Student housing: Not in my backyard?

Discussion of proposed CSI apartments displays rift between students, Twin Falls residents

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Angel Hernandez fills his days with 17 credits of classes, time in his student government office, and other organization and club duties.

The 21-year-old from Idaho Falls doesn't have a car and walks to the College of Southern Idaho from the Washington Street apartment that he shares with five other students. Proximity to campus, affordable rates and a safe place to come home to at night are important for student living, he said, none of which are abundant commodities in Twin Falls.

That's something CSI officials hoped to rectify for their growing student population by asking the Twin Falls City Council on Monday to set aside a six-acre lot for construction of new student apartments east of the college's Expo Center. Council members denied that request after neighboring residents voiced concerns that the proposed 80-unit, two-story apartment complex would bring more noise, more traffic and more safety concerns into their neighborhood.

CSI Dean of Students Graydon Stanley said he was very disappointed by the council's decision and the tenor of Monday's discussion.

"With the way we run our housing, these are great places to live and should be welcome in neighborhoods. They would be well-kept, beautifully maintained and well-managed," he said. "College kids get a bad rap when 90 percent of them work with us,

Four charged with Dietrich home invasion

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The four individuals accused of terrorizing a Dietrich family in March are behind bars.

Gabriel Baker, Jeremiah Bennett, Aaron Donabedian and Jamie Taylor made their initial appearances in a Lincoln County courtroom this week, each charged with multiple felonies tied to a reported March 9 home invasion. Baker, 30, and Bennett, 27, are each held on $750,000 bond. Taylor, 30, the only female in the group, is held on $100,000 bond, and Donabedian, 22, is held on $50,000 bond. As of Wednesday afternoon, none of the four had posted bail.

The Lincoln County Sheriff's Office reported in March that a Dietrich family was held at gunpoint by multiple individuals while being robbed on the night of March 9. According to a police report filed by Lincoln County Sheriff's Deputy J.R. Gregory, David and Colleen Conner were asleep in their home when David heard the dog barking. He got out of bed, grabbed his shotgun and went to the porch, where he was jumped by the invaders.

Tale of two downtowns

Debate over downtown Twin Falls church highlights conflicting ideals

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Tuesday night's Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission meeting was to determine if a church could move into the old Cain's Furniture building in downtown Twin Falls.

But its undercurrent was more fundamental: What should downtown Twin Falls be?

The chief opposition to the Magic Valley Bible Church came from downtowners who think the church will prevent an entertainment- and nightlife-driven rehabilitation of the area. The churchgoers argued that the building, just a block from the downtown intersection of Main Avenue and Shoshone Street, will bring a foundation to a crumbling area of the city.

Church supporters noted the boarded-up buildings, the tattoo parlors and the bars that surround where they want to make their home. Jordan Beard, a supporter, said a business owner told him he moved his shop from downtown because its elderly patrons were afraid to walk to it, and employees didn't feel comfortable when patrons of the bars would loiter in the store.

Teachers groups sue over part of Luna's school reform package

Shoshone union among plaintiffs

Times-News

The state teachers union and five other plaintiffs claim that part of the education reform passed this year by the Legislature is unconstitutional.

The Idaho Education Association is challenging Senate Bill 1108, the leg of Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's "Students Come First" education reform package that eliminates tenure for new teachers while also changing how contract negotiations between teachers and school districts play out.

The three Luna bills dominated this year's legislative session, spurring spirited debate and protests across the Gem State before and after they were signed into law by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

In their lawsuit filed in Ada County, the IEA and its fellow plaintiffs argue that SB 1108 and an associated trailer bill are unconstitutional because they:

- Mix multiple subjects into a single bill.
- Impair existing contractual obligations by removing an early retirement incentive program.

North Idaho College mulls 'free speech zone'

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Members of the North Idaho College board of trustees are considering a policy that would create a “free speech zone” on the school’s campus, a move they say would limit potentially disruptive picketing, leafleting and other free speech activities to a designated area.

The so-called “Time, Place and Manner Policy” poised for debate Wednesday night is designed to create a safe and productive learning environment, yet avoid some of the challenges from a protest held on campus last fall by members of the Westboro Baptist Church.

Sheldon Nord, vice president for student services, told the Coeur d'Alene Press the policy will make clear the school's rules without infringing on free speech rights.

“The intent is to ensure that our campus maintains a safe and productive learning environment while allowing for the free exchange of ideas,” wrote Nord, in an email.

The proposal has already won approval of the school's top-level administrators, the college Senate and the school's attorney.

Nord said U.S. Supreme Court precedent grants the authority to place reasonable restrictions on time, place and manner of individual expression.

“The free speech clause of the First Amendment is not absolute. It has never been interpreted to guarantee all forms of speech without any restraint whatsoever,” Nord wrote.

Retired NIC teacher Tony Stewart said college officials researched free speech zones before the visit by members of Westboro Baptist Church, which has gained notoriety for picketing military funerals claiming soldiers' deaths are divine punishment on the nation for tolerating homosexuality.

David Conner's gun was taken away from him, although the invaders were armed anyway. Conner told police that he was bound with rope and placed on the kitchen floor. Meanwhile, the suspects forced Colleen Conner to find money and other valuables. The report does not state the value of stolen cash or goods.

Weeks later, authorities gained a valuable tip to the identity of the alleged invaders through a family member.

Last week, the tipster, who is related to Donabedian, told police of details only the victims and invaders could have known. The family member claimed that Donabedian helped in the robbery so he could afford a $500 circumcision for his baby.

A few days later, Twin Falls police found and arrested Donabedian at a Twin Falls fast food restaurant. Gregory interviewed Donabedian at TFPD headquarters, where, according to Gregory's report, Donabedian broke down and spilled details of the invasion, including the names of the other suspects: Bennett, Taylor and Baker, whom he only knew by the name of “Stupid.”

Gregory said Donabedian told him that the group was drinking liquor in Jerome on the night of the invasion, and he told the group of his plight of needing money for the operation. He said the group headed north to Dietrich, where the Connors live. Baker, who already had a sawed-off shotgun with no stock, and Bennett went to the house and returned a short time later with more guns, Donabedian said, before the group left for a Twin Falls residence.

Baker is charged with two counts of grand theft, conspiracy to commit grand theft, conspiracy to commit robbery and conspiracy to commit second-degree kidnapping. The latter two charges feature a weapons enhancement, which adds 15 years to the maximum sentence for each instance. If convicted on all charges, Baker faces life in prison. Bennett faces the same charges.

Taylor and Donabedian are each charged with two counts of aiding and abetting, conspiracy to commit grand theft, conspiracy to commit robbery and conspiracy to commit second-degree kidnapping, which also have weapons enhancements. They also face up to life in prison if convicted of all counts.

Donabedian and Baker are slated for preliminary hearings on May 4, while Bennett and Taylor await their next court dates.

Twin Falls cop costs incomplete

Figures provided to the Times-News and used in a recent story and editorial painted an incomplete picture of how much bringing on a new police officer costs the city of Twin Falls.

According to officials, the city's lowest-paid officers make $34,294 per year, plus additional benefits and costs that come out to $52,352 in first-year costs for a new officer. That figure does not include potential training, equipment or overtime costs.

Rupert to request audit of animal control

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Rupert City Council members said Tuesday they would like to see an audit of the Minidoka County animal control budget.

The request, first from Councilman James Bowers, comes as the county and most of its cities, including Rupert, attempt to sort out a financial shortfall for the joint operation.

County officials have said that the county and cities in past years have covered about $60,000 of the annual $90,000 needed to maintain current services at the animal control facility. The remaining $30,000 has come from fees charged to users — usually about $12,000 a year — and a reserve account that's now empty.

Council discussion noted that Rupert's current payments were determined several years ago to pay for the new facility, which has since been paid off. Council members said there should have been money left in the fund.

“Something has to happen here to show us what is going on,” said Councilman Mike Brown, who also asked for an audit.

Councilman Carlos Roundy asked the purpose of continuing to make the same payment, and Bowers said it was hoped the money would be used for repairs and upkeep. City Attorney Kelly Anthon said the city must specify the kind of review it would require.

Also on Tuesday:

- Minidoka County Community Development Director Tony Morley addressed the council about forming a countywide building appeals board.

Morley said he contracts with the cities to handle their building permits. The building codes of each city call for a building appeals board to provide an appeals process, but one is not in place.

Morley would assemble the board, administer, interpret and enforce the code, but not participate in board rulings. He said he hopes to include qualified construction people among its members.

“It is my sole opinion that Main (Avenue) will likely never again be a key commercial hub, which some have stated it will be, due to the direction that Twin Falls is growing, such as Pole Line,” Beard said at the meeting. “But I do believe it can be a key destination for many family-friendly entities to co-exist and thrive.”

Pastor Greg “Bear” Morton described the surrounding businesses, or lack of them, as “not a community,” which his church hopes to emphasize. “It's more of, for lack of a better term, a red-light district,” he said.

Beard, who works in realty, also noted in his presentation the concerns of what effect a church would have on downtown property values. There's no way it could hurt as much as a large, empty building, he said.

It's a sentiment Alan Fife, owner of 208's Finest Tattoo Shop across the street from the Cain's building, could get behind.

Fife said he's lived in Twin Falls his entire life and he never remembers the downtown being this empty. Even the dive shop across the street, where his dad used to go, has closed. He said getting the Magic Valley Bible Church in there could only help his business and the area — though he wouldn't mind more nightlife either.

“It'll be great getting people down here, especially in that building,” he said.

Fife doesn't worry about the church driving business away — the nearby Christian center hasn't, he said. He laughed at the description of his part of downtown being a red light district — “Where's the girls at?” — and said if it weren't for his store and Poindexter's next door, the entire block would be dead most of the time.

Jeff Hepworth, a downtown property owner and co-chairman of revitalization group Downtown Alive, answered Beard's tale of worry about bar patrons by saying his group wanted more bars, more restaurants and more nightlife. He's not bothered by churches, he said, but a church in the Cain's building will take up prime real estate that could be put toward that goal.

“We are actively trying to get the (Idaho) Youth Ranch to move out, and the other thrift stores out,” Hepworth said, speaking on behalf of his group. “That's not a use compatible with downtown. We want commercial space, we want banks. But we want activity down there. You want to have businesses feeding other businesses, and that's not going to happen with a church. The church is going to have people there on Sunday, they're going to have their service on Sunday, and the rest of the week it's going to be dead.

“We don't want that downtown on Main (Avenue). We want to have our commercial zone.”

are neighbors with us and go to church with us. But people say, ‘Not in our neighborhood, not these kinds of people!’ That is so unfair to them.”

The lot the apartments were planned for was quiet at noon on Wednesday — the rush of traffic from Blue Lakes Boulevard was muffled, and only a few people passed by on the CSI running path.

But at Monday night's meeting, neighbors from Green Acres Drive painted the picture of the college bringing a noisy, disruptive lot into their backyards with the new apartments. Hernandez and fellow CSI student Sheree Haggan, who attended the meeting and spoke in favor of the apartments, said they took offense to the “college student stereotype” used in residents' presentations.

Hernandez said those who spoke against the housing thought their safety would be compromised by the college students.

“The vast majority of our students are nontraditional. We have a lot of single moms and an older demographic of people that goes to CSI,”

What they said

“I lived in the dorms my first year. It would have been nice to have more options for housing. Location is a big thing. I walk to school almost every day.”
Chad Smith, 21, CSI paramedic student from Idaho Falls

“Just because they're college students doesn't make them any different. If there was more affordable housing here and I could pay for it per semester, I would absolutely do it.”
Jenz Hansen, 22, theater student from Jerome. Hansen lives with his family in Jerome

“It's a common misconception about college students. There are younger ages here, but it's kind of presumptive and stereotypical. A lot of people here are families about my age and aren't right out of school. More housing for non-traditional students would be nice.”
Alii Manley, 26, CSI liberal arts student

Hernandez said. “I was very surprised to hear the reaction and the mischaracterization of our students. The arguments were very charged with emotion.”

Linda Fleming, executive director of the local Habitat for Humanity and a Green Acres resident, said no one at the meeting meant to disrespect the students. She said the housing wasn't a good fit for that area or students, adding that privacy infringements, light and noise pollution, safety issues and increased traffic needed to be considered.

“It's just not a proper space for that. The streets weren't accessible, and it had already been rezoned before,” she said. “It is too big of a project to be slotted into that land.”

Neighbor Helen Doherty, 78, said the area would struggle to handle the added traffic brought by the apartments. She said characterizing CSI students as “animals,” as Haggan referenced at Monday's meeting, wasn't the neighbors' intent.

“That's what they called it. But that wasn't our intention,” she said. “We were literally fighting for our rights to live in peace and quiet.”

Haggan said the area would be good for student housing because it's close to campus but not “too close.” She said neighbors and council members were basing their assumptions on their experiences at college rather than an educated discussion on how CSI housing is maintained and managed.

“They were acting like it was a horrible thing, like we wanted to put jail cells behind their homes,” she said. “The noise, lights and traffic are going to be there regardless. This way they would be next to beautiful apartments that are well-maintained.”

The lawsuit names the state government, Luna and Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter as defendants in their official capacities. Both Otter's and Luna's offices declined comment on the lawsuit on Wednesday, saying they hadn't yet seen it.

“We are not going to comment on pending litigation until we have had a chance to review it,” said Luna's spokeswoman, Melissa McGrath. “However, it is not surprising that union leaders are trying to overturn the one bill that phases out tenure, eliminates retirement bonuses, and returns decision-making back to locally elected school boards.”

Luna is in the middle of a six-stop post-legislative tour of the state, which includes today's meeting with area education officials at the College of Southern Idaho's Herrett Center for the Arts and Science.

According to the IEA's website, the lawsuit seeks injunctions to bar state officials from implementing and enforcing the new Luna laws.

“It is the duty of the courts to determine whether laws satisfy constitutional requirements,” said IEA lawyer John Rumel. “We believe that SB 1108 and the related legislation fall well short of that mark. As such, we will be asking the courts to weigh in expeditiously on the legal issues presented by the complaint.”

Along with the IEA, two individual Idaho teachers and education associations from the Caldwell, Fremont and Shoshone school districts are named as plaintiffs.

The 42-member Shoshone Education Association is led by Shoshone Elementary School teacher Michelle Powell, according to the IEA website.

Attempts to reach Powell on Wednesday were unsuccessful.

Kimberly tweaks water payments, appoints URA board

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

The Kimberly City Council responded to citizen concerns Tuesday as it continues to work towards a final tiered billing system as part of its $6.6 million water project.

At its last meeting, Shirley Cunningham, manager of Friendly Village Mobile Estates, asked the council to reconsider its plan to charge one full bond payment for the project per lot, including uninhabited spaces.

