it over with.

B: Either A or C is OK with me.

C: More even costs would make me happier — a smaller initial outlay, then about a third of that initial cost every few years.

If you answered mostly A ...

... You’ll probably want to go for rock.

With all the wind at your house, your preference to put out more effort and money but less often, and your sparser landscape, rock could be for you.

“Two years ago or so, we had those real bad windstorms, 60 mph winds,” said Filer resident Mike Tucker, who had bark put in when his home was built in 2003. “All the redwood chips were piled about three inches deep in front of my front door, and were all over the yard. We went with the rock after that.”

Tucker uses drip irrigation under the groundcover, and his landscape has a lot of trees, bushes and lawn, but not a lot of flowerbeds. He said he didn’t like how the redwood faded over a few years, and he had some issues with spiders that he doesn’t have now that his groundcover is rock.

A trade-off? He has to keep on top of the weeds, which tend to grow up through the rock more easily than they do through the denser bark.

Although Tucker hasn’t had to do much maintenance on his rock yet, Kimberly Nurseries president Dave Wright said it will need to be pulled out and replaced every six or seven years.

“There’s a lot of people who think rock is lower maintenance, but it’s not, it’s just putting off maintenance,” Wright said. “Eventually so much leaf debris and dirt get between the rocks and break down, then they make a bed for weeds to grow in anyway.”

He said weed killers can be used in rock where you don’t have plants you want to preserve, but it’s harder to hand-pull weeds from rock than from bark.

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Mike Tucker of Filer said one concern with using rocks in a garden is that they can heat up and scorch plants.

If you answered mostly B ...

... Either rock or bark would likely work for you — but consider consulting your neighbors about their experience, or talking to a landscaping professional, to gather more information before you decide.

“We’ve used everything from red lava rock to bark. Each one of them has a certain endearing quality, and each one has their own liability,” said Gary Garnand of Twin Falls. “You can go in with a leaf blower and blow the leaves out of the rock. The lava rock will have a tendency to move on you, and of course the bark will move all over heck and gone.”

Garnand likes red lava rock (which also comes in other colors) for areas that can get hot without killing whatever you have growing in them, as the rock tends to capture and hold heat. Paler gray rock also can change temperature dramatically in summer — heating during the day and cooling at night — but less so than the lava rock.

“The more constant a temperature you can be in, the healthier (your plants are) going to be,” Wright said.

For areas that get some wind which isn’t usually a problem, bark comes in several sizes; the bigger the pieces, the less likely they are to blow around.

“Nothing is weed-free, nothing is maintenance-free,” Wright said. Each option has trade-offs.

If you answered mostly C ...

... You’re a good candidate for bark.

Your lush flowerbeds would work best with bark, because the wood product adds to the soil as it breaks down, improving your garden over time.

“It defines the flowerbeds and makes them look neater, more manicured than they would be without it,” said Louise Koontz of Kimberly. “When they first put it down, it smells so good! If (the scent) would only last all year, it’d be so wonderful.”

She said she also has to water less, because the bark traps moisture. This can be a double-edged sword, though; because of the bark’s layer’s thickness, she can’t tell if an area isn’t getting enough water from her drip system until the plants above start wilting.

Koontz, who gardens a lot at her old farmstead, said it would also be harder to change her mind about what to plant where if she used rock.

Bark does need to be replenished every year or two — but not completely, unlike rock. “You just basically top it off for what decomposes and what blows away,” Wright said.

Wright cautioned that there are wood products on the market that are not appropriate for flowerbeds and landscaping, including those made of heartwood, often described as wood mulch or wood chips.

When heartwood decomposes, it leaches nitrogen from the soil, he said. So if you’re laying the groundcover yourself, make sure you’re getting actual bark.

FEARLESSLY ORGANIZED

Author Ingram shares her tips

By Katie Aberbach
The Washington Post

It's easy to think of reasons to avoid spring cleaning (or cleaning and neatening at any time of the year, really): It's time-consuming, tiring and often frustrating. It reminds you that you've totally bailed on your New Year's resolution. It reminds you just how tiny your closet really is. But there are also reasons to embrace de-cluttering.

Leah Ingram's "Toss, Keep, Sell!" ($15, Adams Media) casts the eternal chore in a new light — a lucrative light, as a matter of fact. Filled with DIY tips for reducing junk, reorganizing essential belongings and selling the possessions you're ready to part with, Ingram's book reveals that even short bursts of cleaning can reap major pay-offs. The New Hope, Pa.-based author and blogger (Suddenlyfrugal.com) shared her clutter-clearing philosophies.

Why do you recommend quick, intense cleaning sessions rather than a major overhaul?

The little steps will add up. You have to be nice to yourself and realize that

Adams Media

Leah Ingram's "Toss, Keep, Sell!" casts de-cluttering in a new, lucrative light. The New Hope, Pa.-based author and blogger (Suddenlyfrugal.com) shares her organizing philosophies.

you didn't create this clutter problem in 15 minutes, and you're not going to fix it in 15 minutes. But (spend) 15 minutes (cleaning) once or twice a day for a couple of weeks and you'll be shocked.

You go into it thinking, I can't get anything done in 15 minutes. And then you come out on the other side and say, "Oh my gosh, I can't believe how much I got done in 15 minutes."

Which common household items make good organizing tools?

Hooks. We transformed our mudroom from a dumping ground of sports bags and cleats and field hockey sticks into a space that you can actually walk through, simply by putting up hooks on three walls. Just getting stuff up off the floor — even if it's not perfectly organized — can go a long way toward making a space act and look more organized.

Which organizational supplies are worth spending money on?

A label maker, as silly as that seems, can really help get you organized because there's something about a neat and tidy label on the front of a bunch of boxes that makes things look better. My husband used a label maker to put labels on all of his dresser drawers. It makes putting away laundry a whole lot easier. It's not pretty, though — House Beautiful will probably never come to my house and do a photo shoot. Also, if you know that you're going to donate items on a regular basis or have a yard sale, invest in a couple of big Rubbermaid bins to hold things you're going to give away. You can keep them in your car. That way, they're not cluttering up your home.

Do you recommend holding yard sales to get rid of clutter?

I recommend them with a caveat. It's very easy to spend a lot of time organizing a yard sale at your home or in your neighborhood — from setting up to pricing — but not (easy) to get a good return on your investment of time. So, I advocate finding an organized yard sale, flea market or antiques market where you can buy a table.

It sounds counterintuitive, but if you spend $10 or $20 to buy a table at a yard sale that somebody else has organized and somebody else has advertised, it is well worth your time. But be honest with yourself. If you're selling crap that's not going to bring you the $20 that you paid for the table, then just donate your things to a good cause and take the tax write-off.

How does de-cluttering your home contribute to its value?

It's pretty simple: When your home is cluttered, when your closets are full, when your basement is packed to the rafters, it makes your home look smaller. It easily turns off would-be buyers because they don't want to know what you've stored in the basement, they don't want to know what kind of shoes you wear, they don't want to see pictures of your family; they almost want a clean slate. Paring down your belongings can be really tough, though.

