MENDING A NATION'S WOUNDS

Osama bin Laden, the terror mastermind behind the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, was killed Sunday in an intense firefight with Navy SEALs. After a decade on the run, his death unleashed a national wave of euphoria mixed with remembrance for the thousands who died in the terror attacks. ■ Crowds celebrated outside the White House and at ground zero in Lower Manhattan where the Twin Towers once stood. Thousands across the country spilled into the streets to mark the moment. ■ “For my family and I, it’s good, it’s desirable, it’s right,” said Mike Low of Batesville, Ark., whose daughter Sara was a flight attendant aboard the hijacked plane that was flown into the World Trade Center North Tower. “It certainly brings an ending to a major quest for all of us.” More on Main 4 and 5

T.F. council eyes deficits

Layoff, privatization come up during early budget look

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Faced with projected multimillion-dollar deficits, talk of city layoffs reared up at Monday's Twin Falls City Council meeting, though members were far from any consensus. It was also just one idea among many. Council members talked of privatizing some city functions or hiring staff for tasks currently contracted out, partnering with other government agencies, and advertising on city vehicles. The talks were spurred by a new budgeting process instituted by City Manager Travis Rothweiler, designed to bring the council into the decision-making earlier, and with an unbalanced budget. Just two years ago, the council didn't see the next year's budget until July. City staff said its five-year budget projection accounted for the expected costs of maintaining the city's level of service and the flat revenues brought on by a protracted economic recovery.

ISDB students enjoy flights

GOODING — The whir of seven small airplane engines sliced through the chilly morning air as a few Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind students squealed with anticipation. Others, who couldn't hear the loud engines, signed excitedly to their classmates and pointed toward their favorite planes. After a few cancellations because of bad weather, 65 students from the Gooding school were finally able to buckle in and fly with volunteer pilots from Nampa, Idaho Falls and Pocatello as a part of the Experimental Aircraft Association's Young Eagles national program. On Monday, students with sight disabilities were assisted around each aircraft and allowed to touch the wings and body, while others had to be lifted out of wheelchairs and placed in the front seat. Pocatello flight instructor Mike Marquette has taken ISDB students flying for three years and said it's just a small way to give back.

Barnhart takes over TFPD patrol

Officer leads staff of 39, sees challenge in budgeting

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A veteran officer took his place as the head of the Twin Falls Police Department's patrol division Monday afternoon. Anthony Barnhart was officially promoted to captain by Chief Brian Pike in a pinning ceremony, which took place at the start of the weekly Twin Falls City Council meeting. Pike, the patrol captain prior to his promotion to chief, announced that Barnhart would helm the patrol division in late April. Barnhart will oversee a staff of 39 in the patrol division, which is the largest division of the department. In the administrative position, he will manage the division's budget and work with staff sergeants and sergeants in matters such as staffing — matters that will provide a challenge in a down economy.

“It’s going to be challenging to ensure that budgets don’t go over and at the same time maintain those levels of service that the people of Twin Falls have grown accustomed to,” he added.

Barnhart started his law enforcement career in 1993 as a deputy with the Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Office.

He has served as a patrol officer, a patrol sergeant, a detective in property crimes and narcotics, and a crime prevention officer in his 15 years with the Twin Falls police. He is also second-in-command of the SWAT unit behind Capt. Matt Hicks, though it’s unclear if he will keep that responsibility with his new promotion.

This summer, Barnhart will receive further training in police command through the Northwestern University Center for Public Safety, which is offered in Meridian and sponsored by Idaho Peace Officer Standards and Training.

Members of the Experimental Aircraft Association took about 65 students from ISDB on flights around Gooding on Monday.

Flights

“The kids are so enthusiastic,” he said. “I let them take over for a little while if they want to. As an instructor, I’m used to flying from either side of the airplane.”

Austin Briggs, 17, and Jesus Garcia, 18, were the first to fly in Marquette’s Piper Cherokee 180 plane on Monday. They followed Marquette, dressed in a brown leather jacket and work gloves, out to his plane and scrambled into the small seats. Marquette tossed his jacket behind the boys and everyone grabbed for a headset.

With a thumbs up from the ground crew and a loud “Clear!” from Marquette, the plane started and taxied toward the runway.

“I have a quiet crew in here,” Marquette said as the plane turned onto the flat air strip.

“I think that’s because we’re all nervous,” Briggs responded, pressing his mouth too close against the headset.

Garcia grabbed the seat in front of him and let a giant smile escape as the airplane took off, the ground falling away below. Briggs said the quilt-like squares of fields and clusters of homes looked like dollhouses from the sky.

While in the air, Marquette folded his arms across his chest and gave Briggs the chance to take control of the plane. Roller-coaster moments followed as the student unintentionally took the plane higher.

“Just your fingertips,” Marquette cautioned him, pointing out other planes with ISDB students in them.

The plane circled over Glambia’s cheese plant and then above the city of Gooding.

“I want to be a pilot, but I can’t see where we are flying,” Briggs said after he gave up his pilot status and turned the controls back to Marquette. “I’m blind in one eye! This one!”

But even with vision disabilities, both boys said the flight was “awesome.”

Back on the ground, Briggs and Garcia ran to join their friends while more students were walked out to Marquette’s plane. The pilots took six or seven flights apiece to accommodate all the students and some of the teachers.

“This is something these kids may never get to experience in their lifetime,” ISDB Superintendent Brian Darcy said. “Some of them may fly home on planes, but nothing like this.”

Burley, Cassia County still disagree on police services

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — After Burley and Cassia County officials boiled down the issues keeping them from reaching an accord to pay for shared police services, three remained at the bottom of the pot on Monday: money, communication and control.

With a May 16 deadline looming, Burley officials have held off on signing a contract to continue to receive law-enforcement services through the Cassia County Sheriff’s Office in fiscal 2012, which begins in July. City officials have questioned Burley’s $1.53 million share of the office’s overall $3.37 million cost this year, and whether the city can police itself for less.

Meanwhile, Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd has said Burley is getting a deal, considering that the majority of his office’s work originates within the city’s limits.

The county requested Monday’s meeting to present the city with a breakdown of sheriff’s costs and other statistics.

Judge delays Adams sentencing

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

JEROME — A convicted man saw his sentencing delayed Monday, the latest of several continuances over the course of his case.

Sentencing for Irwin Adams, the Jerome man found guilty of vehicular manslaughter by a jury in March, was pushed back one week after Adams’ defense counsel said she wasn’t ready to proceed. According to Stacy Gosnell-Taylor, she did not review the pre-sentencing report until Friday or have time to subpoena a witness.

Jerome County Deputy Prosecutor Sandra Bamburg objected, noting the numerous continuances already granted in this case. Bamburg said her office received the report early last week and had time to review it.

“I think it’s time to resolve this case,” Bamburg said.

Fifth District Judge John Butler allowed the continuance, the sixth since Adams was arraigned in magistrate court back in May 2010. Some of the continuances were requested by the state, Butler noted.

“There will be no further continuances in this matter,” he added.

Sentencing is now set for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Irwin Adams appeared in a Jerome County courtroom Monday, when the sentencing for his vehicular manslaughter conviction was postponed for one week.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Idaho prepares to resume wolf management

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is working on options for a fall wolf hunt that will be presented to commissioners in July.

Commissioners could decide in August what the strategy for a wolf hunt will be, and it’s still uncertain when wolf tags will be available for purchase, according to the department.

The work on a planned wolf hunt follows a recent action by Congress, which directed the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to take the wolf off of the federal endangered species list. Idaho will take over wolf management after the federal agency releases the rule delisting the wolf.

Estimates from biologists put Idaho’s wolf population at a minimum of 705 at the end of 2010, with about 87 packs. Included in those packs are 46 documented breeding pairs.

In 2009, Idaho’s wolf hunt killed 188 of the predators, 85 percent of the 220-wolf limit set that year.

Roadwork changes planned for Twin Falls, Gooding

Today should be busy for the Idaho Transportation Department, as it restricts traffic on Washington Street North and begins a paving project north of Gooding.

Traffic will be shifted to Washington’s southbound lanes between Caswell Avenue and North College Road as crews complete median work, closing the westernmost access to the College of Southern Idaho and other business and residential access.

Drivers are asked to find alternative travel routes, as additional closures are scheduled over the next few weeks to let crews prepare for a major reconstruction of Washington’s northbound lanes south of Falls Avenue. Orofino-based DEBCO Construction is the contractor for the federally funded $6.5 million project.

Also today, work at the north end of Gooding begins on a 12-mile asphalt overlay on Idaho Highway 46. Drivers should expect delays as crews prepare for the project, which is expected to be completed by July 1.

A pilot car will lead traffic during work hours, and a 45 mph speed limit will be in effect. Boise-based Western Construction Inc. is the contractor for the $2.1 million project.

Firefighters investigate blaze in dairy trash pit

Times-News

Firefighters with the Jerome Rural Fire Department are sorting out how a fire started Monday afternoon at a trash pit at Northside Dairy, northwest of the city of Jerome.

Dispatchers with the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center said firefighters responded to the scene, near 200 N. 200 W., at a little after 1:30 p.m. Photos from the scene showed the pit ablaze and kicking up thick, black smoke.

Fire Chief Joe Robinette said firefighters left the site shortly before 5 p.m. and continue to investigate the incident, which they think they know the cause of. In all, five trucks and 10 firefighters responded, including Robinette.

The pit held “a little of everything,” he said — tires, railroad ties, plastic and carpet.

“You name it, it was in there,” Robinette said.

No structures, people or animals were threatened by the fire. A dairy worker with a front loader helped break apart the burning material. Robinette said he has spoken about the incident with dairy owner Paul Ciocca, who was not present when the fire started.

Council

City Community Development Director Mitch Humble said he wanted to hammer home one point: “We cannot preserve historic levels of service and historic tax policy. Something has to change.”

Councilman David E. Johnson nipped talks of property tax increases before they began, and no other council member offered any defense of them. Johnson said the city has been traditionally conservative on its taxing policies — maybe even too conservative, though he said he didn’t

BY THE NUMBERS

Projected Twin Falls city general fund deficits:

2012:	$2.4 million
2013:	$3.3 million
2014:	$5.4 million
2015:	$3 million
2016:	$4.7 million

want to second-guess past decisions. But the only change to taxes he could see this year would be possibly lowering them.

“For any kind of tax increase, this year is just not a good year,” he said. “I think our community is already burdened.”

Councilman Will Kezele said he expected to see information on reducing staff levels in departments that grew with demand, but haven’t shrunk as demand receded. He wouldn’t name specific departments or staff, saying it was the city manager’s job to do the analysis. He also said he couldn’t speak for other council members on if there’s a collective will to lay off employees.

At least Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka was on board with the idea on Monday, though it is too early to make final decisions on such things.

Aside from Sojka, the idea

For now, Tamarack owners off hook for $250M loan

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The two biggest owners of the failed Tamarack Resort don’t have to worry about digging into their personal wealth to repay a $250 million construction loan, at least for the next six months.

Credit Suisse Group agreed to dismiss a lawsuit it filed in 2008 against Jean-Pierre Boespflug and Alfredo Miguel alleging they had breached personal guarantees to cover Tamarack’s construction debt to a syndicate led by the Zurich-based bank.