“(The park owners) are very concerned about the new water rates that they’ll be facing on empty lots. They don’t feel they can absorb that without a rental increase, and they don’t want to do a rental increase if they can help it,” Cunningham said on April 14.

The council heard her loud and clear. Tuesday, its members — minus an absent Burke Richman — voted unanimously to charge the mobile home one full bond payment per occupied spaces only.

“Everybody, after we looked at the numbers, it made sense,” Councilwoman Mitzi Cheldelin said after the meeting. “We wanted to respond to the citizens in the community.”

For Kimberly residents in the Friendly Village and elsewhere, the first bond payment of $16.84 will appear on water bills covering May and due in June.

In other business, the council took the next step in creating an urban renewal agency — appointing its governing board.

The initial members of the five-person committee have experience in Kimberly-based business and finance. Each member will serve a different length of time.

Appointee Doug Cartwright, who will serve two years, owns the Quilt Barn with his wife, Teresa Roach, who will serve three years, is a former business owner who has also been active in the schools. Jake Tolman will bring a financial background to his year on the board, and four-year appointee Jim Eisenhower brings board member experience after volunteering on the Utility Advisory Committee, which recommended water rates to the council. Councilman Brandon Hoobler was appointed to spend five years on the URA board as council representative.

City Administrator Polly Hulsey said the backgrounds of the board members will be a strength as the URA moves ahead.

“I feel like we have a great variety of people to start the board,” Hulsey said after the meeting.

The council also looked at re-opening its budget to reflect the winding-down water project and bring in money from the building fund as City Hall moves into the former Rock Creek Rural Fire Protection District station. Hulsey said the council had previously planned to amend the budget when more precise numbers became available.

T.F. city celebrates Arbor Day Friday

Twin Falls will celebrate Arbor Day with a 4 p.m. event Friday at South Estates Park.

Mayor Don Hall will read an Arbor Day proclamation, and volunteers from the Boys and Girls Club of Magic Valley and Cactus Petes Resort Casino will plant four trees at the park.

Twin Falls will also be presented a Tree City USA Award from the National Arbor Day Foundation for the 13th consecutive year.

South Estates Park is along Gregory Way, north of Orchard Drive between Blue Lakes Boulevard South and Harrison Street South.

A Twin Falls County celebration is planned Saturday. For details, see today’s Community section.

Library seeks help moving inventory

The Twin Falls Public Library is encouraging library cardholders to check out the maximum 50 items they can to help make room for its re-carpeting project.

Work to re-carpet about three-quarters of the 42,000-square-foot facility will begin Friday, and require workers to move library furniture, computers and nearly 200,000 items. To help that effort, library officials will extend the checkout period for all items — except DVDs, VHS tapes and magazines — to six weeks.

Having more items out of the library will require workers to shuffle fewer items during re-carpeting. Volunteers are also sought to help move the books within the library.

Free tire cleanup nears in T.F. County

The Southern Idaho Solid Waste District will offer “Tire Amnesty Day” on May 7.

Area residents can take up to four tires to the Twin Falls Transfer Station at 2186 Orchard Drive E., or to the Milner Butte Landfill south of Burley for free disposal. There will be a fee for some truck and tractor tires.

The Twin Falls Pest Abatement District encourages people to participate in the event to reduce the number of discarded tires in the area, as water pooled in tires can provide mosquito breeding grounds. The pest abatement district also encourages people to drain any area of standing water to help reduce area mosquito numbers.

New Mexico seeks aid in cocaine plane crash

By Sue Major Holmes
Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — New Mexico authorities have turned to Arizona for help in figuring out who was flying a plane that crashed recently into a northern New Mexico lake, leaving scattered debris, human remains and bundles of pure cocaine floating in the water.

The general manager of the Prescott, Ariz., airport, Ben Vardiman, said New Mexico State Police called Tuesday seeking information on the plane. He said the aircraft was based at his field, but he had no information on the owner or who was flying it when it crashed Sunday.

Prescott Police Lt. Andy Reinhardt said the plane was one of five stored in a subleased hangar, all of them registered to a man in Caldwell, Idaho. He would not give the man’s name.

New Mexico State Police Lt. Eric Garcia would not comment Wednesday on any investigation in Arizona.

Garcia said officials have “strong leads” about who was on the plane when it crashed into Heron Lake.

“We have substantial information that came up, but we’re not releasing some of it because that’s what might help identify who was aboard,” he said.

Investigators have refused to say whether they believe anyone besides the pilot was aboard the plane, which the FAA has identified in a preliminary report posted on its website as a twin-engine Cessna 320. Garcia said he did not know when any identification might be released.

Authorities isolated what they believe was the aircraft on radar and traced the blip back to Prescott, about 100 miles north of Phoenix, said FAA spokesman Lynn Lunsford. No flight plan was filed, he said.

Only a small percentage of the airplane has been recovered, Lunsford said.

tion if the plane’s sitting at the bottom of the lake.”

Given the nature of the debris — the cocaine — law enforcement also will play a large role in investigating, Lunsford said.

Authorities recovered 23 bundles of the drug. Garcia described the cocaine as pure, packaged in bundles about the size of a tissue box.

State police divers found only small pieces of the plane, the largest about the size of a piece of paper, and human remains unidentifiable to anyone but a medical investigator, Garcia said.

Prosecutors: Man angered by affair in ‘hit’ case

By Jessie L. Bonner

BOISE — A former Aryan Nations attorney accused of hiring a hit man to kill his wife and mother-in-law thought his wife was having an affair, federal prosecutors said Wednesday.

The trial of Edgar Steele started in Boise with prosecutors laying out their case against the 65-year-old in U.S. District Court.

they were there to tell him his wife had been killed in a car accident.

Sotka said agents wanted to see if Steele would try to use the alibi he had discussed in the recordings, and he did. When agents told Steele his wife was not dead and Fairfax had acted as an informant, an odor led agents to believe Steele “had defecated himself,” Sotka said.

In opening statements, Assistant U.S. Attorney Marc Haws told jurors Steele had grown to resent his wife Cyndi Steele and her frequent trips to western Oregon to visit her mother when he orchestrated a botched attempt to kill the two women.

Steele faces charges including the use of interstate commerce facilities in the commission of murder for hire, use of explosive material to commit a federal felony, possession of a destructive device in relation to a crime of violence, and tampering with a victim.

If convicted of the most serious charge — possession of a destructive device — he could get at least 30 years in prison.

Steele contends he is innocent and the victim of a conspiracy by the federal government, which was irritated when he represented groups such as Aryan Nations. Steele’s wife has also maintained he is innocent.

“It’s a story of a man who wanted to murder his wife, hired somebody to do it and fortunately, they didn’t succeed,” Haws said.

Prosecutors say Steele offered his handyman, Larry Fairfax, up to $25,000 to kill the two women with hopes their deaths would leave him with a life insurance payout and the freedom to pursue his own romantic interest with a Russian woman he had met online.

Fairfax later became an undercover FBI informant and prosecutors say he secretly recorded conversations in which he and Steele discussed the plot. FBI special agent Mike Sotka testified that law enforcement arrived at Steele’s home in June 2010 to make an arrest — but first they pretended like Cyndi Steele was in U.S. District Court in Boise when the trial started Wednesday, which was the couple’s 26th wedding anniversary.

Defense Attorney Robert McAllister portrayed Steele as a loving husband who suffered a heart attack in late 2009. His wife helped nurse him back to health between trips to Oregon to visit her mother, who had cancer, the attorney said.

Agriculture can lead MV back to prosperity

Strictly in terms of total employment, the Magic Valley weathered the Great Recession better than most areas of Idaho. But paychecks? That’s another story. If you lived in the Magic Valley in 2009, chances are that your income fell faster than other Idahoans’.

The six-county region saw the largest decline in personal income during 2009, according to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis.

Gooding County saw the largest decline in the state, falling 19 percent in 2009 from a total of $576.3 million to $466.8 million, according to a report released this week. Lincoln County reported the third-largest decline of 10.2 percent, Jerome fell 7.1 percent and Twin Falls declined 3.1 percent.

Our view:

South-central Idaho has many people with jobs who struggle to make ends meet.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

All counties in south-central Idaho — with the exception of Minidoka and Camas — were among the top 15 in Idaho in terms of declining personal income. Those are pretty stark numbers, and they reflect two realities.

The first is that the dairy industry’s decline over the past three years has been steep, jarring and protracted. And Gooding and Jerome counties are No. 1 and No. 2, respectively, for the number of dairy cattle in Idaho.

The second is that two of the valley’s traditional high-paying job sectors — construction and light manufacturing — have ebbed as a consequence of the recession.

What does that mean to the region’s economic strategy? Simply this: Development that leverages the area’s economic powerhouse — agriculture — is likely to produce the quickest rewards.

If you doubt that, look no farther than Minidoka County. Less than a decade ago, its biggest employer — J.R. Simplot’s Heyburn french fry plant — closed, yet Minidoka rebounded by providing an attractive option for out-of-state food processors looking for a cost-effective, well-trained workforce and low energy costs.

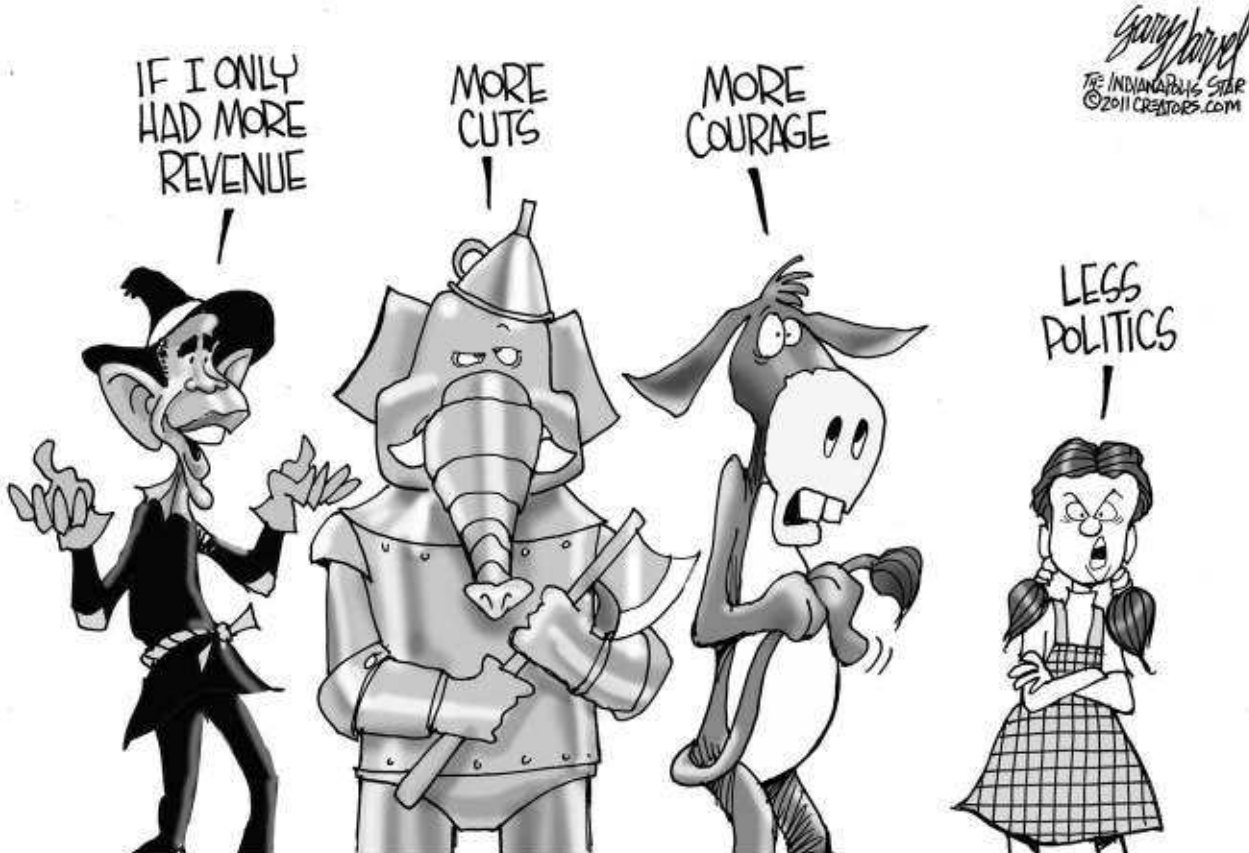

South-central Idaho fared as well as it did during the recession largely because commodity prices — except for dairy — remained respectable. Partly as a consequence, we have jobs.

Now we need to concentrate on prosperity.

Polls reflect the calm before the storm

On one level, American politics looks amazingly stable. President Obama’s approval rating is about 47 percent, and it hasn’t changed much in well over a year. Health care reform is mildly unpopular, and the public’s view hasn’t shifted much since before it was passed.

According to Pew Research Center polls, the public is evenly divided over which party can do a better job of handling foreign policy, the job situation, Social Security reform, health care reform and many other issues. It looks as if we’re back to the 50-50 stasis that has been the norm for the past few decades.

Also, the two parties are about to run utterly familiar political campaigns. The Democrats are going to promise to raise taxes on the rich to preserve the welfare state, just as they have since 1980. The Republicans are going to vow to cut taxes and introduce market mechanisms to reform the welfare state, just as they have since 1980.

The country is about to be offered the same two products: one from Soviet Production Facility A (the Republicans), and the other from Soviet Production Facility B (the Democrats). It will react just as it always has.

From this you could easily get the impression that American politics are trundling along as usual. But this stability is misleading. The current arrangements are stagnant but also fragile. American politics is like a boxing match atop a platform. Once you’re on the platform, everything looks normal. But when you step back, you see that the beams and pillars supporting the platform are cracking and rotting.

This cracking and rotting is originally caused by a series of structural problems that transcend any economic cycle: There are structural problems in the economy as growth slows and middle-class incomes stagnate. There are structural problems in the welfare state as baby boomers spend lavishly on themselves and impose horrendous costs on future generations. There are structural problems in energy markets as the rise of China and chronic instability in the Middle East leads to volatile gas prices. There are structural problems with immigration policy and tax policy and on and on.

The country is anxious, pessimistic, ashamed, helpless and defensive.

The share of Americans who say they trust government to do the right thing most of the time is scuttling along at historic lows. Approval of Congress and most other institutions has slid. Seventy percent of Americans think the country is on the wrong track, according to The New York Times/CBS News poll. Nearly two-thirds believe the nation is in decline, according to a variety of surveys.

