The sweet sounds of physics

Twin Falls students design, play their own instruments

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

In the far corner of a Twin Falls High School classroom, Marc Bulcher pounded out Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star on his drums made of PVC pipe, duct tape and metal clamps.

The 18-year-old has been drumming for eight years and is a member of the band Under Wicked Sky, but he's never had to make a drum set before.

"With actual drums you don't have to tune them, but these ones you do," he said. "Each length of the pipe gives you a different note."

On Tuesday, students in TFHS physics classes showed off the musical instruments they designed and created out of everyday materials. Each student had to learn to play a recognizable song on their instrument using sheet music or notes scribbled on paper. The students will serenade 15 other classes during the remainder of the week.

Physics and astronomy teacher Candace Wright got the idea for the hands-on learning experience from a student teacher last year. Sound waves, frequencies and tone were the projected learning

Bliss Rock Chuck Derby hits fourth year

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

BLISS — A good time in Bliss is planned this weekend — for everyone but the rock chucks.

The Hannah Bates Rock Chuck Derby kicks off its fourth year on Thursday night at the Outlaws and Angels Saloon, and continues through Sunday.

Sportsmen of all ages are invited to participate in the "chuck" hunt, raffles, motorcycle poker run and a walk/run event. The Miss Rock Chuck contest for the ladies will include a Friday and Saturday shoot-off, Saturday coronation and Sunday fundraising auction.

The goal of the derby is for hunters to track down and shoot the world's biggest rock chuck, and bring it in to be weighed by judges. The winner will be announced on Sunday and will receive a gun as a prize.

Event committee member Bret Silver said the three-day event attracted close to 400 people last year and raised about $50,000. Of that, more than $36,000 was donated to area school

See DERBY, Main 2

Rules of the hunt

- All Idaho hunting regulations apply, and hunters must have a valid hunting license or hunter education number
- Register before you hunt
- Each hunter must be present to weigh in his or her own rock chuck
- Weighted, wet or frozen rock chucks won't be accepted
- Each hunter may weigh one rock chuck per day, with the heaviest overall catch counted in the standings
- Each hunter must dispose of his or her own rock chuck
- No animal weights will be announced; ties determined by coin flip

Help for smokers targeted

Health district's proposed budget cuts smoking cessation money, leaves decisions ahead

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

More inside

Magic Valley smokers who want to kick the habit may end up with one less way to permanently snuff out cigarettes.

Cuts to the tobacco cessation program of the South Central Public Health District are one possible result of the district's proposed, trimmed $5.9 million budget for the 2012 fiscal year, which starts July 1.

The program may end up being limited to pregnant women and teenage smokers under 18, health officials said.

The health district's money for the program, which comes from the state Millennium Fund of tobacco settlement money, is cut by 51 percent — from $65,800 to $32,200, a level set by the Legislature.

T.F. church to head downtown

City P&Z narrowly approves move

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The second time was the charm for a Twin Falls church trying to move downtown.

The Magic Valley Bible Church won approval Tuesday from the city of Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission to move into the old Cain's Furniture building in downtown Twin Falls, albeit on a 5-4 vote. It was the second time the commission voted on the proposal.

Several letters against the church's move were not provided to the church during the first vote in March, preventing it from giving a rebuttal. At that hearing, the P&Z shot down the proposal on a 4-2 vote.

"We learned a lot the first time," Pastor Greg "Bear" Morton said after the vote. "By God's grace we were able to come back."

DETAILS OF THE PROPOSAL

Highlights of the health district's budget proposal include:

OVERALL OUTLOOK: The $5.9 million budget is 12.9 percent less than the current budget. That's a $873,721 cut, but one-time spending this year widens the gap between budgets.

NEW RECORDS SYSTEM: The health district had to spend $475,530 of its reserves on an electronic medical records system because of mandates from the federal health care overhaul.

MORE WORK, FEWER BODIES: To help balance the budget, LeBlanc said he is keeping two health inspector positions vacant and eliminating an open nurse manager position. That leaves nine inspectors looking at cafeterias, day cares, restaurants and sewers instead of 11.

LESS MONEY COMING IN: Other state funding will drop by $68,300 — 6.31 percent. Fees and donations are anticipated to be 7.74 percent less, a loss of $76,167. With an economic slump, there's less money coming in from new sewer inspections at construction sites.

PROPERTY VALUE SLUMP MEANS LESS FUNDING: The region's eight counties will be required to chip in about $1 million total, which is based on population and property values. Because Blaine County's property values plummeted, its share is 6.3 percent less. That $15,640 cost is passed on to the other counties. It means another $2,027 for Twin Falls County, and an extra $3,685 for Cassia County. "Their services are invaluable and we never begrudge our share of their budget," said Dennis Crane, chairman of the Cassia County Commission.

NO FEDERAL MONEY FOR H1N1 SHOTS: The district's new budget won't have $91,000 in federal dollars received this year for a program that tests and puts expiration dates on medications for H1N1 flu and anthrax poisoning.

Budget

Other possibilities include fewer six-week classes with larger groups of juveniles. It may mean adult smokers who aren't pregnant will be referred to online help instead of getting into a class.

In better times, health districts across the state helped out more smokers. About 3,480 smokers who weren't juveniles or pregnant kicked the habit in the last decade through district-sponsored cessation programs. That's 53 percent of all the 6,502 smokers who quit the habit in Idaho through efforts of the seven health districts.

If the SCPHD Board of Health decides to put more money into the program, it will have to come from somewhere else in the budget, said Rene LeBlanc, director of the health district.

It's one of the smallest — but most visible — parts of the proposed budget, which faces a health board vote on May 25.

"It isn't good, but it isn't as bad as it could have been," said Terry Kramer, a Twin Falls county commissioner and member of the district's board.

Burley senior named Idaho FFA president

Shoshone senior named reporter

Times-News

Burley High School senior Jacob Lake was selected Idaho FFA president during the April 6-9 State FFA Convention held in Twin Falls.

Shoshone High School senior Cara Pantone was named reporter as FFA leaders from across the state joined for three days of skill exhibition, guest lectures and officer selection for 2011-12. The officer selection process included a series of interviews and presentations. Officers will be involved in leadership training, planning Idaho FFA events, presenting workshops to local chapters and various other activities.

Lake, the son of Rodney and Rebecca Lake of Burley, grew up on a Cassia County potato farm and has been involved in FFA for three years in the Burley Chapter and East Magic Valley District. A district champion wrestler for Burley High, Lake is also involved in multiple extracurricular activities.

He plans to attend Oklahoma State University and major in agricultural economics.

"I look forward to the chance of giving back to the organization that has given me so much," Lake said in a written release.

Pantone is the daughter of Tony and Pam Pantone of Shoshone, and has lived on a Lincoln County cattle ranch for 13 years.

She joined the Idaho FFA as a Shoshone High freshman and has been involved in a variety of activities, both through FFA and other organizations.

"I am extremely honored to be a part of the 2011-2012 Idaho State FFA Officer team and cannot wait to serve the amazing Idaho FFA Association as the state reporter," Pantone said in a written release.

Pantone plans to attend the University of Idaho and major in secondary education with a minor in agricultural extension education.

BLM hears 'fracking' concerns

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Federal land managers are trying to balance the risks and rewards of hydraulic fracturing, a process that blasts water, sand and chemicals underground to free natural gas.

Industry representatives, regulators and residents offered different views on how it's going at a Bureau of Land Management forum in Golden on Monday.

Some residents said they worry how hydraulic fracturing, or fracking, might affect groundwater. Colorado Oil and Gas Conservation Commission director Dave Neslin said his agency has investigated hundreds of complaints tied to fracking, but hasn't found any groundwater contamination.

Dave Cesark of Mesa Energy in Grand Junction said the risk isn't zero, but fracking has been used safely for decades, the Coloradoan reported.

"Fracking has been performed for over 60 years on over 1 million wells," he said. "Nine of every 10 wells currently in production have gone through fracturing."

A report issued by Rep. Diana DeGette, D-Denver, and others in Congress this month said oil and gas companies used more than 1.5 million gallons of fluids containing cancer-causing agents between 2005 and 2009 in Colorado.

Aspen Science Center geologist Rich Ward said there are multiple layers of steel piping and cement that isolate the well from contact with water tables.

concepts, and Wright said the projects crossed into other classes and skills along the way.

Justin Clark made his xylophone in his welding class and tapped out the theme song from Super Mario Bros., while Brooke Burnside used a copper pipe to coax her wind chimes into the opening theme music from the Harry Potter movies.

Burnside said she chose the wind chimes because they were the easiest to learn to play.

"I have no musical talent whatsoever," she said. "It taught me to problem-solve and have fun with music."

While some students already had experience with musical instruments, others had to rely on their friends to help them change note music into letters they could understand.

Cody Price made an acoustic guitar out of floorboards and camouflaged duct tape. He plays the electric guitar and said his replica didn't sound too different from a store-bought guitar.

The boards had to be soaked for two days to allow them to bend into the curves of the guitar, and Price said he spent about seven hours building the instrument.

"Now I know how to make notes using math equations," he said as he plucked the strings.

Church

Many self-identified church members testified in favor of the building, as did other community members. Twin Falls County Commissioner Leon Mills also testified in favor of the church before returning to his seat next to his daughter, Planning and Zoning liaison and Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka. The church does not yet own the building.

The P&Z saw more opposition to the church's move this time around. Jeff Hepworth, a Downtown Alive co-chairman and one of several to argue against the move, said the church would hurt downtown activities and doesn't fit his group's vision for the area, though he specified none of his group are anti-church or against this specific church.

He said Downtown Alive is trying to get the thrift stores in the area to move out because they don't fit the plan — letting the church in would be a step backward in that aim.

"Frankly, we want more bars downtown, we want more restaurants, we want it to be hopping," Hepworth said, adding that he would like to profit from his downtown property, which the church will hurt.

He said he didn't know if his group would appeal the decision to the Twin Falls City Council, which has final say.

Morton said his church, while abstaining from alcohol, would still go to downtown restaurants and be a part of that community. They were heading to Janitzio Family Mexican Restaurant on Main Avenue to celebrate, he said, and some of the congregation's farmers would likely want booths in Downtown Alive's upcoming Friday Night Markets.

Several of the P&Z members did not state the reasons for their votes, though commissioners Jason Derricott and Chuck Sharp said they thought the church's proposal met the code and couldn't see a reason to vote against it.

Commissioner Erick Mikesell, who voted against the church both times, argued that the P&Z needed to remember the "planning" part of its name, and think if the church would be good for downtown's future.

Jerome County seeks architect for initial jail design

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Jerome County commissioners decided Tuesday to start looking for an architect to do preliminary design work on a new jail.

The 120-bed jail proposal will be a bond issue facing voters in November. The architect's work will put the county one step closer to getting clear budget figures and specifications to present to the public before the vote. The total cost of the jail is estimated for now at $8 million to $11 million.

Jerome County Commission Chairman Charlie Howell said the county contacted four firms. They are Balteus Design Group in Jerome, Lombard-Conrad Architects in Boise, McKinstry Co. in Boise and Ormond Construction in Idaho Falls.

Howell said the county plans to do interviews with all the firms in the first week of May before choosing one.

The county commissioners' decision to start looking for an architect to do initial work follows a Monday meeting when they talked with building professionals, including Lombard-Conrad Architects, about different construction methods for the jail.

Because the initial work isn't expected to reach $25,000 — the threshold that requires advertising for bids — the county isn't legally required to advertise for an architect.

This will be the county's fourth attempt to get voter approval for a new jail.

Blaine Co. educators, patrons discuss needs, suggestions

Role of technology in classroom draws several comments

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The Idaho Legislature debated what constitutes a good education all winter.

On Monday night, it was the Blaine County School District's turn as educators and parents sat down for a conversation about things like teaching students 21st-century skills, rigorous curriculums, technology, teaching the whole child and classroom size.

About 75 people showed up at the Wood River YMCA in Ketchum to ask questions and offer suggestions.

One mother asked about the school district picking up the tab for her advanced math student who is taking a class through Johns Hopkins University in Maryland, while another applauded the increasing emphasis on encouraging middle school students to take harder courses with college in mind.

Other suggestions included encouraging teachers to get master's degrees. Terry Basolo, the head of the Blaine County Community

Drug Coalition, suggested the district reduce barriers to learning through courses to eliminate bullying and substance abuse.

District Assistant Superintendent John Blackman suggested creating advanced-placement courses for creative classes like art, dance and music.

"The creative thought process is about problem-solving," he said.

To not allow students to advance and get credit in some areas is shortsighted, agreed middle school Principal Fritz Peters.

Lyman Drake asked if the new emphasis on technology is making "McStudents," pointing out that some high school students don't know their multiplication tables or what Custer's Last Stand was.

Hemingway Elementary School Principal Don Haisley said educators are grappling with questions of what students should be expected to know, given the fact that it's so easy to punch a few buttons on a Blackberry. Haisley added that his daughter and her medical school classmates each search the Internet as their professor discusses a disease because research is advancing so quickly that often the professor's information is outdated.

Jerry Hutchins, the district's technology manager, said many of the state's technology directors were concerned by what they saw as State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's push to save money this year by trading software for teachers without adding support staff. Luna's "Students Come First" plan will expand the use of technology using money previously marked for salaries.

"I personally don't think you can eliminate some teachers just because you implement more computers," Hutchins said. "You have to have someone there to guide the students."

"If every student owns a laptop, they're less likely to be collaborative than if you have three or four working off one screen," Drake added. "That means we're not meeting some of the 21st-century skills we're trying to build in these kids."

Hemingway fifth-grade teacher Alicia Pastor Hollis said having students work problems on computers can free teachers up to work with individual students.

But she added that technology brings with it its own set of problems: "I have iPads in my classroom and as soon as I've updated all of them, there's something new I need to update."

Snow tires must be removed by Sunday

Idaho motorists who keep studded tires on their vehicles past Saturday will face $62 fines starting Sunday.

The Idaho Transportation Department reminded drivers on Tuesday that using studded snow tires is legal only from Oct. 1 through April 30. The tires must be removed during the summer months to avoid excess wear on bare roadways.

Studded tire laws vary among Idaho's neighboring states. Studded tires are legal in the surrounding states on these dates:

- Montana: Oct. 1 to May 31
- Nevada: Oct. 1 to April 30
- Oregon: Nov. 1 to April 1 (extended this year because of lingering winter weather conditions)
- Utah: Oct. 15 to March 31
- Washington: Nov. 1 to March 31 (extended this year because of lingering winter weather conditions)
- Wyoming: Legal all year

Work to restore Oregon Trail to start at Fossil Beds

A project to restore the area around the Oregon Trail that runs through Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument is set to begin today.

The project, necessitated by the August 2010 Long Butte Fire that burned 75 percent of the monument, will include the installation of erosion stabilization material and planting of 1,666 sagebrush seedlings.

According to a National Park Service release, the nonprofit American Conservation Experience will perform the work, which is expected to be completed by May 4. At that time, construction of the redesigned Oregon Trail Overlook parking area will start.

Number of 100-year-olds is booming in the U.S.

By Matt Sedensky
Associated Press writer

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Not too long ago, Lonny Fried's achievement would have dropped jaws. TV and newspaper reporters would have showed up at her door. She would have been fussed over and given a big party.

But turning 100 isn't such a big deal anymore.

America's population of centenarians — already the largest in the world — has roughly doubled in the past 20 years to around 72,000 and is projected to at least double again by 2020, perhaps even increase seven-fold, according to the Census Bureau.

Fried turns 100 on Friday. Her retirement community, Edgewater Pointe Estates in Boca Raton, observed her birthday two weeks ahead of time with other residents born in April.

"In the '80s, we'd make a big deal about it by calling Willard Scott on TV to make that huge announcement," Diana Ferguson, who has worked at Edgewater for 25 years, said of the "Today" show weatherman known for his on-air birthday wishes to viewers who hit the century mark. "But today we have so many residents turning 100-plus that it's not as big a deal."

Fried doesn't mind at all. Simply making it to 100, she said, is enough.

"I don't want any celebration or nothing," she said.