After about five years of high-flying construction and real-estate sales about 90 miles north of Boise on the shores of Lake Cascade, Tamarack ran out of money in early 2008, prompting Credit Suisse to ask a judge to foreclose on the ski-and-golf project.

The bank, which leads a syndicate of hedge funds and other investors who provided the money for the loan to Tamarack, then filed a separate lawsuit claiming Boespflug and Miguel triggered closure proceedings.

With the pact approved by U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge, Credit Suisse agreed not to refile its lawsuit until October, if at all. Bank lawyer Elizabeth Walker wouldn’t speculate on the likelihood of a new case.

“It could be refiled,” Walker said. “It’s not required to be refiled.”

If it is, Credit Suisse reserved its right to claim hundreds of thousands in attorney’s fees from the original 2008 lawsuit to pay Walker’s law firm, Sidley Austin.

In victory, war on terror continues

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

For Idaho and the U.S., the death of Osama bin Laden is a victory of historic, symbolic proportions in the nation's war on terror.

But the war doesn't end with the death of bin Laden, coming nearly a decade after the Sept. 11 attacks. Idahoans continue to serve on two fronts: Afghanistan and Iraq.

Today, about 1,500 Idaho Army National Guard soldiers with the 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team still serve in Iraq on a deployment expected to last through the fall. For some first deployed to Iraq in 2004, it's a second tour.

"We've got no indication this will have any bearing on the deployment of the 116th," said Col. Tim Marsano, a spokesman for the Idaho Army National Guard.

Still, there's hope that in the long run, this will be a turning point.

"We're obviously pleased with this turn of events like most Americans are, and we're hopeful perhaps this will cause some of his followers to change their ways, to re-evaluate their position," Marsano said.

Also unchanged is the status of Army Pfc. Bowe

Bergdahl of Hailey, who is believed to be a captive of the Taliban in Afghanistan since June 2009, when he was serving with an Alaska-based infantry regiment.

"We do not know if this would have any bearing on the situation," Marsano said.

Bergdahl's family has not publicly commented about the soldier amid concerns about his safety.

Bin Laden's demise also brings back memories for Col. Ronald Buckley, commander of the 366th Fighter Wing at Mountain Home Air Force Base. On Sept. 11, 2001, he was taking training at the Air Command and Staff College of Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama. Before the attacks, the planned briefing of the day, ironically, was supposed to be international terrorism with a look at bin Laden, Buckley said.

The Mountain Home base, like others, is in the thick of war. The base's 389th Fighter Squadron provides air support for troops fighting Taliban and al-Qaida terrorists in Afghanistan.

"The world continues to be a dangerous place, and we certainly have to keep the pressure on in the area of operation, but also at home," Buckley said, stressing the need for vigilance.

Shoshone police fish car out of river

Times-News

Shoshone police officers fished a resident's red Geo Metro out of the Little Wood River on Monday after vandals apparently pushed it into the water over the weekend.

Shoshone Officer Brad Germann said his department first got the call of the waterlogged car Sunday afternoon, when its owner noticed it was missing. One photo of the incident shows the car almost completely submerged in the river as it was being hauled out.

Germann said his department has identified some people of interest in connection with the car, but no suspects yet. Any eventual suspects could face charges of felony malicious injury to property, Germann said.

Jerome officials to consider water, sewer rate hikes

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The Jerome City Council will consider today a proposal to increase water and sewer rates in an effort to keep up with rising inflation and costs, while also building reserves for larger expenses.

The council will hold a public hearing on the issue at 5:30 p.m. today in Council Chambers, 100 E. Ave. A. The council could make a decision following the hearing. Here are the details:

- The proposed usage rate for water would change from $1.40 per 748 gallons to $1.44.
- Base rates for water would change as well. For a standard-sized water meter connection, the $4 monthly base rate for payment of capital water projects would increase to $6.57. The standard monthly base rate for operation and maintenance costs would increase from $3.60 to $4.75. But the monthly base rate for utility debt service would drop from $7.32 to $5.75.

- For sewer rates, the fixed rate that ranges from $1.75 to $3.75 a month would be eliminated. The proposal calls for establishing a base rate of $4.83 a month for each residential user.
- There are also changes in the usage rates. The cost of each 100 cubic feet of sewage from a residential user would increase from $2.46 to $2.80.

Arthritis Pain Mystery Solved

Horse Liniment is the secret!

HALEAH, FL. -- An ingredient used to treat inflammation in thoroughbred racehorse legs, is now recognized as safe and effective for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH ARREST™ and comes in a strength designed for humans.

Developed by a pharmacist and a chemist, the ARTH ARREST formula is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Scientists suggest that ARTH ARREST works by intercepting the pain messenger substance that sends pain signals to the brain. Although the mechanism is not totally clear, pain is relieved in the affected area because the pain signal actually disappears after continued use.

ARTH ARREST is the only product on the market with Neurocaine and is available in a convenient, roll-on applicator without a prescription. Considered a medical miracle by some, ARTH ARREST is available in pharmacies or by calling 1-800-339-3301. Now at:

George W. Bush hails bin Laden death as victory for America

By Jamie Stengle

DALLAS — Officials in George W. Bush’s administration joined the former president Monday in expressing gratitude that with the death of Osama bin Laden, justice had finally been served.

Bush said in a statement issued late Sunday night that President Barack Obama had called to tell him of bin Laden’s death.

“I congratulated him and the men and women of our military and intelligence communities who devoted their lives to this mission,” he said. “They have our everlasting gratitude.”

Bush was in power on Sept. 11, 2001, when agents from bin Laden’s al-Qaida network hijacked planes and crashed them into the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon in Washington, killing nearly 3,000 people in the worst terrorist attack on American soil.

Bush sent U.S. forces against al-Qaida and the Taliban in Afghanistan in October 2001.

“President Bush’s presidency changed. We went from peace to war in a matter of minutes,” former Bush adviser Karen Hughes said Monday. “President Bush had an unrelenting focus from that day forward on protecting the security of our country and finding Osama bin Laden.”

Bin Laden was shot in the head by elite U.S. counter-terrorism troops in northern Pakistan. Hughes called his death “a victory for justice and peace.”

Dick Cheney, Bush’s former vice president, offered rare praise for Obama.

“President Obama and his national security team acted on the intelligence when it came in and they deserve a lot of credit, too,” Cheney said.

Bush said in the Sunday night statement: “This momentous achievement marks a victory for America, for people who seek peace around the world, and for all those who lost loved ones on September 11, 2001. The fight against terror goes on, but tonight America has sent an unmistakable message: No matter how long it takes, justice will be done.”

About a dozen supporters gathered near Bush’s high-security Dallas home until a thunderstorm started about midnight Sunday. On Monday morning, a handful of red, white and blue balloons remained outside the gate on the street leading to his home and several American flags were planted in the flower beds.

Wash. teacher shaves for first time since Sept. 11

EPHRATA, Wash. (AP) — A middle school teacher vowed after the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, that he would not shave his beard until Osama bin Laden was caught.

Gary Weddle kept his word Sunday evening.

“I spent my first five minutes crying and then I couldn’t get it off fast enough,” Weddle, 50, told the Capital Press.

Weddle, who lives in East Wenatchee and teaches in Ephrata, had wanted to cut his beard for years. The gray stringy growth actually made him look a bit like bin Laden, the mastermind of the 9/11 attacks who was killed by U.S. forces.

Weddle was a substitute teacher in Wenatchee when the terrorist attacks occurred on the World Trade Center and Pentagon, killing some 3,000 people.

Weddle said he was so absorbed in the news that he neglected to shave. A week or so later, he decided not to shave until bin Laden was captured or proven dead. He figured it would just be a month or two.

At the start of each school year, Weddle told students the beard was a reminder of the attacks.

After all these years, Weddle figured he’d still be wearing the beard next Sept. 11, the 10th anniversary of the attacks.

He was working in his garden Sunday evening when news came that bin Laden was dead.

Weddle wasted no time finding scissors and razors. He had cut the beard and was shaving the stubble before President Obama addressed the nation.

Friends and neighbors watched him cut the beard. He cut himself while shaving for the first time in 3,454 days.

Weddle was 41 when he made his vow.

Americans feel both joy and fear over bin Laden’s death

Americans awoke on Monday to a world without Osama bin Laden, and many felt jubilation, a surge of patriotism and a sense that their prayers had been answered and that the U.S. had finally avenged the nearly 3,000 people killed that bright September day nearly a decade ago.

But to many — including some of the same Americans glad to see bin Laden dead — the news didn’t make them feel safer. It led to uncertainty and fear.

Walter Hillegass, a plumber who cleaned the dust-choked World Trade Center site for days after the attacks, said he is scared of what comes next.

“I’m happy they got him,” said Hillegass, staring at ground zero in New York, holding a U.S. flag. “But there’s always going to be another one right behind him.”

Outside Boston, Laura Bell, a 65-year-old claims examiner for a health care company, said she is glad bin Laden is dead but doesn’t believe it will make the U.S. any safer.

“We can’t relax,” she said. “We can’t sit back on our butts and say this is great. I don’t want us to get lax about security.”

At the Salt Lake City airport, Mike Hensley wondered whether flying will be safer.

“Safer is subjective,” said Hensley, who served with the Navy in Desert Storm in 1991 and flew from San Diego to Salt Lake City on Monday. “Should him being killed make people feel safer? Not really. He’s had 10 years to build an organization larger than it was 10 years ago.”

State and city leaders across the country stepped up patrols at possible terrorist targets Monday for fear of retaliatory attacks. Some travelers said they didn’t feel any different about flying in the wake of bin Laden’s death.

“I don’t think they (al-Qaida) would be able to get things together this quickly, after 24 hours, but I think it could be quite scary in the future,” said Lorraine Mastropietro of Lakeland, Fla., who was flying from Newark, N.J., to Tampa, Fla.

Families of 9/11 victims weren’t sure whether his death would bring them a measure of peace.

Nearly 10 years later, Charles Wolf of New York still falls asleep each night on one side of his bed.

“This is a feeling of happiness but not jump-up-and-down happiness,” said Wolf, who lost his wife, Katherine, in the attacks on the World Trade Center. “The idea of closure is something that really, really — it doesn’t exist, to tell you the truth.”

In Dearborn Mich. — home to one of the nation’s largest Arab and Muslim communities — drivers honked their horns and others gathered outside City Hall, chanting, “USA!” and waving American flags.

“It’s a special day for us to show Americans we are celebrating, we are united,” said Ahmed Albedairy, 35, of Dearborn, who came to the U.S. from Iraq in 1996 and was one of about 20 people outside City Hall early Monday. He said it was important to celebrate the “death of the evil Osama bin Laden.”

Everywhere, it seemed, people turned to the flag and American anthems to show their stripes. “Proud to Be an American” was played between innings of the Texas Rangers-Oakland A’s game Monday afternoon, and an announcer asked fans to “raise their Budweisers” in appreciation of the military.

Bin Laden’s luxury hideout raises questions

ABBOTTABAD, Pakistan — Osama bin Laden made his final stand in a small Pakistani city where three army regiments with thousands of soldiers are based not far from the capital — a location that is increasing suspicions in Washington that Islamabad may have been sheltering him.