How do you convince a skeptic that it's worthwhile?

You have to think about the old adage "A picture is worth a thousand words." ... You have to make your home look good enough for the photographs that your real estate agent is eventually going to want to take.

Advice for new gardeners; help with tomatoes

By Adrian Higgins
The Washington Post

Here's an edited excerpt from an online Q&A hosted by Washington Post gardening columnist Adrian Higgins.

I'm creating a garden for the first time on my lawn. Should I add commercial fertilizer or just start with compost? I would like to create an organic garden, or as organic as practicality allows.

Fertilizer is the last thing you need to worry about. First, the site must be in full sun. Second, it must be in a free-drainage area. Then you can start to dismantle the lawn and create growing beds. Skim off the turf and create raised beds with lots of good organic matter. Hurry, the planting season is upon us.

I've had a tomato and basil garden for a few years. Last spring, I planted some heirlooms of the Fiorentina type. They all got hit by the wilt and produced only stunted fruit. Is there anything I can do this year, or do the harmful elements that cause wilt stay in the soil forever?

First, the season last year for tomatoes was dreadful, not just because of late blight disease.

Don't put tomato plants out too early; they really get set back by cold soil. Also, I would plant some fail-safe cherry tomatoes such as Sun Gold, Black Cherry and Super Sweet 100. Whatever the season throws at those guys, they seem to be able to take it. My general rule with tomatoes is: The bigger it is, the harder it is to raise a good fruit to maturity.

For the past two summers we have been plagued by both early and late tomato blight. I even planted last year's tomatoes in half-barrels of brand-new soil. Is our only option to spray the vines constantly with Daconil? We really can't live without our Brandywines.

I don't think any veggie is worth growing if you have to spray it with synthetic pesticides. If you are using the same containers, I would get rid of all the soil (and obviously any of last year's vegetation) and grow less-demanding varieties, including hybrids with disease resistance. I think Brandywine is overrated and difficult to grow.

I've heard a lot of different opinions about when or whether to mulch around vegetables.

Mulch is valuable for keeping weeds down and conserving soil moisture. Chopped straw is perfect for this; I would just be careful not to lay it too thick. Don't use shredded bark or wood.

My husband and I are attempting a small garden (4 by 4 feet) on our back patio. We've never grown anything before, so I'm a little worried about how to start. We want tomatoes, a variety of herbs, onions, maybe squash and/or peas. Is that too much?

Your ambitions exceed your real estate. I would just grow some lettuce or mesclun mix now and then plan to grow stuff vertically in the summer: a couple of tomato plants and some pole beans.

How does one figure out what areas in a very tree-laden yard get six hours of full sunlight a day?

First, wait for the leaves to fill out, which takes the whole month of April. Observe the light patterns between 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The sunniest spots are what you're going for. It will require some presence, though not continuously.

When you weed, get deep enough to get the roots

By Kathy Van Mullekom
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

The plants you call "weeds" are true survivors, thriving against all odds.

Most propagate by seed, and the worst offenders can produce tens of thousands of seeds per plant, per season. Common lambsquarters, for instance, easily produce up to 70,000 seeds annually per plant, seeds that can last decades if left undisturbed below the soil surface.

Not all seeds sprout into weeds immediately, of course. Millions of them settle into the soil where they can wait years for a bit of sunlight to spark them into growth. Particularly pernicious are broadleaf perennial weeds, such as knotweed, purslane and thistle that propagate by seed and also vegetatively, regrowing from bits of the plant or root. If you chop up these types of weeds, you merely make more of them.

It is possible to win the war on weeds. Prevention hinges on:

- Stopping current weeds from going to seed.
- Preventing future weed seeds from sprouting.

First, remove any existing weeds, including roots. Starting with this clean slate, add a layer of protective mulch to starve any just sprouted weeds of sunlight.

Next, apply a pre-emergent weed preventer such as Preen to prevent any existing weed seeds in the top layer of soil or mulch from forming roots.

Periodically, a few weeds will still crop up — remove them. Reapply weed preventer mid-season to keep seeds from the current year's weed crop from germinating, bearing in mind that many weeds set seed in late summer or fall. Refresh mulch as needed.

Each spring, as you start the process again, you'll find fewer and fewer weeds to deal with. Do a weekly weed patrol, enjoying your garden while you pluck any offenders. Following a simple seed-focused routine allows you to turn the corner on weeds.

When is the right time to prune roses back?

By Joel M. Lerner
Special to The Washington Post

My roses are starting to bud, but I've seen conflicting reports on whether to prune them back. What's your advice? Also, what does renewal pruning mean?

Since buds are just forming, this is the time to prune stems to a little less than half the length of the branches and cut each one just above a newly emerging bud. New growth will begin on these fresh stems for the coming year. Roses can be maintained as shrub, multiflora, hybrid tea or miniature and will usually flower voluntarily throughout the growing season.

If yours are hybrid tea varieties, they will grow new flowers each time you prune a faded flower. Cut the old branch just above where the leaf stem is growing a set of five healthy leaflets. It will grow a fresh bud from the location just below where the cane had a fading flower.

Renewal pruning means shrubs have grown too large and can be cut lower and narrower than they have become, which is usually successful with most overgrown woody shrubs.

Grain off to good start throughout S. Idaho

Planting percentage slightly behind average

By Cindy Snyder
Times News correspondent

While strong prices are giving producers an incentive to plant grain this spring, they're planting between storms.

Clark Kauffman, who farms near Filer, got his spring grain planted in a timely fashion and says it's starting to emerge. Most of his neighbors finished planting their spring grain during the relatively dry weekend.

That puts them in pretty good company. According to the Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service's weekly crop progress report, 88 percent of the spring wheat has been planted in south-central Idaho — about 6 percentage points behind the five-year average. Approximately 37 percent of that has emerged, also slightly behind the average of 42 percent.

Spring barley is a little farther behind with just 70 percent in the ground compared to 84 percent for the average. But emergence is slightly ahead at 32 percent compared to 30 percent.

Statewide, 49 percent of the spring wheat and 46 percent of the spring barley is planted, close to average.

"I don't think we're behind," Kauffman said. "We're going between storms and getting a lot done."

The abundance of spring moisture is paying off too. Not only are the rains keeping the soil soft and helping the grain, pea and sugar beet crops emerge, but irrigation water supplies across southern Idaho are expected to be good this year.

Overall, winter wheat looks good across southern Idaho. And even the late-planted acres are starting to green up. Nearly 70 percent of the crop is rated as good with another 10 percent rated as excellent.

And Kauffman is thankful not to be in the Dakotas where spring flooding has left fields saturated and growers aren't likely to start doing any field work until May 6th or in the Southern Plains where drought is decimating the winter wheat crop.