Born in Germany, she lost her first husband in the Holocaust and was herself held at the Westerbork concentration camp before coming to the U.S. She takes no medication, moves around steadily with a walker and said she has been fulfilled by a life in which she found a second love, raised a family and worked as a nurse.

The Census Bureau estimates there were 71,991 centenarians as of Dec. 1, up from 37,306 two decades earlier. While predicting longevity and population growth is difficult, the census' low-end estimate for 2050 is 265,000 centenarians; its highest projection puts the number at 4.2 million.

"They have been the fastest-growing segment of our population in terms of age," said Thomas Perls, director of the New England Centenarian Study at Boston University.

The rising number of centenarians is not just a byproduct of the nation's growing population — they make up a bigger chunk of it. In 1990, about 15 in every 100,000 Americans had reached 100; in 2010, it was more than 23 per 100,000, according to census figures.

Perls said the rise in 100-year-olds is attributed largely to better medical care and the dramatic drop in childhood-mortality rates since the early 1900s. Centenarians also have good genes on their side, he said, and have made common-sense health decisions, such as not smoking and keeping their weight down.

"It's very clearly a combination of genes and environment," Perls said.

The Social Security Administration says just under 1 percent of people born in 1910 survived to their 100th birthday. Some have speculated as many as half of girls born today could live to 100.

Those who work with people 100 and older say the oldest Americans are living much healthier lives. A good number still live independently and remain active, their minds still sharp and their bodies basically sound. They have generally managed to confine serious sickness and disability to the final years of their lives.

When Lynn Peters Adler, a former lawyer who founded and runs the National Centenarian Awareness Project, began to recognize the oldest members of the community, she didn't even know the word "centenarian." Now, some weeks she talks to a dozen people who are 100 and older. And in her 25 years of contact with centenarians, she has culled some similarities among them:

- A positive but realistic attitude.
 - A love of life and sense of humor.
 - Spirituality.
 - Courage.
 - And a remarkable ability to accept the losses that come with age but not be stopped by them.
- "Centenarians are not quitters," she said.

AROUND THE WORLD

LIBYA Gadhafi's grip slipping in western Libya

TRIPOLI — Moammar Gadhafi has suffered military setbacks in recent days in western Libya, a sign that his grip may be slipping in the very region he needs to cling to power.

His loyalists were driven out of the center of the city of Misrata, a key rebel stronghold in Gadhafi-controlled territory. A NATO airstrike turned parts of his Tripoli headquarters into smoldering rubble. And rebel fighters seized a border crossing, breaking open a supply line to besieged rebel towns in a remote western mountain area.

Front lines have shifted repeatedly in two months of fighting, and the poorly trained, ill-equipped rebels have given no evidence that they could defeat Gadhafi on the battlefield. The Libyan leader has deep pockets, including several billion dollars in gold reserves, that could keep him afloat for months. And his forces continue to bombard Misrata from afar, unleashing a fierce barrage Tuesday on the port — the city's only lifeline to the world.

Yet Gadhafi appears increasingly on the defensive. And some see the past week as a turning point in the fighting, citing mounting military and political pressure on Gadhafi. Coalition airstrikes over the past five weeks have steadily eroded his fighting power.

FLORIDA Astronauts arrive for shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL — The astronaut husband of wounded Rep. Gabrielle Giffords arrived at NASA's launch site Tuesday for this week's flight of space shuttle Endeavour, and said his wife would be following him "pretty soon" — in plenty of time for liftoff.

Endeavour is set to blast off Friday afternoon on its final voyage. It will be the next-to-last space shuttle mission.

Navy Capt. Mark Kelly and his crew flew into Kennedy Space Center early Tuesday afternoon. The countdown began about an hour later. Speaking on behalf of his five crewmates, Kelly expressed pleasure at seeing the astronauts' wives and children, who flew in a little earlier and gathered nearby.

Giffords was not among the crowd. She remained behind in Houston, where she is undergoing rehabilitation for a gunshot wound to the head. She was attacked Jan. 8 in her Tucson, Ariz., hometown.

NEW YORK Couric leaving 'CBS Evening News'

NEW YORK — Katie Couric confirmed that she is indeed leaving the ratings-basement "CBS Evening News," less than five years after she became the first woman to lead a network TV evening newscast by herself.

Couric, 54, told People magazine for a story published on its website Tuesday that she hasn't decided what she's doing next, but that she is "looking at a format that will allow me to engage in more multi-dimensional storytelling." CBS is expected to appoint Scott Pelley of "60 Minutes" as her successor.

Ron Paul makes a move toward presidency

By Paul West
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — With an eye toward tapping tea party votes, Ron Paul said Tuesday he was forming a presidential exploratory committee for a second try at the Republican nomination.

The Texas congressman built a passionate following in 2008, raising more than $35 million but failing to win any caucuses or primaries.

Paul
At a news conference in Des Moines, Iowa, he said the country has changed, with "literally millions of more people now concerned about things I talked about four years ago," including excessive government spending.

His announcement came one day after Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour quit the 2012 race. It leaves Paul as the most prominent critic of U.S. military involvement in Afghanistan in the Republican field.

Paul, 75, was the Libertarian Party nominee for president in 1988. He faces competition for votes from Gary Johnson, a former two-term New Mexico governor who recently entered the Republican contest on a libertarian platform. He will also be competing with other conservative candidates for tea party support.

The father of tea party favorite and Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul, the elder Paul promised a final decision soon about a 2012 run, probably before June. He said he entered the exploratory phase in order to qualify for the first debate of the campaign, scheduled for May 5 in South Carolina.

Paul said he was filing papers with the Federal Election Commission but none had been received late Tuesday.

EDITORIAL

A DUI stop ain’t what it used to be

Not long ago, being charged with driving drunk — or avoiding such a fate — was something of a gray area. It’s not so gray anymore. Breathalyzers have grown more sophisticated in detecting blood alcohol content, and if you decline to submit to such a test the officer can haul you to a hospital for a blood draw, which you can’t refuse under state law. If your BAC is .08 percent, you’re busted.

Those are reasons why the number of felony prosecutions of drunk drivers in Idaho increased 25 percent in 2010 from the previous year. The recently released Idaho Supreme Court Report also said felony counts of driving under the influence filings are up 100 percent since 2006

Since that year, anyone convicted of two DUIs within 10 years faces a felony if caught driving a third time. Previously, the length of time was five years.

DUIs — first or repeat — are a major issue in Idaho because convicted drivers lose their privileges for a time. And there aren’t a lot of transportation alternatives.

“In New York, you can hop on a subway if you lose your license,” attorney John Cutler told the Post Register of Idaho Falls. “Oftentimes with my clients, losing your license means losing your job.”

Which is one reason the continued expansion of the state’s DUI courts is important. There are eight misdemeanor DUI courts statewide and four felony DUI courts — including one in Twin Falls — and they’re bursting at the seams.

DUI courts deal with offenders arrested for the second time within five years, or drivers with especially high blood alcohol content. They focus on the substance-abuse problem through available community treatment resources and less on punitive court and license sanctions, and at a much earlier point in the driver’s history of alcohol abuse.

A 2009 study of the Kootenai County DUI court found that 70 percent of participants were clean and sober after a year and that 96 percent were not rearrested.

Think that’s not a big deal? Then consider that the consequences of drunk driving cost Idaho $725 million in 2008, according to the Department of Health and Welfare. That’s an amount equal to what the state will pay its 15,000 public school teachers in the next year.

Then, too, it costs about $20,000 to lock up a DUI felon for 365 days. That’s enough to send your kid to college in Idaho for a year.

The state’s judiciary has managed to keep Idaho DUI courts growing by shifting around resources. But the courts, like every other agency, have had their budgets cut in the past few years.

So maybe it’s time to look harder for private-sector and local resources to help keep DUI courts growing.

The case against taxing Internet sales

On the home page of his U.S. Senate website, Illinois Democrat Dick Durbin invites visitors to learn about his record of “Looking Out For Consumers” by protecting them “from excessive fees and predatory practices.” Alas, the senator’s concern for the welfare of consumers goes only so far. Indeed, he is poised to introduce legislation that would subject millions of American consumers to “excessive fees” they have long been sheltered from: sales taxes on their online purchases.

Jeff Jacoby

The tech website CNET reported last week that Durbin, the Senate’s assistant majority leader, will offer a bill after the Easter recess that would allow states to force any Internet vendor to collect sales taxes for them — not just when the vendor has set up shop within their borders, but even when its facilities are located elsewhere. If it passes, Durbin’s bill will undo the longstanding rule that merchants only have to collect sales tax for states with which they have a “substantial nexus.” That phrase comes from the Supreme Court, which has confirmed the no-nexus-no-tax rule in a line of cases stretching back more than 40 years.

While the court’s decisions originally dealt with mail-order catalogs, the logic is just as pertinent to sellers doing business over the Internet. If a company has no shops, offices, or employees within a state, there is no reason it should be obliged to charge sales tax when it happens to sell something to a resident of that state. That is why most Americans pay no sales tax

CREATORS.COM ©11

I WON’T ALLOW THE HALF OF AMERICANS WHO PAY NO TAXES TO BEAR THE BURDEN OF THE OTHER HALF WHO AREN’T PAYING THEIR FAIR SHARE.

CREATORS.COM

when they buy a product from Amazon, which has an actual physical presence in only a handful of states, while those who make a purchase from Barnes and Noble or Walmart — companies with outlets nationwide in addition to their online sites — typically will be charged their state’s sales tax.

To hear Durbin tell it, there is something unjust about sparing Internet retailers the burden of calculating and collecting taxes for states they don’t operate in. “Why should out-of-state companies that sell their products online have an unfair advantage over Main Street bricks-and-mortar businesses here in Metro East?” he said in February during a meeting with Illinois business owners.

This supposed “fairness” argument is echoed by the Alliance for Main Street Fairness, which lobbies against what it calls the “online sales tax loophole.” The Alliance argues that “a sale is a sale is a sale,” and that whether it takes place in cyberspace or in the shop around the corner, the sales tax should be collected. On its website, the alliance posts videos from business owners like Mark Jeannette, a Pennsylvania tobacconist who complains that “if someone purchases a box of cigars over the Internet at a discount, and on top of that doesn’t have to pay the 6 percent sales tax, they are at an advantage that I certainly don’t have.”

But it’s a hollow argument. All other things being equal, consumers no doubt prefer a tax-free shopping experience. But all other things are rarely equal. E-retailers (or mail-order catalogs) may have a price advantage, but well-run “Main Street” businesses have competitive advantages of their own. They attract customers with eye-catching window displays. They play up local ties and neighborhood loyalty. They give shoppers the chance to see, feel, or try on items before buying them. They enable the serendipitous joys of browsing. They don’t charge for shipping. And they offer potential customers a degree of personal service and warmth that no website can match.

The current system is far fairer than the one Durbin wants. Bricks-and-mortar merchants charge sales taxes based on their physical location. The same rule applies to online merchants. A Pennsylvania tobacco shop doesn’t collect Ohio sales taxes whenever it sells a humidor to a visitor from Ohio. Amazon shouldn’t have to, either.

“Out-of-state companies that aren’t paying their fair share of taxes,” Durbin argues, “are sticking Illinois residents and businesses with the tab.” What tab? Taxes paid should bear some relation to services received, and merchants with no “substantial nexus” to a state receive no services from it. They don’t use its firefighters or sewers, don’t send their kids to its schools, and don’t expect it to plow their streets after a blizzard. To force them nevertheless to collect and remit that state’s taxes would be grossly unreasonable.

Durbin’s bill would only hurt the consumers he claims to be “looking out for.” The existing arrangement has worked well for 40 years. All it needs from Congress is a good leaving-alone.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Stop the madness of U.N. Agenda 21

The United Nation’s Agenda 21 (sustainable development) is a plan for world government to redistribute our wealth by controlling every human activity on the planet. The goal is power and control and not concern for the environment.

It is being implemented at all levels of government since the 1992 Earth Summit. The United Nations is the master planner. At the federal level, Agenda 21 is being implemented through the Environmental Protection Agency and departments of Interior, Commerce and Energy.

Agenda 21 is implementing a global regime that will monitor, oversee and strictly regulate our planet’s oceans, lakes, streams, rivers, aquifers, sea beds, coastlines, wetlands, forests, jungles grassland, farmlands, deserts, tundra and mountains.

It plans to protect the atmosphere with fraudulent carbon dioxide greenhouse gas reductions. More than 32,000 USA scientists have signed a petition against man-caused global warming and that CO2 is not a pollutant, but needed for life on the planet to produce food and oxygen.

Agenda 21 proposes plans for cities, towns, suburbs, villages and rural areas. It envisions a global scheme for health care, education, nutrition, agriculture, labor, production and consumption. In summary, control of everything on earth.

The 1,100-page Agenda 21 document is summarized and published under the title, “Agenda 21: The Earth Summit Strategy to Save Our Planet” (Earth Press 1993). Agenda 21 is an undisguised call for total regimentation of all life on the planet with all power to the United Nations.

Sustainable development is a dictator’s dream come true: An emerging all-purpose, open-ended, “enabling act” granting global central planners carte blanche to claim it means whatever they want it to mean. The United Nations estimates it may cost $2.5 trillion per year to implement.

To stop this madness, we must pass H.R. 1146 to get out of the United Nations.

U.S. involved in another unconstitutional war

The United States is currently engaged in another unconstitutional and undeclared war in the Middle East. President Barack Obama explicitly cited a United Nations resolution as his source of authority to wage war in Libya. It is this acquiescence to the United Nations that is and has been for many decades the excuse and the political cover the United States government has used when it wished to involve itself in regime changes or changes in the form of government in many countries around the world.

Let’s leave aside all the documented cases of corruption and abuse within the U.N. — the heinous rape of innocents, the oil-for-food program, the continuous human rights violations of UN member countries — and the fact that not one U.N.-managed military conflict has resulted in a speedy or peaceful settlement, for now. The debate about Libya will continue in the once-hallowed halls of Congress for awhile and should be used as an opportunity to raise awareness about the UN’s role.

To quote Alex, “If the American people’s representatives are willing to be slapped in the face — without doing anything about it — by an administration that acknowledges no limits on its power, they might just as well head home.” The same should apply to the citizens who have complacently and apathetically accepted the usurpation of the congressional role by the executive branch, allowing the representational form of government and the supreme law of the land’s principles to be relegated to the history books.

Please consider contacting our representative, Mike Simpson, and educate him to this subversion of his congressional role and the U.S. Constitution. Please insist he rein in the blatant and arrogant actions of the executive branch and domination by United Nations policies.

In a first, women surpass men in advanced degrees

By Hope Yen
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — For the first time, American women have passed men in gaining advanced college degrees as well as bachelor's degrees, part of a trend that is helping redefine who goes off to work and who stays home with the kids.

Census figures released Tuesday highlight the latest education milestone for women, who began to exceed men in college enrollment in the early 1980s. The findings come amid record shares of women in the workplace and a steady decline in stay-at-home mothers.

The educational gains for women are giving them greater access to a wider range of jobs, contributing to a shift of traditional gender roles at home and work. Based on one demographer's estimate, the number of stay-at-home dads who are the primary caregivers for their children reached nearly 2 million last year, or one in 15 fathers. The official census tally was 154,000, based on a narrower definition that excludes those working part-time or looking for jobs.

"The gaps we're seeing in bachelor's and advanced degrees mean that women will be better protected against the next recession," said Mark Perry, an economics professor at the University of Michigan-Flint who is a visiting scholar at the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank.

"Men now might be the ones more likely to be staying home, doing the more traditional child rearing," he said.

Among adults 25 and older, 10.6 million U.S. women have master's degrees or higher, compared to 10.5 million men. Measured by shares, about 10.2 percent of women have advanced degrees compared to 10.9 percent of men — a gap steadily narrowing in recent years. Women still trail men in professional subcategories such as business, science and engineering.

When it comes to finishing college, roughly 20.1 million women have bachelor's degrees, compared to nearly 18.7 million men — a gap of more than 1.4 million that has remained steady in recent years. Women first passed men in bachelor's degrees in 1996.