Over the past months, we’ve seen a fascinating phenomenon. The public mood has detached from the economic cycle. In normal times, economic recoveries produce psychological recoveries. At least at the moment, that seems not to be happening.

The U.S. has experienced nine straight months of slow economic growth. The unemployment rate has fallen, and, in March, the U.S. economy added a robust 216,000 jobs. Yet the public mood is darkening, not brightening. The New York Times/CBS News poll showed a 13 percentage point increase in the number of Americans who believe things are getting worse. The Gallup Economic Confidence Index is now as low as it has been since the height of the recession.

Public opinion is not behaving the way it did after other recent recessions.

If you dive deeper into the polling, you see the country is not mobilized by this sense of crisis but immobilized by it. Raising taxes on the rich is popular, but nearly every other measure that might be taken to address the fiscal crisis is deeply unpopular. Sixty-three percent of Americans oppose raising the debt ceiling; similar majorities oppose measures to make that sort of thing unnecessary.

There is a negativity bias in the country, especially among political independents and people earning between $30,000 and $75,000 (who have become extremely gloomy). It is hard to rally majorities behind immigration, energy or tax reform.

At some point something is going to happen to topple the political platform — maybe a debt crisis, maybe when China passes the United States as the world’s largest economy, perhaps as early as 2016. At that point, we could see changes that are unimaginable today.

New political forces will emerge from the outside or the inside. A semi-crackpot outsider like Donald Trump could storm the gates and achieve astonishing political stature. Alternatively, insiders like the Simpson-Bowles commission or the Senate’s bipartisan “Gang of Six” could assert authority and recreate a strong centrist political establishment, such as the nation had in the 1950s.

Neither seems likely now. But in these circumstances, rule out nothing.

David Brooks is a columnist for The New York Times.

Valley to experience a one-of-a-kind art show

Magic Valley has Art Hoag. From a trip to Grand Rapids, Mich., a seed took root in Art Hoag’s brain. One which would bring together artists, sponsors and venues for a kaleidoscopic art exhibit, one including all media, spread about Twin Falls, both downtown and beyond. This will be an exhibit such as this community has never seen.

First, check in at the Half Moon Gallery, 132 Main Ave. S., in Twin Falls, to get a list to guide your art walk (or drive). The show starts April 29 and runs through May 7, Monday through Thursday, noon to 6 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, noon to 8 p.m.

I understand there are more than 32 entries from all over the United States, as well as many from the multi-accomplished, working local artisans. Art, and Bonnie too, have worked very hard to make a success of this innovative adventure.

I am neither pro or con Tom Luna, but it seems he is getting worked over pretty hard. A chief executive officer, superintendent or head dog’s job is to toss out new ideas, different approaches for getting things done, etc. These ideas may or may not be the absolute solution but it puts something on the table to be looked at, improved on, modified or discarded.

If consolidation of schools is so good and economical why are there new charter schools? I don’t feel the federal government should be dictating educational requirements for our students. Hopefully, people will not be too fast to condemn nuclear energy. As long as the world keeps producing people at a super rapid rate, we need all the energy sources we can obtain lest our standard of living will regress.

This letter is in reply to Jason Albertson’s letter recently published in this sec-

Mr. Albertson conveniently didn’t mention something quite important. A simple search turned up his charges. He has a bond that high due to his recent charges, which include kidnapping, rape and battery. He has also had many DUI and narcotics charges and also stalking and domestic battery charges brought against him.

He is not an innocent person; he is a dangerous person who needs to be held accountable for his actions. For a person who claims to be “innocent,” he sure gets caught doing a lot of illegal things.

Ten million Americans are mad about Internet poker ban

Throughout my life, one of the few constants as well as one of the great joys has been playing poker. It's also something I'm quite good at. Like the time I was playing Texas hold 'em against an aggressive player who had been throwing down big bets all night. I remember matching him, bet for bet. The dealer laid down the final card — "the river" — and, since the straight I was working for never appeared, I had only a pair of jacks. I almost folded before I saw my opponent grab a $50 chip and rub it with his thumb in a clear "tell" that his hand was weak. I knew I had him, and raised. He folded. He'll never know that I was bluffing, but he sure knew that I won the pot.

Alfonse D'Amato

That's the beauty of poker. My ability means that I can beat my opponent in spite of what hand I am dealt. Like any game, poker also brings heartbreaking losses. When I was in college, I once held four of a kind, a great hand with about a one in 4,000 chance of turning up. Still, I got beat by a straight flush — dealt once every 72,000 hands. But as any poker player knows, your skill at the game determines whether you win, not necessarily the cards.

I think that's why Americans, including politicians, are so enamored with poker: At the table, we control our own destiny.

With so many poker players, you would never think that Congress would pass such ambiguous laws to regulate card-playing. Congress knows that poker is a game of skill. Congress knows that playing games of skill in American homes needn't be outlawed. And Congress knows that, since poker is a game of skill that is legal in the home, it should be legal to play it online. Safe assumptions, right?

Wrong, according to the President Barack Obama's Justice Department as run by Attorney General Eric Holder. On April 15, the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York indicted 11 people involved with the three largest Internet poker sites that welcome U.S. players, alleging money laundering and fraud. The domain names of the sites have been seized, and they have ceased domestic operations. Ten million Americans who play poker on the Internet cannot do so — and they are angry about it. Only after players protested did the Department of Justice agree to allow access to money deposited in personal accounts on these websites.

Through these strong-arm tactics, prosecutors think they can ban Internet poker. Instead, they are making millions of Americans victims in an attempt to make online poker illegal without the support of legislators or the public.

Internet poker does not violate any federal law or the laws of most states. The highest court that has ruled on the issue — the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit in the 2002 In Re: Master-Card decision — stated that the 1961 Wire Act, anti-gambling legislation routinely cited by the Justice Department to malign online poker, applied only to online sports betting. Most federal and state laws define gambling as games of chance. But poker is a game where a player's success is predominantly determined by that player's skill. Although the Department of Justice continues to insist that Internet poker is a game of chance, the law — and any poker player's experience — just doesn't support that contention.

No one suggests that it is illegal for an individual to play poker on the Internet. And that is as it should be. It is unfathomable that policymakers would tell adults that they cannot enjoy a game of Texas hold 'em — in which the player's ability has direct impact on the outcome — in the privacy of their homes on computers and Internet connections they pay for. Yet these same lawmakers think it's perfectly fine for folks to bet on horses or play the lottery, two other forms of gambling.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... so much wind

Lewiston Tribune

Here's how the script reads in Boise: A well-heeled corporate lobbyist asks for a tax break.

Either he claims the incentive will entice his boss to bring a new endeavor and jobs to Idaho.

Or he threatens to exit Idaho and set up shop somewhere else.

Pro-business and anti-tax lawmakers eagerly comply.

This month, Idaho went off script.

The state's rapidly expanding wind farm industry in eastern and southern Idaho was due to lose its exemption from Idaho's 6 percent sales tax. It's worth an estimated $12 million to a 160-megawatt wind farm, according to a recent Boise State University study.

Without it, Exergy Development Group lobbyist Roy Eiguren told lawmakers, hundreds of millions of dollars worth of projects would be halted.

"Your client would announce tomorrow that they are canceling those projects?" Sen. Joe Stegner, R-Lewiston, asked.

"That would be correct," Eiguren replied.

Really? Avoiding sales tax is the difference between a wind turbine making or losing money? Not whether or where the wind blows.

Not the availability of appropriate sites.

Not the regulatory environment.

Not the market for electricity.

Stegner voted no. And down went Exergy's tax break by a 17-18 margin.

Did Exergy carry out its plan? Not exactly.

First, Exergy founder James Carkulis allowed that the 100-megawatt wind farm he's planning for southern Idaho was "more than likely unprofitable" without the tax break.

Then he said he'd honor his contractual obligations to proceed.

"Despite facing a devastating blow, Exergy is a company committed to Idaho in the long term before we are committed to making a profit in the short term," he wrote in the Idaho Statesman.

So for the first time in recent memory, Idaho lawmakers turned down a corporate tax break and found out the claims behind it were just a bunch of hot air.

Not that it's an entirely new story.

A decade ago, the state lined up about $1.5 million in state and local tax breaks to entice Dell Computers to launch a call center at Twin Falls. Eight years later, the call center departed, throwing 500 people out of work just as the Great Recession was sinking in.

In 2005, Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne and lawmakers were desperate to keep the Albertsons grocery store chain headquarters in Boise. So they passed a package of investment tax credits, job credits, property improvement credits and relief from sales and property taxes for corporate headquarters that created at least 500 jobs paying a minimum of $50,000. Over time, it could have been worth $87.6 million to the company.

"Their investment will pay for themselves with new, high-paying jobs and increased tax revenue to the state," gushed then-House tax committee Chairwoman Dolores Crow, R-Nampa.

Only it didn't. Albertsons sold out and the headquarters moved away ...

Companies will take tax breaks — but only to reinforce business decisions already made. What fuels an enterprise's choice to relocate or expand far more than tax goodies are skilled workers, sound transportation systems and quality schools.

All of which Idaho has neglected in its slavish devotion to hand out tax breaks whenever corporations insist they are needed.

Now even that bluff has been called.

... stop charter glut

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Before they wrapped up their business for 2011, 39 Republican legislators sent a message for 2012. On the final day of the legislative session, they voted to lift the cap on charter school expansion — a cornerstone of the state's 1998 charter school law. The bill passed the House 39-29, and while the Senate didn't act on the idea, that may almost be beside the point.

The House put itself on record. They said the cap — allowing no more than six new charter schools per year — is enough of an impediment to innovation and choice that it ought to be lifted.

But this isn't the right time to remove the cap, and 2012 probably won't be the right time either:

- Idaho's public school system is entering its third year of a historic budget crunch. The schools will sustain another $21.3 million cut in 2011-12 — a 1.3 percent decrease.
- As advocates quickly note, the state's 40 charter schools are public schools, receiving public dollars. But those dollars are going to be in scarce supply, so Idaho should focus on keeping existing traditional and charter schools healthy.
- The public schools are already facing upheaval, in the form of the "Students Come First" overhaul pressed by state superintendent Tom Luna and passed by the 2011 Legislature.

Implementation of these laws will already be challenging enough (even without the recall and referendum efforts targeting Luna and his legislation). Why complicate things further by trying to ramp up charter education?

- Some charter schools have struggled to remain afloat. The latest troubled charter school is Nampa's OWL Charter Academy, which recently sought a $75,000 "bridge loan" to cover expenses until it receives its May payment from the state. The Nampa School District rejected this request.

... If the cap is lifted — and the state faces unspoken pressure to allow unchecked expansion — public dollars are liable to go into schools that simply do not have the leadership and the business model required to sustain themselves ...

It's difficult to see how a cap has stunted the growth of charter schools. And it's difficult to see why some lawmakers are in a rush to get rid of it.

In Idaho, it's not a foolish question to ask whether teachers will be the next group of professionals to be replaced by technology.

Clearly, Gov. Butch Otter and Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna — whose title obscures his real calling as a slayer of jobs — hope so.

Luna and Otter's plan to replace teachers with technology got the Legislature's stamp of approval. After all, little plastic boxes full of silicon chips and microcircuits never complain about how much they're paid, don't need health insurance or time off, and don't form unions. They can work day and night.

Teachers are just the newest group to suffer blows inflicted by the belief that technology can replace them.

Headlines that will ask — ad nauseam — "Is teaching dead?" or simply declare "Teaching is dead" cannot be far away.

Why do we know this? Because the words used in place of "teaching" for the last decade have been "newspapers" and "journalism." Both were to have died at the hands of unpaid "citizen" journalists and the Internet.

But it turns out that people still like fact checking with their news to help them distinguish fact from rumor — or outright lies. It also turns out that journalists need paychecks for the time they spend on research, writing and talking to people who run government and corporations.

In other words, no journalists, no news — just lots of rumor, speculation and pomposity from talking heads.

We predict it will be the same with teachers. No teachers, no learning ...

Make May 17 'No More Taxes Day' in Buhl

The Buhl School District leaders have been talking about the financial predicament they are in because that's exactly what his district's repetitive requests for more tax dollars will do to its families.

District leaders imply our schools are our community and they trust the community to know what is best for the school district. And if that is really the case, you have to wonder why they chose to ignore the voter's voice and turn around and place the tax back on the ballot in May?

The district seems to be mostly all about the school's wants and needs, but it doesn't really address the financial burden the tax would have on the community's families. Do you really believe they care if we have enough money to pay our mortgages and rents, our water bills, our car payments, our property taxes or buy the essentials items such as gasoline, food, medicine or utilities? The truth is it's all about what they want, not what is best for the community.

The school district didn't shut down last June and it won't close after the election in May, and since the school didn't like the voters' decision in June, they certainly won't like their decision in May. Hopefully, the school will be able to find someone who will be able to develop a plan that will skillfully use the thousands of dollars they already receive from us in property taxes so they can implement the additional cuts they have been threatening to make.

The voters need to come together and proclaim May 17 as "No More Taxes Day" and keep these folks from destroying our financial dreams by allowing them to walk away with our hard-earned money.

Storms kill 72 across South; pummel Alabama

By Jay Reeves and Holbrook Mohr
Associated Press writers

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — A wave of tornado-spawning storms strafed the South on Wednesday, splintering buildings across hard-hit Alabama and killing 72 people in four states.

At least 58 people died in Alabama alone, including 15 or more when a massive tornado devastated Tuscaloosa. The city's mayor said sections of the city that's home to the University of Alabama have been destroyed and the city's infrastructure is devastated.

Eleven deaths were reported in Mississippi, two in Georgia and one in Tennessee.

News footage showed paramedics lifting a child out of a flattened Tuscaloosa home, with many neighboring buildings in the city of more than 83,000 also reduced to rubble. A hospital there said its emergency room had admitted at least 100 people.

"What we faced today was massive damage on a scale we have not seen in Tuscaloosa in quite some time," Mayor Walter Maddox told reporters, adding that he expected his city's death toll to rise.

The storm system spread destruction Tuesday night and Wednesday from Texas to Georgia, and it was forecast to hit the Carolinas next and then move further northeast.

Around Tuscaloosa, traffic was snarled Wednesday night by downed trees and power lines, and some drivers abandoned their cars in medians.

Tamisha Cunningham, who suffered a leg injury when her home was destroyed, looks over the damage while waiting for medical care, near Athens, Ala., Wednesday.

University officials said there didn't appear to be significant damage on campus, and it was using its student recreation center as a shelter.

Maddox said authorities were having trouble communicating, and 1,400 National Guard soldiers were being deployed around the state.

Brian Sanders, the manager of an oil change shop, brought his daughters to DCH Regional Medical Center because he felt they'd be safe there. He said his business had been leveled.

