Arellano sent to prison

Burley man will serve at least 22 years for shooting estranged wife

Times-News writer

BURLEY — Juan Manuel Arellano will serve at least 22 years in state prison for the death of his estranged wife, whom he fatally shot last year.

Cassia County 5th District Judge Michael Crabtree on Thursday ordered Arellano, 41, to a life sentence with the possibility for parole, bringing some closure to the death of Ramona “Monica” Arellano. Juan Arellano used a 9 mm pistol to shoot his 32-year-old estranged wife at the El Paralito bar in Burley on May 29, 2010, after he found her dancing with another man.

“I apologize to my wife’s family, to my family and to my children,” Arellano said through his court interpreter. “If I could take it all back, I would. I know I did something wrong. I ask my littlest son for forgiveness.”

Crabtree allowed Arellano credit for time served, a total of 334 days. The judge also ordered Arellano to pay a civil penalty of $5,000 to the couple’s children. Arellano will also face an order of restitution, in part to the Idaho Crime Victims Compensation fund, although the final amount was not determined at sentencing. A separate hearing will be scheduled to address the final amount.

Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus said he was prepared to go to trial and show that the murder was pre-meditated, and that a text message sent by Arellano earlier in the day warning of the killing proves pre-meditation. Defense counsel Kent Jensen disagreed, arguing

STATEWIDE TOUR

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna fields questions during Thursday’s stop during his post-legislative tour of the state at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science in Twin Falls.

Luna: Local control is the key

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

With the Legislature’s work done, Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna said Thursday that the work to bring education reform to Idaho now largely rests on individual school districts’ shoulders.

Luna’s 2011 post-legislative tour passed through Twin Falls on Thursday, as the public schools chief and his staff met with local educators to start the implementation process of his “Students Come First” reform package. After attending the daylong meeting, Luna and members of his staff met with the Times-News’ editorial board and a reporter to discuss where Idaho stands as it toes the starting line of school reform.

Initiating change

Luna repeatedly said Thursday that as Idaho voters express disinterest in raising taxes, the Gem State’s education can’t continue to exist in its current form while sustaining the current onslaught of annual budget cuts.

But with Luna’s reform comes a shift of state funding away from teaching positions and toward technology. Luna said the plan leaves many of the decisions on how that shift will take place, along with how an increased emphasis on online classes will come about, up to local school districts. He said school districts may choose to coordinate with each other to review changes and cost-cutting techniques.

Classroom technology

In the fall, school districts will begin to see more technology creeping into their classrooms in the form of handheld clickers that work with computer programs,

Pension system lost money in 2009

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

As the economic crisis emerged in the United States, Idaho’s public pension system lost money in fiscal year 2009. But the state’s program still fared better than the national average, according to U.S. Census figures released this week.

All of the nation’s state public retirement programs combined shrunk by $641.3 billion, which comes to an average 24 percent drop in holdings and assets. The Public Employee Retirement System of Idaho, in contrast, dropped by only 16 percent, according to its report for fiscal year 2009.

“We want to assure that PERSI remains stable and secure ...”

R-Twin Falls

PERSI funds retirement for state employees, public school teachers and other public-sector workers like those at community colleges, cities and counties.

In 2009, both the nation and the state fell victim to the plummeting markets that retirement programs invest into. The state’s pension fund ended the fiscal year with a balance of $9.07 billion, with a loss of $1.75 billion, according to a PERSI annual report.

The state’s report says measures like avoiding hedge funds and requiring independent, third-party daily pricing of securities have helped the fund avoid an even worse hit.

Idaho’s system, unlike other states, doesn’t include health care in its benefits package, which has helped its fund, said state Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls and vice-chairman of the House Commerce and Human Resources Committee, which deals with PERSI-related issues.

“We want to assure that PERSI remains stable and secure, and it provides a steady paycheck that people can count on all of their retirement years,” Hartgen said. “State employees do not have any cause to be worried.”

The Legislature this year held off on making major changes to the pension fund. But options such as switching to a system

JEROME — With the purchase of the former Washington School building, Heritage Academy Public Charter School is one step closer to opening its doors in the fall.

Heritage officials recently entered into a $350,000 purchase agreement with Magic Valley Christian School to receive not only the building, but also the desks and supplies left when the latter closed in January.

The 21,000-square-foot building at 500 S. Lincoln Ave. has thirteen classrooms, office space, a cafeteria and a playground area.

Many reasons to attend, vend at Women’s Expo, participants explain

By Sky Buffat
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — More than 200 participants and vendors filled the Convention Center at the Best Western Burley Inn Thursday, for the annual Women’s Seminar and Expo presented by the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce.

Participants were able to wander through more than 50 vendor booths between taking in three scheduled speakers and two fashion shows.

“This is different than any other event we do,” Chamber Executive Director Kae Cameron said. “It’s a great opportunity for women to come and share one another’s camaraderie, or to get out of the office.”

The event is always held the day after Administrative Professionals Day, with many local business owners gifting the event to their assistants.

Prizes are a big part of the expo’s appeal. Most every vendor table offered those passing by the chance to enter a drawing or get in on a promotional price.

“My business is open because of the Chamber of Commerce,” said Janette Baker, owner of Skin Care Spa in Burley. “I had opened my doors just two months before the expo last year and afterwards, my business took off!”

Other vendors expressed the same excitement towards the results they see from participation in the Women’s Expo.

Katrina Shiner of Shiner Photography said traffic to her website and Facebook page spikes significantly following the expo. Women standing around her booth admired accordion-style mini albums showcasing wallet-sized senior portraits, busily filling out entry forms to win the chance to have Shiner take their next family photo.

David and Barbara Lind of David Lind Painting participated in the Women’s Expo for the first time this year. The husband-and-wife team have painted professionally together for 10 years.

“Usually we get business through word-of-mouth,” Barbara Lind said. “With the economy being what is has been lately, we decided we’d try to get our name out a little more.”

Those attending the expo ranged from high school students attending as a class group to little old ladies browsing the tables while leaning on canes.

As she bounced her baby in her arms, Mandi Clark of Albion said she came to the Expo with a friend to have a day out.

“It got me away from half my kids and gave me some good shopping tips,” Clark said.

“I’m just really impressed,” first-time attendee Susan Besens said. “I wouldn’t have expected so many vendors.”

Participants paid a $15 registration, which included all parts of the event and lunch.

“I just can’t believe all the work that’s been put in and everyone involved,” said first-time attendee Lanette Dockter of Rupert. “I’m impressed with such a great turnout — it’s been informative and fun. Plus, now I have a lifetime supply of pens!”

more similar to a private 401(k) may be considered in the future, Hartgen said.

Another option to consider in the future is a bill that died this year that would have closed what some lawmakers consider a loophole. It allows state lawmakers who move from the Legislature into a full-time state job to count their time as an elected official toward what their pension will be after retirement.

Some contend that system needs to be fixed because it allows former lawmakers to count their work while part-time citizen legislators as full-time years of service after they shift to a full-time state job.

Heyburn backs fundraiser for Mountain View food program

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN — The Heyburn City Council granted permission Wednesday for Mountain View Christian Center to hold a fundraiser in Riverside Park.

The June 18 event will help cover fuel costs for the church’s food distribution program, said Pastor Jim Powell. The fundraiser will happen in conjunction with the local trials for the World Champion Dutch Oven Cook Off — participants offered their services to the church.

The church will charge for dinner after the trials, but Powell said he has ordered 3,000 pounds of chicken for free sampling. The council waived the park fees for the event.

Also Wednesday:

• The council heard details of Operation Facelift, an effort planned June 13-18 by the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization to spruce up businesses across the Magic Valley. Cities are encouraged to organize volunteer-driven projects as simple as washing windows or as complicated as removing unsightly buildings. Councilwoman Leann Smith asked that a committee be organized to run the effort in Heyburn.

• Tony Morley, Minidoka County community development administrator, gave a presentation on the need for a building appeals board, as required in county code. The board would be made up of local residents with solid experience in the building process, and would provide a resource for people who did not agree with county decisions such as building methods. He said he would return in a month to see what the council thinks about it.

• Polling-place hours were changed from noon to 8 p.m. to a new schedule of 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

• The council also granted a fee waiver for Riverside Park for the Idaho International Dance and Music Festival on July 29.

Marines get trained on accepting gay recruits

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — Marine instructor Maj. Daryl Desimone stood before an auditorium filled with fatigue-clad troops, carrying an unequivocal message: It’s OK to disagree with letting gays serve openly in the military. It’s not OK to disobey orders.

He explained that the impending repeal of “don’t ask, don’t tell” is an order, one heard by generals and rank-and-file alike as the military tries to change the culture of a traditionally conservative institution.

Only a few of the roughly 150 Marines stepped up to ask questions. One stood up from a back row and demanded to know why his religious beliefs were being “put aside” in favor of gays, forcing him to “basically grit my teeth and bear it.”

discussion,” Desimone said. “Nobody’s trying to change your mind.”

Sexual orientation will now be a private matter, just like religion or politics, he said.

Sgt. Jay Milinichik, of Tulsa, Okla., stood up to ask what would happen if a Marine refused gay roommates.

Marines won’t have separate barracks or showers based on sexual orientation, Desimone said. He added that signing up for the Marines comes with an expectation of less privacy.

That said, officers may decide to separate roommates to preserve peace, just like they do now when roommates argue.

Marines will not be allowed an early discharge for opposing the policy but exceptions will be considered, Desimone said.

“You can’t just walk up and say, ‘I don’t like this. I’m outa here,’” he said.

Classes like Thursday’s for the Combat Logistics Regiment 17 of the 1st Marine Logistics Group are being held at military bases around the world. The Marines expect to finish training by June 1, with all military branches done by summer’s end.

The repeal of the 17-year “don’t ask, don’t tell” policy would go into effect 60 days after the president, defense secretary and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff certify that lifting the ban won’t hurt the military’s ability to fight.

Gen. James Amos, the Marine Corps commandant, testified last year that permitting gays to openly serve could disrupt smaller combat units and distract leaders from preparing for battle.

When he appeared this month before the House Armed Services Committee, he said he had been looking for problems that might arise under the new policy and hadn’t found any “recalcitrant pushback.”

“There has not been the anxiety over it from the forces in the field,” he said.

In small group discussions, Marines are being asked to consider their reactions to a wide range of scenarios, from seeing a member “hanging around” a gay bar to hearing locker-room jokes from others who refuse to shower in front of gays.

There is nothing wrong with “hanging around” a gay bar, the training materials state.

The officer who witnesses the loud locker-room banter aimed at gays and lesbians should remind the Marines any discrimination or harassment is inappropriate.

Smartboards and tech-based professional development.

Over the next five years, students and teachers will receive laptops to provide a more “vibrant and engaged” classroom. Technological support for the mobile computing devices will come from the computer vendors, Luna said, adding that funding for information technology support won’t fall upon individual school districts.

“We’re not creating a program that will shift its burden to local schools,” Luna said. “It’s buying a service rather than a product.”

