After 48 days, Rita Chretien was rescued from a desolate area of Elko County, Nev. The search has resumed for her husband, who went seeking help not long after the couple went missing.

'She obviously had the mindset of survival'

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Rita Chretien's doctor expected a person who survived 48 days on a meager diet of snacks and snow in nowhere, Nevada, to be in much worse shape.

She should have been more malnourished than she was, even emaciated with possible long-term health problems, Dr. James Westberry, Chretien's doctor at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, said Sunday. Instead, she was in relatively good condition when she came to the Twin Falls hospital, and her recovery since has likewise surprised her doctor. She may even be fit enough to leave the hospital in a few days, he said.

"She obviously had the mindset of survival," Westberry said.

But for her son, Raymond, it was more than a fierce will to survive. It was his mother's faith that helped carry her though.

"Never give up, never lose your faith," he said, naming the lesson to take from his mother's story. "Miracles happen and never underestimate that."

On March 19, Chretien, 56, and her husband, 59-year-old Albert, were traveling to a trade expo in Las Vegas, taking the scenic route through rural Nevada instead of its highways and interstates.

Speaking for his mother, who declined to speak publicly during a Sunday press conference at the Twin Falls hospital, Raymond Chretien said he thinks the couple took a wrong turn. The map they were using made an old Forest Service Road near the Bruneau River look more passable than it was, he said.

Still missing: The search has resumed for Albert Chretien, but poor weather has been impeding progress.

Weather stalls search for Albert Chretien

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Weather stalled the progress of search teams that continued to scour canyons and mountainsides Sunday for the missing husband of a rescued Canadian woman who survived for seven weeks on just snacks and water after the couple became stranded in remote northeastern Nevada.

That remoteness and rugged terrain have made it difficult for crews looking for 59-year-old Albert Chretien. Elko County Sheriff's Sgt. Kevin McKinney said roads in the area where the couple's stuck van was found on Friday are a "spider web" that can be confusing to navigate, and crews were not sure which direction Albert Chretien headed after leaving his wife.

McKinney also said rain, snow and high winds forced searchers to end their efforts early Sunday, but that deputies will return Monday if weather allows. Poor visibility meant aircraft couldn't be used in the

Times-News takes record 26 Idaho Press Club awards

Times-News

The Idaho Press Club recognized Times-News journalists with a company-record 26 awards, including seven first-place finishes, in its annual journalism contest.

The awards, covering all aspects of daily and weekly print journalism, Web-based media and broadcast news in 2010, were given out at the club's annual banquet Saturday in Boise.

The Spokesman-Review in Spokane, Wash., was named the state's top daily newspaper for its coverage of Idaho issues, followed by the Idaho Statesman in Boise and Idaho State Journal in Pocatello.

The Times-News staff took first place in the special section category for "One Summer Day," a series of stories and photos that captured moments from across the Magic Valley on Aug. 10, 2010.

Amy Huddleston, who joined the Times-News in June 2010, was named the state's top first-year print journalist, garnering Rookie of the Year honors for a selection of stories.

Features writer Melissa Davlin took home top honors in health and medical reporting for her story on Burley teen Sara Ward's battle with Lyme disease, while fellow features writer Ariel Hansen finished first in my experience and knowledge I've gained to help the community and district."

A board member's learning curve is steep, Ward said, and her experience of watching the evolution of education over the past few years will be helpful as changes from the Legislature are put in place. She added that having experience with school budgets is necessary for board members.

"I think it's critical now, almost more than any other time in history, to have an affinity for numbers," she said, adding that her educational background and owning a small business has served her well during her board tenure.

Ward said the continuity of the current board has led to accomplishments like building Canyon Ridge High School and other facilities improvements throughout the district. Her future goals are to see lost instructional days restored to the school year calendar, restore past cuts to teaching salaries, and maintain current class sizes so the district can continue to provide competitive education for students.

Siegel said the challenge the district will face in coming years will be to determine new ways to provide the best education for students. The 59-year-old is an adjunct professor at the College of Southern Idaho and retired from teaching humanities at Jerome High School and Magic Valley High School. She said her experience of working with diverse populations would bring a fresh perspective to the board. Siegel started teaching later in life and said she has compassion for newer teachers and respect for education.

"We need to ask the students their opinions. Sometimes they aren't involved enough," she said. "The priority is the kids, and they need the best they can get. I feel like I could be a positive force and help with communication."

Siegel said the district will need to find creative ways to deal with a shrinking state education budget. Everything from energy saving lighting and combining events to save money should be assessed, she said. Raising morale within the district is one of Siegel's main goals, and she said she would bring a constructive presence to the board and focus her efforts on what is best for students.

Barron said her 36 years in the classroom as an elementary school teacher and now as an English as a Second Language teacher at CSI will give a new perspective to the school board.

"It's a different aspect of education and, since education is a part of my whole life, I would like to influence and have a part in the decision making," she said.

Since she's partially retired, Barron said she'd have the time to make rounds to schools and build relationships with teachers and staff.

"As a former teacher, I want to make sure the changes affect the children in positive ways," she said of Idaho's education reform. "Twin Falls has always been a high-performing district, and I want to help make sure the changes are implemented in a positive way so children can be competitive as they go out into the world."

Without winter clothes and with minimal food, they became stuck on a muddy dirt road near the Idaho border, miles from civilization.

Three days later, officials said Albert Chretien went looking for help. He took their GPS device and Rita Chretien jotted down the coordinates he intended to walk to find State Route 225. Elko County sheriff's deputies are heading the ongoing search for him.

Raymond, speaking on behalf of the family, said his mother — "not a real outdoorsy type" — survived on a tablespoon of trail mix, a single fish oil pill and a single hard candy a day. A nearby stream and melted snow provided water. She lost more than 20 pounds, but Westberry said the rationing may have kept her healthy enough to survive.

Rita had brought several books with her, read some of them twice, and kept her Bible near, Raymond said. Psalm 86 in particular was encouraging to her, he said. Its first line: "Hear me, LORD, and answer me, for I am poor and needy."

During those 48 days, 45 of which she was alone, Rita's family was back in British Columbia and the Royal Mounted Canadian Police were working with Oregon authorities to search for the couple. The search was eventually called off when tips stopped coming in.

"Rationally, part of you does let go," Raymond's wife, Jennifer said. "But our lord does work miracles."

On Thursday, Rita knew she was at her crossroads: time to go home to her savior or to her family. And she prepared for it, Raymond said.

"A lot of it was mental preparation," Raymond said, adding, "She's not thinking she did this on her own."

The next day, she got her answer from the sound of ATVs. The riders needed to backtrack nine miles to reach cell phone reception and call for help. By late Saturday, Rita's family was with her, reminiscing with "lots of laughter," Raymond said.

"We were praying for a miracle, and boy did we get one," he said. "It was the biggest miracle we could ask for."

Raymond said, based on looks alone, he couldn't tell his mother survived seven weeks in the Nevada mountains at the tail end of winter. His wife said she looks the same, laughs the same and "she's still our mother."

Westberry, Rita's doctor, said she is working toward eating solid foods again quicker than anticipated. She may even be ready to leave the hospital in a matter of days, he said, despite his speculation that her time in the wilderness and on a starvation diet may be a record.

"It's understandable to call it a miracle," he said.

search, and travel was difficult because the roads have been washed out or covered with rock slides.

Rita Chretien, 56, was discovered on Friday in the couple's van, which was mired in mud on a national forest logging road in Elko County, authorities said. She told investigators she last saw her husband on March 22, when he set off for help on foot with a GPS unit just a few days after they got stuck, Elko County Sheriff Jim Pitts said.

"That area is pretty remote," said Tom Montoya,

U.S. Forest Service district ranger for the area. He described it as "miles from anything. It's kind of canyon lands, a lot of gorges out there" that would make it easy to get lost.

Nevada State Highway 225, which Albert Chretien was walking to in his attempt to find help, is more than 10 miles away from the area where hunters found the van on Friday. It forced search crews to consider the possibility Albert Chretien was confused and did not walk in that direction.

The van was found along the border of the national forest and Bureau of Land Management land about 5 miles south of the state line, where Idaho's high desert collides with Nevada's snow-capped Independence Mountains.

Rivers and streams with headwaters mostly in the wilderness area drain off 10,000-foot peaks to the north on their way to the Snake River.

Cool weather, snow boost Idaho water forecast

Sudden melt could raise flooding risk

Times-News

April snows only bolstered an already rosy water outlook for the next few months, but also prompted concern over how the moisture will melt.

That's according to the most-recent water supply forecast issued by the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service, which predicts stream flows and irrigation and recreational supplies throughout the region.

The forecast, released late last week, notes that continued cool temperatures and wet weather have left many mountain snowpacks near or at record levels, including those that feed the Snake River.

Most years, up to one-fourth of those snowpacks melt during April, according to the report. Since that did not happen this year, a larger amount of snow will melt in a shorter period of time — meaning that some rivers and streams, including Salmon Falls Creek, could run twice as high as normal at their peak this spring.

That leads to the next concern: flooding.

According to the report, NRCS hydrologists say slightly warmer

Shoshone Falls is seen in April 2006. Flood-control releases from reservoirs in eastern Idaho this spring have bolstered the Snake River, creating much-heralded flows at Shoshone Falls.

temperatures and dry weather early this month would start a gradual melt, which would be the best situation. “Abundant” spring rains such as those seen last year or record high temperatures would lead to problems.

Even with a controlled melt, river levels should remain above-average through the summer.

Reservoir operators are already preparing for the melting snow. Flood-control releases from reservoirs in eastern Idaho have already bolstered the Snake, creating much-heralded flows at Shoshone Falls in the process. Palisades Reservoir now only holds about 27 percent of its full capacity. Magic Reservoir, fed by flows out of the Wood River Valley, is also making extra space.

Other local highlights:

- Though it benefited from extra precipitation last month, the Wood River Valley actually has just about average snowpack.

Still, stream flows should be higher than usual and more than adequate.

- It is still unlikely that Oakley and Salmon Falls reservoirs will completely fill. But no water shortages are expected in the basins on the south side of the Snake River, and the Salmon Falls Basin's snowpack is the best seen since 1984.
- Snowpacks along the upper Snake River are among the largest in recent decades. The report also compared the levels to the peak seen in 1997, the year that a rapid melt led to the Snake River's highest flows in decades and flooded areas along the river throughout southern Idaho.

In 1997, the report notes, mid-elevation snowpacks had already begun to melt by mid-April; this year, they did not. As measured near Heise, the Snake is expected to flow half-again as high as usual.

- The large river flows and uncertainty over how the snow will melt could create an exciting, yet dangerous season for recreation. River runners are advised to know their limits and remember that stream flows can change suddenly in the spring. Debris carried by the river can also change rapids or create new ones. After flows have peaked, a long, extended season will provide family friendly floating levels.

Arizona lawmakers seek online donations to build border fence

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona lawmakers want more fence along the border with Mexico — whether the federal government thinks it's necessary or not.

They've got a plan that could get a project started using online donations and prison labor. If they get enough money, all they would have to do is get cooperation from landowners and construction could begin as soon as this year.

Gov. Jan Brewer recently signed a bill that sets the state on a course that begins with launching a website to raise money for the work, said state Sen. Steve Smith, the bill's sponsor.

