New route took Elko family to stranded van in canyon

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Chad Herman, his wife and father-in-law almost didn't find Rita Chretien, a Canadian woman who had been stranded in the Nevada mountains for 48 days.

They were in the Bruneau Canyon in Elko County, Nev., on Friday were riding ATVs and hunting for shed elk antlers. Herman said he meant to take one road in the remote wilderness, but his father-in-law, who led the group, took the opposite one.

Then the three — Herman, Whitney Sill Herman and Troy Sill, all from Elko, Nev. — found a 2000 Chevrolet Astro van. On the dry dirt, it almost looked like it belonged to campers, Herman said. But when they came closer, he saw the sign in the window that said "stuck" and the brightly colored blankets covering parts of the van. His father-in-law hollered to ask if anyone inside was OK and Chretien, 56, popped up.

called her saying. "I need some help."

She had been out there since March 19, when she and her husband became stranded after taking a wrong turn and getting stuck. She had been surviving on melted snow and creekwater, with a tablespoon of trail mix, a single hard candy and a fish oil pill a day for much of the ordeal. Herman said she had no food when they found her.

Herman's party gave her water and some jerky they brought on their day trip. Herman said it sounded like Chretien started to cry without tears — dehydration stole those away, he said. While she was lucid and relatively well-kept, she was still "in pretty bad shape," Herman said.

Rita Chretien is in "extremely high" spirits after her 48-day survival ordeal in the northern Nevada wilderness, her doctors at a Twin Falls hospital said Monday.

Meanwhile, searchers will attempt again today to locate any trace of her husband, Albert, after attempting to recreate his route on Monday.

Chretien, 56, of Penticton, British Columbia, is eating solid food at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. Until her rescue Friday, she survived for nearly seven weeks on rations of trail mix, fish oil pills, hard candy, melting snow and river water after the van she and her husband, 59-year-old Albert, became stuck off a logging road in northern Elko County, Nev.

On Monday, about 25 searchers on foot, horseback and ATVs attempted to follow the route Albert Chretien took when he left his wife on March 22 to seek help and reach Nevada Highway 225, nearly 10 miles west of

As state sorts out tech spending, school districts ponder how they'll keep gadgets running

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Changes to Idaho public education started their dash from the Statehouse a few weeks ago, racing into school districts with a fury and bringing with them a mandate to implement classroom technology in new and bigger ways.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's "Students Come First" plan brings with it a major focus on inserting more technology into schools, to create what Luna calls a more "vibrant and engaging" classroom.

In the next four years, $80 million in state funding will be marked for a wide array of technologies and the professional development to implement them.

Tasked with purchasing more laptop computers, interactive whiteboards and other tech devices, some school officials wonder how they'll pay for support staff to keep the gadgets running daily, especially as funding for staff positions is reduced to pay for Luna's reforms.

Murtaugh School District Superintendent Michele Capps said her district has one part-time tech position whose other roles also include maintenance man.

Twin Falls School District Information Technology Coordinator Brett Keller works in 'The Bunker,' the district's Twin Falls tech-support center, on Thursday. Over the next four years, the state will spend $80 million to implement classroom technology under Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's 'Students Come First' education reform plan.

Technology investment timeline

Here's a breakdown of how $80 million of state funding for school technology funding will be allocated in the coming four years:

	Fiscal 2012	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2015
High school wireless Internet	$1 million	$2 million	$2 million	$2 million
Classroom technology	$9 million	$8 million	$5 million	$5 million
Learning resources	$0	$0	$4 million	$4 million
Professional development	$3 million	$3 million	$2 million	$2 million
Individual computing devices	$0	$3 million	$11 million	$14 million

Want to be part of Luna's tech task force?

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna is forming a task force to guide the implementation of technology components of his "Students Come First" law. The task force must consist of at least 28 members, 17 of whom Luna appoints. Seven new positions have been added to the list, including three for school board trustees, two for parents and two at-large members. The State Department of Education will accept applications through Friday. To learn more, visit www.sde.idaho.gov/site/studentsComeFirst/tech.htm.

Adams gets 3 years for vehicular manslaughter

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

JEROME — Irwin Adams will spend at least three years in state prison for causing the death of another man.

Jerome County 5th District Judge John Butler sentenced Adams for the crime of vehicular manslaughter Monday, giving the 21-year-old Jerome man a 10-year prison term with the possibility for parole in three years. Butler also levied a $5,000 fine and suspended Adams' driver's license for five years upon his release.

Adams made a brief statement prior to hearing his fate. "I get called names. I get called a murderer," he said. "I apologize for the loss to the Larsen family."

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer announced Monday she will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn a ruling that put the most controversial parts of the state's immigration enforcement law on hold.

The planned appeal to the high court comes after Brewer lost an initial appeal April 11, when a three-judge panel of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals refused to reverse a lower court's order that prevented key parts of the law from being enforced. » Main 4

Twin Falls City Council sets path for pool management search

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council has extended the deadline for companies to apply to run the city pool, albeit with some concern for if the pool can stay open at the end of the process.

Council members on Monday spent about an hour debating the timeline for the submission process, ultimately settling on one that predicts needing the month of August to negotiate a final contract with a pool management company and receive final approval. The current contract with the YMCA expires Sept. 1.

If negotiations run long, it could leave a new company with only four days to transition into managing the pool.

The council was concerned a three-week application process suggested by city staff wouldn't give companies enough time to respond. It ultimately settled on extending that to 60 days, with an emphasis on working quickly to complete the process afterward.

The 60-day application period will start Thursday. Mayor Don Hall and Councilmen Will Kezele and Trip Craig will sit on the nine-person search committee, rounding it out with one citizen-at-large pick each and three members of the city's Parks and Recreation Commission.

In other business:

- The council gave the OK for a grant-funded $12,000 revamp of the Warehouse Historic District's design guidelines with the stipulation the council has a chance to provide guidance on drafts of the guidelines. Councilmen Lance Clow and Trip Craig said they didn't want the final product to need final council approval with only days left on the grant to complete it.

- Members also approved a new collective bargaining agreement with the Twin Falls firefighters' union to allow firefighters to opt out of Social Security and put that money instead into a private retirement account. All Idaho firefighters, union and nonunion, will vote on making that change in the future.

causing the death of his friend Allen Larsen after Adams crashed a vehicle he drove and in which Larsen was a passenger on Oct. 24, 2009. The wreck occurred approximately two miles west of Jerome. The police report claimed that Adams was driving 108 mph in a 50 mph zone.

A jury convicted Adams in March after a three-day trial, during which Adams' defense claimed he and Larsen were being chased by another car. Neither the jury nor the judge bought the story, which Butler reiterated Monday before pronouncing the sentence.

"Your version has to be a fabrication," Butler said, noting that the defense's own crash reconstruction expert never testified at trial. Butler's assumption is that the results didn't add up to the details of Adams' story.

Butler further speculated why the story didn't hold up, adding "I believe you were chasing someone else. You know who it was, and you have yet to admit this."

However, the sentence was less than what Jerome County Deputy Prosecutor Sandra Bamberg sought: 10 years prison with four years fixed, a $10,000 fine and a lifetime license suspension. Defense counsel Stacy Gosnell-Taylor argued for either probation or a retained-jurisdiction program.

T.F. man accused of shooting at man, woman

Times-News

A 30-year-old Twin Falls man is in jail on $100,000 bond, charged with two counts of aggravated assault with a gun.

Brandon Rosenberg was arrested early Monday morning after Twin Falls police took a report of shots fired on Ninth Avenue East.

According to the police report, Officer Jerry Trump arrived at a residence at 1953 Ninth Ave. E. to find three adults and two pistols. A man identified as Robert Bickel told police he feared that Rosenberg was going to shoot himself, Bickel and a female with a .40 caliber pistol, as Rosenberg had put the gun under his chin before firing rounds into the yard.

Bickel was able to retrieve a second gun from the house, which resulted in a fight between the men. The report states that Rosenberg attempted to shoot Bickel but missed. Rosenberg left to the outside and, for reasons unexplained, collapsed on the deck, where Bickel and the female confiscated the gun he held.

In addition to the adults, police reported finding three children in the house.

Rosenburg awaits a May 20 preliminary hearing.

Sentencing still pending for Osterhoudt

Franklin W. Osterhoudt has yet to be sentenced for his multiple felony convictions on four 2007 crimes, and there is still no date set. Twin Falls County 5th District Judge G. Richard Bevan heard arguments on Monday regarding evidence presented at the Buhl man's pending sentencing for a conviction of rape, incest and two counts of a lewd conduct with a minor. The court also awaits the completion of a transcript, which is a large part of why Bevan has not scheduled a date for sentencing.

Osterhoudt, 45, was convicted of the crimes in February, during his third trial for them. The first two ended in a hung jury and an overturned conviction, respectively.

Jury convicts Hensdell

A Jerome County jury convicted Lisa Hensdell on Friday for the crimes of leaving the scene of an injury accident, inattentive driving and driving without privileges.

Hensdell, 44, of Hazelton, was accused of hitting a 14-year-old boy with her car and leaving him in a ditch alongside Idaho Highway 25 last July.

She faces a June 27 sentencing in Jerome County 5th District Court. The maximum punishment for felony leaving the scene is five years and $5,000, while the punishment for misdemeanor inattentive driving is 90 days in jail and a $300 fine. Driving without privileges, a misdemeanor, is punishable by up to six months in jail, a $1,000 fine and an additional license suspension of six months.

Herman said he couldn't believe she had been out in the northern Nevada wilderness since March. She must have meant April, he thought. No one could survive out there this long, not in the cold.

"Not out there. Not at that time of year," he said.

Chretien told them that her husband, 59-year-old Albert, had left for help some time ago. She worried he was dead, but "kept saying he was a fighter," Herman recalled.

Albert Chretien hasn't been seen since he left the van on March 22. Elko County sheriff's deputies continue to search for him.

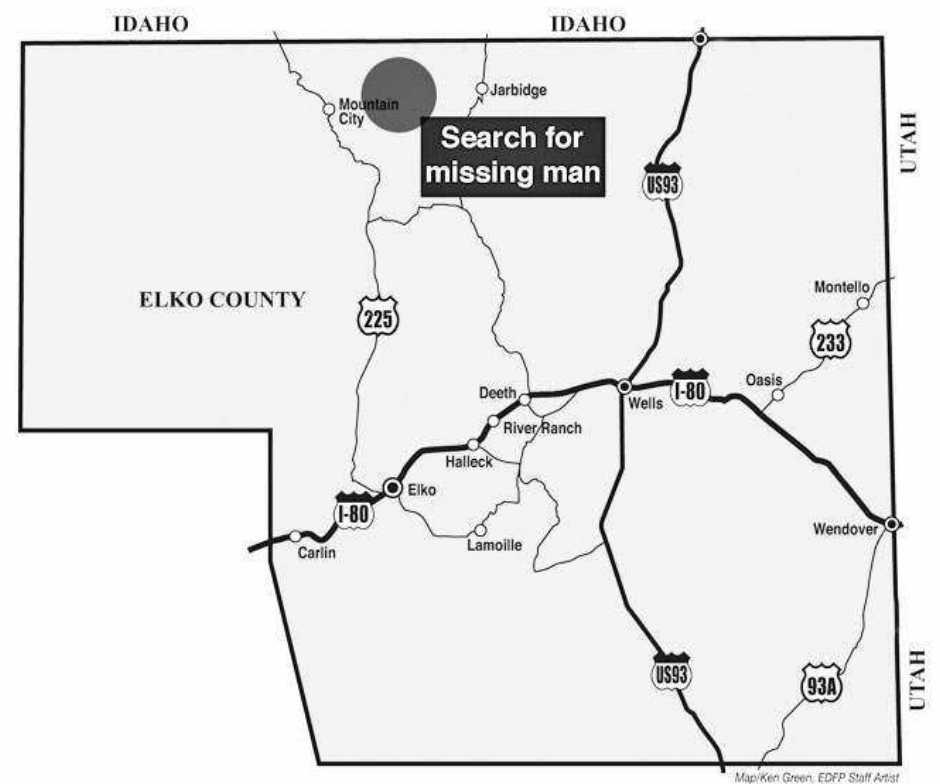

Herman said he was sure his party was the first to make it far enough into the canyon this year to find the Chretiens' van. Their ATVs couldn't make it over some of the washed-out roads, and they needed to plow through snowdrifts and shovel rocks to make it through.

Upon finding Rita Chretien, the group's antler hunt became a mission to help. They drove nine miles, to the nearest ranch they knew of, to use the phone. When the air ambulance arrived, they rode their ATVs to guide it to Chretien, Herman said. When they arrived, he said it looked like Chretien had caught a burst of adrenaline and readied herself for the flight.

The actions of Herman's party have led some to call them heroes.

"We're not that by any means," Herman said. "We were just fortunate to take the right road this weekend."

It's a road his group passed up in a camping trip just a month prior, he said. Though they passed up the fork the Chretiens followed, for the

GPS "shortcut" may have led to stranding

ELKO, Nev. — A wrong turn while using a GPS device to find a shortcut may have led to a Canadian couple's van being stranded for seven weeks in the hills of northern Nevada.

Chad Herman of Elko, Nev., who called authorities Friday after his antler-hunting party discovered the van, said he spoke with Rita Chretien while waiting for about half an hour for a rescue helicopter to arrive.

Herman said Chretien told him that she and her husband were driving in southern Idaho and looking for a shortcut to Jackpot, Nev., which lies on the far side of the Jarbidge Wilderness.

At Grasmere, Idaho, their GPS unit showed a road heading south from the main highway through the backcountry. The couple drove through the old Rowland town site in Nevada, but instead of turning to cross the Diamond A Desert toward Jarbidge, they turned south toward the Bruneau River.

Road maps show a fork in the road about five miles south of the Nevada border.