Some researchers including Perry have dubbed the current economic slump a "man-cession" because of the huge job losses in the male-dominated construction and manufacturing industries, which require less schooling. Measured by pay, women with full-time jobs now make 78.2 percent of what men earn, up from about 64 percent in 2000.

Idaho needs to balance extreme right wing

I am appalled by the local and state Republican Party. Do they really think they are representing the majority of Idahoans? The recent move to remove Rep. Leon Smith and Rep. Tom Trail from leadership positions was over the top.

Can they not tolerate diverse views within the party?

Luna's plans, revealed after the election, are another example. Looks like a dictatorship, not a democratic organization in the least. Idaho is politically unbalanced; we need a stronger opposition to the extreme right wing.

Whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, get involved and help stop this partisan minority from determining the future of this state. It is up to us, the electorate, not the party bosses to decide. Be heard Idahoans!

Time to hold public workers accountable for performance

I am the public. I am the trucker, the farmer, the business owner, the salesman. I pay my own way. I also pay the wages for the public employee. I have been a fool. I have somehow allowed my employees to take money from me whether I like the work they do or not. I have been so busy providing for my own household that I haven't paid much attention to keeping my employees accountable. I admit this was stupid.

Because I was not watchful, I am in a bit of a pickle. I have let it go on so long that my employees no longer know that I pay their wages. Now my own employees are angry that I am forced to hold them accountable for their performance. I am forced to find the best ways to spend my money. I should have done it all along, but now the times demand it. I would wave a sign or shake my fist to show them how frustrated I am. But I must stay home and work. It is not only my own household that I must support. I also have to pay the wages of the public employee.

This has become very expensive and requires most of my time and attention. I do feel for my employees. I suppose it would be scary to be dragged out of fairy tale land into the real world where employees are accountable to their employers for the work they do. Here in the real world, that is not seen as unreasonable. To my employees that are working hard to recall Mr. Luna: I already had the power to fire him. My dilemma is that I have foolishly given up the power to replace you. I will do my best to remedy that.

Economic survey: Only oil shock can stop recovery

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The American economy is now strong enough to withstand Middle East turmoil and the Japanese nuclear crisis. Only a big rise in the price of oil could stop it now.

Those are the findings of an Associated Press survey of leading economists, who are increasingly confident in a recovery that is nearly two years old. They expect the economy to grow faster every quarter this year.

In part, that's because the economists think Americans will spend more freely in the coming months. Higher stock prices have made people wealthier. And a cut in the Social Security payroll tax is giving most households an extra $1,000 to $2,000 this year.

American exports and corporate spending, which have helped drive the recovery, are also expected to remain strong, according to the quarterly AP Economy Survey.

The one factor that could make a second recession a possibility would be a jump in oil prices to $150 a barrel, economists say. Oil trades at about $112 a barrel now. The record high, set in the summer of 2008, is about $147 a barrel.

"The economy is regaining some of its lost muscle and now seems to have a much thicker skin than it did six months or a year ago, and that's helping it handle various negative forces," said Lynn Reaser, a board member of the National Association for Business Economics.

While oil has risen almost $40 a barrel since Labor Day, analysts think it would take something extraordinary to drive the price all the way to a new record — either supply disruptions because of a new front in the Mideast unrest or action by the Federal Reserve that brings down the value of the dollar.

Granddaddy of all Coke collections to go on block

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press writer

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky. — In the world of Coca-Cola memorabilia, the Schmidt family's collection is like the Smithsonian.

The most treasured items are from the company's earliest days in the late 1800s, and some are so rare they don't even appear at the Coca-Cola Co. museum in Atlanta. And now, they're all for sale.

The family, one of the earliest bottlers of the soft drink, spent years scouring the country for pieces branded with the iconic Coca-Cola name. They opened up a museum to show off their prized collection, but they're ready to move on and have decided to auction 80,000 items piece-meal, beginning in mid-September.

"Some of the pieces that they have in those showcases are beyond belief," said Allan Petretti, author of "Petretti's Coca-Cola Collectibles Price Guide," which is in its 12th edition. "There may be only one or two or three in existence."

"This is THE event in the world of Coca-Cola collecting."

The entire collection is valued in the millions and includes one-of-a-kind posters, rare serving trays, century-old lithograph calendars, unique bottles, colorful jewelry, lighted signs, vending machines and toys. There's even the side of a Kentucky barn that served as a giant Coke ad.

Coca-Cola's archivist, Phil Mooney, said the world's largest drink maker will be at some of the auctions.

"They'll be some very heated bidding," he said.

The family collection started modestly in the early 1970s when Bill Schmidt, a third-generation Coca-Cola bottler, picked up some memorabilia to decorate offices at his bottling plant in Elizabethtown, about 50 miles south of Louisville.

Schmidt, who died four years ago, and his wife, Jan, amassed a treasure trove rivaling the company's own vast collection. Their items — spanning mostly from the late 1800s to mid-1970s — fill a museum and warehouse covering 32,000 square feet.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

CALIFORNIA

Credit data at risk in PlayStation outage

LOS ANGELES — Sony Corp. said Tuesday that the credit card data of PlayStation users may have been stolen in an intrusion that caused it to shut down its PlayStation Network for the past week.

The network, which connects players in live game play worldwide, was shut down by the company last Wednesday after it said account information for certain players was compromised early last week.

An unauthorized person obtained players' names, addresses, birth dates, email addresses, passwords, login names and online handles, Sony said. Although it has no evidence credit card information was taken, the company said, "we cannot rule out the possibility."

Purchase history and credit card billing address information may also have been stolen, Sony said.

Top U.S. airlines have 1Q loss of over $1B

With fresh red ink at Delta and US Airways, the five biggest U.S. airlines showed a combined loss of more than $1 billion for the first quarter. Soaring jet fuel prices are the big culprit.

The total loss was only about $100 million larger than a year ago, even though jet fuel spending jumped by 28 percent, nearly $1.9 billion. Airlines were able to narrow the difference in fuel spending with a 12 percent increase in revenue.

Delta Air Lines Inc., which reported a $318 million loss on Tuesday, said fare increases covered 70 percent of the run-up in fuel costs for the first quarter. US Airways Group Inc. lost $114 million in the quarter. On Tuesday, it announced new reductions to its flying schedule in the second half, which should cut costs and may drive up fares.

Bernanke to meet press, watchful of words

When Ben Bernanke makes history Wednesday as the first Federal Reserve chief to begin a series of regular news conferences, his tasks will be simple. That doesn't mean they'll be easy:

Make no unintended news. Defuse critics of Fed policymaking. Say nothing that might spook investors. "If he succeeds, he will not make any impact whatsoever" on bonds, stocks or the dollar, says Timothy Duy, an economist at the University of Oregon.

The historic news conference, the first of three this year, is part of a long-standing Bernanke campaign to make the central bank more transparent and publicly accessible.

Facebook targets Groupon with deals program

By Ellen Gibson
Associated Press writer

What happens when you cross the world's largest social network with one of the hottest business models in e-commerce? Facebook wants to find out.

Facebook is launching a deals program Tuesday in five U.S. cities, following on the popularity of Groupon and other services that offer deep discounts — for example: $50 worth of food at a local eatery for $25.

By allowing small businesses to leverage the Internet while helping consumers score great deals,

WHAT'S THE BIG DEAL?

THE LAUNCH: Facebook is launching a deals program, following on the popularity of Groupon and other services that offer deep discounts. The social network will focus on events and other group activities when it begins testing offers in San Diego, San Francisco, Atlanta, Dallas and Austin, Texas.

THE CATEGORY: Daily deal services have become some of the fastest-growing businesses in the world.

THE EDGE: Facebook will bring deals to more people. While Groupon has 70 million members and LivingSocial has 28 million, Facebook has 500 million users worldwide.

— The Associated Press

these group-couponing services have become some of the fastest-growing businesses in the world.

Facebook now wants a part of that. It hopes to exploit its existing networks of friends and family when it begins testing offers in San Diego, San Francisco, Atlanta, Dallas and Austin, Texas.

Many deals sites have a social component. For instance, if you get three friends to buy a LivingSocial voucher, yours is free. Groupon's offers become valid only after a certain number of people purchase them.

But the deals are circulated to users through email, and the community aspect is secondary.

Facebook is hoping to change that.

"We're building a product that is social from the ground up," says Emily White, director of local for Facebook. "All of these deals are things you want to do with friends, so no teeth whitening, but yes to river rafting."

Ford posts best 1Q profit in 13 years on new cars

By Dee-Ann Durbin
Associated Press writer

DEARBORN, Mich. — Ford posted its best first-quarter profit in 13 years thanks to an improving economy and a lineup of fuel-efficient vehicles that reached showrooms as gasoline prices surged.

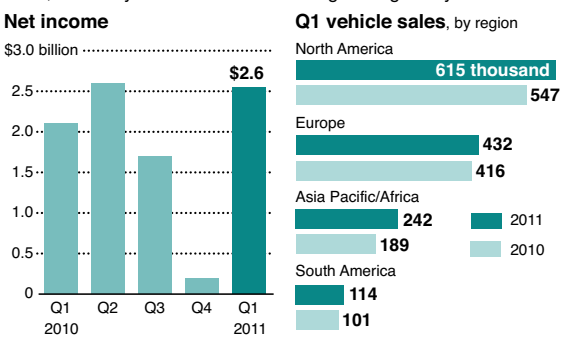

New arrivals like the Ford Explorer — which gets 20 percent better fuel economy than the old version — and the 40-mile-per-gallon Fiesta subcompact are selling well in the United States. Company profits are growing around the world. And Ford is charging more for its cars, helping offset the higher costs of steel and other materials.

The outlook for the rest of the year is also positive. Ford can likely keep its prices high because of earthquake-related shortages at rivals such as Toyota. Consumer confidence is growing, so buyers are more willing to invest in “The collection has become inert, and the way to keep it alive is to pass it on,” Jan Schmidt said.

The Schmidt family’s bottling business began in 1901 in Louisville, making them only the fifth Coca-Cola bottler in the country.

They opened their first museum around 1977 at their bottling plant. Two decades later, the family built a stand-alone building to show off the collection.

The Schmidt Museum of Co-ca-Cola Memorabilia, which drew about 30,000 visitors annually, closed Tuesday so the family could prepare for the sales. The family plans to create the Schmidt Family Foundation, which will give to local and national charities to be determined.

Larry Schmidt, 53, who followed his father into the Coke bottling business until selling the franchise in 1999, said the decision was bittersweet but the family was ready to move on and wanted to give the legion of Coke collectors a chance to buy some of their items. The Coca-Cola Collectors Club has more than 2,600 members around the world.

Items expected to draw the most interest will be sold at live auctions at the museum. Each item will have a tag explaining its origin and significance, and it will likely take several years to completely divest.

“We don’t want to go out and flood the market with lots of items and potentially harm the value of items that other collectors have,” Larry Schmidt said.

Schmidt assessed the collection’s value at $10 million or more. He has no idea what his parents paid, but he’s sure their purchase prices were a fraction of what the pieces are now worth.

A large yellow poster from the mid-1890s is conservatively valued at $30,000. It was displayed outside drug stores where Coca-Cola was served and features a woman holding a Coke.

a new car. Ford predicts U.S. sales will rebound from a 30-year low of 10.4 million in 2009 to about 13 million this year.

On Tuesday, Ford Motor Co. said net income rose 22 percent to $2.6 billion, its best first-quarter performance since 1998. It was the company’s eighth straight quarterly profit in its long climb back from near-bankruptcy five years ago.

Ford’s revenues rose 18 percent to $33.1 billion. The company saw especially strong growth in Asia, where revenues jumped 31 percent to $2.1 billion. In India, sales more than doubled thanks to the popularity of the $8,000 Figo subcompact.

“Our team delivered a great quarter, with solid growth and improvements in all regions,” Ford President and CEO Alan Mulally said.

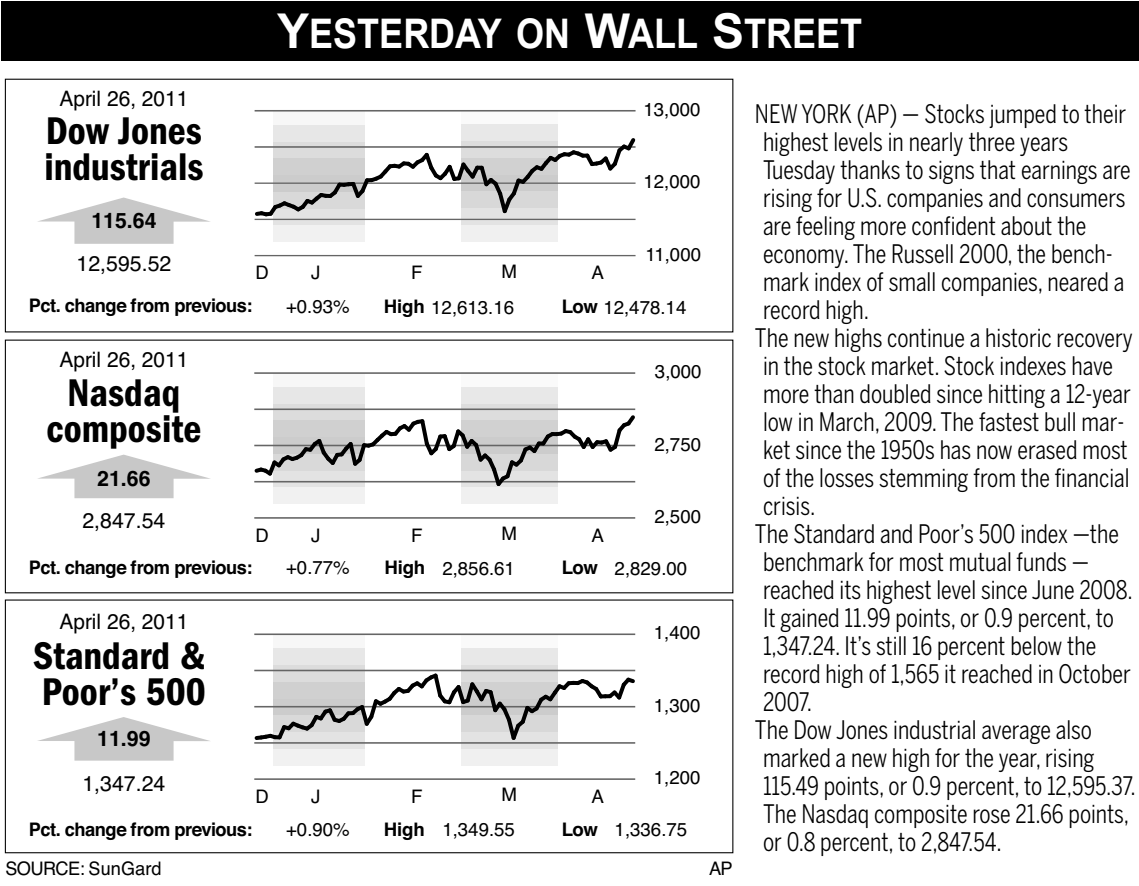

With a strong lineup of relatively new small and midsize cars, Ford is in a good position as rising gas prices push drivers into smaller vehicles.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks jumped to their highest levels in nearly three years Tuesday thanks to signs that earnings are rising for U.S. companies and consumers are feeling more confident about the economy. The Russell 2000, the benchmark index of small companies, neared a record high.

The new highs continue a historic recovery in the stock market. Stock indexes have more than doubled since hitting a 12-year low in March, 2009. The fastest bull market since the 1950s has now erased most of the losses stemming from the financial crisis.

The Standard and Poor’s 500 index — the benchmark for most mutual funds — reached its highest level since June 2008. It gained 11.99 points, or 0.9 percent, to 1,347.24. It’s still 16 percent below the record high of 1,565 it reached in October 2007.

The Dow Jones industrial average also marked a new high for the year, rising 115.49 points, or 0.9 percent, to 12,595.37. The Nasdaq composite rose 21.66 points, or 0.8 percent, to 2,847.54.

Midwest storms unleash deadly tornado, flooding

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Floodwaters threatened earthen levees protecting thousands of homes in the nation's midsection Tuesday, rising so fast in some places that panicked residents didn't have time to pile up sandbags.