IEA lawsuit

In response to the lawsuit filed Wednesday by the Idaho Education Association and five other plaintiffs against Senate Bill 1108 — part of his reform package — Luna said the plaintiffs’ challenge against the elimination of teachers’ early retirement bonuses and tenure for new teachers, and changes to contract negotiations, does nothing to put students first.

The future of Idaho education

Luna said he envisions providing Idaho educators a workplace in which to-fill positions.

“It’s not stale. It’s not stagnant, and kids look forward to going to school every day,” he said.

Two vie for Kimberly school board

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — In the race for Kimberly School Board zone 4, a familiar face is pitted against a newcomer to the board.

Voters will have the choice of Dave Fullmer, 55, or Kyle D. Fisher, 50, for the seat in the May 17 election.

After 10 years on the school board, Fullmer seeks to make the upcoming term his last.

“My predecessor served 12 years,” he said. “It would give me a great deal of pride to see Kimberly through some tough times.”

Fullmer, born and raised in Kimberly, said he saw careful management of the district’s budget, straining under cuts and a poor economy, as a core focus of the job.

In his current tenure, Fullmer said he’s focused on thrift, efficiency and supporting the district employees he works with. If elected, he would continue those efforts.

“I want to continue to support and encourage the Kimberly School District,” he said.

Fullmer credited careful management with a projected surplus for the end of this school year. He said he hopes that staying that course could allow the district to lower the rate of a supplemental levy that district patrons approved for long-term building.

Newcomer Fisher hopes to bring his background in social work and the juvenile court system to a position on the board. Employed with Jerome County Juvenile Probation, he has also chaired the 5th Judicial District Juvenile Justice Council for about three years and is also vice president of the Idaho Juvenile Justice Administrators Association.

“I decided to run because some of my background and some of my experience would be helpful to the board,” he said.

Fisher said his previous experience working with budgets would help him tackle the school district’s financials. In addition to the budget, Fisher said if elected he will focus on addressing the needs of Kimberly’s students.

“Kids have been the focus of my life,” he said.

With two daughters who are alumnae of the Kimberly school system and one currently hitting the books as a high-school sophomore, Fisher said he is familiar with and fond of the Kimberly School District.

Fisher and Fullmer are facing off for the only contested Kimberly board seat. In zone 5, incumbent Myron Nield is unopposed.

An inmate at the Blaine County Detention Center in Hailey died late Wednesday night, days after an attempted suicide.

The Blaine County Sheriff’s Office reported that Matthew Wayne Cherry, 35, of Hailey, was booked into jail on April 23 for domestic battery and attempted strangulation charges. On Monday, another inmate reported to jail deputies that Cherry was trying to kill himself in his cell, but deputies were able to revive him and transport him to St.

Cherry died at Saint Alphonsus late Wednesday. An investigation is pending.

Accused shooter wants to change plea to not guilty

Markcus May claims he’s not guilty, months after pleading guilty to shooting a Buhl man and running from police.

The 26-year-old Buhl man filed a motion to withdraw a guilty plea late last week, barely three months after he signed a plea deal with the Twin Falls County Prosecutor’s Office.

He is accused of shooting a man in Buhl in May 2010 and fleeing the scene in an automobile, leading police on a high-speed chase. May was shot by a Filer police officer during his apprehension.

The deal, filed on Jan. 27, called for May to plead guilty to aggravated battery with a weapons enhancement and an amended plea of eluding an officer. He signed it in exchange for a sentence of 10 to 30 years in state prison. The brief filed to explain his decision to withdraw the guilty plea states that May was pressured by a previous attorney to accept the deal.

“Defendant claims that he did not fully understand what he was doing and the repercussions,” according to the brief.

May is currently represented by Williams Law Office of Twin Falls.

Twin Falls County 5th District Judge G. Richard Bevan will hear the argument on Thursday afternoon.

Obama looks at immigration

WASHINGTON (AP) — His immigration overhaul stalled, President Barack Obama is enlisting an array of voices, including Latino entertainment and media stars, to help jump-start legislation and reassure crucial but restless Hispanic voters that he has not abandoned his campaign pledge to change the law.

Obama’s political advisers see tremendous potential in a growing Latino electorate. But Obama, who won 67 percent of the Latino vote in 2008, faces a disenchanted Latino community, angry over a record number of deportations and an impasse on re-vamping immigration laws, and fearful of tough state immigration laws such as one passed in Arizona.

On Thursday, the president invited a dozen influential Spanish-language television anchors and radio personalities as well as comely Latino actresses who have been active in Hispanic causes. Among the high-profile Latinos was Eddie “Piolin” Sotelo, who in 2006 helped mobilize hundreds of thousands of protesters in Los Angeles and across the nation against enforcement-only immigration proposals. Others at the White House were actresses Eva Longoria and America Ferrera.

Friday night lights no longer a sure thing across Valley

The Jerome School Board this week spiked Superintendent Dale Layne’s proposed pay-to-play scheme for extracurricular activities, opting instead to fill a budget hole from the district’s maintenance and operation fund.

But in one form or another, Layne’s idea will be back — if not in Jerome then in other small Magic Valley school districts.

The reason is simple: While all Idaho districts are struggling with declining state revenues, small districts are up against it — and that’s a trend likely to accelerate in the next few years.

During the board’s monthly meeting, Jerome High School athletic director Ty Jones explained that the proposed fee structure was on a sliding scale based on the activity’s burden to the transportation budget.

High school basketball players, for instance, could expect to pay more than speech participants because of more frequent road trips. The proposed fee would have been capped at $75 per middle school student per activity, with high school students paying up to $100 per activity.

Layne’s goal was to generate $25,000. That’s money the district is doing without because of less state funding.

The superintendent estimated the need to cut upwards of $800,000 for the next school year, in addition to losing one-time money from the federal government used the last two years.

Other proposed measures included shuffling funds to balance the books, cutting multiple academic and extracurricular programs, several teachers and aides and around six activity coaches, mostly assistant high school athletic coaches.

Welcome to the new reality in many small Idaho districts.

What’s that got to do with student athletes, debaters and FFA members? Just this: In most districts during the next few years, extra dollars such as those the Jerome School Board was able to find in maintenance and operations won’t be available.

In the Jerome School District, 69 percent of students live in households poor enough that they qualify for federally-subsidized free or low price lunches. In the Minidoka County School District, it’s also 69 percent. In the Shoshone School District, it’s 72 percent.

So sooner probably than later, students whose parents don’t have the means to pay higher fees won’t be participating.

That would mean a slow erosion of high school activities and, perhaps, the rise of club sports — in which only those who can pay would participate.

A year ago, the Mackay School District in eastern Idaho was just a supplemental levy election away from scrapping all its extracurricular programs. Expect more small districts to be in the same position this summer.

A sea change is coming to small-town Idaho because there are fewer dollars to go around for public schools. Hard decisions are coming, up to and including consolidation with other districts.

And one of those decisions may leave Magic Valley football fields dark on Friday nights.

Billy and Kate: Wedding of the ... what?

Count me among the abstainers. I won’t be watching over-the-top media coverage of Friday’s wedding between Prince William and the “commoner” Kate Middleton.

Cal Thomas

After the “wedding of the century” of William’s mother and father in 1981 and the ensuing drama that led to their divorce in 1996 and, eventually, her death on Aug. 31, 1997, the wedding of their son is unlikely to match the earlier nuptials in pomp or circumstance.

Pete Broadbent, the bishop of Willesden in north-west London, demonstrated just how cynical we have become about these fairy tale weddings. Last November, the bishop compared the couple to “shallow celebrities.” He said their marriage is bound to fail. “I give the marriage seven years,” he wrote on his Facebook page. But he wasn’t through. He went on to trash Prince Charles and Princess Diana, saying of the media coverage of their wedding, “I managed to avoid the last disaster in slow motion between Big Ears and the Porcelain Doll, and I hope to avoid this one too.”

The bishop, an anti-monarchist, cited a history of “more broken marriages and philanderers among these (royals) than not. They cost us an arm and a leg. ... Talent isn’t passed on through people’s blood-stock. The hereditary principle is corrupt and sexist.”

After the pro-monarchy British press strongly criticized his remarks, the bishop issued an apology.

He may be on to something, though, at least when one considers statistics for people who shack up, as we used to say before the modern and less judgmental, “in a relationship.” Prince William and Kate have been living together in North Wales for several months.

How far the British have come from the days when Edward VIII was forced to give up the throne in 1936 to marry Wallis Simpson, a twice-divorced American socialite. See all about it depicted in this year’s best picture, The King’s Speech.

Once, women who married royalty had to prove their virginity. That included Lady Diana Spencer. Now they don’t even have to promise to “obey” their husbands, which Diana refused to do in her vows and Kate won’t do either. Why do we even call them “vows” anymore since they are so often broken? As defined by dictionary.com, a vow is, “a solemn promise, pledge, or personal commitment.”

A recent front page USA Today story noted, “Cohabitation has become almost a rite of passage before marriage...” Yes, and with many speed bumps. According to figures published in 2002 by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, “Cohabitation before the first marriage (is) associated with a greater chance of divorce.”

And why are William and Kate getting married in a church when they don’t appear to be regular churchgoers? The number of regulars at church in the UK has been in decline for years. According to a survey conducted in 2006 by Christian Research, a British think tank, only 6.3 percent faithfully attend services. Wouldn’t William and Kate be more representative of their country’s secular majority if a judge married them and they eschewed the religious trappings of Westminster Abbey?

At Charles and Diana’s wedding, The Right Honorable George Thomas, speaker of the House of Commons, read from what is often called “the love chapter,” 1 Corinthians 13. It is about love always being patient and kind, never envious, or proud and never failing. Love didn’t fail them; they failed love. That’s largely because too many define love as “a feeling” so when the “feeling” dies, the bond is broken.

I hope Bishop Broadbent is wrong. I hope I am wrong. I hope William and Kate really do live happily ever after, that their children and grandchildren never give them problems and that someone in the family will become king or queen. If the monarchy endures, that’s the only certainty it can provide.

When will they learn? Patients aren’t consumers

Last week, The New York Times reported on Congressional backlash against the Independent Payment Advisory Board, a key part of efforts to rein in health care costs. This backlash was predictable; it is also profoundly irresponsible, as I’ll explain in a minute.

But something else struck me as I looked at Republican arguments against the board, which hinge on the notion that what we really need to do, as the House budget proposal put it, is to “make government health care programs more responsive to consumer choice.”

Here’s my question: How did it become normal, or for that matter even acceptable, to refer to medical patients as “consumers”? The relationship between patient and doctor used to be considered something special, almost sacred. Now politicians and supposed reformers talk about the act of receiving care as if it were no different from a commercial transaction, like buying a car — and their only complaint is that it isn’t commercial enough.

What has gone wrong with us?