"I can't believe we walked away," he said.

Storms struck Birmingham earlier in the day, felling numerous trees that impeded emergency responders and those trying to leave hard-hit areas. Surrounding Jefferson County reported 11 deaths by late Wednesday; another hard-hit area was Walker County with eight deaths. The rest of the deaths were scattered around the state, emergency officials said.

Austin Ransdell and a friend had to hike out of their neighborhood south of Birmingham after the house where he was living was crushed by four trees. No one was hurt.

As he walked away from the wreckage, trees and power lines crisscrossed residential streets, and police cars and utility trucks blocked a main highway.

"The house was destroyed. We couldn't stay in it. Water pipes broke; it was flooding the basement," he said. "We had people coming in telling us another storm was coming in about four or five hours, so we just packed up."

Not far away, Craig Branch was stunned by the damage.

"Every street to get into our general subdivision was blocked off. Power lines are down; trees are all over the road. I've never seen anything like that before," he said.

In Huntsville, meteorologists found themselves in the path of tornado and had to evacuate the National Weather Service office.

In Choctaw County, Miss., a Louisiana police officer was killed Wednesday morning when a towering sweetgum tree fell onto his tent as he shielded his young daughter with his body, said Kim Korthuis, a supervisor with the National Park Service. The girl wasn't hurt.

The 9-year-old girl was brought to a motorhome about 100 feet away where campsite volunteer Greg Maier was staying with his wife, Maier said. He went back to check on the father and found him dead.

"She wasn't hurt, just scared and soaking wet," Maier said.

Her father, Lt. Wade Sharp, had been with the Covington Police Department for 19 years.

"He was a hell of an investigator," said Capt. Jack West, his colleague in Louisiana.

Afghan military officer kills 8 American troops, U.S. contractor after argument at airport

KABUL — A veteran Afghan military pilot said to be distressed over his personal finances opened fire at Kabul airport after an argument Wednesday, killing eight U.S. troops and an American civilian contractor.

Those killed were trainers and advisers for the nascent Afghan air force. The shooting was the deadliest attack by a member of the Afghan security forces, or an insurgent impersonating them, on coalition troops or Afghan soldiers or policemen. There have been seven such attacks so far this year.

Although the individual circumstances may differ, the incidents of Afghans turning against their coalition partners seem to reflect growing anti-foreigner sentiment independent of the Taliban. Afghans are increasingly tired of the nearly decade-long war and think their lives have not improved despite billions of dollars in international aid.

The Taliban, who are currently staging their opening salvos of the spring fighting season, boasted that the gunman in Wednesday's airport attack was a militant impersonating an army officer.

This claim did not seem credible, however.

Obama to send Panetta to Pentagon, replace him with Petraeus in national security shakeup

President Barack Obama plans to name CIA Director Leon Panetta as the next secretary of defense and move Gen. David Petraeus, now running the war in Afghanistan, into the CIA chief's job in a major shuffle of the U.S. national security leadership, senior administration officials and other sources said Wednesday.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates will retire on June 30 with Panetta taking over in July. Gates told senior staff that he recommended Panetta as his replacement six months ago.

Gates described his plans ahead of a White House announcement, expected Thursday, that Panetta would be the president's choice to replace Gates.

Petraeus' move to the CIA is not expected until early fall, after he wraps up his term as Afghan commander over the summer, officials said.

Sandoval names Republican US Rep. Dean Heller to replace John Ensign in US Senate

CARSON CITY — U.S. Rep. Dean Heller will enter next year's U.S. Senate race from the perch of incumbency after Gov. Brian Sandoval on Wednesday said Heller will succeed John Ensign next month.

Heller's appointment was anticipated and sets up a political scramble on how his House seat will be filled. State law says a special election must be held within 180 days of a vacancy.

Ensign, 53, has been dogged by an ethics investigation after acknowledging in 2009 to having an extramarital affair with a former staffer.

Driver says he survived crash into Grand Canyon

By Bob Christie
Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — National Park Service rangers were trying to figure out Wednesday how a man's car left a roadway and plunged into the Grand Canyon, narrowly avoiding a fatal free-fall to the bottom of the gorge.

The car ended up lodged against a tree about 200 feet below the South Rim of the canyon, Grand Canyon National Park spokeswoman Maureen Oltrogge said. Another precipice began just 10 feet beyond where the man's car stopped.

A park visitor reported finding the injured 21-year-old man along a stretch of Desert View Drive at about 7:45 p.m. Monday. The man told the visitor he had accidentally driven his vehicle over the edge of the canyon.

He told responding park rangers that he had extricated himself from the crashed vehicle and climbed up to the rim to seek help.

The driver was treated at Flagstaff Medical Center for non-life threatening injuries, Oltrogge said. She declined to release the man's identity or hometown until park rangers have finished their investigation.

The crash happened about 6 miles east of the Grand Canyon Village near a spot known as Twin Overlooks.

The man's car was still at the scene on Wednesday and park officials were beginning to develop a plan to retrieve it, Oltrogge said. In similar cases, officials have used a heavy lift helicopter to pull out vehicles that have driven off the canyon's edge.

Such accidents are rare, and some have involved attempted or actual suicides, although authorities would not say if they suspected that in Monday's crash.

A California man intentionally drove his car off the canyon's edge in July 2009 from the parking lot of the famed El Tovar Hotel. In December, a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention report cited the Grand Canyon as second in the nation among national parks for suicides. The CDC report cited 11 suicides and 10 attempts between 2003 and 2009 at the park along the Arizona-Utah line.

In Idaho, Valley incomes took hardest hit in '09

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

If you lived in the Magic Valley in 2009, chances are your income fell faster than your neighbors' living in other parts of Idaho.

The six-county area of Magic Valley saw the largest decline in personal income during 2009, according to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis.

Gooding County reported the largest decline in Idaho, falling 19 percent in 2009 from a total of $576.3 million to $466.8 million. Lincoln County reported the third largest decline of 10.2 percent, Jerome fell 7.1 percent and Twin Falls declined 3.1 percent.

All counties in Magic Valley — with the exception of Minidoka and Camas counties — were among the top 15 Idaho counties in terms of declining personal income.

Statewide, personal income — the total of wages, business profits, investment earnings and transfer payments like Social Security and pensions — fell by 2.5 percent during 2009, the first decline since 1953.

Idaho Department of Labor Regional Economist Jan Roeser said the declining incomes were tied to falling investment portfolios.

"Investment income was a big factor to overall income declines," Roeser told the Times-News during a phone interview Wednesday. "With a concentration of wealthy individuals and people who depend on investment income living in places like Gooding and Lincoln counties the ongoing loss on Wall Street during 2009 is definitely reflected in the report."

Other counties, like Blaine county, saw hits to both payroll and investment compensation.

"In Blaine county, with losses of entire sectors, like construction, the report is reflecting both loss of income from investments and payroll," Roeser said.

Camas County incomes rose by 0.4 percent, a reflection of the county's strong agricultural base.

"Even though the country saw a slight increase it's modest enough to essentially be flat, which is better than declining personal income," she said.

Bernanke sees risks in further steps to spur jobs

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said Wednesday that the Fed can't take additional steps to try to ease high unemployment without escalating inflation.

If inflation were to accelerate, the Fed would have to raise rates to slow borrowing and spending and blunt price increases. Hiring might then slow.

Speaking at a news conference with reporters, Bernanke sketched a picture of an economy growing steadily but still weighed down by a prolonged period of unemployment, now at 8.8 percent. He acknowledged the pain that is causing, noting that around 45 percent of the unemployed have been without a job for six months or longer.

Bernanke

"We know the consequences of that can be very distressing because people who are out of work for a long time, their skills tend to atrophy," Bernanke said.

But he added:

"It's not clear that we can get substantial improvements in payrolls without some additional inflation risks, and in my view we can't achieve a sustainable recovery without keeping inflation under control."

The news conference was the first time in the Fed's 98-year history that a chairman has begun holding regular sessions with reporters. Bernanke appeared relaxed with reporters, projecting a calming presence and saying nothing that might rattle investors.

The Fed chairman offered some clues about when and how the Fed would begin raising interest rates.

For more than two years, the Fed has kept a pledge to hold its key rate at a record low near zero for an "extended period." At his news conference Wednesday, Bernanke said that at this point, that phrase means "a couple of meetings." The Fed, which ended a two-day meeting Wednesday, gathers about every six weeks.

Once the Fed abandons the "extended period" language, it would be viewed as a signal that it was preparing to start boosting interest rates.

Stocks rose after Bernanke said he expects the economy to continue growing through next year and 2013. The Dow Jones industrial average, which was up about 50 points when Bernanke began speaking, gained another 50 points half an hour before the market closed.

Chevron environmental oil case turns into duel in the Amazon

By Jim Wyss
McClatchy Newspapers

LAGO AGRIO, Ecuador — Donald Moncayo walks to the edge of a flat grassy field that once held two large pits that brimmed with a stew of water and crude from an oil-drilling operation. He lifts a heavy auger above his head and prepares to plunge it into the ground.

"They always show you the shirt, the coat and the tie," he said of the area, called Sacha 53, which is now pastureland and spindly trees. "They never show you the tumor underneath the shirt."

For almost a decade, celebrities, journalists and shareholders have tromped through Ecuador's jungles on competing excursions that have become a routine part of what could be the world's most expensive environmental case.

The "Toxic Tour," led by Moncayo, is held on behalf of some 30,000 Ecuadorian villagers who claim Chevron's predecessor poisoned their environment with shoddy environmental practices that included pumping millions of gallons of oil-tainted wastewater into creeks and streams.

The other tour is led by Chevron. The oil giant shows idyllic agrarian landscapes, like Sacha 53, where Texpet, a subsidiary of Texaco, helped pump crude from the 1960s to 1992 when it was a minority partner of the state-run oil company.

When Texaco left Ecuador, it spent $40 million to clean up its share of the operations, and the government absolved it of any further legal responsibilities in 1998.

But Ecuador's courts found that the government deal did not cover third-party claims. When Chevron and Texaco merged in 2001, Chevron inherited the legal battle.

The company contends it's the victim of a global shakedown engineered by greedy lawyers, environmental groups and unscrupulous government officials.

Idaho housing program helps HIV/AIDS victims

BOISE — Idaho has been awarded more than $1.3 million to continue a statewide housing assistance program for low-income people with HIV or AIDS.

The federal Department of Housing and Urban Development announced Tuesday funding for the grant program would be renewed. The money is expected to help nearly 100 families in Idaho with housing assistance and other services over the next three years.

The statewide program is administered by the Idaho Housing and Finance Association.

The federal government is distributing $334 million this year to help communities provide housing for very poor people who suffer from AIDS or the virus that causes AIDS. HUD says its Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS Program assists more than 60,000 households nationwide.

Sun Valley: More skiers hit the slopes this year

SUN VALLEY — Officials at the Sun Valley ski resort in central Idaho say more people hit the slopes this season compared to last year.

In a statement on Tuesday, Sun Valley spokesman Jack Sibbach said the ski resort had a 2 percent increase in visitors this year, with a final count of more than 407,500 when the season ended Sunday. Early snow allowed the resort to open Thanksgiving Day and run through April 24, for a total of 151 days.

Sibbach has said this season was the fifth best on record for overall snowfall at the resort.

This year marked Sun Valley's 75th season.

Obama, hoping to end 'sideshow,' offers birth form

By Ben Feller
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Confronting growing doubts that could undermine his re-election bid, President Barack Obama on Wednesday delivered an extraordinary rebuttal to those questioning whether he was born in the United States and eligible to hold office, producing a detailed birth certificate and pleading for a long “sideshow” to end.

Obama's surprising intervention came as the White House saw that doubts about his birth in Hawaii — and therefore his legitimacy to be president — were growing, consuming more of the political debate and the mainstream media's attention.

Until now, the White House had deflected demands for Obama to produce his long-form birth certificate, apparently content that voters would see the issue as frivolous, perhaps even to the president's benefit.

The White House calculation Wednesday was that it was necessary to step in and try to deflate the issue, even though doing so meant Obama ma ended up swamping the news with the very topic he said he wanted to quash.

President Barack Obama gestures while speaking to reporters about the controversy over his birth certificate and true nationality, Wednesday, at the White House in Washington.

Donald Trump, weighing a campaign against Obama, crowed that he had forced the president's hand.

On TV, Obama said the issue was distraction from the important matters of the day: budget deficits and soaring gasoline prices.

“We do not have time for this kind of silliness,” Obama said in hurriedly announced appearance in the White House briefing room. “We’ve got better stuff to do.”

He portrayed himself as the voice of reason in a loud, lingering debate, essentially saying that the nation was above all this. The president also sought to push to the national fringe anyone who refused to accept the facts about his birth, taking an indirect swipe at Trump, who has been loudly stirring up the matter.

“We’re not going to be able to solve our problems if we get distracted by sideshows and carnival barkers,” Obama said before TV cameras at the White House.

DOVER, N.H. — After weeks of suggesting Barack Obama was born in Africa, Donald Trump hastened to boast that he had forced the Democratic president to release a detailed Hawaii birth certificate disproving that claim, painting an apparent setback as a victory within minutes of arriving in the first-in-the-nation primary state.

The developer and reality TV show host, who is considering a White House run, again showed the difficulty establishment Republicans are having in controlling the early stages of their wide-open nominating contest. He also proved himself a nimble messenger, or spinner.

“Today I am very proud of myself because I have accomplished something that nobody else has been able to accomplish,” Trump told reporters Wednesday shortly after his black and red helicopter, emblazoned “TRUMP” on the side, touched down in Portsmouth.

He arrived not long after the White House released the president's long-form birth certificate from Hawaii. He said he was honored “to have played such a big role in hopefully — hopefully — getting rid of this issue. Now, we have to look at it, we have to see, is it real?”

Trump said he hoped the birth certificate “checks out beautifully,” but he used the opportunity before television cameras to again sharply criticize Obama on several fronts, including Libyapolicy and gasoline prices. He also raised questions anew about Obama's educational record and how he got into college. But he again offered no proof of anything amiss.

Trump's blistering attacks on Obama, including raising widely debunked rumors that the president was born abroad, have piqued the interest of some Republican voters. He has seen his standing in some polls grow in the months since he first dangled a presidential candidacy before a GOP primary electorate looking for a leader to aggressively challenge the Democratic president.

Many rank-and-file Republicans still dismiss Trump as a non-serious distraction.

But as he easily grabs headlines, other potential candidates are playing a more cautious game, and most don't seem eager to talk about him. They've been distancing themselves from the so-called “birther” claims in recent days, and most weren't eager to weigh in Wednesday.