The U.S. acted alone in Monday’s helicopter raid, did not inform Pakistan until it was over and pointedly did not thank Pakistan at the end of a wildly successful operation. All this suggests more strain ahead in a relationship that was already suffering because of U.S. accusations that the Pakistanis are supporting Afghan militants and Pakistani anger over American drone attacks and spy activity.

Pakistani intelligence agencies are normally very sharp in sniffing out the presence of foreigners in small cities.

For years, Western intelligence had said bin Laden was most likely holed up in a cave along the Pakistan-Afghan border, a remote region of soaring mountains and thick forests where the Pakistan army has little presence. But the 10-year hunt for the world’s most-wanted man ended in a whitewashed, three-story house in a middle-class area of Abbottabad, a leafy resort city of 400,000 people nestled in pine-forested hills less than 35 miles from the national capital, Islamabad.

Sen. Carl Levin, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said bin Laden’s location meant Pakistan had “a lot of explaining to do.”

“I think this tells us once again that unfortunately Pakistan at times is playing a double game,” said Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, a member of the Armed Services Committee.

A senior Pakistan intelligence official dismissed speculation that bin Laden was being protected.

“We don’t explain it. We just did not know — period,” he said, on condition his name not be released to the media.

Extra security forces swarmed the city on Monday, adding to Abbottabad’s already massive military presence. Heavily armed trucks rumbled through, and police shooed children away from around the fortress-like compound.

Associated Press reporters saw the wreckage of one of the American helicopters that malfunctioned and had to be destroyed during the operation. Residents described the sounds of bullets, the clatter of chopper blades and two large explosions as the raid went down.

Hours after the operation, a soldier armed with a gun could be seen walking on the compound’s roof, as tense crowds of onlookers suddenly swelled in the narrow street leading away from the site.

It was unclear how long bin Laden had been holed up in the house with members of his family. From the outside, the house resembled many others in Pakistan and even had a flag flying from a pole in the garden, apparently a Pakistani one. It had high, barbed-wire topped walls, few windows and was located in a neighborhood of smaller houses, shops, dusty litter-lined streets and empty plots used for growing vegetables.

Bin Laden’s path of terror

Osama bin Laden was born in 1957 in Saudi Arabia to a construction tycoon father and was one of 54 children. The most intense manhunt in history finally caught up with him in Pakistan, outside of Islamabad, where he was killed at a compound, ending his reign of terror. Key events in his life since 1980:

1980				1985				1990				1995
1980-89: Bin Laden fights Soviet troops in Afghanistan. After 1989 Soviets, retreat, he returns to Saudi Arabia to be showered with praise.				1990-91: During Persian Gulf conflict, he tries to dissuade the Saudi government from allowing “infidel” armies into Saudi Arabia. Saudi leadership turns to U.S. for protection. He moves to Sudan and is stripped of citizenship for continuing to criticize alliances with Washington.				1992: Saudi Arabia freezes bin Laden’s bank accounts and a $350 million share of the family’s multibilliondollar empire. After being forced to leave Sudan, bin Laden moves to Afghanistan in 1996.

Bin Laden’s demise: Long pursuit, burst of gunfire

By Adam Goldman and Chris Brummitt

WASHINGTON — Osama bin Laden, the terror master-mind killed by Navy SEALs in an intense firefight, was hunted down based on information first gleaned years ago from detainees at secret CIA prison sites in Eastern Europe, officials disclosed Monday. The U.S. said a DNA match proved the man behind the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, was dead, and millions of Americans rejoiced.

After the gunfire, U.S. forces swept bin Laden’s fortified compound in Pakistan and left with a trove of hard drives, DVDs and other documents that officials said the CIA was already poring over. The hope: clues leading to his presumed successor, al-Qaida No. 2 Ayman al-Zawahiri.

“The world is safer. It is a better place because of the death of Osama bin Laden,” declared President Barack Obama, hours after U.S. forces killed the al-Qaida leader. They then ferried the body out for a quick burial at sea.

Bin Laden’s death after a decade on the run unloosed a national wave of euphoria mixed with remembrance for the thousands who died in the Sept. 11 2001, terror attacks. Crowds celebrated throughout the night outside the White House and at ground zero in Lower Manhattan where the Twin Towers once stood. Thousands of students at Penn State University and in other college towns spilled into the streets and set off firecrackers to mark the moment.

“For my family and I, it’s good, it’s desirable, it’s right,” said Mike Low of Batesville, Ark., whose daughter Sara was a flight attendant aboard the hijacked plane that was flown into the World Trade Center North Tower. “It certainly brings an ending to a major quest for all of us.”

Halfway around the world, a prominent al-Qaida commentator vowed revenge for bin Laden’s death. “Woe to his enemies. By God, we will avenge the killing of the Sheik of Islam,” he wrote under his online name Assad al-Jihad2. “Those who wish that jihad has ended or weakened, I tell them: Let us wait a little bit.”

U.S. officials conceded the risk of renewed attack. The terrorists “almost certainly will attempt to avenge” bin Laden’s death, CIA Director Leon Panetta wrote in a memo that congratulated the agency for its role in the operation. “Bin Laden is dead. Al-Qaida is not.”

Within a few hours, the Department of Homeland Security warned that bin Laden’s death was likely to provide motivation for attacks from “homegrown violent extremists” seeking revenge.”

FBI spokesman Paul Bresnon said, “While there are no specific, bin Laden-related threats at this time, every logical and prudent step is being taken to mitigate any developing threats.” There were questions, as well, about Pakistan’s role in bin Laden’s years in hiding. Both Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said cooperation from the Pakistani government had helped lead U.S. forces to the compound where he died.

But John Brennan, White House counter-terrorism adviser, told reporters it was inconceivable that the terrorist fugitive didn’t have some support in Pakistan, where his hideout had been custom built six years ago in a city with a heavy military presence. “I am not going to speculate about what type of support he might have had on an official basis,” he added.

Others were not as reticent.

BOISE — Public safety officials around the state are reviewing emergency procedures and boosting vigilance — but not necessarily security measures — in response to the death of Osama bin Laden and the possibility that his followers may retaliate in the days and months ahead.

“We have a heightened state of awareness rather than a heightened state of security,” said John Redding, public affairs specialist with the Bureau of Reclamation, the agency charged with managing water and dams in Idaho and western other states.

The agency has security measures in place at all of the dams and hydroelectric structures it maintains, Redding said, but people visiting the structures won’t likely notice anything different than they would have seen during a visit a week or a month ago.

Likewise, Idaho State Police troopers are being asked to be extra attentive, but none have been cleared to work any extra hours.

intelligence agency “have a lot of questions to answer, given the location, the length of time and the apparent fact that this was actually — this facility was actually built for bin Laden, and its closeness to the central location of the Pakistani army.”

By their condemnations, bin Laden’s supporters confirmed his death in what U.S. officials said was an operation years in the making. Even so, officials were weighing the release of at least one photo taken of bin Laden’s body as part of what Brennan called an effort to make sure “nobody has any basis to try and deny” the death.

U.S. officials said the information that ultimately led to bin Laden’s capture originally came from detainees held in secret CIA prison sites in Eastern Europe. There, agency interrogators were told of an alias used by a courier whom bin Laden particularly trusted.

It took four long years to learn the man’s real name, then years more before investigators got a big break in the case, these officials said. Sometime in mid-2010, the man was overheard using a phone by intelligence officials, who then were able to locate his residence — the specially constructed $1 million compound with walls as high as 18 feet topped with barbed wire.

U.S. counterterrorism officials considered bombing the place, an option that was discarded by the White House as too risky, particularly if it turned out bin Laden was not there.

Instead, Obama signed an order on Friday for a team of SEALs to chopper onto the compound under the cover of darkness. In the ensuing 48 hours, the president toured tornado-damaged Alabama and delivered a joke-filled after-dinner speech to the White House Correspondents Association. When the operation got under way, though, he slid into his chair in the Situation Room in the White House, where Brennan said the president and his aides “were able to monitor in a real-time basis the progress of the operation” from beginning to end.

Brennan strongly suggested a live video feed was available — SEALs customarily have video cameras attached to their helmets — and the White House released a photo to showing the commander in chief, Vice President Joe Biden and top aides staring intently at something outside the picture. The White House did not say what they were looking at.

According to officials who declined to be identified by name, bin Laden was shot in the head during a firefight, and his body was identified to near 100 percent certainty through DNA testing. Photo analysis by the CIA, confirmation by a woman believed to be one of bin Laden’s wives, who was also at the compound, and matching physical features added confirmation, they said.

In addition to bin Laden, one of his sons, Khalid, was killed in the raid, as was the wife who shielded him, Brennan said. Also killed were two of bin Laden’s al-Qaida facilitators, including the one who was apparently listed as the owner of the residence, Brennan said.

Some individuals found at the compound were left behind when the SEALs withdrew and were turned over to Pakistani authorities who quickly took over control of the site, officials said.

Within 40 minutes, the operation was over, and the SEALs flew out — minus one helicopter, which had malfunctioned and had to be destroyed. Bin Laden’s remains were flown to the USS Carl Vinson, then lowered into the North Arabian Sea.

There was one last nerve-racking moment back inside the White House, Brennan said, when the Pakistanis started scrambling their jets and there was brief concern that the U.S. force might be in danger.

The decision to bury the body at sea drew condemnation from some Muslim clerics despite Obama’s statement that the burial was handled in accordance with Islamic tradition.

“They can say they buried him at sea, but they cannot say they did it according to Islam,” said Mohammed al-Qubaisi, Dubai’s grand mufti. “Sea burials are permissible for Muslims in extraordinary circumstances. This is not one of them.”

As quickly as bin Laden’s supporters vowed to avenge his death, administration officials worked to undermine his reputation.

“Here is bin Laden, who has been calling for these (terror) attacks, living in this million-dollar-plus compound, living in an area that is far removed from the front, hiding behind women who were put in front of him as a shield. I think it really just speaks to just how false his narrative has been over the years,” said Brennan.

Fabled SEAL Team 6 ends hunt for world’s most-wanted terrorist

By Kimberly Dozier
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Osama bin Laden’s death in a ripped-from-a-spy-thriller helicopter raid and firefight gives a storied unit of U.S. special operations forces bragging rights for what has become the most famous covert operation since the Sept. 11 attacks launched on bin Laden’s orders.

The unit, called Navy SEAL Team Six, probably won’t claim the credit publicly, however.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, say units from SEAL Team Six dropped into bin Laden’s high-walled compound in Pakistan early Monday morning, sliding down ropes in the pre-dawn dark. The military won’t confirm which unit carried out the attack.

But the head of the Navy

SEALs, Rear Adm. Edward Winters, sent an email congratulating his forces and warning them to keep their mouths shut.

“Be extremely careful about operational security,” he added. “The fight is not over.”

Made up of only a few hundred forces based in Dam Neck, Va., the elite SEAL unit officially known as Naval Special Warfare Development Group, or “DEVGRU,” is part of a special operations brotherhood that calls itself “the quiet professionals.”

SEAL Team Six raided targets outside war zones like Yemen and Somalia in the past three years, though the unit operates primarily in Afghanistan. The Associated Press will not publish the names of the commanding officers, to protect them and their families from possible retaliation by militants for the bin Laden operation.

