MASTERMIND BEHIND 2001 ATTACKS ON AMERICA KILLED IN U.S.-LED OPERATION

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Osama bin Laden, the glowering mastermind behind the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks that murdered thousands of Americans, was killed in an operation led by the United States, President Barack Obama said Sunday.

"Justice has been done," said the president in a dramatic late-night announcement at the White House.

A small team of Americans killed bin Laden in a firefight Sunday at a compound in Pakistan, the president said, and took custody of his remains. American officials said they were being handled in accordance with Islamic tradition.

A jubilant crowd gathered outside the White House as word spread of bin Laden's death after a global manhunt that lasted nearly a decade.

Former President George W. Bush, who was in office on the day of the attacks, issued a written statement hailing bin Laden's death as a momentous achievement. "The fight against terror goes on, but tonight America has sent an unmistakable message: No matter how long it takes, justice will be done," he said.

Buhl voters to decide on school district levy

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

BUHL — Buhl School District is proposing a one-year, $571,903 supplemental levy to keep its schools operating as they do now.

Last year, district voters defeated a two-year, $466,000 levy request, and the district dipped into half of its reserves to keep programs running.

Superintendent Byron Stutzman said the new levy proposal is needed for the school to function as it does now. Voters will go to the polls on May 17.

"This allows us to continue to offer the education we currently do for next year," he said. "We will have to cut at least two positions if it doesn't pass."

Stutzman said without the levy, students may be looking at a pay-to-play scenario for sports and other extracurricular activities.

The levy would cost about $120 per $100,000 of assessed property value. A primary residence assessed at $100,000 would pay $60 for the year with a homeowner's exemption, according to Stutzman.

The budget crunch has already reduced maintenance, district office and counseling staff, as well as student classroom supplies and programs.

Agencies gearing up for 'average' wildfire season

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Agencies are gearing up for what could be an average Idaho fire season, but the final outcome depends on how much the sun's midsummer rays will dry up vegetation.

The region's unusually wet spring tends to cause heavy growth of grasses that eventually dry out and can be a problem, said Ken Frederick, spokesman for the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise.

"That becomes a bit of a problem depending on how many dry lightning storms we have," he said. "We could have a lot of grass and brush fires."

Cheatgrass dries out in June, and native grasses can catch fire by midsummer, depending on how hot and dry the weather is.

People can help minimize the odds of a blaze through their actions.

information. Senior administration officials said the terrorist mastermind was found inside a custom-built compound with two security gates. They said it appeared to have been constructed to harbor one high-value target and that for undisclosed reasons, officials became clear the hideout was bin Laden's.

Officials also said they believe the death puts al-Qaida on a path of decline that will be difficult to reverse, but there was no word on the whereabouts of bin Laden's second-in-command, Ayman al-Zawahri.

The stunning end to the world's most widely-watched manhunt came just months before the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Centers and Pentagon, orchestrated by bin Laden's al-Qaida organization, that killed more than 3,000 people.

The attacks a decade ago seemed to come out of nowhere, even though al-Qaida had previously damaged American targets overseas.

The terrorists hijacked planes, flew one of them into one of Manhattan's Twin Towers — and, moments later, into the other one. Both buildings collapsed, trapping thousands inside and claiming the lives of firefighters and others who had rushed to help them.

A third plane slammed into the Pentagon, defacing the symbol of America's military night. A fourth crashed in rural Pennsylvania after passengers overpowered the hijackers and forced the craft from the air — before it could hit its intended target in Washington.

The attacks set off a chain of events that led the United States into wars in Afghanistan, and then Iraq, and America's entire intelligence apparatus was overhauled to counter the threat of more terror attacks at home.

A senior administration official says Obama gave the final order for U.S. officials to go after bin Laden on Friday. The official added that a small team found their quarry hiding in a large home in an affluent suburb of Islamabad. The raid occurred in the early morning hours Sunday.

Administration officials offered some details of the operation.

Based on statements given by U.S. detainees, intelligence officials have known for years that bin Laden trusted one al-Qaida courier in particular and they believed he might be living with him in hiding. In November, intelligence officials found out where he was living, a huge fortified compound in an affluent suburb of Islamabad. It was surrounded by walls as high as 18 feet high, topped with barbed wire. There were two security gates and no phone or Internet running into the house.

Intelligence officials believed the $1 million home was custom-built to harbor a major terrorist. CIA experts analyzed whether it could be anyone else, but time and again, they decided it was almost certainly bin Laden.

Three adult males were also killed in Sunday's raid, including one of bin Laden's sons, whom officials did not name. One of bin Laden's sons, Hamza, is a senior member of al-Qaida.

Obama spoke with Bush and former President Bill Clinton Sunday night to inform them of the developments.

Obama struck a less than boastful tone in his brief announcement, although he said the death of bin Laden was "the most significant achievement to date in our nation's effort to defeat al-Qaida.

"His death does not mark the end of our effort. There's no doubt that al-Qaida will continue to pursue attacks against us. We must and we will remain vigilant," he added.

Moments after he spoke, American officials cautioned that the events could lead to heightened threats against the United States.

Officials said the U.S. would ensure that bin Laden's body was handled in accordance with Islamic tradition.

The proceeds from admission go toward students, either in scholarships to the auto body program or to help pay for a class trip at the end of the auto tech program. The show is organized by the CSI students, with instructors overseeing it.

Aside from the cash the event brings in, it has other purposes, according to auto body instructors Richard Frey and Tim Pierce.

"I think it is fun for a lot of students because they don't quite get to that level when they're in classes," Pierce said.

McElliott said just looking at the cars gives him new ideas or inspiration, and the people on the floor will tell him about parts they used to get a certain effect. He waved at a 1926 T-bucket, a hot-rod Ford Model T.

President Barack Obama speaks during a televised statement on the death of Osama bin Laden on Sunday.

Idaho reaction: Risch calls bin Laden's death good day for America

The Associated Press

BOISE — U.S. Sen. Jim Risch says the death of Osama bin Laden is good for America and vindication for the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks led by al-Qaida.

The Idaho Republican told KTVB-TV the operation that led to bin-Laden's death sends a message that America is committed to justice — no matter how long it takes.

President Obama said Sunday that a small team of Americans carried out an attack in Pakistan and took custody of bin Laden's remains.

Risch, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, says bin-Laden's death also means America must be cautious about al-Qaida-led reprisals.

U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson said while the news is worth celebrating, it is important to remember the victims of terrorism.

U.S. Rep. Raul Labrador told KTVB now is the time for the U.S. to begin pulling out of Afghanistan.

Fires

That means everything from avoiding casually tossing a cigarette butt outdoors to clearing the ground of vegetation when doing work with heat-generating tools such as torches used for plumbing, Frederick said.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management is organizing its firefighting crews, with 97 seasonal employees in the agency's Twin Falls District. Of those, 42 are new hires coming aboard late this month. There will be orientation and training in early June.

"They're just anticipating that it's going to be an average fire year," said Heather Tiel-Nelson, spokeswoman for the BLM.

There's also work remaining from the damage left last August by the 300,000-acre Long Butte Fire southwest of Hagerman.

The spring moisture has helped the vegetation there regrow, Tiel-Nelson said, though interior fencing will still need to go up.

The Sawtooth National Forest isn't expecting fire action to pick up for a while.

"The fire season for most of the summer's going to be pretty quiet. It will depend on when it stops raining and how hot gets," said spokeswoman Julie Thomas.

Still, the situation could change with dry days of 90-degree weather, she said.

The Douglas fir bark beetle's presence in the Sawtooth Mountains, including around Ketchum, is an area of concern, she said. But she noted the weather currently is keeping the risk down.

"Right now, just because of the amount of snow and the temperatures, we're not looking for a huge fire season anywhere on the Sawtooths today," she said, adding that they're always on guard.

Elsewhere in the nation, the fire season has gotten off to a blistering start.

So far this year, fires have charred 2.4 million acres across the nation, according to the NIFC. That's more than twice the 10-year average for this time of year, and the most since fires burned 2.2 million acres between January and April 2006.

"We believe we have resources for this year," said U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar, who toured the NIFC on Friday. "But it is one of those issues which ... we are struggling with because it is a very tough deficit budget time in our country."

Still, the impact is noticeable in Idaho. Four of eight C-130 aircraft scheduled to train in fire suppression here were sent to aid efforts in Texas.

Training is planned for this week in Boise and Twin Falls with the remaining aircraft of the Modular Airborne Fire Fighting System, a training that includes military and civilian pilots, the U.S. Forest Service and BLM.

Dancers from 4 states meet at CSI to fight cancer

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

It's not all glitz and glam-our as dancers fight cancer. Nearly 1,000 dancers from Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Utah were showcased Friday and Saturday in the 11th annual Canyon Rim Dance Classic at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium.

The competition is well supported by area studios, director Kelli Turner said.

"They all come," she said. "It's rare because they're competitive, but it's for a greater cause, so it's a blessing."

The invitational brings $5,000 to the American Cancer Society, Turner said.

Turner's sister, Shari Mauldin, who also directed the classic, said the event has raised $62,000 in 11 years.

"We're a diamond sponsor with the American Cancer Society," Turner said.

Mauldin and Turner own Mauldin's Dance Studios' and Mauldin's Dance Academy, the hosting studios for the classic.

"We're so grateful for all the support we receive from the community and the college for letting us have it here," Turner said. "Many dancers have loved ones that are either battling this life threatening disease or have been successful in overcoming their fight against cancer. It sends a good message to our dancers."

The invitational enhances the development of dancers through critique.

"Cancer touches almost every person in some way, be it a friend, a family member or a colleague," she said. "We, as a studio, felt it personally when our director, Eric Coffman, died of cancer in 2008. Anything we can do to bring attention to this disease and to fight it is a worthwhile endeavor."

Dog tag discovery unearths intriguing family tales in N. Idaho

By Sandra Lee
The Lewiston Tribune

LEWISTON — Evan Yeoman of Lewiston was cruising Demolay Park overlooking the Snake River with his new metal detector when it pinged, telling him there was a penny about 10 inches down.

It was the depth that was intriguing, Yeoman said. "That's how I judge how long a thing's been setting there — how deep it is."

He remembers thinking as he stuck his knife into the ground that it was probably a piece of garbage; but then again it could be something like the 1902 Indian head penny or the two 1918 buffalo nickels he found in a friend's Normal Hill yard.

A couple of weeks later, Joshua Cosseboom was walking his dog, GD, short for GaryDude, outside his Kendrick apartment when he saw a small piece of bead chain sticking out of the dirt. He pulled on it.

The earth in both places yielded dirt-encrusted military dog tags, identifiable as being World War II-era by the small notches cut in one edge.

Cosseboom took his find to a friend, David Ramirez of Kendrick, a Vietnam veteran who instantly recognized it for what it was. The notches were used during World War II and the Korean War, Ramirez said.

It was called a "tooth notch," both Yeoman and Ramirez said.