Sarah Palin, the former Alaska governor, sent a brief tweet that said: “Media: admit it, Trump forced the issue. Now, don't let the WH distract you w/the birth crt from what Bernanke says today. Stay focused, eh?” That was a reference to Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke's news conference.

NASA braces for Giffords, Obama, huge launch crowd

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Rep. Gabrielle Giffords left hospitals behind Wednesday for the first time since her tragic shooting nearly four months ago and traveled to NASA territory for the next-to-last space shuttle launch with her husband in command.

“Gabby is looking forward to some time away from the rehab center & the chance to see Captain Mark Kelly launch again!” Giffords' staff posted on her Facebook page.

Space shuttle Endeavour is due to blast off Friday afternoon with Kelly at the helm. It will be Endeavour's final voyage after 19 years of spaceflight, as the shuttle era nears the end.

NASA managers said they're thrilled to host Giffords, even though her presence requires a little extra care and attention. She flew by NASA jet from Houston to Florida's Space Coast, a day behind the other astronauts' wives and children.

“She's NASA family,” said Mike Moses, chairman of the mission management team.

Since she was critically wounded in the Jan. 8 shooting, the Arizona congresswoman has been in hospitals — first in Tucson, Ariz., and then in Houston for rehabilitation. NASA was staying mum on Giffords' whereabouts. Her staff confirmed her departure from Houston and arrival in Florida but provided no details.

The other VIP — President Barack Obama — will arrive on launch day. He'll bring his wife and two daughters in what will be the first visit by a first family for a launch. Only two other sitting presidents have ever witnessed a manned launch: Richard Nixon for Apollo 12 in 1969 and Bill Clinton for John Glenn's return to orbit in 1998 aboard shuttle Discovery.

With only two space shuttle launches remaining, everyone, it seems, is jostling for a front-row seat.

An estimated 40,000 guests are expected at Kennedy Space Center on launch day. Outside the gates, the crowd is expected to be the biggest in years, if not decades.

Between 500,000 and 750,000 people are expected to jam roadways for the 3:47 p.m. Friday liftoff. That's nearly twice the crowd that descended for Discovery's last launch in February.

Hundreds of additional journalists have already dropped into Kennedy Space Center, with satellite trucks and temporary trailers filling every available spot at the NASA press site.

Giffords' shooting during a meet-and-greet in Tucson and her rehabilitation in Houston — home to Kelly and the rest of NASA's astronaut corps — have overshadowed the details of Endeavour's flight.

Endeavour and its six-man crew are bound for the International Space Station. They will deliver a $2 billion physics experiment and a load of spare station parts. Four spacewalks are planned during the 14- to 16-day mission.

Good weather is forecast for the launch: an 80 percent chance.

No public appearances or statements by Giffords are planned. She will return to her rehab hospital in Houston soon after the launch, according to her staff.

The 40-year-old congresswoman was expected to join in the traditional barbecue with all six astronauts and their immediate families Wednesday evening. The secluded beach house, enjoyed by astronauts during countdowns, is on restricted government property.

As for Kelly, he remains “very, very focused,” said launch director Mike Leinbach. Kelly left flight training after the shooting, but after a monthlong leave, returned to work in Houston.

Giffords will watch the launch in private — as do all crew families. She saw her husband's shuttle launch in 2006, before they were married, and again in 2008.

Almost certain to be at her side: brother-in-law Scott, her husband's identical twin. He, too, is an astronaut and, in fact, is just back from his own space station mission.

Her two teenage stepdaughters, from Kelly's previous marriage, also will be there.

It's likely that the Obamas will be positioned near the congresswoman, who is said to be making remarkable progress with every passing day.

Giffords has not been seen publicly since she was shot in the head, and has been relearning how to speak, walk and take care of herself. In recent newspaper and TV reports, her doctors and husband said she speaks slowly, using single words or phrases, and can stand on her own and walk a little. She is using her left hand to write because she has limited use of her right side.

Enjoy outdoor stops along Sawtooth Scenic Byway

By Andrew Weeks

The Thousands Springs Byway, which stretches from about Buhl to Bliss, isn't the only scenic drive in southern Idaho.

By all accounts, there are plenty of outdoor stops along the Sawtooth Scenic Byway, whether it's exploring actual recreation sites such as beautiful Sawtooth Lake or visiting a museum or visitors center to learn about the history and wildlife of the area.

"The northern tip of the byway terminates in Stanley, where the Sawtooth meets the Ponderosa Pine and Salmon River Scenic Byways," according to IdahoByways.gov. "So no matter which way you drive in or out, you're in for a treat."

• • •

The Sawtooth Scenic Byway is a 115-mile-long drive on Highway 75 from Shoshone to the Sawtooth National Recreation Area near Stanley.

Once at the 756,000-acre SNRA, nestled in the Sawtooth National Forest, stop by the visitors center where you can learn about the area's history, wildlife, and the many outdoors things to do.

Every year people from all over the world visit the recreation area, said Roma Nelson, a host at the center. She counts the signatures in the guest book every year, and every time about the same number of countries are represented — 25 to 28, she said. And most of the states.

She doesn't know how this summer will turn out but anticipates that with people staying closer to home due to increased gas prices, more Idahoans will visit the area.

"We usually get a lot of people from Idaho and Utah," Nelson said. "Last year, we had a lot of Idahoans."

The recreation area is home to a variety of wildlife and visitors enjoy an array of activities such as hiking, mountain biking, fishing, exploring and learning.

You don't have to be a spelunker to enjoy Mammoth Cave.

Centuries-old Mammoth Cave, located off Highway 75 in Shoshone, was discovered in 1902 by a group that left their names, printed in charcoal, on the cave's walls, according to Idahosmammothcave.com.

According to the website, it was "rediscovered" in 1954 by area resident Richard Olsen.

Interestingly, in the 1960s the U.S. government allegedly approached Olsen about using the cave for a civil defense shelter.

Small fish puts up a big fight

Redband trout is largely ignored in Idaho, official says

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Redband trout might be small fish, but they put up a good fight. Getting to them, however, might be a challenge.

About 20 people showed up at Rock Creek Restaurant in Twin Falls last Thursday night to learn about redband trout in Idaho. Dan Schill, fisheries research supervisor for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, addressed members of the Magic Valley Fly Fishers Club.

His slide show presentation, "High Desert Redband Trout in Southern Idaho," discussed the biology of the fish, its presence in Idaho waters, and angling techniques.

At one time, he said, redband trout, so named because of the red stripe across its sides, was the least studied trout in Idaho. But over the past decade or so, they've been studied a lot.

There are at least two species of redband trout — the Columbia River redband, found in Washington, Montana and Idaho; and the Great Basin redband trout, found in southeastern Oregon and parts of California and Nevada.

As a game fish, redband virtually are unexploited in Idaho, Schill said.

"There's a whole lot of 'em out there," he said.

There might be at least two reasons for this. The species are found in often hard-to-reach waters, such as rivers in deep canyons and in places where, from Schill's experience, there's a lot of poison ivy. The fish also don't draw the attention of some anglers because of their size.

See REDBAND, Outdoors 2

IF YOU FISH

Redband trout don't get very big, but they put up a good fight when caught on the fly. Finding them might be tricky, though, because they often inhabit hard-to-reach rivers, sometimes in areas where there are snakes and plenty of poison ivy, says Dan Schill. If you plan to fish for redband, he recommends you bring along gloves, sunscreen and water. It's probably also a good idea to bring along a GPS unit, food and a first-aid kit.

Everything you ever wanted to know about salmon

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

With full-fishing season approaching, it won't be long before the banks of lakes and rivers will be filled with anglers trying to catch their limit.

Savvy fishermen already have been on the water, casting their flies for chinook. But as Doug Megargle has said, catching that first salmon is a memorable experience for younger fishermen as well.

Salmon is one of Idaho's most popular fish species, and one of the most fun and challenging to catch.

Megargle, regional fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, recently answered questions from the Times-News about salmon. Here's what he had to say:

Question: What is a salmon?

Answer: A salmon is a fish species in the salmonidae family (trout family) that is born in fresh water streams, migrates to the ocean for most of its life, and then returns to spawn in fresh water streams.

Q: How many different kinds of salmon are there?

A: Worldwide there may be hundreds of different species and/or stocks of salmon. A "stock" is a sub-population that has shared genetics and is classically loyal to spawning in a specific drainage. In Idaho, we typically deal with the coho, chinook and sockeye salmon.

Q: How do they differ from trout?

A: Most people differentiate salmon from "trout" in that salmon live part of their lives in the ocean, and part of their lives in freshwater streams (anadromous). Trout (e.g. brook trout, rainbow trout, redband, brown trout) typically do not ever live any portion of their lives in salt water. In some areas, a steelhead is defined as a rainbow trout

Q: How big do salmon get?

A: That's a very large question in a few words. In Idaho, the state records are 54 pounds for salmon and 30 pounds, 2 ounces for steelhead. Larger salmon are often referred to as "one ocean" or "two ocean" fish with the two ocean fish being larger since they spend two years in the ocean feeding heavily on rich diets.

Q: What is, and when is, the salmon run?

A: A salmon run is associated with the salmon spawning migration. Generally speaking, a salmon run is a mass migration of salmon to a spawning location. When a run occurs it is dependent upon the "stock" and may range from early spring to early winter. Idaho's chinook salmon are often loosely separated into three groups — spring, summer and fall, based on their size and ocean life history.

Q: What makes ideal salmon fishing conditions?

A: First and foremost, lots of fish in the water. With that said, good conditions might be best described as good spring conditions and good fall conditions. In the spring, water temperatures start to come up and get fish moving, but stream flows too high make for muddy, difficult and dangerous conditions.

Most anglers fish before the big spring runoff (snowmelt) passes through or wait until after when the water drops a bit and clears up. If you hear people say "the salmon river blew out" you probably don't want to go fishing that weekend.

In the fall, water is typically clear and there is less of it. The fish are typically found in deep holes or runs in the rivers — fishing conditions during the fall are usually more dependent upon the weather; big rain events can mess things up.

Q: Where are good places to catch salmon?

A: Where to fish is dependent upon the time of the year and, of course, when the season is open. As the fish move

Fly-rod golfing could sharpen casting skills

By Roger Phillips
McClatchy Newspapers

BOISE — Can you cast a fly through this hoop? Course designer Janet Rydman of the Women's Fly Fishers of Idaho gives it a shot recently in preparation for the Trout Unlimited casting tournament.

If you're an angler or hunter, you've probably spent money beyond a fishing or hunting license to help wildlife.

Local and national conservation organizations hold banquets, raffles and auctions to raise money, and sportsmen and women routinely contribute their hard-earned dollars.

The Ted Trueblood Chapter of Trout Unlimited is among the leaders, not only at raising money locally, but at getting big bucks for Idaho from national grants.

The group is at it again by partnering with federal agencies in a $123,000 culvert-replacement project on Pierce Creek, which flows into the South Fork near Danskin Bridge. Replacing the culvert with a bridge will reconnect 1.9 miles of trout spawning and rearing habitat.

Rather than extending a hand for donations, the folks at TU are doing something different. They're holding a fly-casting tournament May 14 at Eagle Island State Park to raise $6,000 in matching funds for the project.

"We understand the economic environment," tournament chairman Pat Kilroy said. "So in place of a banquet, we're providing an opportunity for fly casters to hone their skills, enjoy a fun, but challenging, competition with their friends and neighbors, and earn the chance to win some very handsome prizes."

It's a great idea, and for sake of full disclosure, I will be competing.

The tournament course is modeled after the Orvis casting course in Bend, Ore., which is basically a golf course for fly rods.

Casters will try to land a fly into 14 hoops at varying distances and deal with obstacles and casting challenges that simulate fishing situations.

Scoring will be similar to golf, with the team with the lowest number of casts to reach the hoops winning the event.

Organizers are dividing teams into two tiers of skill levels: gold for advanced/expert casters, and silver for intermediate casters. The number of teams in each division is limited, and the deadline for sign-ups is May 7.

Casters will vie for more than $3,000 worth of prizes,

IF YOU GO

The event will be May 14 at Eagle Island State Park west of Boise, with four-person teams and a golf tournament format (total team score determines outcome).

Course orientation, skills demonstration and practice area will be provided.

Gold division: $500 entry fee per team. Advanced-level competition, limited to 12 teams

Silver division: $140 entry fee per team. Average skill level below Gold division teams, limited to 18 teams

Noncompetition: $25 fee per person

Watch the tournament: First priority for recreational casting following team competition at about 4 p.m. Entry fee includes catered lunch and light breakfast by Willow Creek Grill and covers $5 park-entrance fee. To sign up and for more information: www.tedtruebloodtu.org, or Pat Kilroy at (503) 536-5297 or pkilroy86@hotmail.com.

which were donated to keep overhead costs down and more money going for the South Fork project.

There will also be a non-competitive opportunity for anglers to cast the course after the tournament is completed, which is expected to be late afternoon.

Organizers are doing their homework because they not only want the tournament to be a success, they want it to be an annual event that will raise money for future projects on the South Fork.

They've done several test runs of the course, and you can see the layout for the course at www.tedtruebloodtu.org.

You will see a lot of thought and effort has gone into designing it, and it will provide a unique opportunity to test your casting skills.

Kilroy encourages everyone to practice before the event because there are some challenging casts.

Even if you don't end up in the winner's circle, the course will still make you a better caster.

There also will be some of the best fly casters in the Valley there, and several instructors are helping with the event.

I can say from experience they are generous with advice and tips. They have helped my casting through the years, which has made me a better fly fisherman.

But most importantly, the tournament is a chance to get outside with your fly rod, enjoy some camaraderie and friendly competition, and help one of our favorite local rivers.

best technique — that depends on how you like to fish. Generally speaking, anglers want to get their bait or lure down near the bottom where the salmon tend to hold. Fly fishermen might be using large fly rods and fishing streamer patterns and a bait angler might be "bottom bouncing" baited egg-sacks (often filled with tuna, roe or shrimp).

Believe it or not, many anglers are very successful using large bobbers that hand their bait just off the bottom. Some boat anglers will "back troll," which means they boat upstream Sawtooth Lake is a beautiful site, located about 7 miles southwest of Stanley high in the Sawtooth Mountains in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The 5-mile hike to Sawtooth Lake, which begins at the Iron Creek Trailhead and Campground, is one of the more popular hikes in the recreation area, offering fantastic views of the Sawtooth Valley.

The last mile or so of the trail between Alpine Lake and Sawtooth Lake is probably the hardest part of the journey. But once at the lake, enjoy its rough, natural beauty such as Mount Regan that sits at the lake's south end.

Sawtooth Lake is only one of many places in the recreation area. You might also want to try Alpine, Alturus or Redfish Lake.