Herman said when the Chretiens realized they were going the wrong way, they attempted to turn around. That's when their van got stuck in the mud.

camping trip they traveled the same road on the Idaho side of the mountains that led to where the couple became stuck — it was the only one passable at that point.

"It kind of bothers us, actually," Herman said. "We were in a mile, mile and a half, two times that weekend."

He said he hasn't spoken with the Chretien family or anyone else about the rescue at this point — he and his family weren't looking for a reward, just to help, he said.

"We're just glad we could help her, and our prayers are with her and her family," Herman said.

where their van became stuck.

There were no leads at the conclusion of the search Monday, which began at 6:30 a.m. from a command station four miles south of Mountain City, Nev., said Elko County Sheriff's Lt. Marvin Morton. However, he said authorities did receive information they are working on.

He said a helicopter dropped off a search team at the vehicle site Monday morning to search the perimeter and look for evidence. They mostly searched south and west of the vehicle in a 10-mile arc, and the helicopter searched from the air until heavy clouds made that difficult in the late morning.

Additional personnel from the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service, and both the Elko County Sheriff's Office and Search and Rescue conducted a ground search at Meadow Creek Road and the adjacent roads to Meadow Creek for the majority of the afternoon, Morton said.

From the command center, he said personnel could go as far as 15 miles.

"The terrain is terribly rough. We use ATVs to get to a point and you get off and walk," Morton said, noting searchers on horseback and snowmobiles had trouble due to the mix of snowdrifts and bare terrain.

Tracks may be hard to find, as several rain and snowstorms have moved through the area since the Chretiens became stuck on March 19.

Morton anticipated more agencies will participate in the search today, attempting to go in from Grasmere, Idaho, to get closer to the Chretiens' van.

He said the search could carry on for at least three days.

"I'm just prepared for three days right now and I have other agencies asking if they can come and assist, so I will bring those people," Morton said. "So, we will go for a while. I don't know when the sheriff will call it, and weather dictates part of that."

In Twin Falls, St. Luke's doctors said that while Rita Chretien's health continued to improve to the point that she is eating solid food, she would not be released from the hospital on Monday.

Chretien nearly starved to death during her seven-week ordeal, reportedly losing 20 to 30 pounds in what doctors called a life-threatening situation.

Doctors say she now has freedom of meal choice, and has been eating yogurt and dairy products. She told doctors she prefers rice over potatoes and salads, and will have her choice of six small, regular meals per day.

She also continues physical therapy, according to a release from the hospital. While Rita Chretien and her family have declined additional media interviews, daily updates on her condition will be posted at www.stlukesonline.org, hospital officials say.

Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency extends consultant's contract

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency agreed to pay $6,000 for the exclusive right to purchase a downtown building within 90 days, and also gave a six-month contract extension to the consultant who brokered the deal.

Boise-based developer Mark Rivers will work for the URA for at least another six months, for a total cost of $30,000 plus applicable expenses. His four-month contract, also at $5,000 a month, just expired.

"I think we're off to a pretty good start," Rivers said, adding that "It's only been four months and we're trying to overcome decades of conditions."

"It's only been four months and we're trying to overcome decades of conditions."

— Mark Rivers, Boise-based developer

At the meeting, he said he is working on an outreach program to bring Magic Valley professional offices into downtown Twin Falls, adding that he persuaded a "significant Idaho company" to look at downtown properties. He also cited the progress of updating downtown kiosks and his work with Downtown Alive, which just hosted its first downtown market.

Rivers also said the URA now has a building to work on redeveloping.

He said the $6,000 the URA board voted to spend on the purchase right is a prudent way for the agency to be proactive. He wouldn't name possible uses for the Banner Furniture building at 201 Main Ave. S., only saying "the range is limitless."

The 90-day exclusive purchase agreement doesn't obligate the board to buy the building, but allows Rivers to find possible redevelopment options or new uses for it without fear that it will be sold or leased for a use that could be "counterproductive to the revitalization of downtown," according to a URA staff report.

The URA also has the option to broker a deal with a third party that it deems favorable for downtown redevelopment. The board voted 5-0 to approve the agreement, with member Cindy Bond absent and Leon Smith abstaining because he is friends with the building's owner.

In other business, the board unanimously approved spending $23,000 of the remaining cash from the now-defunct downtown Business Improvement District for facade improvements to downtown businesses. About $31,000 remains in the account for facade work, according to the city staff report.

Business and building owners looking for matching funds of up to $10,000 for facade work can contact URA Executive Director Melinda Anderson to apply.

Tech

"It's a huge concern. If we had a lot of money coming to the district for all of this, OK, but we aren't going to get more tech staff," Capps said. "This is a huge reform covering all bases, not just the tech piece. There is so much to do. We just take it one day at a time, but it is overwhelming."

Capps said she appreciates technology, as long as it's being utilized correctly by teachers who have appropriate training.

Luna's plan will spend $3 million on professional development for the tech reforms, including how to use the new tools to teach, in both fiscal 2012 and 2013. That figure will reduce to $2 million in each of the following two years.

When mobile computing devices begin to enter the hands of Idaho high school student in fiscal 2013, Luna has said tech support services will come from the gadgets' providers — each district will purchase a "service" rather than a product.

But what of the $22 million in state-funded classroom technology that will already be in place by then? It will come in the form of interactive student response systems, LCD projectors, interactive whiteboards and other tools. And the first $8 million wave of funding is only months away from hitting school districts.

Luna spokeswoman Melissa McGrath said the state is still looking at how that money will be distributed.

McGrath said the department is trying to work with potential technology vendors to provide professional development and tech support for products schools will purchase, but acknowledged that most of the technology can't be bought in Idaho. That means most vendor-provided tech support will likely be provided online or through out-of-state call centers.

Online focus groups and webinars will be conducted in late May and early June to discuss Idaho's regional needs and ways technology funding will be used. McGrath said wireless Internet will start to be implemented into schools in the fall, and other current unknowns will be sorted out by the technology task force that is still now being assembled.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he's excited for the influx of school technology, adding that his district's infrastructure is set up to continue growing with technology changes. The district's six-member tech staff works in a variety of areas to cover 18 locations and 3,300 computers in Twin Falls.

District Information Technology Coordinator Brett Keller said providing teachers with more knowledge will be key to keeping the new enhancements running properly.

"We really like to encourage all the staff to learn more," Keller said, adding that his department pays for teachers to take technology classes at the College of Southern Idaho or Idaho State University. "It really reduces the needs if they are knowledgeable."

But the leaders of some south-central Idaho school districts say making the most out of the additional technology will be a challenge.

Jerome School District's two-person tech staff supports five schools, and Superintendent Dale Layne said he lacks the funding for additional support staff.

Buhl School District only has one position for fixing and troubleshooting the current technology for its three schools. District chief Byron Stutzman said he hopes a portion of state tech funding will be utilized for labor.

"Adding technology can be a valuable tool, but it takes money to run technology, and we are pretty strapped," he said. "I just hope they understand that we will need to spend some of that money on tech support. I think he (Buhl's technology director) is as busy as he can be right now."

Kimberly School District Superintendent Kathleen Noh said her teachers already use a lot of technology in their classrooms, ranging from computer-linked pointing devices to laptops that students can check out. She said her district hired another person to its tech team last year, and even with budget cuts, laying off any part of the staff is unlikely.

"The teachers have less time for planning and they have to teach more kids, but we couldn't cut the tech support," she said. "I would welcome more technology if it wasn't at the expense of teachers."

"Kids get plenty of screen time these days. What they need are more people in their lives."

Conservationists question Columbia Basin dam plan

By Nigel Duara and Jeff Barnard
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — In what is likely the final major hearing before a federal judge decides what must be done to make Columbia River dams safe for salmon, lawyers argued Monday over just how many salmon have to come back and whether that satisfies the Endangered Species Act.

The answer is difficult, because the numbers vary widely from year to year based on how much food is available in the ocean, no matter how many billions of dollars are spent making dams less lethal to fish.

The hearing in an overflowing Portland, Ore., courtroom was perhaps the final argument in a fight that has raged since 2001 over what is called a biological opinion — a formal review required by the Endangered Species Act as part of the effort to reduce the harm federal projects such as dams cause protected wildlife such as salmon.

U.S. District Court Judge James Redden previously shot down two Bush administration plans for restoring salmon runs and is now considering whether minor improvements offered by the Obama administration giving biologists more flexibility to react to problems are enough to make the plan work.

The battle comes down to a choice between cheap and abundant power provided by hydroelectric dams on the Columbia and Snake rivers in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, and the many salmon the dams kill as the young fish migrate to the ocean and swim upstream as adults to spawn.

The more water that goes through the dam turbines, the cheaper the electricity to farmers and electric ratepayers. When more water is allowed to spill over the tops of the dams, more salmon survive.

The central argument by conservationists is that the current plan sets too low a bar for salmon survival.

"The government tries to work its way around the problem," said attorney Todd True of the conservation group Earthjustice. "But there is a fatal disconnect in the argument" that growing salmon population numbers equals recovery.

Government attorneys countered that the plan is enough to assure salmon survive, and conservationists are missing the point.

The numbers of salmon fluctuate year to year, said U.S. Justice Department lawyer Colby Howell, and it's impossible to know whether the numbers the court is using represent a valid picture of what salmon populations should look like.

Ariz. taking immigration law to Supreme Court

Los Angeles Times

DENVER — Arizona's controversial immigration law is headed to the Supreme Court, officials announced Monday.

Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer and Attorney General Tom Horne said they would go directly to the nation's top court to appeal a ruling by a three-judge panel of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals that the law is unconstitutional. In doing so, Arizona's elected officials, both Republicans, are bypassing the full 9th Circuit.

"The American people have clearly sided with Arizona on the righteousness of Senate Bill 1070," Brewer said at a Phoenix news conference.

Polls have shown wide support for the law, although milder versions of it have been shot down in several state legislatures this year. On Tuesday, a watered-down version goes into effect in Utah, to date the only state to have enacted a similar measure.

The Obama administration sued to block the implementation of the Arizona law, known as SB 1070. Most of it was put on hold by a federal judge in Phoenix last year, who found it infringed on the federal government's ability to regulate immigration.

The law requires police to investigate the status of people they stop and also think are illegal immigrants. It also makes it a crime to lack immigration paperwork in Arizona.

Ruth Doris Black

April 30, 1927-May 7, 2011

RUPERT — Ruth Doris Black, 84, of Rupert, passed away Saturday, May 7, 2011, at Countryside Care and Rehabilitation in Rupert with her family by her side.

Ruth was born April 30, 1927, in Carlton, Neb., to Diederick and Elsie Lipker Kapperman. She was educated in Davenport, Neb., in a one-room school, graduating at 17. She married William B. Gardiner in 1947, and to this union four children were born.

They moved to Idaho in 1960, and were divorced later. Ruth married William Black in 1967. Ruth worked most of her life for local optometrists: Dr. Bonde, Dr.

Head, Dr. Williams and Dr. Slusser.

She is survived by her sons, Larry (Jennifer) Gardiner of Gilbert, Ariz., and Dan (Sandra) Gardiner of Rupert; daughter, Cheryl Andersen of Rupert; and numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband, Bill Black; one son, Bill A. Gardiner; her parents; two sisters; three brothers; and a grandson.

The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday, May 11, at Trinity Lutheran Church, Pastor Joel Pike officiating. Burial will follow at Rupert Cemetery. The viewing will be an hour before the service.

James Richard Carmichael Sr.

July 7, 1932-May 7, 2011

James (Jim) Richard Carmichael Sr., aka, Honey, Dad and Poppa.

Born July 7, 1932, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Jim went home to His Lord and Savior on Saturday, May 7, 2011. He passed away at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, Idaho, as a result of a stroke.

Jim is survived by his loving wife of 39 years and 11 months, Johanna Anna Carmichael; and his sons, Bob of California, Brian of California, Randy of Colorado, James Jr. of Boise, Mark of Kimberly, Joel of Hawaii, Duane of Kimberly and Jason of North Carolina, and their wives. Jim had 21 grandchildren, and 12 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his son, Jimmy Okarma; daughter-in-law, Terry Okarma; and grandson, Brandon Okarma.

Jim enjoyed coin collecting and writing his interpretations of all biblical scriptures. He loved to write! He taught a woman's Bible study at Valley Christian Church for many years. He mentored numerous boys through Scouting in Kimberly. Over the years, and through several community agencies, Jim lent his compassion and experience to help those in need. His sense of humor and love for his family will be greatly missed. We will see you again, Honey, Dad, Poppa!

Cremation will be at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home in Twin Falls. A private family memorial will be held at a later date. The family asks that no flowers be sent.

Thomas G. Nelson

Nov. 14, 1936-May 4, 2011

BOISE — Tom Nelson died peacefully in his home surrounded by loved ones Wednesday, May 4th, 2011.

Tom was born in Idaho Falls on Nov. 14, 1936, to Donald and Margaret Nelson. He attended public schools in Idaho Falls, graduating from Idaho Falls High School in 1955. Tom attended the University of Idaho, where he was a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity and received his LL.B. in 1962. To help put himself through college, Tom worked alongside his father building roads in Idaho. Tom married Ella Lee McPherson in April of 1960 and they had two sons. He and Ella later divorced. Tom extended his family in 1982 when he married Sharon Cutler who has two beautiful children.

Tom served in the Idaho Air National Guard and U.S. Army Reserve from 1962 to 1968. He worked in Boise as an assistant attorney general for criminal affairs from 1963 to 1965. In 1965, Tom joined Parry, Robertson, Daly and Larsen in Twin Falls and founded the law firm Nelson, Rosholt, Tolman and Tucker in 1979. In 1990, Tom was confirmed by the U.S. Senate as a judge in the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. He was a member of many professional associations, including president of the Idaho State Bar from 1974 to 1975. Also active in the community, Tom served on the Twin Falls City Council and as a director of the local United Way. He chaired citizen committees that established a temporary shelter for non-delinquent children and a facility providing special services to children with developmental disabilities. During the course of his legal career, Tom never stopped thinking and learning, which contributed to his ability to put aside preconceived notions and come to reasoned conclusions.