“We're going to build this site as fast as we can, and promote it, and market the heck out of it,” said Smith, a first-term Republican senator from Maricopa.

Arizona — strapped for cash and mired in a budget crisis — is already using public donations to pay for its legal defense of the SB1070 illegal immigration law.

Part of the marketing pitch for donations could include providing certificates declaring that individual contributors “helped build the Arizona wall,” Smith said.

T.F. Council to consider step toward warehouse district design guidelines

Times-News

The Twin Falls City Historic Preservation Commission will ask to take another step toward creating design guidelines for the city's Warehouse Historic District at the Twin Falls City Council meeting today.

The commission received a $12,000 grant in March to hire an outside firm to develop the guidelines. When the commission first pursued the grant last year, Chairman Darrell Buffaloe and Vice Chairman Ryan Horsely said they intend to keep the guidelines flexible enough to allow for economic development, but also maintain the Warehouse District's link to the city's history.

If the council approves awarding the work to Colorado-based urban planners Winter & Co., the firm plans to host a public workshop on June 1 and have another workshop with a first draft of the guidelines in August. The work is scheduled to be completed in September, according to the city staff report.

Also on the agenda:

- The council will vote on a new collective bargaining agreement between the city of Twin Falls and Twin Falls Firefighters Local 1556. The city staff report states the changes are minimal and are designed to allow union firefighters to opt out of paying for Social Security and instead put that money into private retirement accounts.

- The council will look at the language of the solicitations for management of the Twin Falls municipal pool. According to the staff report, the city's goals for the pool include: keeping costs affordable, limiting the use of tax dollars to support operational costs, providing use to local swim clubs and the school district, and maintaining the pool's quality. According to the schedule in the staff report, a new management contract will be in place in July.

Swept into the sunset

Dallas Mavericks guard Jason Terry, right, celebrates with teammate J.J. Barea during Game 4 of the Western Conference Semifinals against the Los Angeles Lakers on Sunday in Dallas.

Mavs blast Lakers in Phil's final game

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — Phil Jackson walked off the court with a tight smile, shaking hands and accepting congratulations like he has after so many series-ending playoff games.

Never like this, though. His team didn't win; they were crushed. Swept, too.

And he wasn't just heading to the offseason — he's calling it a career, ending the most successful run by any coach in NBA history.

Jason Terry and the Dallas Mavericks ended Jackson's tenure, and the Lakers' reign as two-time champions, with a 122-86 victory Sunday. After two tight finishes and another game that was relatively close, the Mavs turned this one into a rout in the second quarter.

With Terry leading the way, Dallas hit a barrage of 3-pointers to go ahead by 24 points at halftime. When he made 3s on consecutive possessions early in the third quarter, Los Angeles knew it wasn't going to come back in this game or the series.

Things got ugly early in the fourth quarter, with vicious, frustration-fueled cheap shots by Lamar Odom and Andrew Bynum getting them ejected 45 seconds apart. But at game's end, Dallas coaches, players and team owner Mark Cuban lined up to bid farewell to the Zen Master.

"It's been a wonderful run," Jackson said.

The 65-year-old Jackson has retired before, but he insists it's for good this time. While he goes out with the sour taste of his first sweep in 21 postseasons, and his second-widest margin of defeat, it can't override all the sweet days.

A Hall of Famer since 2007, he leaves with a record 11 titles, and only 10 series losses. Take away Red Auerbach, who won nine championships, and Jackson won more titles than any two coaches combined. He won six championships with Michael Jordan, three with Kobe Bryant and Shaquille O'Neal, and the last two with Bryant leading the way.

He had to be talked into coming back this year. The lure of chasing a 12th title, bundled neatly as four three-peats, did it, but he knew it would be tough with a team worn down by three straight years of reaching the finals.

"(That) puts a lot of strain on the basketball club from all angles: personalities, spiritually, physically, emotionally, and getting charged up for game after game and assault after assault when you go in and play a team," Jackson said. "It was a challenge bigger than we could beat this year."

Four of Jackson's five kids flew to Dallas for this game, in case it was the end. On Saturday, Jackson called that "a drag that I don't need," but by Sunday afternoon he was probably happy to have them around. They sat near the Lakers bench, wearing yellow hats with Roman numerals marking his 10th and 11th championships.

Then there was his extended family — his coaches and players, especially Bryant.

"I grew up under him," Bryant said. "The way I approach things, the way I think about things — not only basketball, life in general — comes from him. It's a little weird for me to think of what next year is going to be like."

For Dirk Nowitzki and the Mavs, clearing this hurdle sets them up for a chance to redeem themselves for flopping during the 2006 NBA finals and for flaming out in every postseason since. That's why when this game ended, confetti didn't fall; the organization's bigger goal is reaching the finals and winning its first championship.

They're halfway there, having won a franchise-record six straight playoff games, a streak that began right after they blew a 23-point lead in Game 4 of their first-round series against Portland.

"The job is not finished," Terry said.

Dallas will host either Oklahoma City or Memphis in the conference finals. The Grizzlies lead the Thunder 2-1 going into Game 4 on Monday night. The next round likely won't start before next Sunday, a layoff that could pay huge dividends for a roster filled with players in their 30s.

Then again, they might want to keep playing the way they're going.

Minico LB Roland headed to Chicago

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Throughout his football career at Minico High, Jordan Roland was never one to back down from a new challenge.

So it comes as little surprise that he would go from small-town Rupert to big-city Chicago to continue his playing career.

Roland has committed to play football at Concordia University Chicago.

"I'm not afraid to go out and try things. I think that's going to be really exciting," Roland said. "I consider myself lucky to have those opportunities to go off and do my own thing."

An NCAA Division III program, Concordia University Chicago competes in the Northern Athletics Conference. The Cougars' roster last season included just three players from the West. However, Roland fell in love with the school after visiting the campus in December.

"We got a chance to really immerse ourselves in the whole Chicago lifestyle," Roland said. "We ate the food, the food was delicious. We went downtown to see what the city was like. It's going to be a whole new experience and I'm looking forward to it."

A first-team all-Great Basin Conference selection at inside linebacker, Roland led Minico last season in total tackles (81) and solos (46).

"He's worked very hard for it," said Minico coach Tim Perrigot. "He had an outstanding career at Minico. He played a major role in our defense last season, which was one of the better defenses we've had since I've been here."

Although his father, Anthony, played football at Idaho State, Roland got a relatively late start.

"Growing up, I didn't start playing football until I was in seventh grade. My dad never forced it on me, even though he played. I think he knew it would come around to me sooner or later. Sure enough, it did," Roland said.

Roland began to stand out in the final game of his junior season, Perrigot said, and has continued to blossom ever since.

"About the time I was a freshman I started thinking about (playing in college) and I was really into it," Roland said. "I figured maybe I'll give it a shot. I really started focusing on it and focusing on school. I buckled down and everything fell into place."

Vets, rookies shine as District V circuit visits Shoshone

Fox retakes command of girls all-around

SHOSHONE — It's all in the response.

After a shaky performance in Gooding a week ago, Darby Fox of Glenns Ferry bounced back in Shoshone, grabbing 54 points and giving herself a little breathing room in the District V rodeo all-around cowgirl standings.

Fox came out strong, finishing Friday night with a second in goats, thirds in breakaway and team roping with her partner, Haillie Taylor of Hailey, and led the field in barrels, posting the fastest time of the year of 16.830 seconds. Fox also found success on Saturday with a season-best breakaway mark of 2.62 seconds and a second-place finish in barrels. She upped her all-around point total to 231.

Valene Lickley of Jerome increased her second-place point total to 193 with a good weekend performance. Lickley had a win on Friday in poles and added points with finishes of third and ninth in breakaway, seventh in goats, eighth in barrels and a second and third in team roping with partner Garrett Webb of Wendell.

Taylor sits third in the all-around standings and continues to be in the race for the top spot with 179 points.

"I just keep doing what I'm doing," said Taylor. "I really think it's Darby's year to win (the all-around). Valene won last year and I won my freshman year. Next year we'll all be seniors and it should be fun."

Taylor believes she needs to improve in goats and keep roping consistently. She currently leads the barrel racing with a narrow six-point lead over Fox.

"I'm really focusing on getting ready for state in four events: team roping, barrels, breakaway and poles," said Taylor, who also competes in cutting.

Rookie Marlee Mussmann of Valley High is fourth in the all-around (150) and sits second in goats, ninth in breakaway and poles, and fourth in barrels in the individual standings.

"The toughest thing about high school rodeo is having to be prepared for two rodeos a weekend," said Mussman. "But the best thing is having fun and hanging out with my friends. I don't really pay much attention to the standings. I just try to do my thing. I like all four of my events and my favorite is the one I think I'm doing the best in."

Goat tying might get her vote after her performance in Shoshone. On Friday, Mussman collected the win with a time of 9.16 seconds, with Fox on her heels at 9.17. Saturday it was three rookies finishing 1-2-3.

Mussmann finished first at 8.52 seconds, followed by Gooding teammates Macy Urrutia (9.30) and Cassie Bahe (9.90).

First wins were recorded by Shania Laird of Jerome, running the barrel pattern in 17.094 seconds on Saturday, and Iain Gonzalez of Wendell, capturing the bull riding with 47 points on Edgar on Friday.

On the boys side, rookie Ty Faulkner teamed with Jared Parke of Gooding to

Zollinger keeps District VI all-around lead

Times-News

OAKLEY — With wins in goats, barrels and team roping with Oakley teammate Jacee Bedke, McKenzie Zollinger maintained her lead in the all-around cowgirl standings in District VI rodeo.

Zollinger now has a total of 297.50 points, and Bedke is in second place with 253. The 9.71-second run in team roping on Saturday by Zollinger and Bedke was the fastest run of the season.

Alle Southern of Raft River and Raeli Prescott of Kimberly each picked up their first wins on Friday night. Southern cleared the poles in 22.216 seconds, and Prescott roped her steer in 4.48 seconds in breakaway.

In calf roping, Canyon Ridge cowboy Jared Roe had a season-best time of 11.76 seconds on Friday and finished in 12.37 seconds on Saturday for the win.

District VI returns to Oakley this weekend before heading to Rupert next week for the district finals.

Jeter homers twice, Yankees scorch Texas

ARLINGTON, Texas — Derek Jeter homered twice after going 62 games without a long ball, Curtis Granderson went deep again and the New York Yankees beat the Texas Rangers 12-5 Sunday despite an erratic outing by CC Sabathia.

Jeter had gone 259 at-bats without a homer since last Aug. 24 before leading off the fifth with a liner that barely cleared the eight-foot wall into the Rangers' bullpen in right-center.

WHITE SOX 5, MARINERS 2, 10 INNINGS
SEATTLE — Paul Konerko returned to the White Sox lineup and tied his career high with five hits, including a single in the 10th inning that helped Chicago beat Seattle.

ANGELS 6, INDIANS 5
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Peter Bourjos drove in the tying run in the eighth inning with an infield single, Erick Aybar followed with a two-run double and Los Angeles beat Cleveland to give Mike Scioscia his 1,000th victory as a major league manager.

RED SOX 9, TWINS 5
BOSTON — Adrian Gonzalez homered, Kevin Youkilis scored four runs and Daisuke Matsuzaka settled down to pitch six innings after a rough first, leading Boston over Minnesota.