"When someone was killed, the dog tag would be crammed between the dead person's two front teeth so it would stay with the body," Yeoman said. "I thought it was a joke at first," he said, but some research on the Internet convinced him the story was likely true.

Then again, maybe it's not.

Yes, the notch is an indicator of the war in which it was issued, but the tales of why are almost as numerous as websites. The mythical "tooth notch" story was perpetuated, according to the Internet site Wikipedia, by information issued by the Graves Registration Service during the Vietnam War to Army troops headed overseas.

The owners of these two dog tags apparently had survived their wars, however, and the goal became to find them or their families.

Yeoman's belonged to Denzil E. Schetzle. The address on the tag was 1602 Seventh Ave. in Lewiston and his father, Fred Schetzle, was listed as next of kin.

The stamped metal also contained the inscription T-42, which after a search, Yeoman found meant Schetzle was immunized for tetanus in 1942. A tiny "A" off to one side was Schetzle's blood type, and the "P" was for Protestant, his religion.

Cosseboom's tag belonged to Martin N. Caturia, son of Jerry J. Caturia of Arkansaw, Wis. He was vaccinated in 1942, had type O blood, and was Catholic.

Where both discoveries were made, dirt had been hauled in and moved around over the years. Schetzle had once lived on Normal Hill; Caturia apparently lived in Potlatch at one time, and the apartment where his tag was found had once been a diner.

Ramirez said he was honored that Cosseboom would bring him the tag. "I gave my word I'd go out of my way" to find Caturia's family.

The Veterans Administration in Boise refused to give him any information because he wasn't next of kin, so Ramirez tried the direct approach — the telephone. On the fourth call, he found Fred Caturia, a first cousin living in Arkansaw.

The fifth call was to Cosseboom to let him know family had been found.

Martin Caturia died a couple years earlier in Seattle. He had a wife and two children, but the Wisconsin cousin didn't know how to locate them. He also was one of four brothers, two of whom served in the Army during World War II. One of them spent 18 months to two years as a prisoner of war.

Caturia was a combat veteran, and even though he didn't die in combat, he deserved respect and to be returned to his family, said Ramirez, who is proud of his own combat service during two tours in Vietnam.

A member of the Kendrick post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Ramirez took a small American flag of his own and carefully folded it as they would a larger one for presentation to a family at a funeral. It will accompany the dog tag back to Caturia's family, he said.

"It's cool the rest of the family will be able to see his dog tag and have it in their hands, to have another piece of the history of their family," Cosseboom said.

"That's what this is all about," Ramirez said.

Schetzle died in 1993 in Wasilla, Alaska, where he had lived for more than 55 years. His sister, Dottie, and a nephew and niece are still Lewiston residents, Yeoman said, but it was his son who filled in all the blanks except how the dog tag ended up in a Lewiston park.

Schetzle served in the 8th Air Force based in England. It suffered massive casualties in bombing runs over Europe. He was a waist gunner, and from what little his father told him, said Brian Schetzle of Wasilla, "they had the least likelihood of living."

Depending on a number of variables, crews had to fly 25 to 35 and sometimes more missions before a possible ticket home. Most of the elder Schetzle's first squadron was killed, his son said, so he volunteered to go up with a new outfit. "He kept volunteering because they killed all his buddies. He wanted some payback, I guess."

New study shows trees killed by mountain pine beetle ignite faster

The Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. — The red needles of a tree killed in a mountain pine beetle attack can ignite up to three times faster than the green needles of a healthy tree, new research into the pine beetle epidemic has found.

The findings by U.S. Forest Service ecologist Matt Jolly are being used by fellow ecologist Russ Parsons to develop a new model that will eventually aid firefighters who battle blazes in the tens of millions of acres from Canada to Colorado where forest canopies have turned from green to red from the beetle outbreak.

The new model incorporates a level of detail and physics that doesn't exist in current models, and it is much more advanced in predicting how a wildfire in a beetle-ravaged region will behave, Parsons said.

"It gives you so much more information about what to expect," he said. "Are these people safe here or should they run away? If we put a crew on the ground here, can they make it to the top of the ridge in ample time?"

Many communities in the Rocky Mountain West have beetle kill forests in some proximity.

And the new research dispels the notion that beetle-killed trees present no greater fire danger than live ones, a theory that had gained traction after a couple of wet, cool summers tamped down fire activity in the region, Jolly said.

Luttmer rallies for Pro Trucks win at MVS

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Scott Luttmer may not have started off with the best seat in the house for the Intermountain Pro Trucks main event, but by the halfway mark he was in the catbird's seat for the remainder of the race.

Luttmer began the 50-lap contest from the sixth starting position in a field of 14 trucks. Sam Harris led for the first 22 laps, but a hard-charging Dan Doan took over the position for the following two.

Soon it was Luttmer surging to the lead after winding through traffic. As the race continued to run caution-free, he cruised through to Victory Lane.

"We were up until two-thirty, three o'clock this morning getting it ready," Luttmer said of his rush just to get his truck set up. "We didn't even get in a whole practice in. In the main (event) it was tough to start with, but when we got to the bottom and the opportunity was there, we had to take it."

"We got the inside position and it was a little rough in there for a while, but once we got in the lead I knew we had a pretty good shot at it."

Finishing in the runner-up position, Johnny Pierre came from mid-pack to cross the line 4.258 seconds behind Luttmer. Dallas Montes, a 17-year-old from Bakersfield, Calif., delivered the biggest gain in the race, driving the Thompson's Motorsports truck to a third place finish after starting 12th in the field. A sophomore in the series at the age of 14, Hannah Newhouse finished fourth, followed by Doan and Harris.

The Budweiser Super Stocks main event settled in early, with Kris McKean racing to a commanding lead while the rest of the pack scrambled for position. At lap 12, Steve Edens and Jenna Quale made contact on the front stretch, sending Edens skidding on his driver's side door before coming to a stop with Quale pinched against the roof of his car. Edens quickly climbed out of the car and gave a thumbs-up to the crowd.

"I was coming out of Turn 4 and I saw Jenna was in the wall, and I got on the brakes but it wasn't going to stop," Edens said. "I have been in a lot of wrecks but this one was a little different. But the way they mandate the cages

Wade lifts Miami to win over Celtics

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade knew his regular-season numbers against Boston were lacking.

He also knew that wouldn't matter in the playoffs.

And Game 1 — which seemed more like Round 1 — of what's already an emotionally charged series went to Wade and the Miami Heat.

Wade scored 38 points on 14 of 21 shooting, James Jones set a Miami postseason record with 25 points off the bench, and the Heat beat the Celtics 99-90 on Sunday to open their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

"It's a big game. It's Game 1, at home," Wade said. "You've got to take care of home court. These guys expect this from me. I wasn't giving it to them in the regular season versus them and I wanted to come out today and be a leader."

LeBron James finished with 22 points, six rebounds and five assists for Miami, which led by as many as 19 before a fiery finish that saw plenty of players jawing at each

Ray Allen scored 25 points for Boston, which lost for the first time in five games this postseason. Pierce scored 19 and Delonte West finished with 10 for the Celtics, while Rajon Rondo and

Today could be a big day for NFL situation

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — If these are not fun times for football fans, they are captivating days for lawyers.

The NFL lockout is back in force after a short hiatus last week. A St. Louis appeals court could determine as early as today whether the league deserves a permanent stay of an injunction granted to the players in Minnesota to block the lockout.

"We are in uncharted but fascinating legal territory," agent and attorney Ralph Cindrich said as he examined the short-term reinstatement of the lockout by three judges from the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. "The owners' lockout is temporary now; it can become permanent after the same three judges do a detailed review. If the lockout is reinstated, it puts the players down on points big."

If it's not, something Cindrich predicts, league business could resume almost immediately, even as more NFL appeals are filed. Cindrich believes that even though those judges voted 2-1 Friday to review the matter, they won't overturn Judge Susan Richard Nelson's original determination that the lockout was preventing the players from earning a living.

With the draft behind them, the 32 teams can't have contact with any players. That includes veterans along with rookies just selected. It also means undrafted free agents, who usually sign contracts hours after the seventh round concludes or the next day.

"You just do what you do and abide by the guidelines the league puts out as we go along," Rams general manager Billy Devaney said. "Everybody's in the same boat; we're not stressing out or anything. It'll eventually get settled and you just go with it."

Going with it for the players means training on their own. For first-round picks, it means devouring the playbooks they were able to get from their teams during Friday's short break in the lockout.

"The quarterbacks and offensive linemen and wide receivers, these young guys, can you imagine? With no mini-camps and no OTAs, if they show up Aug. 1 to training camp, they're going to be so lost," Montana-based agent Ken Staninger said. "It may be a lost draft, other than the elite-elite."

For coaches, it means evaluating how they addressed their needs in the draft, and which undrafted players they might approach when allowed to do so.

Dallas coach Jason Garrett has all his plans organized for offseason workouts and minicamps.

"What we did is we laid out the entire calendar for the offseason assuming there was no lockout," Garrett said. "So all of those dates were in place soon after the season ended. But obviously we had to be responsive to the lockout and when the players came back, and we'll continue to do that based on what the new rules are."

Those rules are uncertain even if the players win the next round in the appeals court. Among the league's options is reinstating the 2010 guidelines, which featured more limited free agency and no salary cap. And no minimum for spending, which could come into play more than ever with some owners who fear profits will continue to decline.

"It's a chaotic time," said Ben Dogra, agent for Sam Bradford and Patrick Willis, among many other players. "There are a lot of moving points, and it means daily uncertainty."

Amid the uncertainty, one message rang clear at Radio City Music Hall during the draft. It was delivered by the fans, who repeatedly booed Commissioner Roger Goodell and also chanted "we want football."

Goodell responded, "So do I."

For now, getting football back is in the hands of the judges.

Zollinger moves up in District VI rodeo

Times-News

BURLEY — After an aggressive weekend, McKenzie Zollinger of Oakley moved from second place into the top position of the girls all-around standings in District VI, ahead of teammate Jacee Bedke.

Zollinger won both goat-tying go-rounds, tied with Tanisha Adams of Declo in barrels on Friday and won the event on Saturday, and placed first in poles on Saturday. Zollinger also placed third and sixth in breakaway.

Bedke picked up a win in breakaway on Saturday. Zollinger has a total of 219.50 points and Bedke is at 199.

The boys all-around leader, Garrett Alger of Filer, has pulled away from the rest of the competition with 162 points. Jade Wadsworth of Kimberly is in second with 78.

Alger won the steer wrestling on Saturday and finished second on Friday. He also had a pair of fourths in calf roping and a third in team roping with brother Tegan. Wadsworth had wins in calf roping and steer wrestling on Friday.

Joshua Hilscher of Oakley and Charles Bridges III of Twin Falls recorded their first wins of the season. Hilscher was the only cowboy to cover his bull Saturday, scoring 57 points. Bridges earned 56 points in bareback, bettering the 48-point ride by Trevor Eldridge of Filer.

Other first-time winners were Taylor Lloyd of Oakley and Hagan Hitt of Declo — with a pair of wins in team roping — Adams in barrels and Miranda Anderson from Kimberly in breakaway.