Throughout his life, Tom cherished the outdoors. He was an avid photographer and whitewater rafter. The majesty of the Sawtooth Mountains continually awed him, and he most enjoyed them when sharing the view with Sharon, his friends and his family. Tom was absolutely dedicated to his blessed family and friends. He is survived by his loving and devoted wife of nearly 30 years, Sharon Nelson; his sister, Nancy Porter; his sons, Kyle and Hal; his stepson, Curt Cutler; and his stepdaughter, Carrie Muscant. He has four adoring grandsons, Nicholas Nelson, Zachary and Jacob Muscant, and Calvin Nelson.

Tom's charm, his incisive intelligence, dedication, his sense of humor, his passion for his family, and his companionship will be sorely missed.

A memorial service for Tom will be sponsored by the U.S. 9th Circuit Court in Boise in August. Please email or call Hal Nelson at htnelson@yahoo.com or (909) 542-8401 to be notified of the date of the service.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests contributions to the Genesis World Mission, 215 W. 35th St., Boise, ID 83714, or to the Idaho Human Rights Education Center, 777 S. Eighth St., Boise, ID 83702.

Gingrich launches bid for president

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Newt Gingrich, the House speaker who led a national GOP resurgence in the 1990s before facing ethics questions and resigning, is running for president.

Gingrich's announcement, made on social networking websites Monday, came after months of public flirting with a bid. He enters a slow-to-form GOP presidential field that has left some Republicans craving more options as they search for a nominee strong enough to credibly challenge President Barack Obama.

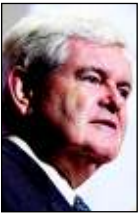

The former Georgia congressman, well-known to most Republicans, brings to the race a years-in-the-making political machine with ties to early nominating states as well as a network of supporters and donors. But his personal baggage — he's acknowledged marital infidelity and has had two divorces — could hinder his chances of winning the party's presidential nomination more than a decade after leaving the House.

Still, he spoke confidently of wide support.

"I have been humbled by all the encouragement you have given me to run," Gingrich said in a Facebook posting that urged supporters to watch Fox News Channel on Wednesday. "I will be on to talk about my run for president of the United States."

Gingrich, 67, has spent months raising money, assembling a campaign team and visiting early primary-season states. He already has opened a headquarters in a suburb of Atlanta, and he will make his first speech as a candidate on Friday to the Georgia Republican Party Convention.

He is trying to position himself in the race as a policy heavyweight who used his time in Congress to overhaul welfare, balance the federal budget and cut taxes.

Memphis music landmarks spared from river flooding

By Adrian Sainz and Matt Sedensky
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The Mississippi River rose Monday to levels not seen in Memphis since the 1930s, swamping homes in low-lying neighborhoods and driving hundreds of people from their homes. But officials were confident the levees would protect the city's world-famous musical landmarks, including Graceland and Beale Street, and that no new areas would have any serious flooding.

As residents in the Home of the Blues waited for the river to crest as early as Monday night at a projected mark just inches short of the record set in 1937, officials downstream in Louisiana began evacuating prisoners from the state's toughest penitentiary and opened floodgates to relieve pressure on levees outside of New Orleans.

In Memphis, authorities have gone door-to-door to 1,300 homes over the past few days to warn people to clear out, but they were already starting to talk about a labor-intensive clean up, signaling the worst was likely over.

"Where the water is today, is where the water is going to be," Cory Williams, chief of geotechnical engineering for the Army Corps of Engineers in Memphis, told The Associated Press.

Exactly how many people heeded the warnings was not immediately clear, but more than 300 people were staying in shelters, and police stepped up patrols in evacuated areas to prevent looting.

and their three children were among 175 people staying in a gymnasium at the Hope Presbyterian Church in Shelby County. His mobile home had about 4 feet of water when he last visited the trailer park on Wednesday.

"I imagine that my trailer, if it's not covered, it's close," said Flores, an unemployed construction worker. "If I think about it too much, and get angry about it, it will mean the end of me."

Sun Studio, where Elvis Presley made some of the recordings that helped him become king of rock 'n' roll, was not in harm's way. Nor was Stax Records, which launched the careers of Otis Redding and the Staple Singers. Sun Studio still does some recording, while Stax is now a museum.

Graceland, Presley's former estate several miles south of downtown, was in no danger either.

"I want to say this: Graceland is safe. And we would charge hell with a water pistol to keep it that way and I'd be willing to lead the charge," said Bob Nations Jr., director of the Shelby County Emergency Management Agency.

Talking about the river levels, he later added: "They're going to recede slowly, it's going to be rather putrid, it's going to be expensive to clean up, it's going to be labor-intensive."

The main Memphis airport was not threatened, nor was FedEx, which has a sorting hub at the airport that handles up to 2 million packages per day.

Full face transplant patient makes first appearance since operation

The Associated Press

BOSTON — The nation's first full face transplant recipient said the first thing his young daughter told him when she saw him after the operation was "Daddy, you're so handsome."

Dallas Wiens, sporting a goatee and dark sunglasses, joined surgeons Monday at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston in his first public appearance since the 15-hour procedure in March.

"It feels natural," said the 25-year-old Fort Worth, Texas, man, who received a new nose, lips, skin, muscle and nerves from an anonymous donor. The operation was paid for by the U.S. military, which hopes to use findings from the procedure to help soldiers with severe facial wounds.

Wiens' features were all but burned away and he was left blind after hitting a power line while painting a church in November 2008.

On Monday, Wiens appeared before a packed room of reporters and photographers with a new, somewhat swollen face and a new head of hair.

"I adapted to it very quickly," Wiens told reporters. "As time went on ... I was able to smell again and breathe through my nose. Every step of the way was amazing."

The first thing Wiens' nose was able to detect after months of having no smell? Hospital lasagna.

"You wouldn't imagine it, but it smelled delicious," Wiens said.

Surgeons said the transplant was not able to restore his sight, and some nerves were so badly damaged from his injury that he will probably have only partial sensation on his left cheek and the left side of his forehead.

Plastic surgeon Bohdan Pomahac, who performed the operation on Wiens, said the transplant's results were better than he expected.

Boehner says 'trillions' in cuts loom on debt vote

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The top Republican in Congress wants trillions of dollars in spending cuts as part of must-pass legislation allowing the federal government to continue borrowing to keep it operating and meeting obligations to investors. It's a new, ambitious marker in a battle over the budget that's expected to consume Congress for much of the summer.

House Speaker John Boehner also said that any legislation to raise the so-called debt limit beyond its current $14.3 trillion cap should be accompanied by spending cuts larger than the amount of the permitted increase in the debt.

The Ohio Republican made the comments in a speech Monday night to the Economic Club of New York. Boehner's comments come as investors and business groups have been seeking assurances that the GOP-controlled House will join with President Barack Obama and the Democratic-led Senate to enact the must-pass debt limit measure, which is needed to prevent a market-roiling, first-ever U.S. default on its obligations.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner says a failure to increase the federal government's ability to borrow would have disastrous effects on the economy.

"It's true that allowing America to default would be irresponsible," Boehner said. "But it would be more irresponsible to raise the debt limit without simultaneously taking dramatic steps to reduce spending and to reform the budget process."

“... I felt that the risks were outweighed by the potential benefit of finally getting our man.”
— President Barack Obama on CBS’ ‘60 Minutes,’ which aired Sunday, on his decision to send Navy SEALs into Osama bin Laden’s Pakistan compound

EDITORIAL

A promising first step to a more vital, stable downtown

By 6:30 p.m. Friday, there were clusters of people walking up and down the barricaded Main Street. Vendors gave out samples of gourmet spaghetti sauce, hawked hand-made pens, displayed handcrafted lampshades and drizzled honey over elephant ears.

Main Street’s first Friday Night Market started slowly, but picked up steam. Just as things were moving, though, everything came to a screeching halt. It started drizzling, and vendors started packing up slightly before 7 p.m., the barricades came down and pedestrian traffic dissipated or headed to Rudy’s for First Friday.

We’re crazy about the idea of a downtown market. It’s a concrete step toward not only creating a banner event, but also a more stable and vital downtown.

A few of the levels it works on:

- It generates foot traffic. For many readers, their regular Twin Falls experience doesn’t extend south of Addison Avenue. The commercial density of Blue Lakes Boulevard is so all encompassing that visitors (and many residents) see no need to venture to the south third of town. Getting people just to remember downtown exists — even if they’re not spending money right away — is important.
- It’s a necessary step to completing the URA’s goal. We’ve heard repeatedly that the Urban Renewal Agency wants a living, urban and — dare we say — ‘hip’ downtown. That can’t happen overnight — brick-and-mortar businesses require a lot of capital, and deals take a long time to negotiate. If you can’t bring permanent business to downtown, though, bring temporary business. On Friday, we saw a huge variety of merchandise to buy in a walkable, friendly environment.
- It lines up retail hours with peoples’ schedules. Part of the reason that downtown is empty from 9 to 5 on weekdays (and so busy on Saturdays) is because we all work. Decades ago, when seemingly everybody worked downtown, it was easy to wander next door to buy a greeting card or dress shirt. Today, most of us aren’t able to shop until well into the evening or on weekends. By having a downtown market open later, you guarantee some foot traffic at a time of day when people can afford to browse and buy.

We wish more people had attended Friday’s inaugural market, but there’s hope for the future. Vendors will be staying open later. And, we urge more downtown businesses to extend their Friday night hours to align with the market hours.

The Magic Valley desperately wants a thriving downtown core, but that doesn’t happen in a single step. Before businesses will move in, they need to see signs of life in the old core of Twin Falls. The downtown market is a great opportunity to show prospective entrepreneurs — and the ones who currently make their living there — that we’re serious about wanting to renew our city’s center.

If you missed last Friday, don’t do so again. Shop the downtown market, and it will lead to even better things for downtown Twin Falls.

Obama’s bump in popularity may not last

The cardinal sin of political prognostication is static analysis.

A short weekend ago the emerging wisdom was that President Barack Obama’s re-election was in peril. The House Republican whip, Kevin McCarthy of California, perhaps the most politically attuned elected member of his party, was saying that while he always believed Republicans would have a good year in 2012, he now thought it was likely Obama would be defeated.

Leading Democratic strategists and poll takers worried he might be right. Comparisons were tossed out to Jimmy Carter more than three decades before: a bad economy and an indecisive president. That was April 30. By the end of May 1, the narrative turned around: Obama, achieving what President George W. Bush and his crowd of American exceptionalists couldn’t, bagged Osama bin Laden.

The president now was invincible, crowed some Democrats; Republicans publicly cheered and privately despaired, as their party’s front-runner, former Massachusetts governor Mitt Romney, was asked if the incumbent was unbeatable; on InTrade, a market site to wager on outcomes, the odds of Obama’s re-election exploded higher.

With decent odds, both times a smart investor would have sold short. The reality is that at the end of

Albert R. Hunt

April, Obama was a slight favorite to win re-election; after the first day of May his odds were only marginally better.

Prior to the raid in Abbottabad, Republicans had two cases against Obama: He’s presiding over a lousy economy and spending like an inebriated sailor; the other was that he’s soft on terrorism, a cautious, multilateralist who’s imperiling U.S. security.

He was bold, decisive and successful in contrast with the Bush crowd’s fumbling when bin Laden was a target at Tora Bora three months after the Sept. 11 attacks. Obama eliminated the second leg of the Republican case.

History, however, shows how ephemeral foreign-policy triumphs are in democracies. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill led the allies to victory in World War II. A year after the end of that conflict, the Brits threw Churchill out of office and Americans turned the House over to the Republicans.

More recently, Carter achieved a notable foreign-policy success with the 1978 Camp David accords; George Herbert Walker Bush scored big with the first Iraq war. Both were defeated for re-election.

Obama’s political advisers realize this and their strategy is simple: The election is about the future — their constant refrain of “Win the Future” is sophomoric, yet repetition works in messaging. The second mantra is that Republicans are extreme, scary. Defense of the Obama record will be minimal. The economy will dominate other issues including terrorism (barring a new event), bin Laden or social issues; the May 6 jobs report, showing robust employment gains, was a welcome bookend for the best week in Obama’s presidency in a long time. The conversation in the fall of next year will be about jobs, gas prices, debt and the role of government.

The Democrats are trying to “create a narrative,” says House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, a Wisconsin Republican, “if you go to the Republicans they’re going to feed you to the wolves in a dog-eat-dog society.”

This “narrative of shared scarcity,” Ryan says, will be trumped by the Republican storyline. “We want to have growth. We want an upwardly mobile society.”

Obama is equally confident he can win the fairness and growth debate by emphasizing selective investments for the future.

Democrats believe the tide already is starting to turn in their favor. Only six months after a historic electoral victory, public attitudes about the Republicans continue to sour as the party is identified with cutting Medicare, defending the oil industry and embracing divisive social issues. The presidential nominating fight, the White House calculates, will only exacerbate those deficiencies. The nominee will have to pander to the party’s powerful conservative base, they argue, and the field, by historical standards, looks comparatively weak.

That’s why Republicans such as Indiana Gov. Mitch Daniels and the former Utah governor and Obama envoy to China, Jon Huntsman, are seriously thinking about getting in. They might be formidable general-election candidates. Even more formidable are the odds against them navigating the caucuses and primaries to get the chance.

Team Obama isn’t without its own problems. Even with major jobs gains last month the unemployment rate is at 9 percent; since World War II no president has been re-elected with joblessness anywhere near that level. Although Obama, unlike Carter in 1980, won’t face a serious challenge from the left, he still has to worry about the unrest among his liberal base, sure to be aggravated if he slows down troop withdrawals from Afghanistan this summer.