New York Yankees second baseman Robinson Cano (24) drops the ball as Texas Rangers center fielder Julio Borbon (20) steals second base in the fourth inning of Sunday's game in Arlington, Texas.

TIGERS 5, BLUE JAYS 2
TORONTO — Brad Penny pitched well into the eighth inning and Detroit followed Justin Verlander's no-hitter by beating Toronto.

RAVS 5, ORIOLES 3
BALTIMORE — B.J. Upton drove in four runs, and Tampa Bay beat Baltimore for a three-game sweep.

ATHLETICS 5, ROYALS 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin Kouzmanoff and Kurt Suzuki each homered for Oakland and Conor Jackson collected three hits to help

Tyson Ross win his first game in four starts.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
MARLINS 8, NATIONALS 0
MIAMI — Anibal Sanchez took a no-hitter into the seventh inning and struck out a career-high 11 Sunday to help the Florida Marlins salvage the final game of their series against Washington, 8-0.
Washington's first hit came on the 101st pitch from Sanchez, when Laynce Nix led off the seventh with a line single to right, just beyond the reach of a diving Mike Stanton.

Sanchez (2-1) allowed two hits and walked none in seven innings before departing after throwing 117 pitches.

CARDINALS 3, BREWERS 1
ST. LOUIS — Unbeaten Kyle McClellan worked into the ninth inning to become the NL's third five-game winner and the Cardinals' bullpen labored to get the final three outs.
Colby Rasmus had a two-run double and Tyler Greene matched his career best with three hits for the NL Central-leading Cardinals.

BRAVES 5, PHILLIES 2
PHILADELPHIA — Jair Jurrjens pitched neatly into the seventh inning, and Freddie Freeman, Alex Gonzalez and Eric Hinske all homered.

REDS 2, CUBS 0
CHICAGO — Johnny Cueto was strong in his season debut Sunday, allowing five hits and pitching into the seventh inning for Cincinnati.

GIANTS 3, ROCKIES 0
SAN FRANCISCO — Ryan Vogelsong and two relievers combined on a three-hitter and the San Francisco Giants completed their first series sweep of the season.

DODGERS 4, METS 2
NEW YORK — Andre Ethier got back on track with a two-run homer, Clayton Kershaw struck out eight and struggling Los Angeles snapped a four-game losing streak.

PIRATES 5, ASTROS 4
PITTSBURGH — Ryan Doumit hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning and the Pirates improved to .500 this late in a season for the first time in six years.

PADRES 4, DIAMONDBACKS 3
SAN DIEGO — Jorge Cantu hit a three-run homer and Aaron Harang pitched seven solid innings to lead the Padres.

Detroit Red Wings defenseman Niklas Kronwall (55) is congratulated by teammates, including Henrik Zetterberg (40), after scoring against the San Jose Sharks during the second period of Game 5 of an NHL hockey Stanley Cup Western Conference semifinal playoff series Sunday in San Jose, Calif.

Red Wings beat Sharks 4-3 to extend series

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Tomas Holmstrom broke a tie with 6:08 remaining, and the Detroit Red Wings had three third-period goals to avoid elimination with a 4-3 victory over the San Jose Sharks on Sunday night.

Danny Cleary and Jonathan Ericsson also scored in the final period to send the series back to Detroit for Game 6 on Tuesday night. After winning the first three games, San Jose is clinging to a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Logan Couture, Joe Pavelski and Devin Setoguchi scored to help the Sharks take a 3-1 lead early in the third period. Then the Red Wings scored two quick goals before Holmstrom redirected the winner past Antti Niemi.

Niklas Kronwell also scored, and Jimmy Howard made 39 saves for Detroit.

The Red Wings took a huge step toward adding to their already storied history.

Only three NHL teams have overcome 3-0 deficits to win a best-of-seven series.

The 2010 Philadelphia Flyers, 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs and 1975 New York Islanders are the only teams to win a series after losing the first three games. With Chicago winning three straight to force a Game 7 against Vancouver in the opening round, there's plenty of recent precedent that Detroit can push San Jose to the brink.

Glover wins Wells Fargo in playoff to end long drought

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Lucas Glover had gone 41 tournaments and nearly two years since winning the U.S. Open for his last victory. His win Sunday in the Wells Fargo Championship was every bit as demanding.

Glover closed with three tough pars on the rugged finishing stretch at Quail Hollow for a 3-under 69. Then he faced a playoff with close friend and former Clemson teammate Jonathan Byrd, who made a 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole to catch him.

Glover kept the tournament in suspense to the very end.

After Byrd took bogey with a poor chip from the hazard, Glover had two putts from 25 feet for the win. He left the first one 4 feet short and still above the hole, then knocked that in for his third career victory.

Glover became the first player in the nine-year history at Quail Hollow to win with four rounds in the 60s.

LEHMAN WINS TRADITION IN PLAYOFF

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Tom Lehman won the Regions Tradition for his third victory in seven Champions Tour events this year, beating Peter Senior with a par on the second hole of a playoff.

Senior, from Australia, missed a 5-foot par putt when it lipped out on No. 18. Lehman two-putted from about 20 feet, polishing off his second bogey-free day at the first Champions Tour major of the season.

Both parred the first sudden-death playoff hole, also No. 18 at Shoal Creek.

Lehman and Senior finished at 13-under 275. Lehman had a 3-under 69, and Senior shot a 68.

AMATEUR HENLEY WINS NATIONWIDE TOUR'S STADIUM CLASSIC

ATHENS, Ga. — University of Georgia senior Russell Henley became the second amateur winner in Nationwide Tour history, shooting a 3-under 68 for a two-stroke victory in the Stadium Classic on the Bulldogs' home course.

The three-time All-America selection finished at 12-under 272 on the University of Georgia Golf Course.

Daniel Summerhays is the only other amateur winner since the tour began in 1990, taking the 2007 Nationwide Children's Hospital Invitational in between his junior and senior seasons at BYU.

AIKEN DEDICATES SPANISH OPEN WIN TO BALLESTEROS

TERRASSA, Spain — South Africa's Thomas Aiken won the Spanish Open for his first European Tour title, a victory he dedicated to Spanish great Seve Ballesteros.

Ballesteros died Saturday from complications of a cancerous brain tumor.

Aiken shot a 2-under 70 at Real Golf Club El Prat for a 10-under 278 total.

Atlanta Hawks power forward Josh Smith (5) celebrates with center Josh Powell (12) after Game 4 of the Eastern Conference Semifinals against the Chicago Bulls on Sunday in Atlanta.

Hawks square playoff series, handle Bulls

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks finally won a second-round playoff game at home.

They can thank a guy who frequently gets booed by the home fans, and a young guard who wasn't supposed to be playing much at all.

Josh Smith answered his critics with a huge game — 23 points, 16 rebounds and eight assists — and fill-in Jeff Teague came up with the Derrick Rose-like plays down the stretch to lead the Hawks past the Chicago Bulls 100-88 Sunday night, evening the Eastern Conference semifinals at two games apiece.

The Hawks snapped a nine-game home losing streak in the second round, their misery dating to a May 13, 1996, win against Orlando.

Smith is frequently criticized by Atlanta fans for his inconsistent play. He heard nothing but cheers in this one, staying away from the outside jumpers, dominating on the inside and finding the open man with crisp passes.

Teague has been an even bigger surprise filling in for injured Kirk Hinrich, playing with the poise of a veteran instead of someone who played infrequently during the regular season and first round of the playoffs.

He scored 12 points and doled out four assists, putting the capper on a late 10-0 run that broke open a game that had been tight and intense all the way.

Driving toward the hoop with Kyle Korver draped all over him, Teague flipped up a shot as he was falling down.

It banked in, giving the Hawks a safe lead, 94-84, with 1:26 remaining. The second-year player bounced off the court with a big smile, bumping his teammates on the way to the bench.

Someone held up a sign, their misery dating to a May 13, 1996, win against Orlando.

The actual MVP scored 34 points. But Rose needed 32 shots to do it, and he wasn't nearly as effective as he was in scoring a career-best 44 points in Game 3, leading the Bulls to a 99-82 rout that restored Chicago's home-court advantage. The top-seeded Bulls can still close out the series simply by winning at home, but the Hawks know they'll get at least one more home game.

Djokovic beats Nadal, extends streak

MADRID (AP) — Novak Djokovic defeated Rafael Nadal on clay for the first time in 10 tries, beating the top-ranked Spaniard 7-5, 6-4 to win the Madrid Open on Sunday and extend his unbeaten start to the season to 32 matches.

The second-ranked Djokovic squandered a 4-0 lead in the first set, but recovered to end Nadal's latest winning streak on clay at 37 matches and earn the Serb his third straight victory over Nadal in finals this season.

Djokovic's sixth title of 2011 allowed him to surpass Bjorn Borg's 31-match season-opening run in 1980. He trails only John McEnroe's 42-0 start in 1984.

"Probably it's right at the top," Djokovic said about beating Nadal on clay on Spanish soil. "Under the circumstances I was playing an unbelievable match. ... I stepped onto the court today believing I could win. I needed to be aggressive and it was a great match."

Djokovic's run of 34 straight wins since Serbia's Davis Cup triumph in December is the eighth best of all time.

"I came up against a great player obviously — he's having a monster year," Nadal said. "He was better, you have to accept that."

Nadal's last defeat on clay came nearly two years ago against Robin Soderling at the French Open. He had won six titles on clay since, and this was only his seventh loss on the surface in 196 matches dating to 2005.

Nadal had split the last two finals here with Roger Federer, and beat the Swiss star in three sets in the semifinals on Saturday.

But Djokovic proved too tough and avenged his 2009 loss to Nadal at the Magic Box arena, when the pair squared off in a record 4-hour plus semifinal.

La Nina increases danger of flood and drought in the West

By Lynn DeBruin
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The winter and early spring have been extreme across the West, with record snowpacks bringing joy to skiers and urban water managers but severe flood risks to northern Utah, Wyoming and Montana.

And despite all the wet weather in the Rockies and Sierra Nevada, parts of eastern Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona are in severe drought and gearing up for what is forecast as a bad fire season. In New Mexico, some 400 fires, driven by relentless winds, have already raced across 315,000 acres.

Credit — or blame — for the extreme weather goes mostly to a strong La Niña, which is associated with cooler than normal water temperatures in the Equatorial Pacific Ocean and an atmospheric flow that's causing drier than normal conditions in the Southwest and wetter than normal in the Northwest.

"This winter has been fairly unusual," said Laura Edwards, a research climatologist at the Desert Research Institute in Reno, Nev., in what can only be considered an understatement.

Randy Julander, supervisor for the Utah Snow Survey, described more colorfully the disparity between the snow buried, flood endangered parts of the West and those that are parched and burning: "They're wishing they could get a little of what we have. (The wet weather) just continues to get worse. At this point, all you can do is open the chute, let her buck and hope your butt stays glued to the saddle."

Julander was referring to the coming melt with snowpacks at 200 percent of normal or higher throughout northern Utah. One lower-elevation area in the mountains 50 miles east of Salt Lake City is at 750 percent of normal — with another big storm headed to the region early this week.

"The sandbagging is in place. They've cleared the channels. Everybody is just sitting around chewing on their nails," Julander said.