The unit is overseen by the Joint Special Operations Command, which oversees the U.S. Army’s Delta Force and other special units. JSOC’s combined forces have been responsible for a quadrupling of counterterrorism raids that have targeted militants in record numbers over the past year in Afghanistan. Some 4,500 elite special operations forces and support units have been part of the surge of U.S. forces there.

CIA Director Leon Panetta was in charge of the military team during the covert operation, a U.S. official said. While the president can empower the SEALs and other counterterrorism units to carry out covert actions without CIA oversight, President Barack Obama’s team put the intelligence agency in charge, with other elements of the national security apparatus answering to them for this mission.

SEAL Team Six actually works so often with the intelligence agency that it’s sometimes called the CIA’s Pretorian Guard — a partnership that started in Iraq, as an outgrowth of the fusion of special operations forces and intelligence in the hunt for militants there.

SEALs and Delta both, commanded by then-JSOC chief Gen. Stanley McChrystal, learned to work much like FBI agents, first attacking a target, killing or capturing the suspects, and then gathering evidence at the scene.

McChrystal described it as building a network to chase a network, where the special operations forces work with intelligence analysts back at a joint base. The raiders, he said, could collect valuable “pocket litter” from the scene, like documents or computers, to exploit to hunt the next target.

The battlegrounds of Iraq and Afghanistan had been informally divided, with the SEALs running Afghanistan and the U.S. Army’s Delta Force conducting the bulk of the operations in Iraq, though there was overlap of each organization. There is considerable professional rivalry between them.

Delta Force units caught Saddam Hussein late in 2003, and had killed his sons Uday and Qusay in a shootout in Mosul earlier that year. The race to be the unit that captured bin Laden had been on ever since.

“Officially, Team Six doesn’t exist,” says former Navy SEAL Craig Sawyer, 47, who advises Hollywood and acts in movies about the military.

After undergoing a six-month process in which commanders scrutinized his every move, Sawyer says he was selected in the 1990s to join the team.

“It was like being recruited to an all-star team,” he said, with members often gone 300 days a year, only lasting about three years on the team before burning out.

“They train around the clock,” he said. “They know that failure will not be an option. Either they succeed or they don’t come home.”

Other special operations units joke that “SEAL” stands for “Sleep, eat, lift,” though the term actually stands for Sea, Air, Land.

“The SEALs will be the first to remind everyone that the ‘L’ in SEAL stands for land,” says retired Army Gen. Doug Brown, former commander of U.S. Special Operations Command in Tampa, Fla. “They have skills on the land equal to their skills at sea.”

Terror and the United States

The news of Osama bin Laden’s death at the hands of U.S. forces brought back a rush of swirling emotions to each of us Sunday night — most complete with a brief mental replay of where we were and what we were doing on Sept. 11, 2001.

And although live television brought us the sight and sound of thousands celebrating outside the White House and at Ground Zero in New York, the majority of us took the news far more soberly; satisfied with the news yet with the full realization that terrorism will remain long after the death of a single individual.

Our view: Despite their differences, events of Sunday reminded Americans what really matters. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

It was in the wake of 9/11 that then-President Bush originated the term “war on terror” and for the better part of 10 years most of us wondered whether we were winning or losing and when we might know. Sunday’s news was tangible evidence of progress and while hardly signifying victory it was nonetheless an indisputable win that united us as a country more than any single event since— well, since September 2001.

Terrorism existed long before Osama bin Laden and will remain long after his death. Terrorists practice terrorism not with the goal of bringing down buildings or killing Americans but rather of installing terror; of paralyzing us with intense and overwhelming fear. And so the “war on terrorism” against al-Qaida and those countries thought to support their efforts was really only the outward, physical manifestation of the battle.

The actual “war on terror” is one that each of us had to face — and overcome — on a daily basis. In a sense we won that war each time we boarded an airplane or refused to have our thoughts and actions altered by the fear of what “might” happen. And so the death of this most infamous terrorist may — and it’s a very big may — reduce terrorism, but it is Americans both individually and as a united country that will overcome terror.

The admonition to “Never Forget” after the 9/11 attacks may have had the very narrow meaning of always remembering what happened on that Tuesday morning in 2001. But perhaps it should have a broader and more timeless meaning. That in spite of intense differences on health care reform, the size of government and who is responsible for the condition of our economy, the United States is at its best and at its strongest when we are, in fact, united.

If bin Laden’s death can move beyond being an end in itself to being a reminder of what unites us as a country it will make us feel better not just for a day but for as long as we remain the United States of America.

Long story short: Bin Laden doesn’t matter anymore

BENGHAZI, Libya — Osama bin Laden is dead — and so is an old Middle East. That they died together is fortuitous and apt.

Bin Laden lived to propel history backward to the reestablishment of a Muslim caliphate. He died a marginal figure to the transformation fast-forwarding the Arab world toward pluralism and self-expression.

Roger Cohen

He came of age as the Arab world shifted from Nasserite nationalism to the discovery of identity in political Islamism. It was a potent form of anti-Western defiance. His death comes as post-Islamist revolutions from Tunis to Cairo topple despotism in the name of democratic values long denied Arabs, who, in their vast majority, now seek a reasonable balance between modernity and their faith. Arab pride has disentangled itself from the complex of the West.

Bin Laden’s Holy War drew sustenance from “Westoxification” — the sense of humiliation among Arabs at perceived Western dominance and aggression. Bin Laden whipped that resentment into al-Qaida’s capacity for nihilistic mass murder.

He died as Arabs en masse move away from the politics of rage and revenge, directed mainly outward, toward a new politics of responsibility and representative government, directed mainly inward.

It is not only the timing of his death at the hands of U.S. forces that is apt, but also its location — far from a Middle East with which he had lost touch. He died in Pakistan. Or rather he died in the so-called AfPak theater where a decade of war has fed jihadist ideology even as it has lost appeal for Web-savvy Arab youth in the region of its birth.

An era has passed. It was a painful decade of disorientation and American whiplash. The mass murder so agonizing it had to be distilled to three digits — 9/11 — poisoned a new century at its outset. Bin Laden was that poison’s slow drip.

I was in New York City that day, at the bottom of Atlantic Avenue, by the East River, when a guy next to me said, “Hey, look, the World Trade Center’s on fire.” So, on a clear day, began the pulverizing horror that turned human beings to dust and shook Americans’ most basic assumptions about the land that morphed into a “homeland.”

Today I’m in Benghazi, where brave Libyans determined to forge a decent society battle an Arab despot, Muammar Gaddafi, the sometime terrorist and slayer of Americans who then claimed anti-Qaida credentials to secure the support of the West.

In fact, of course, his tyranny, which must end, has fed the very extremism he claimed to oppose. Bin Laden thrived on Arab despotism and on the American hypocrisy involved in supporting that repression.

He died as President Obama’s America has made democratization in the Arab world at least a semi-serious U.S. objective for the first time. Effective counterterrorism does not lie in starving a whole region of basic rights. That much has been learned.

There is hope in this passage from the suicidal Arab rage of 9/11 to the brave resistance of Libya’s 2/17 Benghazi revolution — and the other revolutions and uprisings sweeping the region. A long road is left to travel — al-Qaida is not dead — but the first step was the hardest: the breaking of the captive Arab mind, the triumph of engagement over passivity, the defeat of fear. Bin Laden’s rose-tinted caliphate was the solace of the disenfranchised, the disempowered and the desperate. A young guy with a job, a vote and prospects does not need virgins in paradise.

America initially nourished Bin Laden’s ideology as a means to defeat the Soviet empire, before becoming its target. Neglect and end-of-history euphoria preceded devastating blowback. In the decade since then, there has been further blowback — from two punishing wars and from mistaken policy.

This is a triumphant day for a young American president who changed policy, retiring his predecessor’s horrible misnomer, the Global War on Terror, in order to focus, laser-like, on the terrorists determined to do the United States and its allies harm. Bin Laden had enticed George W. Bush’s flailing America into his web. Obama saw the need for extraction and engagement —

Extraction from the wars and engagement with the moderate Muslim majority. The passage has been uneven but his achievements unquestionable. Open societies have this going for them over circles of fanatical conviction: they learn from mistakes.

How then to complete the work and make a corpse not only of Bin Laden but his movement? Oust Gaddafi with ruthlessness and in short order. Steer the Arab revolutions into port with consistent political support and funding. Arab democracy must also mean Arab opportunity.

End the war in Afghanistan as soon as America’s basic security requirements are met. Make America’s closest regional ally, Israel, understand that a changed Middle East cannot be met with unchanging Israeli policies. Palestine, like Israel, must rise to the region’s dawning post-Osama era of responsibility and representation.

The 2012 campaign just got less interesting. Obama, as I’ve written before, is a lucky man. I suspect luck and purposefulness do a two-term president make. Obama got Osama because he turned a wider tide.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Xavier student wishes former principal the best

I appreciate your coverage of Principal Cindy Fulcher’s employment status. I am a junior at Xavier Charter School, and I am glad the issue has been shared with the community. However, I feel it is necessary to comment on the wording of the article from Friday, April 15, discussing the panel’s final decision.

In the article, it was stated that “[u]ltimately, the panel sided with Xavier.” In truth, a large majority of both Xavier students and staff are devastated by the actions the School Board has taken to push for Fulcher’s termination, and we wish we had some power to change the unfortunate outcome.

Mrs. Fulcher was a mentor because of the hard work and persistence she showed in fulfilling her dream of founding Xavier Charter School. I am very disappointed that she will not be able to nurture her vision over the next few years. It is largely because of her that I will never give up on my goals no matter how big, far away or impossible they may seem. Mrs. Fulcher cared deeply about every single student.

In her absence, a lot of us have developed an even greater appreciation for all she has done for us. I would really like for the community and Mrs. Fulcher to be aware of the huge impact she has made on my life, education and future, and on those of numerous other students as well. I will miss Mrs. Fulcher greatly, and I want everyone to know that many at Xavier will always support and love her. I would like to express a huge thanks to Mrs. Fulcher, and I hope I can go on to make her proud.

Criticism may have flown over lawmakers’ heads

Huzzah for David Ramsey and Grenville E. Day who wrote articulate letters of reason which condemn the myopic lawmakers of Idaho! However, I fear that their use of metaphors, innuendoes and elevated language is incomprehensible to the troglodytes in the Legislature.

If legislators themselves cannot comprehend an educated vocabulary, why should they want to educate a young populace to use that kind of language?

Our hope is that these ovine persons have locked themselves right out of office in the next election.

Times-News thanked for sponsoring concert

My thanks to the Times-News for sponsoring The United States Army Field Band and Soldiers Chorus.

They presented a magnificent concert that focused on their truly talented members with music from a variety of genres. Kudos to the sound men for keeping the loud at a comfortable level so that the audience could hear the individual voices and instruments.

The band graciously allowed local talent to perform with them: CSI’s own Dr. Halsell conducted a number and area high school students joined the band for another. In a pre-concert introduction, the conductor told about the history of the band, shared personal stories and answered questions from the audience.

Twin Falls was very fortunate to have this band come to our community. Thanks again for a splendid evening.