There are political uncertainties ahead. This was a mission accomplished.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Kudos to people behind ‘Art and Soul’ event

All should congratulate the Magic Valley Art Guild and Art and Bonnie Hoag for creating “The Art and Soul of the City”!

This 10-day art event in historic downtown Twin Falls has a great variety of artistic pieces. Sculptures, photography, paintings, jewelry and pottery are just a few of the 95 entries.

While you are downtown, enjoy shopping and eating as you visit the businesses that display the art.

Through your vote for your three favorite art pieces, you decide who will get the spoils of the approximately $10,000 in prize money. Kudos to the sponsors and businesses that provided the venues and to the talented artists who have made this event so spectacular!

We look forward to this becoming an annual event!

Killing rock chucks for good cause, or for fun?

I was absolutely horrified by your photo of the mighty hunter holding up the dead rock chuck.

When I moved to Idaho in the ’70s, the state was getting quite a bit of national publicity for bashing pesky bunnies with baseball bats. Usually, hunters say that they kill because they “gotta eat.” Are they eating the rock chucks or putting them on the walls for trophies or just chucking their bodies? Are they killing for good cause for just killing for fun? And anyway, killing for fun for a good cause still doesn’t make any sense.

Put student housing in a better location

The Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission and the Twin Falls City Council each voted unanimously, and appropriately, to deny CSI’s recent request to rezone a 6.2-acre parcel, gifted by Roy and Verna Marie Raymond, which is isolated from the main campus. High density housing in this location is inappropriate, not inappropriate because the request was for student housing.

Sole egress and ingress for this proposed development would have flowed through what is already recognized by the community as a severely congested and dangerous intersection at North College and Fillmore Street. Numerous accidents have occurred at this intersection.

Placing this housing at a campus location more capable of helping to promote the resident students’ sense of community and belonging to the college and more accessible between class schedules is a better approach. Fortunately, the choices are many as CSI’s 365 acres represents ownership of more property than any other Idaho college or university.

The College of Southern Idaho has and continues to educate our young and old alike and to be integrally instrumental in the economic growth of our region.

It is important that institutional administrators be mindful that their decisions often carry far-reaching and long-lasting impacts for their institutions. Fostering goodwill within the communities served is not only proper, it is also prudent, as that goodwill in turn impacts the overall success of the institution. Awarding large construction contracts without transparency and attempting to cram down high density student housing in an ill-advised location without inquiring and properly investigating the impact, are not the best approaches.

It was encouraging to see, in the April 30 Times-News article that the College of Southern Idaho’s current board of trustees is taking a more disciplined approach.

Pakistanis disclose name of CIA station chief

By Karin Brulliard and Greg Miller
The Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The public outing of the CIA station chief here threatened on Monday to deepen the rift between the United States and Pakistan, with U.S. officials saying they believed the disclosure had been made deliberately by Pakistan's main spy agency.

If true, the leak would be a sign that Pakistan's powerful security establishment, far from feeling chastened by the killing of terrorist leader Osama bin Laden in a Pakistani garrison city last week, is seeking to demonstrate its leverage over Washington and retaliate for the unilateral U.S. operation.

Less than six months ago, the identity of the previous CIA station chief in Islamabad was also disclosed in an act that U.S. officials blamed on their counterparts in Pakistan's Inter-Services Intelligence agency, or ISI.

The new station chief, who runs one of the largest U.S. intelligence-gathering operations in the world, played an instrumental role in overseeing efforts to confirm bin Laden's location before last week's raid.

The discovery of bin Laden's presence in a Pakistani city was considered a huge embarrassment for Pakistan's military. The United States viewed it as an opportunity to press Pakistan, the recipient of billions of dollars in annual American aid, to crack down harder on militants. Outrage among Pakistanis over the operation was also seen as a rare chance for the weak civilian government in Islamabad to stake its claim in foreign and security policy, long the domain of the army.

But the nation's security establishment has reacted with furor, not humility, people familiar with top

Pakistani generals' thinking said Monday. Their response has been two-pronged: to shift blame for the bin Laden episode to the government of President Asif Ali Zardari and, according to American officials, to strike back against U.S. allegations that Pakistani spies were either complicit in sheltering bin Laden or incompetent.

The CIA station chief's name was first aired by a private Pakistani television station on Friday, and a misspelled version of the name was published the next day in the Nation newspaper, which is considered close to the security establishment. The Washington Post does not typically publish the names of intelligence officers working undercover.

Pakistani intelligence officials could not be reached for comment on the U.S. allegation. American officials acknowledged that they had no hard evidence, but a U.S. official said that the suspicion was "based on past history." The official indicated that evidence has accumulated in recent months that the ISI was behind the exposure of the station chief last year.

In that instance, the CIA pulled the officer out of Pakistan. But it is not clear whether the agency will do the same now. The prior chief was nearing the end of his assignment in Pakistan when he was recalled to agency headquarters. The current CIA leader in Islamabad has been there only about five months. He was described as a veteran officer known for his blunt manner and extensive operations experience in Russia.

Passengers subdue man who tried to break in to cockpit

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The passengers sat stunned as they watched a man walk quickly toward the front of American Airlines Flight 1561 as it was descending toward San Francisco. He was screaming and then began pounding on the cockpit door.

"I kept saying to myself: 'What's he doing? Does he have a bomb? Is he armed?'" passenger Angelina Marty said.

Another shocked passenger, Andrew Wai, thought, "Could this be it? Are we going down?"

Within moments Sunday, a flight attendant tackled Rageh Almurisi. Authorities do not yet have a motive.

While Almurisi, 28, of Vallejo, Calif., has no clear or known ties to terrorism, authorities say, the incident underscored fears that extremists may try to mount attacks to retaliate for the death of al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden last week.

Federal agents are investigating Almurisi's background. He was carrying a Yemeni passport and a California identification card, authorities said.

Yemen, a nation at the southern tip of the Arabian peninsula, has been a focus of U.S. officials because one of the most active branches of al-Qaida operates in the remote part of the country.

A cousin of the suspect described him as an educated, easygoing person who had arrived in Northern California a year-and-a-half ago from Yemen in search of better opportunities.

He was unable to find work in Vallejo, a town of 100,000 across the bay from San Francisco hit hard by the real estate bust, and recently moved to New York where his brother lived in search of better luck, said Rageh Almoraisi, 29, of Vallejo.

Almurisi had not told his extended family in California that he was returning to the area, Almoraisi said.

"He's very laid back, he's always smiling, he's always laughing. He's not an angry person," Almoraisi said. "Everybody's worried about him. It's not typical of him."

A photograph that shows President Barack Obama and his staff watching the operation that killed Osama bin Laden and was digitally altered to remove Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and Counterterrorism Director Audrey Tomason, is seen in last week's edition of the Brooklyn weekly Di Tzeitung.

NY Jewish newspaper apologizes for altering White House photo

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK — An Orthodox Jewish newspaper on Monday apologized for digitally deleting Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton from a photo of President Barack Obama and his staff watching Navy SEALs move in on Osama bin Laden.

The Brooklyn weekly Di Tzeitung, which says it doesn't publish images of women, printed the doctored photo Friday. It issued a statement saying its photo editor hadn't read the "fine print" accompanying the White House photo that forbade any changes. The newspaper said it has sent its "regrets and apologies" to the White House and the Department of State.

A second woman, Counterterrorism Director Audrey Tomason, also was deleted from the photo, which captured a historic moment in the decade-long U.S. effort to apprehend the mastermind of the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks.

Di Tzeitung said it has a "long standing editorial policy" of not publishing women's images. It explained that its readers "believe that women should be appreciated for who they are and what they do, not for what they look like, and the Jewish laws of modesty are an expression of respect for women, not the opposite."

The weekly said Clinton, a Democrat who represented New York as a U.S. senator, had won overwhelming majorities in the Orthodox Jewish communities because they "appreciated her unique capabilities, talents and compassion for all."

Di Tzeitung, published in Yiddish, is sold at city newsstands, especially in Brooklyn's Williamsburg and Borough Park neighborhoods, which have many Orthodox Jewish residents. It acknowledged it "should not have published the altered picture."

An editor at a Manhattan weekly that has covered Jewish issues since the 1890s addressed why the Brooklyn newspaper might have altered the image. The Forward's managing editor, Lil Swanson, said that removing women from photos is "in keeping with" the belief of some ultra-Orthodox Jews that showing images of the female form is "immodest."

Combat stirs Libya's tense eastern front

The Associated Press

BENHAZI, Libya — Rebels battled Moammar Gadhafi's forces on a deadlocked front line in eastern Libya, and NATO warplanes struck Tripoli early Tuesday in the heaviest bombing of the Libyan capital in weeks.

Overnight, NATO warplanes struck at least four sites in Tripoli, setting off crackling explosions that thundered through the Libyan capital.

One strike hit a building that local residents said was used by a military intelligence agency. Another targeted a government building that officials said was sometimes used by parliament members.

It was not immediately clear what the other two strikes hit, but one of them sent plumes of smoke over the city. Libyan officials would not say what that strike hit but the smoke appeared to come from the sprawling compound housing members of Gadhafi's family.

Between explosions, an aircraft dropped burning flares. Some residents responded by raking the sky with gunfire and beeping their horns.

On the front line, heavy fighting was reported Monday south of Ajdabiya, a rebel-held town about 90 miles south of Benghazi, the rebel headquarters in the east.

Hundreds of rebels gathered at a checkpoint outside Ajdabiya on Monday, when an AP photographer counted about 100 pickup trucks coming back from the front, each carrying four or five fighters and some with mounted submachine guns.

The rebels, firing their weapons into the air as they shouted and danced, said they had been told that NATO was going to launch airstrikes on Gadhafi's forces and they had been ordered to withdraw temporarily from the front.

Warm Season Grass Tips

Warm-season grasses are green in the summer and become brown and dormant in the winter. This group includes common and hybrid Bermuda, Centipede, Zoysia and St. Augustine. Warm-season grasses are adapted to the sandy soils of the North Carolina coastal plain and most of the piedmont. Warm-season grasses tolerate the high temperatures and summer droughts in North Carolina better than <http://www.ncagr.gov/cyber/kidswrld/plant/lawn.htm> \l "Cool#Cool" cool-season grasses.

Warm-season grasses can be established with sprigs, sod or by planting seed. Space planting is the planting of separate sprigs at regular intervals. The closer the planting, the more sprigs needed and the faster the coverage. Sprigs should be set 2 inches deep with a portion of the sprig extending above the soil surface.

Broadcasting involves spreading a larger quantity of sprigs over the soil surface and then pressing the sprigs into the upper 1 inch of soil by hand or mechanically.

The best time to plant sprigs or lay sod is March through July. To plant seed the best times is March through September. Roots of warm-season grasses must have enough time to become established before the weather turns cool. Seeding rates vary from 0.25 to 2.0 pounds per 1000 square feet.

Warm-season grasses can develop a thatch layer. When the thatch layer is half an inch thick, the lawn should be dethatched or raked. If the lawn becomes compacted, the soil can be aerated in the spring with a device that cuts and removes soil cores.

Begin mowing the grass as soon as it is tall enough to be cut. A reel mower is preferred for cutting Zoysia, hybrid Bermuda and Centipede. The suggested cutting height is 1 inch. It is not necessary to collect the clippings unless the amount is excessive and may smother the grass.

Bring home the Paris flea market

Mismatched furniture like these pieces are just like what you might find in a French flea market, with ornate detailing to raise the neutral palette to elegant, said Twin Falls interior designer Janet Gorringe.

Trendy interior style is flexible, eclectic, comfortable

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

It's burlap upholstery on a chair with gilded French legs. Three kinds of crystals on an iron chandelier. A dozen mismatched bird cages with worn paint. An Art Deco piece next to an antique from the 1800s.

What ties all that together into the interior decoration themes known as "Paris flea market" and "French laundry" are the pale, neutral colors and the feeling of comfort you get when you walk into the room.

"I just feel like it's elegant but it's down-to-earth," said Kam Garner, who chose the style when she and her husband built their Eagle home last year. "It's a great style for young people if they like the look, because it's so doable on a budget. You can go to the consignment stores and it's a fun way to collect, to find oddball pieces that work well together."

If that sounds like it could look mismatched, well that's kind of the idea.

"The real trick to it is you have some sort of a common thread you carry through," said Janet Gorringe, an interior designer with Inspired Living in Twin Falls, which recently updated its displays to feature the look.

She described a rug, for example, that's in neutral colors like cream with hints of green and pink; using those as her palette, she paired the accessories in the room to those tones. "You're tying things together of like kind even though they're all different, and like colors even if they're all different," Gorringe said.

"Like kind" could be those bird cages — perhaps all with identical or similar bird figurines inside — or a collection of flowerpots or white enamel statuettes.

"It's organized clutter, and that's always been my decorating style, so I'm right at home," Gorringe said. She prefers new versions of items that are made to look old (which can avoid issues like musty smells or necessary repairs), but said the original items can work just as well.

"If you thought in American terms, things that you'd find at the junk store," she said. Gorringe noted that's Garner's modus operandi.

Soft pinks and browns, mixed with bright natural greenery, are set off by dark iron in the table, chandelier and bird cages that Twin Falls interior designer Janet Gorringe used to create this serene sun room.

A whimsical white pig statuette on the kitchen island coordinates with other pieces of pottery nearby, as 'found objects' that are part of the Paris flea market style. The edges of the counters, cabinets and table show the wear — authentic or created recently — that give the style its aged appeal.

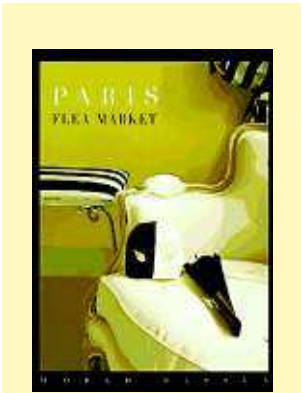

"She might buy a gate off an old fence and turn it into a wall piece. I love that look, but I don't like 'junk,' so it depends on your personality and how you do it."