In Colorado, the city of Denver and Loveland Ski Area are separated by a mere 75 miles. Yet, the city, east of the Rockies on the high plains, has had only 21.8 inches of snow this season, the second-lowest in history with records dating back to 1882. Loveland, at the top of the Continental Divide, entered the weekend within four inches of breaking its season snowfall record of 572 inches (some 49 feet, set in 1995-1996).

"It's almost a record low for one and a record high for another. You get the idea how extreme that is," said Kevin Houck, an engineer with the Colorado Water Conservation Board. "If I were a water manager, I'd be very happy about this."

Pat Mulroy definitely is.

She oversees operations at the Southern Nevada Water Authority and the Las Vegas Valley Water District, responsible for water to local agencies that collectively serve 2 million residents and nearly 40 million annual visitors

As recently as last fall, the plunging levels of Lake Mead outside Las Vegas were dangerously close to triggering a mandated "shortage" declaration on the Colorado River system, which would have required both Nevada and Arizona to reduce water use.

But because so much snowmelt will be flowing into the Colorado River this year, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation announced recently it is releasing an extra 3.3 million acre-feet from upstream Lake Powell to Lake Mead. The additional flow into Mead is roughly 14 times the amount of Colorado River water Las Vegas and surrounding areas used last year.

"I'm delighted, absolutely delighted," said Mulroy.

In Utah, Snowbird Ski Resort set its all-time snowfall record two weeks ago with 711 inches — more than 59 feet. It could stay open as late as July 4.

The flip-side is that major flooding has become a worry at lower elevations in northern Utah, where snowpack is well above what it was during the massive floods of 1983 that caused $250 million in damage.

Crops were wiped out, homes and businesses damaged and State Street in downtown Salt Lake City became a river for two weeks when an underground pipe couldn't contain the flow of City Creek. Interstate 80 was flooded and levels in the Great Salt Lake rose within eight feet of the runways at Salt Lake International Airport.

"When it does finally turn warm and the snow starts melting, it will be like filling a thimble with a fire hose," said Julander. "It's going to come down pretty much uncontrolled."

A big melt-off in a short time frame would make situation dire.

In Wyoming, communities are already placing sandbags in anticipation of potential flooding. Last year, the state got a wakeup call when flooding damaged bridges, roads and homes and required the Wyoming National Guard to deploy 400 soldiers to help.

In Montana, Gov. Brian Schweitzer declared a flood emergency for one county in the northeastern part of the state where spring melt has caused flooding along the Milk River, particularly near the city of Glasgow and where the river meets up with the Missouri River.

In California, the wettest winter and spring in more than a decade is great news on various fronts. It prompted state officials to boost the amount of water available to agencies that supply 25 million California residents and almost a million acres of farmland, with Gov. Jerry Brown officially ending the state-imposed drought declaration.

Winter sports enthusiasts, in some locales, are still enjoying an amazing season. Several ski resorts around Lake Tahoe extended their seasons beyond the usual April 1 close date when four feet of snow fell in a single night in March. Squaw Valley intends to keep its lifts open through June.

More than 61 feet of snow has fallen in the Sierra Nevada this season — second-most on record to the 65 feet that fell on the high country in 1950-51.

"It's our longest season ever," Donner Ski Ranch spokesman Diogo Custodio enthused. "If we need to stay open until July 4, we will."

Sada Thompson, 1970s TV mom, dies in Conn. at 81

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Sada Thompson, the durable matriarch of stage and screen who won a Tony Award for her portraits of three sisters and their mother in the 1971 comedy "Twigs" and an Emmy Award for playing the eternally understanding mother in the television series "Family," has died at age 81.

Thompson died Wednesday of a lung disease at Danbury Hospital, agent David Shaul said Sunday from Los Angeles.

Thompson won wide acclaim during an illustrious career that spanned more than 60 years, during which she gravitated toward quality work that allowed her to plumb her characters' complexities.

"When you start off acting, it does seem very romantic, and the make-believe part of it all seems very exciting," she told the Los Angeles Times in 1991. "It's only later that you begin to realize how fascinating the work is — that it's a bottomless pit, and you never get to the end of it. Human character is just endlessly fascinating."

Health care carries hefty price tag for Pentagon

By Donna Cassata
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A military built for fighting wars is looking more and more like a health care entitlement program.

Costs of the program that provides health coverage to some 10 million active duty personnel, retirees, reservists and their families have jumped from $19 billion in 2001 to $53 billion in the Pentagon's latest budget request.

Desperate to cut spending in Washington's time of fiscal austerity, President Barack Obama has proposed increasing the fees for working-age retirees in the decades-old health program, known as TRICARE. After years of resisting proposed increases for the military men and women who sacrificed for a nation, budget-conscious lawmakers suddenly are poised to make them pay a bit more for their health care, though not on the president's terms.

The current fees, unchanged in 11 years, are $230 a year for an individual and $460 for a family. That's far less than what civilian federal workers pay for health care, about $5,000 a year, and what most other people in the U.S. pay.

Obama is seeking a fee increase of $2.50 per month for an individual and $5 per month for families, which approaches the current price of a gallon of gasoline. Future increases starting in 2013 would be pegged to rising costs as measured by the national health care expenditure index produced by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, which projects 6.2 percent growth.

"Health care is eating the department alive," Defense Secretary Robert Gates said bluntly — two years ago.

The explosive expense of health care rivals what the Pentagon shells out to buy fighter aircraft, submarines and high-tech weapons, and is about half of the $118 billion that the Obama administration wants in the next budget to fight the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Rep. Howard "Buck" McKeon, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, backs Gates' proposal to raise fees for working-age retirees in the next budget, and he has the support of the committee's top Democrat, Rep. Adam Smith of Washington state.

But McKeon, R-Calif., rejects the plan to link increases in 2013 and beyond to the health care expenditure index. He wants to tie any future increases to military retirees' cost-of-living adjustment, which this year was zero.

McKeon planned to release his version of the defense bill Monday. The legislation says members of the military face "unique and extraordinary demands and make extra sacrifices over the course of a 20-30 year career in protecting freedom for all Americans. Decades of sacrifices is a significant pre-paid premium for health care that is over and above what the member pays in money."

The full committee meets Wednesday to pull together an overall defense bill for the budget year beginning Oct. 1. The committee is expected to override members of its personnel subcommittee who last week unanimously approved a one-year prohibition on any increase in health care fees.

"I strongly believe military retirees have made significant down payments through their dedicated service to the nation," said the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Joe Wilson, R-S.C. "In view of that service, it is not right for the nation to ask them to pay more for the health care for which they are entitled as all citizens are being personally challenged financially by rising gas prices."

Congress repeatedly has resisted Pentagon efforts to increase copayments or fees, arguing that members of the military and their families sacrifice far more than the average American, with a career that includes long and dangerous deployments overseas that overshadow civilian work.

It’s time for Buhl and Hansen voters to say yes

Sometimes voters say NO because they mean it; other times they vote NO because they haven’t been convinced yet. It’s certainly time for voters in Buhl and Hansen to become convinced – supplemental levies have become part of the basic funding formula for K-12 school districts in Idaho and students in districts that refuse to support such levies will soon be struggling to keep up.

In March 55% of voters in Twin Falls passed a two-year, $7.5 million supplemental levy. On the same day, 68% of Gooding voters and 71% of those in Jerome extended levies that they had approved in previous years. In fact, 84 of Idaho’s 115 school districts are currently operating their districts with a supplemental levy.

Idaho’s state constitution requires that all students receive an equal education, but according to University of Idaho professor of education finance Frank Gallant that a gap could well develop between districts that pass levies and those that do not. Idaho School Board Association Executive Director Karen Echeverria says that state districts are operating this year with $30 million MORE in levy funds than in the 2009-10 school year. Without passage, students in Hansen and Buhl are definitely at risk of falling behind.

Supplemental levies are advantageous to districts and their students because the money is assessed at the local level and spent at the local level. Unlike state funding and federal stimulus funds that come with accompanying strings attached, district levy funds are spent completely at the discretion of the local board – and that’s a very good thing.

The Buhl School District has proposed a one-year $571,903 supplemental levy while Hansen School District officials have requested a one-year $190,000 levy. In each case it amounts to less than $100 for each $100,000 of assessed valuation – really not that much.

Voters in Buhl and Hansen have said NO in the past; for the sake of their students it’s time for them to look for a reason to say YES.

Coping with expensive gas

High gas prices bring out the irrational in Washington politicians, and there’s been plenty of evidence lately. But Congress also has a few bills on deck that would eliminate some of the government’s most inefficient activity in energy markets.

President Obama and Democrats want to end tax incentives to oil companies. Profit would be reason enough for firms to continue drilling and refining where it’s worth it. America, meanwhile, would make progress on reducing supports for fossil fuel, a commitment it made along with other Group of 20 nations that would save taxpayer money and result in lower carbon emissions. The Senate is likely to vote on such a plan soon.

A bipartisan group of senators, meanwhile, wants to end two subsidies for ethanol. Along with other biofuel subsidies, these policies have reduced oil imports, but they cost the government billions annually, don’t do much to reduce carbon emissions and duplicate other ethanol supports. Even Agriculture

Secretary Tom Vilsack, a former governor of Iowa, says the biofuel support system should be transitioned away from corn. Another reform from Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, would not eliminate payments anytime soon.

Republicans also want to open up more of the Outer Continental Shelf to offshore drilling. Some plans, such as giving the Interior Department only 30 days to review applications, aren’t wise. And their ambitions are probably larger than politics will allow. Yet Democrats should not dismiss their push to open areas such as Virginia’s coast that Obama had slated for exploration before the Deepwater Horizon blowout in the Gulf of Mexico. Though the government might not furnish tax incentives for oil production, it doesn’t have to restrict more private exploration – as long as lawmakers ensure that Interior has the time and resources to regulate the industry properly, which the GOP House seems less interested in doing.

Judging what bin Laden accomplished

The derring-do military operation that killed Osama bin Laden brought cathartic closure to Americans, who had longed for justice to be done for the 10 years since al-Qaida’s sensational attacks on the U.S. on Sept. 11, 2001.

Still, triumphalism isn’t in order. Rather bin Laden’s death provides a marker to judge what he and al-Qaida accomplished, as well as their limitations and the growing confidence of the U.S. and its allies in dealing with the threat of jihadi terrorism.

Now it’s time to step back, take a colder view of bin Laden’s diminishing influence in operational terrorism and stake out where our abiding national interests lie after a anxious decade in many ways dominated by the repercussions of that traumatic September day.

From his earliest policy statements in 1996, bin Laden never hid his intention to suck the U.S. into an asymmetric struggle with the Muslim world. His aim was to exhaust our wealth, corrode our democratic institutions and undermine our “soft power” influence abroad.

That single-handedly bin Laden initially proved so successful remains all the more impressive since the emergence of his brand new non-state global terrorism coincided with the zenith of America the hyperpower in the early years of the post-Cold War world.

By that yardstick bin Laden arguably inflicted more lasting damage on the U.S. than the shattering physical and psychic trauma he inflicted in al-Qaida’s daring attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Let’s face it. At the outset of the last decade did Americans suppose that President George W. Bush’s now discarded slogan — the global war on terrorism — would bog the U.S. down in a seemingly unwinnable war in Afghanistan, justify invading Iraq on specious pretexts which proved to have nothing to do with Sept. 11 and aggravate a national debt so gigantic that the once mighty dollar is being quietly devalued to help limit the harm done by the exponential growth of red ink?