Growers in Wichita, Kan., say they are on track to have one of the 10 driest springs on record and that doesn't count the dryness prior to March 1. In southwestern Kansas, growers are starting irrigation systems as soon as they finish planting fields. There's no significant rain in the forecast for the Plains and even if storms do materialize, it's likely too late to revitalize winter wheat in parts of Texas and Oklahoma.

Not surprisingly, the U.S. Department of Agriculture cut its good-to-excellent rating for all winter wheat by one percentage point from last week to 35 percent and raised the poor-to-very-poor rating two percentage points to 40 percent. In comparison, 69 percent

Gophers, moles and more

Chris Taber stands in a field last July of alfalfa he treated to control the vole population. Taber treated the field which his family farms near Shoshone, by spreading zinc phosphate pellets throughout it, at a cost of $10.25 per acre.

Local farmers keep an eye on pest problems

Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

For farmers in the Magic Valley, spring isn't just time for planting and watching seedlings shoot up. It's also a time for manning battle stations against an army of hungry critters only too willing to eat fields of alfalfa and hay before farmers ever get a chance to harvest.

Though spraying measures last year have left hope that cricket and black fly numbers will remain down, grasshoppers and voles could rear their hungry heads this summer, too. Those two species can munch such a dent in local crops that University of Idaho Extension Educator for Lincoln County, Christi Falen, said their actions can have a significant economic impact.

"(Farmers) just can't handle a whole revenue loss on top of a crop loss several years in a row," Falen said. "It's just too hard, especially for some of our smaller growers."

Alfalfa is particularly vulnerable. Falen said the plant is like candy to grasshoppers and voles, especially the leaves.

But farmers also covet the leaves in alfalfa crops grown for feed because a higher leaf count means a higher quality alfalfa and a better buying price.

"You have to maintain the leaves as much as possible, so

A vole pops its head out of the ground near Chris Taber's shop.

a reduction in leaves really hurts the quality," Falen said. "We have to keep in mind not only a yield reduction but a quality reduction."

The best way to save the leaves for bigger animals and keep smaller nuisances at bay is to react early.

Twin Falls Extension Educator Steve Hines said small tweaks in farming practices can hinder pests' march into fields. Sprinkler irrigation and reduced plowing both encourage vole infestations. Flood methods of irrigation flush out voles already in fields and plowing leaves less organic matter for the voles to house themselves in during the winter.

Even grasshoppers in residential areas, like the one pictured here, can wreck havoc in neighboring fields.

Nursery growers reminded of Monday insurance deadline

The USDA's Risk Management Agency (RMA) is advising Pacific Northwest nursery growers of the Monday sales closing date for 2012 Nursery Multi-Peril Crop Insurance (MPCI) coverage.

MPCI Nursery insurance provides protection for wholesale nurseries producing and marketing nursery plants grown in standard nursery containers or in the field.

Coverage is based on a plant inventory value report (PIVR) declaring a value of insurable plant.

New policy applications may be filled at any time; however, all applications, including those for new or amended coverage, are subject to a 30-day waiting period before commencement of coverage.

Current nursery policyholders may request changes in coverage and/or obtain the Pilot Nursery Grower's Price Endorsement (NGPE) in Oregon and Washington, prior to the May 2 sales closing deadline.

Local crop insurance agents are available to provide program details that reflect the grower's nursery inventory.

A list of crop insurance agents is available at all USDA Service Centers throughout the U.S. or at the website address: <http://www3.rma.usda.gov/tools/agents>.

Farmers and chefs connect at local foods event

The Treasure Valley Farmer-Chef Collaborative will pair buyers and sellers during an upcoming event.

The May 10 interactive event is fashioned after popular "speed dating," to provide farmers, ranchers and chefs an opportunity to discuss ways to source fresh and local agriculture to local foodies.

"Local restaurants are eager to capitalize on the growing "locavore movement," the desire to eat local and seasonal foods, by offering unique, seasonal menus featuring only the freshest items available," Skylar Jett of the Idaho State Department Agriculture said in a prepared statement.

The Farmer-Chef Collaborative aims to build connections within the community.

The event will be held at from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Doubletree Riverside Inn, Boise.

Cost is $25 per agribusiness. Pre-registration is required.

For more information, or to register, please contact Jett at (208) 332-8542 or skylar.jett@agri.idaho.gov.

Deadline looms for BCAP Proposals

USDA Farm Service Agency Acting Administrator Val Dolcini has announced the deadline for project area proposals for the Biomass Crop Assistance Program (BCAP).

BCAP was authorized in the 2008 Farm Bill and provides incentives to eligible farmers, ranchers and forest landowners for the establishment and production of biomass crops for heat, power, bio-based products and biofuels. BCAP project areas are specific geographic areas where producers grow eligible biomass crops. Producers then receive annual payments for growing those crops.

To be considered, proposals must be submitted to the applicable state office by May 27.

Idaho farmers who wish to produce crops for energy production should contact Idaho Farm Service Agency, 9173 W. Barnes Drive, Suite B, Boise.

The BCAP specialist for Idaho is Jeremy Nalder at 208-378-5667 or jeremy.nalder@id.usda.gov.

For more information, visit the USDA Farm Service Agency's website at www.fsa.usda.gov/bcap or contact Kelly Novak at (202) 720-4053 or cepdmail@wdc.usda.gov.

As winery numbers rise, Idaho shows it holds advantages grape growing

Idaho Statesman

Thanks to the increasing quality of Idaho vintners, Idaho's wine industry is growing in stature and size.

Just three years ago, Idaho had 32 wineries. That has grown to 43, and inquiries about starting wineries come to the Idaho Wine Commission in Boise on a weekly basis. Most of the wineries are in the Snake River Valley, primarily around Caldwell and Nampa. A few are in the panhandle, and the Palouse region promises to be a growth area.

About 1,600 acres of vineyards are in Idaho, primarily in the Caldwell-Nampa region. The largest vineyard, Skyline, is 450 acres and owned by Precept Wines in Seattle.

Idaho's oldest and largest winery is Ste. Chapelle in Caldwell, which started in 1976 and is owned by Ascentia Wine Estates in California.

Thanks to Ste. Chapelle, Riesling is the state's largest variety, though Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot also are important. Moya Shatz, executive director of the Idaho Wine Commission, said Rhone varieties such as Syrah and Viognier grow extremely well in the Snake River Valley.

"I think that's what we'll be known for eventually," she said.

The Snake River Valley is high mountain desert, with elevations between 1,500 and 3,300 feet above sea level, much higher than other West Coast regions.

Wine

This gives Idaho a distinct advantage, because warmer days and cooler nights help retain grapes' important natural acidity and give resulting wines better balance. Shatz pointed out that while Idaho's growing season is a little shorter than Washington's, the Snake River Valley has few issues getting grapes ripe.

Here are a few Snake River Valley wines that are available for tasting:

Ste. Chapelle 2009 Wine-maker's Series Dry Gewurztraminer, Snake River Val- ley, $9: There's a big hit of orange oil in the nose with grapefruit, gooseberry and lime peel along with minerality and petrol. As a drink, it's bone-dry and very refreshing with lemon bitters, lychee nut and white grapefruit pit.