Storms have unleashed as much as 15 inches of rain across the region, and the forecast offered little hope for relief. Another, larger storm system was brewing along the same path, bringing several more days of rain and the threat of tornadoes.

The greatest flooding threat loomed in the southeastern Missouri community of Poplar Bluff, a town of 17,000 residents about 130 miles south of St. Louis. Six inches of rain fell Monday alone, bringing the four-day total to 15 inches.

By midday, the deluge had caused the Black River to pour over a levee in 30 places. The flood wall, which extends from Poplar Bluff to the town of Qulin downstream, was also breached in at least one place, allowing water to gush through a hole.

"Each heavy downpour, each hour that passes by with the water pushing on that levee, the likelihood of a failure is that much more possible," said Deputy Police Chief Jeff Rolland, calling it was a "miracle" that the first hole did not develop until late morning.

In another area near the confluence of the swollen Mississippi and Ohio rivers, authorities debated a desperate plan to blow up one levee to ease the pressure on others.

Rolland credited emergency crews for their work to bolster weakened areas of the Poplar Bluff barrier and for evacuating residents from about 1,000 homes.

Butler County Sheriff Mark Dodd said the water pouring through the levee was unlikely to make it far enough upstream to add to the threat facing Poplar Bluff, where about 1,000 homes had already been evacuated. But authorities planned to evacuate more homes closer to the breach, which was in a sparsely populated area.

Terry Jones went to St. Louis over the weekend to attend her sister's funeral. By the time she returned to Poplar Bluff, her home was flooded.

"By the time I got out there, water was over my porch," said Jones, a 51-year-old retiree. "My front room is messed up. I don't know about the bedrooms because I couldn't get in."

Jones, who lives with her 12-year-old granddaughter, said she has nowhere to go if her home becomes uninhabitable.

Despite the punishment the region has already endured, the weather was expected to get worse — and soon. A second system moving through western Oklahoma and North Texas on Tuesday carried the same threat of tornadoes and flooding but over a broader area that stretched from Dallas to northern Louisiana and up to Memphis.

Greg Corbin, the warning coordination meteorologist for the National Weather Service's Storm Prediction Center in Norman, Okla., said having two such storms in such rapid succession is unusual.

"It's basically in the same place for two days in a row. That doesn't happen very often. Such rapid succession doesn't give any time for a break," Corbin said.

In 2008, flooding damaged or destroyed hundreds of homes in Poplar Bluff, raising doubts about whether the levee was capable of protecting the town during heavy rain. A federal inspection gave the levee a failing grade, and the private district that maintains the levee has been unable to make repairs.

The storm system dumped rain on several states over the past week, soaking Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The storms spawned at least one tornado Monday in Arkansas that killed four people and blasted a path of destruction through the town of Vilonia, 25 miles north of Little Rock. Four other people were killed in floods.

On Tuesday, the National Weather Service sent survey teams to Vilonia and nearby Garland County to investigate the damage and assess how much of it was caused by tornadoes or straight-line winds.

"It wouldn't surprise me if we were to end up with a count of 10 or 12 tornadoes by the time all the surveys are completed," said John Robinson, another weather service meteorologist.

Governors in Arkansas and Kentucky declared states of emergency. In the town of Smithland, Ky., residents fled their homes Tuesday while hundreds of volunteers piled sandbags along the riverfront. The water was rising 6 inches a day.

Record number of Latinos voted in midterms

WASHINGTON (AP) — More Latinos than ever voted in the 2010 midterm election as a relatively young population reached the voting age, a fresh sign that the nation's fastest growing minority stands as a formidable force in electoral politics.

A study by the Pew Hispanic Center found that 6.6 million Latinos voted in 2010, up from the 5.6 million who voted in the previous midterm contests in 2006. As a share of the electorate, Latinos made up 6.9 percent of the 96 million voters in 2010, up from 5.8 percent of the 96.1 million voters four years earlier. The center released its report on Tuesday.

Among those record voters were 600,000 Latinos who turned 18 each year between 2006 and 2010 as well as 1.4 million foreign-born adult Latinos who became U.S. citizens and therefore eligible to vote, the center said.

"A lot of that growth is driven by U.S.-born young people who are coming of age and now (are) eligible to vote," said Mark Lopez, Pew Hispanic Center associate director.

Republicans and Democrats are certain to factor the voting numbers in any political calculation as they look to the presidency in 2012, control of Congress and elections for decades to come. Strong Hispanic growth in the Southwest and West could make some states more fertile territory for Democrats.

According to exit polls, Hispanic voters are a solid Democratic constituency, breaking for President Barack Obama by 36 percentage points in 2008 and for the Democratic candidate in their congressional district by 22 points in the 2010 contests. Republican resistance to changes in immigration laws is a critical issue for Hispanics.

Hispanics accounted for more than half of the U.S. population increase over the last decade, exceeding estimates in most states and totaling 50 million. The population's growth is attributed to births and immigration.

Still, voter turnout among Hispanics continues to lag far behind non-Hispanic whites and blacks.

Almost half of eligible white voters, 48.6 percent, and 44 percent of eligible black voters said they cast ballots in the 2010 elections. That compares to less than a third — 31.2 percent — of eligible Latino voters who said they voted. The difference between whites and Hispanics is similar to the gap in presidential elections, the center said.

And only 42 percent of the Latino population is eligible to vote, a smaller portion than any other minority group. More than three-fourths of whites, 77 percent; two-thirds of blacks, 67.2 percent and more than half of Asians, 52.8 percent, are eligible to vote.

A SWEET CHANGE

Experimentation eases switch to sugar alternatives

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

If you've ever considered cutting refined sugar out of your diet, you know it isn't easy. Sugar and corn syrup are in more than just candy and soda — they're near the top of the ingredient lists in many savory snacks and prepared meals as well.

There are artificial alternatives like Splenda and NutraSweet, but for those who want to go the natural route, the options are a little harder to figure out. Syrups don't bake the same way granulated sugar does, while stevia, date sugar and sucanat have different levels of sweetness from sugar, so recipes have to be adjusted to compensate.

"You try to take a family off sugar and it's a hard transition if they're used to the sugary stuff," said Anita Adamson of Twin Falls. "It's years of trying to make it work. ... I don't think I've ever had to throw anything completely out, but my kids would say, 'Mom, do we have to eat this?'"

One of Adamson's daughters was diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes a few years ago, and she said dietary changes her family has made — especially substituting stevia for sugar — have improved her daughter's health to the point where she doesn't have to take insulin. Adamson has also found that reducing sugars in her family's diet has helped them prevent other illness, she said.

"Sugar will shoot your immune system in the foot; if you can keep it strong your body will fight off what's coming around," Adamson said.

Sweeteners made from whole grains are especially good for diabetics, said Twin Falls macrobiotic health counselor Jill Skeem. "Brown rice syrup and barley malt are made from complex grains, then are refined and become sweet," she said. "It doesn't have the effect of real sugar on your pancreas."

Skeem noted that not all sugar alternatives are diabetic-friendly. Maple syrup and honey have a higher glycemic index than stevia or grain sugars, so they would be better alternatives for people who aren't making substitutions for pancreatic reasons.

Another option that has become popular in recent years is agave nectar or syrup, which is made from a cactus-like succulent, one variety of which is also distilled to make tequila.

"If you can convert a recipe to honey, you can convert it to agave easily," said Tracy Slack of Twin Falls. "We use honey, also, but my dad is sensitive to some sugars, so my mom makes our traditional apple pie with agave."

People's palates vary, with some thinking agave is sweeter than refined sugar and others thinking it's less

Anita Adamson of Twin Falls tops her vanilla cupcakes with icing made of cream cheese and stevia, a sugar substitute. Adamson has used stevia for the past 15 years and says it works well in all sorts of foods — ice cream and root beer, for example. Family and friends can't taste the difference in her stevia-sweetened pumpkin pie recipe, she says.

HOW DO I CONVERT A RECIPE?

If you're used to using refined, granulated sugar in recipes, you can try substituting a granulated sugar alternative like date sugar, sucanat or powdered stevia without altering the other ingredients.

However, taste the granulated alternative first. Stevia is much sweeter than sugar, but can have an aftertaste that some people don't like in its granulated form. For example, Tracy Slack prefers to use a flavored stevia liquid, but when she uses the granulated kind, 1 teaspoon of her preferred brand is equivalent to 2 cups of sugar, she said (see the box on page Food 2 for other conversion factors). On the other hand, date sugar isn't as sweet and doesn't dissolve in the same way as refined table sugar.

Or substitute a syrup — like honey, maple syrup, agave syrup or brown rice syrup — by reducing the liquid in the recipe (by about 1/4 cup for each cup of syrup). In place of 1 cup refined sugar, for example, Jill Skeem uses 1 1/4 cup brown rice syrup, Eleanor Niska uses 2/3 cup honey, and Anita Adamson uses 3/4 cup honey. Don't add more flour in baked goods, though, or your dough can get too stiff.

Keep a close eye on the oven when baking, as the syrups can brown more quickly than sugars; you might need to reduce the oven temperature by about 25 degrees to avoid burning.

WHAT ARE THE NATURAL ALTERNATIVES TO SUGAR?

Although there are several common artificial sugar alternatives on the market, including aspartame (NutraSweet), sucralose (Splenda) and saccharin (Sweet 'N' Low or Equal), some consumers prefer to use more natural alternatives. Here are many of the most common, and what they are made from:

- Stevia — from the stevia plant
 - Agave syrup — from the agave succulent
 - Brown rice syrup — from brown rice
 - Barley malt — from barley
 - Molasses — a byproduct of sugar production, usually from sugar cane
 - Maple syrup — from maple trees
 - Honey — produced by bees
 - Sucanat/rapadura — from sugar cane
 - Date sugar — from dates
 - Xylitol — from a variety of fruit and vegetable fibers
- Which you might choose depends on your reasons for reducing or eliminating refined sugar from your diet. A diabetic, for example, might prefer agave or stevia for their relatively low glycemic indexes to avoid spikes in blood sugar, while a vegan might eschew honey because it is an animal product.
- No matter which you opt for, do some research first to ensure that the product will meet your needs and is from a reputable company; there have been controversies recently about manufacturers adding corn syrup, which some consumers want to avoid, to mass-marketed honey and agave syrup.
- Many of these products are available at health food stores or in the healthy or organic sections of supermarkets, while others can be mail-ordered from catalogs or the Internet.

COCONUT CACAO ICE CREAM

From Tracy Slack of Twin Falls.

1 (14-ounce) can coconut milk (Slack recommends full-fat, for a creamier texture)
1 1/2 tablespoons unprocessed non-alkali cacao powder
1/2 cup agave syrup
12 drops dark chocolate stevia liquid (Slack recommends Wisdom of the Ancients brand)

1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Mix all ingredients together. If you have an ice cream maker, spoon into the machine and let it run for 10-15 minutes, or until frozen.

If you do not have an ice cream maker, beat the entire mixture on high speed until thick and bubbly. Place in an airtight container, covered with a lid, and freeze until mostly solid, stirring occasionally. Placing plastic wrap directly onto the ice cream mixture before putting on the lid and freezing helps keep ice crystals off of it; this is necessary if you want to store the ice cream. After freezing, let it sit at room temperature for a few minutes, then mix it around a bit to make it softer and smoother.

Or, fill popsicle molds with the mixture for a creamy treat (Slack recommends this because the texture is closer to a popsicle than to ice cream if you do not use an ice cream maker).

Garnish with grated walnuts or sliced strawberries, or top with a chocolate agave syrup for a sundae effect. Or, remove the cacao powder, substitute fruit-flavored stevia liquid for the chocolate flavor, and add pureed peaches or other fruit.

Explore Gooding cheeses in tonight's class

Times-News

A Gooding farm's products are in the limelight as chef Jane Deal teaches a "Cooking with Cheese" class through the College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center tonight in Twin Falls.

Using Ballard's "Idaho Greek" cheese, students will learn how to fry, barbecue and bake several dishes created by Deal, sampling along the way. They'll go home with all the recipes.

"Cooking with Cheese" is 6-8 p.m. today in CSI's Desert Building kitchen. Cost is $25, plus a $10 supply fee.

Make your meatless meals satisfying

Times-News

Twin Falls macrobiotic health counselor Jill Skeem will teach a cooking class dubbed "Meatless Mondays — Where's the Veggies?" next month in Twin Falls.

It's set for 7-9 p.m. May 10 at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise, 147 Main Ave. W. Cost is $35.

The idea of eating a meatless meal one night a week might appeal if you want to lower your food costs, reduce your carbon footprint or improve your health. Skeem will demonstrate vegetable dishes that can be either main courses or side dishes.

The class menu: Pasta Primavera with Seasonal Vegetables; Tuscan Beans on Polenta; Falafel with Tahini Sauce; and Mediterranean Couscous Salad.

CONVERTING STEVIA

There are several forms of stevia on the marketplace, so it's important to know which form you have before you convert your recipe, or you could be unpleasantly surprised. If you don't like one brand, try another, as flavors and strength can vary significantly.
Tracy Slack supplied these conversion charts from granulated table sugar:

For pure stevia:

Sugar	Powdered stevia	Liquid stevia
1 cup	1 teaspoon	1 teaspoon
1 tablespoon	1/4 teaspoon	6 to 9 drops
1 teaspoon	a pinch to 1/16 teaspoon	2 to 4 drops

Other forms of stevia:

Sugar	Stevia Plus	Clear/flavored stevia
1 cup	1/2 cup	2 1/2 teaspoons
1/4 cup	1/8 cup	1/2 teaspoon
1 teaspoon	1/2 teaspoon	1/8 teaspoon sweet, so she suggests trying recipes with different amounts to figure out what your family likes best. She also has used maple sweeteners, in both syrup and granulated form, and said maple sugar is a great substitute for brown sugar.

Eleanor Niska of Twin Falls used to make granola with honey but has switched to maple syrup because she finds that it sticks to the pan less during baking. Maple syrup does have a distinct flavor that many people like — try substituting maple syrup for flavored syrups in a latte — but which could affect the taste of your baked goods. Do pay attention in the grocery aisle, as many “maple” pancake syrups aren’t maple syrup at all: They’re flavored corn syrup.

If you are avoiding maple syrup but miss the taste, try brown rice syrup heated with cinnamon. It’s almost the same flavor, Skeem said, but has a lower glycemic index.

Niska said cost has been a factor for her as she chooses sugar alternatives. For example, she chews gum made with xylitol instead of sucralose, but hasn’t purchased granulated xylitol to use in cooking because it is expensive; she usually turns to honey instead of agave syrup for the same reason.

No matter which natural sugar alternative you choose, you can easily find recipes online that will help you get a sense of how to use it in cooking and baking. Once you are comfortable with some of the basics — like reducing liquid when you use a syrup in place of granulated sugars — use your experience to adjust other recipes.

With a little experimentation, you’ll find that Grandma’s family-favorite cookies and Martha Stewart’s fanciest cakes can be just as delicious as you remember, without the traditional white sugar.

CARROT CAKE

From Eleanor Niska of Twin Falls.

For the cake:

2 cups plus 5 tablespoons sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1 1/2 teaspoons sea salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 1/4 cup honey
1 1/2 cup salad oil
4 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups finely grated carrots
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1 (8.5-ounce) can crushed pineapple, drained
1 cup coconut

For the frosting:

1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup honey
8 ounces cream cheese

Preheat oven

to 350 degrees. Sift together dry ingredients, then add honey, oil and eggs and mix well. Add carrots, pineapple, nuts and coconut.

Grease and flour three 9-inch round cake pans, or one 13-by-9-inch pan, and fill with mixture. For the round cake pans, bake 35-40 minutes, cool 10 minutes in the pans, then turn out onto cooling racks to cool thoroughly. For the rectangular pan, bake 40-50 minutes.

Beat together frosting ingredients until fluffy. When the cake is cool, frost.

MAPLE GRANOLA

From Eleanor Niska of Twin Falls.