What we hopefully have learned is that successful counterterrorism depends on the unflashy, steady accumulation of information quietly shared by many nations’ intelligence organizations and based on humdrum police work.

Bin Laden’s seemingly constant presence in his Abbottabad hideout over the last five or six years confirmed what was long suspected: he had to operate under the watchful eye of his Pakistani protectors who at times sacrificed some of his key operatives to keep the Americans happy.

In such an operational straightjacket, bin Laden lost his ability to instigate worldwide terrorist operations. He was reduced to claims of inspiring spinoffs of more or less like-minded radical jihadis.

We would be well advised to spend some of the billions of dollars now earmarked for counterterrorism to shoring up these fledgling democracies. The model should be the fortunes the West so wisely invested in post-Soviet Eastern Europe.

Jonathan Randal, a former Washington Post reporter, is author of “Osama: The Making of a Terrorist.”

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Standing by opposition to zoning change

This letter it to clarify my position concerning the variance from the zoning regulations granted to the Magic Valley Bible Church to occupy the Cain’s building.

Since 1947, Idaho law has provided that a business with a liquor, beer or wine license shall not be located near (within 300 feet) of churches and schools. Numerous businesses on Main Street currently have beer and wine licenses. It is my opinion that the Legislature’s decision to separate churches and schools from wine, beer and liquor was a wise statute and should be followed.

The Magic Valley Bible Church has chosen to locate its church within 300 feet of businesses with liquor, beer and wine licenses. In my opinion, that should not have been permitted. Further, I believe that will be an obstacle for restaurants to move to downtown. Therefore, I voiced my opposition to their request. I make no apologies for my position, which is supported by law.

This is a wonderful democratic country. Disagreements of opinion are decided by elections and representatives. I will honor and obey the decision made by the five members of the Planning and Zoning Commission that outvoted the other four. Further, I will greet the members of the Magic Valley Bible Church warmly and offer my support to my new neighbors.

Although we had a difference of opinion, that has been resolved. Welcome to Downtown. Now it is time to work together for the betterment of our Downtown. I look forward to meeting and becoming friends with our new neighbors.

Army band gave impressive concert

I would like to give you a special thanks for helping sponsor the United States Army Field Band at its recent concert.

I and a friend were taken to it by my family. I was impressed by the overall performance of all the participants and the overall program. I also liked it that they used some local high school students for one of its selections.

I saw a lot of white-haired people in the audience (my hair is white, too!).

A very enjoyable evening!

Auditorium would make better concert venue

Regarding the Army Band concert at CSI on April 27:

I attended this concert, which was excellent; however, my question is why was this held in the CSI gymnasium? The seating, acoustics and ease of access left much to be desired and the band, soloists and chorus would have been much better served if the concert had been held in the auditorium.

Admittedly, there could have been a conflict of interest, but there are other auditoriums in the Twin Falls School system which I know have been used for previous U.S. forces concerts. As I understand it, our property taxes go toward the upkeep of the school system, so there is no reason why these auditoriums cannot be used by legal American citizens to enjoy musical performances.

Hopefully if, and when, you sponsor another concert, you will be able to make arrangements for this to be held in an auditorium.

Water bill increase is hard to swallow

I haven’t any idea how many others might feel as I do about government “must do’s” that end up costing us as property owners buku bucks.

I just got my city water bill again showing the mandatory additional cost for the tying together of our water sources to bring us into the line with government imposed guidelines on the arsenic level allowed in our drinking water.

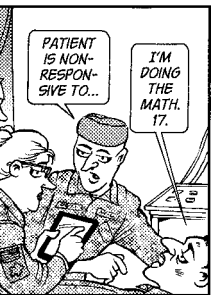

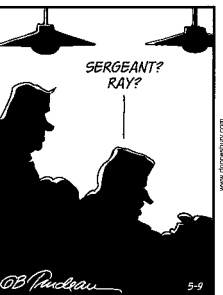

I am 81 years old and was born here and have lived here my entire life. I have been drinking our local water sources from day one (even out of a garden hose as a kid) and have survived. If the issue had been put to us as an optional item, allowing the city population to vote on it, it wouldn’t be so disturbing. This is water under the bridge now. Future wise maybe we will get a better break.

They say living to reach a hundred years of age isn’t a big deal any more because more and more centenarians are reaching that age. Maybe this super deal will allow us to live forever. You suppose?

Bin Laden’s death proves tough subject for Sunday sermons

By Brock Vergakis
Associated Press

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — The killing of Osama bin Laden, a man who was America’s face of evil for nearly a decade, left Christians, Jews and Muslims relieved, proud or even jubilant. For their religious leaders, it was sometimes hard to know just what to say.

There is at least some dissonance between the values they preach and the triumphant response on the streets of New York and Washington to the death of a human being — even one responsible for thousands of killings in those areas and around the world.

“Justice may have been served, but we Catholics never rejoice in the death of a human being,” said the Rev. Stephen Mimnaugh.

He did not mention bin Laden during Sunday’s morning Mass at Manhattan’s St. Francis of Assisi, the church of the late Mychal Judge, chaplain of the Fire Department of New York and the first recorded victim of the Sept. 11 attacks in the city.

After Mass, Mimnaugh cited comments published in America, a weekly Catholic magazine. The Rev. James Martin, a Jesuit priest, wrote that “no matter how monstrous” a person is, “as a Christian, I am asked to pray for him and, at some point, forgive him.”

Other religious leaders felt compelled to say at least a few words about bin Laden on the first weekend of worship since he was killed. Some focused on moving on and working toward peace, while others spoke approvingly of a death they said marked a blow for justice.

The Rev. David Howard shouted his approval — in a sense — from outside his church in Virginia Beach, Va.

“OSAMA BIN LADEN, SATAN AND THE FINAL VICTORY OF JESUS,” read the marquee outside Brook Baptist Church, publicizing the sermon Howard started writing hours after he heard that a team of Navy SEALs based in Virginia Beach killed the al-Qaida leader.

Howard has no doubt that bin Laden was an instrument of Satan brought to justice with the aid of God, who answered the prayers of millions.

“We should pray for bad people, evil people, that when we pray to God he will change their lives. But if he won’t change their lives, especially those who have a lot of power to hurt a lot of people, you pray for their end because they’re causing so much pain,” he said. “You pray somehow God will take them out. The Bible is very clear that God is in control and every person in power is because God put them there. He can put them there, he can keep them there or he can take them out. That’s his prerogative.”

The leader of one of the nation’s largest mosques was equally direct during prayers Friday.

“There is no doubt that this man was a thug, he was a murderer,” Imam Hassan al-Qazwini told worshippers at the Islamic Center of America in the Detroit suburb of Dearborn. “His hands were stained by the blood of thousands of innocent people — Muslims and non-Muslims alike.”

Qazwini, who delivered his sermon in a large, circular hall filled to capacity, said the Quran is clear that someone who kills one innocent person “is doomed to hell forever.” And the imam was particularly incensed that bin Laden “committed atrocities against innocent people ... while he was calling ‘Allahu akbar,’” or “God is great.”

“He’s responsible for tarnishing the image of Islam in this country,” he said. “We’re happy to see the man who caused so much pain for Muslims in this country is gone ... finally.”

Before the sermon, Qazwini said Muslims are discouraged from showing jubilation over death, but cheering the news of bin Laden’s demise marks an occasion where “justice was served.”

At Armitage Baptist Church on Chicago’s near west side, Pastor Charles Lyons told his congregation Sunday that sometimes “evil must be stopped.”

“We do not rejoice in the death of the man named Osama bin Laden (but) ... truth provides a platform for justice,” he said.

Church member Angelia Parker said bin Laden’s death should have been a time for contemplation, not cheering in the streets.

“I think that was kind of weird,” said Parker, who was passing out roses to mothers after the service. “It was like, ‘Are you kidding me?’ We are celebrating this person’s death? We didn’t celebrate in the streets when Saddam Hussein was killed.”

The Rev. Bill Kelly, priest at Saint Mary of the Assumption in Dedham, Mass., near Boston, said he was taken aback by the celebrations because he detected bloodlust. But he added that the emotional reaction is understandable.

“This is 10 years of pent-up anger, hurt, frustration, especially here in the Boston area because the crimes were initiated here,” he said, referring to the two planes that took off from Boston before crashing into the World Trade Center on Sept. 11, 2001.

Obama: Raid’s goal outweighed risks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama ordered the commando raid that killed terrorist leader Osama bin Laden after deciding the risks were outweighed by the possibility “of us finally getting our man” following a decade of frustration, he said in a Sunday broadcast interview.

The helicopter raid “was the longest 40 minutes of my life,” Obama told CBS’ “60 Minutes.”

Monitoring the commando raid operation in the White House Situation Room a week ago, Obama said he and top aides “had a sense of when gunfire and explosions took place” halfway around the world, and knew when one of the helicopters carrying Navy SEALs made an unplanned hard landing. “But we could not get information clearly about what was happening inside the compound,” he said.

Public opinion polls have shown a boost in Obama’s support in the days since the raid, and his re-election campaign was eager to draw attention to the interview. Jim Messina, the president’s campaign manager, emailed supporters encouraging them to watch the program.

In the interview, Obama said that as nervous as he was about the raid, he didn’t lose sleep over the possibility that bin Laden might be killed.

Anyone who questions whether the terrorist mastermind didn’t deserve his fate “needs to have their head examined,” he said.

Obama said bin Laden had “some sort of support network” inside Pakistan to be able to live for years at a high-security compound in Abbottabad, a city that houses numerous military facilities. But he stopped short of accusing Pakistani officials of harboring the man who planned the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks.

“We don’t know who or what that support network was. We don’t know whether there might have been some people inside of government, people outside of government.” He said the United States wanted to investigate further to learn the facts, “and more importantly, the Pakistani government has to investigate.”

People look at Mississippi River floodwaters at the base of Beale Street on Sunday in Memphis, Tenn. The river is expected to crest Tuesday.

More evacuations after flooding in Memphis

City waits to see if surging river breaks record

The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tennessee — In a Memphis neighborhood that already lost three houses to a slowly swelling river that threatens to consume many more, an unexpected smell carried for blocks: barbecue.

With the Mississippi just feet from her single-story home, Shirley Woods had the grill going in the backyard Sunday, cooking ribs, pork chops, chicken and hot dogs. She was getting ready to make potato salad.

When she woke up at first light, she was prepared to leave if the Mississippi had gotten high enough, but she decided she had time to at least celebrate Mother’s Day here with relatives.

“I’ll give it another day, and if it comes up much higher, we’re getting out of here,” Woods said.

Memphis residents have been evacuating low-lying homes for days as the surging river threatened to crest at 48 feet, just shy of the 48.7-foot record set by a devastating 1937 flood.

Officials went door-to-door Sunday, warning about 240 people to get out before the river reaches its expected peak Tuesday. In all, residents in more than 1,300 homes have been told to go, and some 370 people were staying in shelters.

But the slow pace of the river crest meant that Woods and others could cling to their normal lives a bit longer before having to move into relatives’ homes or shelters.