Fraser Vineyard 2009 Malbec, Snake River Valley, $25: Our 2011 Idaho Winery of the Year won a gold with this at the state competition, and it's plain to see why. The nose features raspberry, cherries, chocolate and lime zest. The theme of raspberry and cherry continues with the drink. Black pepper, not tannin, is the focus of the finish.

Indian Creek Winery 2008 Pinot Noir, Snake River Valley, $15: This rare Idaho Pinot Noir offers aromas of violets, strawberries and Rainier cherries, followed by flavors of cranberries and red plums. It opens with bright elegant fruit that gives way to a rich midpalate and finish.

3 Horse Ranch Vineyard 2008 Reserve Syrah, Snake River Valley, $19: Greg Koenig's winemaking talents and Gary Cunningham's organic vineyard are proving to be a delicious partnership. Toasted oak aromas are akin to a fresh-baked brownie and readily joined by blackberry, black cherry, black raspberry and leather. Skill shows on the palate with a smooth entry of soft fruit, vibrant acidity and a nice hit of chocolate before the arrival of tannin.

Pend d'Oreille Winery 2007 Wood River Vineyard Malbec, Snake River Valley, $28: This shows off aromas and flavors cassis, cranberry and plums, backed by minerality, allspice and acidity that override the tannin.

Vale Wine Co. 2008 Cabernet Sauvignon, Snake River Valley, $20: Skyline Vineyard near Caldwell, and winemaker John Danielson worked together for a dark and lingering drink of cassis, cola, alder-smoked bacon, sarsaparilla and crushed leaf.

Pests

Falen also said changing winter habits can keep voles at bay. Choosing not to plant cover crops in winter leaves the voles more exposed to predators like hawks and coyotes.

But once winter is over, the next best thing to do is pay close attention to the perimeters. Both Hines and Falen said pests will appear first on public ground at the edges of fields, in areas like the ditches near roads and the pivot corners for sprinklers. Many of the baits designed to poison voles are not safe to sprinkle on crops, but are good for edging fields with.

"It's much better if you can catch them on the perimeter; it's the same with grasshoppers and voles," Falen said.

Many other pest-management chemicals require a license to use, which can get pricey if the farmer has to hire someone to do the applications. Falen said in other years, farmers have pooled together to get chemicals sprayed over several farms with one sweep of an airplane.

But keeping an early eye plays into pesticide use, too.

Falen said government agencies that monitor animal populations, such as the U.S. Department of Agriculture, want population levels to reach a certain density before farmers spray them. For grasshoppers, the threshold is more than 15 of the hoppers per square yard.

"For grasshoppers, the best thing you can do is scout really early," Falen said, adding that the best vantage point is ground level.

"I tell them to get down low and look for them because you're looking for the babies. They're teeny tiny and they don't hop," she said.

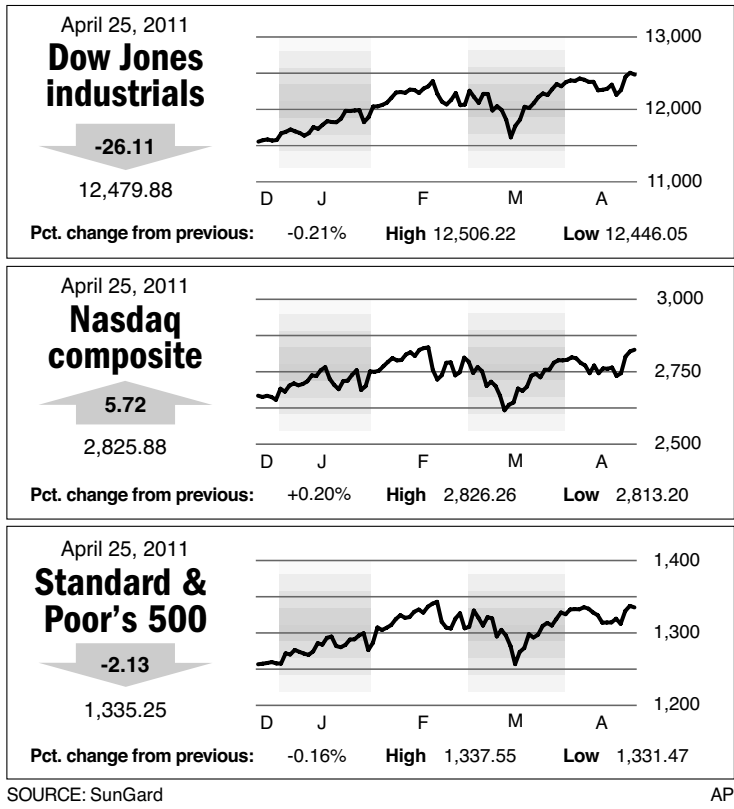

If pests have farmers at their wits' end before spring is in sight, Hines counsels patience and offers hope from a powerful ally: Mother Nature.

"Their life cycle is very cyclical," he said. "They're in a high cycle right now, but with disease and things like that, they'll crash." Eventually.

Avail. for Adoption:

Did you know that Black Dogs are generally the last to be adopted and are euthanized in shelters in much large numbers? People may consider them too "plain", or simply don't notice them because their dark color makes them disappear in their kennels. Whatever the reason, black dogs are not given the attention they deserve. SO PLEASE give our black dogs a chance!

Piper is a 10-month-old Blue heeler mix. She has beautiful blue dapple markings and a docked tail. She was relinquished to the shelter because her owners could no longer take care of her. Piper does great with small children and likes other dogs.

Deuce is a handsome Labrador. He is middle aged, probably about 5-years-old, and is solid black. Deuce is very mild and sweet. He will make a nice family companion. Come meet him today.

Kate is a black lab mix puppy that is about 6-months-old. She has white on her feet and is very cute. Kate is not going to get very big. Her build is short and stocky. Kate is a fetching fool! She loves to have people throw balls for her! She is very sweet and has been waiting patiently to find her forever family.

Flash is an adult female Australian Shepherd mix. She is tan and white and is very sweet. She is housebroken and has a very mellow personality. Come meet her today.

Suki is a beautiful blonde German Shepherd. Suki is a little bashful at first but once she warms up she is the sweetest dog! Suki loves to play with other dogs and is housebroken. She is very intelligent and will be a great family companion.

The adoption fee is $75 and includes spaying/neutering and the first set of vaccinations.

(Silsby was freed in May 2010 after being convicted of arranging illegal travel and sentenced to time served.)

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Feigned necessities, imaginary necessities ... are the greatest cozenage that men can put upon the Providence of God, and make pretences to break known rules by."

— Oliver Cromwell

Many of the rules that players learn as they start bridge have sound kernels of common sense, but a top player must think for himself and know when to break the rules.

Consider today's no-trump game, where you (East) win the spade ace at trick one. What now? A spade continuation will surely achieve nothing. Declarer is marked with the spade queen and jack, and you cannot set up your side's winners, let alone cash them.