6 cups rolled oats
6 cups rolled wheat or other rolled grain
3 cups coconut
2 cups toasted nuts of your choice
2 cups sunflower seeds
1 cup sesame seeds
1 cup wheat germ
1 1/2 cups oil
1 1/2 cups maple syrup (or honey)
1 tablespoon vanilla

to 325 degrees. Mix together dry ingredients. In a separate bowl, mix together wet ingredients, then combine the two and mix thoroughly. Spread thinly on cookie sheets and place in oven. Stir frequently to create an even light-brown color, about 25-30 minutes.

Optional: After baking, sprinkle in raisins, dried cranberries, chopped dates or other dried fruit. Or try adding cinnamon, ginger, cardamom, nutmeg, fennel or other spices before baking. The secret is to keep the pre-baked mixture in a proportion of 7 cups dry to 1 cup wet.

Celebrate Mom – and her sweet tooth – with a cake

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

Instead of giving your mother a bouquet of flowers for Mother’s Day, consider a flowered cake.

This beautiful and easy-to-make cake features the flavors of lemon and honey and is swathed with a cloud-like blanket of honey meringue. It then it crowned with masses of sugared edible flowers.

Be sure to buy flowers that are safe to eat, as many flowers are sprayed with pesticides. Most grocers sell edible flowers with the herbs in the produce section.

LEMON HONEY TRIPLE-LAYER CAKE

Start to finish: 1 hour 20 minutes (40 minutes active), plus cooling. Servings: 12.

For the cake:
2 cups sugar
1 cup honey
6 eggs
Zest of 1 lemon
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups (3 sticks) butter, melted and cooled
3 3/4 cups all-purpose flour, sifted
3 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 1/2 cups ginger ale

For the filling:
1 cup water
1 bag Earl Grey tea
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup honey
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 eggs yolks (reserve the whites for the frosting)
2 tablespoons butter

For the honey meringue frosting:
1/2 cup honey
4 egg whites
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar

For the sugared flowers:
1 egg white
Pinch of salt
Edible flowers or petals
Ultra-fine sugar

Heat the oven to 325 degrees. Coat three 9-inch cake pans with baking spray, then line the bottom of each with a round of parchment paper.

To make the cakes, in a large bowl use an electric mixer to combine the sugar, honey, eggs, lemon zest, vanilla and salt. Beat until well combined, about 1 minute. Add the butter and beat again.

In another bowl, stir to-

gether the flour and baking powder.

With the mixer on, beat the ginger ale and flour into the honey-sugar mixture in 2 additions, alternating. Divide the batter between the prepared pans and bake for 35 to 40 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Allow to cool for 10 minutes in the pan, then turn out onto a wire rack and cool completely.

To make the filling, in a small saucepan over medium-high, combine the water, tea bag, lemon juice and honey. Bring to a simmer then remove from the heat and steep for 3 minutes. Discard the tea bag.

In a small bowl, whisk together the cornstarch and the 3 egg yolks. While whisking, add a small amount of the hot lemon water to the egg yolks. Continue to whisk while adding small amounts of the liquid until half the lemon water is incorporated. Pour the yolk mixture into the pan and whisk to combine. Continue to cook until the mixture returns to a simmer and thickens. Remove from the heat and whisk in the butter. Transfer the mixture to a bowl and press plastic wrap directly onto the surface. Refrigerate until cold.

Once the cakes and filling have cooled, assemble the layers.

Use a large, serrated knife to carefully slice the top dome off each layer horizontally to create 3 level layers of cake. Be sure to remove the parchment paper from the bottom of the cakes. Place one layer of cake on a serving platter, then spread half of the filling over the cake. Add a second layer and repeat with the filling. Top with the third layer of cake, overturning the final layer so the bottom is up. Set aside.

To make the meringue, in a small saucepan over medium, heat the honey until simmering.

In a large bowl use an electric mixer to beat the 4 egg whites and the cream of tartar until very foamy. Slowly add the hot honey while continuing to beat. Continue to beat the whites until they form stiff, glossy peaks. Frost the cake with the meringue, swirling it with the back of a spoon.

To sugar the flowers, in a small bowl beat the egg white and salt until frothy. Using a small, clean paintbrush, paint the flowers with the egg white. Sprinkle with sugar. Decorate the cake with the flowers.

DEB LINDSEY/
For The Washington Post
The Cheesecake Factory's Flying Gorilla alcoholic milkshake doesn't monkey around, packing in hundreds of calories. The restaurant won't specify how many, but a little research showed a likely range of 590 to 870.

Counting calories: Alcohol's mysterious numbers game

By Tim Carman
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Cheesecake Factory bartender knows exactly where to draw the line between being customer-friendly and betraying her employer. She chokes off the information stream as soon as I ask one too many questions about the restaurant's Flying Gorilla cocktail, this liquid libation described on the menu as a "Kicked-Up' Chocolate Banana Milkshake."

When I first inquire about the Gorilla, she tells me I won't even taste the small shots of banana liqueur and creme de cacao in the drink. She's so giddy about the creamy cocktail, she almost makes me excited to be sucking down an alcoholic shake at a chain restaurant inside a Rockville, Md., mall. I try to mirror the bartender's enthusiasm and ask about the other ingredients in the Flying Gorilla.

"I'd get fired if I told you that," she says, impressive in her facility to blow me off with such good humor. A few days later, I called the Cheesecake Factory's press people, who were equally cheerful as they turned down my request for the recipe.

The information is important for one simple reason: America's fat.

You've heard the statistics by now and, more immediately, have probably felt that extra jiggle around your waistline. The Obama administration has fired off a number of weapons to combat the problem, from the first lady's "Let's Move" campaign to the new veg-friendly Dietary Guidelines for Americans, but its latest offensive push came on April 1, when the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) published proposed regulations for nationwide menu labeling. As written, the regulations require all "chain restaurants, retail food establishments and vending machines with 20 or more locations" to list caloric information on their menus and menu boards. Two categories were conspicuously exempted from the requirement: movie theater chains and alcoholic beverages.

This is where chains such as the Cheesecake Factory, Applebee's, Chili's and others come in. They serve alcohol of every stripe. Many have specialty cocktails, too, such as the Flying Gorilla or Applebee's Mud Slide or the Chili's line of designer margaritas. None of the chains may ever be required to list the drinks' caloric information on their menus (except in those jurisdictions such as New York City where local labeling laws already require such information).

"The problem is that alcohol is a big source of calories in the American diet," says Margo Wootan, director of nutrition policy for the Center for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI).

How big is a matter of personal drinking habits. In her forthcoming book, "Calories: From Science to Politics" (co-written with Malden Nesheim; University of California Press, 2012), nutrition expert Marion Nestle will publish a complex formula on how to determine the caloric content of the alcohol in your drink when all you know is the alcohol-by-volume information. It practically takes an advanced degree in mathematics to figure it out.

Fortunately, Nestle offers an example in the book: A six-ounce pour of wine with 13.5 percent alcohol by volume, for instance, translates into about 140 calories. Drink two glasses of that wine with dinner, and you've added about 280 calories to your meal. Which would almost be considered a diet drink compared with the Flying Gorilla. Based on a modified recipe found online, this "Kicked-Up' Chocolate Banana Milkshake" might contain anywhere from 590 to 870 calories per drink, depending on how much ice cream is used.

Outside the realm of high-calorie ice cream drinks, the numbers sound more reasonable: The standard servings of wine (five ounces), light beer (12 ounces) and spirits (1.5 ounces of 80 proof alcohol) generally contain about 100 calories from the alcohol alone, not including additional calories from any mixers, syrups, fruits, grains or other ingredients used in the production of the drink. "Regular" beer generally contains about 150 calories, depending on its alcohol content; that compares favorably with soft drinks, which contain about 151 calories, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture National Nutrient Database.

The problem here is threefold. As with soft drinks, alcohol is devoid of nutritional value, and your body doesn't tend to register liquids as it does solid food. "A beverage doesn't make you feel full the way that food does," says CSPI's Wootan. Plus, as Nestle points out, those who drink too much can overwhelm their liver's ability to metabolize acetaldehyde, a "potentially toxic substance responsible for much of the damage to the liver, heart and other organs seen so frequently in heavy drinkers."

Now imagine a menu where the calories are listed for all of the drinks except for beer, wine and spirits. To Wootan's way of thinking, that's a setup for overindulging on empty calories and on a potentially organ-damaging substance. The lack of caloric information for alcoholic beverages, she notes, would "mistakenly give the impression that (they) are a better choice."

She's not keen on chasing quinoa

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Quinoa (keen-WAH) has become quite fashionable among nutritious eaters. Even though it's known as one of the ancient grains, it's actually an edible seed, not a true grain. It's very high in protein, with balanced amino acids that make it a complete protein source. It's also gluten-free and easy to digest, with a fluffy texture and nutty flavor that's similar to couscous.

Although the most common version is white, there also are black and red varieties. All of them look distinctive when cooked, with a white spiral on each seed. However, those tiny seeds do go everywhere. You need to wash quinoa before you cook it to remove a natural coating of saponins, which taste bitter. Most boxed or bagged quinoa already has been washed, so it just needs a quick rinse. Since the seeds are so small, they can escape even a fine-mesh sieve. An easy way to rinse it is in a bowl: Put the quinoa in a bowl and fill with cold water. Stir it around a little, then let the seeds settle. Pour the water off the top and add more, until the water doesn't look foamy. Hold your hand or a plate against the bowl to pour off the remaining water.

You don't have to dry it thoroughly. To toast it before you cook it, pour the wet seeds into a dry pan over medium heat and spread them out with a wooden spoon. Heat the quinoa, stirring occasionally, to evaporate the water. Then add the cooking liquid — usually vegetable or chicken broth — and bring to a boil. Cover the pan, reduce the heat and simmer 15 to 20 minutes, until the water is absorbed.

Like rice, a common ratio is 1 cup of quinoa to 2 cups of liquid.

Why is Mother’s Day always about dainty food?

By Alison Ladman
For The Associated Press

This hearty Mother’s Day dinner is as beautiful as it is delicious. Because while moms may like pretty things, it doesn’t mean they don’t also want a dinner that leaves them satisfied. To round out this recipe and make it a meal, a quick salad or some green beans and rice pilaf would be perfect.

ORANGE PISTACHIO AND GOAT CHEESE CRUSTED PORK CHOPS
Start to finish: 45 minutes.

- Serves: 4.*
- Zest and juice of 2 oranges
 - 1/2 cup finely chopped pistachios
 - 4 ounce log soft goat cheese
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground all-spice
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
 - Four 6-ounce bone-in or boneless pork chops
 - 1/2 cup white wine
 - 1 cup chicken broth
 - 1/2 cup orange juice
 - 1 tablespoon cornstarch
 - Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

Heat the oven to 375 degrees.

In a small bowl, combine the orange zest and juice, the pistachios, goat cheese, all-spice, salt and pepper.

Arrange the pork chops in a small metal roasting pan. Spread a quarter of the pistachio mixture over the top of each chop. Roast for 20 to 25 minutes, or until the chops reach 155 degrees at the thickest part. Transfer the pork chops to a plate. Cover with foil to keep warm while preparing the sauce.

Place the pan on the stovetop over medium heat. Add the wine and scrape the bottom of the pan to loosen any browned bits. Add the chicken broth and bring to a simmer. In a small glass, mix the orange juice and the cornstarch, then add to the pan, stirring until thickened. Strain the sauce through a mesh strainer, if desired. Adjust the seasoning with salt and black pepper. Serve the sauce with the pork chops.

A weeknight-friendly meal, quesadillas are fast and easy to prepare.

2 flour tortillas ... too many choices of fillings

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

When it comes to quesadillas, I tend to go one of two ways — neither of them great.

Most of the time I just grab whatever leftovers happen to be in the refrigerator, slap them between flour tortillas, then toast and be done. Or else I start with one idea for the filling, but get overwhelmed by the choices and just keep piling them on. By the time I’m done, dinner resembles more deep dish pizza than quesadilla.

But this dish is such a weeknight-friendly meal, it seemed worth putting a bit more thought into it. Quesadillas are fast, easy to prepare and — assuming you get the flavors and textures right — delicious.

One of the tricks to a great quesadilla is getting the fillings cooked without overcooking the tortillas surrounding them. Which means cooking raw fillings separately is essential, even though it adds a step to the process. It’s worth it.

While I like the bite of hot Italian sausages in this recipe, use whichever variety you prefer.

SPICY SAUSAGE AND ONION QUESADILLAS
If you don’t like things spicy, go easy on the adobo sauce. Start to finish: 25 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 16-ounce can refried beans
- 2 chipotle chilies in adobo sauce, finely chopped
- 1 teaspoon adobo sauce (more or less to taste)
- 8 large flour tortillas

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 large yellow onion, thinly sliced
- 2 green bell peppers, cored and thinly sliced
- 1 cup sliced white button mushrooms
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 spicy Italian turkey or chicken sausages, cut into thin rounds
- 2 cups shredded pepper jack cheese, divided
- 1/4 cup sliced black olives

Heat the oven to 350 degrees.

In a small bowl, mix together the refried beans, chipotle chilies and adobo sauce. Spread a quarter of the mixture over one side of four of the tortillas, then arrange those tortillas on 2 baking sheets.

In a large skillet over medium-high, heat the olive oil. Add the onions, peppers, mushrooms and garlic. Saute until the onion and peppers just soften, about 4 minutes. Add the sausage and saute for another 4 to 5 minutes, or until the sausage begins to brown.

Spoon a quarter of the sausage and vegetable mixture over the refried beans on each tortilla. Divide 1 1/2 cups of the cheese between the quesadillas, then top each with a quarter of the olives. Gently press a second tortilla over the top of each, then bake for 15 minutes. Sprinkle a bit of the remaining cheese over each quesadilla, then bake for another 5 minutes.

Per serving: 964 calories; 395 calories from fat (41 percent of total calories); 44 g fat (14 g saturated); 0 g trans fats); 109 mg cholesterol; 102 g carbohydrate; 46 g protein; 13 g fiber; 2,241 mg sodium.

Tuna steak dinner in 25 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

Fresh fish prices are up, making a weeknight meal featuring lovely red tuna steak quite dear. But even frozen (and defrosted) tuna will benefit from the chunky, bright-tasting condiment you make while the grill heats up.

Serve with sauteed broccoli rabe or couscous. Adapted from “Michael’s Genuine Food,” by Michael Schwartz and JoAnn Cianciulli (Clarkson Potter, 2011).

GRILLED TUNA STEAK WITH PROVENCAL VINAIGRETTE

4 servings

- For the vinaigrette:
- 1 large tomato
 - 12 pitted olives, such as Manzanilla
 - 2 shallots
 - 1 roasted red pepper (from a jar)
 - 1/4 cup capers
 - Leaves from 2 stems thyme
 - 1/2 lemon
 - 1/2 teaspoon sherry vinegar
 - 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
 - 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- For the tuna:
- Four 6- to 8-ounce tuna steaks, 1 inch thick
 - 3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
 - Salt
 - Freshly ground black pepper
 - 12 scallions or small spring onions

DEB LINDSEY/
For The Washington Post

Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly in the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 seconds. Have ready a spray water bottle for taming any flames. Lightly coat the grill rack with oil and place it on the grill.

Alternatively, heat a grill pan or cast-iron skillet over medium-high heat.

While the grill pan or skillet is heating, make the vinaigrette: Seed the tomato and cut into small dice; place in a medium bowl. Cut the olives, shallots and roasted red pepper into small dice; add to the bowl. Drain the capers, finely chop the thyme and add them to the bowl. Grate the zest from the 1/2 lemon (to yield at least 1/2 teaspoon) over the bowl, then squeeze its juice into the bowl (to yield at least 2 tablespoons). Add the vinegar, oil, salt and pepper; stir gently yet thoroughly.

For the tuna: Pat the steaks dry with paper towels. Use 2 tablespoons of the oil to rub the steaks on both sides. Season liberally with salt and pepper, enough so that you can see the seasoning on the fish.

Trim the root ends of the scallions or spring onions and discard the outer layer, if desired. Use the remaining tablespoon of oil to coat them; season with salt and pepper to taste.

Place the tuna steaks on the grill or in the grill pan or skillet. Sear undisturbed for 2 to 3 minutes, rotating them a quarter-turn to create cross-hatch grill marks, if desired; then turn the steaks over and grill for 2 to 3 minutes on the second side.