And while some evacuated their homes, others came as spectators. At Beale Street, the famous thoroughfare known for blues, dozens gawked and snapped photos as water pooled at the end of the road. Traffic was heavy downtown on a day the streets would normally be quiet.

The river is “probably the biggest tourist attraction in Memphis,” said Scott Umstead, who made the half-hour drive from Collierville with his wife and their three children.

Flood waters were about a half-mile from the street’s world-famous nightspots, which are on higher ground.

The river already reached record levels in some areas upstream, thanks to heavy rains and snowmelt. It spared Kentucky and northwest Tennessee any catastrophic flooding and no deaths have been reported there, but some low lying towns and farmland along the banks of the river have been inundated.

Service resumes after NJ train crash injures 34

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — Transit officials say some train service has resumed at a New Jersey station several hours after a commuter train from New York crashed into the bumpers at the end of the tracks, hurting 34 people.

Port Authority spokesman John Kelly says service resumed around 7:30 p.m. Sunday, roughly 11 hours after the crash occurred in Hoboken, just west of New York City.

It’s unclear how many of the station’s three tracks are in service as repairs are expected to continue through the night.

Officials had feared the crash would put the Monday morning commute in jeopardy. But they’re growing hopeful it may not be as hectic as initially believed.

Travelers still are being urged to allow extra time Monday, when additional bus and ferry service will be provided and most agencies plan to honor each other’s tickets.

None of the injuries in the PATH train’s 8:30 a.m. crash was considered life-threatening, though several victims were taken away on stretchers or put in neck braces as a precaution, Hoboken Mayor Dawn Zimmer said. The injured, who mostly sustained cuts and bruises, were taken to three area hospitals for treatment, and most, if not all, were expected to be released later in the day.

U.S. wants access to bin Laden widows in Pakistan

By Chris Brummitt
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD — The United States wants access to Osama bin Laden's three widows and any intelligence material its commandos left behind at the al-Qaida leader's compound, a top American official said in comments broadcast Sunday that could add a fresh sticking point in already frayed ties with Pakistan.

Information from the women, who remained in the house after the commandos killed bin Laden, might answer questions about whether Pakistan harbored the al-Qaida chief as many American officials are speculating. It could also reveal details about the day-to-day life of bin Laden, his actions since the invasion of Afghanistan in 2001 and the inner workings of al-Qaida.

The women, along with several children also picked up from the house, are believed to be in Pakistani army custody. A Pakistani army official declined to comment Sunday on the request, which U.S. National Security Adviser Tom Donilon revealed on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The CIA and Pakistan's spy agency, known by the acronym ISI, have worked uneasily together in the past on counterterrorism, but the unilateral U.S. raid — done without Pakistan's advance knowledge — has exposed the deep mistrust that scars a complicated if vital partnership for both nations.

Even before the May 1 raid, the ISI said it was cutting cooperation with CIA to protest drone strikes close to the Afghan border, among other things. In the current environment, Pakistan could use the fact it has something Washington wants — bin Laden's widows — as leverage to reduce some of the pressure it is under.

Bin Laden was found in a large house close to a military academy in the army town of Abbottabad where he had been living for up to six years. His location raised U.S. suspicions that he had help from some Pakistani authorities, possibly elements of the powerful army and intelligence services.

Donilon said Washington had seen no evidence that the Pakistani government had been colluding with bin Laden — the public line taken by most U.S. officials since the raid, including President Barack Obama in comments also broadcast Sunday.

"But they need to investigate that," Donilon said. "And they need to provide us with intelligence, by the way, from the compound that they've gathered, including access to Osama bin Laden's three wives, whom they have in ... custody."

Donilon also said Pakistani authorities had collected other evidence from the house which the United States wanted to "work with them on assessing." U.S. commandos managed to seize a large and valuable intelligence haul that included videos, telephone numbers and documents, along with the body of bin Laden, before flying back to Afghanistan, according to U.S. officials.

12 die, hundreds hurt in Egyptian sectarian clashes

By Mohannad Sabry
McClatchy Newspapers

CAIRO—Egypt's military rulers assigned extra security forces to protect churches and sealed off a volatile Cairo district Sunday to prevent the spread of Muslim-Christian clashes overnight in which at least 12 people died and more than 200 were injured.

Prime Minister Essam Sharaf canceled a tour of Gulf countries and led an emergency meeting of his caretaker Cabinet to address the worsening tensions between some conservative Muslims and the country's Coptic Christian minority. The deepening sectarian crisis threatens the ruling military council's ability to secure Egypt for its first elections since a popular revolution forced President Hosni Mubarak to quit in February.

The council announced military trials for the 190 people who were arrested overnight in connection with the violence in the Imbaba district. Muslim-Christian battles reportedly began after a group of Salafis, followers of a literalist branch of Islam, gathered outside the Saint Mina church, demanding the release of a woman they believed to be in church custody after her alleged conversion to Islam.

Witnesses gave conflict-

Christians and Muslims hurl stones at each other Sunday near the Corniche in Cairo, Egypt. The clashes occurred after ultraconservative Muslim mobs set fire overnight to a church and apartment building.

ing accounts of Saturday night's violence, with Muslims and Copts blaming one another. At some point, according to witnesses and amateur video, a group of men attacked the church with machetes, gunfire and Molotov cocktails. Another church nearby was set ablaze in the fighting. Copts celebrated a Mass there Sunday within its charred walls.

On Sunday, the government imposed a curfew in Imbaba, cordoned off many streets and increased security around the churches. Local residents also formed citizen patrols to prevent attacks on churches and mosques.

"The streets are calm, but the army is everywhere. There have been security cordons around churches here since last night, and I believe they'll be around for a long time," said Muhammad Abdelmaged, 26, an Imbaba resident.

The district's top Salafi cleric, Mohamed Ali, told state media Sunday that he investigated the story about the woman convert and found it to be "totally false." Salafist leaders denounced the sectarian violence and said their followers had played no organized role in it.

Shortages start to choke Tripoli as international sanctions take hold

The Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — Cars sat abandoned in miles-long fuel lines, motorists traded angry screams with soldiers guarding gas stations, and many shops were closed Sunday on what should have been a work day.

More and more, residents in the Libyan capital are feeling the sting of shortages from uprising-related disruptions of supplies.

The shortages are a dramatic sign of how Libya's nearly 3-month-old rebellion — and the resulting chaos — is affecting daily life in Moammar Gadhafi's stronghold and other western areas of Libya still under his rule. International sanctions have begun to bite, many supply routes are unstable, and there are shortages of skilled people in some sectors to keep the city running smoothly.

Yet the deprivations — however irksome — pale in comparison to the situation in the port city of Misrata, the only rebel stronghold in western Libya. It has been under siege by land for two months, with hundreds of civilians killed, and Gadhafi's forces are now trying to block access to the port that is Misrata's only lifeline.

In Tripoli, the shortages were obvious, even to Western reporters who may only leave their hotel with a government minder and guard. It is less clear what the eventual impact might be on Gadhafi's ability to rule.

An engineer based in Tripoli said Libyan TV blames the shortages on NATO, which is providing military muscle against Gadhafi, while average residents blame hardships on the regime. The engineer requested anonymity, saying he did not want to provoke the government.

Too much family time on the couch?

Borrow some creative ideas from this gym class to keep kids moving

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Summer break is just around the corner. How are you planning to get your children off the computer and playing outside?

In his Gold's Gym class, "Camo Kidz Bootcamp," instructor Chris Jones has found creative ways to get kids moving and keep them active. And it doesn't require fancy gym equipment, so you can take Jones' lead at home.

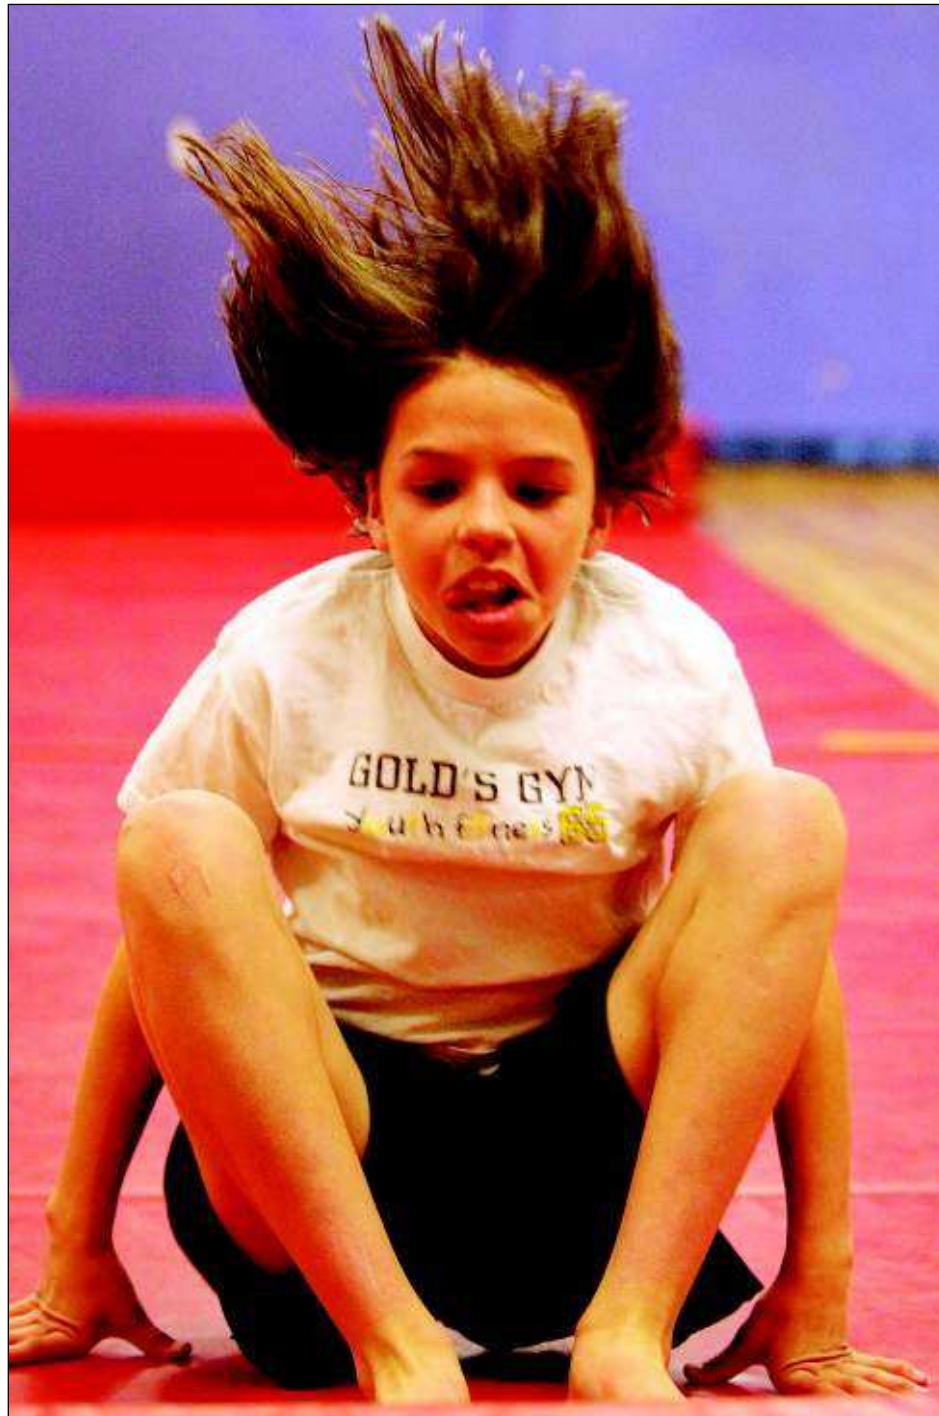

The key, Jones said, is keeping children engaged.