If you're a bird watcher, you might want to visit areas along Marsh Creek or the Cape Horn area near Stanley.

"The Marsh Creek meadow area is carpeted with blue camas lilies in June for one of the most beautiful wildflower spectacles in Idaho," according to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. "The Cape Horn region contains one of the largest, contiguous, undeveloped wet meadow complexes in the Upper Salmon basin."

The area, which is mixed with willows, sagebrush and conifer, is home to a variety of waterfowl and song birds, including warbling vireos, horned lark, mountain bluebird, white-crowned sparrows and dark-eyed junco.

Also keep an eye out for raptors, Fish and Game says, including northern harrier, red-tailed hawk and great gray and northern Saw-whet owls.

From Stanley, take State Route 21 about 11 miles to mile post 119.5. Turn right onto Marsh Creek Road and travel for 5.5 miles to Cape Horn Guard Station. Continue northwest and follow directions to Cape Horn lakes.

If you have a weekend to spare, you might want to consider traveling the by-way to see for yourself what it has to offer. It offers so much that it can't all be crammed into a newspaper article. Just don't forget to stop at area museums and visitors centers, where helpful staff can point you in the direction of things you might have overlooked.

Question: Bob asked: "I have lived with my girlfriend for 5 years and we have kids together. We both work and pay our bills together, although all the bills are mine. Can I file an individual bankruptcy?"

Answer: Yes you can, although there are pitfalls. The new bankruptcy law requires that you report ALL household income, so your girlfriend's income will have to be considered in determining whether you qualify to file a traditional Chapter 7 bankruptcy as opposed to repaying some of your debts in a Chapter 13 bankruptcy. Also, if you have purchased anything jointly (like a car or house) your individual exemptions provided by state law may not be sufficient to protect all your property, because as a non-debtor, your girlfriend may not claim any exemptions in your bankruptcy. As an example, if your name is on the title of your girlfriend's car, you may not be able to protect it in bankruptcy. The trustee could seize it. This is a situation where you definitely need the advice of a professional bankruptcy attorney. There are probably multiple solutions to your problem, including marriage.

upstream, an angler might find good fishing down low in the Clearwater, but that same good fishing moves upstream as the migration continues.

Anglers might fish the lower Clearwater in the early spring but have to move up to Riggins or Salmon Idaho as they chase the fish upstream.

That's the "macro" answer to your question; however, if you're standing along the shoreline, you want to find places where the fish might stop to take a breather from the tremendous voyage.

Look for places that offer shelter from the current, including deep pools or eddies just below rapids, undercut banks, current seams, current pillows near islands or large boulders, etc.

If it looks like the current slows down in a particular area, there's a good chance a salmon might be holding there to take a break.

License required to shoot rock chucks

Question: “In a previous article about rock chuck hunting you mentioned the need for a hunting license. I thought a guy could hunt predators and unprotected animals without a license. Please explain the licensing requirements for shooting rock chucks, jack rabbits and coyotes.”

Answer: You are correct. I did write that a valid hunting license was required for shooting rock chucks. In some states licenses or permits are not required to hunt predatory or unprotected wildlife, but in Idaho a valid hunting license is required. Idaho law specifically reads, “No person shall hunt, trap, or fish for or take any wild animal, bird or fish of this state, without first having procured a license.”

Landowners or lessees of property may destroy unprotected and predatory animals in order to protect private property without having first obtained a hunting license. However, recreational hunting by landowners and others requires a valid hunting license. For nonresidents, the department offers a reduced price non-game gun license to accommodate “varmint hunting.” This license is available at license vendors after the close of the waterfowl season in January and is valid through August. It is only valid for unprotected and predatory wildlife. The cost is $35.50.

In summary, landowners are allowed to protect their property from predatory and unprotected wildlife without first purchasing a hunting license. Everyone else needs a valid hunting license.

Sport hunters’ polar-bear trophies stuck in legal limbo

By Erika Bolstad
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Until they were classified as a threatened species in the United States three years ago, a Canadian polar bear was the ultimate trophy for many elite American sport hunters.

Led by Inuit guides, hunters traveled for days by dog sled to the far northern reaches of iced-over Nunavut and the Northwest Territories. They endured temperatures so far below zero that they had to cover all exposed skin. And they paid dearly for it: Each trip cost $40,000 to $60,000, and few hunters were satisfied until they brought home bears.

Today, the rare trophies from those hunts — generally a skin and claws, along with the skull and the penis bone, known as an “oosik” in the Native language — are in a legal limbo that stretches from the Arctic Circle to the Canadian capital in Ottawa to the halls of the U.S. Congress.

The Endangered Species Act prohibits importing animals that are listed as endangered or threatened. As a result, sport-hunted polar bear trophies from Canada can’t be imported, the government argues, even if they were hunted before the bears were considered threatened.

The dispute over the trophies spans the intertwined futures of the polar bears, whose habitat is shrinking, and the Native population, whose economy gets a strong boost from the income from hunts.

An estimated 20,000 to 25,000 polar bears range across Canada, Russia, Greenland, Norway and Alaska. Sport hunting is legal only in Canada, home to an estimated 15,000 of the bears.

Conservationists don’t outright endorse sport hunting of the bears, but they do have an uncomfortable truce with the concept. The World Wildlife Fund’s Geoff York, a polar bear expert, said the organization didn’t oppose sustainable harvests when they benefited local economies.

What’s worrying environmentalists, York said, is an uptick in the value of polar bear hides, spurred in part by new wealth in Russia and China. Because guides haven’t had paying customers, in some cases they’re using their quotas to kill the bears and sell their pelts. An increased value for pelts means that more bears are likely to be killed or poached.

The U.S. classified the bears as threatened in 2008 based on their shrinking sea ice habitat. At the same time, it issued a rule prohibiting the Endangered Species Act from being used to regulate greenhouse gases to address the global warming that led to the bears’ loss of habitat.

John Jackson III is a Louisiana lawyer who heads the pro-hunting nonprofit Conservation Force. Along with a lawyer from Safari Club International, he argued on behalf of 41 American hunters who shot their bears in early 2008, just before the Endangered Species Act took effect, in federal court in Washington this month as a small piece of a multiparty lawsuit dominated by environmental groups that want the U.S. government to list polar bears as endangered, not merely threatened.

“This is one of the greatest Arctic adventures: by dog sled, 700 to 800 miles above the Arctic Circle, as much as 60-below-zero temperatures, with Native people,” Jackson said. “It’s one of the hardest, most adventurous hunts in the world, but it’s the relationship with the people and the habitat, as well as the extraordinary animal. All of it’s an extraordinary, once-in-a-lifetime experience.”

If the Arctic continues its melting trend, government scientists have projected that polar bear populations worldwide could decline as much as two-thirds by mid-century. They could be nearly extinct by the end of the century.

Although the bears have a special status in Canada, the Canadian government objected to the 2008 “threatened” listing. Each Canadian province within the bears’ range has established its own harvest rules. Some have quotas; others don’t. The hunting licenses go to Native people, who determine in their communities how to divide them.

Lack of fishing experience is no excuse to miss this event. At special locations around the southwest region, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game will provide equipment and fishing experts will be on hand to help novice anglers learn the ins and outs of fishing. In addition, all these locations will be stocked with hatchery rainbow trout prior to the day.

Three Ohio generations join youth turkey hunt

By Julie Blum
Columbus Telegram

COLUMBUS — The early bird wasn’t the only one in nature up before the crack of dawn.

Chad Podolak and his son, 10-year-old Collin, made it an early morning, too, over a recent weekend, when they set out turkey hunting. They were joined by Podolak’s dad, Larry, for what was the opening day for turkey season for youth shotgunners.

The trio hunted at a family farm near Octavia and headed out just after 5 a.m. Decked out in camouflage, they set up turkey decoys hoping to entice the birds. Then they played the waiting game.

The two elder Podolaks are veteran hunters, and although still young, Collin has several years of experience under his belt, too. He has accompanied his dad on several hunting excursions, starting when he was just 2. Last spring he shot his first turkey, as well as a snow goose and deer. On Saturday, he came up empty.

The experience, though, isn’t really about bagging an animal, it is spending time together as a family that matters.

“It’s not about the kill, it’s about the experience. You can go a whole year and not get anything, and it is still a success,” Podolak said.

Hunting is often a family affair, as wife, Carmen, and daughters, Brooke, 12, and Jaelyn, 8, tag along. When the whole clan comes is when it is most enjoyable.

They are spending time together away from the video games and the hustle and bustle of every day life.

“What we really enjoy is being able to get outside and see the sunrise and see the deer and the turkey. Over time, you see the kids learning and become more in tune with the signs and different things you watch for. They notice tracks ... sounds different animals make,” Podolak said.

FISHING REPORT

Magic Valley expecting significant runoff soon

Magic Reservoir is nearly full. Fishing at the upper end near Hot Springs Landing is good but has slowed in recent days due to the high, off-color water. The fish are still robust and in the 14- to 20-inch range. At the dam, the fishing is considered slow and steady. Fish are ranging a little smaller on the upper end. Bait fishermen are doing the best when they keep the bait suspended a couple of feet off the bottom.

Alert: Boaters have a higher than normal amount of debris to navigate in Magic Reservoir. The high water this spring exceeded the high water mark of the last two years. Debris that was deposited along the high water mark in previous years is now floating and heading south towards the dam.

The large shallow bay to the west of the dam has water, and float tubers should see some good action there in another week or two.

ice-free with some shoreline ice developing nightly. Road is open. Hatchery trout have been stocked and it appears there has been some carry-over from last year.

Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir is ice-free and Lud Drexler boat ramp is open. The road going into bays on the south end are intermittently dry; use roads with caution. Anglers are reporting decent catch rates from the shoreline but boat anglers have not been doing well.

Hatchery trout have been stocked into many of the Magic Valley fisheries.

Rivers are starting to rise, but the spring runoff has yet to develop. The Magic Valley Region is expecting a significant runoff to develop soon, making places like the Big Wood River, South Fork Boise, Little Wood River and Rock Creek muddy and difficult to fish.

Planetary alignments need not be perfect to be worth watching

A clock’s hour, minute, and second hands simultaneously line up only twice a day (noon and midnight). Now imagine a clock with eight hands, each moving at different speeds. How often would all eight overlap?

The “clock” is the solar system, with each of the eight planets moving at a unique speed. Mercury orbits in just under 88 days; Neptune takes more than 165 years. All eight can’t line up until the outermost slowpokes get in position, and even then it’s a slim chance. And the two slowest planets, Uranus and Neptune, only pass each other every 172 years.

However, planets can line up on the same side of the sun (“noon”), or on opposite sides (“six o’clock”). If we only consider the naked eye planets, and leave the sun out, many more alignment configurations are possible, decreasing the wait time.

Now the bad news: While the planets orbit in nearly the same flat plane, each has its own individual tilt. (Mercury has the largest tilt: seven degrees.) Thus, a perfect line-up is simply impossible.

SKYWATCH

If you’re not picky, near alignments are fairly common, and there’s a pretty good one currently shaping up in the pre-dawn sky.

Mars and Jupiter have just emerged from behind the sun, and are moving farther from it daily. Mercury and Venus are on their way to passing behind the sun, so they’re sinking into morning twilight. The configuration of all four will change almost daily, with Venus, Jupiter and Mercury closely bunched on May 12. Look for Venus (the brightest) to rise just north of east at 5:30 a.m. Once you spot it, scan around it with binoculars. The next brightest is Jupiter, followed by Mercury and

Blaine Co. Heritage Court chosen

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County Historical Museum has named four women who will make up the 2011 Heritage Court.

- The women are:
- Betsy Pearson, of Bellevue, is an artist who has contributed art pieces to a variety of organizations, including the Cowboy Ball that benefits the Sagebrush Equine Training Center. Pearson also illustrated the book A Sun Valley Journal, which features her distinctive paintings of popular events and landmarks in the Sun Valley area.
  - Theresa Richards, of Hailey, helped her husband

Art develop the Rotarun Ski Area west of Hailey. A nurse and mother of eight children, she has belonged to the Chapter AM of the P.E.O. Sisterhood in Hailey for 50 years.

- Maxine Molyneux, of Picabo, grew up in Murtaugh before moving to Kimberly after she married her husband, Bill. They moved to their ranch at the end of Gannett Road in 1952 and have been there ever since — working the land, milking the cows, raising a notable garden, cooking for ranch crews and raising five children.
- Joanne Davis, of Sun Valley, has served as an usher for the Sun Valley Summer Symphony as long as anyone can remember. She also serves on the Board of Governors of the Sun Valley Ski Club and still races in the 20-mile Boulder Mountain Tour, even after her 70th birthday.

While none of the women were born in the Wood River Valley, all have close ties to the land whether farming it, painting it or skiing it.

“It’s nice country here,” said Molyneux. “We have plenty of room. We don’t have everybody looking over our shoulder.”

“I love this country,” said Pearson. “I’m a soil girl. I love the field and the animals. The vistas have always drawn me.”

The women will be crowned during a public ceremony at 3 p.m. June 19, at The Liberty Theatre in Hailey.

They will also be featured in a horse-drawn carriage during the Hailey Fourth of July Parade, Carey’s Pioneer Days Parade, Ketchum’s Wagon Days and Bellevue’s Labor Day Parade.

The Heritage Court was established to pay homage to women who have made the valley what it is today, said Mike Healy, one of the organizers. While the women need not have been born in the valley, they do need to be 70 or older and have lived in the valley for at least 30 years.

Thirty-four women have been named to the court, including these women.

Thoughts on hypothyroidism testing

DEARDR. GOTT: Quite a while ago, you published a letter from a person who inquired about whether he or she should be treated for hypothyroidism with a TSH level of 6.7.

Hypothyroidism is rampant in my family. I think it is important to identify the consequences of untreated hypothyroidism, which include a greater likelihood of high blood pressure, high cholesterol, diabetes and early-onset dementia.

Also, it is worthwhile to note that the European standards for diagnosing hypothyroidism are much narrower than in this country. In Europe if a person’s TSH is higher than two, he or she is diagnosed with hypothyroidism. If it is between one and two, the person may have it. If it is less than one, the person definitely does not have it.

The American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists issued a paper in 2002, stating that anyone with a TSH of three or higher should be treated.

And then there is the issue of treating with a natural

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

source of thyroid, such as Armour thyroid, versus treating with a synthetic form, such as levothyroxin. In a study done in another country, 60 percent of people with hypothyroidism felt better when taking both T3 and T4, compared to taking just T4.

Thank you for the helpful information in your column.

DEAR READER: Hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid) can be a somewhat complex issue. The area about which you have written, subclinical thyroid disease, is particularly complicated. Until adequate scientific studies have been performed, it will continue to be difficult to determine at what levels treatment should be given when levels fall within those gray areas.