About that advisory board: We have to do something about health care costs, which means that we have to find a way to start saying no. In particular, given continuing medical innovation, we can’t maintain a system in which Medicare essentially pays for anything a doctor recommends. And that’s especially true when that blank-check approach is combined with a system that gives doctors and hospitals — who aren’t saints — a strong financial incentive to engage in excessive care.

Hence the advisory board, whose creation was mandated by last year’s health reform. The board, composed of health-care experts, would be given a target rate of growth in Medicare spending. To keep spending at or below this target, the board would submit “fast-track” recommendations for cost control that would go into effect automatically unless overruled by Congress.

Before you start yelling about “rationing” and “death panels,” bear in mind that we’re not talking about limits on what health care you’re allowed to buy with your own (or your insurance company’s) money. We’re talking only about what will be paid for with taxpayers’ money. And the last time I looked at it, the Declaration of Independence didn’t declare that we had the right to life, liberty, and the all-expenses-paid pursuit of happiness.

And the point is that choices must be made; one way or another, government spending on health care must be limited.

Now, what House Republicans propose is that the government simply push the problem of rising health care costs on to seniors; that is, that we replace Medicare with vouchers that can be applied to private insurance, and that we count on seniors and insurance companies to work it out somehow. This, they claim, would be superior to expert review because it would open health care to the wonders of “consumer choice.”

What’s wrong with this idea (aside from the grossly inadequate value of the proposed vouchers)? One answer is that it wouldn’t work. “Consumer-based” medicine has been a bust everywhere it has been tried. To take the most directly relevant example, Medicare Advantage, which was originally called Medicare + Choice, was supposed to save money; it ended up costing substantially more than traditional Medicare. America has the most “consumer-driven” health care system in the advanced world. It also has by far the highest costs yet provides a quality of care no better than far cheaper systems in other countries.

But the fact that Republicans are demanding that we literally stake our health, even our lives, on an already failed approach is only part of what’s wrong here. As I said earlier, there’s something terribly wrong with the whole notion of patients as “consumers” and health care as simply a financial transaction.

Medical care, after all, is an area in which crucial decisions — life and death decisions — must be made. Yet making such decisions intelligently requires a vast amount of specialized knowledge. Furthermore, those decisions often must be made under conditions in which the patient is incapacitated, under severe stress, or needs action immediately, with no time for discussion, let alone comparison shopping.

That’s why we have medical ethics. That’s why doctors have traditionally both been viewed as something special and been expected to behave according to higher standards than the average professional. There’s a reason we have TV series about heroic doctors, while we don’t have TV series about heroic middle managers.

The idea that all this can be reduced to money — that doctors are just “providers” selling services to health care “consumers” — is, well, sickening. And the prevalence of this kind of language is a sign that something has gone very wrong not just with this discussion, but with our society’s values.

Texas' cash-strapped legislature uses anti-abortion math

One of my favorite stories about the Texas State Legislature involves the time Sen. Wendy Davis was trying to ask a colleague, Troy Fraser, some questions about a pending bill. Fraser deflected by saying, "I have trouble hearing women's voices."

Really, she was standing right there on the floor. Holding a microphone.

These days in the budget-strapped, Tea Party-besieged State Capitol, you can be grateful for any funny anecdote, no matter how badly it reflects on Texas politics in general. Like the time Gov. Rick Perry defended the state's abstinence-only birth control program by saying that he knew abstinence worked "from my own personal life."

Right now, the state is wrestling with a fiscal mega-crisis that goes back to 2006, when the Legislature cut local property taxes and made up for the lost revenue with a new business tax. The new tax produced billions less than expected to the shock and horror of everyone except all the experts who had predicted that all along.

Texas' problems are of interest to us all because Texas is producing a huge chunk of the nation's future work force with a system that goes like this:

- Terrible sex education programs and a lack of access to contraceptives leads to a huge number of births to poor women. (About 60 percent of the deliveries in Texas are financed by Medicaid.) Texas also leads the nation in the number of teenage mothers with two or more offspring.
- The Texas baby boom — an 800,000 increase in schoolchildren over the past decade — marches off to underfunded schools, which are getting more underfunded by the minute, thanks to that little tax error.

And naturally, when times got tough at the State Capitol, one of the first things the cash-strapped Legislature tried to cut was family planning.

One of the best family-planning efforts in Texas is the Women's Health Program, which provides an annual health exam and a year's worth of contraceptives to poor women. For every dollar the state puts into the plan, the federal government provides $9.

The state estimates the pregnancies averted would reduce its Medicaid bill by more than $36 million next year. But when a budget expert told the Texas House Committee on Human Services that the program saved money, he was laced into by Rep. Jodie Laubenberg for using "government math."

Meanwhile, on the House floor, anti-abortion lawmakers were stripping financing for other family-planning programs. Rep. Randy Weber successfully moved part of the money into anti-abortion crisis centers for pregnant women.

"There's been research done. ... It actually shows the highest abortion rate is among women actively using contraceptives," Weber insisted.

"These folks are anti-abortion, anti-contraception and anti-science," said Rep. Mike Villarreal, who tangled with Weber during the debate.

Villarreal has had a rather dark view of the rationality of some of his colleagues ever since he tried to improve the state's abstinence-only sex education programs by requiring that the information imparted be medically accurate. It died in committee. "The pediatrician on the committee wouldn't vote for it; he was the swing vote," Villarreal recalled.

Welcome to the fact-free zone. This week, U.S. Sen.

John Cornyn gave an interview to Evan Smith of The Texas Tribune in which he claimed that the battle in Congress to defund Planned Parenthood "was really part of a larger fight about spending money we don't have on things that aren't essential."

There are a lot of fiscal conservatives in the anti-abortion movement, and it's apparently hard for them to admit that destroying Planned Parenthood is a money-loser.

There's also a resistance to government support for contraceptive services. "There are some people in the pro-life movement who think birth control pills of all kind are abortifacients," said Sen. Bob Deuell, a Republican. "But I don't see any medical evidence."

Deuell is one of those rare abortion opponents who is dedicated to the cause of helping women avoid unwanted pregnancy in the first place. He says his allies in the anti-abortion movement haven't objected to his approach, but he admitted that they haven't been handing him any medals either.

We're currently stuck with a politics of reproduction in which emotion is so strong that actual information becomes irrelevant. Sen.

Cornyn, in his interview, was reminded of the great dust-up his colleague Jon Kyl of Arizona created when he claimed that 90 percent of what Planned Parenthood did involved abortions. When challenged, Kyl's staff said the figure "was not intended to be a factual statement."

So did Cornyn agree that Kyl screwed up?

"I'm not so sure," Cornyn said.

Phillip Garrido, 60, and his wife, Nancy, 55, entered their pleas in an El Dorado County courtroom in a case that drew international headlines after Dugard and two daughters she bore with her kidnapper were discovered in August 2009. The Garridos faced 29 charges of kidnapping and sexual assault.

Members of the Wanapum Band of Indians beat drums, sang songs and said a prayer to the creator to bless the fish released Thursday, and as a brisk spring wind blew across the river, several dozen people lined up in a bucket brigade to help release 3,000 fish just below Wanapum Dam.

Thursday as they continued working with few clues into what caused the accident and how many people were aboard.
A preliminary report posted on the Federal Aviation Administration's website Wednesday lists the crash as an accident and says the airplane was destroyed, but the only other information in the short posting was the note: "Aircraft crashed under unknown circumstances into a lake. Unknown person/s on board." Authorities have said only fragments of human remains have been recovered.
State police spokesman Lt. Eric Garcia has said officials have "strong leads" about who was on the plane, but said he did not know when authorities would release a name or names.

Former T.F. police chief begins new career in real estate

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Jim Munn didn't stay retired very long.

Munn, who retired as Twin Falls chief of police in March after 30 years in law enforcement has joined Gem State Realty as a Realtor.

Munn said transitioning to real estate was a natural one.

"In both professions you have the opportunity to solve problems, negotiate outcomes, assist people in stressful situations, and you must pay significant attention to details in the paper-work," Munn said in an email to the Times-News on Wednesday. "Working for so many years in law enforcement really helped me develop those skills and it was a natural transition for me. And more importantly, both careers are a lot of fun!"

Although the housing market hasn't yet recovered Munn isn't deterred.

Munn

"Honestly, I have never worked in an up market, so I am really excited to see what that's all about," he said. "I do know that I am developing customers and clients and there seems to be real interest on the part of people to buy and list properties."

At the age of 19, Munn joined the police force as a dispatcher in 1980. He worked his way up the chain of command and was promoted to captain in 2005.

Gem State Realty is headquartered in Twin Falls and serves the Magic Valley and Treasure Valley.

Gem State Realty Broker Walt Hess has no doubt that Munn will be successful in his new line of work.

"Jim's lifelong commitment to integrity, detail and serving others' needs over his own will be an asset his real estate customers will appreciate," Hess said.

Government to urge food companies to limit ads for kids

By Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Commercially promoting sugary breakfast cereals could be put on a strict diet under government guidelines urging food companies to limit marketing of unhealthy products to children.

Under a proposal announced Thursday by several government agencies, companies would be urged to only market foods to children ages 2 through 17 if they are low in fats, sugars and sodium and contain specified healthy ingredients.

The guidelines set parameters that are stricter than many companies have set for themselves and, if the companies agree, would eliminate much of the advertising consumers see now — on television, in magazines, in stores and on the Internet — for foods that appeal to children.

If many companies sign on to the guidelines, children could see much less of the colorful cartoon characters used to advertise cereals or

"Kids are being bombarded daily with ads for unhealthy foods and it is long past time that we limit the amount of junk food advertising."

— Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa

other gimmicks designed to draw their attention. If the companies wanted to continue that advertising, they would have to reduce unhealthy ingredients in their products.

The food industry has been successful in reducing the number of television ads aimed at children in recent years and much of that advertising has moved to the Internet, social media and other digital platforms such as smart phones. Public health advocates have argued that the industry's self-regulation is not enough and has pushed the government to set guidelines.

In 2009, Congress directed the Federal Trade Commission, Agriculture Department, Food and Drug Administration and the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to form a working group and develop the recommendations. The guidelines they wrote are broad, applying to almost any promotion a child might see for a food — including text messages, product placement in video games and celebrity endorsements.

The agencies said the proposal, which would be phased in over five years and is up for public comment until the summer, is "to encourage a marketing environment that supports, rather than undermines," parents' efforts to get children to eat healthy food.

"While the goals (the guidelines) would set for food marketers are ambitious and would take time to put into place, the public health stakes could not be higher," the working group said in a statement. "One in three children is overweight or obese, and the rates are even higher among some racial and ethnic groups."

Specifically, the agencies recommend that companies only market foods that have a significant amount of fruits, vegetables, whole grains, low-fat milk products, fish, extra lean meat, eggs, nuts, seeds or beans. Foods that have any trans-fat, more than 1 gram of saturated fat, more than 13 grams of added sugars or more than 210 milligrams of sodium in a serving would not be eligible for marketing to children.