Rustic fabrics are a key component to French laundry, with linens, nubby silks, canvas, burlap and — everyone who can't stand ironing will appreciate this — wrinkles.

When it comes to finishes, think layers: Surfaces may be painted, and then sanded, wire-brushed or treated with an acid wash or crackle finish to expose layer upon layer of color. Glazes over paints, paints over stains, a bright hint of a thematic color peeking through, they're all consistent. Metals are almost universally tarnished or dulled in some way, including architectural items like fence gates, tin ceiling panels or pewter doorknockers.

Don't be afraid to incorporate something you adore, either, even if it's not quite like what you see in pictures

- Tour the Boise Parade of Homes until May 15 (5-8 p.m. Monday-Friday; noon to 8 p.m. Saturday-Sunday) and take a cue from La Maison Inspiree de la Vie in Eagle, which Janet Gorringe decorated entirely in the Paris flea market style. See photos at www.bcaswi.org/Spring_Parade_of_Home_13
- Check out photos online based around the style. For example, Baers.com (search "flea market" to see examples of furniture); HouseBeautiful.com (search "Paris flea market"); or Houzz.com (search "Paris flea market" for photos that users have tagged with the label; not all photos fit experts' descriptions of the style).

of the style. Garner, for example, has a 7-foot painting of George Washington in a gilded frame, which she bought from a hotel that was redecorating. It's not the pale, serene tones of French laundry, but it makes a statement in her great room.

What now? Your common garden questions answered

By Melissa Davlin ♦ Times-News writer

If only gardening were as easy as sticking seeds in the ground and watering. But to grow successful flowers and veggies, it takes savvy, timing and the right materials. And if you're new to it, you need help.

The Times-News spoke to Lacey Smith of Kimberly Nurseries Landscape & Irrigation and Kris Butcher of Krengel's True Value Hardware in Twin Falls, asking for their most common customer questions. Here are the answers.

'Can I plant this yet?'

This time of year, that depends on how much work you want to put into your garden, Butcher said. Idaho springs are notorious for surprise frosts, which can wipe out delicate flowers. Butcher abstains from planting almost everything until Memorial Day.

"That is late, but I don't want to have to deal with it freezing," she said.

There are other options. Some of her customers plant early and cover their plants when there is a chance of snow, while others replant throughout the season. If you're in the former group, Butcher recommends using Wall O'Water plant protectors, which shield plants and keep them warm. With that kind of protection, you can speed up your harvest. One customer has tomatoes by the fourth of July, Butcher said.

'When should I prune?'

For flowering shrubs, prune after they bloom. "That way, all the new growth will have more flower production," Smith said. You won't see the results until next spring, when your shrub blooms again, but the wait will be worth it.

Prune most trees in the spring before they produce leaves. Because Idaho has had a long, cold winter, most trees are still OK to prune right now, she said, as long as those leaves haven't appeared.

The exception: Pine trees, which need to be pruned in winter. Sap runs through pine trees in the spring, leaving you with a leaky, sticky mess if you try to prune now.

'How much work will this take?'

Most people who ask this want low-maintenance plants, Butcher said. She and co-worker Charla Posey recommend marigolds, hen and chicks (pictured), lilies and pansies.

"Pansies are the toughest flowers. They can take a snow," Butcher said. "If someone calls you a pansy, take it as a compliment."

Butcher also recommended succulents, which can stand up to Idaho's hot, dry summers.

'What soil mix should I use?'

This is especially relevant to those with raised garden beds, which are especially popular in southern Idaho this year, Smith said. Use half topsoil and half low-sodium organic compost, and make sure to mix the components instead of layering them. Kimberly Nurseries sells a blend called Black Diamond Dirt, which it recommends to customers.

With those raised garden beds, it's not just about the soil, Smith added. "You want to make sure you've got good drainage."

WORKSHOP WIZARDS

Determined DIYers carve out tidy, ingenious workspaces

By Roland Wilkerson
McClatchy Newspapers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — You don't need a vast wall of screwdrivers or a herd of pricey power tools to have a great workshop.

We learned clever ways some handy folks outfitted their home workshops, with smart ideas that even the least-handy homeowner can copy.

The biggest theme: If you have a space to place a solid table, you're in business. We saw some impressive workshops, but these two impressed us with their ingenuity.

Sales rep Nathan Gilbert of south Charlotte, N.C., created a handy, portable workbench that can be rolled out when needed.

Physician assistant Tom DeVito of Raleigh, N.C., took advantage of under-used space below a deck and converted it into a nifty hideaway.

Both men show a knack for conquering clutter, which is often the first step.

"A lot of people don't know how to get started," said Billy Gandy, merchandising vice president for cleaning and storage products for Lowe's.

One easy way to manage hand tools, paint cans and the like is to make the most of wall space. The classic pegboard-hook setup still works wonders for tools, he said. And garage wall rail systems, which screw into studs and let you clip on yard tools and storage baskets, are also popular.

Basic utility shelves are big, too, he said, because you can stack a lot on them and create order in short order. The less stuff that's on the floor, the more options you have for creating a good workspace, Grand said.

Nathan Gilbert with his portable workbench. Gilbert didn't have any room in his garage for a permanent workbench, so he screwed together a couple of kitchen cabinets and put them on casters.

MCT photos

Stretching a tight garage

Gilbert, 58, had to get creative when the only space available was a tight garage. So he bought a cheap pair of 36-inch-high kitchen cabinets, screwed them together, added a little reinforcement, and then some locking casters.

He attached 3/4-inch particle board (32x52 inches) for the top. The overhang leaves room for clamps. The cabinets themselves provide storage.

When he's got work to do, Gilbert rolls the cart to the center of the garage. He runs a heavy-duty extension cord from a wall outlet to the power strip on the side of his bench for tools. He's a handy guy — skilled enough to make a wood storage chest and futon, but this simple table does the trick. And by the way, his table saw and router table are on wheels, too.

Digging out the cave

DeVito, 56, started with an existing 4-foot-high cave under his deck, a common arrangement in many homes. He dug out the dirt floor by hand — a digging party would have gotten it done a lot quicker, he concedes — and proceeded from there.

His project, which is more ambitious than some might want to attempt, shows you can do a lot with a little space. There was lots of trial and error, but even the mistakes provided moments of enlightenment. "It was sort of 'Zen and the Art of Workshop Building,'" he said.

DeVito had some steps

Easy ways to organize

Storing tools on pegboard hooks is far easier than digging through a toolbox. Plastic clips that keep hooks in place when you pull tools are a must. White pegboard makes for a cleaner-looking shop.

Make a good workbench from a flat, solid core door set on 4x4 posts, with 2x4s as a reinforcing border on the door. You can find doors at salvage yards for as little as $10.

To keep your work surfaces clear, attach power strips to table legs or cabinet sides. Consider an overhead retractable extension cord, ($30 or so) to keep chaos at bay.

While a basic fluorescent shop light takes care of business, consider adding a clamp-style desk light.

built from the deck to the workspace below. Then he added simple corrugated roofing that drained rainwater coming through the deck into a gutter.

DeVito said he didn't have a lot of carpentry skills, but he enclosed the area and added a basic workbench. DeVito said his shop is a work in progress. He may never actually "finish." Which is fine by him. Making it better is half the fun.

"Doing it 'wrong' almost looks like doing it right," Gorringer said, if the piece is something you love that doesn't change the feeling of the room.

The style has overlap with other trends that decorators are familiar with:

- Shabby chic uses the same vintage, found objects, many of which show evidence of previous owners in the way the Paris flea market style does. But the French-influenced themes incorporate more "museum-esque" antiques, blending the rustic and the elegant.

- Country cottage uses many of the same colors, including a lot of taupe, cream and pale pastels — but cottage furniture tends to have bolder, chunkier lines and incorporates more white-washing and brighter colors than the French styles. "In cottage I see an open-sashed window with white on the flea market style have been around for decades, with rising trends shifting them toward one theme or another. This means that a collection of eclectic pieces and antique (or antique-looking) furniture can be easily and inexpensively transformed via paint and upholstery into true Paris flea market.

"I also like to change the purpose of things," said Fred Testu, in an interview with SFGate.com. The co-owner of San Francisco-based interior store Interieur Perdu is often called upon by magazine decorators to illustrate their pages with the pieces he imports from France. "You can use an old postcard rack or a wine-bottle drying rack to display any number of things. It's fun and unexpected, and it recycles things by giving them a second life."

The dirt on dishwashers

By Jura Koncius
The Washington Post

The dishwasher, long the workhorse of the kitchen, is getting quieter and more powerful, energy-efficient and stylish. Part of the 1950s American trophy kitchen, early dishwasher models rattled plates as they chugged through cleaning cycles. Today, dishwashers operate with barely a sound. With some, you can't even tell they're washing, even though they're blasting jets of water at baked-on goop bonded to your cassoulet pan.

What's new?

- Quiet models. Dishwasher manufacturers post decibel levels, ranging from 40 to 65. Usually, the quieter the machine, the higher the price. Dee David, a Falls Church, Va., kitchen designer, says European manufacturers such as Asko, Bosch and Miele first offered quieter dishwashing with less water. "My favorite is actually the Miele," she says.

- Efficiency. Most new dishwashers are Energy Star compliant, using less water and electricity. If a machine is more than 10 years old, it might use six to nine gallons more water per load. Now, very efficient models use about two gallons. Using a delayed start and running the machine at night might save money if your utilities have off-peak rates.

- Sensors, design. With newer models, scrape but don't pre-rinse dishes. Some machines have soil sensors that set off powerful sprays or rack designs that maximize performance, says Jill Notini, vice president at the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers. "People's natural inclination is to want to help, but you should just let the machine do its job."

Operating tips

- Loading. Proper loading is the key to successful dishwasher operation. Unless you have a recent model with a deep top rack (tall tub design) that accommodates plates, place all plates on the bottom facing the center. Load cutlery compartments with some flatware handles up and some down; otherwise you risk the dreaded "nesting" and they won't all come out clean. Put knives in the flatware bin with points facing down.

- Rinse aids. These assure optimum sparkle, industry experts say, by allowing water to sheet off dishes rather than dry in droplets. It is particularly helpful if you are using a heat-free drying cycle to conserve energy.

- Saving energy. Run the dishwasher only when full, and use only the amount of detergent recommended by the manufacturer. Consider skipping the heated drying cycle in favor of air dry.

- Detergent. See if your dishwasher's maker recommends a specific detergent: powder, liquid gel, tablets or gel packs. Powder should be stored in a cool, dry place, not under the sink where warmth and moisture can cause it to clump, according to the American Cleaning Institute.

Pricing levels

Mark Keeney, manager of the Annapolis HHGregg appliance store, recommends these models at three price levels:

Low: Whirlpool DU1030 ($400-$500). Sanitary rinse eliminates 99.9 percent of germs, heats water to 178 degrees. Nylon racks won't crack and rust.

Middle: Bosch SHE4AP ($600-$700). Plastics can be placed anywhere in the dishwasher without melting. Half-load option. 353 decibels (very quiet). 32.8 gallons of water used per load. Child-lock feature prevents opening during cycle.

High: KitchenAid KUDE40FX ($1,200-$1,300). Clean styling with buttons on the upper interior of the door. 346 decibels (virtually silent). Pro-Scrub setting focuses multiple high-pressure jets on an area for hard-to-scrub pots and pans.

Shop smart

There are more than two dozen brands of dishwashers on the market, and hundreds of models, in white, black and stainless. A few still come in bisque. Prices range from about $200 to more than $2,000. Keeney suggests asking yourself these questions when shopping:

How big a concern is noise for you? Do you run the dishwasher while entertaining? (Then study decibel levels.)

Do you put your baked-on lasagna or potatoes au gratin pans directly in the machine? (Look for a designated spot on the bottom rack for dirty pans.)

Are you passionate about design or aesthetics? (Seek out sleek models with contoured handles and hidden control buttons on the top edge of the door.)

Feed costs eating into profitability

Idaho dairies could struggle with high corn prices

By Cindy Snyder
Times News correspondent

Record high feed costs ate into livestock profits last month and economists don't see much relief through the summer.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's ag prices report released in late April, corn prices hit an all-time record high of $6.40 per bushel, up 87 cents from March.

That put the cost of feed per hundred pounds of milk at $10.71 on a national average, the highest level ever seen.

But cash feed prices on many Idaho dairies were even higher. Although Class III milk prices were $19.40 in mid-April, prices hovered around $17 per hundred-weight in both February and March. That's very close to break-even prices for dairies when feed and all other expenses are included.

Rick Naerebout, a dairy consultant, would not be surprised to find negative margins on some Idaho dairies in March and April, largely because of high cash feed prices. Feed barley in the Magic Valley was between $11.25 and $12.50 per cwt.

last week and hay prices are pushing $215 a ton, nearly double last year's price.

And the prospects don't look much brighter going into the summer.

Class III milk futures contracts through the rest of 2011 averaged $17.61, just the $17 average break-even price most Magic Valley dairies are calculating now. And the average futures price for 2012 is just over $16 per cwt.

But despite the higher feed costs, the April all-milk price of $19.70 was still high enough to prevent any federal milk income loss contract payments (MILC). That's up significantly from last year's $12.78 at the same time, but producers still must ask themselves whether these prices are providing enough margin over feed costs to at least break even, said Wilson Gray.

But anyone who thinks last week's selloff in Chicago corn futures has helped dairy producers or beef feeders is mistaken.

Steve Meyer and Len Steiner, who write the Daily Livestock Report for the CME, say there is a reason they're called "futures" contracts.