"When they don't notice that they're actually doing work, and they're playing and they're competing with each other, then they're just having fun," he said.

Creativity doesn't hurt, either. We talked to participants in Jones' April 19 class to see what their favorite activities were, then asked Jones for advice on helping kids get off the couch.

'CAMO KIDZ BOOTCAMP'

- When: 6:30-7:30 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays
- Where: Gold's Gym, 1471 Fillmore St., Twin Falls
- Cost: Free for Gold's Gym members, or $10 for a day pass. Open to ages 3-11.
- Call: 733-4653 for information and membership prices.

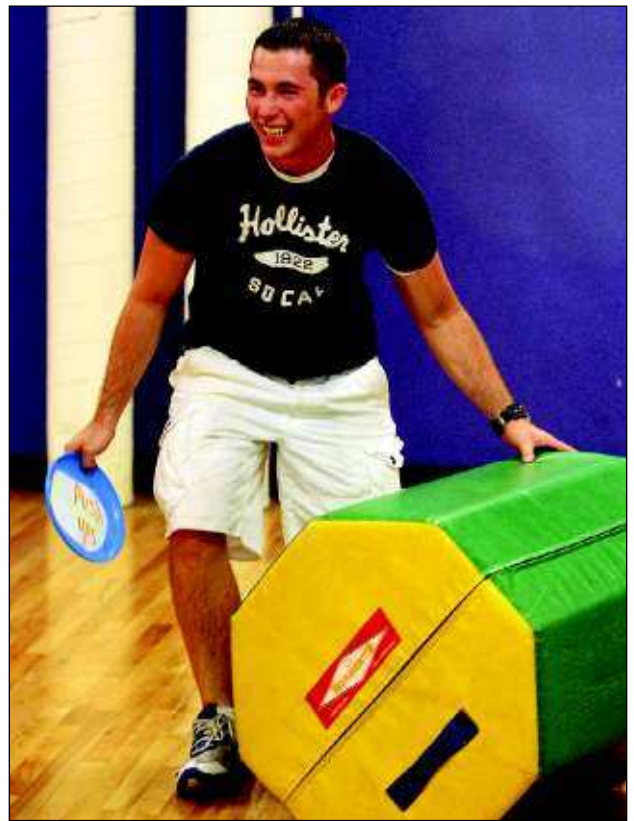

Kami Withers, 11, summersaults her way through an obstacle course during 'Camo Kidz Bootcamp' on a recent Tuesday evening at Gold's Gym in Twin Falls.

Kami Withers, 11

Favorite activity in class: Frisbee. "It's just fun to try to catch the Frisbee," she said. Sometimes, a simple exercise is all it takes. The important thing, Jones said, is the fun. "Once they start doing it, they don't even realize they're exercising," he said.

What parents can do: Bust out the baseball gloves or football and play catch. And feel free to throw it a bit over their heads to make them run for it.

Enna Ivanovic, 6

Favorite activities in class: "I don't know." But, she added, "they're fun." Her mother, Lily Ivanovic, says her daughter is a fan, and Jones said she comes to every class.

Jones makes sure the activities are easy for younger children like Enna while keeping older children engaged.

What parents can do: Think of activities all your children can do together, like riding bikes or playing kickball. Try to make the older kids push themselves without leaving the younger kids behind.

Jamison Perry, 7

Favorite activity in class: Army crawls and jumping over mats. For this class, Jones usually sticks with the bootcamp theme, but he also set up a super-fast version of musical chairs in which the children raced around the room, trying to stand on circles.

What parents can do: Even if kids like sit-ups — or, like Jamison, Army crawls — remember to change it up. "Kids don't really like to do the same thing over and over," Jones said.

Matthew Withers, 9

Favorite activity in class: Obstacle course. "They're kind of fun, and it gives you a lot of exercise," he said. Jones sets up the obstacle course with floor mats, making small walls to climb over and tunnels to crawl through. Timing the kids' runs through the course lets them compete against their previous times.

What parents can do: Look at what you have around the house, and imagine how it can be repurposed for an obstacle course. Let kids jump through inflatable tubes, then crawl under the patio table and jump rope for 30 seconds.

Ben Schenk, 9

Favorite activity in class: Dodgeball. "It's just fun. I just like dodging," he said. To keep the kids engaged, Jones lets them pick some of the activities. After a round of girl vs. boy tug-of-war, the victorious boys decided on dodgeball, which the girls won. Competition is another way Jones keeps things interesting. He makes sure teams are always evenly matched, with mixes of younger and older children, and gives incentives for winning, like choosing the next activity or winning prizes.

What parents can do: Ask your little ones what activity they prefer. To steer them, give them options. "We'll have two activities and we'll give them the option of picking one so they feel like they're in control," Jones said.

Jenny Schenk, 11

Favorite activity in class: Frisbee. "I like the words on them," she said. Jenny isn't talking about logos. Jones writes activities on the Frisbees, like sit-ups or push-ups. If a kid misses the Frisbee, she has to do the activity. Jones modifies well-known games to make them more physical. A game of Simon Says had the kids running in place, doing fast-paced high kicks and jumping up and down from sitting on the floor.

What parents can do: Get moving with your kids. Jones and his assistant, Matt Schenk, didn't do every activity, but they stood the whole time and engaged with the participants. During Simon Says, Matt did jumping jacks along with the children.

"When they don't notice that they're actually doing work, and they're playing and they're competing with each other, then they're just having fun."

Puzzled by prescription plans?

SHIBA offers free local guidance to new Medicare regulations

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Medicare has never been easy to navigate, and changes instituted this year through the Affordable Care Act have made it even more complicated.

But there's someone here to help.

SHIBA, the Senior Health Insurance Benefits Advisors, offers free, unbiased advice to Medicare recipients. The Idaho organization, a division of the state Department of Insurance, recently received about $380,000 from the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services. The grant money will help volunteers advise clients, like Donna Baird of Twin Falls, about the recent changes to their coverage.

"They do me a good job, I think," said Baird, talking about the volunteer who helped her figure out which prescription coverage to buy a few months ago. "She does my Medicare (part) D ... and she finds me the best policy, usually."

Among the changes this year is a partial closing of the infamous "doughnut hole" in that prescription coverage, a period of time when a recipient would have to pay for prescriptions out of pocket until the insurance kicked back in again.

"For this year, the drugs provided to a Medicare recipient during the time they're in the doughnut hole are provided to them at 50 percent, rather than the full price," said Jacquie Kennedy-Gooch, statewide SHIBA supervisor. In the first quarter of 2011, she said, that covered

WHERE TO GET SHIBA ADVICE

If you're in the Idaho Department of Insurance SHIBA Division's District 3 — that's Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka, Twin Falls and parts of Elmore counties — call (800) 488-5731 or 736-4713. The district office is at 1445 Fillmore St. in Twin Falls, but employees recommend calling in advance of a visit, as they often travel in other areas of the state. Volunteers are available for free, in-person, one-on-one consultations to help Medicare recipients select the plans or options most appropriate for individual situations. The state SHIBA division, at (800) 247-4422, connects callers to a Boise information clearinghouse. The website is www.doi.idaho.gov/shiba/shwelcome.aspx

$38 million worth of prescriptions nationally. "So $38 million did not come out of seniors' pockets during that first quarter, so that's a really huge direct benefit to Medicare recipients. Many of the folks who won't hit it

(their doughnut hole) until much later in the year don't know that, so we want to make sure they're handling their health care with that knowledge."

Trail running: Run away from stress and toward a fitter body

By Jeannine Stein
Los Angeles Times

Not all runners hit the streets for their workout. Trail runners take to the dirt, working legs and building cardio while getting a big dose of nature.
"All you know is that here are the mountains, and there's a deer and you're smelling the flowers and you don't think at all about your problems," says Stan Swartz, chairman of the 175-member L.A.-based Trail Runners Club.
Waxing rhapsodic about the sport isn't unusual in this crowd. "This is the most time-efficient and effective way of eliminating stress and refreshing your mind," says Elinor Fish, managing editor of Trail Runner magazine. "That is definitely a big draw of the sport."
An infusion of younger runners and more races has invigorated the sport in recent years. Although trail running requires no special skills, there is a bit of a learning curve, even for experienced runners. Trails are often hilly, making for slower but more heart- and lung-taxing workouts. Running on soft dirt puts less stress on joints, but traversing uneven terrain — even streams — can make for a wobbly gait and ups the ante for injuries. Fish recommends that beginners not only work on strengthening their legs but also add balance training on a wobble board or balance ball to increase coordination.
Legs do the bulk of the work — and what a workout it is, as hamstrings, quads, glutes and calf muscles engage on the ascents and descents. The core works to stabilize the body as the arms continuously pump.
Trail-running gear is straightforward. Fish recommends getting shoes specifically for trail running, with treads designed to better grip the ground and more reinforcement on top to provide extra stability for the foot.

Food addiction and drug addiction: Brain activity shows similarities, study finds

By William Weir
The Hartford Courant

A new study from the Yale Rudd Center for Food Policy & Obesity suggests that a chocolate milkshake and a line of cocaine might not be so different.
The study, published in the Archives of General Psychiatry, found that addictions to food and drugs result in similar activity in the brain.
"This past year we got interested in the idea of food addiction and the neural process," said lead researcher Ashley Gearhardt, a clinical psychology doctoral student at Yale University. "We just wanted to get down and deep into whether people really experience food addiction."
The study included 48 women with an average age of 21 who ranged from lean to obese. They took a test developed at the Rudd Center to measure food addiction, based on an established test for measuring drug addiction. The test includes statements such as, "I find that when I start eating certain foods, I end up eating much more than I had planned," and respondents rate how closely the statements match their own experiences.
With functional magnetic resonant imaging (fMRI), a brain imaging procedure, the researchers examined brain activity when the subjects were shown, and then drank, a chocolate milkshake. The results were compared with the subjects' brain's response to the anticipation and consumption of a tasteless solution.

What they found was that the brains of subjects who scored higher on the food addiction scale exhibited neural activity similar to that seen in drug addicts, with greater activity in brain regions responsible for cravings and less activity in the regions that curb urges. The researchers also found that the brain activity indicative of addiction was found in both lean and obese subjects who scored high in the test for food addiction.
Gearhardt says the findings suggest that certain triggers, such as advertisements for food, have not just a psychological, but a physiological, effect on certain people.
"We found that the high food addiction group showed low inhibition: They have less control in their consumption, and that's something we've seen also in addicts," she said.
That's especially significant, she said, when so many processed foods trigger strong reward responses in our brains.