GOODING — At this point of the high school rodeo season, its important to be in good position heading toward the district finals.

Darby Fox from Glenms Ferry has dominated the District V girls side of action to build a big edge in the girls all-around standings with 177 points. Fox once again delivered on Friday night with wins in breakaway, barrels and poles and added a second in goats. On Saturday, for the first time in six rodeos, Fox didn't win poles but finished second. She also placed tenth in goats and eighth in breakaway.

Valene Lickley of Jerome and Haillie Taylor of Hailey sit second and third, respectively, in the all-around. Though it's a wide margin, they're not giving up on chasing Fox down.

"No, for sure not," said Lickley, who trails Fox by 28

"I'm working slowly to get back in by keeping my head in it and being mentally strong."

points. "I'm working slowly to get back in by keeping my head in it and being mentally strong."

With Fox not having one of her better rodeos on Saturday, Lickley was able to do some catching up. She put together wins in breakaway (3.90 seconds) and poles (21.378 seconds), finished fifth in goats, eighth in barrels, and a pair of thirds with partner, Garrett Webb of Wendell in team roping.

Taylor also was able to make up some ground winning the barrels in a time of 18.159 seconds. She also placed ninth in goats and breakaway.

On the boys side, Braydon Urrutia was a two-time winner on Saturday but it came with a whole lot of work and pain.

Urrutia took the bareback riding with a 56-point ride on Lake Louise.

"It was a decent horse but not honest," said Urrutia. "He kept dipping and diving so I had to d-up and grab a hold. We were a good team and we worked well together. He about got the best of me a couple of times."

His winning ride in bull riding was another story. Bull 155 worked hard to get Urrutia off and at about four seconds almost succeeded when Urrutia got out of shape and spent the remainder of the ride hanging off the right side of the bull. After making the full eight seconds and being thrown to the dirt, the bull pretty well stomped Urrutia. The ride was anything but pretty but it did earn Urrutia a winning score of 45 points.

"I hung in there and didn't give up," said Urrutia. "But I sure paid for it."

On Friday night, Jesse Nelson of Valley won bareback with a ride of 51 points on Rocket Man and bull riding with 62 points on Gentle Giant.

Tanner Hall of Valley turned in the best time of the year of 6.56 seconds in steer wrestling on Saturday for his first win. Hall's Valley teammate, Marlee Mussmann, finished in 8.22 seconds to win in goat tying on Friday night for her first victory.

Iain Gonzalez is getting closer to making a saddle bronc ride but Nails was able to throw the Wendell cowboy to the dirt before the eight-second whistle.

"That horse is powerful, smart and strong," said Gonzalez. "I need to work more on moving my feet."

Grizzlies continue strong play, stun Thunder

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Zach Randolph and the Memphis Grizzlies powered their way to another playoff upset — not that he considers it one.

Randolph had a playoff career-high 34 points and 10 rebounds, Marc Gasol added 20 points and 13 boards, and the Grizzlies outmatched the Oklahoma City Thunder inside for a 114-101 victory in the opening game of the Western Conference semifinals on Sunday.

“We believe,” Randolph said. “We definitely believe. Our confidence is up high. I tell the guys we can compete and play with anybody.”

Just as they did in a first-round upset of top-seeded San Antonio, Randolph and Gasol provided enough punch to give eighth-seeded Memphis a road victory in Game 1.

Randolph and Gasol each scored 20 points in the same regular-season game only once this season, but did it in Game 1 against the Spurs and again to negate the Thunder's home-court advantage right from the start.

“I think we always try to do that. The thing is that it's not always possible,” Gasol said. “We always try to come out and execute and play the right way. It's not always possible. Teams are going to adjust, and they're going to do something different.

“We've got to keep being hungry, keep being unselfish offensively and defensively and keep playing the right way.”

Game 2 is Tuesday night in Oklahoma City.

Kevin Durant led the Thunder with 33 points and 11 rebounds. Russell Westbrook scored 29, but the All-Star tandem couldn't overcome a big advantage in the paint for Memphis.

Randolph had two games with at least 30 points and 10 rebounds in the regular season against the Thunder, as Memphis won the series 3-1.

And he was at it again from the tip, scoring the Grizzlies' first seven points to provide them a lead they wouldn't relinquish.

“You can't stop him. You've got to make them shoot tough shots like he's been doing, but if he's making them, he's tough to stop,” Durant said.

Ethier streak reaches 27, Dodgers lose

LOS ANGELES — Dustin Moseley pitched seven shutout innings for his first victory of 2011, Brad Hawpe doubled his RBI total for the season with a two-run single, and the San Diego Padres beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-0 on Sunday.

Andre Ethier extended his hitting streak to 27 games when he led off the Dodgers' seventh with a single. It is the second-longest streak by a Dodger since the club relocated to Los Angeles in 1958, and is five shy of Willie Davis' franchise-record 31-game run in 1969.

MARLINS 9, REDS 5

CINCINNATI — Hanley Ramirez hit his first home run of the season and Florida went deep a season-high five times to beat Cincinnati.

John Buck homered to snap a seventh-inning tie. Greg Dobbs, Mike Stanton and Emilio Bonifacio also connected for the Marlins, who have won eight of 11.

BRAVES 6, CARDINALS 5

ATLANTA — Brooks Conrad recaptured his pinch-hit magic of 2010, driving in the winning run in the ninth inning to give Atlanta a victory over St. Louis.

NATIONALS 5, GIANTS 2

WASHINGTON — Jordan Zimmermann allowed two runs over six innings to end his three-game losing streak

ASTROS 5, BREWERS 0

HOUSTON — Carlos Lee hit a three-run homer before being taken to the hospital to have X-rays on his injured ribcage, and Bud Norris combined with three relievers on a three-hitter in Houston's win over Milwaukee.

PIRATES 8, ROCKIES 4

DENVER — Charlie Morton pitched into the sixth inning for his third win, Garrett Jones had three RBIs and Pittsburgh beat Colorado.

DIAMONDBACKS 4, CUBS 3

PHOENIX — Daniel Hudson pitched seven solid innings and Ryan Roberts homered as Arizona took advantage of some key mistakes by Chicago.

AMERICAN LEAGUE INDIANS 5, TIGERS 4

CLEVELAND — Michael Brantley singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and the Cleveland Indians rallied to extend their home winning streak to 13 games.

Cleveland's sixth straight win overall increased the Tigers' losing streak to six.

ROYALS 10, TWINS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mike Aviles homered and drove in four runs to help the Royals beat the Twins.

The Twins have lost six in a row and were swept in a three-game series by the

Sharks take 2-0 series lead over Red Wings

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The defensemen are scoring, the high-scoring forwards are working in the defensive zone, and Antti Niemi played the same way he did when he knocked San Jose out of the playoffs a year ago.

That all added up to another win for the Sharks and a 2-0 series lead against the Detroit Red Wings in the Western Conference semifinals.

Ian White and Nicolas Wallin scored their first goals of the postseason, Niemi made 33 saves and the Sharks put together a complete performance to beat the Red Wings 2-1 on Sunday.

Niemi helped kill off three penalties in the opening half of the first period and came up with countless big saves in the final two periods of perhaps his best playoff game since helping Chicago sweep San Jose in the conference finals a year ago.

“We like him on our side a lot better,” forward Dany Heatley said. “He's a steady guy. He makes the saves he should make; he's in position. And he makes a lot of saves he shouldn't make. He changes games for us sometimes.”

LIGHTNING 3, CAPITALS 2, OT

WASHINGTON — Vincent Lecavalier scored his second goal of the game 6:19 into overtime, and the Tampa Bay Lightning took a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinals by winning their fifth straight game.

Fifth-seeded Tampa Bay appeared headed for a much simpler victory, leading 2-1 in the third period, but two-time NHL MVP Alex Ovechkin forced the extra period by scoring with 67 seconds left in regulation.

Daniel Shirley then took over the lead, eventually winning his second race of the season followed by Allen

Williams. McKean muscled his way through the field to finish third just ahead of Casey Pehrson.

In other events, Rob Powers captured his first win with the Pro 4's after taking the lead at lap two of the 25-lap race.

Brennan's Carpets Pony Stocks driver Todd Audet and Quale's Electronic Hornets driver Doug “Tank” Brownfield ran to their second main event wins of the season. Jason Quale also captured his second win of the year in the Quale's Jr. Stingers after getting around Russel Dalton on the final lap.

throughout, with West earning a technical and Jermaine O'Neal picking up a flagrant foul along the way, before things really got hot in the fourth. Pierce took offense with a hard foul by Jones, each getting double-technicalns there, and Pierce and Wade — who have a bit of history — renewed acquaintances not long after that.

Referee Ed Malloy called both for double-technicalns, and Pierce was screaming as he departed. Boston coach Doc Rivers said he thought Jones and Wade went at Pierce too aggressively on the two plays that ended his forward's night.

The Celtics tried to rally. Allen made a 3-pointer to get within 90-82, but Chris Bosh and Wade had Miami's next two baskets, restoring a double-digit lead that wasn't again threatened.

“Every game is going to go like this,” Wade said. “We look forward to the challenge.”

Wade averaged 12.8 points on 28 percent shooting against the Celtics in four regular-season matchups, his worst numbers in both categories against any opponent this season.

He had nine field goals and 23 points by halftime — while the entire Boston starting five combined for eight field goals and 21 points in the first 24 minutes.

Luna won’t be recalled; opponents should look elsewhere

Lots of Idahoans are boiling mad about Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s education reform package, which was passed by the Legislature and signed into law by Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter last month. Some of them want to get rid of Luna by recalling him. That isn’t going to happen.

Our view: Critics of Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s education reforms should concentrate on changing what they can.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Before the Fourth of July, opponents would have to submit 158,107 valid signatures to Idaho Secretary of State Ben Ysursa just to get a special election called. That election would be Aug. 30 — the Tuesday before Labor Day — when Idaho will be preoccupied with county fairs and getting its kids back to school. Voter turnout would be small. And for Luna to be fired, 268,852 Idahoans would have to agree to do it. That represents the number of votes the superintendent received in the Nov. 2, 2010, election when he beat Stan Olson with 60.5 percent of the vote. Don Quixote faced better odds. If foes of the initiatives want to do something worthy of their time, they should campaign to get referendums on the November 2012 ballot to remove the three laws that implemented the changes rather than focusing on Luna. That has a better shot.

Critics have about five weeks left to gather 47,432 voter signatures. By most accounts, they’re well on their way. Idahoans’ qualms aren’t about Luna — after all, they’ve elected him twice — but with his initiatives that phased out teacher tenure, sharply curtailed teacher negotiating rights and shifted some state funding that will go to the purchase of laptop computers for students. Turnout in 2012 will be high — it’s a presidential election year — and even some conservative voters might be inclined to turn thumbs-down on the education reforms that have deeply polarized the state.