"While futures markets play a very important role in allocating acres for new-crop 2010 corn, the cash market has the immediate responsibility of making sure existing corn supplies get us to new crop corn in late summer and early fall," they wrote. "The cash market remains clearly concerned that corn supplies this summer will be very tight."

One of those concerns has been driven by the slow start to the 2011 corn planting season. But according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's latest crop progress and condition report, growers in the top 18 corn growing states had managed to plant 40 percent of their acres as of May 8. That's up from 13 percent the previous week

A field of alfalfa blows in the wind Monday afternoon north of Buhl. Instead of preparing for first cutting, farmers are waiting for the warmer weather necessary to get the crop growing, which is about two to three weeks behind schedule.

Cold weather delays alfalfa growth

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Spring may have sprung but southern Idaho's fledgling alfalfa crop needs some warm weather.

Typically, producers and custom farmers would be about two weeks away from the season's first hay harvest but cool weather has kept the crop from growing.

"We're definitely behind schedule," said Steve Hines, Twin Falls Extension educator. "We're at least two to three weeks behind but it's not just here; neighboring states are facing the same situation."

Hines said that the delay won't affect quality but could reduce harvested tonnage for the season.

Cows graze in a field at Nature's Harmony Organic Dairy. Sean Mallett said 80 percent of his feed comes from within a 75-mile radius of the dairy.

Hay supplies are already tight due to rising global hay exports. "Producers are already dealing with a slow start and once you get into October, the weather could effect that fourth and fifth cutting," Hines said. "If the end-of-season harvests are effected that could further tighten supply."

Short supplies are already pushing up prices.

In January, supreme hay sold for $195 per ton, up $10 per ton since December and nearly $90 a ton over last year.

"A lot of the hay is going for $200 a ton and up," said Perry Dirks, owner of the Milner Hay Company, in Murtaugh, which supplies hay to several area dairy farms.

Dairy producers, still recovering from extended periods of low milk prices, will likely feel the pinch from higher hay prices.

Tyson Foods profit misses expectations

By Shruti Date Singh
Bloomberg News

CHICAGO — Tyson Foods Inc. posted fiscal second-quarter profit Monday that missed analysts' estimates as higher feed costs partially offset gains in beef and chicken prices.

Net income was $159 million, or 42 cents a share, for the three months through April 2, unchanged from the quarter ended April 3, 2010, Springdale, Arkansas-based Tyson said in a statement. The average estimate of 14 analysts in a Bloomberg survey was for profit of 44 cents.

That's the first time Tyson, the largest U.S. meat processor, missed expectations since the first quarter of fiscal 2009.

Tyson, led by Chief Executive Officer Donnie Smith, said grain costs in fiscal 2011 will rise almost $500 million from a year earlier. Corn and soybeans in the fiscal second quarter climbed to their highest since mid-2008. Meat processors also face higher costs for hogs, cattle and chickens, with the spot price for hogs advancing 22 percent this year.

The operating margin for chicken shrank to 1.4 percent from 4.6 percent while it declined to 2.8 percent from 4.5 percent for beef. Pork margins improved to 10.5 percent from 6.3 percent. Tyson's sales rose 16 percent to $8 billion from $6.92 billion a year earlier.

"Beef was lower on the margin front," Jeff Farmer, a Boston-based analyst for Jefferies & Co., said in a telephone interview. "For the stock to move you need the chicken unit to stand on its own feet without the benefit of forward feed contracts."

The company said it raised its 2011 sales forecast to more than $32 billion from about $31 billion previously as meat prices rise because higher exports will reduce domestic availability of chicken, beef, pork and turkey.

Smith said on a conference call he still thinks earnings in fiscal 2011 will be at or above $2 a share.

Tyson's net interest expense in fiscal 2011 will be about $230 million, down about $100 million compared with fiscal 2010 and $15 million less than its previous projection, it said.

Colony collapse: Bees' disappearance has many buzzing

By Cameron Rasmuson
Bonner County Daily Bee

SANDPOINT — The disappearance of bees worldwide has baffled experts for years, but now Bonner County residents have a chance to do their own investigation.

The Idaho Conservation League sponsored a night of bees, with the screening of the new documentary, "Queen of the Sun."

The ICL hoped the film would spur discussion among local gardeners and beekeepers about the film's topics.

"We hope to get a diverse showing from the community," ICL associate Nancy Dooley said. "Any backyard farmer will be interested in seeing this movie."

The documentary focuses on colony collapse disorder, a phenomenon that could endanger plant life on a massive scale due to pollination disruption. Scientists and experts are still unable to explain why European honey bees abruptly vacate a hive en masse, but local enthusiasts have their theories.

Hobbyist beekeeper Stephen Augustine believes it's because of the harsh chemicals that modern beekeeping introduced. Although the chemicals were used to fight disease-carrying, colony-destroying varroa mite parasites, they also hurt the bees and linger in their hives.

"It's been shown that bees will abscond — they will abandon the hive — when there is too much stress," he said.

Another attendee expert, professional beekeeper Jim Miller of Miller's Homestead in Cheney, Wash., changed his approach due to possible negative effects of chemicals.

"Five or six years ago, I got away from chemicals and started using natural oils," he said. "I haven't lost a hive since getting started with them."

Whether or not chemicals cause colony collapse disorder, it is still a facet of human interference into the natural process of pollination. A half-million acres of almond trees in California, for example, couldn't exist without the mass transportation of non-native bees into the area. Some experts believe that this trend of monocropping could also play a role in colony collapse disorder.

But all is not lost. Attendees at Thursday's movie night learned ways to help.

"One thing that people can do is if they have a garden, plant some thyme," Miller said. "That supplies a good food source for bees."

Ivory Coast makes first cocoa export since January

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) – Port officials said Monday they have loaded Ivory Coast's first shipment of beans in several months as the world's largest cocoa producer resumed exportation now that the democratically elected president finally has taken office.

Cocoa exports came to a halt in mid-January when internationally recognized president Alassane Ouattara called for an export ban to starve his rival financially, causing cocoa prices to skyrocket. Most major exporters, including American firms Cargill and Archer Daniels Midland, as well as Swiss firm

Barry Callebaut, complied with Ouattara's cocoa ban because the European Union had put sanctions against Ivory Coast's ports, effectively preventing any exports from leaving the country.

Alfalfa

Hines said many dairy producers changed their management operations to free up cash flow. Instead of purchasing hay months in advance, some producers are buying hay “as needed.”

“That really freed up some operating capital,” Hines said. “But they could end up paying more for hay now than they would have earlier.”

Producers needing feed could be looking beyond Idaho as their supply dwindles.

“They’ll just look further and further away to find the feed they need,” Hines said. “They do have some option in changing what their feeding to dry cows but the nutrition needed for milking cows mainly comes from alfalfa.”

Hay supplies were already tight going into this year's growing season. With added concern over alfalfa's slow growing, producers are paying more for the hay they do find.

“Right now, it's hard to find any hay,” said Dirks. “And the price is considerably higher because of the short supply.”

In addition to growing global demand, some hay acres were rotated out into more profitable options, Hines said, like corn and wheat.

However, the growing season is still early enough that things could turn around.

Jordan Aardema, of the Aardema Group in Jerome, oversees hay supplies for the 25,000 milking cows within the Aardema dairy system.

He said they are concerned with the unfolding growing season but has enough hay for several months.

“We’re always looking for more hay,” Aardema said. “We grow about 3,000 acres of hay, across the valley, and purchase our hay six months to a year out. Right now, it looks like the shortage won’t really effect us much.”

DEAR ABBY: “Little Bit Lonely” (March 26) misses traveling since her husband’s death. She wrote that she isn’t “good at mingling with new people” and wondered if it would be appropriate to ask her son to include her on weekend trips with his family.

I want to urge “Lonely” to go to her local community college and take classes for seniors. Take any class she might have dreamed of as a young woman. Make friends. Expand her horizons!

I had breast cancer 18 months ago. The day after my surgery, I took stock of my life and decided if I was to follow my childhood dream, what better time than now? I am doing that, and have begun studying voice and theater arts. Do I aspire to be another Helen Reddy or Helen Mirren? No, but I intend to have fun while I take the journey of the rest of my life.

Let me say to her, “Don’t be a ‘little bit lonely.’ Be a little bit too busy!”

— NOT AT ALL
LONELY, SANTA
ROSA, CALIF.

DEAR NOT LONELY: Thank you for an inspiring letter. Other readers shared creative ideas for “Lonely” that might help her set her sails in new directions.

DEAR
ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

Read on:

DEAR ABBY: “Lonely” should organize a trip (even just a weekend jaunt) and invite her son and family along. That would give the son the opportunity to reciprocate her invitation, which could lead to a new family tradition.

— GAYLE IN KANSAS CITY

DEAR ABBY: My dad passed away eight years ago, and Mom has been on her own ever since. She has become a savvy traveler and has made numerous friends along the way. “Lonely” should look into churches, travel agencies and cruise companies for trips for senior singles. “Lonely” does not need to be alone. My mom goes places with family and is close friends with my mother-in-law, too. One or two trips, and “Lonely” should be able to find a few good friends.

— PROUD OF
MY BROOKLYN MOM

DEAR ABBY: I, too, am a widow. I go on my own to football and soccer games as well as other activities that involve my grandchildren. It’s my firm belief that it isn’t up to my children to entertain me. They have their own busy lives and need their family time.

I have developed my own social life. I met one of my best friends in a choral group, and another when she sat next to me at church. The three of us go to movies, concerts, plays, etc., and they have introduced me to many new activities. Senior centers sponsor computer classes, bingo and day excursions, and community colleges offer classes in photography, writing, yoga for a nominal fee. Be willing to work through some discomfort and take some risks.

— NOT A BIT LONELY

DEAR ABBY: Here’s what I’d tell “Lonely”: Take a course in self-development. Programs are available for developing skills and learning to live life from the perspective of “possibilities.”

Do something for someone in a nursing home or visit Alzheimer’s patients. Read to them or just hold a hand. When you get a smile from these patients, you’ll know your presence really makes a difference. Join the Red Hat Society. Most of the members are alone and have a great time together.

Volunteer at church, teach Sunday school, work with the homeless in a shelter. Do something for someone who has less. Our world needs people with warm hearts and the time to contribute. You will be amazed at how great you’ll feel.

— LORRAINE IN
ENCINITAS, CALIF.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*“And from the day that’s over
No flashes of delight I can recover;
But only dreary winter streets,
and faces
Of people moving in loud
clanging places.”*

— Siegfried Sassoon

This week’s deals are from previous years’ Cavendish Auction Pairs and Teams, honoring this year’s event now being played in Las Vegas. You can follow the action at Bridgebase.com.

Piotr Gawrys and Zia Mahmood really set up their opponents for the kill in today’s diamond game from the Cavendish Teams. Duplicated boards were being used across the field, and the normal outcome here was for South to show both minors and drive to game. This was frequently doubled, and the defenders, who had a picture of declarer’s hand, took a heart, a diamond, and two clubs, since the entries to the North hand were so awkward.

At our heroes’ table, things worked out differently when Zia elected to open a weak two-spades with even less excuse for the bid than West had! After that,
the auction escalated rapidly.
West, having doubled the final contract on little more than general suspicion, led a heart to his partner’s queen.

Can you blame East, who was looking at dummy’s potential source of tricks, for shifting to a club? Gawrys put in the queen successfully and advanced a thoughtful low diamond from hand. West could hardly suspect the position, so ducked the trick, allowing dummy’s jack to win.
With the lead in dummy, Gawrys
simply repeated the club finesse and gave up just one trump trick since he could now ruff a club in dummy after drawing trumps —
11 tricks made!

ANSWER: It looks simple to drive this hand to four hearts, but with such bad trumps, you might find that this was the only game that could not be made. My best guess would be to bid three no-trump.
Even if partner does not have the spade king, the spades may be easier to exploit at no-trump. A less unilateral position is to bid three hearts, hoping partner will bid three no-trump if it is right.

IF MAY 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Fulfill your fantasies during the next six to eight weeks. Your romantic nature is in full blossom, so go ahead with plans for a romantic escapade or the fun-filled vacation you have dreamed of taking. In August, your business expertise ends up front and center, making it a good month for financial decisions or career moves. Shoulder responsibilities with a smile and pass the cosmic tests that enter your life in late September and early October. Making sudden changes during those times can have a detrimental effect on career aspirations and a romance could head south if you place heavy demands upon a significant other. In December, you are too friendly and too gullible for your own good, so keep a new companion at arm's length.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): All work and no play can make Jack or Jill dull, dull, dull. You risk being seen as a single-minded individual who thinks of only work at the expense of life's other pleasures. Take a deserved break.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Simple pleasures bring personal peace. You might dress up in your best in anticipation that the next person you charm will be "the" one, only to find out that you could have shown up in jeans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Know your limitations. The boundless optimism of friends and companions might rub off, so you may bite off more than you can chew and regret it later. Preparation and wise planning is the key to success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is time to be less timid. Once someone else has made the first move, you have no reason to hide or retreat. You can grab someone's hand in friendship or join in on a group discussion or project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Throw the dice. You need to be reminded of how often a chance meeting with an influential character changes the future. Your best success comes from setting a fine example of industry for others to follow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be sure to get crucial details ironed out with others before misunderstandings get a foothold and multiply. Loved ones are more than willing to accept an apology. Don't be so cryptic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Double dealing is dealt a blow. Someone who opposed your wishes might be put on the spot. Dealing fairly and honestly with others will bring you self-satisfaction and strengthen worthwhile ties.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It may pay to keep your options open. Don't put all your eggs in one basket. Your business skills might be enhanced because you have wise guidance from but don't put your money on the line.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Act on inspirational ideas. Grab a book or video and learn some more. A deep and abiding philosophy will act as an umbrella if storm clouds blow your way. Dull routines give way to excitement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A hand taken in friendship is worth two in the bush. Don't let business or career interfere with your relationships. Some ideas that look good on the surface may not hold up under scrutiny.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Not all oldies are good-ies. A stodgy, conservative outlook or old-fashioned surroundings might cramp your style and make you uncomfortable. You will prefer to be modern and hang out with contemporaries.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An image or a sound can have an emotional impact. Others may accuse you of being unsympathetic when you are simply preoccupied. Money could burn a hole in your pocket if you don't hide it away.