Food allergies not tied to eczema for most

By Julie Deardorff
Chicago Tribune

Eczema is notoriously difficult to treat in children. The torturous dry-skin disease causes intense itching and sleeplessness, and sometimes parents try making dietary changes in addition or in place of conventional treatments.
For about one-third of eczema patients, specific foods — dairy, eggs, soy, wheat, peanuts, tree nuts and fish — can trigger flare-ups. But the majority of kids with eczema don't have any food allergies. Restricting or eliminating common foods from the diet, meanwhile, is often unnecessary and can pose a nutritional risk, according to a recent study in The Journal of Pediatrics.
"We're seeing a growing number of patients placed on strict, unproven food-elimination diets that have led to poor weight gain and malnutrition," said Dr. David Fleischer, an assistant professor of pediatrics at National Jewish Health in Denver and the study's lead author. While the overly restrictive diets are chosen for a variety of reasons, the most common cause appears to be an "overreliance on immunoassay (blood) tests," he said.
Blood and skin tests, which are often used to diagnose food allergies, can produce false positives, leading families down the wrong path. In Fleischer's study, his team gave the children the suspected allergenic food, a gold standard test known as the oral food challenge. In 86 percent of the cases where they performed oral food challenges, they were able to restore the food that had been eliminated from the child's diet.
"You can't just depend on a blood test to guide therapy," said Dr. Bill Berger, a professor of allergy and immunology at the University of California at Irvine. "There is a difference between showing clinical sensitivity on a test as opposed to an allergic reaction."
Eczema, also known as atopic dermatitis, first appears during infancy, usually on the face. As children get older, it can affect the hands, feet and creases inside the elbows and behind the knees. "The lesions are a result of the scratching," said Berger. "Certain areas of the body are more affected because they're easier to reach. If we don't control the itching, we never get the eczema under control."
That, of course, is the hard part. The dry and irritated skin begs to be scratched. Scratching, in turn, makes the skin more vulnerable to

DEALING WITH ECZEMA

Bathe in bleach. Patients with eczema often have staphylococcal infections on their skin, the bacteria that causes and worsens infection. Giving children diluted bleach baths significantly reduced the severity of their eczema and prevented flare-ups by killing the bacteria on the body arms and legs, according to researchers from Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine. Interestingly, the face, which was not submerged in the bath, did not improve. In the study, the children soaked in about half a cup of bleach in a full, standard-size tub, twice a week for about five to 10 minutes.
Try wet wrap therapy. For severe cases — eczema that covers the body — applying wet wraps after bathing may help stop the itch-scratch cycle. At National Jewish, patients are given topical steroid medicine after soaking: they then dress in a wet layer of clothing against the skin covered by a dry layer. The wet wraps, which have a cooling, anti-itch effect, are rewet or taken off when they start to dry out, said Dr. David Fleischer. For facial eczema, nurses will wrap the face with wet gauze and surgical netting. "The wet wraps can clear the infection without needing antibiotics," said Fleischer.

allergens, irritants, pollutants and infections caused by bacteria and viruses.
Though there's no cure, eczema can be controlled with anti-inflammatory treatment and often disappears before age 2. Parents whose children have eczema should brace themselves for further allergies: Of the approximately 15 million people in the U.S. who have eczema, about half will develop respiratory allergies.

SHIBA is also spreading the word that the open enrollment period for prescription plans — Medicare parts C and D and Advantage plans — has been moved up a month this year, and will be Oct. 15 through Dec. 7.
Another major difference in coverage this year is that annual wellness exams are now available, for Medicare recipients' physicians to review medical histories, ensure that lists of providers and prescriptions are current, take vital statistics, and discuss comprehensive approaches to their health care.
"It's essentially time with the provider to do all those history and physical exam pieces that weren't covered, because they were only allowed to bill for the treatment of a condition,"

Kennedy-Gooch said.
Although there are many sources of information about Medicare and its components, SHIBA prides itself on being not only comprehensive but unbiased.
"The amount of information from varying sources that seniors receive on what is a truly complicated subject matter leaves many seniors with inaccurate or incomplete understanding of their benefits," Kennedy-Gooch said.
Diane Stevens, executive director of Twin Falls' senior center, said SHIBA is critical to many of the center's clients.
"Knowing that SHIBA is absolutely objective and their volunteers are objective is a very great comfort to them; they can trust that organization," Stevens said.

SHIBA screens volunteers for potential conflicts of interest, she noted. "My husband would have liked to have been a volunteer for them, but he's not able to because he's an insurance agent."
But more volunteers are definitely needed, said Nora Wells, who coordinates volunteers and long-term care for the SHIBA region that covers Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka, Twin Falls and parts of Elmore counties. About 30 are currently trained, and Wells said the demand for advice is such that she would like double the number of volunteers.

She and the volunteers regularly go to senior centers, service provider meetings, health fairs, hospitals, soup kitchens and other locations where seniors get services to spread the word about SHIBA.
"The word is getting out more, and the people are fewer and fewer who have never heard of us," Wells said. She estimated that SHIBA has helped about 70 to 75 percent of seniors in her region, where Kennedy-Gooch said 28,248 seniors were assisted in 2010.
The grant also covers outreach to populations that have been difficult to reach, including those with low-income subsidies, disabilities, racial and ethnic diversity or limited proficiency in English.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF MAY 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your popularity and likability are on the upswing in the year ahead. Romance could enter your life or a key relationship could climb to higher levels of commitment in the next six to eight weeks. Take a vacation or escape on a romantic weekend built for two. Because you have your business savvy well in hand, August is a good month to apply for a new job or win kudos in business. In September, you will need to keep your nose pressed firmly to the grindstone and not take any chances, but when the testing period is over, you can hit your stride within the community as a leader.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't press forward against disapproval. You may end up frustrated by a lack of cooperation and creative blocks. If you are mentally or physically sluggish, you will find it difficult to begin something new.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): "Something is better than nothing" is not always true. You might find that your opinions about finances and investments are easily proved wrong, so this isn't a good time to test them by spending.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your brain is like a bed. It's a very relaxing place to be, but may get uncomfortable if everyone jumped in. You can't make up your mind, or your bed, when there is too much input. Postpone decisions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The demands of career and family might come into conflict in the week ahead. By keeping a cool head, remaining neutral and refusing to get involved with disputes you will be able to sidestep trouble.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hot heads hamper your style. You would like to be in conscious control of your destiny, but might clash with others if it seems they control you. Being prodded and pushed goes against the grain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Persuasion is personal. It is not enough to just listen to opinions; you need to understand the reasoning behind them. This should clue you in to what is preferable — and, most important, what to ignore.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A mule is very careful about where it puts its feet. Some people consider the mule to be stubborn, but it wants to be sure that where it is going is safe. Ignore people who try to whip you into action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Conflicting opinions and facts may freeze you in place. Inaction is better than action where your money or possessions are concerned. Don't sign contracts or make key decisions that affect the bottom line.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can't make a decision if you are still weighing all of your options. You may be torn between doing the right thing and the smart thing. Thrift and economy should be the abiding principles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be confronted by someone who suffers from the princess-and-the-pea syndrome. The princess of the children's story was proud of being picky and hypersensitive to small irritations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The yen for a yard sale is useless. An expert appraisal of a family heirloom or other personal property might prove disappointing. The assessment of value must be based on what a willing buyer will pay.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Unfold your uniqueness. You might find that money and fame elude you, or that material gains are scarce, but by being yourself and refusing to bow to conventions you can gain respect from your peers.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

*"When I consider how my life is spent,
I hardly ever repent."*
— Ogden Nash

This week's deals were selected from past Cavendish tournaments, to highlight the current tournament being run this week in Las Vegas.

In today's three no-trump contract, I was declarer, playing with my old friend Seymon Deutsch. I received a club lead to the six and eight, which I won in hand to advance the spade jack, covered all around. Now a spade back to the 10 and king allowed West to exit with a third spade.

I won in hand and played a club to the 10 and jack, East returning a heart to West's 10 and dummy's king. I now cashed the club ace-king and the fourth club, both defenders pitching diamonds, then came to hand with the fourth spade.

On this trick West reduced to the doubleton heart ace and diamond king-doubleton while East was squeezed. If he came down to two hearts and two diamonds, I would exit with a heart and collect two diamonds in the end.

Accordingly, when East bared his diamond jack, I led the diamond queen out of my hand to pin the jack and make my contract. Should West have worked out on his partner's early heart switch to rise with the ace and return the suit? That would have broken up the endplay. If I won the fourth spade in hand, I would have no heart to exit with. Equally, if I won the fourth spade in dummy, East could safely come down to just one diamond, since there are no entries to South's hand for the diamond finesse.

ANSWER: Declarer appears to have a bad four-card trump suit or perhaps only three hearts. Since it is easy to imagine declarer scrambling trump tricks by ruffing in both hands, a trump lead feels right to me. I hope to get in with the diamond king to play trumps again, if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Derek," confessed to me that while he was out with friends on a work-related trip, he drank too much and danced with and kissed another woman. He didn't tell me right away. He planned to tell me sometime in the future, but his conscience bothered him, so he told me five days later.

I'm at a loss as to what to do. We have a small child. Derek is a good man, but he has violated my trust. I can't forget and I don't know if I can forgive. We've had our ups and downs, and the past year has been particularly stressful.

When he returned from the trip, he was the perfect husband – loving, attentive, devoted – exactly what I had been missing. To find out that what was behind this change in his behavior was guilt is devastating. I'm not sure I want to be with him anymore. Am I overreacting?

— THROWN IN MARYLAND

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR THROWN: Yes – but that doesn't mean you should ignore what happened. Before you throw away what could be a perfectly good marriage, it's important you and Derek work through what caused those "ups and downs" that led to what was missing in your relationship. A marriage counselor could be very helpful right now. If Derek didn't love you and want to make things right, he wouldn't have told you about what he did. For that, I respect him, and so should you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are recently retired. We've happily settled into a morning routine of breakfast, reading the paper and exercising. Some days we don't bother to shower and dress until late morning. A friend, "Herb," who is also retired, frequently drops by unannounced between 8 a.m. and noon. You'd think that after catching me still in my robe and my husband in sweaty workout clothes, Herb would get the message that it's not convenient to visit, but he continues. I see no way of stopping this short of being blunt, but I don't want to hurt his feelings. We see him and his wife at many social events.

My question is, what's the etiquette regarding calling ahead to let someone know you would like to stop by? Maybe if you answer this in the newspaper, Herb will see it and recognize himself. We need help!

— FRUSTRATED IN BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: And what if Herb doesn't see the column today? It has been known to happen with even the most devoted Dear Abby readers. There is nothing hurtful or rude about telling someone who drops by when you're not presentable that you're embarrassed to be "caught" that way, and to please call before coming over to ask if it's convenient. If necessary, say YOU read it in my column.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter "Celia" is 32 and single. She's beautiful, intelligent, hardworking and a great cook – but she can't keep a boyfriend! Celia has dated a lot of men and has no problem attracting them, but she does have a problem keeping them. After a few dates, they don't want to go out with her anymore. I don't know why. Have you any ideas?

— CONCERNED ABOUT MY GIRL IN KENTUCKY

DEAR CONCERNED: Is Celia as anxious about her single status as you are? If so, few things chase a man off faster than a woman who's looking for a commitment too quickly. However, having never met or spoken with your daughter, I can't say what may be causing the men in her life to head for the door. Perhaps she should ask some of her friends for some honest feedback.