Never underestimate the size of the constituency for public schools in this state. For every one of the 15,000 teachers, there are many more Idahoans who have kids in school — or who have husbands, wives, sons, daughters, fathers or mothers in the classroom. Besides, Idahoans deserve a chance to vote on issues as fundamental as the Luna reforms. If Luna were to lose his job, the changes he pushed through the Legislature would still be on the books. Opponents should concentrate on what’s possible, not fulminating about what isn’t.

The empty war on gas prices

Nothing brings out the shamelessness of Washington politicians like rising gas prices, and President Obama is the latest case. His Justice Department last week announced a task force to investigate oil industry prices and practices for fraud. But if there is fraud here, it is that the president and Republicans in Congress continue to fuel the myth that the federal government might, with an investigation here or plans to drill there, affect the short-term world-market price of a commodity America doesn’t and never will control. If Obama’s new investigation sounds familiar, that’s because it’s the sort of thing President George W. Bush and the GOP Congress did in 2005 and 2006. Their probes were a waste of money.

Stephen Stromberg

Not only did investigators conclude that there was no widespread price fixing, they had a tough time even finding credible complaints of price manipulation. Does Obama really think that his administration will find anything fundamentally different about the sorts of factors that are pushing up gas prices now? Republicans are cynically encouraging this nonsense. National Journal reports that GOP lawmakers are passing bills and holding hearings that won’t result in actual laws but will allow them to bash Democrats on gas prices, which they plan to make a major theme heading into the 2012 elections. Among other things, they are preparing to hit Democrats for not supporting a trio of bills from the House Natural Resources Committee that would expand offshore drilling. More offshore drilling isn’t a bad idea in the long term, but it would do nothing to lower current gas prices. The Republicans’ gas-price campaign should also be familiar. Liberals tried something similar during the previous administration, when they blamed higher gas prices on Bush’s foreign policy. Rising gas prices simply aren’t Obama’s fault. Just as they weren’t Bush’s fault. Americans need to get used to factors affecting gas prices that aren’t in America’s control, particularly that the developing world will demand more oil as the economies of nations such as China and India grow. That’s not ideology; it’s supply and demand.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Good riddance to retired wolf advocate

The “Fish and Wildlife’s wolfman retiring after 23 years” was a great article on a Californian man turned wolf expert and advocate. All Idahoans should thank Mr. Bangs for leading “... the effort to reintroduce and recover healthy wolf populations in the northern Rocky Mountains,” maybe it should have read “the effort to eliminate the big game populations in the Rocky Mountains.” Funny how there was mention of “... science being followed” and how Mr. Bangs worked with ranchers’ wolf problems but no mention of the devastation of the elk herds in Idaho caused by the release of these non-native (that’s another story) predators. Must be federal government science based on opinions from west and east coast liberals and United Nations wolf huggers. It’s also funny how Suzanne Stone’s environmental group, “Defenders of Wildlife” (who worked with Mr. Bangs), shows no concern for the fate of Idaho’s elk herds. Does the group plan to call for the elimination of wolves when elk are put on the endangered species list? “Just big dogs,” Mr. Bangs? These big dogs form packs and kill everything in their path, mainly Idaho’s big game herds. So goes the mentality of a Californian-born federal government environmentalist that really does not understand the science of nature and ecosystems. I hope the person that takes his place really does have a grasp on reality (not likely under the Obama administration). Good riddance, Mr. Bangs.

Fix court system in child abuse cases

This is in response to the article in the paper on “Zero tolerance of child abuse.” You better revamp the laws you already have and straighten out the court system before you promote some more zero tolerance laws. You need to get rid of the hearsay trials as probably half the people in prison for some form of this offense are innocent. Prisoners are not given the chance to prove it as the post-conviction system does not work. The courts will not let it work because the people found innocent could sue for a lot of money. People that just admit guilt usually get three to five years indeterminate and do anywhere from six months to three years in jail. People that declare innocence can get 15 to life and do at least eight years in prison. The children are running the show now. All they have to do is go to the school counselor and declare some kind of abuse and through suggestion the child will be sent to another counselor and then the police. The parent will then go to jail. I will say that children under 5 have to be seen being abused or have bruises. In this case, at least there might be a witness. In the above cases, no evidence of any kind or witnesses are required to send someone to prison. The system is very wrong! I guess the next step toward zero tolerance would be to go out — and arrest — anyone with children. After all, there are hearsay trials; no evidence required, just he said she said.

Tornado victims seek solace in church services

The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Macolee Muhammed accepted the prayer of a relief worker who stopped by what was left of her Birmingham home. It didn't matter that she was Muslim and he was a Southern Baptist.

"If you came here to help, the only person who sent you was God," she said.

The storms that roared across the South last week flattened churches and crushed the homes of pastors and parishioners in a ragged stretch from Mississippi to Virginia. At least 342 people were killed and thousands more hurt.

On the first Sunday after the disaster, believers streamed to houses of worship to give thanks for being spared, to mourn the dead and to ponder impossible questions. Why did some survive without any explanation? Why did others die for no apparent reason?

Many people in this highly religious region saw God at work, even amid the devastation.

"God just put his big old arms around us," said Peggy Blevins, 59, of Rainsville, Ala. "I don't understand why he takes some people and leaves others. But I thank him just the same for protecting us."

When the storm drew near, she and her family hid in a hallway of their house. She believes they survived only because some trees fell on the house, pinning it down and preventing the tornado from hurling it through the air.

"To some people it might sound cold, but God does have a plan," Blevins said. "I know I sound like one of those Southern Baptists, but I am."

In most small towns around here, churches serve as community centers, town halls and gymnasiums. Besides Sunday services, they host Boy Scout troop meetings, neighborhood voting, bake sales, basketball games and Wednesday night prayer meetings.

Group of 6 hones plan to cut deficits

By Andrew Taylor and Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan group of six senators is closing in on what could represent the best chance for tackling a deficit crisis that has forced the government to borrow more than 40 cents of every dollar it spends.

Their plan, still a work in progress, would reduce borrowing by up to $4 trillion over the next decade by putting the two parties' sacred cows on the chopping block. Republicans would have to agree to higher taxes while Democrats would have to accept cuts in popular benefit programs such as Medicare, Medicaid and maybe even Social Security.

There is urgency to their work.

Most Republicans and some Democrats in Congress have said they will not vote to increase the government's ability to borrow without some action addressing the nation's long-term debt. The government is expected to reach its borrowing limit of $14.3 trillion by mid-May. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner says steps are being taken to delay until July what would be an unprecedented default on the debt.

Geithner and a growing number of business leaders say a U.S. default would plunge the U.S., and perhaps the world, into a second economic crisis.

Despite opposition from top leaders in both parties, the Senate's Gang of Six is banking on support from many of the 64 senators who wrote President Barack

Vice President Joe Biden makes a statement to reporters during a meeting Dec. 3, 2010, with Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and Office of Management and Budget Director Jack Lew in the Roosevelt Room of the White House on tax policy negotiations in Capitol Hill.

Obama in March urging him to support a comprehensive deficit reduction effort.

"There's a huge appetite for a starting point that's bipartisan," said Sen. Mark Warner, D-Va., one of the six senators, three from each party. "I think the conventional wisdom that says, 'We can punt all of this until after the next presidential election.' I think there's a growing consensus we may not have that long."

The group includes four members of Obama's deficit commission, and its recommendations are expected to closely track the commission's plan for $3 in spending cuts for every $1 in tax revenue increases over the coming decade.

Its other two Democrats are Sen. Dick Durbin of Illinois, the second-ranking Democratic leader, and Sen. Kent Conrad of North Dakota, the Budget Committee chairman. The Republicans are Sens. Tom Coburn of Oklahoma, Mike Crapo of Idaho and Saxby

Chambliss of Georgia.

The six have met in private for several months, even as House Republicans and Obama developed more partisan plans that have little chance of being enacted into law because of Washington's divided government.

"We've made enormous progress in that group. And I hope that we are able to announce an agreement soon," Conrad said on "Fox News Sunday." He added: "If we don't, we're simply not going to be relevant because this debate marches on."

House Republicans passed a nonbinding plan in April that calls for reducing annual deficits by a total of $6.2 trillion over the next decade. It includes no tax increases but calls for transforming Medicare from a program in which the government directly pays medical bills into a voucher-like system that subsidizes the purchase of private insurance plans.

Obama has outlined a plan to reduce borrowing by $4 trillion over the next 12 years. His plan includes $1 trillion in tax increases and is less specific about how he would cut benefit programs.

Vice President Joe Biden is to begin leading a series of bipartisan talks this week on reducing the debt. The Gang of Six senators wants its plan to be part of the discussion.

The senators' work is rooted in a simple political reality: Getting anything actually passed into law given the present balance of power in Washington requires both Democrats and Republicans to embrace proposals that make each uncomfortable. An approach that leaves politically challenging topics off the table simply won't make a dent in deficits averaging $1 trillion a year or so over the upcoming decade.

"A Republican plan will not pass. A Democratic plan will not pass," Chambliss said. "It is going to require locking arms and jumping off the building together."

Amid 'war on obesity,' skeptics warn of more stigma for children

By David Crary
Associated Press writer

The images are striking: Overweight boys and girls staring somberly from billboards and online videos, real-life embodiments of the blunt messages alongside.

"Chubby kids may not outlive their parents," for example. Or: "Big bones didn't make me this way. Big meals did."

The ads — part of a new "Stop Child Obesity" campaign in Georgia — won some enthusiastic praise for their attention-grabbing tactics. But they also have outraged parents, activists and academics who feel the result is more stigma for an already beleaguered and bullied group of children.

"Billboards depicting fat kids are extraordinarily harmful to the very kids they are supposedly trying to help," said the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance, which called for the billboards' removal.

The Georgia Children's Health Alliance, which created the ads, said they were necessary to jar parents of obese kids out of a state of denial that their children had a problem.

The furor reflects a broader nationwide phenomenon as states, cities and the White House itself — led by first lady Michelle Obama — expand efforts to curb obesity. For all the public support of these efforts, there's also a vocal and passionate corps of skeptics and critics worried that widespread discrimination toward the overweight and obese will only increase.

"Stigma is not an effective motivator," said Rebecca Puhl, a Yale University psychologist who is a leading expert on weight discrimination. "Whether children or adults, if they are teased or stigmatized, they're much more likely to engage in unhealthy eating and avoidance of physical activity."

Research by Puhl and her colleagues at Yale's Rudd Center for Food Policy and Obesity suggests that weight discrimination is pervasive — at schools, in the workplace, in the media, among health care providers. Yet efforts to combat it frequently founder: Only one state, Michigan, outlaws weight discrimination, and the anti-bullying policies proliferating in schools often lack specific content related to teasing of overweight children.

The spotlight on obesity intensified last year when Michelle Obama unveiled her national public awareness campaign, "Let's Move." Its goal, she said, was to eliminate childhood obesity within a generation by helping parents make better food choices, serving healthier food in schools, and encouraging children to exercise more.

Many aspects of "Let's Move" won near-universal praise. But activists in the fat-acceptance movement and experts who espouse a "health at every size" approach were upset that the campaign encouraged the monitoring of children's body mass index, or BMI, and thus might contribute to stigmatization of heavier kids.