The agencies suggest the industry focus its efforts on foods that are most heavily marketed to children, including breakfast cereals, carbonated beverages, restaurant foods and snack foods.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who authored the original bill asking for the guidelines, said Wednesday he is pleased with the agencies' recommendations.

Somewhat sheepishly, Exxon reports 1Q earnings of $11 billion

By Chris Kahn
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Exxon made almost $11 billion and practically apologized for it.

Sensing public outrage over gasoline prices that have topped $4 in some states, the company struck a defensive posture Thursday after posting some of its best quarterly financial results ever.

Exxon said it had no control over high oil prices. It said it's one of the biggest taxpayers in the United States. It cast federal subsidies as "legitimate tax provisions" that keep jobs at home, and cast itself as a victim of Washington scapegoating.

"They feel they have to demonize our industry," said Ken Cohen, Exxon's vice president for public affairs.

What's more, the company argued, it doesn't even make that much money selling gasoline.

Exxon's profit of $10.65 billion for the first quarter was its highest since it made $14.83 billion in the third quarter of 2008, a record for a publicly traded company. That was also a time of $4-plus gas.

The first-quarter results were also the best among the big oil companies, which have reported improved results this week.

As oil company profits approach levels of three years ago, when gas prices last spiked in the United States, the industry is fighting a renewed push from President Barack Obama and Democrats to end its $4 billion a year in taxpayer subsidies.

This week, the industry's lobbying group touted the 9.2 million jobs that depend on Big Oil and rolled out a study showing that oil and gas stocks are excellent investments for public pension plans.

Before it even came out with the quarterly results, Exxon pleaded its case on a company blog, saying it was not to blame for high gas prices.

Then Cohen took an unusual step and spoke to reporters after Exxon reported the big profits. He said Exxon pays more taxes than any other company in the Standard & Poor's 500 index — $59 billion in the United States over the past five years.

After taxes, the company earned $41 billion from U.S.

YOUR MONEY

Beware of potential investor traps!

The turmoil in the credit, securities and real estate markets has led some investors to seek higher returns in non-traditional, speculative investments — a proven feeding ground for unscrupulous promoters and salesmen.

Gavin Gee, director of the Idaho Department of Finance, warns that investors who choose to navigate these products watch for:

Leveraged and Inverse Exchange-Traded Funds (ETFs).

While ETFs resemble mutual funds in many respects, some, such as leveraged and inverse ETFs, may contain hidden traps and complexities, and may consist of highly leveraged bundles of exotic financial instruments, including options and other derivatives.

Given their potential for volatility, leveraged ETFs may not be suitable for most retail investors.

These types of ETFs are primarily designed for short-term trading (such as day-trading), and not for buy-and-hold strategies.

Also be aware that some ETFs are thinly traded and may not always be liquid.

Economy slowed by high gas prices, severe weather

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The economy slowed sharply in the first three months of the year. High gas prices cut into consumer spending, bad weather delayed construction projects and the federal government slashed defense spending by the most in six years.

The 1.8 percent annual growth rate in the January-March quarter was weaker than the 3.1 percent growth in the previous quarter, the Commerce Department reported. And it was the worst showing since last spring when the European debt crisis slowed growth to a 1.7 percent pace.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke and other economists say the slowdown is a temporary setback. They generally agree that gas prices will stabilize and the economy will grow at a 3 percent pace in each of the next three quarters.

But gas prices are still going up. The housing market has shown little signs of recovering. And lawmakers are proposing some of the steepest cuts in federal spending in a generation. Those cuts would filter down to state and local governments, which are already wrestling with their own budget crises.

"The economy has lost its modest upward momentum, and headwinds such as rising gasoline prices and further budget cuts suggest the recovery will continue at only a moderate pace

Poll: Obama is losing public's confidence on economy

By David Lightman
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Public disapproval of President Barack Obama's handling of the economy reached a new high in mid-April, according to a new McClatchy-Marist poll, as gasoline prices neared $4 a gallon and Washington lawmakers fought a bitter battle over the federal budget.

Some 57 percent of registered voters said they disapproved of Obama's economic management, while only 40 percent approved. That's the lowest score of his presidency.

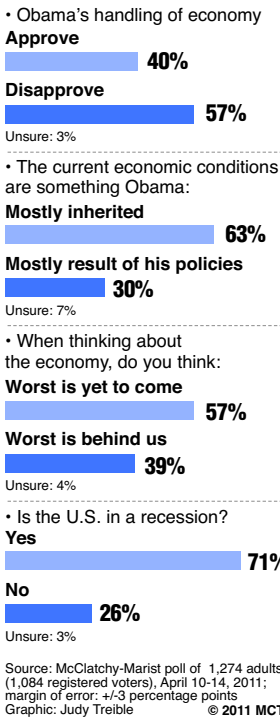

"These numbers spell political trouble," said Lee Miringoff, the director of the Marist Institute for Public Opinion in New York, which conducted the survey. "To get re-elected with a 57 percent disapproval rating would be a very tall order."

Meanwhile, public pessimism is growing: Fifty-seven percent of U.S. adults said they thought the worst was yet to come for the U.S. economy, up sharply from 39 percent in January.

Views on Obama and the economy

A new McClatchy-Marist poll asks about President Barack Obama's handling of the U.S. economy:

tion was still in a recession, even though the slump, which began in December 2007, officially ended in

"Gasoline prices were taking off, and while people weren't blaming Obama or Congress for that, it certainly put people in a sour mood."

— Lee Miringoff, the director of the Marist Institute for Public Opinion in New York, which conducted the survey June 2009.

The survey asked 1,084 registered voters about Obama on April 10-14. The error margin is plus or minus 3 percentage points.

"Gasoline prices were taking off, and while people weren't blaming Obama or Congress for that, it certainly put people in a sour mood," Miringoff said.

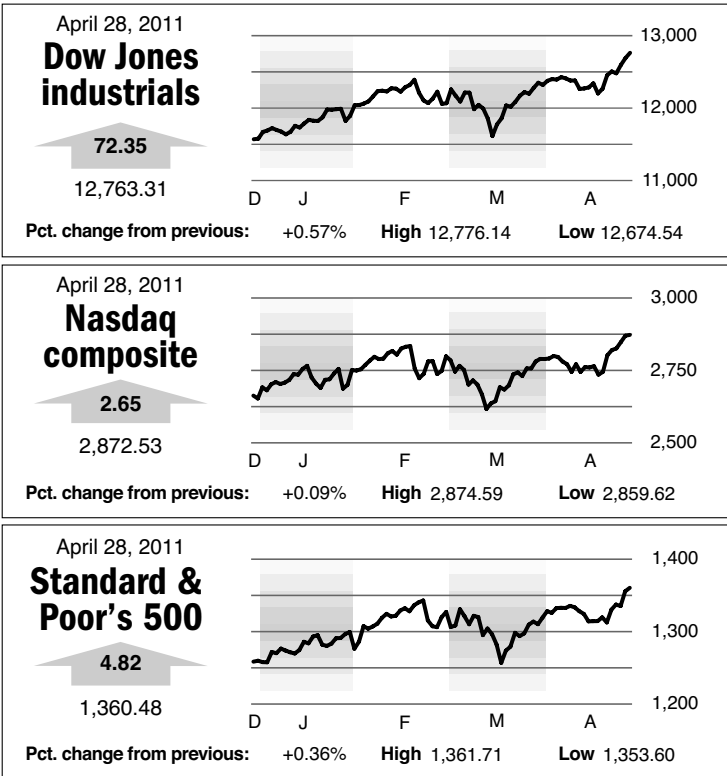

Obama gave a major speech April 13 in which he laid out his economic and budget agenda in general terms. But his speech didn't change many voters' attitudes.

Before the address, 58 percent disapproved of his handling of the economy; after the speech, the negative number dropped to 56 percent.

Approval was 40 percent before the address, 41 percent after.

Tornado outbreak devastates South, killing at least 290

By Greg Bluestein and Holbrook Mohr
Associated Press

PLEASANT GROVE, Ala. — Firefighters searched one splintered pile after another for survivors Thursday, combing the remains of houses and neighborhoods pulverized by the nation's deadliest tornado outbreak in almost four decades. At least 290 people were killed across six states — more than two-thirds of them in Alabama, where large cities bore the half-mile-wide scars the twisters left behind.

The death toll from Wednesday's storms seems out of a bygone era, before Doppler radar and pinpoint satellite forecasts were around to warn communities of severe weather. Residents were told the tornadoes were coming up to 24 minutes ahead of time, but they were just too wide, too powerful and too locked onto populated areas to avoid a horrifying body count.

"These were the most intense super-cell thunderstorms that I think anybody who was out there forecasting has ever seen," said meteorologist Greg Carbin at the National Weather Service's Storm Prediction Center in Norman, Okla.

"If you experienced a direct hit from one of these, you'd have to be in a reinforced room, storm shelter or underground" to survive, Carbin said.

The storms seemed to hug the interstate highways as they barreled along like runaway trucks, obliterating neighborhoods or even entire towns from Tuscaloosa to Bristol, Va. One family rode out the disaster in the basement of a funeral home, another by huddling in a tanning bed.

In Concord, a small town outside Birmingham that was ravaged by a tornado, Randy Guyton's family got a phone call from a friend warning them to take cover. They rushed to the basement garage, piled into a Honda Ridgeline and listened to the roar as the twister devoured the house in seconds. Afterward, they could see outside through the shards of their home and scrambled out.

"The whole house caved in on top of that car," he said. "Other than my boy screaming to the Lord to save us, being in that car is what saved us."

Son Justin remembers the dingy white cloud moving quickly toward the house.

"To me it sounded like destruction," the 22-year-old said. "It was a mean, mean roar. It was awful."

At least three people died in a Pleasant Grove subdivision southwest of Birmingham, where residents trickled back Thursday to survey the damage. Greg Harrison's neighborhood was somehow unscathed, but he remains haunted by the wind, thunder and lightning as they built to a crescendo, then suddenly stopped.

"Sick is what I feel," he said. "This is what you see in Oklahoma and Kansas. Not here. Not in the South."

AROUND THE WORLD

LIBYA

NATO airstrike mistakenly kills 12 rebels

BENGHAZI — A NATO airstrike in the besieged rebel-held city of Misrata mistakenly killed 12 Libyan rebels, an official with the transitional government confirmed Thursday, while new fighting was reported on Libya's western border with Tunisia.

The strike on Wednesday was at least the third in which rebels were killed since NATO fighter jets began pounding forces loyal to Moammar Gadhafi more than five weeks ago in a mission to protect Libyan civilians. Leaders of the anti-Gadhafi forces have called the incidents unfortunate accidents in a worthy cause, reflecting wide support in rebel ranks for the NATO strikes.

Nonetheless, both NATO and the rebels have said additional precautions — such as marking rebel vehicles and reporting precise positions to NATO — have been employed to avoid more rebel deaths.

NEW YORK

Rep. Giffords to be out of view at launch

NEW YORK — It's a sight many Americans would surely love to see: a recovering Rep. Gabrielle Giffords watching as her astronaut husband blasts off into space.