You are correct in that there are very real and sometimes serious consequences in not treating hypothyroidism. These can include heart disease, goiter (enlarged thyroid gland), infertility, peripheral neuropathy and myxedema (cold intolerance, drowsiness, profound lethargy and unconsciousness). These are most commonly associated with long-term uncontrolled hypothyroidism. Women with hypothyroidism who are pregnant, have a higher risk of having child with birth defects. The child may also be more likely to have serious developmental and intellectual problems. Babies born with hypothyroidism who go untreated past the first few months of life are at risk of serious mental and physical development problems.

DEARDR. GOTT: I strongly disagree with your readers who want short answers to more questions. The reason I read your column and recommend it to others is because you provide such thorough answers. That reader and the “we all” he or she refers to are either not aware of the complexity of many conditions or they have a short attention span. Please don’t stop helping those of us who crave complete and useful information. I think your solution is perfect: An occasional “quickies” column to respond to simple questions to which you can provide brief responses.

DEAR READER: Thank you for the compliment. You are correct that many health concerns are complex. Added to that, many people don’t want to take prescription medications if alternatives or home remedies will be beneficial, so in simply describing treatment options, several paragraphs of my limited space can be used. Never mind describing the condition, symptoms, diagnosis and testing!

Dr. Peter H. Gott is a retired physician and the author of several books, including "Live Longer, Live Better," "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Diet" and "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Cookbook," which are available at most bookstores or online. His website is www.AskDrGottMD.com.

T. F. County Arbor Day moves to Filer

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

LEARN MORE

Interested in participating in the Twin Falls County Arbor Day Parade? Contact the county tree committee, 734-9491, or Filer City Hall, 326-500. Read more about the Arbor Day Foundation: www.arbor-day.org. Find information on other local Arbor Day celebrations: Magicvalley.com/community.

FILER — People mark the seasons with spring buds, cool summer leaves and exposed winter frames. But they sometimes forget about the benefits of planting trees. Arbor Day is good way to remember.

The third-annual Twin Falls County Arbor Day celebration is scheduled for Saturday at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer. Festivities will begin with a parade through the downtown area at 11 a.m. The route will start at the fairgrounds R.V. park and then progress down Main Street and along Yakima Ave.

Activities will continue back at the R.V. park with a free hamburger or hot dog lunch, and tree-planting demonstrations led by certified arborists. Special prize drawings for trees and other landscape items donated by the city of Filer and local nurseries will also be held.

“We’ll have different parade categories and prizes for the best floats and such,” said Filer Mayor Bob Templeman. “The council and I would like to see everybody come out and spend the day enjoying themselves.”

Filer residents have been holding their own Arbor Day events for more than a decade, but this weekend will be first time in its three-year existence that a city other than Twin Falls has been asked to host the countywide observance. Twin Falls County Tree Committee member Lois Cammack said the decision to change location is an effort to encourage involvement from other communities.

“It’s a chance to not only educate the public and encourage a younger generation to get involved, but also help replace some of those almost 100-year-old trees on the fairgrounds that are dying,” Cammack said. “We’re going to try and move to a different town each year.”

Julius Sterling Morton, a Nebraska naturalist who served as President Grover Cleveland’s secretary of agriculture from 1893 to 1897, championed the first Arbor Day observance on April 10, 1872. As editor of the Nebraska City News, Morton used both his political influence and pen to advocate the sustainable production of trees, as well as their use in soil conservation and beautification.

Morton’s early vision has continued to grow with Arbor Day celebrations being held around the world and the Arbor Day Foundation. The Foundation offers educational and stewardship promotions such as the Tree City USA program — which 71 Idaho cities and counties have now become a part of.

Rick Novacek, director of Twin Falls County Parks and Waterways, receives an annual tree care budget of about $3,500 but spends more in soil conditioning and tree replacement.

“The Twin Falls County Tree Committee was formed three years ago so the county could participate in (Tree City USA),” Novacek said. “Working with the committee and Arbor Foundation are really beneficial, because it goes around taking tree inventory in the parks and helping make decisions about what should be done.”

Jack B. (Smilin' Jack) Spencer

March 16, 1948–April 26, 2011

There was never a time that Jack wasn't smiling with his contagious grin!

BUHL — Jack Bernard Spencer passed away Tuesday, April 26, 2011, at his home, surrounded by his family after a three-year battle with stomach cancer.

He was born March 16, 1948, to George and Hattie Spencer, the eighth of nine children and raised in Driggs, Idaho. He attended Ricks College and then Brigham Young University; upon graduation from BYU, he settled in Salt Lake City, where he and his brother had a successful construction company. That is where he met his future wife, Laura Hammer.

In 2000, Jack moved his family to Buhl, Idaho. Jack was a master carpenter, building his own home from the ground up, but his true love was running rivers and enjoying the great outdoors. He was always up for a good horseshoe match or game of pool or darts; he never lost and, if he did, it was just a "warm-up" game. Jack was so proud of his children and all their accomplishments, especially in the gym where he never missed a good volleyball or basketball game; he was their No. 1 fan.

Jack is survived by his wife of 27 years; his four children, Vance, Judd, Ellie and Kayla; two brothers, Curt (Ella Ann) and George (Becky); three sisters, Joyce, Carol (Phil) and Ann (John); and many nieces, nephews, family members and wonderful friends. He was preceded in death by both parents, two brothers and one sister.

Jack's "happy go lucky" outlook on life will be greatly missed by all that knew and loved him.

A celebration in honor of his life will be held at his home in Buhl on June 4, 2011. Farmer Funeral Chapel is in charge of cremation.

Cuban exile militant Orlando Bosch dies

MIAMI (AP) — Prominent Cuban exile militant Orlando Bosch, who was acquitted in Venezuela in the 1976 bombing of a Cuban jetliner, has died in Miami. He was 84.

Bosch's wife, Adriana, said he died at midday Wednesday at a suburban Miami hospital. She said the exile opponent of communist Cuba's Fidel Castro had suffered complications from various illnesses and had been hospitalized since December.

"Knowing him, it doesn't surprise me that he waited to pass away until after Fidel Castro formally retired from power. He died in the satisfaction of knowing that the struggle, even though by other means, is kept up by those of us yet to go," said Pepe Hernandez, head of the Cuban American National Foundation in Miami.

Bosch and fellow militant Luis Posada Carriles were both accused in connection with the 1976 bombing that killed all 73 people aboard the flight that originated in Venezuela on a route to Cuba.

Venezuelan authorities had arrested Bosch and held him for 11 years. They failed twice to convict him and finally freed him to return to the United States. The federal government then held Bosch for three years in a Miami jail as an "undesirable alien" and released a report linking him to right-wing terrorist groups suspected in some 50 bombings in Miami, New York and Latin America. Posada escaped from a Venezuela prison after his acquittal by a military court, while awaiting retrial.

Adriana Bosch said she wanted her husband to be remembered not by the accusations he had faced, but as a great father, husband and medical doctor by training who had spent much of his life fighting for the liberation of Cuba from communism.

Legendary status: Minico's Gosnell head for hall of fame

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The final bell rang and students filed out of Doug Gosnell's health class at Minico High School.

A little bit later, a fellow teacher entered the classroom with her young son, and upon seeing Gosnell speaking with a newspaper reporter explained to the boy, "Mr. Gosnell is being interviewed because he is a football legend."

Gosnell humbly downplays the compliment, but this fall his legendary status will be set in stone.

The Antioch Sports Legends Hall of Fame in Antioch, Calif., recently announced that Gosnell is part of its 2011 class and will be inducted this October.

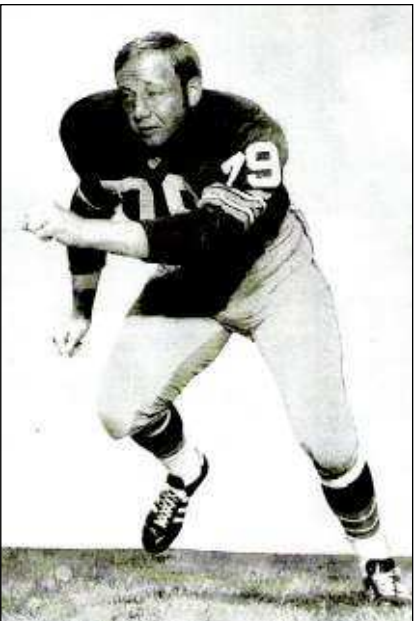

"I'm quite honored and humbled that they would pick me," said Gosnell, who is currently Minico's offensive line coach.

Gosnell attended Antioch High School, where he was all-conference, all-county and lineman of the year. After graduation in 1964, he went to Utah State, where he became a team captain and heralded defensive tackle. He earned the nickname Huey, after the cartoon character, because he once wore a diaper to school on a dare.

When his college days were done, Gosnell was selected by the Green Bay Packers in the eighth round of the NFL draft. Having just won back-to-back Super Bowls, the Packers weren't in much need for new players, so Gosnell was released one month into camp. He then played a season with the Spokane Shockers of the

The Canyon Ridge softball team waited until the last minute to squeak out this win.

The Riverhawks scored four runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to stun Filer 5-4 in Twin Falls on Wednesday afternoon.

"I guess that's why you play seven innings, huh?" said Canyon Ridge coach Lyle Hudelson.

Trailing 4-1, Canyon Ridge brought up the bottom of its order in the seventh inning. Kylee Barker hit a one-out single and leadoff hitter Brinlee Miller reached on a fielder's choice. With two outs, Kim Bollinger and Karly Hudelson hit back-to-back RBI doubles and Kylee Kuest followed with a single to score Hudelson, who was the tying run.

Emma Stephens and Lauren Shotwell both singled to load the bases for third baseman Courtney Cunningham, who hit the game-winning single.

"We finally decided to play in the seventh inning and we got the bats going and were able to get the win," Lyle Hudelson said. "Filer played a great game today."

Cunningham finished 2-for-4 at the plate, Kuest was 3-for-3 with two RBIs and Karly Hudelson finished with a triple, a double and an RBI.

Kaitlyn Mansfield hit a double for Filer.

The Riverhawks (15-4, 10-2 Great Basin Conference) face Wood River (8-8, 7-2 GBC) on Friday to begin a key Great Basin Conference series that will determine district tournament seeding.

"It's the end of the season, everybody is getting tired and there is some work we still need to do but we're looking forward to wrapping up the season with Wood River and playing in the district tournament," Coach Hudelson said. "This is what you play for. We'll just have to see what team shows up for us."

NFL draft uncertainty increased by lockout

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The NFL draft always is a guessing game. Never has it been accompanied by so much uncertainty.

Not just who will go first overall — the betting favorite is Heisman Trophy winner Cam Newton — but who goes where and when beyond that. Will the Patriots trade down again and again, as they always seem to do? Or will the Jets trade up, as they normally do?

This year, the selection process has the added element of players being locked out by owners, and a judge temporarily blocking the lockout earlier this week. Should the league be forced to reopen for business before or during the draft, the result could be even more chaos.

"The world doesn't stop spinning, we have to keep running and working," Baylor guard Danny Watkins said Wednesday. "It's just disappointing the timing of it, but

Judge denies request to freeze ruling

By Dave Campbell
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The NFL is falling behind in its court fight with the players over the future of the $9 billion business.

The federal judge who lifted the lockout two days ago dealt another blow to the league late Wednesday, denying its request to put her ruling on hold pending appeals and guaranteeing more limbo for the 32 teams, thousands of players and millions of fans.

U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson wrote that the NFL "has not met its burden for a stay pending appeal, expedited or otherwise." She dismissed the NFL's argument that she didn't have jurisdiction and that it is facing irreparable harm because of her decision to end the 45-day lockout.

"The world of 'chaos' the NFL claims it has been thrust into — essentially the 'free-market' system this nation otherwise willfully operates under — is not compelled by this court's order," Nelson wrote.

And yet chaos there may be, perhaps as early as today — the first day of the NFL draft.

James Quinn, a lawyer for the players, said free agency — perhaps the biggest question for owners and Something strange greeted the golfers at the Canyon Ridge Invitational on Wednesday.

Sunshine. And very little wind.

Durant scores 41, Thunder close out Nuggets

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Durant matched his best playoff performance with 41 points, including the final nine for Oklahoma City, and the Thunder closed out their first-round series against the Denver Nuggets with a 100-97 victory in Game 5 on Wednesday night.

The Thunder overcame a nine-point deficit in the final 4 minutes, and Durant provided all the offense down the stretch to send the Oklahoma City franchise to its first playoff series win since it was still in Seattle in 2005.

Durant put the Thunder ahead to stay on two free throws with 46 seconds left. Serge Ibaka then swatted Nene's dunk attempt for his ninth block of the game.

Durant then added a 19-foot jumper to put the Thunder up 100-97 with 12 seconds left.

SPURS 110, GRIZZLIES 103, OT

SAN ANTONIO — Gary Neal caught an inbound pass with 1.7 seconds left and forced overtime with a 3-point heave as time expired, and San Antonio staved off elimination.

Neal's straightaway 3-pointer was the second of two remarkable San Antonio baskets in the final 2.2 seconds of regulation. Manu Ginobili, who scored 33 points, hit the other with a long corner jumper while falling out of bounds to keep top-seeded San Antonio alive.

The basket was originally counted as a 3 that would have tied the score, but the officials went to video review and ruled Ginobili's toe was on the line.

The eighth-seeded Grizzlies lead the best-of-seven series 3-2 and they will host the Spurs on Friday night.

HEAT 97, 76ERS 91

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade scored 26 points, Chris Bosh added 22 points and 11 rebounds, and Miami advanced to the Eastern Conference semifinals by beating Philadelphia 97-91 in Game 5 on Wednesday night.

Mario Chalmers scored 20 points and LeBron James finished with 16 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists for Miami. Joel Anthony made two free throws with 16.8 seconds left for the Heat, who will face Boston starting Sunday in Miami.

It was the first series win for the Heat since the 2006 NBA finals.

CSI's Kearsley, Hardison headed to four-year programs

Kearsley

Hardison

The Colorado State University-Pueblo women's basketball team struggled to rebound last season, but coach Kip Drown expects that to change for one reason: Laurel Kearsley.

Kearsley, a two-time NJCAA All-American at the College of Southern Idaho, signed with CSU-Pueblo this week.

"She is a very versatile player who can score on the block, step out and knock down the 3 and runs the floor very well," Drown said in a school release. "She will give us a major upgrade to our rebounding, which we need badly."

Gosnell

Continental Football League.