"The idea of a BMI report card is horrible," said Paul Ernsberger, a professor in the nutrition department at Case Western Reserve University's School of Medicine in Cleveland.

"To declare we're going to eliminate childhood obesity — that's actually a very stigmatizing thing to say," Ernsberger said. "The overweight child hears that and thinks, 'They wish I wasn't here.'"

Linda Bacon, a nutrition professor at City College of San Francisco, is the author of "Health At Every Size" — a manifesto for a movement stressing a healthy lifestyle rather than weight control. She said the focus by "Let's Move" on BMI was of dubious medical value and posed potential problems for kids at all weight levels.

"It's done much more damage than good," Bacon said. "The larger kids feel bad about themselves, and the thinner kids feel it doesn't matter whether they exercise or eat well."

Deb Lemire, president of the Association for Size Diversity and Health, credited Michelle Obama with good intentions and commended various nutrition-related aspects of "Let's Move." But she said the emphasis on weight risked worsening the problems of teasing and bullying.

"The message that gets to the kids is, 'There really is something wrong with me,'" said Lemire, of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. "We're saying we love you, we want you to have wonderful lives and be successful, but right now you're just not good enough."

The first lady's press office declined to respond in detail to the criticism, but defended "Let's Move."

"There will always be critics, but our approach is comprehensive, nurturing and working, with success already seen across the country," the office said in an e-mail.

There's no question that "Let's Move" has broad, high-powered backing, from groups such as the American Academy of Pediatrics. Its supporters note that one in three American children are overweight or obese, putting them at higher risk of serious health problems while billions of dollars are spent yearly treating obesity-related conditions.

Dr. Sandra Hassink, who chairs the pediatrics academy's obesity work group, said she witnesses the toll of weight-based bullying on a daily basis at her clinic at the A.I. duPont Hospital for Children in Wilmington, Del.

However, she defended the use of BMI as a screening mechanism.

"We know that elevated BMI places you at elevated risk of health problems," she said. "It's a screening tool to start a conversation with a child and family about health behavior that will reduce that risk."

Weight loss doesn't necessarily need to be the overriding goal in every case, she suggested, but it can be a vital part of countering diabetes, liver disease, sleep apnea and other obesity-related problems.

Critics of "Let's Move" say it could have struck a more positive tone about the diversity of body sizes and the possibility of being both large and healthy simultaneously.

"Regardless of her intentions, the first lady is making things worse," said San Francisco attorney Sondra Solovay, who teaches and writes about weight-based discrimination.

"I invite her to talk to fat adults who have experienced the hatred and discrimination firsthand," Solovay said, "and ask them how this program would have impacted them as kids."

Libyans attack embassies, U.N. office after NATO strike

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Angry mobs attacked Western embassies and a U.N. office in Tripoli on Sunday after NATO bombed Moammar Gadhafi's family compound in an attack officials said killed the leader's second youngest son and three grandchildren, ages 6 months to 2 years.

Russia said the Western alliance exceeded its U.N. mandate of protecting Libyan civilians with the strike.

The vandalized embassies were empty and nobody was reported injured, but the attacks heightened tensions between the Libyan regime and Western powers, prompting the United Nations to pull its international staff out of the capital.

The bombing did not slow the attacks by Gadhafi's forces on rebel strongholds in the western part of Libya that has remained largely under the control of the regime. The rebel port of Misrata, which has been besieged by Gadhafi's troops for two months, came under heavy shelling Sunday and at least 12 people were killed, a medic said.

Gadhafi has repeatedly called for a cease-fire, most recently on Saturday, but has not halted his assault on Misrata, a city of 300,000 where hundreds have been killed since the rebellion against Libya's ruler erupted in mid-February.

The rebels, who control most of eastern Libya, have been unable to gain an advantage on the battlefield despite weeks of NATO airstrikes. Alliance officials and allied leaders emphatically denied they were hunting Gadhafi to break the stalemate between the better trained government forces and the lightly armed rebels.

Canadian Lt. Gen. Charles Bouchard, who commands NATO's operation in Libya, said that "we do not target individuals." However, the leaders of the U.S., Britain and France have said Gadhafi must go, prompting warnings by U.N. Security Council members Russia, China and Brazil against NATO attempts to change the regime.

In some of its strongest language, the Russian Foreign Ministry on Sunday accused NATO of a "disproportionate use of force" and cast doubt on NATO's assertion that it is not targeting Gadhafi or members of his family. Russia called for an immediate cease-fire.

NATO warplanes have shifted their focus in the past two weeks from support for rebels on the front lines to attacking the regime's communications centers. Saturday's strike reduced most of the Gadhafi family compound, which takes up an entire block in the residential Garghour neighborhood, to rubble.

Officials said it killed 29-year-old Seif al-Arab Gadhafi, who had survived a 1986 U.S. airstrike on his father's Bab al-Azizya residential compound. Also killed were 2-year-old Carthage, the daughter of Gadhafi's son Hannibal; six-month-old Mastura, daughter of Gadhafi's daughter Aisha; and 15-month-old Seif Mohammed, son of Gadhafi's son Mohammed.

Dr. Gerard Le Clouerec, a French orthopedic surgeon who runs a private clinic in Tripoli, inspected the bodies of an adult and two infants at Tripoli's Green Hospital on Sunday.

He told reporters that the adult's face was intact and that "in relation to a photo we have seen most probably was the son of Gadhafi." He said the adult had a thin mustache and a full beard.

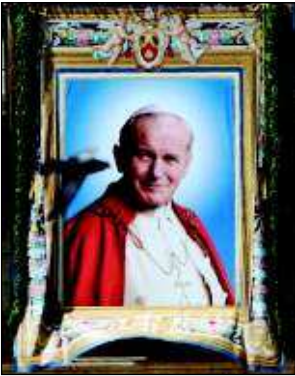

The two children had been badly disfigured, the doctor said.

Pope beatifies John Paul II before 1.5M

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Some 1.5 million pilgrims flooded Rome to watch Pope John Paul II move a step closer to sainthood in one of the largest Vatican Masses in history, an outpouring of adoration for a beloved and historic figure after years marred by church scandal.

The turnout for the beatification Sunday far exceeded even the most optimistic expectation of 1 million people, the number Rome city officials predicted. For Catholics filling St. Peter's Square and its surrounding streets, and for those watching around the world the beatification was a welcome hearkening back to the days when the pope was almost universally beloved.

"He was like a king to us, like a father," Marynka Ulaszewska, a 28-year-old from Ciechocinek, Poland, said, weeping. "I hope these emotions will remain with us for a long time," she said.

Pope Benedict XVI praised John Paul for turning back the seemingly "irreversible" tide of communism with faith, courage and "the strength of a titan, a strength which came to him from God."

John Paul is universally credited with helping bring down communism in his native Poland with support for the Solidarity labor movement, accelerating the fall of the Iron Curtain.

"He rightly reclaimed for Christianity that impulse of hope which had in some sense faltered before Marxism and the ideology of progress," Benedict said. "He restored to Christianity its true face as a religion of hope."

John Paul's beatification, the fastest in modern times, has however triggered a new wave of anger from sex-abuse victims because much of the criminality occurred during his 27-year watch. Critics also say John Paul's legacy is clouded by evidence of a dwindling faith: empty churches in Europe, too few priests in North and South America, priests who violate their celibacy requirement in places like Africa and a general decline of Catholicism in former Christian strongholds.

John Paul's defenders argue that an entire generation of new priests owe their vocations to John Paul, and that millions of lay Catholics found their faith during the World Youth Days, which were a hallmark of his papacy.

Vatican officials have insisted that the saint-making process isn't a judgment of how John Paul administered the church but rather whether he lived a life of Christian virtue.

Benedict put John Paul on the fast-track for possible sainthood when he dispensed with the traditional five-year waiting period and allowed the beatification process to begin weeks after his April 2, 2005, death. Benedict was responding to chants of "Santo Subito!" or "Sainthood Immediately" which erupted during John Paul's funeral.

Workers demand better jobs, pay on May Day

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Millions of demonstrators around the world marched for labor rights Sunday, including thousands in Wisconsin who continued their divisive battle over collective-bargaining rights that began in February and had prompted huge masses of protesters to pour into the Madison Capitol.

Wisconsin demonstrators marched two miles through downtown Milwaukee, waving U.S. and Mexican flags and holding signs showing a raised fist in the shape of the state. Similar scenes played out across the nation and around the world, as millions of workers from Havana to Berlin and Istanbul took to the streets.

Milwaukee demonstrators pounded drums, blared through vuvuzelas and chanted, "Si se puede," Spanish for "yes, it can be done." They also held signs saying, "It's about freedom," and "Working hard is not a crime."

both groups were being attacked by the same conservative opponents.

"It's the same fight," he said. "It's the same people that are attacking immigrants' rights, workers' rights, student rights, voting rights."

May 1 is a traditional date for pro-labor demonstrations.

In Turkey, some 200,000 protesters flooded a central plaza in Istanbul, making it the largest May Day rally there since 1977, when at least 34 people died and more than 100 were injured after shooting triggered a stampede. Turkish unions weren't allowed back until last year.

Across Germany, some 423,000 people took to the streets to demand fair wages, better working conditions and sufficient social security, the country's unions' umbrella group, DGB, said.

Union group head Michael Sommer said the turnout — similar to last year's — was a clear message to the government that it should give up its refusal to introduce a national minimum wage.

"Fair wages, good jobs and social security are the minimum standard in this country that workers expect, need and have to fight for time and again," Sommer said at a protest in the central German town Kassel.

In Berlin, several rallies were scattered across the capital, with police saying 10,000 people had taken to the streets.

Some 8,000 gathered late in the afternoon at a rally called for by leftist groups, with police out in force, as past demonstrations had turned violent. Marchers carried banners saying, "This is the least: fair salaries, fair jobs."

Across the city, 6,000 security forces were deployed Sunday to monitor the protests, police said.

In Austria, more than 100,000 people peacefully took to the streets of Vienna, protest organizers said.

June 2, 1922– April 30, 2011

Louise V. Habel, 85, our mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, passed away peacefully on Saturday, April 30, 2011, at her home in Twin Falls.

She was born on June 2, 1922, in Appleton City, Mo., to Clarence and Rose Garey, the ninth of 11 children. Her father died when she was seven years old and the family came west and settled in Filer. She was raised in Filer and attended schools there where she was very active in high school and cherished those times. She attended Linfield College in McMinnville, Ore., where she served as homecoming queen in high school and college. After college, she moved to San Francisco to assist with the war effort.

She then moved back to Idaho and married Junior H. (Butch) Isom on Oct. 16, 1945. To this union were born seven children: Gary (Sharon) Isom, Randolph H. Isom, Susan (Mick) Zenoniani, Buddy (Gay) Isom, Jeff Isom, Sherri (Greg) Jefferson, and Carol (Ed) Peters. They were later divorced. She married Martin Habel on April 8, 1961. To this union were born two children: Greg (Stephanie) Habel and Lori (Sam) Perez.