But it's unlikely they will see it. Giffords will attend Friday's space shuttle launch in Florida but watch in private, and her staff says there are no plans to release photos of her, though that could change.

Why is the congresswoman, whose recovery from catastrophic wounds has inspired so many, being kept out of public view?

First of all, it's long-standing NASA policy for all relatives at a shuttle launch. "It's just for privacy," said spokeswoman Nicole Cloutier-Lemasters at Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral. "They are here in a private capacity."

Sometimes family members choose independently to make themselves available, she said, but most decide not to.

"They're not the spotlight," added space center spokesman Allard Beutel. "They're not the public figure."

Cheaper eye drug as good as pricier one

A much cheaper drug has proved just as good as a $2,000 monthly shot at treating a common eye disorder that can lead to blindness, a long-awaited study has found. It also shows that patients can be treated less often, sparing them a lot of pain and expense.

The results are expected to lead many doctors and patients to turn away from the pricier Lucentis and instead use $50 shots of Avastin for an age-related condition called wet macular degeneration.

Vision improvement after one year was the same for those given Avastin or Lucentis, the 1,200-patient study found.

The results are a blow to Roche's Genentech unit, which sells both medicines. Avastin is a cancer drug that doctors have used for many years to treat the eye disease even though it is not approved for that purpose.

Filer senior raises mammogram money

Local women who lack health insurance now have another opportunity for free mammogram screenings, thanks to Filer High School senior Mackenzi Jasper.

As part of her senior project, Jasper developed the Care2Cure 5K Fun Run/Walk with help from her mentor, College of Southern Idaho Recreation Director Scott Rogers.

"I know you have to 'care' if you want to help find a 'cure,'" she said, explaining the event's name in a press release.

Through entry fees and generous donations, Jasper was able to raise $3,000 to provide mammography screenings for uninsured, underinsured or underprivileged women in the Magic Valley. Mackenzi donated the net proceeds from the fun run to the Dianne K. Bolt Breast Cancer Screening Memorial Fund through the St. Luke's Magic Valley Health Foundation.

The Bolt Memorial Fund was created by Al Bolt in 2009 in memory of his wife

"to not only honor her, but to provide a service to our community which Dianne would have wanted," according to Al Bolt. He thanked Jasper in the release for her work, saying "She extended great effort in making the fundraiser so successful."

As a community service partnership between St. Luke's Magic Valley Health Foundation and St. Luke's Magic Valley Women's Imaging, funds donated to the memorial fund provide free mammography screenings to the United Way, the Mustard Tree Wellness Clinic and other community agencies that distribute them to women in need.

Twin Falls High stage transforms for 'Metamorphoses'

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

When you want to produce a play that requires an on-stage pool, you have to go for broke.

Tonight, Twin Falls High School opens its spring show, "Metamorphoses." The ambitious production took months of planning and incorporates a pool, 40 actors and more than 60 costumes.

The play, which first opened off-Broadway in October 2001, is a series of vignettes based on poems by the Roman poet Ovid. You won't see togas in playwright Mary Zimmerman's version, which is modern and gritty. Midas, the king with the golden touch, is transformed into a businessman, and the wood

Costumes are simple on purpose, said designer Ashlyn Anderson: "Having extravagant costumes might distract."

But there are more than 60 characters, most of whom are on stage for five minutes or less, Anderson said. She and another costume designer have worked for months on gathering and designing the costumes and making sure they stay within budget.

The production's highlight is the set. Much of the play takes place in a swimming pool, which students designed and built.

The pool holds more than 2,000 gallons, and on

'CLASHING OF ARMIES'

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

If the idea of chamber music conjures up images of tuxedoed musicians playing dusty, old composers while audience members snooze, it's time to shake off the dust. Start picturing Master Chief taking on the Flood, Indiana Jones adventuring in the jungle and Harry Potter casting a spell.

Tonight, Magic Valley Symphony mines the music of movies, videogames and Broadway musicals in its "Out of this World Classics" pops concert. The program opens with selections from Broadway's musical "Wicked," then highlights the soundtracks of four popular videogames and plays a tribute to legendary composer John Williams. In the second half of the concert, the symphony is joined by Magic Valley Youth Orchestra to play selections from two Japanese animation films and ends the night with music from the film that launched a thousand Darth Vader imitators.

Far from being a stretch for a symphony, director Ted Hadley said, music from videogames and movies is the main vehicle for delivering orchestra music to mainstream listeners.

film and movies and videogames," Hadley said. "I listen to them and they're good songs."

The four videogames that will get the full band treatment are Halo, Civilization IV, Bounty Hunter and Kingdom Hearts. Though Handel may have more in common with Halo than people expect, the game element does give this concert a unique sound.

"You're portraying the conquering of continents and the clashing of armies, you go for the brass," Hadley said, referring to Civilization IV. "It's quite a bit noisier than we normally do."

You're the judge in multi-venue art show

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

Seventeen-year-old Hansen High School student Samantha Coulter was familiar with pen, ink and digital means of drawing. But for her first foray into painting, the youngest participant in the Magic Valley Has Art show started large.

Coulter worked for months on a two-sided 6-by-8-foot mural that will be one of 91 pieces displayed around Twin Falls today through May 7.

"It was a pretty daunting task," Coulter said. "I thought it would be a really good way to get myself out there and experience professional art, working on a deadline, like a commission."

Coulter isn't the only newcomer to burst onto Twin Falls' art scene in a big way. Magic Valley Has Art is in its inaugural year, and Art Hoag, the man behind the idea, hopes it will take hold.

Hoag designed the show to get the community as involved as possible. Artists, such as Coulter, submitted pieces. But to get them installed in a business — and eligible for cash prizes — the artists had to have their work picked by a sponsor and a business. In addition to the 91 pieces, all with sponsors, about 30 venues stepped up to display art.

"Some of the venues will have two, three, four artists in each venue," Hoag said.

Some businesses, such as downtown's Sav Mor Drug and Rudy's, are both sponsor and gallery.

With that part of the show completed, the next phase of Hoag's community involvement is ready to kick in. Starting today, the judges determining which artists are worthy of prizes — including $5,100 for first place — are anyone willing to vote. Hoag hopes to draw 5,000 voters to the venues.

"I think at first, people weren't quite sure what I was trying to do," Hoag said. "Once people understand the idea, from the public viewing people to the business and artists, people get excited about it."

To vote, you have to register at the program's base of operations, the Event Center, which will also double as a gallery for much of the art in the show. You

On Buhl’s stage: a cast’s confidence born of sacrifice

By Sky Buffat
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — For nearly two months, Buhl High School drama students have dedicated the last drops of their spare time to learning songs, dances and scripts for their upcoming show.

“Just Another High School Musical” opens Thursday and runs through May 7.

After nightly three-hour rehearsals, cast members exit the stage at 9 p.m. and head home to do homework, prep for other activities and wind up to do it all again tomorrow.

It seems rehearsals are far from a drain, however. The students fuel one another, and the sacrifices they make to show their colors on stage breed a rare confidence.

“We’re like a big, dysfunctional family,” Cassie Christopherson said.

“They aren’t here because it’s required or because they’re getting credit for it,” Buhl High drama teacher Dave Blaszkiewicz said. “They’re here because they want to be.”

Senior Makeesa Montgomery took a break from drama last year but couldn’t resist returning to what she most enjoys. “The moment you step on stage, you feel the energy from the audience,” Montgomery said. “And the applause at the end is like a breath of relief. Applause is everything!”

Musical rehearsals are in the evening to allow students to attend other practices in the afternoon, and Jacob Klimes used to fit both golfing and drama into his schedule. He gave up golfing this year in favor of drama alone.

“I like being in the spotlight,” Klimes said. “Plus, I was a really bad golfer.”

Student wrestler DJ Lent says singing and dancing in the musical is one of the only things he really enjoys, which makes sacrificing to be part of it worthwhile.

“Just Another High School Musical” tells the story of students who’ve been abandoned by their drama teacher and must fend for themselves in front of a live audience.

The show is full of satirical rewritings from Shakespeare to Dickens to Louisa May Alcott.

While the musical does have two lead roles, the students liked this title because it allowed them all to participate in a variety of ways.

“The focus is on everyone,” Rena Davidson said. “We are all playing lots of parts.”

“It’s drop-dead hilarious!” Christopherson said.

In the coming week, students will stay later and work even harder.

“The very best part is the last week of rehearsals,” Caleb Gerdes said, “when everything really starts coming together.”

All students participate in the camp choir and choose three elective periods. On the last evening of camp, they perform in the Music Fest concert.

Tuition is $175, which includes instructional materials. Housing is available for students wishing to homestay with Twin Falls students and their families. Optional items such as photos, lunches and private lessons are available for an additional cost.

Scrap all your old ideas this weekend. Darth Vader plays the tuba now, and Twin Falls has a big-money art exhibition.

That artwork is spread around 30-plus businesses in downtown and nearby, competing for an astounding $5,100 first prize. The twist? You're the judge. Starting today, you can register to vote in the multi-venue Magic Valley Has Art exhibit, which attracted 91 paid entries. Who knew Art Hoag's grand idea would make Twin Falls look so metropolitan?

You'll find — or at least hear — Darth Vader at tonight's Magic Valley Symphony concert of music from fantasy films, Broadway shows and video games. Think "Indiana Jones," "Halo" and "Jaws" — not the predictable stuff of symphonies.

Also tonight, Barbra Streisand and Frank Sinatra impersonators are performing in Burley, while on the other side of the valley, Twin Falls High thespians are opening their production of "Metamorphoses" vignettes based on poems by the Roman poet Ovid — with a 2,000-gallon pool right on stage. So Aphrodite, I presume, will still be dripping wet.

Buhl High follows with its "Just Another High School Musical," opening Thursday. The show is full of satirical rewritings from Shakespeare to Dickens, and the cast promises hilarity.

The rest of this weekend's lineup is full of variety: a stand-up comedy face-off; a car show; the stone throwing and caber tossing of Scottish Highland Games; a Bug Zoo where you can get up close to tarantulas, silkworms and the like; and — believe it or not — the St. Petersburg String Quartet of international fame.

For details on these events — and hundreds of others — see the full calendar in today's Entertainment section.

Monday the students were scrambling to complete it and fill it with water by the end of the night.

The pool required plenty of planning, said Twin Falls High drama teacher James Haycock. He needed permission from the principal and the maintenance crew, but when they found the filled pool's weight would come in way under the limit, administration gave the OK.

Playing in water on stage takes more forethought than pool construction, Haycock said. To prevent wet costumes from revealing his actors, he got nude-colored camisoles for students to wear under their clothes.

Cold water is also on his mind. Haycock hoped the water would be at least room temperature — which isn't very warm in the lofty auditorium. On Monday, they were considering getting a water heater.

The pool isn't the only eye-catching piece on stage. Metal pillars, built by the school's welding students, prop up a platform from which the gods can look down, said set designers Austin Murray and Josh Roe. They planned to cover the metal pillars with shatter-resistant glass panels, which would be illuminated from the inside for an ethereal look. A minimalist chandelier mimics stars in the sky.