About a minute before the tuna is done, toss the scallions or spring onions on the grill and char them so they soften but do not burn.

Divide the grilled scallions or spring onions among individual plates. Transfer the tuna to a cutting board; cut on the diagonal into thick or thin slices as desired. Fan the slices on individual plates, next to the scallions. Spoon equal portions of the chunky vinaigrette on top. Serve immediately.

Big-league prep for grilling season

By Jim Shahin
Special to The Washington Post

He emerges from the dugout, blinking into the spring sun. The grass smells fresh and, although he's been here many times before, it somehow feels new.

He grabs a bat. Steps up to the plate.

Bam! A home run!

The crowd goes wild!

He tips his cap to the stands after crossing home plate.

OK, so it's my house, not a dugout. And it's my backyard, not a ball field.

Oh, and that homer: a slow-smoked pork shoulder or brisket or ribs. The crowd? My wife.

At this time of year, I can't help but feel like one of the Boys of Summer, eager at the start of a long season.

Even if you are the type who grills and slow-smokes through the winter, you realize you were training and keeping in shape.

Barbecuing, like baseball, should be fun.

"Play with your food," says Michael Fay, president of the Mid-Atlantic Barbecue Association. "Never barbecued a pork butt? Try it. What's the worst that can happen? The main thing is to play, and have fun."

Spoken like a veteran manager.

Herewith, some tips for a successful season.

The grill: Clean it.

For the grill you already own, start a charcoal fire beneath the grates. Buy a hard-bristle grill brush (about $8). Use it to remove all residue from the grates. When they are cool enough to handle, wash them in warm, soapy water. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

Before every subsequent use, scrape the grates over a direct fire to remove the stuck-on food. Rub the grates with an oiled towel.

If you have a gas grill, follow the manufacturer's instructions.

For a new grill, wash the unit and the grates with dish soap and water to remove residue from packaging. Rinse and dry thoroughly. Spray or wipe vegetable oil onto the grates and the inside of the chamber, which will help protect the life of your rig. Season the rig by starting a hot fire and letting it smoke, lid closed, through the chamber. This will help coat the cooking chamber with smoke, like seasoning a cast-iron skillet.

The fuel: Buy it.

Sounds obvious, right? But one evening, friends will stop by and you'll realize you can't grill your fabled stuffed portabello because you're out of charcoal. The stuff lasts forever. Buy it on sale.

The most popular form is briquettes. They've been taking their lumps lately. Grill snobs claim that the chemicals used in binding them degrade the flavor of the food. Me, I use them. They are comparatively cheap and burn evenly, for a long time. If they impart an inferior flavor to the meat, my palate is too unsophisticated to care.

Stock up on mesquite and other kinds of wood chips and chunks.

That said, I use hardwood lump charcoal, such as the Cowboy brand, when fast-grilling, especially when I want a char, such as on steaks. Irregular in shape, lump charcoal burns hotter and faster than briquettes, creating a fantastic sizzle on grilled foods.

If you don't own a charcoal chimney (starter), get one. By pouring charcoal into the top and lighting paper stuffed in the bottom of the conical-shaped charcoal starter, you get a nice, even burn within a half-hour. The chimney does away with the need for that nasty smelling (and expensive) lighter fluid.

I never use Match-Light briquettes; mainly, I detest that vicious stench.

pecan. They're available in small bags in supermarkets and hardware stores. Soak them for an hour in water (or beer or wine) and add them to hot coals to add smoke to your food. For gas grills, add the soaked chips to a smokebox or inside a foil packet you poke a few times with a fork.

If you own an offset smoker, keep a good supply of oak and hickory split logs handy. For Texas brisket or meaty beef ribs, you want a slow, soft, indirect smoke. Logs penetrate the meat, giving it a deep, soulful flavor.

They're also great for direct roasting. I burn down the hardwood to embers and shovel it into my offset, North Carolina-style, when I slow-roast pork shoulder.

The wood: Use it.

Store a selection of chips and chunks: mesquite, hickory, oak, cherry, apple,

The gadgetry: Skip it.

Go to any barbecue website and you'll salivate. Not over the food, necessarily.

The trinkets. To capitalize on the growing barbecue craze, companies are developing all sorts of gee-gaws. You know all that junk in your attic or garage? Keep that in mind when tempted to buy the latest, greatest whiz-bang barbecue thingy.

A couple of things I would recommend: a rib rack, which allows you to cook four or five racks at a time; a hinged grate, which opens on the sides so you can easily add coals during long stretches of cooking or smoking; an instant-read thermometer, which, if you're like me, you won't use all that often. But when you need it it'll be there.

You'll need a good knife, of course — or three: a 12-carving knife for slicing brisket; an 8-inch chef's knife for trimming and chopping; a 6-inch boning knife for detail work. Don't spend too much; barbecue knives get a workout. Most any that come in a good barbecue package will be durable and last a long time, which is more important than a super-sharp edge.

The pantry: Stock it.

Make sure you have some empty, thoroughly cleaned jars around for your spice rubs. Speaking of which, keep your shelves stocked with coarse ground pepper, kosher or coarsely ground salt and cayenne pepper. They're the holy trinity of rubs. With them as a base, you'll experiment with garlic powder, onion salt, cumin, ancho powder, brown sugar and pretty much whatever you have around.

For your sauces, have on hand ketchup, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, canned tomato sauce, white and cider vinegars and hot pepper sauce. A combination of them will serve as a foundation to your homemade signature sweet-and-spicy sauces, flavored with everything from fresh lemon juice and coffee (yes, coffee) to hot peppers and fruit.

Miscellaneous: Get it.

Why wait till you need what you know you'll use eventually? Pick up a 10-pack of disposable aluminum drip pans, a 200-square-foot box of aluminum foil and a 55-square-foot box of the heavy-duty version.

Have a pair of long tongs and a pair of short tongs around for flipping the meat. (Never use a fork; it releases juices.)

Buy a flame-retardant mitt (about $6) and get a good silicone oven mitt as well. The latter can be cumbersome, but the protection it provides against burns is invaluable.

Put this 30-minute dinner on warm nan

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

You could roll up this pantry-quick filling in a burrito, but we like it plopped in the center of warm nan or flatbread, topped with the cool yogurt sauce and a drizzle of olive oil.

If you're not a bell pepper fan, substitute thinly sliced carrot sticks or shreds from the grocery store salad bar.

Serve with a crunchy carrot-daikon or jicama slaw. Adapted from "Anna Getty's Easy Green Organic," by Anna Getty (Chronicle, 2011).

SPICED CHICKPEAS ON NAN WITH CUCUMBER YOGURT

4 servings

2 medium cloves garlic
Kosher salt
1 medium red onion
1 small red, yellow or orange bell pepper (may substitute 1 cup thinly sliced or shredded carrot sticks from a grocery store salad bar)

Leaves from 8 stems cilantro
Two 15-ounce cans no-salt-added chickpeas
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, plus more for drizzling
1 teaspoon ground coriander
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1/2 teaspoon sweet paprika
Water
4 store-bought nan or flatbread (may substitute your favorite burrito wraps)
Freshly ground black pepper
1/2 seedless (English) cucumber
7 ounces plain low-fat or nonfat Greek-style yogurt

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Have a large baking sheet at hand.

Mince the garlic with a pinch of salt; use the flat blade of a chef's knife to work the garlic so it softens and breaks down. Cut the onion in half, then into very thin half-moons. Stem and de-rib the bell pepper, then cut the flesh into very thin slices. Finely chop the cilantro. Drain the chickpeas to yield about 4 cups.

Heat the oil in a large skillet, preferably nonstick or well-seasoned cast-iron, over medium heat until the oil shimmers. Add the garlic, coriander and cumin; cook for 3 minutes, stirring, until the garlic is fragrant. Stir in the chickpeas, crushed red pepper flakes and 1/4 teaspoon of the paprika; cook for 8 minutes, stirring, until the chickpeas are coated and heated through. Drizzle lightly with oil (up to 1 tablespoon), then use a potato masher to mash about half of the spiced chickpeas so the mixture is nubbly and thickened. Stir in up to 1/4 cup water to make the mixture creamy.

Meanwhile, place the nan on the baking sheet. Drizzle lightly with the oil. Warm them in the oven while the remaining vegetables cook; they will turn lightly golden.

Use a spatula to shove the chickpea mixture to the edges of the skillet. Add the onion and bell pepper; cook for 3 or 4 minutes, until the onion has softened and the bell pepper is crisp-tender. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Stir in most of the cilantro and remove from the heat.

Peel the cucumber half, if desired, then grate it on the large holes of a box grater to yield a scant 1 cup; place in a medium bowl, along with the yogurt and the remaining 1/4 teaspoon of paprika. Stir to form a thick sauce. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Place a warm nan on each plate. Spoon equal amounts of the chickpea mixture on each one, then top with some of the cucumber yogurt. If desired, drizzle each portion with a little oil. Sprinkle with the remaining cilantro. Serve warm.

100 calories: What does that look like?

By Judy Hevrdejs
Chicago Tribune

100 calories. Apparently it's a magical number for calorie counters and food marketers.

Snack packs and yogurt, beer and bagels — "100 calories" they brag on bags and bottles. Trim 100 calories here, another 100 there and you're bound to lose some weight, right?

Add exercise to the mix, you'll do even better. The Mayo Clinic points out that to work off 100 calories (if you weigh 160 pounds): Cycle or play volleyball (about 20 minutes); bowl, ballroom dance or walk (about 30 minutes); or do low-impact aerobics (about 16 minutes).

It can be tough to calculate calories while hankering for a snack. One strategy: Keep an arsenal of nutrient-dense, low-cal snacks on hand. But what does 100 calories look like?

Here are a few items (some to try, some to avoid) with calories culled from the USDA National Nutrient Database and food labels.

Hard cooked egg (1 large): 78 calories
Raw spinach (10 ounce package): 65 calories
Raisins (about 3 tablespoons): 81 calories

Larry ‘Pete’ Louis Marek

April 11, 1958-April 15, 2011

KINGSTON — Larry “Pete” Louis Marek, 53, of Kingston, Idaho, passed away Friday, April 15, 2011, at the Lucky Friday Mine of Mullan, Idaho, due to a mining accident.

He was born April 11, 1958, at Fargo, N.D.; Larry was the son of Leo and Hazel (Smith) Marek. Larry moved to the Silver Valley as a small child with his family in 1961 from North Dakota. Larry attended and graduated from the Kellogg High School in 1976. Larry married Patricia “Pat” Miller on March 27, 1990, at Reno, Nev.

Larry was a miner and had worked at various mines in the Silver Valley and had lastly worked for the Lucky Friday Mine of the Hecla Mining Company; he had also mined in Montana and Nevada. Larry had also served as a logger at various times in his life. Larry loved and enjoyed his family — the family get-togethers, barbecues and playing with his grandchildren. He also enjoyed hunting, hiking, camping, searching for antlers and building anything. Larry also loved working on vehicles; he recently was working on his “ultimate” hunting rig (Samurai).

Larry is survived by his wife, Patricia “Pat” Marek of the family home of Kingston; four children, Hayley Marek of Vancouver, Wash., Casey Marek of Pinehurst, Ricky Marek of Kingston, and Sheena Marek of Smelterville; five grandchildren, Layla and Jadyln Senderson (identical twins) of Vancouver, Wash., Madisyn and Leo Marek of Kellogg, and Lexus Levis of Smelterville; his father, Leo Marek of Pinehurst; four brothers, Mike Marek of Osburn, Terry “Fred” Marek (Larry’s twin brother) of Kellogg, and Donny Marek and Danny Marek, both of Pinehurst; five sisters, Marilyn Marek of Pinehurst, Eleanore Goebel of Coeur d’Alene, Elaine McKeever of Tri Cities, Wash., Karen Kero of Elma, Wash., and Debra Rodin of Montana; he is also survived by numerous nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his mother, Hazel Marek; two brothers, David Marek and Ronald Haak; and one sister, Janice Haak.

Cremation was held and a celebration of Larry’s life will be held at 5 p.m. Thursday, April 28, at the Kellogg High School gymnasium, with Pastor Corey Berti officiating. The family wishes to express that everyone dress casual and/or in hunting or mining attire. A potluck reception and a gathering of family and friends will be held at the Silver Valley Veterans Memorial Hall (formerly the Steelworkers Union Hall), 110 N. Hill St. in Kellogg following the service; everyone is welcome.

The family suggests that memorials may be made to a charity of the donor’s choice.

You may sign Larry’s online guest book at www.shoshonefuneralservice.com.

Shoshone Funeral Services of Kellogg is entrusted with funeral arrangements.

Frances K. Blaye

Dec. 17, 1920-April 18, 2011

MERIDIAN — Frances K. “Frannie” Blaye, 90, of Meridian and formerly of Twin Falls, passed away Monday morning, April 18, 2011, at her son’s home in Meridian.

Frances was born Dec. 17, 1920, at the San Jancito Ranch in Nevada (part of the Utah Construction Ranches Wine Cup, Gamble and Shoe Sole), the daughter of Ray and Perthania Poole King. She grew up and attended schools in Contact and Wells, Nev., where she graduated from Wells High School. After attending nursing school at St. Maries School of Nursing in Pocatello, she graduated and soon afterward passed national licensing exams to become a registered nurse.

Frannie married Julien Blaye in 1950 in Elko, Nev. Together they raised two children, Michael Stephen and John Blaye. Frannie worked at the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital for more than 32 years, where she was in the surgery department and purchasing for many years. She enjoyed the many years of working with the doctors, nurses and patients. Frannie enjoyed being in the out-of-doors horseback riding, fishing, hiking, swimming and cooking. Her love was her family and spending time with them.

Frannie is survived by her two children, Michael Stephen Blaye of Belgium and John Blaye of Meridian, Idaho; her four grandchildren, Thomas Blaye, Breanna Blaye, Stephanie Blaye and Ilan Blaye; as well as her two great-grandchildren, Braelynn and Tristan Blaye. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Julien; her sister, Pauline Paskett; and grandson, Willem Blaye.

A celebration of Frannie’s life will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, April 29, at Sunset Memorial Park, 2296 Kimberly Road E. in Twin Falls, with Deacon Jim Herrett of St. Edward Catholic Church officiating. At Frannie’s request, there will be no public viewing. Services are under the direction of Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Linda Darlene Stratton

Oct. 12, 1942-April 23, 2011

Linda Darlene Stratton, 68, of Twin Falls, passed away Saturday, April 23, 2011, at her home in Twin Falls.

She was born in Upland, Calif., on Oct. 12, 1942, grew up in Blythe, Calif., before relocating to Hemet, Calif., where she broke through a gender barrier by becoming the first female telephone installer in the state of California, which other women later followed in her path.

Darlene was a friend to everyone and wanted to make certain that everyone was taken care of before herself. Her friendship and bond between her and her grandchildren was Darlene’s first priority in the later years of her life.

Surviving are two brothers, Norman Owens and Gary Owens; four children, Jerry, Rob, Diane and John; son-in-law, Jon; daughters-in-law, Lisa and Stephanie; six grandchildren, Holly, Corey, Casey, Liberty, Joshua and Evan; and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; and a sister, Norma Frye Owens.

She was a wonderful mother, grandmother, sister, aunt and friend that will be missed by all that knew her.

The family invites Linda’s friends to join them for a celebration of life to be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, April 28, at Parke’s Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Those who wish are invited to share condolences at www.magicvalleyfuneral-home.com. Arrangements are under the direction of Parke’s Magic Valley Funeral Home and Crematory of Twin Falls.

Dewane L. Sandlian

Dec. 28, 1932-April 25, 2011

BURLEY — Dewane Lee Sandlian, age 78, of Burley, passed away Monday, April 25, 2011, at his home.

He was born Dec. 28, 1932, in Oberlin, Kan., the son of Elmer Harold and Ruth (Decker) Sandlian. He received and completed his education in Paul. He was a veteran of the Korean Conflict having served in the United States Army. Dewane married June Drussel on Feb. 2, 1952, in Burley, and together they raised three children, Melanie, Brian and Michelle.