Problems in the U.S. should deter immigrants

Please do not misconstrue what I am about to say. Regarding Melissa Davlin’s article, dated April 24:

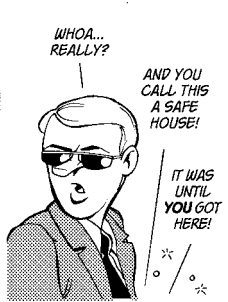

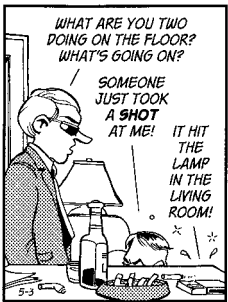

My heart goes out to the refugees attempting to relocate in Twin Falls. Given the dismal economic situation, the immigration question, so many people on unemployment and a host of other problems menacing Idaho and this country, I find it unconscionable to allow another soul to migrate here!

Sometimes, it is necessary to take an unpopular stand, and this is one of those times. In rare circumstances, an exception could be entertained. However, it would have to be thoroughly deliberated! Perhaps, in the future.

Lifetime Income: A Great Mother’s Day Gift

It’s almost Mother’s Day. If you’re a mom, you give much to your family. But it’s also important to think about your own financial future.

For a variety of factors, including time spent away from the workforce to care for their families, women may accumulate less money for retirement than men. That’s why you should try to fully fund your IRA and contribute as much as possible to your 401(k). Once you retire, you’ll need to calculate how much you can withdraw from these accounts each year so that you don’t outlive your resources.

If you’ve “maxed out” on your IRA and 401(k), you may want to consider other investments, such as a fixed annuity.

Cards and flowers are on their way — but talk to your financial advisor about strategies to help you enjoy all the Mother’s Days of your life in the comfort you deserve.

LAWN & GARDEN

CRABGRASS SOLUTIONS

Crabgrass gets its name because it sprawls from a central root low across the ground. It can become a problem quickly because it is able to grow vigorously in hot, dry conditions. Before dying in the fall, a single weed can distribute thousands of seeds which will be ready to germinate in spring. Crabgrass is a problem, but you can take care of these weeds in your lawn easily with our plan.

Prevention and Maintenance of crab grass begins with Higher mowing. This will encourage lawn grasses to shade and prevent the germination of crabgrass seeds. A deep, thick lawn seldom contains much crabgrass. You can discourage crabgrass by mowing at the proper height for your grass type.

Weeds are better adapted to adverse growing conditions than most lawn grasses. Shallow and infrequent watering will only weaken the roots of your grass, while allowing the crabgrass to thrive and take over. Water lawns deeply and less frequently. When you water, wet the soil to a depth of 4-6 inches. This usually requires the equivalent of ½-1 inch of rainfall.

Prevent Crabgrass Seeds from Taking Root apply a lawn food that contains a pre-emergent, such as Scotts® Turf Builder® with Halts® Crabgrass Preventer in early spring (before temperatures reach 65°F). It will feed your grass while providing a barrier that prevents crabgrass seeds from germinating. Use our Annual Program Builder™ to create a complete lawn feeding schedule.

Magic Valley learns from CSI horticulture program

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

While most College of Southern Idaho students were cooped up in classrooms Thursday, horticulture students spent the sunny early afternoon planting apple trees at the Breckenridge Endowment Farm on Twin Falls' North College Road. The trees were the newest addition on the farm, where students recently planted three types of raspberry plants and 200 grapevines.

The students were laying the foundations for a future course on pomology, or the study of fruit. It's just one of the ways the horticulture program is growing. And as the program expands, there are more ways for the Magic Valley community to benefit from the students' knowledge.

Dave "Tree Man" Kiesig, head of the college's horticulture department, said much of the program's development is based on the new 4,260-square-foot greenhouse, which it moved into in spring 2010. The facility has new technology that gives the budding green thumbs control over temperature, air movement and shade. The greenhouse's three hydroponic units — which grow plants without soil by circulating nutrient-rich water through the roots — produce tomatoes, spinach, red kale, parsley and more.

"We're probably picking 60 cucumbers a week," Kiesig said. Eventually, Kiesig hopes the program will supply food to campus food services, or sell it through Idaho's Bounty. For now, students get the majority of the food.

The greenhouse also produces plants — such as shrubs, groundcover and herbs — that

Color it (dark) blue

By Mary Beth Breckenridge
Akron Beacon Journal

Blue is back.

This spring, blue is coming on strong in home decor. It's in shelter magazines. It's on catalog covers. It's being hawked by HGTV's Sabrina Soto in TV ads for Target.

Especially hot is a deep, near-navy blue — the blue of the flag, say, or of a ginger jar. Often used in combination with white, it's crisp, classic and oh-so-American.

"I think it's very sophisticated and classy," said Christine Hought, an interior designer. "It's got a very polished look about it."

Dark blue has long been a staple of traditional design, but this time around it's sporting some updated pizzazz. It's showing up in classic motifs that have been exaggerated to give them a fresh look, for example, as well as in ethnic patterns and contemporary shapes.

The color has the unusual property of feeling both sporty and formal at the same time, said Mark Woodman, an interior designer and consultant who is president of the Color Marketing Group, a color forecasting organization. Deep blue is associated with the Navy and orderliness, but it also conveys the relaxed attitude of a beach cottage.

Hought called it "country-club-esque, but not too stodgy and not too stiff." Think of a blue blazer with khaki pants — dressy, but in a casual way.

Woodman is using the hue in a home he's currently decorating. He's painting it on the walls below a bedroom chair rail and using it as an accent color and a color in fabric prints. He's even considering putting it on a bathroom ceiling.

Hought and Lisa Cregan, author of a new book devoted to blue, suspect the renewed popularity of deep blue may be related to the patriotic wave the country is riding, although Cregan believes the association is subconscious. Or it might be due to our economic instability, which tends to bring traditional, familiar styles to the forefront — styles that often feature blue.

Tough times also have us craving stress relief, and blue is known for its calming properties, noted Cregan, who wrote "Blue: 350 Inspiring Ways to Decorate with Blue" for House Beautiful magazine.

What's more, deep blue is a color that appeals to both genders. "It doesn't feel too sweet, and it doesn't feel too masculine," she said.

Maybe its greatest attribute is the way it plays well with other colors, Woodman said.

Dark blue works with yellow, as it also pairs well as the color that falls opposite blue on the color wheel, orange, he said. It goes with deep terra cotta, aubergine and deep red. It's a way to

Ways to keep your garden and wallet happy this spring

By Holly E. Thomas
The Washington Post

Praise for the art of gardening is abundant and broad: It's therapeutic; it saves money at the grocery store; it's good for the environment; it raises the value of your home. But if you're making common — and costly — mistakes, things probably aren't coming up roses. Below, landscaping experts talk about how to make your garden grow while keeping some green in your wallet.

Do's

Do some research: You'll want to use plants that are native to your area. Nancy Somerville, chief executive of the American Society of Landscape Architects (ASLA), notes that opting for native species will result in the biggest cost savings. "They're great energy-, time- and money-savers because they're fully adapted to the conditions," she says. Next, find out what kinds of insects are attracted to the plants you're considering and whether those insects might be harmful to neighboring species. Before grouping plants, ensure they have similar requirements for soil, fertilizers, shade or sun levels and water, says Beth Palys, executive director for a regional Landscape Contractors Association.

Consider composting: Making your own compost adds up to significant savings, considering a 1-cubic-foot bag of prepared compost costs roughly $5. "Anything organic that once was alive will break down and give up its nutrients — even just grass clippings piled up in a corner of the yard that sit for a year," says Travis Poore, sales associate and how-to expert for Home Depot. Homeowners can easily make their own: Choose an easily accessible spot in the yard and wrap chicken wire around posts to create a compost area.

Plant edibles: With food prices on the rise, sales of edible plants and seeds have skyrocketed. Poore notes that he gets about 50 percent of his own produce from a 10-by-10-foot garden and that a single packet of seeds, which costs about $1 or $2, can yield 40 to 50 plants. No room for a proper garden? Not to worry. "Berry bushes are low-maintenance perennials, and a lot of herbs are perennial and can be really beautiful in the garden," Somerville says.

Make your A/C run efficiently

DEAR JIM: With recent concern about nuclear power plants, I want my central air conditioner to run efficiently to save electricity. Other than a professional service call, what can I do to tune it up myself? — Bob W.

DEAR BOB: Electric utility companies have to provide enough electricity generation capacity to meet peak demand even though it is actually not needed often. If peak electricity demand can be decreased, then fewer power plants will have to be built and perhaps some old ones can be shut down.

Peak electricity demand typically occurs during hot weekday summer afternoons when commercial/industrial demand is high along with residential air-conditioning load. Running your air conditioner as efficiently as possible can help reduce this peak electricity demand.

There are some things you can do yourself to keep your central air conditioner running efficiently. This does not preclude having regular professional service calls, though. Technicians have special equipment and pressure gauges to check the internal components of the system.

Getting adequate air flow through the outdoor condenser coils is important for efficiency because this is where the heat is exhausted from the refrigerant. Make sure weeds and shrubs have not grown too close to the outdoor unit. Also, don't rest rakes or other items against it which may block air flow.

Switch off the circuit breaker to the unit and remove the outdoor cabinet. Clean out any debris that has accumulated inside it which may block the coils. You don't have to make it spotless, though. If fins have been bent over in spots, try to straighten them out enough so more air gets through.

It is important that all the screws holding the cabinet sections together are tight when you reinstall the cabinet. Even if it is clean and you do not remove the cabinet, check all the screws. If they are loose allowing leaks, air will be drawn in gaps instead of through the coils as designed.

Just as the proper amount of air flow is important through the outdoor coils, it is also important through the indoor coils. With the circuit breaker still switched off, remove the side cover on the indoor unit to expose the evaporator coils and the blower. When you reinstall the cover, make sure to tighten the screws.

Quite a bit of dirt can accumulate on the indoor coils blocking air flow and insulating them from the air. This is because the coils get damp when the air conditioner is running and dirt sticks to it. Wipe the coils and then use the brush attachment on your vacuum cleaner to clean them and the blower as well as possible.

Even though everyone has heard to change the blower filter regularly, most people don't do it. At the beginning of the cooling season, change the filter whether you think it is dirty or not. A dirty filter increases air flow resistance which reduces efficiency. Check the joints in the ducts for any air leaks. Seal them with aluminum tape or black Gorilla duct tape.

freshen what Woodman called "the Starbucks colors" — sage, Tuscan gold and roasted red pepper.

It goes with gray and even black, a look that's becoming popular in fashion, Haught noted.

That kind of versatility is true of all blues, not just dark blue, Haught said. Because blue is common in nature, it tends to act as a neutral — "bluetral," she jokingly coined it.

"I mean, the sky goes with everything," she said.

Blue even works well with itself, Haught noted — that is, almost all shades of blue look good with one another. It's a quality that doesn't hold true for every color, she said, notably red and its tinted form, pink.

Blue always ranks high when people are asked their favorite colors, Woodman said, yet the color waxes and wanes in popularity in the home. He said that's because people tend to use grayed-down hues instead of crisp, clean versions of blue. "All of a sudden it becomes a little depressing," he said.

While dark blue is a current decorating darling, other blues are popular, too, Cregan said. Bright Moroccan blue is part of the current trend toward exotic decor. Turquoise is hot, especially when it's paired with orange or darker blues.

Cregan's book is covered in a slightly iridescent blue fabric reminiscent of Caribbean waters. It's a happy color, one that Cregan said works well with silver. "It feels very modern," she said.