In 1970, Gosnell got another shot in the NFL with the Kansas City Chiefs, but was cut after six weeks in camp. He then decided to hang up his shoulder pads and pursue a master’s degree and a career in education.

“I banged noses with some pretty good guys, but I didn’t make the teams,” said Gosnell, rattling off the names of all-pros and hall-of-famers with whom he briefly played.

While at USU, Gosnell met Kathy Stocks, who would become his wife of 41 years. After football, the couple moved to Kathy’s hometown of Rupert and in 1973 Gosnell took a job at Minico teaching special education and coaching football. The Gosnells have one daughter, Stacey Gosnell, who currently has a law practice in Jerome and serves as a public defender in Jerome County.

When Tim Perrigot was hired as Minico’s head coach 15 years ago, one of the first things he did was make sure Gosnell remained part of the staff.

“He means a lot to our program and to our kids, and he’s well respected in the community,” Perrigot said. “He’s the rock of our program.”

Perrigot said Gosnell maintains a good balance between tough football coach and caring mentor to youth.

“He’s the biggest teddy bear in our program. A lot of people don’t know that about him,” Perrigot said. “He’s such a loving and giving person. He’s pretty special that way and I think that’s why kids play for him and they respect him because they know deep down he loves them.”

While coaching kids at Minico, Gosnell doesn’t tout many of his personal playing experiences. But he does tell two stories to help motivate players.

When it comes to fundamentals, he tells about his first day of practice with the Packers. Lined up between two all-pro guards, the coach began with, “This is how you get into a stance.” If it’s good for NFL players to work on the basics, Gosnell said, it must be good for high school athletes.

The other story involves the great Ray Nitschke, who once told Gosnell, “The job is yours if you want it bad enough, rookie.”

“You always wonder, what if I had tried a little bit harder?” Gosnell said. “I don’t regret any of it, but you have these coulda, woulda, shoulda thoughts. I try to tell that to these kids, ‘Don’t be a frustrated old man thinking maybe I could have been really good if I had tried harder.’”

Gosnell retired from teaching in 2002, but has since returned part-time to teach a few health classes and coach football.

“I just love the game a lot. One of the reasons I stayed in coaching is, I don’t care if a kid becomes a great football player, I want him to become a useful citizen, a good father and have respect and integrity. That’s what football gave me,” he said. “Because of football, I’ve been able to do what I’ve accomplished. I want kids to respect the game and play the game the way it should be played: with heart, desire and will.”

Jones, Braves cruise past Padres

SAN DIEGO — Chipper Jones hit a two-run triple and finished with three RBIs as the Atlanta Braves beat San Diego 7-0 Wednesday, leaving Padres ace Mat Latos winless since September.

Jones moved out of a tie with Mickey Mantle and into sole possession of second place among switch-hitters with 1,512 RBIs. Hall of Famer Eddie Murray tops the list at 1,917.

Braves starter Tommy Hanson (3-3) struck out 10 and walked only one in seven innings and combined with two relievers on a four-hit-ter.

PHILLIES 8, DIAMONDBACKS 4

PHOENIX — Jimmy Rollins homered and had three RBIs and Cole Hamels pitched seven solid innings to help Philadelphia avoid a three-game sweep.

PIRATES 2, GIANTS 0

PITTSBURGH — James McDonald pitched six sharp innings for his first victory of the season to lead Pittsburgh.

McDonald (1-2) allowed four hits and four walks while striking out three, and Chris Snyder and Jose Tabata each singled in a run for the Pirates.

METS 6, NATIONALS 3

WASHINGTON — Daniel Murphy delivered a game-tying, pinch-hit homer in the eighth inning right after Jose Reyes was ruled out at third base on a disputed call, then added a two-run double in the ninth, helping New York win its sixth straight.

Atlanta Braves players Freddie Freeman and Nate McLouth high-five after scoring in the Braves' five-run second inning against the San Diego Padres Wednesday in San Diego.

CARDINALS 6, ASTROS 5

HOUSTON — Kyle Lohse pitched another gem, Matt Holliday and Tyler Greene both homered and St. Louis held off a late rally by Houston.

DODGERS 5, MARLINS 4, 10 INNINGS

MIAMI — Andre Ethier extended his hitting streak to 24 games in the fourth inning, then homered in the 10th to help Los Angeles salvage the finale of the three-game series.

Ethier led off the 10th and homered on a 1-1 pitch from Brian Sanches (3-1), ending the right-hander’s streak of 13 2-3 scoreless innings to start the season.

REDS 7, BREWERS 6, 10 INNINGS

MILWAUKEE — Drew Stubbs hit a solo homer in the 10th inning and Joey Votto drove in four runs to lead Cincinnati.

AMERICAN LEAGUE YANKEES 3, WHITE SOX 1

NEW YORK — Bartolo Colon looked like the ace of old, shutting down the Chicago White Sox over eight crisp innings, and Robinson Cano hit an early three-run homer to give the New York Yankees a 3-1 victory Wednesday night.

ATHLETICS 2, ANGELS 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Cliff Pennington opened the 10th inning with a triple off the glove of left fielder Vernon Wells and the Athletics went on to beat the Angels, avoiding a three-game sweep.

MARINERS 10, TIGERS 1

DETROIT — Erik Bedard pitched seven impressive innings for his first win since June 2009, and Justin Smoak homered and drove in a career-high five runs to help the Mariners rout the Tigers.

Smoak has homered in consecutive games after missing a week following the death of his father. His three-run shot in the first gave Seattle an early lead, and Bedard (1-4) made it hold up.

INDIANS 7, ROYALS 2

CLEVELAND — Orlando Cabrera’s three-run double in the first inning made things easier for Cleveland starter Josh Tomlin and the AL Central-leading Indians won their ninth straight at home, over the slumping Royals.

ORIOLES 5, RED SOX 4

BALTIMORE — Derrick Lee had three hits and scored the tiebreaking run on an eighth-inning single by Vladimir Guerrero, giving the Orioles a victory over the Red Sox.

RANGERS 7, BLUE JAYS 6

ARLINGTON, Texas — Mitch Moreland led off the seventh inning with a tiebreaking home run against Octavio Dotel, lifting the Rangers to a victory over the Blue Jays.

RAVS 8, TWINS 2

MINNEAPOLIS — At snowy Target Field, Ben Zobrist tripled and drove in three runs as Tampa Bay pounded Francisco Liriano in a victory over Minnesota.

Temperatures dipped below 40 degrees during the game and flurries turned the ballpark into a late-April snow globe.

Bruins edge Canadiens in OT to advance

BOSTON — Nathan Horton scored 5:43 into overtime to give the Boston Bruins a 4-3 victory over the Montreal Canadiens on Wednesday night in Game 7 of their first-round playoff series.

The Bruins will play the Philadelphia Flyers in the Eastern Conference semifinals for the second consecutive year.

Tim Thomas stopped 34 shots for the Bruins, who recovered after losing the first two games of the series at home.

Boston had never won a playoff series after trailing 0-2 in 26 tries.

Carey Price stopped 30 shots for Montreal, which erased deficits of 2-0 and 3-2 in Game 7.

LIGHTNING 1, PENGUINS 0

PITTSBURGH — Dwayne Roloson made 36 saves for his second NHL playoff shutout, Sean Bergenheim scored, and Tampa Bay completed a big series comeback and eliminated Pittsburgh with a shutout win in Game 7.

Roloson became the second goalie to go 6-0 in elimination games. He allowed only four goals in winning the final three games as Tampa Bay erased a 3-1 series deficit. The fifth-seeded Lightning will face the top-seeded Washington Capitals in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

The Penguins lost their second consecutive Game 7.

Mr. Arkoosh intends to file an application for original license for a new 1.23 megawatt water project. The 25-Apr filing includes a Request to Use the Traditional Licensing Process (TLP) for FERC licensing. The Request to use the TLP is based on the expectation that project impacts would be small and that adequate existing information is available to assess project impacts. All filed materials are available for public inspection at the Lincoln County Library in Shoshone, ID. Any comments on the request to use the TLP should be filed electronically with FERC pursuant to §385.2003(c); alternatively an original and eight copies of comments should be mailed to: Secretary, FERC, 888 First St NE, Washington, DC 20426. Comments are due by 25-May-2011. These comments should address: (A) likelihood of timely license issuance; (B) complexity of resource issues; (C) level of anticipated controversy; (D) relative cost of traditional licensing process compared to integrated licensing process; (E) the amount of available information and potential for disputes over studies; (F) other factors believed to be pertinent. FERC and/or Mr. Arkoosh will issue subsequent notices soliciting public participation during the licensing process.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Once they were not, and now they are not, and this is the sum we know.
Orderly range the seasons due, and orderly roll the stars."
— Cosmo Monkhouse

English International Gunnar Hallberg is a fertile source of interesting and unusual material. Having had a successful career as a Swedish International, he moved to England more than a decade ago and has enjoyed great success there. In fact, in the last three years he has won two senior world-team titles.

Unlike most modern-day experts, Hallberg has had his nerves hardened in the crucible of high-stake rubber bridge games. At TGR's bridge club in London, where this hand arose, the auction was more sophisticated than you might expect, but the contract excellent.

West led the spade jack against the heart slam, and although there are various possible routes home, South had to focus on the real danger to his slam. With only a jack-high spade suit for his overcall, West rates to have a six-carder and, if allowed in with the heart ace, can give his partner a spade ruff.

At the table South won the lead with the spade king in hand, cashed the diamond ace to unblock the suit, then played the club ace and another club, ruffed in dummy.

Now came the key play of the diamond king, on which the spade four was discarded from hand. Declarer continued on crossruff lines, and the only trick that the defenders were able to take was the trump ace.

If declarer follows the knee-jerk reaction of winning the spade lead and drawing trumps at once, he runs into a spade ruff for down one.

ANSWER: It is almost impossible for your side to make game here, since your partner produced only a minimum action and did not jump. Nonetheless, you should raise to two spades to show a suitable hand for partner, helping him decide what to do if the opponents compete to the three-level.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I shop in an upscale shoe store. On the past two visits there, a middle-aged salesman kissed my wife's hand when we left. I was surprised but not offended, considering it to be nothing more than an old-fashioned expression of courtesy. The man is knowledgeable, helpful and honest. My wife, however, disagrees. She says his gesture is forward and inappropriate and that I should resent it. Who's right?

— T.R. IN HOUSTON

DEAR T.R.: You are. The kiss-on-the-hand routine may be part of the man's sales technique. If he has done it before and your wife had no objection, then it's not surprising he did it a second time. What would she like you to do — challenge him to a duel? If she felt the gesture was inappropriate, then she shouldn't have offered her hand to him a second time.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will share the following tips for dealing with orphaned or injured wildlife. Once people understand how to handle an encounter with an injured animal they will make safe decisions and possibly have a positive impact on nature:

1. The animal may NOT be orphaned! Deer leave their babies hidden in clumps of bushes or tall grass while they search for food. A baby bird that has fallen from the nest can be gently picked up and returned.

2. If you find an orphaned or injured animal, be very cautious. Frightened animals and animals in pain will bite. Opossums, raccoons and other mammals can carry rabies.

3. Do not bring the animal inside to nurse it back to health and keep as a pet. It will probably need the care of a veterinarian, and it's illegal in most states to keep a native species without a license. Contact a wildlife rehabilitation center. Your local park service can point you to the nearest rehab center.

4. After any contact with an injured/orphaned animal, wash your hands and change your clothing as soon as possible. You don't know what germs the animal may be carrying.

5. Teach children about local wildlife. If they find an animal that is sick or injured, make sure they know they should tell an adult right away.

6. You CAN make a difference. Severely injured animals may not be able to return to the wild, but many rehab centers keep them as display animals and use them to teach the public more about them. Unless you are a veterinarian, you cannot accurately determine if an animal will survive or not. Animals that really have no chance will be humanely euthanized instead of left to suffer, which in a case like that, is the kindest thing that can be done.

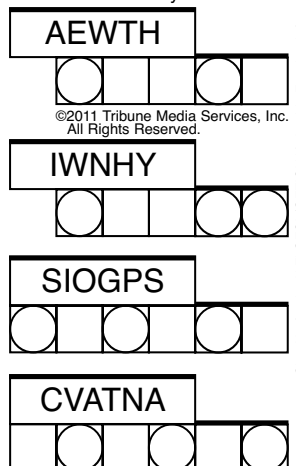

— CARLY IN RICHMOND HEIGHTS, OHIO

DEAR CARLY: I hope my animal-loving readers will give your letter the consideration it deserves, because it highlights the fact that sometimes people — with the best of intentions — can cause more harm than good. If you encounter an injured animal, the wisest thing

Today is Thursday, April 28, the 118th day of 2011. There are 247 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On April 28, 1789, the mutiny on HMS Bounty took place as the crew of the British ship set Capt. William Bligh and 18 sailors adrift in a launch in the South Pacific. (Bligh and most of the men with him managed to reach Timor in 47 days.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1758, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, was born in Westmoreland County, Va.

In 1788, Maryland became the seventh state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1817, the United States and Britain signed the Rush-Bagot Treaty, which limited the number of naval vessels allowed in the Great Lakes.

In 1918, Gavril Princip, the assassin of Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria and the archduke's wife, Sophie, died in prison of tuberculosis.

In 1945, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and his mistress, Clara Petacci, were executed by Italian partisans as they attempted to flee the country.

In 1952, war with Japan officially ended as a treaty signed in San Francisco the year before took effect. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower resigned as Supreme Allied commander in Europe; he was succeeded by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway.

In 1967, heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali refused to be inducted into the Army, the same day General William C. Westmoreland told Congress the U.S. "would prevail in Vietnam."

In 1974, a federal jury in New York acquitted former Attorney General John Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans of charges in connection with a secret $200,000 contribution to President Richard Nixon's re-election campaign from financier Robert Vesco.

In 1988, a flight attendant was killed and more than 60 persons injured when part of the roof of an Aloha Airlines Boeing 737 tore off during a flight from Hilo to Honolulu.

In 1996, a man armed with a semiautomatic rifle opened fire on tourists on the Australian island of Tasmania, killing 35 people; Martin Bryant was captured by police after a 12-hour standoff at a guest cottage. (Bryant is serving a life prison sentence.)

Ten years ago: A Russian rocket lifted off from Central Asia bearing the first space tourist, California businessman Dennis Tito, and two cosmonauts on a journey to the international space station.

Five years ago: Storms battered eastern Texas with wind up to 100 miles-an-hour and hail the size of baseballs. Attorneys for Rush Limbaugh, who'd been accused by Florida prosecutors of "doctor shopping" for painkillers, announced a deal under which a single prescription fraud charge against the talk show host would be dismissed after 18 months provided he stayed drug-free and didn't violate any laws.