Although it looks attractive to switch to a diamond around to dummy's weakness, you cannot realistically hope to set up more than one trick for your side in that suit. Together with your three aces that will be a fourth defensive trick, but will not be enough.

Instead, you need to attack declarer's entry to dummy's clubs. Switch to a low heart, and as long as declarer did not start with three hearts headed by the jack, the clubs will be dead. Even if declarer has the doubleton heart jack, you can hold up the club ace long enough to exhaust him of any entry to dummy.

As the cards lie, declarer will be forced to win a heart honor in dummy and play on clubs. You duck your ace twice (taking your club ace on the second round would be a needless risk), then win your club ace and exit with a diamond. Declarer must let your partner in sooner or later for the heart play that will set up the defenders' fifth winner.

ANSWER: Although you have a balanced hand with a spade stop, you are far closer to a diamond raise than a no-trump bid. You want your partner's potential heart and club stoppers protected on opening lead. So cue-bid two spades to show a diamond raise. Revealing that you have a spade stopper can come later, if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in response to "Feeling Guilty in North Carolina" (March 18), who feels guilty using address labels, calendars and notepads from organizations soliciting donations. Last year, for about six months, I collected all the requests for donations I received. Abby, the total was 532 requests from 119 organizations! Yes, I'm overwhelmed, and I no longer feel guilty about tossing them. I sent all of them letters requesting they delete my name from their lists. One hundred eighteen ignored my request. One asked how often I want information from them.

I give the notepads and other enclosures to Goodwill and shred the labels. Ironically, I receive more labels now than ever before, even though I pay most bills online and email rather than write. I donate less than I ever have in the past because I feel so hounded, so in my case, it has worked against them.

— KAREN H. IN FORT COLLINS, COLO.

DEAR KAREN: Thanks for the input. Letters from readers complaining about charitable donation requests with labels arrive in my office on a daily basis, so you can imagine the mail I have received in response to the one I printed from "Feeling Guilty?" Read on:

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I, too, receive many "gifts" from organizations soliciting for donations. My view is, if they're using my donation to send gifts, then they really don't need my money. They should be using donations to help whomever or whatever it is they're soliciting for. I don't feel guilty in the least for using the labels, gifts, etc. I give to organizations that do not send out freebies; that's how I direct my charitable donations.

— SABRINA W. SOUTHGATE, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a professional fundraiser and I, too, receive the pads and address labels. I do not give to every organization that sends them, but I do use what they send. No one should feel guilty for doing so. Nonprofits buy and rent lists from companies, and they don't expect everyone to respond. Nonprofits aren't trying to make anyone feel guilty or trick them; they just want to do the work of the causes you love to support.

— SUZANNE L. STATEN ISLAND, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Many solicitation letters have a small box at the bottom asking you to indicate if you would like to be taken off their mailing list. It's worth the 44 cents to return it.

Some areas recycle junk mail. After removing the address labels, the rest can be put in the recycling bin with newspapers. Note pads, greeting cards and calendar gifts could be donated to a military personnel drive, thrift store, nursing home or community center.

— MARY F. STUART, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: We contacted the post office and were instructed not to open the envelope, to write "Refused — Return to Sender" on the front and put it back in the mailbox. The post office can then decide what to do with it.

— SANDRA M. MUKWONAGO, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: There's nothing "free" when organizations try to guilt us into sending money. My solution for all this junk is, use the labels and anything personalized if I like them; if not, destroy them. Anything else I give to a nursing home, local children's museum to use for crafts or to the Goodwill. When coins are attached, I put them in a jar and give them to my church.

— CLAIRE P. PORTLAND, MAINE

IF APRIL 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The call of wild and passionate ambitions can compel you to burn the candle at both ends while you set off on an intense search for glory in the year ahead. Your prayers may be answered in July or October when good fortune or beneficial opportunities could come your way. Between now and the end of August, and then again next winter, people in general are see your best characteristics and will tend to give you the benefit of the doubt. A passionate soul mate could appear or success with a new business or career is possible. Since you glow with sincerity you could be promoted into a position of trust or earn other rewards.

HOROSCOPE
 Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some unanswered prayers are good for you. You want what you want and want it now, but not getting what you want might have unseen advantages. Don't be discouraged if a wish is not granted.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Set aside time to deal with necessary business. You are more appealing than usual to the opposite sex, but avoid the pursuit of hot conquests. Your romantic ardor may be all bark and no bite tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put the toys away and get back on track. Your special someone might have a powerful purpose in mind that revolves around earning potential. You have a way with words; mental alchemy pays off.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your financial fuel tanks are filled. It is a good day to initiate any project that needs long lasting determination and persistence. It may not be a good time for investing cash you can't afford to lose.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Passionate pushiness puts pizzazz into a plan. You might steamroll past objections to attain ambitions. Associate with people who are enthused by joint success and have the knowledge to show you the way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put on a cape and become the Superman of success. Heightened ambitions and a desire to get ahead financially will build up incentive to get much accomplished. An organized desk represents an organized mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get up to speed. Much can be accomplished if you turn the heat up under a pet project. The fire of your ambitions might attract new friends. Loved ones might easily become jealous or suspicious.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go gentle into that good night. Those who feel cornered or defensive may tell a white lie or stretch the truth. Don't do battle with words when it is such a good day to follow through on business strategies.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Run the rat race like Secretariat. Apply purpose and willpower to see something important through to the finish line. Those in close connection may snap the whip if you don't do your best.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Faith the size of a mustard seed can move mountains. At the same time, those in your household might be irritated by one of your obsessions that seems to get in the way of serenity and peace.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your money in your pocket for another day or two. There is a potential for misunderstandings if contracts or agreements are on the table. Key players might not be ready to wheel and deal.

PISCES (Feb.

More love coming for area's 1A schools

When Raft River hosts a high school football game, it's a major community event.

"It's the biggest thing in town," said Raft River Junior-Senior High School Principal Ryan Bowman. "Everybody comes out and supports the team."

Mike Christensen

And Malta's not alone in that regard. You'll find the same thing in Carey, Castleford, Oakley and a bevy of other small communities in the Magic Valley where Class 1A programs are found.

"There's not a whole lot to do in a small town, so people like to come and watch the kids in the community," said Carey football coach Lane Kirkland. "They take a lot of pride in the kids. ... People in Carey love to come and watch a football game."

Consider: Carey's population is only about 530 people, yet the Panthers often draw 300 to 400 fans at a game. That means as much as 75 percent of the town's population is in the stands on a Friday night. You won't find that kind of community support at the Class 4A level.

Even in Hagerman, which is largely a retirement community, you'll find hundreds of fans gathered at the football field for the Pirates' five home dates each season.

"It's by far and away our biggest gate night in all our sports," said Hagerman athletic director Kevin Cato.

The same is true in Castleford. "Friday night football seems to be a big show," said Laurie Howard, the Wolves' athletic director.