She's seeing other contemporary twists on what is often considered a traditional color. She pointed out a bedroom featured in her book, in which designer Steven Gambrel set watery, light-blue shades of blue against dark wood furniture with simple, somewhat masculine forms.

Other designers are choosing to use blue with lacquer finishes, either on walls or on the insides of bookshelves to bring reflectiveness to what would otherwise be a dark space, she said.

Cregan thinks blue will continue to find its way into homes.

"People are much braver about putting their own personality out there," she said. They're much more likely than in the past to decorate their homes with what they like rather than what's in style.

And what many of them like is blue.

Someday we'll say, 'suzani? That's sooooo 2011'

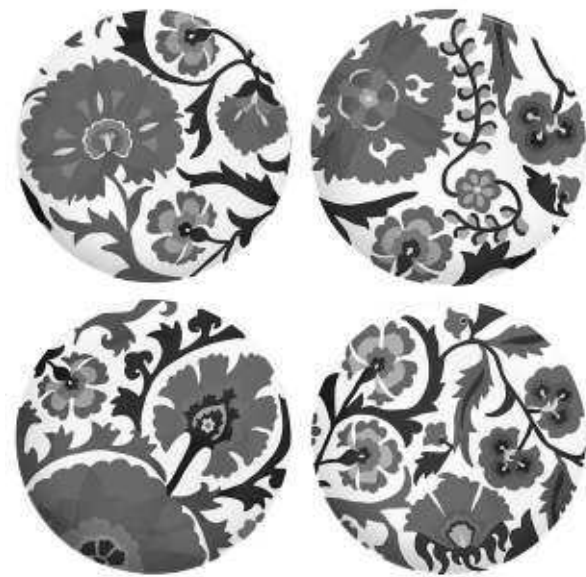

By Jura Koncius
The Washington Post

Post staff writer Jura Koncius took questions in an online chat. Below is an edited excerpt.

Q You can't open a shelter magazine these days without at least three features with suzani prints on everything from sofas to pillows to bedspreads. Are suzanis the new, hipper toile or chintz or a passing fad?

A Suzanis became the ethnic Boho look-of-the-moment a few years ago, and they're still showing up all over the place. They have fallen from favor in recent years because they are being knocked off by mail-order catalogs. In the summer, we featured some suzani melamine plates from Wisteria that I really like, and although the style may be a fad, it has been around for hundreds of years. Meanwhile, those ethnic Indian bedspreads some of us had in college are turning up again!

Q My house desperately needs interior painting. I happen to prefer white walls throughout the house, but I'll likely be trying to sell it in a few years.

Suzani plates by Wisteria.

Would an all-white paint job be a detriment?

A You don't have to apologize for loving white, and any house with white walls is totally appropriate. The important thing is that they are fresh and clean and not nicked up. Meanwhile, you might go for something creamy white on the walls and crisp white trim.

Reader: Using cream instead of bright white on white can be the difference between a boring look and a polished look.

Reader: As a prospective buyer, I enjoy seeing that someone has cared enough to paint walls interesting colors. It's the places that look like they were painted neutral just for resale that scare me; it usually means there's a problem somewhere.

Q We recently converted our front windows into one larger bay window. We previously had three sets of honeycomb blinds, and now we're wondering how to cover the window. Should we order one large custom blind? Should we buy curtains? If we go with curtains, should they hang to the bottom of the window, or to the floor?

A I have bay windows in my living room and dining room. They each have three panels. I got honeycomb shades that disappear if you pull them up to the top; when they're down, they keep the sun from blasting in and fading our furniture. I used to have a swag at the top in the 1980s, but now I don't have any other window coverings on them. If you get curtains, I'd hang them to the floor.

Q I love my dining room table but the matching chairs are too bulky for the room. I'd like to replace them with sleek leather chairs in an eye-popping color like kiwi. Can I make them all "side" chairs rather than having two "captain's chairs" with arms?

A Go for the side chairs! You do not have to have chairs with arms in your dining room, let alone captain's chairs.

But you don't have to wait for the plant sale to ask questions on pruning and planting. Although there is no official advice hot line, Kiesig often takes phone calls from home gardeners asking for planting tips.

The interaction with the community offers up great learning opportunities for Kiesig and the class. People often ask questions to which the students don't know the answers, leaving them to consult advisers. Sometimes, Kiesig and his colleagues don't know either, so they look it up and try to get back to the callers within a couple of days.

"People are counting on us for good and accurate information," Kiesig said. He encourages his students and community members to get information from more than one source, even if that first source is Kiesig.

"Don't just rely on what the Tree Man teaches you, either," he said. Over the course of researching answers and presenting projects, students often teach Kiesig what's new in the horticulture world.

The horticulture department is also getting involved with on-campus projects like a new herb garden, spearheaded by professors Jette Morache and Brenda Larsen. Morache envisions the garden as part of a larger project — turning CSI into an edible campus, where students can pick fruit from trees on the way to class or harvest herbs from the garden.

"My vision is that people would be able to walk by and pick a few sprigs for seasoning their supper that evening in a way that's sustainable without over-harvesting the garden," she said. The herb garden is a joint project between the horticulture program and the college's sustainability council, although Kiesig cautioned his horticulture students against taking over the work and told them instead to teach others how to care for the plants and soil.

"My feeling is they don't learn anything, (then) they have no ownership," he said. Kiesig's students planned to help prepare the beds and provide worm castings and compost to help the sustainability council's vision succeed.

As of Thursday, there were no herb plants in the ground, but Morache had big visions for what the new plot near the center of campus could become.

"I see the garden as being both tangible and symbolic of using our gardening beds, our landscaping beds, to actually produce food for people and get people thinking about it," she said.

Horticulture classes are open to everyone, Kiesig said, even students who aren't seeking degrees. Students currently enrolled include young adults such as Garrett "Gip" Peterson, people who have already made careers out of plants, such as Chandra Carr, and certified master gardeners such as Barbara Biggerstaff.

Their goals? Peterson wants to find work in a greenhouse, and Biggerstaff is "just hungry to learn about stuff," she said.

Other students saw entrepreneurial opportunities in horticulture. Carr, who owns Blush Floral, has worked as a florist for nine years and now wants to grow her own flowers and provide sustainable blooms for brides. Zachariah Resz wants to move to Oregon or Washington — "places where it's legal to grow certain types of plants," he said, as the conversation turned to medical marijuana. "That's where the money is."

No matter their goals, "everybody's welcome," Kiesig said. As long as they're prepared to get dirt under their fingernails.

Don'ts

Don't buy premium potting soil for all your garden needs. "If you're buying premium potting soil and putting it around your mailbox, you're just wasting your money," Poore says. The Home Depot how-to expert notes that potting soil, planting soil and soil amendments, such as vermiculite or compost, are designed for distinct purposes, though homeowners often view them as interchangeable — a costly mistake when it comes to name-brand products.

Don't feel like you have to plant everything now. "Know what your budget is and don't try to do it all at once," Palys says. "Stage it — in one planting bed, put in some of the big items, like larger trees and shrubs. The next year, put in the next level down; the next year, put in the seasonal color items, the perennials."

Don't shy away from getting advice. You can get guidance without going broke. "If you don't want to hire someone to install or maintain the work, you can still invest in a landscape designer, who will look at the space and suggest plants that belong in certain places," Palys says. "Then if they want to buy and plant themselves, at least they've been given some direction."

April showers may bring May flowers, but beekeepers across Idaho would like to see more warm, sunny days.

Cold weather that lingered into April has taken a toll on many hives. Average daily temperatures ranged from near normal on a few days to as much as 11 degrees below normal for an entire week.

“The bees just haven’t had an opportunity to recover,” said Jonathan Millet, a beekeeper from Marsing and president of the Idaho Honey Industry Association.

About half of honey bee’s work these days is pollinating crops. Many commercial beekeepers take their hives to California to pollinate the almond trees, bringing them back to Idaho to recover before going to Washington to pollinate apple trees.

Bees struggled to survive while in California and then returned to find winter still hanging on in Idaho. “Bees just keep dying, bees keep disappearing,” Millet said.

With so few good days in April, the early spring buildup in pollen and nectar production has been delayed.

Corn prices fell 3 percent Monday on expectations that spring planting will pick up this week in parts of the western Corn Belt because of drier weather.

There are reports that farmers in western Iowa and Nebraska are getting tractors into their fields after a wet, cool spring delayed planting. That is easing concerns about already tight supplies shrinking even more, analysts said.

Some traders sold corn contracts to buy wheat. Dry conditions have plagued the winter crop, prompting speculation that at least some of the acreage has been damaged, Global Commodity Analytics & Consulting LLC President Mike Zuzolo said.

In agriculture contracts for July delivery, corn fell 22 cents to settle at $7.345 a bushel, wheat lost 9.5 cents to settle at $7.9175 a bushel and soybeans slipped 1 cent to settle at $13.93 a bushel.

With the exception of gold and oil, commodities were little affected by concerns about possible retaliatory attacks from extremists after U.S. forces killed Osama bin Laden Sunday in Pakistan.

Grass, hay yields take off when weeds and pests are controlled

By Sue Roesler
Lee Agri-Media

In most cases, producers can double their grass or forage yields by managing their weeds, according to Craig Alford, DuPont pasture and range portfolio manager based in Denver, Colo.

“We’ve seen significant increases in yields,” said Alford, who is a specialist in weed management. “When you get your weeds under control, the grass just takes off.”

Alford said there have been numerous studies from the University of Wyoming, as well as from other universities in the Midwest, demonstrating that grass production increases when weeds are managed.

With the recent cattle prices, some producers are considering adding to their herds to take advantage of the profit opportunities, he said.

Since corn prices are still high, increasing grass productivity is the least expensive way to feed those extra cattle, he added. By producing a better quality grass where weeds are managed, cattle stocking rates can be increased and there is better productivity with grasses that provide more nutrition.

In addition, increasing grass yields means producers will have more hay to cut to feed cattle next winter.

But producers should take the time to “figure out” what is out there in their pastures before turning out herds this spring, Alford said.

“The first thing to do is to understand what you have to work with,” he said.

While cattle will eat weeds if they are hungry enough, most weeds do not provide the best nutrition.

“Quality is very important, and good grass is the preferred source of forage for cattle,” he added.

As soon as the snow clears, producers should walk through their pastures and rangelands to find out what weeds and undesirable plants are out there. Weeds can be flagged and photographed so producers will be able to

Honey

Bees became active on the few warm days and then couldn't find enough food sources to sustain the colony when cold weather returned.
Good spring moisture should mean good growing conditions for plants and plenty of nectar for bees later in the season, but the long-term forecast continues to call for a cool, wet May.
Millet says it's too early to tell how this year's honey production will turn out, but losses this spring will reduce potential poundage.

Yields

This is where their local Extension agent or co-op specialist can help out. They can not only help with identification of weeds and other undesirable plants, but can also advise producers on weed control measures.
Additionally, soil testing can help in pastures to determine what nutrients might be needed.
Grazing management is also important to better cattle productivity.
“Get cattle to graze all ing to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Idaho honey production totaled 2.65 million pounds in 2010, down 44 percent from the previous year. Adverse weather certainly cut into production but beekeepers say disease also plays a role.