She had 15 grandchildren: Randy (Elizabeth) Isom, Jeff (Lisa) Isom, Chrissy (Joe) Kane, Jennifer (Rick) Bradshaw, Michael Zenoniani, Jody (Petra) Hurst, Jamie (Lyman) Bridge, Mark (Trina) Jefferson, Jake Jefferson, Marissa (Justin) Martino, Sean (Christina) Peters, Josh Peters, Allison Habel, Andy Habel, and Bailee Habel. She had 13 great-grandchildren: Jack, Nicole, Samantha, and Will Isom, Jalen and Brad Kane, Reese Bradshaw, Tanner and Livia Hurst, Lilianna and Parker Bridge, Jaden and Lane Jefferson.

In 1963 she moved to Hailey, where she and Martin eventually purchased the Mule Shoe Club, which was a popular night club for years in the Wood River Valley. She met and had many friends in the Hailey area. In 1974 they moved to Cascade, where they resided for three years. In 1977 they settled in Twin Falls, where she resided until her death. She worked for years at KMart and Woolworth in Twin Falls, where she eventually retired.

She had a large and happy family, which she enjoyed immensely. The highlight of her day was talking and visiting with her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Her children were always involved in athletics, and she always loved to watch and follow them. She was an avid baseball fan and loved the Atlanta Braves!

She was preceded in death by her husband of 36 years, Martin Habel, son Randolph H. Isom, and 10 brothers and sisters.

COMMUNITY SUPPORT HELPS SHOSHONE WOMAN SHED ALMOST 100 POUNDS

DETERMINATION

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — On a recent Sunday, Jennifer DeNaughel walked five kilometers.

That accomplishment made the 40-year-old Shoshone woman cry. “I got to the railroad tracks and looked down toward my house and started bawling like a baby,” she said. She recalls what she thought next: “I’m going to make it.”

At 384 pounds, DeNaughel is feeling healthier, more fit and lighter on her feet than she ever has in her adult life. She has dropped close to 100 pounds since late 2009, 38 of those during the 16-week Northside Fitness Challenge that ended April 30 with a 5K fun run and walk.

“I’ve been heavy my whole life,” she said, sitting in her living room near a well-used set of small hand weights and a balance ball. After tearing a ligament in her knee in 2006, she put on even more weight, until she peaked at 476 pounds. In October 2009, DeNaughel was diagnosed pre-diabetic, with severe obstructive sleep apnea. “I basically thought I was going to die, be unable to do anything anymore.”

She had to find what she wanted to live for, to overcome the seemingly endless assaults on her self-esteem that had begun when she started adding weight in sixth grade.

One of those motivations was her niece and nephew. She wanted to be able to play with them on vacation at the Oregon coast, instead of just watching them in the sand.

That same coast is the setting for her novel, which had just found a publisher, a

Two years ago, Jennifer DeNaughel could barely walk a block without stopping. As she strolled through her Shoshone neighborhood on April 25, she was still aglow from walking five kilometers the day before. DeNaughel was practicing for the final event of the Northside Fitness Challenge, a fun run and walk.

goal she'd been striving to achieve her whole life. DeNaughel took that success as proof she could also succeed at getting healthy. Going on a CPAP machine helped her get restful sleep, and she began walking — at first, just a short distance at a time — and making small adjustments to her diet, like substituting lean ground turkey for ground beef, olive oil for vegetable oil, and drinking fewer cans of Coke.

Stephanie Roberts, a physician's assistant at Shoshone Medical Center, said getting DeNaughel on the sleep machine was an important step, but equally important was not badgering the woman constantly about being morbidly obese.

“I didn't want to hear that again: ‘You'll be dead by 50 if you don't lose weight,’” DeNaughel said.

Rallying around her

So the pounds were slowly coming off when the Northside Fitness challenge launched four months ago, and she signed up to participate.

DeNaughel joined the challenge's Inside Out support group, which helped her explore the emotional side of her issues with weight. “The voices in my head — telling me I couldn't do it, that I was always going to be fat and miserable — getting rid of those voices made a huge difference,” she said. She even wrote down some of the most hurtful things people had told her and burned the paper as a cathartic exercise.

Support came from an unexpected quarter, too. When DeNaughel began posting photos to Facebook of her treadmill's readouts after exercise sessions, she was overwhelmed by the encouraging comments. A woman who had teased her unmercifully in high school has become one of her biggest cheerleaders on the social network.

Longtime friends like Nina Ward, who lives north of Shoshone, also kept her inspired. “We might have different goals, but we're in the Free mobile app promotes healthy choices

Times-News

Intermountain Healthcare introduced a free mobile application for download from iTunes or Android and Apple devices to help children and teens make good nutrition and fitness choices.

The new app is part of Intermountain's campaign to tell parents and children about increasing physical activity and adopting healthier eating habits to prevent obesity. Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley is part of Intermountain, a Salt Lake City-based nonprofit health system.

Intermountain said its LiVe app makes it easier to set fitness and healthy eating goals; guides users in tracking progress; links to the campaign's posters, TV and radio commercials and information; and provides fun suggestions.

The campaign also includes social advertising, school presentations, educational materials for health providers and a kid-friendly website with interactive games and quizzes and links for parents.

Sun Valley Wellness Festival adds classes for children

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Kim Howard holds out what she believes is a surefire tool to improving a child's self-esteem.

It's her now-15-year-old daughter Amelia's scrapbook of sketches, watercolors and collage pages of tickets and other souvenirs of their trip to France. There's a minimalist sketch of the Eiffel Tower and, of course, a chef in a towering white hat.

Howard, a Hailey children's book illustrator, says art journals like this one document what makes someone feel great. And it's something kids can look back on during rough patches.

That's why she's conducting a “Children's Journaling and Watercolor Workshop” at the Sun Valley Wellness Festival, which runs May 27-30 at Sun Valley Resort. The workshop is one of several presentations the festival is offering with children in mind. This is the first time the festival has offered a youth track.

“This year's festival is set up so that parents can attend the children-related classes with their children. Or, if the children are old enough, parents can attend their classes while their parents take other classes,” board member Pam Jonas said.

The children's offerings include one on kid's yoga and another on turning passion into compassion to help the community.

Healing Touch practitioner Mary Kay Foley and retired school counselor

Wanda Tierney will teach a workshop to show children ways to increase their awareness of energy and its healing effects. The two will show kids how to become more aware of their breathing and how to ground and calm themselves using meditation. They'll also teach about chakras, or energy centers within the body.

“I have a 6-year-old, Malia, so we used her as a target audience and she did really well,” said Foley, a physical therapist who coordinates complementary and integrative health care at St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center. “We think it's healthy to teach kids to tune into their own abilities to take care of themselves. Kids typically pick things up easier than adults.”

Howard is asking kids to bring photos of home, family, pets and things they like to do to make the journals. Her own journals feature drawings on old tea bags, coffee filters and Chinese funeral paper — anything “to shake it up.”

“Art doesn't have to be intimidating. It's just something you make with your hands. The beauty of art journals is that you don't feel you have to frame it. And you can take it with you — while you're driving to Twin Falls, for instance — and add to it,” she said.

“We want to take kids from ‘Who are you?’ to ‘What is your world?’ What makes you feel good? What are you capable of?” Howard said. “We want to teach kids that being introspective is fun. We want to teach them to be conscious and proud of who they are and what they're doing.”

Festival presenters speak to mind, body

The 14th annual Sun Valley Wellness Festival runs May 27-30 at Sun Valley Resort.

This year's festival will feature keynote speaker Gregg Braden, a former computer geologist for Phillips Petroleum whose quest to bridge science and spirituality has resulted in such books as “The Isaiah Effect” and “Fractal Time: The Secret of 2012 and a New World Age,” which reached No. 5 on the New York Times bestseller list two weeks after its release.

Other speakers include Dr. Zorba Paster and Alex Grey, an artist, poet and author who will preside over a four-hour evening of live painting to music, a spoken word performance of Art Psalms, and more from 8 p.m. to midnight May 28.

Others include Father Gregory Boyle, author of “Tattoos on the Heart,” telling of his work with young gang members, and Christopher Lawford Kennedy, an actor and author who will share his story of overcoming a drug and alcohol addiction.

“We have the most amazing lineup ever — a long list of really outstanding, world-class presenters,” festival board member Carol Waller said.

“I've read just about everything Gregg Braden has ever written. He's real good at using things like quantum physics to bridge science and spirituality and left-mind and right-mind thinking. He talks about the ability of the body to spontaneously heal and how we can create our own realities,” board member Pam Jonas said.

In addition to the speakers, a movement studio will offer yoga, kettlebells, tai chi, bliss core fitness, Zumba, medical Qigong and belly dance. Intensive workshops will focus on such things as overcoming panic and anxiety.

A free Wellness Expo — from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. May 28-29, and from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. May 30, in the Limelight room of Sun Valley Inn — will feature books and music, nutritional supplements, clothing and jewelry, massage and bodywork and other services and products for sale.

The Wellness Festival draws between 1,500 and 2,000 people each year from throughout the nation and even from overseas countries such as Norway and Sweden.

“We try to have a balance with speakers focusing on mind, body and spirit,” Waller said.

Passes start at $25 for a children's pass; they top out at $375 for a platinum pass that covers nearly everything, including three workshops. Day passes are $95, and single-speaker tickets are $35.

Continued from H&F 1 same boat," Ward said, describing how she kept pestering DeNaughel to talk to Roberts about her sleep issues, and to stick to her walking regimen. Ward praises DeNaughel's persistence, calling her brave for posting on Facebook a picture of herself at that 476-pound peak. She's met new friends through the fitness challenge and at the gym, who are happy to advise her on using a piece of athletic equipment or encourage her visible progress. "It's also given me a social life, to meet people in town and go do things. I'd lived here 16 years and hardly knew anybody."

New joy in life

DeNaughel's weight loss has changed more than her waistline — which has shrunk so much that she donated three large trash bags full of too-big clothes to charity — Roberts said. "She's full of energy and light now," said the physician's assistant, who was one of the fitness challenge organizers, and a participant. "I get excited because she's such an inspiration." Talking about her progress, DeNaughel keeps coming back to one thought: She's not going back — to her old weight, her old habits, her old attitudes. With the fitness challenge over, she's keeping in touch with fellow participants and maintaining her gym membership. She wants to be down to 350 pounds by her birthday in July. By achieving the little goals — like walking that five kilometers — and not letting her persistence flag, DeNaughel and her friends have no doubt: She's going to make it.

Something pediatricians never used to see: Type 2 diabetes

By Susan Brink
Special to The Washington Post

Annie Snyder figured she'd be out of the pediatrician's office in 30 minutes, tops. Then she'd head home, tuck the medical permission for YM-CA summer camp in her bag and finish packing. But that exam last summer wasn't like any other she'd had in her 16-year, basically healthy life. Within minutes of learning the results from a urine test, she got two corroborating blood tests and was hustled off to Inova Fairfax (Va.) Hospital. Lying on a gurney in the emergency room, she heard the word "diabetes" several times and knew from the urgent medical reaction that it was bad. Frightened and crying, she thought: "What have I done to myself?"