The take-home message: People care about 1A football. And this region has lots of it, with 14 of the 28 area schools that play prep football belonging to the 1A ranks.

All that in mind, the Times-News is kicking off a new aspect of high school football coverage this fall. Beginning this season, fans will have a chance to log on to Magicvalley.com/sports and vote for each week's Class 1A Game of the Week. We'll send a reporter to cover the game that garners the most votes.

We'll still be there when Jerome faces Twin Falls or Minico tangles with Burley, but this is a chance to spread the coverage love and capture some of the passion and

Bruins dominate Dale Mowrer invite

Times-News writer

The Dale Mowrer Invitational golf tournament was going to happen Monday, rain or shine.

It was played in both.

"Mostly rain," said Kimberly golfer Taylor Sievers, who shot a 99 at Canyon Spring Golf Course in Twin Falls where the girls half of the tournament was held. The boys played in equally inclement conditions at Jerome Country Club.

The invite had already been pushed back from its original March 28 date due to weather.

"Trying to reschedule it again was not an option, so we had to grit our teeth and get through it," said Jerome coach Rick Burke.

"It had its good moments," said Sievers. "We'd shed our layers and once we got our layers off, it'd start pouring on us again. It was really wet."

The golfers from Twin Falls managed the elements best, winning the boys and girls team titles. Bruin golfer Kyle Miley

The Twin Falls girls were also dominant, winning by 81 strokes over Kimberly, while Jenna Sharp took top individual honors with a 77. Katherine Reed and Sydney Lee shot 83s for the Bruins.

CSI's Smith anxious to play close to Chicago

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

College of Southern Idaho point guard Darius Smith said playing close to home was one of the biggest factors in where he'd play next season.

So when it came time to choose where he'd take his recruiting visits, he chose two schools not far from his home in Chicago. Today, he'll decide between them.

Smith, a 6-foot-2 sophomore, said he'll announce this afternoon whether he's signing with Eastern Illinois or Northern Illinois. Eastern Illinois is located in Charleston, which is about a three-hour drive from Chicago. NIU is located in DeKalb, less than 90 minutes from Smith's hometown.

Smith did a little bit of everything for a 33-4 CSI squad that won the NJCAA national championship. He averaged 8.4 points and 5.1 rebounds while leading the team in assists (5.3) and steals (3.1).

He'll be the fourth CSI player to join a four-year program. Pierre Jackson (Baylor), Kenny Buckner (Boise State) and Mitch Bruneel (Utah State) have already signed, with Bruneel inking his NCAA Letter of Intent on Sunday. Sophomore guard Issiah Grayson recently returned from a visit to Bethune-Cookman University in Daytona Beach, Fla., and is still weighing his options.

Callbacks: Four of the 30 players that took part in the CSI men's open tryout on Friday have been invited back to play with the team. The quartet includes former Minico standout Anthony Garcia. The 5-foot-11 Garcia was a first-team all-Great Basin Conference selection as a senior in 2008.

The other players invited back are 5-10 guard Morgan Hesleph out of Juan Diego

Golden Eagle softball visits TVCC today

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Fresh off a four-game emotional grind against North Idaho College, the College of Southern Idaho softball team is getting a little reprieve.

Sort of.

The Golden Eagles take their 36-16 record out of Scenic West Athletic Conference play today when they travel to Treasure Valley Community College in Ontario, Ore., for a 2 p.m. doubleheader.

It might not seem so on the surface, but there's a challenge for CSI to meet today.

The Chukars are 18-13 and tied for fourth place in their division, but they have two of the top home-run hitters in the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges. So today's challenge is reminiscent of North Idaho, which played long-ball early and often over the weekend.

There's also the fact that Treasure Valley beat CSI in fall play. Though that wasn't reflected in any official records and has little to do with where the respective teams are at now, the Eagles will take whatever form of motivation they can find as they try to shake off the poor Saturday performance against North Idaho.

There should, however, still be an opportunity for some of the reserve players to show what they can do.

"They came here and beat us right at the end of fall season," said CSI coach Nick Baumert. "We'll have the (starters) out there and at some point we'll maybe get some other players in the game."

CSI is off this weekend and finishes the regular season May 6-7 at Western Nevada.

Judge lifts NFL lockout, league vows appeal

By Dave Campbell
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — After seven weeks bitter back-and-forth, failed talks and growing uncertainty about the 2011 season, a federal judge has ordered an immediate end to the NFL lockout.

But there are many hurdles to clear and questions to answer before pro football is actually back on track.

U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson gave the players an early victory Monday in their fight with the owners over how to divide the $9 billion business, granting their injunction request to lift the lockout.

The fate of next season, however, remained in limbo: The NFL responded by filing a notice of appeal questioning whether Nelson exceeded her jurisdiction, seeking relief from the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. Hours later, the league filed a motion for an expedited stay, meaning it wants Nelson to put her ruling on hold to let the appeals process play out.

What happens in the next few days is murky, too.

Will players burst through the weight room doors at team facilities and start studying their playbooks? Or will they keep to the mostly individual routines they've developed since the start of the NFL's first work stoppage since 1987?

"I really think that it's in the best interest of the players because this is such a sensitive time to stay back and let the dust settle," said linebacker Ben Leber, one of the 10 plaintiffs in the still-pending antitrust lawsuit filed against the league when the union broke up last month. "The way I understand it is we're in a 'Wild West' right now. Football is back to business, but guess what? There's no rules. There's a lot of positive to that, but there's also a lot of negatives."

DeMaurice Smith, the head of the NFLPA, said on ESPN2 that the organization — now a trade association and not a union — planned to give players "guidance" about what to do. He said players were eager to resume court-ordered mediation to resolve the fight.

"My hope is really is that there's somebody on the other side who loves football as much as our players and fans do," he said.

Nelson's ruling was a stern rebuke of the NFL's case, hardly a

Grizzlies take charge against Spurs

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Whatever Memphis coach Lionel Hollins said to his team at halftime worked very, very well.

The eighth-seeded Grizzlies outscored San Antonio 30-15 in the third quarter, turning a two-point half-time deficit into a 104-86 rout Monday night of the Spurs for a commanding 3-1 lead in their opening series.

“It was an incredible performance in the third and fourth quarter,” Hollins said. “We outscored them 30-15 and from the second quarter on, our defense just kept getting better and better.”

San Antonio led 50-48 at halftime, and Grizzlies guard O.J. Mayo said Hollins lit such a fire in his team with telling them exactly what he wanted them to do that they couldn’t wait to get onto the court.

“We’re not playing too well in so many words,” Mayo said. “That’s the clean version. And we need to get it together, and play with a lot of energy and play like we’re a desperate team. All year he’s been preaching that the desperate team usually wins, and we didn’t look very desperate that first half.”

The Grizzlies already had made franchise history by winning their first playoff game in Game 1 and added their first playoff win at home. Now they are a game away from becoming the second eighth seed to knock off a No. 1 seed since the NBA expanded to a best-of-seven series and join the 2007 Golden State Warriors.