Kirk Tubbs, who has about 25 hives from Buhl to Malta, says cold alone rarely kills bees. But bees are already weakened from a virus carried by parasitic mites or a fungus are more likely to freeze or starve to death.
Although no one has firm numbers available yet, Tubbs thinks winter losses may be higher than usual based on conversations he has had with hobby beekeepers.

Idaho lost about 5,000 colonies between 2009 and 2010 to 98,000 colonies. Only beekeepers that have five or more colonies are included in the USDA numbers. Colonies are not included if honey is not produced.
According to the USDA, Idaho bees averaged 27 pounds per hive in 2010, down 19 pounds from the previous year. Nationally, honey production averaged 65.5 lbs., up 12 percent from the 58.6 lbs. in 2009.

U.S. honey prices increased to a record $1.60.3 cents per lb., up 9 percent from 2009. Idaho producers received $1.50 per lb. on average.
While honey is still a valuable crop for beekeepers, pollination of crops has become as important or even more so. That's why Millet is more concerned by the drop in bee numbers rather than the drop in honey production.
“Some years bees make honey and some years they don't,” he said. “It's getting harder and harder to rely on honey production.”

to establish.
Alford said producers need to get the whole grazing system in balance so it becomes a long-term sustainable system.
“By controlling weeds, pests and brush, you can increase the amount of grass and forage you have,” Alford said. “That means more profit for cattle and hay producers.”

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Every man who is high up loves to think that he has done it all himself, and the wife smiles and lets it go at that."

— J.M. Barrie

In a pairs game, after North dealt and passed and East opened one club, South decided to try to exploit the vulnerability to give West the biggest possible problem by making a four-diamond overcall. Since East-West could easily make four clubs, South had already gotten ahead of the game when she bought the contract in four diamonds. West started with a top club and guessed to shift to the diamond four. Can you see a way to guarantee your contract?

Safety plays are usually all about one suit in isolation, but this is a combination of two suits. All you need do is draw trumps and run the heart nine. As the cards lie, you will make an overtrick, but suppose East has the jack and takes the trick. That player cannot attack spades, so you can safely win the return and play the heart king. Whatever happens next, you will be able to discard a spade from your hand on a heart.

West's defense had not been very good so far — on a spade switch at trick two, you would have had to guess hearts for your contract — but can you see a way that West might have been able to salvage something from the wreckage?

When you play the heart nine, West must hop up with the ace and switch to a spade. Now, to make three heart tricks and an overtrick, South has to finesse in hearts and risk going down if East holds jack-third in that suit.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman who is in love with my former high school coach. I don't know if I should tell him. I first realized I loved him about a year and a half after I met him. We had an extremely close relationship, but it was not inappropriate. He is 13 years older than I am.

After two years of getting to know him and forming a strong friendship, he moved across the country for work. Since then, I have entered college and we see each other only on holidays and in the summer. Every time I see him, we go back to our normal, wonderful relationship as though nothing has changed.

I was in denial about my feelings for him. I told myself it was puppy love and couldn't work out because of the age difference and the distance. But after four years of pining for him, and several failed romances with others, I realize I deeply love him. We have a unique connection, but he has a reputation as a "player," so I can't be sure he feels the same. I don't want to ruin what we have, but I want more. Should I finally reveal my feelings?

— HURTING BADLY
IN NEW ENGLAND

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR HURTING BADLY: You and your former coach are both adults. I see no reason why you shouldn't tell him how you feel. However, if he responds affirmatively, please be careful about how you proceed with this relationship. As you said — he has a reputation as a player, and men with a craving for variety can be very unreliable.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my mid-50s, divorced for many years, and have two grown children. I began seeing a delightful gentleman about three years ago. (I'll call him Jack.) He was dating several women at the time, and after a few months, I made it clear that we would have to have an exclusive relationship or I could not go on seeing him. Jack reluctantly agreed and kept his promise.

Four months ago, I demanded a commitment from him. I knew I loved him and wanted to spend the rest of my life with him. He told me he loved me, but marriage is out of the question — and if that is the only way I'd stay with him, we have to say goodbye.

I think I have made a terrible mistake, Abby. What are your thoughts on this?

— DEPRESSED
IN DES MOINES

DEAR DEPRESSED: Since marriage is important to you, you were right to lay it on the line to him. His unwillingness, regardless of how nicely put, to take your relationship to another level means he wasn't as committed to you as you were to him. And once your self-esteem heals, you will realize that the person who made the terrible mistake was Jack.

DEAR ABBY: May I offer a suggestion concerning elderly people? I know this from experience.

When writing to an older adult, every so often include some labels bearing your name and address. This makes it easier for them to respond and for the post office to decipher your address.

I have an elderly friend who has severe arthritis. When we correspond, it takes me at least 20 minutes to make out what she has written. The labels have helped us both.

— READER,
INDEPENDENCE, MO.

DEAR READER: I'm pleased to pass the word along. And because readers have complained that they get these labels along with solicitations from charities and don't know what to do with them, this would be a good way to put them to use. Thank you for the suggestion.

IF MAY 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Ambition might be your middle name between now and the beginning of August. Your business sense will grow greatly if you learn your lessons well, but don't change jobs or push your luck for the next several months. If you are married or in a permanent relationship, don't be distracted by a passing fancy in August, but use your time wisely and rekindle harmony with a pleasant vacation or weekend getaway. In December and January, you could fall for someone who is not willing to commit, which is fine if you wish to remain single and play it footloose and fancy free. Your most important wishes can come true next spring, when you may be given an opportunity to reap the rich rewards you deserve.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make a breakthrough. A fresh discovery or insight can alter your outlook and empower you to make personal improvements. You are more popular than usual, but shouldn't give your heart away.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you are imbued with inspiration, do not forget to focus on facts. Get key questions answered before you pursue a new romance or accept a new guru. You can win approval for a pet project.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can be blind, even with open eyes. What you hear and see might prove to be no more than a fantasy. This is not a good time to sign a contract or agreement, as you have a tendency to miss the fine print.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone's got your back. You have more support than you think, especially when group dynamics are involved. There could be time to rekindle an old romance or light a fire under an existing one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dazzle someone by being inspiring rather than demanding. Raise your self-image and enhance your self-esteem. This is a good time for in-person or online social networking; give and receive positive feedback.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ask someone for an opinion or option. Mingle with people from different walks of life and broaden your perspective. If you are searching for a unique, one-of-a-kind gift, you might find it today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A little encouragement is all that is needed. Your social maneuverings might put you next to someone who thinks you have star power. Unlock the door and invite others into share your private sanctum.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relationships could be sidetracked by communication issues. Things might not go just as you planned. Wait out a brief period of time when unrealistic expectations on both sides create an impasse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): When life hands you lemons, make lemonade. Squeeze out all the creative juices you can. A new interest or fascinating hobby might have you picking up the books to learn new skills.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Ride your passions to the finish line. There may be loose ends to snip before the day is done, but you are the person with the skills to do it. When work is done, prepare to indulge in sensual pleasures.

Hopes high as 4A district baseball tourney begins

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Anyone can win it. That's the sentiment coming from coaches and players alike as the Class 4A District IV baseball tournament begins today. "Truly, I do believe anyone in this conference can beat anyone else on a given day," said Jerome coach Tom Bobrowski. "I think it could be the best 4A conference in the state." The quantity of quality makes all six teams in the field believe they can earn one of the district's two seeds to the 4A state tournament May 19-21 in Boise. "Every team in the league's got a shot as far as I'm concerned," said Wood River coach Matt Nelson, whose sixth-seeded Wolverines visit No. 3 seed Burley today. After accruing a 13-9 record, including 10-5 in Great Basin Conference play, Burley is hoping for a magical playoff run.

"Anything can happen in the tournament," said Burley senior Jake Mills. "We've got a good chance if we play to our potential." Even those at the top, No. 1 seed Twin Falls and second-seeded Minico, recognize the parity. "I think everyone is pretty evenly matched," said Minico coach Ben Frank, whose team shared third place with the Bruins at last season's 4A state tournament. The Bruins are 18-3 on the season, went 12-2 in league play and have won four straight district titles dating back to their days in Class 5A. While they may be the favorite, they're taking nothing for granted. "This time of year, it's like we tell our guys, it doesn't matter what we've done up to this point. We're definitely not going into this district tournament overlooking anybody," said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir.

Slow and steady doesn't win this 5K

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Editor's note: This is part of four-month series as Times-News writer Ryan Howe starts from scratch and trains for the Spud-man Triathlon, July 30 in Burley. Follow his progress at www.magicvalley.com/blogs and Facebook: Times-News Ryan Howe.

A few weeks ago, I signed up for my first 5K. Being metrically challenged, the first thing I did was Google how far is five kilometers: 3.1 miles.

The second thing I did was Google a 5K training plan to help me build up to the race. Every one I found was an eight-week program.

I had eight days. Regardless, I paid the $10 entry fee and got my T-shirt, which had "Run, Walk, Crawl" printed on the front. I figured I could at least do the latter.

The biggest obstacle was the race started at 8 a.m. Since the work of a sportswriter goes late into the night, most of us don't know what 8 a.m. looks like.

Still, I set my alarm, got dressed, warmed up, stretched, then drove to the race, which was being held as a fundraiser at my nephew's school.

About 1,500 people in all shapes and sizes lined up like a herd of sheep at the starting line. I took my position toward the back of the pack, alongside the women pushing strollers. I figured I could at least beat them, no problem.

The starting gun went off, and ... nothing happened. The crowd was crammed in so tight we had to walk several minutes until there was enough space to run. But once I could pick up the pace, I felt a surge of energy that I had never felt before. Running with a large group of people — and passing some of them — gave me an exhilaration that I haven't felt on my training runs.

A few hundred yards into the race, a 12-year-old wearing baggy jeans sprinted past me. I shrugged it off. I would just keep my slow, steady pace. After all, my only goal was to finish the 5K without stopping or walking.

BSU responds to NCAA violations

Times-News

Boise State University responded Monday to the NCAA regarding rule violations in the sports of men's tennis, football and men's and women's track and field, as well as a major violation concerning women's tennis.

The combination of several secondary violations and the major one led the NCAA to allege a lack of institutional control within Boise State athletics. An NCAA inquiry contained 22 allegations from 2005-10 and asked for additional information from the university pertaining to each.

"I am disappointed that we face these allegations. It is unacceptable, and the athletic department staff understand and agree with my position," said Boise State President Bob Kustra in a school release.

The university formally responded on April 25 and the NCAA Committee on Infractions will review the response on June 10. A final NCAA report is expected to take several more months.

"I am confident we have responded thoroughly to the NCAA. Our internal review was comprehensive and our response was very detailed. We will continue to provide our full cooperation," said Kustra. "We are deeply committed to following all NCAA rules and to ensuring that our athletic department works diligently so that our procedures reflect the highest standard," Kustra said.

Boise State began an internal investigation in March 2009 at the request of the NCAA. Through May 2010, Boise State responded to the inquiry and self-reported some undiscovered secondary infractions.

However, a new, serious violation in women's tennis occurred in October 2010. Boise State removed the coaches involved in November. As a result of that violation, the NCAA decided that the case would be sent to the Committee on Infractions rather than the agreed upon summary disposition for less severe cases.

The majority of allegations involved impermissible housing, transportation or meals, including where an incoming student-athlete was provided a place to sleep (often on a couch or floor), a car ride or free meals.