"We feel like we've worked really hard on the set," Murray said.

The students were confident in their construction, but they couldn't resist speculating on what would happen if something went wrong. Tim Cameron, who plays Hermes, pointed to the orchestra pit below the stage.

"If the pool floods, that's where it's going," he said.

can register only once and get three votes, which must be spread out to three pieces of artwork.

Most of the artwork the public can see and support with a vote is downtown, creating what Hoag calls a little art walk.

The art walk is anything but little when it comes to diversity. In addition to Coulter, who used house paints, the festival hosts vivid poppies painted in oil at Plantscaping, a watercolor portrait by Dillon Arthur Johansen at the Music Center and a peaceful marsh landscape in pastels by Ron Hicks at Stitchin' Time.

Coulter's mural, a surreal combination of her love for music, horror movies and comic books, isn't even the only large-scale work.

Sculptures will appear on lawns at Jensen Jewelers, which hosts a moose, and outlier Magic Valley Bank, which hosts a 30-foot sturgeon. Woody's will sport a mural directly on its wall.

If two-dimensional art doesn't get the voting started, artists fluent in jewelry making, pottery and sculpting are also represented.

"It's been pretty exciting seeing the artists that have come out to participate and the venues that have stepped up to support it," Hoag said.

For Dan Barsness, whose painting of Oaxaca basket weavers rests right inside the front door of Snow's Antiques, it's not just the talent of his competition or the prize money that's im-anything controlled by a joystick, the John Williams tribute might be more welcome. Williams is the man behind the stirring takeoff of Superman, the derring-do of Indiana Jones and the bone-chilling two notes of "Jaws." Williams is also behind the concert's finale of the "Star Wars" soundtrack.

"Which many generations have come to love and which is really cleverly written because each character has its own melody," Hadley said. That individual melody follows each character through the six movies and even into the animated series on TV now, "The Clone Wars."

But as in the best movies, there is one more twist. The musicians' performances will be paired with visual effects, including clips from the movies coordinated to the soundtracks.

Luis Vargas, owner of Mid-night Productions, said going through classic movies was enjoyable, but sifting through the amount of material was almost overwhelming.

"It's quite fun and so much information, too," Vargas said. "It's quite hard to decide what clips I want to do. But it's really, really fun."

Vargas and the audience won't be the only ones having fun. Though learning the music can be challenging, Hadley said, the musicians still enjoy the change.

"Composers are still using instruments in new ways, and it's very melodic," he said. "We don't have too many fuddy-duddies in orchestra."

Basketball novel, WWII nonfiction share guts, hope and strength

Two books: one, a novel; the other, nonfiction. One set in modern Willow Creek, Mont.; the other in the Pacific and Japan during World War II. One, I couldn't put down, the other, I had to, when the story became too intense. And although the two books are at opposite ends of the story spectrum, the themes of determination, bravery, guts, perseverance, faith, love, hope and the indomitable strength of the human spirit abound in both.

First, the novel: "Blind Your Ponies" (Algonquin Press, $14.95) by Stanley Gordon West. "What an odd title," I thought to myself when I first saw the book. Skimming the back cover and discovering it was about a high school's losing basketball team (zero wins, 93 straight losses), I almost put it back. I needed a book for a plane ride, though, so decided read it. It is now a favorite.

The characters populating Willow Creek are genuine and entirely likeable. There is Grandma, a wise and feisty survivor, who drives an old, beat-up VW van with her one usable hand; Sam Pickett, who finds himself in Willow Creek after his life is shattered by a senseless, violent act, doggedly coaching the losing team; Diana, the biology teacher haunted by her own shattering secret. And, of course, the boys who make up the basketball team: Pete and Olaf, newcomers to Montana, and the locals, Dean, Curtis, Scott, Tom and Rob.

But it is West's ability to capture a sense of place that thoroughly and immediately captivated me, as in this excerpt: "The land had its rhythms, its music and motions, an ebb and flow that washed over him like surf, a vitality so essential and primary that it seemed eternal, a heartbeat, a pulse that he could reach out and touch, a soul he could feel ... 'Now,' she said, 'feel the earth rotating ... slowly ... turning east, moving away from the sun.' After a minute he found himself leaning very slightly to the east, sensing a movement, knowing the planet under him was turning."

Even though the book is more than 500 pages long, I became utterly engrossed in the life of Willow Creek.

I laughed, cried and cheered for the team and local residents, and felt sad when the story ended.

(Because I know you are wondering: "Blind Your Ponies" refers to an old Crow legend.)

The other book is "Unbroken: A World War II Story of Survival, Resilience, and Redemption," by Laura Hillenbrand (Random House, $27), author of the 2001 bestseller "Seabiscuit."

Louis Zamperini was a prodigious runner, coming within one second of breaking the 4-minute mile. He had competed in the Berlin Olympics and was training for the 1940 Games when World War II broke out, and he joined the Army Air Corps. While on a search mission his B-24 crashed, and Louie and two fellow airmen were left adrift on a rubber raft in the South Pacific. On the 33rd day, Sgt. Francis McNamara died; Louie and pilot Russell Phillips continued fighting off debilitating hunger, thirst, 40-foot waves and leaping sharks. On day 47, within sight of a small island, they were captured by the Japanese. Their nightmare had only just begun.

For the next two years, Louie endured unimaginable brutalities in the theater of cruelty that was the Japanese POW camps.

Corp. Mutsuhiro Watanabe, a pathologically brutal and thrasonical sadist, unrelentingly focused the cruelest beatings and punishments on him. "The Bird," as Watanabe was called by the prisoners, became Louie's ugliest nightmare, haunting his life even after returning home.

That Louie and hundreds of other POWs were able to maintain hope and sense of self despite the monumental degradations they suffered is the crux of this story. That they continued suffering — mainly in silence — after returning home is the other part. It haunts me still.

There is no glory in war; rather, the glory is in the human spirit. Let us never forget.

Get close to creepy-crawlies at Bug Zoo

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

The fire-bellied toad will be a guest star at this year's Bug Zoo. But it's likely his fellow celebrities won't applaud his presence.

After all, this colorful tropical critter, whose mating call sounds like a dog's bark, has a penchant for eating insects — from crickets to moths. Kids and adults alike can meet the fire-bellied toad when the Sawtooth Botanical Garden presents its 9th Annual Bug Zoo.

The zoo kicks off with a Bug Zoo Festival from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the botanical garden, which is at Idaho Highway 75 and Gimlet Road a few miles south of Ketchum. Children and adults can continue to view the bugs through May 14.

Sunday's Bug Zoo Festival will include face painting, bug magnets, buggy games, the opportunity to eat like bugs do with their various mouthparts, and snack crafts, such as insect cupcakes and cereal butterflies.

Youngsters will also get to examine luna moths, scorpions, tarantulas, silkworms and about two dozen more insects from all over the world up close and personal.

Cost for that day only is $5 for youngsters whose families are members of the botanical garden and $10 for those who are not members. Adults will be admitted free.

Beginning Monday, more than a thousand school-children will visit the Bug Zoo on field trips. The public is invited to check out the bugs for free from 1:30 to 5 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 7-8 and 14.

The Bug Zoo gives kids a chance to learn about the many-legged creatures who inhabit this planet.

"I've learned a lot about the resiliency of bugs after doing this for several years," said Allison Kennedy, the garden's education director. "The cockroaches, for instance, are amazing. Kids accidentally drop them on the floor and the cockroaches just keep trucking along."

Melanie Gonzalez, left, Pilar Maza and Alison Horiela examine critters they caught in a stream outside the Sawtooth Botanical Garden greenhouse at a previous Bug Zoo.

The Bug Zoo presents a wonderful learning opportunity for kids because the zoo may inspire them to explore the world of insects in their backyards, said Carolyn Aoi, a Shoshone Elementary School teacher. And they get to learn all kinds of cool facts, too, said Judy Rienstra, who accompanied her granddaughter Sara to last year's Bug Zoo. "Just take the millipede, which has up to 700 legs. I point out to the kids that we have enough trouble finding two socks for our feet in the morning. Can you imagine having to look around for 700?"

NFL draft shows a desperation for quarterbacks

By Greg Logan
Newsday

NEW YORK — Capping a season filled with controversy and an offseason pockmarked with doubt about his ability to adapt to the NFL, quarterback Cam Newton completed a hat trick, going to Carolina with the No. 1 pick after leading Auburn to the national title and winning the Heisman Trophy. Not even Newton was sure of what his future held until he received a call from Panthers owner Jerry Richardson and coach Ron Rivera moments before commissioner Roger Goodell announced the selection.

"I didn't know," Newton said Thursday night. "For a long time, I would go to sleep with questions like, 'Where will I go?' as soon as coach Rivera called me, it put a warmth in my heart knowing this deal is done and my work has paid off."

More than most high-profile college players, Newton knows what it's like to be under the microscope. He spent much of an undefeated season at Auburn fending off allegations that his father sought payment for his son's services when he transferred from junior college a year ago. An NCAA investigation later cleared the school.

But the probing didn't stop there. As a run-pass threat operating out of a spread offense, many questioned whether Newton could adjust to a pro-style offense. But the upside of his wondrous improvisational ability was too much for Carolina to pass up.

"I have embraced this process and understand everything is under the watchful eye," Newton said. "Nothing is going to change but to progress to be great."

Newton grimaced at the mention of how his intelligence has been questioned, in part because he ran a simplified system at Auburn with none of the complex verbiage common to NFL teams. Asked if all the turmoil has been worth it, he said, "To some degree. When I wake up, it's another task I need to tackle. It's transforming an organization that was worst and try to progress to be first."

With a huge smile, Newton said no one could imagine how good he felt to go No. 1. "I can't do what I really want to do," he said. "I just want to scream."

This draft was considered to be knee deep in defensive talent, and that was reflected in the selection of 12 defensive linemen, including Temple defensive end Muhammed Wilkerson by the Jets at No. 30. At No. 19, the Giants went for Nebraska cornerback Prince Amukamara.

But desperation for quarterback talent led to the drafting of three more QBs from No. 8-12. In a mild surprise, Washington's Jake Locker was the second taken, by Tennessee at No. 8. Missouri's Blaine Gabbert went No. 10 to Jacksonville, and Minnesota grabbed Florida State's Christian Ponder at No. 12.

The top defensive players taken were Texas A&M outside linebacker Von Miller (No. 2, Denver); Alabama defensive tackle Marcel Dareus (No. 3, Buffalo) and LSU cornerback Patrick Peterson (No. 5, Arizona). Georgia wide receiver A.J. Green went No. 4 to Cincinnati, and Atlanta traded up to No. 6 with Cleveland to

Golden Eagles to visit No. 10 Wildcats

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The penultimate week of the baseball season has the College of Southern Idaho looking at its last chance to make a statement before the region tournament.