Spartans blast Bruins to earn state baseball berth

By John Derr
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Minico brought the big sticks. The Spartans tallied 11 doubles on their way to a dominating 21-6 run-rule victory over Twin Falls in the Class 4A District IV baseball tournament to earn a trip back to the state tournament. Minico also had 10 singles and a home run while forcing the Bruins into three pitching changes in the six-inning affair.

Despite dropping two of three to Twin Falls during the regular season, it was all Spartans from the beginning of this one. The first inning lasted nearly an hour — the game nearly three. KJ Redder smacked the first of his three doubles to bring home the first two runs then later scored on a single by Slade Winmill. “We wanted to attack the very first inning. We knew we were going to win and go to state and win it all,” said Redder, who went 4-for-5 with four RBIs and scored three runs. “We played like dirtbags — hit it hard and get a hit.” An infield error extended the top of the first while Tanner Anderson and Suede Denker both chipped in RBI singles to put Minico up 6-0. TJ Ellis came on in relief of Zayne Slotten, but Minico chipped in another run off another infield error before the Bruins found something to cheer about. Two free passes in the second inning set the table for

Bruin leadoff hitter Casey Merritt, who sent one over the fence in left-center finally to put a spark in the Twin Falls dugout. It didn’t last long as the Minico party continued in the fourth. Tallying four doubles (Dakota Rupard, Jordan Nessen, Sagar Navarez and Denker) in the inning, the Spartans went up 11-4. Tucker Donnelly chipped in a two-run double for the Bruins, but the Spartans went back to smacking doubles in the fifth. Redder had another while Casey Christensen and Winmill also found a gap as the lead grew to eight runs. “We have been swinging it really well. We have seen all their pitchers and know they have good arms. We knew if they came up with a good approach we could get some hits,” said Christensen, who went 4 of 5 with an RBI and scored four runs. Christensen came on in the fifth for Navarez to slam the door shut, allowing a single hit and striking out five.

Denker, who had five RBIs, chipped in a three-run homer in the sixth to add an exclamation point to the victory. “Coach told me if we were up he would bring me in to close it. My team gave me plenty of insurance runs,” said Christensen. The Bruins now wait until Wednesday to face the winner of Burley vs. Canyon Ridge for the second berth to state.

GOING GREEN

Buhl’s Crossland, Kimberly teams win 3A districts

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

BUHL — It didn’t take long for Kade Crossland to realize it was going to be a good day. The Buhl golfer hit his tee shot on the No. 1 hole within five feet of the pin and knocked in the putt for an eagle. “It felt good,” said Crossland of a start that included a birdie on No. 3 and led to a 76, earning him medalist honors at the Class 3A District IV state qualifier at Clear Lake Country Club. “I just tried to keep it in the fairway and get on the green.” While Crossland’s stellar beginning keyed the individual title, the team championship and berth to the 3A state tournament came down to the very end. With the scores of the top four golfers recorded on each shot, Filer held a one-stroke lead over Kimberly. But the Bulldogs’ fifth golfer, freshman Matt HoChee, came through with an 84 to give Kimberly the coveted team slot to the May 16-17 state tournament at Scotch Pines Golf Course in Payette. “I was just focused on beating my Filer guy because I knew it was going to be close,” said HoChee, who outshot Filer counterpart Jesse Vierstra by nine strokes. “I was striking it well. My chipping wasn’t all that great, but my putting kept me in it.” It was the opposite for defending district medalist Gage Huft. The Kimberly senior was the favorite for the individual title, but wound up with an 82. “It was difficult,” said Huft. “... I definitely wasn’t putting very good today. I felt like I hit good shots into the green and usually found the fairway, but I was having trouble putting.” While Crossland had a few bad holes, he survived the windy conditions pretty well. “My competitors played good too,” said Crossland, who will be joined at state by Filer’s Alex Dey, who qualified individually with an 83. “It was a fun round — kind of hard in the wind,

Castleford’s Harr, Howard shine at 2A state golf qualifier

By Ryan Howe

BURLEY — The Burley Golf Course clubhouse looked more like a ski lodge Monday. Wearing coats, gloves and hats, golfers were dressed more appropriately for a snowboarding trip than a district golf tournament. Despite the rain, snow and wind that made most competitors miserable, the elements brought out the best in two Castleford golfers. Freshman Sierra Harr shaved seven strokes off her best score of the season, carding an 8-over-par 83 to earn girls medalist honors at the Class 2A/1A District IV state qualifier. “I just tried to keep gloves on because I kept catching it thin because my hands were so cold,” Harr said. “Other than that, you’ve just got to see what the wind is doing and club up or club down. ... The whole year I haven’t been playing good. I think the rain today made me swing smoother because I had been swinging so hard at it that I can’t hit it.”

and play and whatever comes, comes,” Howard said. “I just made pretty good putts, some good chips and just played smart. I had confidence in myself, but I didn’t know that I would shoot that good.” The Castleford boys (351) won the team title, while Declo (361) finished runner-up and Gooding (386) was third. All three teams qualified for the state tournament, which will be held May 16-17 at Lakeview Golf Course in Meridian. Travis Robinson of Oakley, Zac Reid of Hagerman and Zach Zollinger of Raft River qualified for state individually by placing in the top eight. For the girls, Gooding (497) carted home the team trophy and will join runner-up Declo (515) at the state tournament. Harr and Wendell’s Halie Hope qualified for state as individuals.

My beer isn’t the only thing getting lighter

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

(Editor’s note: This is part of a four-month series as Times-News writer Ryan Howe starts from scratch and trains for the 25th Annual Spudman Triathlon, July 30 in Burley. Follow his progress at Magicvalley.com/blogs and Facebook: Times-News Ryan Howe. Email him at rhowe@magicvalley.com.)

The problem with documenting my Spudman Triathlon training in the Times-News is suddenly I have thousands of accountability partners. The other day while covering a high school baseball game, I ordered a hamburger and fries from the concession stand. “You can’t eat that. You’re in training,” said the man behind the counter. “I’m going to tell Coach Alice.” Last month, I met my bike mentor, Ken Stephens. He taught me the different types of bike frames — carbon fiber, steel, titanium, aluminum, etc. — and how each material affects the weight of the bike. Then he paused, looked me in the eye and said, “The lighter you are, the faster you’ll go.” I sensed immediately that Ken was no longer talking about the bike. He was talking about me. I admit to owning a few extra pounds. According to the Body Mass Index (BMI) chart, I am “overweight” for my height and age. My triathlon coach, Alice Schenk, sent me to Lori Johnson, a registered dietitian at Minidoka Memorial Hospital, to learn about nutrition for endurance athletes. “You would never put low-grade oil into a Ferrari,” Schenk said. “And if you are training for an event, the closer you eat to the earth and the more nutrients you put in the body, the better the performance of your engine.” Johnson is incredibly intelligent and an excellent dietitian. She’s a passionate, extra-mile type of person. In fact, she sent me home with a basket of healthy food and a stack of sports nutrition books totaling 1,236 pages. She also gave me several recipes, including 16 different ways to prepare kale. When I agreed to train for this triathlon, I figured the extent of my nutritional commitment would be to switch to light beer. Turns out, it’s a little more complicated than that. However, the last thing I want to do is go on a diet. “Diet is a four-letter word,” Johnson said, much to my relief. “I don’t put my patients on a diet. I don’t expect perfection, it’s progression. You need to treat yourself once in a while.” Instead of “diet,” Johnson calls it a “meal plan.” “We want to fuel your body to enhance your performance, and that means making sure you’re getting a well-balanced diet. If you feed the machine well, you will have more energy,” said Johnson, who also has run two marathons. According to Johnson, BMI is not the be-all, end-all. She said a person’s ideal weight is “whatever you feel good at. ... Ryan, you are not overweight.”

Kimberly baseball outlasts Filer to reach title game

Times-News

Filer baseball coach Lance Richardson said his team played its best game of the season on Monday.

It wasn't quite enough, as the Wildcats saw their season come to a close with a 7-6 loss to Kimberly in the Class 3A District IV baseball tournament. The Bulldogs, the No. 1 seed in the district tourney, won the game in the eighth inning when Nic Olsen's infield fly ball was dropped for Filer's seventh error, allowing Kimberly's Dally Charters to come home.

Filer's Andrew Peterson hit two home runs, while Jordon Brown and Dalton Shottswell added homers, helping the Wildcats take a 6-2 lead going into the sixth inning. But Kimberly scored four times in the sixth, largely thanks to four Filer errors.

"We let them back in the game when we had the nail in the coffin," said Richardson. "But my boys came out with a lot of heart today."

Ridge Lee hit a two-run double for the Bulldogs, while Jordan Gentry went 2-for-3. Sam Bourgeois got the win, striking out 12 while issuing one walk. Jordon Brown pitched well for Filer with 16 strikeouts and three walks.

Kimberly faces Buhl in the championship game on Wednesday and needs to beat the Indians twice to claim the title.

BUHL 9, FILER 8

This one was all about the third inning.

Buhl's Kendyl Hamilton and Katherine Hunter hit consecutive home runs in the third as the Indians scored six runs en route to a 9-8 victory in the Class 4A District IV Tournament. Filer committed four of its six errors in the third, falling behind 9-2 before rallying.

"That inning right there just totally got us," said Filer coach Todd Mansfield. "It was unbelievable. The wheels fell off."

Hamilton's homer chased Filer starter Taylor Barlogi, but when Taylor Hinkle came on in relief, she surrendered a homer to Hunter. Hinkle settled in from there, but Filer came up short.

Buhl advances to face top-seeded Kimberly in the district championship game Wednesday, needing to win over the Bulldogs to earn the title.

CANYON RIDGE 5, JEROME 4

Canyon Ridge avenged its first-round loss to Jerome on Monday by beating the Tigers 5-4 in an elimination game in the Class 4A District IV Tournament.

Riverhawks pitcher Scott Speer struck out eight and allowed just one earned run in the victory.

Tied 4-4 heading into the seventh, CRHS leadoff batter Kayleb Price was hit by a pitch, and later scored the go-ahead run on an RBI by Brandon Bradshaw.

In the bottom of the seventh, Speer held Jerome to three-up, three-down to preserve the win.

Jerome pitcher Jordy Garrard was tabbed with the loss despite only two earned runs. The Tigers end their season 12-12.

"Canyon Ridge deserved to win. They played the game of baseball better than we did today," said Jerome coach Tom Bobrowski.

The Riverhawks (13-12) play Burley in another elimination game at 5 p.m. today.

Did I mention Johnson is incredibly intelligent and an excellent dietitian?

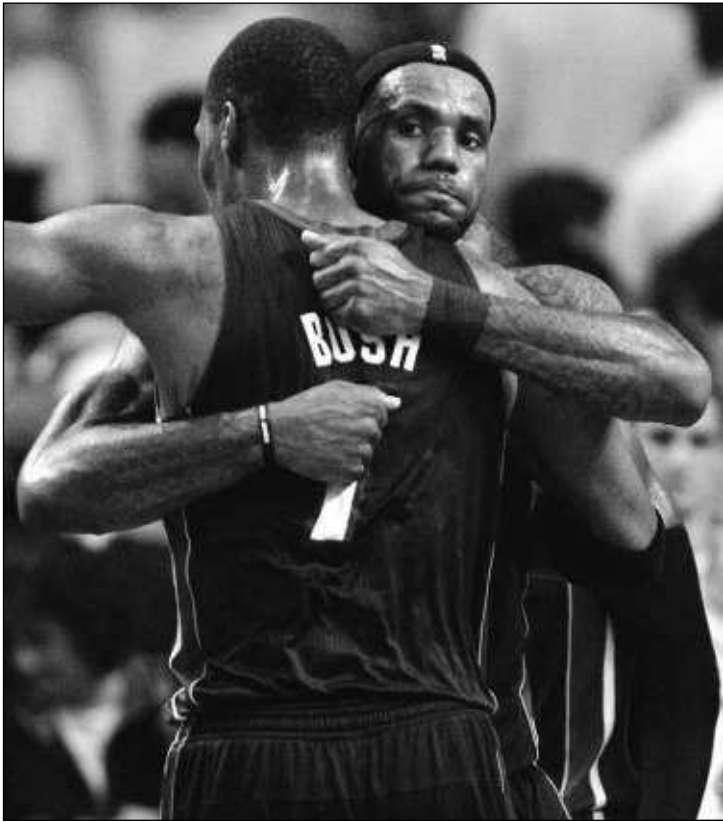

Without altering my diet, I've lost eight pounds since training began six weeks ago. Weight loss is not the goal, but has been a pleasant side effect.

"In your situation, you're training for a big event, so (losing weight) shouldn't be your No. 1 priority," Johnson said. "If it happens, fine. But I want you to feel good during your training sessions."

For the 12 weeks remaining in my training, I won't get caught up in counting calories. However, I have a "meal plan" and will be more conscious with my food choices, focusing on moderation, balance, good carbohydrates, lean proteins and healthy fats.

And once this is all done, there will be a cold one waiting for me at the finish line.

James, Wade lead Heat

BOSTON (AP) — Miami's Big Three was assembled for just this purpose: To dominate the bullies from Boston who knocked them from the playoffs so many times before.

LeBron James scored 35 points, Dwyane Wade had 28 and Chris Bosh had 20 on Monday night to give the Heat a 98-90 overtime victory over the Celtics and move Miami within one game of the Eastern Conference finals. The Heat lead the best-of-seven East semifinals 3-1, with a chance to close out the series in Miami on Wednesday.