Dewane worked at the Bryant Packing Company for 30 years and along with his wife, June, owned and operated it from 1983 until their retirement in 1989. He enjoyed fishing and camping and especially loved working in his shop — where he was a Jack-of-all-trades. He was a member of the LDS Church.

Dewane is survived by his wife of 59 years, June Sandlian of Burley; his children, Melanie (Robert) Tominaga of Rupert, Brian (Sherry) Sandlian of Brigham City, Utah, and Michelle Sandlian of Burley; eight grandchildren; five great-grandchildren; and his siblings, Clyde Sandlian of Burley, and Marilyn Sharkey and Robert Smith, both of Ogden, Utah. He was preceded in death by his parents; grandparents; a grandson, Dane Sandlian; and one brother, Elmer Harold Sandlian.

A graveside service will be held at noon Saturday, April 30, at the Riverside Cemetery in Heyburn, where military rites will be accorded by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Following the graveside service, family and friends are invited to continue in celebrating Dewane’s life at the Best Western Burley Inn, 800 N. Overland Ave., where a luncheon will be served and memories will be shared. Friends and family may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, April 29, and from 10:30 until 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley.

The family expresses their sincere appreciation of Dr. Michael Klett and his staff and to Intermountain Home Care for the tender care given to Dewane.

Memorial contributions in memory of Dewane may be directed to Intermountain Home Care or to a charity of choice.

Emily Smith Mull

May 8, 1914-April 25, 2011

WENDELL — Emily Smith Mull, 96, of Wendell, passed away peacefully with family at her bedside Monday, April 25, 2011, in Wendell, Idaho.

Emily May Shonk was born May 8, 1914, in Soldier (Camas Prairie), Idaho, one of six daughters and four sons born to Cordia May and Claude R. Shonk. Two other daughters died as infants. She attended a one-room school house near Fairfield and attended high school in Gooding. As a young girl, she loved going to dances with her brothers and sisters and riding horses. She fondly remembered milking cows with her oldest brother, Cleatus, and loved talking about outings with her mother to pick watercress and berries at Willow Creek. Emily married Kenneth M. Smith on Sept. 30, 1933. They lived in Jerome, Gooding, Shoshone and Ketchum, later moving to California and Oregon. They had one son and two daughters. Emily enjoyed camping and fishing in northern Idaho and loved family gatherings at her sisters’ and brothers’ homes. While living in Ketchum, she worked as a waitress at the Sun Valley Lodge and became a fan of the Sons of the Pioneers and the Glenn Miller band. Mr. Smith preceded her in death in 1971.

A highlight of her travels was a trip to Hawaii with her sister and brother-in-law, Aileen and Holly Howard. It was a dream come true thanks to their generosity. Emily returned to Idaho and married a childhood family friend, Claude C. Mull, on Sept. 1, 1979. He fondly referred to her as his “little white dove.” They lived in Wendell and Salome, Ariz., where she enjoyed rock hunting and the desert landscape. She was a homemaker and enjoyed crocheting, gardening, canning and loved birds. She enjoyed Claude’s family, and they had a wonderful trip to Alaska to visit Claude’s son and daughter-in-law, Murray and Connie and their family. Other travels took them to Arizona for the winter.

Emily is survived by her husband, Claude C. Mull; her children, Charline Smith of Wendell and Cheri Folk of Warrenton, Ore.; her sister and best friend, Aileen Howard of Yorba Linda, Calif.; stepchildren, Edgar Smith of Yuma, Ariz., Chester Smith of Woodside, Calif., Bruce Smith of Modesto, Calif., Dorothy Treharne of Seaside, Ore., Murray Mull of Waddell, Ariz., Brent Mull of Buhl, Idaho, and Linda Metzger of Spokane Valley, Wash. She has 13 grandchildren, 34 great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; six sisters; four brothers; her son, Jan B. Smith; and grandson, Brandon A. Sharp.

She will be remembered as a loving wife, mother, grandmother, sister and aunt. Her greatest joy was attending family gatherings with her children, brothers, sisters and their families. She was a caregiver to family members and a friend to all she met.

A funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, April 30, at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Wendell, Idaho. Viewing will be from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, April 29, at Demaray Funeral Service in Wendell. The burial service will be held at 2:30 p.m. following the funeral service Saturday at the Shoshone Cemetery.

Florence McNutt

Sept. 2, 1916-April 7, 2011

WENDELL — Florence McNutt passed away Thursday, April 7, 2011 at North Canyon Medical Center in Gooding.

She was the daughter of William R. and Blanche Kleinkopf. She was born Sept. 2, 1916, in Clark, S.D. Florence came to Idaho with her parents in 1928. She married Elmer G. Johnson on June 20, 1936. They farmed near Twin Falls for a number of years before moving to a farm west of Wendell. Elmer passed away July 3, 1978. Florence married Edwin McNutt on Sept. 19, 1978. They made their home in Wendell. Edwin passed away April 17, 2001.

Florence was a member of the Methodist Church, the American Legion Auxiliary and a lifetime member of the Wendell Grange.

She worked at Parr’s Food Center in Wendell for 10 years during the late 1970s and 1980s.

Florence and Elmer had two children, the late Stanley R. Johnson of Boise, Idaho, and A. Jean Moore (Russell) of Fort Collins, Colo. She is survived by her daughter, six grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

‘Hub’ Schlafly, teleprompter developer, dies at 91

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A key developer of the device that came to be known as the teleprompter has died.

Hubert “Hub” Schlafly was 91. He won an Emmy Award for his contributions to the innovation, now commonplace in political addresses.

A funeral home says he died April 20 at Stamford Hospital in Connecticut after a brief illness. A funeral was held Tuesday in Greenwich.

Schlafly was a friend of actor Fred Barton Jr., who wanted a way to remember his lines. Author Laurie

Brown says Schlafly, Barton and business partner Irving Berlin Kahn developed it.

It made its debut in 1950 on the soap opera “The First Hundred Years.” Schlafly eventually became president of the TelePrompTer Corp.

Herbert Hoover became the first politician to use the device in 1952.

Jerome board balks at proposed athletic travel fee

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

JEROME — It's still on the table in theory, but a proposed pay-to-play scheme's viability died a quick death Thursday.

Jerome School District's board of trustees all but spiked Superintendent Dale Layne's proposal of a new extracurricular transportation fee for middle school and high school activities, the biggest point of contention in Layne's preliminary proposal for sweeping budget cuts across the board for fiscal year 2012.

During the board's monthly meeting, Jerome High School athletic director Ty Jones said the proposed fee structure was on a sliding scale based on the activity's burden to the transportation budget. High school basketball players, for instance, could expect to pay more than speech participants because of more frequent road trips. The proposed fee is capped at $75 per middle school student per activity, with high school students paying up to $100 per activity.

Board member Alice Thibault noted that in many cases student-athletes are responsible — through out-of-pocket costs, fundraising, and spirit pack and mandatory activity card purchases — for several hundred dollars of the burden already. Fellow trustee Rob Williams added that he would not support a measure that "eliminates poor kids from participation," suggesting a means to subsidize the fee should kids be unable to afford it.

Ultimately the board expressed preference for the potential revenue to be taken out of the maintenance and operations fund's current balance rather than shifting the burden to student-athletes.

No vote was held and Layne stopped short of saying the transportation charge was a dead issue but conceded that the board's reaction "gave me the impression we'll have to look at other options."

The fee proposal generously estimated a $25,000 net gain from the proposed fee. But that figure, Jones said, was predicated on participant levels remaining the same and each student being able to afford the fee. Jones estimated that some activities could have half or more of their participants encounter difficulty paying the fee.

"(The board) reacted about how I expected they would, and I expected it for that reason," Jones said.

Without the benefit of full fiscal 2011 numbers, Layne estimated a need to cut upwards of $800,000 for the next school year, in addition to losing one-time money from the federal government that was used the last two years.

Other proposed measures included shuffling funds to balance the books, cutting multiple academic and extracurricular programs, several teachers and aides and around six activity coaches, mostly assistant high school athletic coaches.

"When we're talking about cutting teachers and things like that, all aspects of our district have to pony up. (Activity coaches) have been really good about that, and they understand," Jones said.

A full budget hearing is scheduled for June 28.

Kimberly sweeps doubleheader from Filer

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

FILER — Slow starts have plagued the Filer baseball team all season. Tuesday was no exception.

Only three days removed from being blitzed by Buhl in three innings, the Wildcats fell 15-5 to Kimberly Tuesday to finish their Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference schedule with an 0-4 mark.

"It's been a problem for us all year and we just don't come out with the intensity we need to have," said Filer coach Lance Richardson.

Filer (6-7, 0-4 SCIC) spotted Kimberly an 11-1 lead through three innings as the Bulldogs pounded the Wildcats' pitching. Back-to-back home runs in the third inning by Seth Morris and Seth Champlin provided the exclamation point to the Bulldogs' impressive start.

"With a windy day like this, you've got to keep that ball below the waist or it's going to sail. (Filer pitcher Dalton Shotswell) left a couple balls up and they took advantage to hit those balls out," Richardson said.

Kimberly (14-3, 4-0 SCIC) scored four runs in both the first and second innings. Jordan Gentry started the rout with a two-run double and Ridge Lee hit a two-run bomb to deep centerfield. Gentry added an RBI single in the second to score Cody Casperson and later scored on an RBI single by Skylar O'Donnell. James Higginbotham added a two-run single to score Morris and Champlin.

"The last couple of games we haven't played that well, so we wanted to come out with more focus and intensity," said Champlin, who finished 2-for-4 with a walk and three runs scored.

Jordan Brown, who relieved Shotswell on the mound in the third inning, hit a three-run home run in the fifth inning and Sterling Duggan added an RBI single to score Shotswell. But any hope of a Filer comeback was dashed as the Bulldogs scored three runs in the sixth.

Filer dropped the second game 15-8. O'Donnell hit a solo home run, while Baxter Morse and Ryan Gutierrez each had had a triple and three RBIs for Kimberly.

"We had too many mental mistakes, plays that are routine that should always be made," Richardson said. "They kept fighting and kept playing hard and that was good to see. Right now, we're just playing. We know we'll

CSI guard signs with E. Illinois

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

For Darius Smith, choosing Eastern Illinois was all about familiar faces — the ones on the basketball court and the ones he'll see in the stands.

The College of Southern sophomore point guard signed a NCAA Letter of Intent Tuesday afternoon to play for the Panthers. He said he chose Eastern Illinois over Northern Illinois, his other finalist, because of the connection he felt with EIU's players and coaches.

"When I went down on the visit I got a good feel with the coaches and also with the players," said Smith, who spent his freshman season at the University of Connecticut before helping CSI to the NJCAA national championship this season.

At Eastern Illinois, Smith will be reunited with former high school teammate Alfonso McKinnie. Smith and McKinnie, a 6-7 freshman forward, played together at Chicago's John Marshall High School.

Smith will also get the chance to play for Chicago native Barron Thelmon, a Panther assistant. Smith knew Thelmon growing up in the Windy City.

EIU's Charleston campus is only a few hours from Chicago by car, meaning Smith's mother, three sisters and brother will have the chance to see him play.

"My mom hasn't seen a game in person in two years, so it'll be big for her," said Smith, who added that his mother plans to attend the majority of Eastern Illinois' home games next season.

"When I first got here, I was like 'What have I got myself into?' As the year went on, CSI really grew on me. ... I played at UConn, but for a JUCO, these CSI fans are unbelievable."

— Darius Smith, CSI guard

Smith

"I'm excited about Smithy," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "It's a great fit for him. He gets a chance to get back a little closer to home and play in front of his family and his mom. I think he made this decision for all the right reasons and I'm excited for him."

Smith is the fourth member of CSI's championship squad to sign with a NCAA program, joining Mitch Bruneel (Utah State), Kenny Buckner (Boise State) and Pierre Jackson (Baylor).

Smith said EIU coach Mike Miller sees a key role for him as the Panthers try to improve upon a 9-20 record this past season, including 4-14 in the Ohio Valley Conference.

"It's actually the same role Coach Gosar laid out to me: coming in and being a vocal leader on the court and off the court," said Smith. "Just coming in and leading the team and helping them become better as they help me become better."

A versatile 6-foot-2 guard, Smith was a steady influence for the Golden Eagles, averaging 8.4 points and 5.1 rebounds, while leading the team in assists (5.3) and steals (3.1).

"What he did for us this year was unbelievable and I hope he has the same success at Eastern Illinois," said Gosar.

As for his thoughts on CSI, Smith has done a virtual 180 since arriving on campus last summer.

"When I first got here, I was like 'What have I got myself into?' As the year went on, CSI really grew on me. ... I played at UConn, but for a JUCO, these CSI fans are unbelievable."

NFL, players struggle through lockout limbo

By Dave Campbell
Associated Press writer

Lockout has turned into limbo for NFL players and owners, and everyone is stuck there for the time being.

"It drives me insane, that's what it does," said Chicago rookie J'Marcus Webb, who was told he and a handful of other Bears couldn't use the team's weight room Tuesday. "I'm trying to eat healthy and work out, do my job and right now I'm just stuck at home working out and watching cartoons all day.

"What's up with that? Let me get back to what I do best."

That could take a while. The 2011 season, and the business between 32 teams and their thousands of anxious players, is in a holding pattern. With more court fights and appeals expected, the NFL said it needed "a few days to sort this out"

Woods has minor knee injury, will miss a few weeks

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Tiger Woods has a minor injury to his left knee and Achilles' tendon that will keep him out of the Wells Fargo Championship next week, raising more questions that his health might be the biggest obstacle in his chase of Jack Nicklaus' record.

Woods said on his website Tuesday that he hurt himself hitting a shot during the third round of the Masters. It's the fourth time he has missed a tournament because of his left knee. Woods did not say when he might return, but he hopes to be back in a few weeks.

He won the Wells Fargo at Quail Hollow in 2007 and had not finished worse than 11th in four appearances until a year ago when he missed the cut with his highest 36-hole score. The following week is The Players Championship, which Woods won in 2001, although it is not among his favorite courses. He has finished in the top 10 only four times in 13 appearances and withdrew from the final round a year ago with a neck injury.

Woods described this injury as minor — a mild sprain of his medial collateral ligament in the left knee, along with a mild strain to his left

Achilles. Woods said the injury occurred when he had to squat to play a shot from under the Eisenhower tree left of the 17th fairway.

His left foot got caught in the pine straw as the momentum of the swing carried him backward. Woods hit into a front bunker and saved par on his way to a 74, then shot 31 on the front nine Sunday to tie for the lead. He wound up tied for fourth, and he appeared to be limping coming to the 18th green.

Woods, who held a series of clinics in Asia the week after the Masters, said he

Duncan helps CSI softball past TVCC

Times-News

With its two sluggers both having rare off days, the College of Southern Idaho softball team had to turn to strong pitching and timely hitting from its role players against Treasure Valley Community College.

Jessi Duncan saved Game 1 and returned to win Game 2 as the Eagles swept the Chukars 9-7 and 4-2 in Ontario, Ore.

Duncan relieved starter Jyl Eckstein in the seventh inning of Game 1, after Treasure Valley had scored five runs in the sixth. She worked a clean inning to garner the save and then turned around and started Game 2.

The freshman allowed two runs in the first inning, but settled down to pitch six scoreless innings the remainder of the game with six strikeouts.

“She threw really well for us today. It was good to see that from her,” said CSI coach Nick Baumert.

Mikkel Griffin and Marina Groenwegen were both quiet at the plate for CSI (38-16), particularly Groenwegen, who was 0-for-6 until the seventh inning of Game 2.

She didn’t finish 0-for, providing the game-winning two-run single with two outs to seal the narrow victory for the Eagles.

TJ Surrage went 4-for-6 in on the day with two runs scored in Game 2 and Marie Williams went 2-for-5 with an RBI in game two.

“TJ played a good shortstop today. She was solid defensively and provided some good at-bats,” Baumert said.

CSI was short two players as Kelsey Bryant and Lyndi Miller both did not play due to illness.

“From a development standpoint, this was a good day for us,” said Baumert. “We played some of our bench and had to find a way to win these games, especially after being outthit in Game 1.”