Doctors had discovered that Annie had Type 2 diabetes, a disease that is often linked to being overweight. She never made it to summer camp. By the time she came home from the hospital a week later, she knew how to inject herself with insulin and she knew that she'd have diabetes for the rest of her life.

As recently as the mid-1990s, Type 2 diabetes was almost exclusively a disease of adults. But apparently fueled by the childhood obesity epidemic, cases in people younger than 20 have ramped up from virtually zero to tens of thousands in the U.S. in little more than a decade. The children who have it are breaking new scientific ground: No one has any idea how they will fare over the course of a lifetime.

Annie says she was "most definitely overweight" at the time of her diagnosis, and she has already made major lifestyle changes to control the disease. By exercising and cutting back on carbohydrates, she has lost 12 pounds so far. She has reduced her need for insulin from several injections a day to just one each night, and she's hoping that soon she'll be able to put the needle aside and just use an oral drug, metformin.

Although she is the only person in her household with diabetes, Annie's diagnosis triggered a family response. Her parents got rid of the dining room table and turned that space into an exercise room, complete with a bowl of apples and artfully arranged bottles of water at the door. Everyone exercises, including her 15-year-old brother, Stephen; everyone has given up sodas and snacks, everyone eats smaller portions.

"When I see my dad exercise, I know that I've helped get him motivated," Annie says. "Before, exercise was a chore. I would sit and watch TV and eat snacks. Now, as soon as I come home, I put on my workout clothes." Today, about 3,700 Americans under the age of 20 receive a diagnosis annually of what used to be called "adult-onset" diabetes, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. That relatively small number makes it a rare disease in children, but it represents a trend with larger ramifications. "In a little more than 10 years, the numbers went from nothing to something," says Larry Deeb, a pediatric endocrinologist and past president of the medicine and science division of the American Diabetes Association. "And that's something to worry about." Diabetes can cause a litany of medical woes, including heart disease, kidney failure, limb amputations and blindness. It costs the U.S. health-care system $174 billion a year, according to the National Institutes of Health.

John Perrone, 15, lifts weights at home in Winchester, Va. He has Type 2 diabetes but has progressed from needing insulin injections to controlling his glucose with drugs, healthful eating and exercise.

As recently as the mid-1990s, Type 2 diabetes was almost exclusively a disease of adults. Annie Snyder, 17, was hospitalized last summer when her Type 2 diabetes was discovered. To control it, she uses drugs, a healthful diet and exercise.

Those statistics are grim enough when patients are in their 60s. When the diagnosis is made decades earlier, new fears are raised: Will these children suffer heart attacks in their 20s, need kidney dialysis in their 30s or go blind before they see their own children graduate from high school?

Because about 80 percent of Type 2 diabetes patients are overweight or obese, it's not surprising that patients such as Annie ask if they've done this to themselves. But there are other risk factors that no one can control: family history, ethnicity (blacks, Hispanics and American Indians have higher rates of diabetes), genetics or a mother who had diabetes during her pregnancy. Instead of wallowing in regret, doctors suggest that young patients and their parents seize the opportunity for a crash course on how to improve their health.

"I used to wear a button that said 'Stamp Out Guilt,'" says Fran Cogen, director of the Child/Adolescent Diabetes Program at Children's National Medical Center. "I try to tell people that no one caused their diabetes. I emphasize that they can make changes now."

Alarm bells are going off among those who study diabetes in children because of what they know about the adult version of the illness. More than 25 million Americans have diabetes (more than 90 percent have Type 2), according to the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases — but an additional 79 million have a condition called pre-diabetes, in which blood sugar levels are higher than normal but not as high as in diabetes.

Pre-diabetes isn't a disease requiring medical treatment — it's a wake-up call. A large national study showed that adults with pre-diabetes who lost 7 percent of their body weight reduced their risk of diabetes by 58 percent.

Officials are concerned that the number of children already identified as having Type 2 diabetes is just the tip of the iceberg. In a national study of 2,000 eighth-grade students from communities at high risk for diabetes, more than half of the kids were overweight or obese. Only 1 percent had diabetes — but almost a third of them had pre-diabetes, according to Lori Laffel, chief of the Pediatric, Adolescent and Young Adult Section of the Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston and a principal investigator on the study.

It's crucial, she says, to find those children before their condition progresses to diabetes so that it can be reversed by lifestyle changes, without medication.

Immunization requirements for children in school and daycare have changed.

Children entering the 7th grade will have new requirements, and requirements for some younger children have increased.

Free health care goes begging

By Susan Jaffe
Special to The Washington Post

Despite tough economic times, there are some things the government can't give away.

Starting this year, seniors enrolled in Medicare no longer have to pay for more than a dozen tests and other services to help prevent or control cancer and other costly and debilitating diseases. These benefits, which also include an annual wellness exam, are part of the new federal health-care law.

But big crowds aren't lining up for free mammograms or colonoscopies, although early data indicate that the free wellness checkup is luring patients.

Advocates say details about the new benefits haven't reached enough seniors, and Medicare's information about it isn't easily accessible and can be confusing.

"Our hope is that by waiving cost-sharing and making preventive care more affordable, more beneficiaries will get it," said Jonathan Blum, deputy administrator at the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services.

At a senior center in Reston, Va., roughly 35 people recently attended a "Medicare 101" meeting that provided information about the free services.

Howard Houghton, director of the Fairfax County, Va., senior health insurance information program, said he warned the seniors not to delay calling their doctor. "You want to do it sooner than later because this law might get repealed," he said. "The law might change, so why take a chance?"

Even doctors have had some trouble figuring out what tests and exams are free and for which patients. Medicare is now paying all costs for most services that earned top ratings from the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force, an advisory group of medical experts. But if patients receive those services more often than recommended or don't have risk factors to qualify for the tests, they can be charged a co-

DO ANY OF THESE TESTS LOOK HELPFUL FOR YOU?

Here are some of the benefits available for free to Medicare beneficiaries — no co-payments, coinsurance or deductibles — when provided by health-care professionals who accept Medicare.

- Annual mammograms for women 40 and older.
- Cervical cancer screening, including a Pap smear test and pelvic exam, every two years, or annually for women with a high risk of cervical cancer.
- Colorectal cancer screenings every 10 years, or every two if at high risk, for people 50 and older.
- Cholesterol test and other cardiovascular screenings every five years.
- Diabetes screening for people at risk for the disease.
- Medical nutrition counseling to help people manage diabetes or kidney disease (three hours of individual counseling the first year and then two hours annually).
- Annual prostate cancer screening for men 50 and older.
- Vaccines for influenza (annually), pneumonia (once) and hepatitis B for those at risk of the disease.
- Bone mass measurement every two years (more often if medically necessary) for people at risk of osteoporosis.
- HIV screening for people who are at increased risk.
- Smoking cessation counseling.

payment. In some cases, seniors may still have to pay for an office visit, even if the screening or test they receive is free.

To help clear things up, the American Medical Association issued a two-page guide for doctors. That's in addition to e-mails that Medicare has sent to physicians and their professional associations.

Steven Schwartz, a family physician in Kensington, Md., who also teaches at Georgetown University's medical school, said his group practice developed its own checklist of the preventive services and is contacting Medicare patients who haven't had a wellness exam.

A list of which preventive services are now free and other information are included in the "Medicare & You" handbook (available at www.medicare.gov or at 800-MEDICARE), the user's manual sent to all 48 million Medicare beneficiaries. A 48-page Medicare guide on preventive benefits is also available online at www.medicare.gov.

But Joe Baker, president of the nonprofit Medicare Rights Center, said seniors usually read the handbook only when they have questions about a benefit. "If they haven't heard about it, they're not going to look for it," he said.

One reason why seniors may not pay attention to the changes is that they have purchased a supplemental insurance policy or a Medicare Advantage managed-care plan that already offers some preventive health services without additional charges.

But cost isn't the only reason that seniors may not be receiving preventive health services. Some people worry about whether procedures will be uncomfortable, and many are afraid of hearing bad news.

Blum thinks that attitude may be changing. In just the first three months of this year, almost 300,000 seniors nationwide received the new free wellness exam.

"Based upon what we've seen so far, we are very optimistic that we will have a greater proportion of beneficiaries who will take advantage of the preventive benefits," said Blum.

Good habits start in your head

By Jane Glenn Haas
The Orange County Register

It's not my fault I'm overweight. It's in my genes.

Right?

Well, it's true that some people are predisposed to being more overweight than others, says Dr. Felicia Stoler, a registered dietitian, nutritionist and exercise physiologist.

"But it's not just about excess body fat," she writes in her new book, "Living Skinny in Fat Genes — The healthy way to lose weight and feel great!"

And then she tells me, "Everything is about choices. Ultimately, when we eat we make a choice. I want to be healthy and live a long time, but that doesn't mean keeping the weight off is any easier for me than it is for you."

You say good eating habits are paramount. But before you can have good eating habits to maintain your weight, you have to lose the weight, right?

Our body needs all types of foods. It needs carbohydrates. People will cycle on fad diets or eat unrealistically low calorie levels. You can't do this. It creates a yo-yo cycle.

How much weight should I realistically lose a week on a diet if I want to lose it and keep it off?

Realistically, two pounds a week. If you are a 400-pound person, you might lose more to begin with. But no more than two pounds a week or the likelihood of having the weight go back on is really more certain.

beneficial and help stave off hunger without clogging your arteries. Fat helps your body absorb some nutrients and produce important hormones. Your body definitely needs fat.

New oils on the market provide nice alternatives to butter or even olive oil. For example, Malaysian red palm fruit oil contains both beta-carotene and vitamin E.

So I can eat a dozen chicken wings fried in Malaysian palm oil?

I didn't mean that, but it's good to know there are oils that taste great and won't raise cholesterol.

Foods that lower LDL (bad) cholesterol and raise HDL (good) cholesterol include avocados, nuts and Omega-3 fatty acids.

You talk about cravings.

Feed your cravings but not to excess. Find a way to have what you like to enjoy in small amounts. You shouldn't deprive yourself. You can't take carbs completely out of your diet. Your body will always seek them and you will crave them. But when you add carbs, make it whole-grain bread or Kellogg's All Bran Fiber Buds.

And I am not a fan of protein shakes, either. Excessive protein is not good. Better to have chocolate milk or a yogurt.

Look at food intelligently. A glass of apple or orange juice is about the equivalent of four pieces of fruit. When you drink your calories, you get more calories into you.

And, yes, there is a place for low-calorie frozen dinners for some people. Those who don't like to cook. I encourage people to try to cook and separate meals into batches and freeze them.

You are a water fanatic.

We actually feel hungry when we are dehydrated. Water is the No. 1 third quencher and it helps you to flush your system.