"Wednesday night will be our greatest challenge that we've had with this group so far," Miami coach Erik Spoelstra said. "We'll get their best games on Wednesday. And we have to be better. If we're real about what we want to do, we have to beat the Boston Celtics at their best."

One game after their worst performance as a threesome, James, Wade and Bosh had 83 of Miami's 98 points and 35 of its 45 rebounds. They scored all 12 of Miami's points in overtime; Bosh and Wade had five apiece after James' fall-away jumper on the Heat's first possession of the extra period gave them the lead for good.

"We're the guys. We're the ones who get all the attention. We're the ones that get all the praise," Wade said. "This team is going to go as far as us three takes it."

Paul Pierce scored 27, Ray Allen had 17 and Kevin Garnett had seven points and 10 rebounds for Boston. Rajon Rondo, who dislocated his left elbow Saturday night in Game 3, played 39 minutes with a padded sleeve covering what appeared to be a brace on his left arm, scoring 10

Oklahoma City and Memphis were in double overtime at press time on Monday. The game, hosted by Memphis, was tied 109-109 after the first overtime. Memphis led the series 2-1 entering the game.

with five assists.

The Celtics would need to win the next three games — two in Miami — to have a chance to defend their Eastern Conference championship.

"These are those moments. I look forward to it," Allen said. "Everybody on this team, we know what to do. We can't talk about it; we just have to put our best foot forward. It's not easy. It just makes it that much more special if we're able to do it."

Boston has reached the NBA finals in two of the last three seasons, both times knocking James and the Cavaliers out along the way. The Celtics eliminated the Heat last year one round after knocking Cleveland out and sending James on the journey that landed him in Miami.

In all, Wade had lost 11 straight regular-season and playoff games in Boston. James had lost 13 of 15, including the one that ended his Cleveland career.

"I haven't had much success in this building," James said. "We put a lot of pressure on ourselves to just come out and do whatever it took."

Boston took an 84-81 lead with 2:28 left after back-to-back 3-pointers by Delonte West and Allen, but James hit a 3 to tie it and then made a left-handed lay-in with 48 seconds to play to give Miami an 86-84 lead.

Phillies turn four double plays, top Marlins

MIAMI — The Philadelphia Phillies turned four double plays behind Joe Blanton, who came off the disabled list to pitch five innings and earn his first victory of the season by helping to beat the Florida Marlins 6-4 on Monday night.

Blanton (1-1) allowed eight hits but left with a 6-3 lead. He made his first start since April 23 after being sidelined with an impingement in his throwing elbow.

The Phillies won for the 18th time in their past 21 games in Miami.

The Marlins' start matches the best in franchise history, but they've lost four of their past five games to fall three behind the NL East-leading Phillies (23-11), who have the best record in the majors.

BREWERS 4, PADRES 3

MILWAUKEE — Zack Greinke struck out nine over six effective innings in his home debut and Rickie Weeks homered, lifting Milwaukee over San Diego.

Greinke (1-1) bounced back from a disappointing start Wednesday for his first win with the Brewers by allowing five hits to the struggling Padres, who came in with a major league-worst .215 batting average.

REDS 6, ASTROS 1

HOUSTON — Travis Wood hit a three-run homer and pitched shutout ball into the seventh inning to lead Cincinnati over Houston.

Wood's shot to the Crawford Boxes in left field made it 3-0 in the third inning and Ramon Hernandez pushed the lead to 5-0 with a two-run homer to almost the same spot an inning later.

PIRATES 4, DODGERS 1

PITTSBURGH — Neil Walker hit a tiebreaking double in the eighth inning and surging Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles to move above .500 in mid-May for the first time in seven years.

Garrett Jones led off the eighth with a walk before Walker laced a shot into the right-field corner off Los Angeles starter Chad Billingsley (2-2). Jones scored all the way from first to give the Pirates a 2-1 lead.

ROCKIES 2, METS 1

ta broke a seventh-inning tie with a homer that barely cleared the left-field wall and Colorado snapped its four-game skid. Iannetta, who stretched out a double that led to Colorado's first run two innings earlier, sent an 81 mph slider from lefty Chris Capuano into the tunnel down the left-field line for his fifth home run with one out in the seventh.

Matt Belisle (3-2) got two outs for the win, Colorado's fifth in five games against the Mets this season. They swept a four-game series at Citi Field in April.

AMERICAN LEAGUE RED SOX 2, TWINS 1

BOSTON — Pinch-runner Jose Iglesias raced around first to score on close play at the plate on Carl Crawford's one-out double off the left-field wall in the bottom of the 11th inning, lifting the Boston Red Sox to a 2-1 win over the Minnesota Twins.

Boston beat Minnesota the final three games of a four-game series, and won for the 11th time in 12 games in Fenway Park.

TIGERS 10, BLUE JAYS 5

TORONTO — Max Scherzer won his sixth consecutive decision, Victor Martinez hit a two-run homer and Detroit beat Toronto.

Scherzer (6-0) has not lost in eight starts this season. His season-opening winning streak is the longest by a Tigers pitcher since Jeremy Bonderman won eight straight in 2007.

ATHLETICS 7, RANGERS 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Trevor Cahill pitched seven strong innings to earn his sixth straight win to start the season and Josh Willingham homered and drove in five runs and Oakland beat Texas.

Cahill (6-0) matched the major league lead with his sixth victory, and equaled his career best by winning his seventh consecutive decision. The 23-year-old right-hander struck out seven, walked one and allowed five hits. He became Oakland's first 6-0 starter in 21 years.

Ernie Els leads class of 6 golfers into Hall of Fame

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Ernie Els followed the trail of South African idol Gary Player by winning golf tournaments all over the world, a journey that took him all the way to the World Golf Hall of Fame.

Els, a three-time major champion and the ultimate global player of his generation, was among six people inducted Monday night at the World Golf Village. Known as the “Big Easy” for his languid swing and soothing smile, Els won 62 times around the world, including the U.S. Open twice and a British Open at Muirfield.

Even as he still pursues more majors, Els is heavily involved in research and finding a cure for autism. His 8-year-old son, Ben, is autistic, and the boy was escorted into the room as a video of Els’ career was being played, his eyes fixated on the screen. Els later spoke of the joy he feels having his son sit on the range with him as he hits balls.

“He’ll sit there and watch the ball take off in the blue sky,” Els said.

Els was elected on the PGA Tour ballot. Japanese icon Jumbo Ozaki, who won more than 100 tournaments, was voted into the Hall of Fame on the International ballot. Doug Ford and the late Jock Hutchison, both two-time major champions, were selected through the Veterans category. Former President George H.W. Bush and the late Frank Chirkinian, the television golf producer for CBS Sports, were selected through the Lifetime Achievement category.

Their induction brought membership in the Hall of Fame to 136.

Els and Ford were the only inductees at the ceremony. Ozaki has a back injury that makes it difficult to travel, and he felt he needed to be home with his family as Japan recovers from the earthquake and tsunami. Bush also was not able to attend. Chirkinian had a videotaped message that was made just days before he died.

The ceremony included a tribute to another Hall of Famer, Seve Ballesteros, who died Saturday of a cancerous brain tumor.

Players must be at least 40 to be considered for the Hall of Fame, and Els was voted in on his first try. This is the first time since Vijay Singh in 2006 when an active player was inducted. Els practiced Monday morning at the TPC Sawgrass as he prepares for The Players Championship this week.

“I think it’ll be a very special feeling to step on the first tee knowing you’ve made the Hall of Fame,” he before the ceremony. “I’m still trying to win golf tournaments, still trying to win major championships. I think it’s a huge bonus for anybody’s career.”

Els grew up knowing he would have to travel the world to play golf. The example came from Player, who has logged more air miles than any other golfer.

Els won the Junior World Championship in San Diego as a teenager, beating Phil Mickelson. He won nine times on three tours when he broke through in 1994, winning the U.S. Open at Oakmont in a playoff that lasted 20 holes in stifling heat.

He won another U.S. Open at Congressional three years later, and captured the British Open in 2002.

“Coming from South Africa, I didn’t even know there was a Hall of Fame,” Els said. “I look back in the records now, the Hall of Fame has been going since 1940. So obviously, I missed something. My dream was to win majors and to try to do what Gary Player did, win the Grand Slam and win a bunch of golf tournaments, trying to get onto the U.S. tour and things like that.”

Asked what made him unique, Els said he would leave that for others to decide.

“You don’t get inducted in here without doing something to catch people’s attention,” he said.

Romo talks Cowboys’ player-run practices at U.S. Open qualifier

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — No coaches. No reporters. No fans. Just football.

Tony Romo and the Dallas Cowboys kind of like it that way. For now, at least.

With the lockout keeping NFL teams from their usual offseason practices, Romo has organized a series of workouts that have been attended by more than 40 players.

“Being back on the field, guys get their juices flowing a little bit,” Romo said. “It’s not really work when you’re out there. You can tell when guys are running around, they’re enjoying it.”

The sessions, which began last week, aren’t just guys hanging out or throwing balls around. They are highly structured, with Romo watching the clock and blowing a whistle at the end of each drill so everyone knows to move on to the next one. There are walkthrough periods and specific plays to be worked on each day.

“It’s literally like we’re doing the same things we’d be doing at an OTA — the tempo and everything,” Romo said Monday. “I’ve been around it long enough that I have plenty of schedules laying around my house that I’ve been able to use for the time frame. We’re at stretch for seven minutes. Bam, you go right into ‘pat and go.’ We move right into ‘move the ball.’ And guys are going. You jump in and, boom, you’re in the next play. We’re pushing it. ... I can’t imagine other teams going quite to the extent of the team practices, and that’s exciting to us.”

Players haven’t said when or where they are gathering because they don’t want anyone watching. Why be so secretive?

“It just doesn’t benefit us in any way to be going out there and letting people (watch),” Romo said. “If we run a certain route and the defense busts on a play, and Jason Witten runs up the middle of the field and it looks like someone didn’t cover him, then someone is to blame. ...

“We don’t need that from outside influences right now. It just needs to be about us, and about improvement. I think sometimes when you bring media or people in to talk about it, then it kind of adds (pressure). Now all of a sudden, guys would be doing things they probably don’t need to be doing.”

The Cowboys have a new defensive coordinator in Rob Ryan. While they’ll still use a 3-4 front, his playbook is different from the one Wade Phillips left behind. The terminology is different, too, which is part of what players are learning.

Romo said there are times when the defense will stop and discuss a particular play to make sure everyone understands what to do. He said such breaks are easier to do at this kind of informal workout.

That level of detail shows the Cowboys aren’t getting together strictly for bonding. Romo said they could go bowling if that was their aim.

“Personally I think it’s about sharpening skills and getting better,” he said. “I think the bonding stuff comes with doing that.”

Leadership, too.

Romo has often been criticized for not taking charge like many established quarterbacks do. This shows otherwise, with the large turnout indicating he has plenty of followers.

NASCAR walking fine line in policing its policy on fighting

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The boys, it seems, are still having at it, and NASCAR, to no surprise, still has no defined line on its year-old policy of letting drivers settle their own scores.

That’s the conundrum NASCAR leaders faced Monday as they huddled to review a pair of weekend altercations at Darlington Raceway that raised attention to the ratings-challenged series, but tested the limits of just how far feuds should be permitted to play out.

The first, between Juan Pablo Montoya and Ryan Newman, happened behind closed doors with only NASCAR’s top officials present to witness a Friday meeting that “did not go as well as we had hoped.” Rumor has it that Newman punched Montoya in the meeting, a claim neither driver would confirm or deny.

But that NASCAR took the unprecedented step to issue a statement — one that promised further scrutiny of the two drivers — was confirmation enough that something bad went down in the tight confines of NASCAR’s attack office.

It turned out to be just the opening act.

Kyle Busch and Kevin Harvick, who have a long history of not getting along, then tangled on the track in the closing laps of Saturday night’s race. Only Busch knows if the contact he had with Harvick, which led to Harvick teammate Clint Bowyer’s race-ending crash, was intentional.

Busch claims it wasn’t, just one of those racing incidents he attributed to Harvick’s lack of on-track etiquette, but Harvick had no interest in calmly discussing the incident. So he stalked Busch after the checkered flag, stopping his car on pit road in front of Busch.

NASCAR driver Ryan Newman was involved in a confrontation with fellow driver Juan Pablo Montoya.

Busch maybe could have driven around him, but instead pulled up to Harvick’s bumper. And when Harvick climbed from his car, approached Busch’s window, and as he leaned in to throw a punch, Busch bumped Harvick’s empty car enough to send it spinning into the wall. It cleared a path for Busch to drive away.

Race fans love the drama, and the post-race fireworks far overshadowed the upset of Regan Smith — NASCAR’s equivalent of a No. 16 seed — beating points leader Carl Edwards — obviously, a No. 1 seed — to the finish in one of the most prestigious races of the season.

In fact, the conversation the last two weeks has not been on the racing or the winners. It’s instead been centered on all the other nonsense: the Montoya-

Newman scuffle that stretched from Richmond to Darlington, Martin Truex Jr. firing his crew over a botched final pit stop, Kurt Busch’s mid-race meltdown on his radio, and now another Busch vs. Harvick feud.

NASCAR will likely punish Busch, Harvick, Montoya and Newman. But figuring out how to scold the drivers without totally discouraging the behavior is a difficult task.

There’s precedence in nearly every case.

Robby Gordon drew season-long probation in March for socking Kevin Conway in the garage at Las Vegas, but Jeff Gordon and Jeff Burton both went unpunished for an on-track shoving match last November at Texas.

When it comes to meetings in the hauler, which NASCAR is infamously tightlipped about, the sanctioning body took no action in 2008 when Tony Stewart allegedly popped Kurt Busch in front of series officials.