High-flying CSI travels to Carson City, Nev., this weekend to play No. 10 Western Nevada at a place the Golden Eagles love to play.

It could evoke memories of last season's successful trip and banish the demons of this season's flop at Skip Walker Field, where CSI lost all four games to Western Nevada, including a heartbreaking Game 4 setback where the tying and winning runs were set to score but Vinny Giron was thrown out before he could reach first base.

"We've proved that we can beat every team in this league — except Western Nevada," said CSI coach Boomer Walker. "If it's one, two, three or four (wins), we've got to prove we can beat them."

But proving that will be no easy task.

Western Nevada cracked the Top 10 for the very first time this season in this week's NJCAA Division I poll, and the Wildcats haven't lost at John L. Harvey Field in more than a year.

The last time WNC left its home field unhappy was March 20, 2010, when it lost both ends of a doubleheader to CSI. Since then the Wildcats have reeled off 25 straight home wins.

But the Eagles are coming in with as much confidence as a team can have, still riding high on the emotion of taking three of four from previously top-ranked Salt Lake last weekend, the final win coming in walkoff fashion in extra innings.

Western Nevada owns a three-game lead over SLCC in the conference

BETTER THAN OK

Buhl boys, Gooding girls dominate Dairyman

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

GOODING — It wasn't the flashiest of comebacks, but it'll do.

In his first effort since what he called a bad pull of the hamstring on his jumping leg, Buhl junior Camden Gillins braved a nasty crosswind to sail 19 feet, 8 inches and win the boys long jump competition at the Dairyman's Invitational on Thursday.

Normally Gillins wouldn't be pleased jumping under 20 feet, but considering the circumstances it was a solid jump.

"The wind didn't affect me all that much," said Gillins, who helped Buhl to 205.5 points to earn the boys team title. "I was supposed to jump last week at (the Boise Relays) but I got scratched because there were so many schools there. That gave me another week to get healthy. ... When it's your plant leg and you have to explode off it you really need to make sure it's 100-percent OK before you jump."

One person who was completely OK was Gooding freshman Rachel Youren, who dominated the girls 3,200-meter run from start to finish, crossing the finish line in 12 minutes, 19 seconds. She also won the 800 and 1,600 meters and earned 30 points for the Senators, who tallied 204.5 in earning the girls team title.

Youren finished 10 seconds off her personal best in the 3,200 but attributed that in part to weather conditions that went from clear and slightly breezy to cold, cloudy and gusty in the space of an hour.

"The first corner was pretty tough because of the wind, but I tried to make shorter strides going into the wind and longer ones with the wind at my back," said Youren. "It was hard to run out in front all the time, but my coaches want me to go out there and set the pace."

Gooding certainly set the pace on the girls side, taking three of the four relay events and getting individual wins from Janeth Lopez (100 meters), Danielle Baker (200) and Audrey Youren (high jump).

Wendell's Alyssa Nelson earned 38 points on the day, highlighted by her victories in the triple jump and long jump. Buhl's Whitney Amoth took

Bryant, Lakers, close out Hornets in style

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Kobe Bryant scored 22 of his 24 points in the first three quarters, then let his Lakers teammates take over in a dominant 98-80 victory over the New Orleans Hornets on Thursday night that wrapped up the series for Los Angeles in six games.

Andrew Bynum added 18 points and 12 rebounds, while Pau Gasol chipped in 16 points for the two-time defending champions, who led by as much as 21 in the fourth quarter to provide an anticlimactic ending to what had been a more exciting series than many expected.

Chris Paul, who helped the Hornets split the first four games with two sensational performances, wasn't able to deliver the Hornets a third victory. He had only seven points before hitting a 3-pointer with 4:02 to go and finished with 10 points, 11 assists and eight rebounds.

Lamar Odom had 14 points for the Lakers, who once again controlled the paint, outrebounding New Orleans 43-30, including 14 offensive rebounds. The Hornets were

'Hawks' Myers headed to ISU

Bengals to hold spring game today

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Tyler Myers played quarterback, safety and punter at Canyon Ridge High School.

Idaho State football coach Mike Kramer sees Myers' future at a different position.

"He is a big strapping outside linebacker with good range of speed," Kramer said in a school release announcing Myers will join ISU's program this fall as a preferred walk-on.

The 6-foot-3, 205-pound Myers started at QB for the Riverhawks in 2009 and 2010. He earned all-state status as a punter this past season, averaging 42.2 yards per kick with a long of 60 yards.

Former CRHS football coach Bill Hicks once called Myers the best athlete in the Great Basin Conference. That athleticism, coupled with his size and frame, could make Myers a valuable asset for the Bengals.

"He has the ability to make plays in the open field," said Kramer.

The addition of Myers gives ISU seven players from the Magic Valley, including likely starters Jon van Vliet (Lighthouse Christian) and Braeden Clayson (Burley) along with Cody McCoy (Jerome), Keelan McCaffery (Minico), Sage Warner (Declo) and Erik Jacobson (Wood River).

The Bengals hold their spring game at 5 p.m. today at Holt Arena. The event is free to the public. Kramer will give out team awards and name captains for the 2011 season during halftime of the scrimmage.

Draft

If need weren’t such a big factor for most teams, many believe Peterson might have gone No. 1. But when asked why teams gambled on quarterbacks at the top of the draft, Peterson said, “I have no idea, but Cam Newton definitely deserves No. 1. I played against him, and he’s an animal. He got Auburn to the national title his first year.”

standings with eight to play. The Wildcats and Bruins finish the regular season with a four-game series in Carson City next weekend.

Assuming Salt Lake sweeps lowly Eastern Utah, CSI will have a direct impact on where the Region 18 Tournament is played May 11-14. A series split (or less) at Western Nevada would all but guarantee the Wildcats would host, as Salt Lake would have to win or possibly even sweep the series to overtake them, and Western Nevada has only lost one home conference series in its history.

CSI is essentially locked into third place, a position which could be cemented this weekend with two results going Salt Lake’s way or against the Eagles. CSI finishes up at last-place Colorado Northwestern next week.

“We know where we’re at, and we’re waiting to see who we’ll play in the tournament,” Walker said. “We’d like to have it easy on us and have (Salt Lake and Western Nevada) have to battle it out next week.”

Pineda, Mariners complete sweep of Tigers

DETROIT — Michael Pineda challenged Miguel Cabrera with pitch after pitch, repeatedly reaching the mid-to-high 90s on the ballpark’s radar gun.

Finally, with his ninth offering of the at-bat, the rookie struck out the slugger with a nifty slider.

“He’s not afraid to throw the ball,” catcher Miguel Olivo said. “No matter who’s hitting, he just goes and gets him.”

Pineda struck out nine in six sharp innings, and Olivo and Luis Rodriguez each homered to help the Seattle Mariners beat Detroit 7-2 on Thursday for a three-game sweep of the Tigers.

The 22-year-old Pineda was particularly impressive at the start, fanning the first four hitters he faced, including Cabrera to begin the second inning.

RAYS 6, TWINS 1

RAYS 15, TWINS 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Jeff Niemann carried a no-hitter into the seventh inning, Ben Zobrist hit a two-run homer to give him 10 RBIs for the day and Tampa Bay swept a day-night doubleheader with a 6-1 victory over Minnesota.

Niemann (1-3) gave up one run and two hits in seven innings, and John Jaso also went deep for the Rays, who pounded the Twins 15-3 in the first game. Zobrist went 7 for 10 with two homers and three doubles in the doubleheader. He set a club record with eight RBIs in the opener.

INDIANS 8, ROYALS 2

CLEVELAND — Fausto Carmona, backed by four solo home runs, pitched seven solid innings and Cleveland Indians earned its 10th straight home win, beating Kansas City to extend the Royals’ losing streak to six.

BLUE JAYS 5, RANGERS 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Corey Patterson bunted home the tiebreaking run in the ninth inning and Toronto beat AL West-leading Texas to win a series for the first time in three weeks.

NEW YORK 12, WHITE SOX 3

NEW YORK — Brett Gardner led off a six-run fifth inning with a homer for New York’s first hit of the game, and Nick Swisher homered and had four RBIs for the Yankees.

CC Sabathia (2-1) pitched seven sharp innings to help New York gain a split of the four-game series. Swisher hit his first homer in 76 at-bats this season.

RED SOX 6, ORIOLES 2

BALTIMORE — Jon Lester improved to 14-0 against Baltimore with eight dominating innings, Dustin Pedroia hit a tiebreaking infield single and Boston Red Sox averted a three-game sweep.

Lester (3-1) is unbeaten in 17 career starts versus the Orioles. He allowed two runs on four hits, walked three and struck out five. After Derrek Lee’s RBI single in the first, the left-hander didn’t allow another hit until Vladimir Guerrero’s solo homer in the sixth.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

CARDINALS 11, ASTROS 7

HOUSTON — Lance Berkman homered and drove in four runs in a nine-run sixth inning, then added a solo shot in the ninth against his former team in the St. Louis Cardinals’ 11-7 victory over the Houston Astros on Thursday night.

Berkman’s three-run shot off Fernando Abad (1-2) gave St. Louis a 5-4 lead.

Berkman finished with four hits and had eight hits and seven RBIs in his first series against his former team. It was his third multi-home run game of the season and the 28th of his career.

GIANTS 5, PIRATES 2

PITTSBURGH — Ryan Vogelsong won while making his first start in almost seven years, pitching effectively into the sixth inning against his former team in the San Francisco Giants’ 5-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Thursday.

NATIONALS 4, METS 3

WASHINGTON — New father Ian Desmond homered and tripled in his first game back from paternity leave and Livan Hernandez pitched eight strong innings to lead Washington past New York.

“I just wanted to make a play,” said Johnson, who bounced back from a dismal 5-point effort in Game 5. “The play was a pick-and-roll for Al (Horford) and Jamal, but we didn’t come up with what we wanted. I just crashed the glass and tried to somehow get a hand on it. I did.”

The Magic had two chances to force overtime. J.J. Redick missed an open 3, then Jason Richardson had a desperation shot from the corner blocked by Josh Smith.

and came up with a huge offensive rebound, leading Atlanta to an 84-81 victory in Game 6 on Thursday night, knocking the Orlando Magic out of the playoffs.

The Hawks, who won the series 4-2, advanced to the second round for the third straight year, this time against top-seeded Chicago.

Orlando, which routed Atlanta a year ago in the most lopsided four-game sweep in NBA history, heads into an uncertain offseason after its earliest playoff ouster since 2007.

With Atlanta clinging to a one-point lead and the clock running down, Marvin Williams missed a clinching 3-pointer. But Johnson swat-

The Lakers led by double digits throughout the fourth quarter, and Hornets coach Monty Williams finally conceded the game with about a minute to go when he removed the starters, who received an appreciative standing ovation from the sellout crowd in the New Orleans Arena.

The Lakers move on to the second round, facing the winner of the Dallas-Portland series. Game 1 will be Monday at Staples Center.