CSI is off this weekend and wraps up the regular season May 6-7 against Western Nevada.

contact teams and shop their services, putting pressure on the NFL to set up a free agency system that complies with antitrust laws.

The document also told players that teams are responsible for care of any football-related injury, meaning it’s “safer for players to work out on club property.”

U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson lifted the 45-day lockout late Monday, but that did nothing to clear this up. The NFL asked her to put her order on hold, and she agreed to weigh the request after the players’ response is filed Wednesday.

That means the questions will linger at least another day and if the NFL loses again, it will place its hopes with the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

With Nelson’s decision pending, NFL lead negotiator Jeff Pash said it was too soon to tell exactly when free agency would begin and which players would be eligible.

“What we need to do is let the dust settle for a day or two and see if the stay is put in place, and then we’ll all know more and go from there,” Pash said.

“Apologies to tourney & fans, but working hard to get healthy,” he said on Twitter.

His health is becoming an issue with each year. Woods already has had four operations on his left knee, dating to his freshman year at Stanford to remove two benign tumors and scar issues. His most recent surgery was after winning the U.S. Open in 2008 for his 14th major. He wound up missing eight months.

Woods also missed Quail Hollow in 2006 when his father died and in 2008

Burley baseball blanks Wood River

Times-News

Jake Mills struck out seven and issued no walks in a two-hit shutout as the Burley baseball team defeated Wood River 10-0 in six innings Tuesday in Hailey.

Kody Moon and Alex Larson each hit 2-for-3 and Burley tallied nine stolen bases.

“Up and down the lineup we hit the ball really well. It was like playing wiffle ball in the backyard with grandma and grandpa,” said Burley assistant coach Mike Hill.

The win moves Burley (12-7, 9-3) into a tie for second place with Minico in the Great Basin Conference standings, setting the stage the Bobcats’ and Spartans’ three-game series this weekend to end the regular season. Burley visits Minico for one game Friday at 6 p.m. and Minico goes to Burley for a doubleheader Saturday beginning at noon.

Behind solid pitching from Jordy Garrard and hits from everywhere in the lineup, Jerome routed Buhl 17-0 Tuesday.

Kevin Bos went 4-for-5 with two doubles and four RBIs, while Zak Thilbault, D.J. Worthington and A.J. Rierden each added two hits.

Jerome (11-8) plays Twin Falls Friday and Saturday to wrap up the regular season.

No box score was available.

GLENN'S FERRY SWEEPS WENDELL

Michael Willis and Terry Jacobsen had hot days at the plate to lead Glenn's Ferry over rival Wendell 6-5 and 18-8.

In the Game 2 rout, Willis went 5-for-5 with two doubles and Jacobsen hit a double, a triple and a home run.

Xavier Martinez outduelled Nolan Stouder in Game 1, striking out 11, and Eddy Macias provided the game-clinching two-run single in the fourth inning.

Jerome's Chojnacky earns Milk Mustache scholarship

Jerome High School senior Mackenzie Chojnacky is a recipient of the 2011 Scholar Athlete Milk Mustache of the Year Scholarship.

A cross country and track athlete who won the state cross country title this fall, Chojnacky receives a $7,500 scholarship, a spot in a milk mustache ad in USA Today and an all-expenses paid trip to the awards ceremony in Orlando, Fla.

Sponsored by the National Milk Mustache “Got Milk?” campaign, the SAMMY awards are selected by a panel of athletes including Apolo Ohno, Lindsey Vonn, Chauncey Billups and Andy Roddick. Chojnacky is one of 25 regional winners.

“It’s really unbelievable. I applied back in February and there are over 40,000 applicants and I just thought it would be cool to win, but I had no idea I actually would. I was thrilled when I found out,” Chojnacky said.

Chojnacky will attend the University of Toledo this fall on a track and field and cross country scholarship.

KIMBERLY SWEEPS HOME MEET

The Kimberly boys and girls swept the team titles in a golf meet at Pleasant Valley Golf Course in Kimberly on Tuesday.

Gage Huft shot a 75 to earn boys medalist honors, edging Sheldon Macklin of Filer by one stroke.

Castleford's Sierra Harr shot a 92 for the best individual round on the girls side.

KIMBERLY SWEEPS FILER

Filer struggled to produce hits against Kimberly's Nellie Makings in Game 1 of a doubleheader as the Bulldogs beat the host Wildcats 10-0 in five innings.

Filer coach Todd Mansfield said his team struggled to adjust to the speed of Makings' pitches.

“We’ve just got to hit the ball, that’s our biggest deal,” he said.

Filer got 13 hits against Kimberly in the nonconference nightcap, including four against Makings, who came on for Randi Cummins, who injured a finger. But the Wildcats gave up 24 hits and committed eight errors in a 14-10 loss. Filer led 7-4 and 10-8 before Kimberly rallied in the final two innings.

Kimberly's Jensen Upton had an inside-the-park home run for Kimberly in Game 2, while Tasha Nelson had a three-run triple in Game for Filer.

Filer (10-6, 1-3 SCIC) travels to Canyon Ridge today.

WENDELL SWEEPS GLENN'S FERRY

Wendell took both halves of a doubleheader against error-prone Glenn's Ferry, winning 18-2 in four innings and 15-8.

The Pilots, who fell to 0-4 in Canyon Conference, committed 17 errors on the day as it had players in new spots with one starter missing.

Carlie Andrus pitched both wins for Wendell and hit three doubles on the day.

Mariners' Hernandez beats Tigers again

DETROIT — Miguel Olivo hit a blooper-reel home run and Felix Hernandez extended his dominance of the Detroit Tigers in the Seattle Mariners' 7-3 win Tuesday night.

Hernandez (3-2) beat the Tigers for the seventh straight time, allowing three runs — two earned — on four hits in six innings.

Phil Coke was routed by Seattle for the second time in a week, giving up seven runs in 4 1-3 innings. In his two starts against the Mariners, Coke is 0-2 with 13 runs allowed in eight innings.

After Detroit went up on an unearned run in the first, the Mariners tied it on a second-inning play that will be on all the blooper reels.

Olivo hit a routine-looking fly to deep left but Ryan Raburn struggled to find it in the sun. While still short of the warning track, Raburn lunged back, only to deflect the ball high into the air and into the Tigers' bullpen for Olivo's first homer of the season.

WHITE SOX 3, YANKEES 2

NEW YORK — Late substitute Brent Lillibridge made two spectacular catches in a row to save the White Sox in the ninth inning, and Gavin Floyd pitched Chicago to a victory over the suddenly slumping New York Yankees.

Lillibridge entered as a pinch-runner in the eighth and scored on Paul Konerko's go-ahead homer off struggling setup man Rafael Soriano (1-1).

INDIANS 9, ROYALS 4

CLEVELAND — Justin Masterson won his fifth straight start, a stunning personal turnaround from last season, Jack Hannahan homered twice and Shin-Soo Choo hit a three-run shot for the Indians.

BLUE JAYS 10, RANGERS 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Adam Lind homered twice and drove in five runs for Toronto in a rout of AL West-leading Texas.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

METS 6, NATIONALS 4

WASHINGTON — Josh Thole had three RBIs, including a two-run double that put the Mets ahead run in the sixth inning, and New York ran its winning streak to five games Tuesday night with a 6-4 win over the Washington Nationals.

Thole's double to the corner was just beyond the reach of left fielder Michael Morse and brought home Jason Bay and Ike Davis, breaking a 3-3 tie. The hit came off lefty Doug Slaten, who entered to face Thole.

ROCKIES 4, CUBS 3

CHICAGO — Todd Helton hit two home runs and Colorado beat Chicago.

Jorge De La Rosa (4-0) allowed one earned run in seven innings and Huston Street gave up a solo homer to Alfonso Soriano leading off the ninth before closing out the Cubs for his ninth straight save to start the season.

BREWERS 3, REDS 2

MILWAUKEE — Rickie Weeks, Ryan Braun and

Prince Fielder all hit solo homers and Milwaukee beat Cincinnati for the first time this season.

MARLINS 4, DODGERS 2

MIAMI — Mike Stanton drove in two runs, Chris Volstad pitched seven innings, and Florida beat Los Angeles.

GIANTS 3, PIRATES 2, 10 INNINGS

PITTSBURGH — Darren Ford scored on a fielder's choice in the 10th inning and came home with the tying run as a pinch runner in the eighth, helping San Francisco snap a season-high four-game losing streak.

“We are in the process of determining throughout the league as to just how we’ll proceed and when we’ll open the new year across the league, the new football year,” Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. “We have not done that.”

At least the draft will be held this week, even if free agency and personnel swaps are up in the air.

In one of the oddest days in NFL history, players showed up at their team headquarters and most were told that they were welcome to come inside as long as they didn’t participate in any sort of “football activities.”

Most left in a matter of minutes with more questions than answers about where the $9 billion business is headed. And there was no consistency — some teams allowed players to work out (Giants) while others turned them away altogether (Bills).

No rules, not yet. Just uncertainty.

Uncle Mo solid during 1st Kentucky Derby work

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Uncle Mo looks good to go. The Factor is good to go home.

A dozen days before the Kentucky Derby, two of the top contenders are headed in opposite directions.

Uncle Mo appeared right at home on the dirt at Churchill Downs on Tuesday, leaving trainer Todd Pletcher and owner Mike Repole optimistic he'll be ready to run under the twin spires on May 7.

The Factor, meanwhile, will be a non-factor. The Sam Vincente and Rebel Stakes winner is out of an increasingly wide-open Derby following throat surgery.

Chalk it up to another chaotic day in a series of them leading up to the big race.

A semblance of sanity, however, may have returned following Uncle Mo's steady five-furlong workout under the lights in the pre-dawn darkness.

The 3-year-old colt clocked the distance in 1:01.80 under the lights early Tuesday morning, his first major training move since a gastrointestinal infection was discovered following a third-place finish in the Wood Memorial on April 9.

Pletcher called the move “an indication that he’s in good form.”

Repole, who cautioned his horse is still “50-50” for the Derby, was even more effusive.

“The work was very Mo like,” Repole said. “We couldn’t have been more pleased. It’s been a really tough 17 days after the Wood. Haven’t had much sleep in the last 17 days.”

Uncle Mo was originally scheduled to work around 8:30 a.m. but Pletcher decided to send him out just before 6 a.m. to avoid another line of storms that have pummeled the track in recent days.

The reigning 2-year-old champion looked at ease in the muck, easily finding his way over the surface under regular rider John Velazquez.

“When he was pulling up on the backside a couple of gallopers went by him and he got in the bridle again,” Pletcher said. “He seemed really, really good this morning.”

Uncle Mo was the prohibitive Derby favorite until his puzzling run in the Wood, where he led briefly in the stretch only to tire in the final yards to finish third behind Tobby's Corner to suffer the first loss of his career.

EOE - AA - Drug Free Workplace

DEAR ABBY: I recently had a conversation with my married sister that left me speechless. While making plans to visit me for a few days, she asked if I could “hook her up” with any guys. I was shocked. Not only was it awkward, it left me feeling disgusted.

If a person is unhappy in his or her marriage, shouldn't the marriage be ended BEFORE looking for someone else? (By the way, my brother-in-law thinks they have a great marriage.)

A few days later, my sister informed me that her “boyfriend” had broken things off with her. I am dumbfounded! My sister will be coming to spend some time with me soon, and I'm sure this subject is bound to come up again. How do I handle a situation I find so offensive?

– DUMBSTRUCK DOWN SOUTH

DEAR DUMBSTRUCK: Handle it by telling your sister exactly what you have written to me. That should get the message across succinctly.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15-year-old girl with five younger siblings. It's tough to get along with everyone, but my 8-year-old sister, “Annie,” is especially difficult. She doesn't get along with anyone.

Annie steals constantly. This has been going on since she could walk. She steals jewelry, makeup, toys, books and money. The only way to get these things back is by searching her room. Our relatives say she'll grow out of this, but it happens every day. She destroys and breaks the things she steals – including projects and homework.

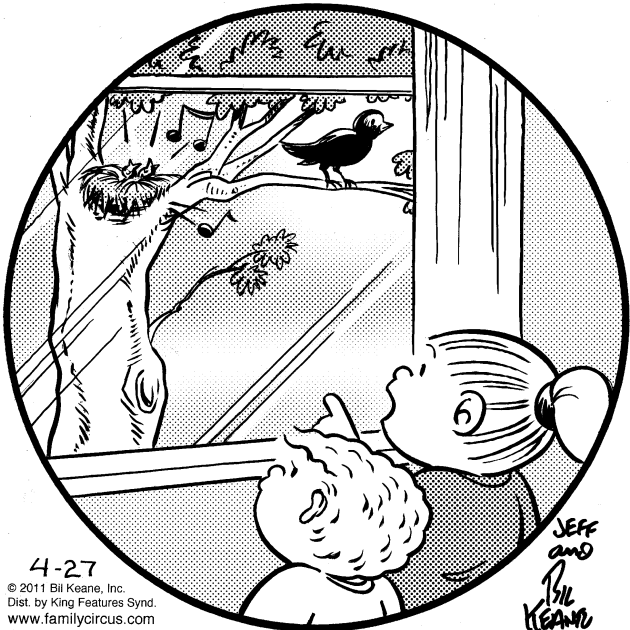

My parents have tried everything – taking her things, grounding her, taking away privileges – yet Annie doesn't stop. She lies and becomes frantic, and I'm worried something is wrong. None of us have ever behaved like her. What should we do?

– WORRIED SISTER IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR WORRIED SISTER: The behavior you have described could be symptoms of a serious emotional disturbance. It won't be corrected until your parents understand what's driving your sister to steal and lie. If Annie hasn't already been evaluated by her pediatrician and a mental health professional, it should be done as soon as possible. Please show this to your parents.

ANSWER: Your partner heard you show 18-20 at your second turn (that IS what this sequence shows) and opted to get you to pick a partscore — diamonds or spades. So pass two diamonds (though at pairs a call of two spades would not be outlandish). If you bid anything beyond the two-level, you are telling your partner you know what is in his hand better than he does!

IF APRIL 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Passion might be your middle name this year. Like a horse with the bit between its teeth, you may race for the finish line with career, business or a key project. Your ambitions can be realized through sheer determination, but a little luck will smooth the way, too. In June, you have a knack for handling business and career matters successfully. The answers to your prayers or helpful opportunities may arrive in July, October, or February. These are optimum months to launch crucial long-term plans, make lasting promises or implement improvements that will provide lasting benefits.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tone muscles with tests of physical or mental strength. You can wrestle with an adversary and prove your courage. It may be time to make important executive decisions without taking undue risks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An impressive monetary improvement might be within view. This is the time to collaborate with others. Be tough as nails with business matters, but a cream-puff when dealing with a special someone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The sharpest tack will pin down things securely. Friends might come to your rescue when you need a quick opinion or insight. Stay in contact with the smartest people for the best guidance today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Strengthen your financial foundation. It may be a good day to balance the checkbook or re-examine your expenditures. Giving in to romantic fantasies could land you on a troublesome path.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look like the leader of the pack. Stick up for your rights and the rights of others. You will win the most admiration by protecting the underdogs in your circle and fiercely guarding your territory.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The UFO might be a CEO in disguise. Anything you cannot explain becomes the subject of fantasy and mystery. Sound business tactics might look like a case of prestidigitatation until you investigate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Face facts. The fact that the world has a tendency to reward people based on the survival of the fittest might not warm your heart. You may be forced to compete with others and feel unappreciated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The best defense is a good offense. In any competition, you must focus on winning, rather than worrying about losing. It might be better to be safe than to be sorry for an indiscretion tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Burn off calories. Your sense of adventure may nag at you to explore new vistas. Find an opportunity to stretch neglected muscles by participating in an athletic competition or outdoor sports.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Remain focused on reaching realistic goals. Bulldoze your way past unimportant obstacles. You don't need to be a bully to turn a blind eye to minor impediments or to ignore petty inconveniences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Follow a job through to completion. Be attentive to the rules and painstaking about details to avoid criticism or censure. Staid routines may seem tiresome, but careful organization is necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A rush to judgment could be a good thing. Sometimes you can't wait for the best opening but must move up from behind and take advantage of any opportunity. Use intuitions when faced by business decisions.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