Boise State already has implemented several changes to avoid future violations, including hiring additional compliance staff.

"Complying with NCAA rules is fundamental to who we are and how we do things at Boise State," said BSU athletic director Gene Bleymaier. "We have addressed the issues and are working with Dialled In, trained by two-time Kentucky Derby winner Nick Zito, is one of the favorites for Saturday's 137th Kentucky Derby.

Jockey Nick Zito hopes to be Dialled In as Derby winner

By Beth Harris
Associated Press writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Nick Zito knows the good part of the Kentucky Derby as a two-time winner. He also knows the heartbreak of America's greatest race.

Zito nearly joined fellow Hall of Fame trainer Bob Baffert as a three-time champ last year, when Ice Box overcame traffic trouble twice only to finish second, beaten 2 1/2 lengths by Super Saver.

Now, after a winter of ups and downs on the Derby trail, Zito is back at Churchill Downs with Dialled In, the likely favorite for

Johnson, Hawks beat Bulls

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Johnson scored 34 points and the Atlanta Hawks beat Derrick Rose and the top-seeded Chicago Bulls 103-95 on Monday night in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference semifinals.

As if the loss itself wasn't bad enough, the Bulls got a major scare when Rose came up limping at the end of the game. Their MVP candidate stepped on Jamal Crawford's foot as he dribbled out the final seconds and was helped off by teammates and a trainer.

The Hawks went on a 15-2 run that bridged the third and fourth quarters to turn a 69-65 deficit into an 80-71 lead with 10:27 remaining.

Johnson hit three 3-pointers and scored 11 points during that stretch, and the Hawks hung on.

Game 2 is Wednesday night at the United Center.

Johnson was brilliant, hitting 12 of 18 shots and all five 3-point attempts. Crawford scored 22 points and Jeff Teague added 10 while starting at the point for the injured Kirk Hinrich. The Hawks shot 51.3 percent against one of the league's stingiest defenses.

As alarming as that was, though, the sight of Rose limping off sent a real shiver through Chicago. The Bulls simply can't afford to lose him if they're going to keep this run going, even though it wasn't his best night.

He scored 24 points after a slow start but was just 11 of 27 from the field.

Luol Deng scored 21 points for Chicago while Carlos Boozer added 14 points and eight rebounds despite a turf toe injury on his right foot. But it was a rough night overall for the Bulls.

Pushed by Indiana in a tough five-game opening series, they fought through a brutal first quarter to pull within one point at halftime and led by as many as six in the third quarter before this one slipped away.

Johnson started the go-ahead run with two free throws with just under a minute left in the third, and Zaza Pachulia hit two more with less than a second left in the quarter to put the Hawks ahead for good, 72-71.

Johnson then hit a 3 off a turnover by Deng to start the fourth. Teague added a floater and Crawford nailed a 3 to make it 80-71.

Pedroia, Red Sox thwart Angels

BOSTON — Dustin Pedroia fouled off nine pitches in a 13-pitch at-bat against Jered Weaver before lining a go-ahead, two-run single that helped the Boston Red Sox beat the Los Angeles Angels 9-5 on Monday night.

The loss was Weaver's first of the season. Weaver (6-1), who was scratched Sunday due to a stomach virus, gave up three runs, six hits, struck out six and walked one over six innings.

Weaver failed to become the first pitcher since 1891 to go 7-0 by May 2 or sooner. Sadie McMahon of the Baltimore Orioles from the American Association was the last to open 7-0 by the second day of May.

Adrian Gonzalez had a three-run double and Clay Buchholz (2-3) pitched 6 2-3 solid innings for the win.

YANKEES 5, TIGERS 3

DETROIT — Nick Swisher hit a tiebreaking single in the ninth off closer Jose Valverde and New York handed Detroit its seventh straight defeat.

The Tigers rallied from a 3-0 deficit, tying it in the seventh on Alex Avila's second solo home run of the night, but the Yankees broke through in their last at-bat against Valverde (2-1). With runners on first and second and one out, Swisher singled up the middle and Mark Teixeira scored from second with a slide. Alex Rodriguez added another run when he scored from third on a passed ball by Avila.

red twice and Mark Buehrle pitched 6 2-3 scoreless innings to help Chicago snap a five-game slide.

Konerko hit a two-run home run and a solo shot for the White Sox, who won only their fourth in 19 games to avoid a four-game sweep.

ATHLETICS 5, RANGERS 4, 10 INNINGS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Hideki Matsui hit the first pitch of the 10th inning from Darren Oliver into the right-field seats to lift the Athletics.

Grant Balfour (2-1) walked three batters in the top of the 10th to load the bases for pinch-hitter Yorvit Torrealba, who struck out swinging on the right-hander's 30th pitch.

NATIONAL LEAGUE NATIONALS 2, GIANTS 0

WASHINGTON — Tom Gorzelanny allowed only three hits in eight sharp innings against a struggling San Francisco lineup, and Michael Morse and Jerry Hairston Jr. drove in runs for Washington, helping the Nationals beat the Giants 2-0 Monday on Military Appreciation Night.

Gorzelanny (1-2) hadn't lasted eight innings in a game since Aug. 12, 2007, when he threw a shutout for the Pittsburgh Pirates against the Giants.

MARLINS 6, CARDINALS 5

ST. LOUIS — Mike Stanton hit a tying home run in the fifth inning and tripled and scored the go-ahead run in the eighth to lift Florida.

Gaby Sanchez ended Kyle Lohse's 22-inning scoreless inning streak with his first grand slam, also Florida's major league-leading third of the year. Edward Mujica (3-1) allowed a walk in two scoreless innings and Leo Nunez finished for his 10th save in 10 tries after the Cardinals put two men on in the ninth.

BRAVES 6, BREWERS 2

ATLANTA — Alex Gonzalez hit a three-run double to give Atlanta the lead and the Braves finally solved Yovani Gallardo in beating Milwaukee. David Ross homered in the third inning before the Braves chased Gallardo (2-2) in the sixth.

Kimberly softball edges Buhl in DH

Times-News

Nellie Makings tossed a one-hitter and Averie Schroeder hit a solo home run in the top of the sixth inning as the Kimberly softball team edged Buhl 2-0 Monday in the first game of a doubleheader.

"It was a pitchers' battle in the first game and Nellie was on," said Buhl coach Derrik Brinkman. "Our girls competed and played hard."

Katherine Hunter pitched well for Buhl, but the Indians couldn't produce any runs in the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference matchup.

Kimberly, which won the nonconference nightcap 8-6, will be the top seed in the Class 3A District IV Tournament. Buhl and Filer open the tournament Wednesday afternoon in Filer.

On senior day, Buhl (12-8) went to the bench liberally in Game 2. The Indians got a three-run homer from Hunter in the first inning, but Kimberly got a two-run double by Whitney Carlton in the fourth inning and a solo blast from Jensen Upton in the sixth.

Krejci's OT goal lifts Bruins over Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — David Krejci scored 14:00 into overtime, Tim Thomas was phenomenal in net, and the Boston Bruins beat Philadelphia 3-2 on Monday night to take a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Thomas stopped 46 straight shots after the Flyers took a quick 2-0 lead. The series now shifts to Boston for the next two games on Wednesday and Friday.

Krejci fired a one-timer from one knee that ricocheted off the back of the net and back onto the ice. Play continued until officials could review the call. But the goal was clearly good.

"At first I thought it was in. Then they kept playing," Krejci said.

James van Riemsdyk had a breakout game for the Flyers. He scored two goals and was all over the ice trying to help the Flyers win at least one at home.

Instead, they have to rally from another deficit.

Chris Kelly and Brad Marchand also scored for the Bruins, who have taken a seemingly commanding lead on the Flyers for the second straight year. Boston led 3-0 in the East semis a year ago before the Flyers won four straight to advance — including a rally from a 3-0 hole in Game 7.

Thomas was on the bench for that collapse.

He is determined not to let that happen on his watch. Thomas, who finished with 52 saves Monday, was tested under pressure all game and shook off the slow start to stop everything fired his way.

"By the third period, I was really starting to get into a rhythm which was a good thing because they were really getting off shots," Thomas said.

That sets the table nicely for the district tourney. Fifth-seeded Canyon Ridge (11-11, 4-11 GBC) travels to Jerome (11-10, 6-8) today, with the winner advancing to face Twin Falls on Thursday. Today's Burley-Wood River winner gets Minico (16-6, 12-3) on Thursday.

For the Tigers, the focus is on scoring some runs.

"Our problem all year has been our offense," said Bobrowski. "To be able to swing it and put some pressure on the opposing team. We can hang around with teams, but if we don't threaten to score, we're not allowing the other team to take some chances. It's still a question mark, but we're definitely capable. I've seen it at times this year."

The Riverhawks went 0-3 versus Jerome during the regular season but are hitting the postseason on a bit of a surge.

"I think we're winning more and I think we can play better even," said CRHS coach Travis Tarchione. "I feel pretty good."

With inclement weather, injuries and two player suspensions due to violations of team policies, "it's been kind of a rough go" for Wood River, according to Nelson.

"Coming into the tournament, we're looking to just get better," he said.

While Wood River went 4-17, including 1-14 in GBC play, don't expect Burley to look past the Wolverines, especially after the Bobcats went two-and-out at last season's district tournament.

"Last year we were looking past our first game, looking to the second round," said Mills. "This year our focus is Tuesday. We're going in, making sure we win that one."

As for the teams at the top, both Minico and Twin Falls are confident they can return to the state tournament.

"From where we're at, I feel pretty comfortable, I feel like we're playing well," said Frank. "I feel like we're where we need to be defensively and offensively."

For the Bruins, it's all about attitude.

"This team's got a good chemistry. They're really unselfish. We don't have a lot of me-guys," said

Stadelmeir. "They've stuck together. They've bought into what we're trying to do. They know we're not a big team that's going to rely each day on that three-run homer, but we're a team that if we pitch well and play good defense, we'll execute and play the short game and know we have a chance to be successful."

Will it be another Twin Falls-Minico matchup in the May 12 championship?

"I think those are the two teams to beat," said Tarchione. "But it's baseball. You get a good pitching effort on a given day and you can beat anybody."

Times-News writer Ryan Howe and Stephen Meyers contributed to this report.

up to see this printed on the back of a man's shirt: "You just can't beat the person who won't give up. — Babe Ruth"

My first thought: "What the heck does The Babe know? He was fat. The farthest he ever ran was 360 feet after a home run, and that was more of a trot."

But I took the quote to heart, dug deeper and kept going. As I finally approached the finish line, coming up behind me I heard the unmistakable sound denim makes when flailed together. Out of the corner of my eye I saw him sprinting, but it was too late for me to do anything.

Baggy jeans boy crossed the finish line a split second ahead of me.

"My goal was to just to beat you," he said to me afterward.

Why would a boy pick a random stranger to chase down? It's all about motivation, as I found out from my coach, Alice Schenk.

"I'm a happily married woman of 29 years, but my goal at these races is to chase men and catch them," she said.

If your goal is to chase down an overweight sports writer, this Saturday is your chance as I have signed up for The Dam 10K at Lake Walcott. Registration begins at 9 a.m.

If you beat me (as you should), I applaud you. But please don't do it wearing jeans.