“I know a lot of people didn’t expect us to be here,” Grizzlies guard Mike Conley said. “It’s not like we were expected to be up 3-1 at this point. In our locker room, we’re just playing it game by game. We want to come into San Antonio looking to end it there. We’re focused and want to be able to move onto the next round.”

Conley had 15 points and seven assists. Darrell Arthur added 14 points off the bench for Memphis. Tony Allen had 12, Randolph and Mayo 11 apiece.

These are the same Spurs that won 61 games in the regular season. They opened up very energetic, shooting well and even had their first halftime lead in this series.

They finished the game with their starters on the bench for the final 5:43 with Spurs coach Gregg Popovich trying to rest them for Game 5 on Wednesday night in San Antonio. Now the Spurs will be trying to avoid their second 4-1 opening series loss in three seasons.

“Obviously, the whole team is very frustrated,” Spurs guard Tony Parker said. “I mean we go through a whole season and get that first seed, and now we’re just one game away to be eliminated so it’s most important for us to focus on Game 5. That’s the most important thing to get Game 5 and try to get another chance to get a win here.”

MAVERICKS 93, TRAIL BLAZERS 82

DALLAS — Holding another double-digit lead going into the fourth quarter, the Dallas Mavericks found a great way to protect it. They just stood and watched the Portland Trail Blazers miss 10 straight shots.

Dirk Nowitzki scored 11 of his 25 points in the third quarter and the Dallas Mavericks avoided another late collapse to beat the Portland Trail Blazers 93-82 Monday night to take a 3-2 lead in their first-round series.

Tyson Chandler had 14 points and 20 rebounds — his most ever in a playoff game — and Jason Kidd had 14 assists to make sure Dallas bounced back strong from blowing a 23-point lead over the final 14 minutes of Game 4.

Now the Mavericks have two days to rest up before trying to close out the series in Game 6 on Thursday night in Portland. It won’t be easy as the Trail Blazers have won all four meetings there this season.

History is certainly on Dallas’ side to pull out the series. Of the previous 157 series tied at 2, the Game 5 winner has come out on top 83 percent of the time.

Humber, White Sox shut down Yankees

NEW YORK — Phil Humber held the Yankees hitless until Alex Rodriguez grounded a single up the middle with one out in the seventh inning Monday night, and the Chicago White Sox made the effort stand up with a 2-0 victory over New York.

The White Sox, who won for only the second time in 12 games, snapped a 23-inning scoreless drought in the fourth when Carlos Quentin doubled and scored on Adam Dunn’s grounder. Chicago added a run in the ninth after a popup fell behind the mound.

Sergio Santos got the final four outs for his first save and Chicago’s second save in eight chances this season. He gave the White Sox a scare, allowing a leadoff single to Curtis Granderson before Mark Teixeira hit into a double play. Rodriguez struck out to end it.

fourth error of the game in the fifth inning, an errant throw that allowed another run to score.

Dexter Fowler had a triple, walk and scored a run for Colorado. Huston Street pitched the ninth for his eighth save in eight chances.

REDS 9, BREWERS 5

MILWAUKEE — Jay Bruce hit a two-run homer, Bronson Arroyo pitched effectively into the seventh and Cincinnati used a six-run third inning to beat Milwaukee.

Already ahead 1-0, the Reds sent 11 batters to the plate in the third, holding Chris Narveson (1-1) to his shortest outing in 38 career starts.

Cincinnati had eight hits in the inning one night after managing just four in a shutout loss to St. Louis.

Bruce homered and Brandon Phillips, Jonny Gomes, Ryan Hanigan and even Arroyo (3-2) drove in a run each to give Cincinnati a 7-0 lead.

MARLINS 5, DODGERS 4

MIAMI — Omar Infante lined a two-out RBI single that left fielder Jerry Sands misjudged in the ninth inning, capping a two-run rally that helped Florida beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Both runs were unearned. Scott Cousins’ two-out grounder scooted under the glove of shortstop Jamey Carroll for an error to score the tying run.

Chris Coghlan was then intentionally walked to load the bases, and Infante lined a 1-0 pitch to left. Sands started in, braked and leaped, and the ball sailed over his glove.

PIRATES 4, NATIONALS 2

PITTSBURGH — Brandon Wood’s two-run double in his first game for Pittsburgh was part of a four-run fourth inning.

Paul Maholm (1-3) retired the final 13 batters he faced in seven strong innings as Pittsburgh made up the original series opener that was postponed by rain on Friday.

Wood, picked up on waivers from the Los Angeles Angels on Friday, gave the Pirates their first lead with a two-run double.

DIAMONDBACKS 4, PHILLIES 0

PHOENIX — Ian Kennedy threw a three-hitter in the first complete game of his major league career, outpitching Cliff Lee to lift Arizona to a victory that ended Philadelphia’s five-game win- nings streak.

The Diamondbacks snapped a four-game skid as they opened a 10-game home stand after being swept in three games by the Mets in New York.

Kennedy (3-1) struck out 10 — including Jimmy Rollins to end the game — and walked none.

With no free agency, drafting is tougher

NEW YORK (AP) — Strange. Unique. Weird.

Those are the buzz words for this week’s NFL draft, the most unusual selection process since free agency began 18 years ago. From players to scouts to general managers to coaches, no one’s quite sure how this year’s draft will play out.

Unable to plug holes with free agents because of an owners lockout in its seventh week — an injunction granted Monday to the players seeking an end to the work stoppage isn’t likely to impact the draft — NFL teams could look to pick rookies who seem more prepared to have an early impact. That goes against the general philosophy of past drafts to grab the highest-rated player, even if he doesn’t figure to contribute early on.

Because many team needs have not been addressed by signing veterans, some clubs could reach in the draft to fill those holes.

“I think my feeling on that is that it actually helps us with the draft,” said Hall of Fame quarterback John Elway, who now runs football operations for the Broncos. “Now we can find the best players that are on that draft board that can come in and are really going to help us, and then to fill in with free agency rather than having free agency and having to fill through the draft.”

“If you’re filling through the draft, then you’re drafting with need. This way we can go out and, in my opinion, get the best players for the Denver Broncos and then fill with free agency. It doesn’t put the pressure on us to draft with need. We now have the time in free agency, if we have some holes after the draft, to address those holes.”

So maybe there won’t be much reaching.

“I don’t want to reach for players just to fill a roster spot,” Dolphins general manager Jeff Ireland said. “You have to be smart. Free agency will open up again. I do know that.”

And maybe there will be.

“That’s the challenge all of the time and that’s a great question from that point of view because you fight that,” Bills scouting chief Tom Modrak said. “If you have an open hole, you want to be sure you don’t want to put a player in there just because it is (open). You want to still get a good player, a good talent, you’re not oblivious ... to what that is.

“I wish we could get a lot of guys who play right away, but most of these guys are developmental. You don’t get those Randy Moss-type guys.”