Also, recent research shows green tea may be one of the most beneficial beverages you can drink. It's rich in antioxidants including EGCG, which reduces the risk factors for heart disease, supports weight management, reduces free radical damage to the skin and fights cancer. Plus the amino acid in green tea actually reduces stress, promotes relaxation and improves mental focus and clarity.

Peppermint oil to help irritable bowel syndrome. Chile pepper seed rub to ease aching joints. Lavender to aid sleep. Hibiscus-flower tea to lower blood pressure.

Once dismissed by medical experts as grandma's superstition and folklore, herbal and natural cures such as these are getting a double dose of respect by mainstream physicians. Not only are they being recommended with increasing frequency, modern researchers are doing studies that find that many of these cures do in fact possess active biological agents that do just what Grandma told you they would.

One of the latest signs of how seriously such treatments are being taken is the new "Mayo Clinic Book of Home Remedies" (Time Inc. Home Entertainment, $25.95). It's not the first book to deal with home remedies — syndicated columnists Joe and Teresa Graedon of the People's Pharmacy have several, and an online search for home remedies gets millions of hits — but this carries the name of the prestigious Minnesota organization.

The book's focus on remedies that have been backed up by medical science helped win over Dr. Seema Modi, a geriatrician and family physician at Baylor Medical Center at Carrollton. Modi has many patients who have expressed interest in home remedies. Because such treatments are not always grounded in research, she had reservations about the book when she first saw the title.

"I was expecting 'Try a bar of soap between the sheets for leg cramps' — that's what I think of when I hear home remedies," she says. "But it's not that. To me this is like a book of medical common sense I wish I could prescribe to all my patients."

When the book does bring up suggestions such as cranberry pills or extract to cure bladder infections, an idea that some of Modi's patients believe in more than she does, it is with the caveat that the authors have not found a rigorous study to support this course of action.

Plus, the book provides helpful information about the cranberry remedy — that it shouldn't be used with the blood-thinning medication warfarin, because interactions between cranberry juice and warfarin, an anticoagulant prescribed to prevent blood clots, may cause bleeding.

Pharmacologist Joe Graedon has been an advocate of such treatments for more than three decades. His latest book, co-written with his wife, nutritionist Teresa Graedon, is "Recipes and Remedies From the People's Pharmacy" (Graedon Enterprises, $14.95). It focuses on how to cook with foods that can be used medicinally: a beet juice smoothie to lower blood pressure, persimmon punch for heartburn and a power pudding of prune juice bran and applesauce for constipation. Their recipe for curcumin scramble praises curcumin's anti-inflammatory properties.

The Graedons also offer some information on remedies that have not been proven, such as Listerine for treating lice. "If it might help and it won't hurt and it's affordable, why not give it a try?" Joe Graedon says.

Home-generated ideas — such as curcumin — are also generating excitement among researchers.

Dr. Ajay Goel, a researcher at the Gastrointestinal Cancer Research Laboratory at Baylor Research Institute, Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas, says he has found great promise in testing curcumin, found in the Indian spice turmeric, for treating cancer.

"Curcumin can achieve all of the goodness of chemotherapy, is inexpensive and absolutely safe. There has been growing interest in using such compounds for both prevention as well as treatment, and none of this is going unnoticed by GI oncologists."

Dr. Philip Hagen, a preventive and internal medicine physician at the Mayo Clinic who co-edited the Mayo Clinic book, says he's seen home remedies gain increased acceptance in the last 10 to 15 years.

"I think the public was ahead of doctors in embracing some of these things. I think there's a willingness of scientists and physicians to be open to saying there may be a biological reason that this works and doing a study to see if it does."

He found that peppermint oil eased irritable bowel syndrome because it contains a relaxant that settles the smooth muscle action of the large colon.

Knowing why it worked is helpful because it alerts doctors to potential side effects, he says. While peppermint oil relaxes the large colon, it also relaxes the smooth muscle valve at the bottom of the food pipe, which can worsen heartburn.

Lavender, a popular remedy for insomnia and anxiety since the Middle Ages, has been shown to increase slow-wave sleep in which the heartbeat slows and muscles relax, according to a 2005 study by psychologists at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn.

Scientists have found that chile pepper seed rubs, which have been popular for centuries, contain capsaicin, which studies have shown to relieve arthritic symptoms and improve joint flexibility by stopping the destruction of cartilage.

While the above remedies can all be found in the Mayo Clinic book, the hibiscus-flower tea comes from a recent People's Pharmacy column in which the Graedons refer to two studies: one in the January Journal of Ethnopharmacology that shows the red pigments in hibiscus flowers are anthocyanins that act like antihypertensive medicines called ACE inhibitors, and another in the February Journal of Nutrition that demonstrates that several cups of this tea a day can help lower blood pressure in people with mild hypertension.

Interest in home remedies has swelled as the recession and the cost of doctor visits and prescriptions strain household budgets, Hagen says.

DEAR ABBY: I am a volunteer manager coordinating services between 200 students and tutors in an adult refugee English as a Second Language program. We benefit greatly from the skills and perspectives of young people, but the job requires volunteers to be self-directed and mature enough to handle the assignment. May I offer some advice to those who wish to volunteer for ANY program for class credit — as an intern or during summer vacation?

Understand that your assignment is a JOB. Someone is counting on you to be reliable and do it well — even though you’re not being paid. If you want to volunteer, call me yourself. Our conversation will be, for all intents and purposes, a job interview. I do not want to talk to your mother unless she’s the one looking for the assignment.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Nonprofit organizations offer volunteers work experience and insight into a life that is unfamiliar to you. If you’re not ready to commit to an assignment, ask the manager if you can “shadow” someone who is currently volunteering. It’s a great way to see if the work interests you.

My volunteers are the most dedicated, intrepid, compassionate people I have ever met. They succeed because they’re enthusiastic and sincere in their desire to contribute. They range in age from 17 to 82, but they all have one thing in common: They picked up the phone and spent time doing their own research.

Volunteering is an excellent way to make a difference in the world, especially when you understand where you fit into that world.

— VOLUNTEER MANAGER IN DENVER
DEAR MANAGER: Sometimes well-meaning parents try so hard to run interference for their children that they get in the way, and rather than strengthening their children’s wings, they don’t allow them to develop. For parents of teens and young adults who are interested in volunteering and internships, I hope this letter will serve as a wake-up call. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I am invited to a 60th wedding anniversary party. They are requesting that all the guests wear white. I think it’s unfair to ask that of a guest. I recently lost weight and will have to buy something new to wear, besides paying for my hotel and a nice gift.

I care about the couple and want to share this special occasion with them, but I’m on a fixed income. To have to go out and buy something new is a hardship. Abby, what do you think?

— REASONABLE IN SAN FRANCISCO
DEAR REASONABLE: I think you should consider some other options than buying a new outfit. Could you borrow a white outfit from someone? Or browse resale boutiques to see if they have something? If they don’t, contact the anniversary couple and see if they would mind your wearing the palest outfit you have. After all, the white attire is being requested, not ordered.

DEAR ABBY: My fiancé is a “screamer” during lovemaking. This bothers me. Is there a cure?

— SUBDUED IN ALBUQUERQUE
DEAR SUBDUED: For him? No. For you, the “cure” is to learn to be less self-conscious about the fact that your fiancé is enjoying himself, because you are not going to change him.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“For all that they have seen disastrous things: The shattered pomp, the split and shaken throne, They cannot quite forget the way of Kings: Gravely they pass, majestic and alone.”

— David Morton

See how knowing the percentages when declarer is missing five or six cards in a suit affects the play in today’s deal.

West led the diamond six against five clubs, and East won with the ace. He cashed the queen, then played a third diamond, ruffed by declarer. A heart went to dummy’s ace and a low heart was trumped in hand. Now South erred when he played a club to dummy’s king, overtook the club jack with his queen, and drew the last trump with the ace.

With only one more entry to dummy, declarer could not both set up and reach the hearts for spade discards, so had to rely on a 3-3 heart break. When this was not forthcoming, he had to lose a spade.

As only three spade discards are needed, one more heart can be ruffed in hand, but care is needed with the timing. After ruffing the third diamond, South plays a heart to the ace and ruffs a heart low, as before. But now dummy is entered with a top club, and the second club is cashed (to test whether declarer can afford to ruff the next heart high). Another low heart is ruffed with the club queen in hand, catering for the more likely 4-2 heart break.

Declarer draws the last trump and enters dummy via the spade ace to take the three needed spade discards on the three long hearts. If clubs had split 4-1, declarer would have had to ruff the third heart low, of course.

ANSWER: You have a choice of which major to lead. In general, you try to lead declarer’s shortage when in doubt, but here dummy rates to be relatively short in hearts, and you may well be able to set up a winner or two in that suit more easily. So a heart lead looks most attractive, and a small card (rather than the queen, trying to pin the 10 or jack) seems logical.

IF MAY 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may be slightly down in the dumps or faced with a tough schedule and feel that no one appreciates your most valuable talents. Romance and relaxation could seem elusive for the next few weeks or your love life might hit a few bumps in the road. By the time July is over, your confidence will return and relationships will return to normal. In October and November, you could be distracted or fooled by a new person or a group of people who attract your interest. Next January, you are more likely to meet someone who suits your fantasies better. A minor opportunity could trigger a positive alteration in the direction of your life next year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Prime the pump. Your enthusiasm levels rise when you are faced by the start of something new. You tend to put too many irons in the fire; this might be a beneficial time to travel mentally or physically.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make the most of "me, myself and I." Late tonight, a minor monthlong cycle begins when the new moon occurs in your sign. You may grow more aware of your appearance and affect on others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your attention span is grand. Thinking pleasant thoughts may be your avenue to success because it enhances your willingness to compromise with others to achieve your aims. Do not ignore obligations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friends get friendlier. As this new moon approaches, your attentions shift from receiving recognition to forming connections that allow you to attain your goals. Be frank about your desires and needs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Logic has nothing to do with it. You might be feeling somewhat guilty for criticisms or crankiness — especially if the object of your ire does something nice for you. Accept a well-meant gift with good grace.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be content with your current choices and decisions. Abolish feelings of powerlessness, fear and guilt by reciting positive mantras. If you tell yourself you are wonderful, soon you will believe it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Encouragement excites your enthusiasms. Be willing to ask for help. Having a special someone by your side or a friendly supporter rooting for your success from the sidelines makes a difference.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Love makes the world go around. Your sensitivity is amplified. Tonight's new moon in your opposite sign could mark the beginning of a month long increase in your interest in connecting with others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make your mark. You can be competitive about creativity. You might be inundated by advertising or attracted to a plethora of consumer goods, but no one is forcing you to make a purchase.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Soak up the sunshine without soaking up the atmosphere. Under these stars, it is easy to join in when grumpy people get grouchy. Avoid being argumentative with friends, co-workers and loved ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Opinion polls can be powerful. Listen to opinions that differ from those you are accustomed to hearing. By having your fledgling ideas validated, you will be encouraged to reach out and learn more.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pose in front of the camera. You may feel like a celebrity with all the extra attention you receive. People will respond favorably to your trustworthiness, so it is easy to make convincing presentations.