Carl Landry had 19 points for the Hornets, who have not won a playoff series since the first round in 2008, but who did better than expected after Williams took his first head coaching job last summer with a team that had missed the playoffs last season. Trevor Ariza scored 12 points for New Orleans and Marco Belinelli 11.

TODAY'S NATIONAL MAP

Watson, Jones share Zurich Classic lead

AVONDALE, La. — Matt Jones chipped in from 57 feet on his final hole for a 6-under 66 and a share of the first-round lead with Bubba Watson on Thursday in the Zurich Classic.

Watson, the winner at Torrey Pines in late January, two-putted from 32 feet for eagle on the par-5 11th and had six birdies and two bogeys at TPC Louisiana.

Jones had eight birdies and two bogeys. Playing the back nine first, the Australian reeled off four consecutive birdies beginning at the par-4 16th. He followed with a 30-foot birdie putt on the 17th, an 11-footer on the 18th and a 20-foot putt on the first.

Watson and Jones played in the afternoon in better scoring conditions after a strong north wind made morning play more difficult.

Joe Durant, Tommy Gainey, Carl Pettersson, John Rollins,

Nick O'Hern and David Duval opened with 67s. Durant played in the morning.

Luke Donald, a playoff loser last week at Hilton Head in a failed bid to jump from No. 3 to No. 1 in the world, shot a 68 to match Matt Bettencourt, Webb Simpson, Jason Dufner, Charles Howell and 2002 winner K.J. Choi. Hilton Head winner Brandt Snedeker opened with a 77. He had a triple bogey on the par-3 ninth when he hit his tee shot in the water.

WESTWOOD'S DOUBLE BOGEY LEAVES HIM 6 SHOTS BACK

SEOUL, South Korea — Top-ranked Lee Westwood finished Thursday's first round of the Ballantine's Championship with a double bogey, falling six shots behind leader Damien McGrane.

Starting on the back nine, the Englishman birdied the 18th and was 2 under before his late slip on No. 9 sent him tumbling down the leaderboard at the $2.8 million tournament at the Blackstone Golf Club at Icheon. He finished at even-par 72.

Westwood, who won the Asian Tour's Indonesian Masters last week to regain the No. 1 world ranking, appeared distracted by spectators taking photographs. Twice in the last three holes he backed off shots due to clicking noises, dropping three shots in the process.

Despite the poor finish, Westwood was satisfied with his performance. "I'm still in contention," he said. "On the first 15 holes I played very nicely and gave myself a lot of chances without really making any putts."

Ian Poulter and Ernie Els also had inconsistent rounds. Poulter started with consecutive double bogeys before bouncing back to post a 2-over 74. South African Els, winner of three majors, shot a 73.

GRACE PARK, SONG-HEE KIM TOP LPGA TOUR LEADERBOARD

MOBILE, Ala. — Grace Park and Song-Hee Kim shot 5-under 67s in windy conditions Thursday to share the first-round lead in the Avnet LPGA Classic, the tour's only event in a six-week stretch.

Park eagled the par-5 13th and had had five birdies and two bogeys on The Crossings course at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail's Magnolia Grove complex. She won the last of her six LPGA Tour titles in 2004.

Park missed the pro-am Wednesday to rest her surgically repaired back. She has failed to make the cut in her three previous LPGA Tour starts this season.

Big Ten commish calls Ohio State case 'a serious situation'

Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany believes he might have acted differently toward five Ohio State players who were allowed to play in the Sugar Bowl despite NCAA violations had he known the information that has since been uncovered.

The players were permitted to wait until this fall to begin serving a five-game suspension for accepting money and tattoos from the owner of a Columbus tattoo parlor. It wasn't until more than a week after the Buckeyes' 31-26 victory over Arkansas that school officials realized coach Jim Tressel had known about the violations for more than nine months.

"Based on what we knew, we just spoke on behalf of the kids and the NCAA made the decision it made," Delany said Thursday at the annual Bowl Championship Series meetings in New Orleans. "But I don't think anybody had the knowledge that we have now."

The NCAA is investigating

Tressel for knowing about potential major rules violations but not telling Ohio State officials about it.

"I'm concerned about it. I think it's a serious situation," Delany said. "The facts are fairly well known and I think the institution will get in front of the infractions committee and then they'll render their opinion in a timely way."

Also Thursday, Ohio State released a letter from a U.S. attorney dated Dec. 7, 2010, in which the school was notified of numerous football jerseys, cleats and other memorabilia discovered during a raid on the home of Edward Rife, the subject of a federal drug-trafficking investigation. It was the letter that eventually led to the players' suspensions.

The letter stated Ohio State players had received between $12,000 and $15,000 in cash, free tattoos and reduced-price tattoos for providing the merchandise, some of which was signed.

INDEPENDENT BYU ALREADY HAS BOWL INVITATION

FORT WORTH, Texas — BYU is guaranteed to end its first season of football independence in a bowl game — as long as the Cougars are bowl eligible.

The Armed Forces Bowl extended BYU a provisional invitation to its Dec. 30 game against a Conference USA opponent.

BYU is playing an independent schedule for the first time this year after leaving the Mountain West Conference. The Cougars have two regular season games in Texas — Sept. 10 at Texas and Oct. 28 against TCU at Cowboys Stadium.

NEW TASK FORCE TO REVIEW BOWL LICENSING PROCEDURES

The NCAA will re-examine its role in licensing bowls and has put a three-year hold on any new games in the wake of the Fiesta Bowl's problems.

The NCAA's Division I Board of Directors on Thursday approved a new task force to look at the criteria and process for licensing bowls and will not approve any new bowls until updated standards are put into place.

Spawned by financial improprieties and apparent political improprieties by the Fiesta Bowl uncovered in March, the task force will look at the oversight of bowl sponsoring agencies, conflict-of-interest rules and policies, advertising and title-sponsorship standards, along with oversight and reporting of financial management of bowl games.

ANSWER: If North has as little as king-sixth of clubs and the two major-suit aces, you could make a grand slam. So take it slowly by doubling two hearts for takeout. Next, you can cue-bid to set up a game-force and take it from there. A direct cue-bid here is simply asking for a heart stop for no-trump and uses up a round of bidding inefficiently.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's darling mother died of cancer last summer. During the last month of her illness she was confined to bed, so we hired a nurse, "Lois," to cover the night shift.

The day after the funeral, my husband's father started calling Lois. Dad swore they were "just friends," but continued pursuing her despite our strong disapproval. Two months later, they were dating. Last Thanksgiving, our first holiday without Mom, he cancelled plans to be with us and the grandkids to spend it with "friends" — guess who? On Christmas it was the same story.

This has hit my husband hard. Dad and Mom were married for 50 years. We have always had a close family, particularly at holiday time. Are we wrong to feel that Dad and Lois are disrespecting Mom's memory and to feel hurt and angry?

— GRIEVING
IN MINNESOTA

DEAR GRIEVING: Please accept my sympathy for your family's loss. While it may appear your father-in-law jumped quickly into a relationship, it could be he grieved during the time his wife was ill and has concerns that his own time may be limited, so he wants to enjoy life while he can.

As to missing the holidays, being there with his wife of 50 years conspicuously missing may have been more than he could face. So please, try to be understanding because I'm sure your mother-in-law's death has been painful for all of you.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: After having a stroke, my mother spent the last few years of her life in a wonderful nursing facility. She was an accomplished gardener and enjoyed sharing her bounty. Instead of sending her a fresh flower bouquet for Mother's Day, I'd have some potted tomato plants delivered to her nursing home. On her death bed last year, she reminded us to water her tomato plants. Sadly, those plants outlived her.

I cannot think of a more fitting tribute to her memory than to encourage your readers to provide living vegetable plants for their senior relatives. Most nurseries or florists will accommodate your request and, perhaps, could be persuaded to donate a plant or two to a local senior care center. The joy of nurturing a living plant will continue through the summer.

— CAROLE IN SAN CLEMENTE

DEAR CAROLE: What a sweet idea. Your mother appears to have been a generous and caring woman, and your letter shows the apple doesn't fall far from the tree.

DEAR ABBY: When I was in high school, I was very popular and part of a large social group. That was three years ago. Since graduation, I have been dealing with an anxiety disorder. It has reached the point where I can no longer work, go to school or have much of a social life. I am currently seeking treatment.

Whenever I'm in touch with someone I was close to in high school, I am always asked where I'm working now or what school I'm attending. I feel embarrassed because of my disorder and often I don't respond because I don't know what to say. Any ideas?

— SPEECHLESS
IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SPEECHLESS: You could say that you haven't been well and needed to take some time to recover — or, if you don't want to reveal that much, say, "I decided to take some time to find myself," which is common and sufficiently euphemistic. And the surest way to find treatment for your anxiety disorder would be to tell your family doctor you need to consult a mental health professional who specializes in anxiety disorders. Once you find one, you can quickly return to the mainstream of life.

IF APRIL 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your obsession with business success will pay off this year. Your hard work and persistence has the potential to earn ample rewards, so fearlessly apply yourself to anything that challenges you to excellence. In June, your street smarts and common sense will help you make sound evaluations about investments or financial matters. Display good judgment, launch your most important initiatives and make sound decisions in July and September when Lady Luck is on your side and you'll pave the way for future prosperity and abundance.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A budding romance can blossom into the real deal. Someone you think of merely as a friend might have more than friendship in mind. Pursue romantic fancies without breaking off an existing relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Love can earn five gold stars in your appointment book. You might be able to make helpful connections at community functions or during happy hour. Business and pleasure could mix tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Light a fire under your most important goals. Discuss your wishes and dreams for the future with a close companion and you can receive helpful advice and guidance as well as a solid boost in your enthusiasm.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Roll the dice. Buy the very best that money can buy without overextending the budget or following the crowd. Romantic liaisons might lead to better things this weekend, so dust off your dancing shoes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be restless about routines. A pleasant change of pace is possible. Frequent interruptions or long-distance phone calls may surprise you at work. A charming contact at work might tickle your fancy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hem your intimate relationships with seamless sympathy so they don't come unraveled. Even when you are uncertain or suspicious, it is always best to give your loved ones the benefit of the doubt.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Happiness is more than a warm puppy. Social activities bring joyful memories to the surface. You might be able to wave a flag of commitment over a love affair or enjoy awakened dedication to a career objective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Party hearty. Make the most of opportunities to socialize with congenial others. This is a good weekend to invite friends home for an impromptu cookout or to make family gatherings a priority.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Rub a sterling reputation like a genie's lamp. Be known as someone who follows through on promises and gets the job done. You could get what you want if you ask for a favor from an admirer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Tease them with taste and distinction. You needn't follow the call of the wild with a fashion craze. Your instincts about what constitutes a good buy with lasting values are right on target.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Learning something new could revive a blast from the past. You could be reminded of past skills and forgotten techniques, or get back in touch with an old buddy who has some sound solutions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Read between the lines. Honest communication can strengthen affectionate ties and boost the bonds of affection. Don't give the wrong impression by pretending to be more independent than you really are.