— Giants GM Randy Reese

“Let’s say you feel you’re deep at a particular position, you still don’t want to overlook people because at some point they become a good value.”

This draft is filled with challenges aside from the usual ones such as is this quarterback (Blaine Gabbert) more NFL-ready than that one (Cam Newton)? Is this dangerous receiver (A.J. Green) more of a game-breaker than that one (Julio Jones)?

For personnel men from Seattle to Miami, draft-day trading has an entirely new dynamic: No actual players can be swapped. Not just veterans, either; once a player is drafted, he can’t be dealt elsewhere on Thursday, Friday or Saturday — or until the lockout ends.

Draft slots can be traded as long as they haven’t yet been filled.

And with the draft being challenged in the players’ lawsuit against the league to get the lockout lifted, who knows if 2012 picks are worth anything?

Many of the men doing the selecting admit they’ve had more time to do actual scouting or to dissect more video than ever. But they also must be careful it doesn’t lead to overanalysis.

“I have been able to watch more players myself with free agency not here,” Giants GM Jerry Reese said about his recent video viewing. “But we’ve put in about the same preparation time.”

Reese admits he isn’t looking for anything different in 2011 with NFL business at a standstill than he was in his previous four drafts during labor peace.

“I wish we could get a lot of guys who play right away,” Reese said, “but most of these guys are developmental. You don’t get those Randy Moss-type guys.

“We don’t want to make it harder than it is. We’re not splitting the atom in the draft room.”

Jerome-Buhl softball rained out

Times-News

The Jerome High School softball team led Buhl 3-2 in the third inning when the game was rained out Monday afternoon in Jerome.

The game, the first of a planned doubleheader, could be made up, but Jerome coach Adam Reynolds said finding a spot in the two teams’ schedules this late in the season will be tricky.

With rain and snow in today’s forecast, several more high school sporting events could be in danger of the same fate.

Leavitt, who now resides in Jerome, played with the team on Monday. CSI coach Steve Gosar said other players will “trickle in over the next couple weeks” as they deal with work and school schedules.

Filling the nest: Gosar said he hasn’t yet signed any new recruits for the 2011-12 season. He hopes to finish individual meetings this week with current players eligible to return next season, but said they won’t be re-signed until the end of the semester.

Women’s update: CSI women’s basketball coach Randy Rogers has signed two forwards for next season in Chelsie Pitt of Bishop Gorman High School in Las Vegas and Megan Tanner of Utah’s Bonneville High School. Both are 5-foot-10 forwards.

Rogers recently returned from a recruiting trip to Seattle, Wash., as he seeks to round out his 2011-12 roster. Finding a true center is high on his priority list.

NCAA alleges Tressel lied to hide NCAA violations

COLUMBUS, Ohio — In a sharply worded rebuke of Ohio State's Jim Tressel, the NCAA on Monday accused the 10-year coach of withholding information and lying to keep Buckeyes players on the field who had accepted improper benefits from the owner of a tattoo parlor.

In a "notice of allegations" sent to the school, the NCAA said Monday that the violations relating to the coach are considered "potential major violations."

Ohio State was not cited for the most serious of institutional breaches since Tressel hid information from his superiors for more than nine months. The university has 90 days to respond to the ruling body of college sports' request for information before a scheduled date before the NCAA's committee on infractions on Aug. 12 in Indianapolis.

In a 13-page indictment of Tressel's behavior, the NCAA alleged that Tressel had "permitted football student-athletes to participate in intercollegiate athletics while ineligible." It also said he "failed to deport himself ... (with) honesty and integrity" and said he was lying when he filled out a compliance form in September which said he had no knowledge of any NCAA violations by any of his players.

Tressel appeared at an awards banquet outside Cleveland on Monday night, ducking in out of the rain to shake hands with Cleveland Browns president Mike Holmgren before slipping into a side room. Tressel ignored reporters' questions about the NCAA allegations on his way to the ballroom before presenting a coaching award named for his late father, Lee Tressel.

While making the presentation, Tressel said, "There is nothing more important than the team and nothing more important than the kids."

Before the program ended, Tressel left the dais and was escorted out a side door and into a waiting car.

Athletic director Gene Smith said he would have "no comments until the case is resolved." The university issued a statement that the allegations were consistent with what it had already self-reported to the NCAA on March 8.

NCAA PANEL MEMBERS ATTENDED FIESTA BOWL-SPONSORED RETREAT

WASHINGTON — Nine of the 11 members of an NCAA panel that will help decide the Fiesta Bowl's fate attended a bowl-sponsored retreat that included free meals, resort rooms and golf outings.

The nine names all showed up on a 2008 "Fiesta Frolic" attendee list obtained by Playoff PAC in a public records request. The group provided the list to The Associated Press.

The NCAA Postseason Bowl Licensing Subcommittee is scheduled to meet with Fiesta Bowl officials this week in New Orleans, but won't make a decision on whether to revoke the bowl's license until later this spring. The Fiesta Bowl, played at University of Phoenix Stadium in Glendale, Ariz., is one of four bowls that rotate hosting the Bowl Championship Series national title game.

"This is a jury of the bowl's former freeloaders," charged Bryson Morgan, co-founder of Playoff PAC, which advocates switching to a playoff system to determine a national college football champion. Morgan questioned how a decision by the panel members can be considered credible given their attendance at the Fiesta Frolic.

An internal report by the bowl last month detailed about $45,000 in reimbursements to employees for political donations, an apparent violation of federal and state laws. It also uncovered lavish and inappropriate spending, such as $33,000 for a Pebble Beach, Calif., birthday bash for CEO and President John Junker, $13,000 for the wedding and honeymoon of an aide, and a $1,200 strip club tab for Junker and two others. Junker has been fired.

Lockout

surprise given the court's history with the league and her pattern of questioning during a hearing here three weeks ago in St. Paul, Minn.

In a room packed with lawyers, players and league officials, Nelson politely but persistently questioned NFL lawyer David Boies about his repeated argument that she shouldn't have jurisdiction over a labor dispute with an unfair negotiation charge against the players pending with the National Labor Relations Board.

In her ruling, Nelson rejected that contention. She recognized the NFL Players Association's decision to "de-unionize" as legitimate because it has "serious consequences" for the players.

Nelson even referenced her colleague, U.S. District Judge David Doty, who has frequently ruled for the players in the past. Not only did she declare that players are likely to suffer harm by the lockout, a legal requirement for granting the injunction, Nelson wrote that they're already feeling the hurt now.

She cited their short careers, arguing that monetary damages wouldn't be enough relief.

What Nelson didn't do, however, was tackle the issue of the antitrust lawsuit filed last month when the union broke up. That, she wrote, "must wait another day."

If the injunction is upheld, the NFL must resume business in some fashion.

Look Up!

Always look up before moving irrigation pipe or ladders, or operating equipment that may come in contact with overhead power lines. Federal and state laws require you stay a safe distance of 10 feet or more away from overhead power lines.
