Charter school board
continues transitions

By Ben Botkin

Times-News writer

The Xavier Charter School Board took an initial look at a proposed termination agreement with its private management company on Thursday.

Though no action was taken, it was another sign of the board's efforts to move the Twin Falls charter school beyond the controversy that has included the tumultuous departure of Principal Cindy Fulcher and separate, unrelated questions about the school's finances under the management of Paragon Schools.

Two of the school board's members reported earlier that their look at Paragon found no evidence of financial wrongdoing by the company. But trustees still appear to be heading toward ending their relationship with the company.

Trustee Shawn Willsey presented the proposed agreement setting forth the end of Paragon's services. Under the proposal, the management company would turn over all of the school's records and data and no longer be paid after July 1. But Paragon would still make itself available to the school during July free of charge to help with any questions that come up during the transition.

As summer travel nears, Congress looks to reduce gas prices — perhaps with drilling

By Ben Botkin

Times-News writer

JEROME — Idaho's average gas price isn't far from $4 per gallon of unleaded — a cost that evokes grimaces of chagrin at the pump.

It's become a wallop on the wallet that's rekindled a familiar debate about what the best solution is for the nation's future fuel needs. In Congress, there's been a push to speed up more offshore drilling and encourage the Obama administration to more readily issue permits for wells that meet safety standards.

The U.S. House of Representatives passed legislation this week meant to boost domestic oil production from offshore rigs in the long term to reduce the nation's reliance on foreign fuel. Under the legislation, the federal government would have to decide whether to issue a permit within 30 days of receiving an application. Beyond that 30-day period, only two 15-day extensions are allowed.

Judge denies May's request to change plea

By Bradley Guire

Times-News writer

Despite his attempts to do a legal 180-degree turn, Marcus May's plea is still officially "guilty."

Judge G. Richard Bevan on Friday denied May's motion to withdraw a guilty plea made in January, in which May agreed to a sentence of 10 to 30 years in state prison for felony aggravated battery and misdemeanor eluding a police officer.

At the hearing, Bevan found none of May's claims to be valid, noting that May never made an assertion of innocence as a reason to withdraw the plea.

"The new testimony is a product of second-guessing and wishful thinking," Bevan said in his ruling, further calling the motion and hearing a "waste of resources."

Vehicular assault case advances

Times-News

A Twin Falls man accused of ramming police patrol cars with his own vehicle had his case sent to district court.

Lee Randall Fife, 40, will answer to charges of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, aggravated battery with a deadly weapon and eluding police now that Judge Roger Harris has found probable cause to formally charge Fife during Friday morning's preliminary hearing in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court.

Fife

District Court Judge G. Richard Bevan was assigned the case, but an arraignment date has not been set.

Fife allegedly tried to hit patrol cars while attempting to escape three units that were on the verge of cornering him in a cul-de-sac at Elizabeth Park Circle on April 5. Officers opened fire on Fife's car, and Officer Isaiah Day's shots hit Fife, ending the pursuit.

Day and two other Twin Falls patrolmen, Aaron Nay and Jeremy Trump, testified at the preliminary hearing.

Horse advocates turn out for hearing in Nevada

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Wild horse advocates packed a Nevada Senate committee hearing Friday to oppose a bill that would exclude wild horses and burros from the definition of wildlife.

The definition under AB329 would prevent the state water engineer from approving water rights to benefit wild horses that roam the Nevada desert, such as water rights acquired by the BLM, which manages the horses.

Bipartisan backers say the purpose of the bill is to stop the federal government from acquiring water rights for horses under the guise of beneficial use for wildlife.

But wild horse advocates argue the bill would deny the animals access to water and prevent water rights being issued if someone were to establish a wild horse sanctuary to promote eco-tourism.

Mini-Cassia group helps relocate animal victims of difficult times

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

PAUL — Giving up a cherished pet adds an extra twinge of pain for people already struggling with health or economic concerns.

During her eight years of off-and-on operation of Ivory Rescue in Rupert, Christine Beavers has heard her share of stories from pet owners who are unable to care for themselves, let alone their furry friends.

"There are people hurting out there, and when I hear their stories it breaks my heart," she said.

But Beavers and her rescue group do more than listen, seeking out new homes for pets that have fallen on hard times.

Twin Falls resident Barbara Hepworth, 68, was recently hospitalized with a couple of bouts of pneumonia and now uses an oxygen tank to help her breathe. Her husband has health problems as well. Hepworth is faced with relinquishing her silky Yorkshire terrier, Harley, to Beavers.

Hepworth said she couldn't bear to take Harley to an animal shelter due to the chance he could be euthanized there if he isn't adopted.

"I can't keep up with him anymore, and I feel like he's suffering for it now," Hepworth said of the little dog that sleeps with her at night and cuddles with her in her chair.

Beavers may have found the perfect home for Harley in Rupert, and plans a transport trip to Twin Falls to bring him to Mini-Cassia this weekend.

"I'm so happy that she may be able to come and pick him up," Hepworth said. "I don't have enough stamina to make it out to the mailbox."

On her trip to Twin Falls, Beavers said, she'll also pick up four dogs from a Jerome woman who is living in her car with the animals and her 5-year-old daughter.

Ivory Rescue doesn't charge fees for pets that are given up or adopted out.

Ivory Rescue is seeking people willing to foster animals, adopt pets, or donate animal food and pet supplies. The organization does not charge fees for relinquishing animals or for adoptions. Information: Christine Beavers, 438-8172.

"I just ask that the owners bring any dog food and pet supplies that they have with them, which helps me take care of the animals," Beavers said.

Ivory Rescue requires that adoptive families sign a simple contract pledging to provide basic care for each animal and bring the animal back if adoption doesn't work out. It doesn't take or place farm animals.

"I'm amazed at Christine," said Pat Fenton, who helps with Ivory Rescue transport. "She's the perfect person for this. She wants to help everyone."

Beavers said people involved in animal rescue are very susceptible to burnout because the work is demanding, both physically and emotionally.

"Sometimes the phone calls just don't stop, and it can get very overwhelming," Beavers said. "But I've never been one to stand on the sidelines."

May, 26, of Buhl, allegedly shot James Lambert, the boyfriend of May's ex-girlfriend, with a 9 mm pistol in May 2010. May fled the scene and was pursued by police, and the chase ended when police shot May while he was still in his vehicle. May pleaded not guilty in September, then pleaded guilty in January. The motion to withdraw the guilty plea was filed in late April.

May claimed that his previous attorney, Ben Andersen of the Twin Falls County Public Defender's Office, did not adequately explain the terms of the plea and forced him into signing. His new attorney, Tim Williams, said May signed a written plea of guilty — a 10-page document used in all criminal cases for guilty pleas — but that without an understanding of what the plea meant, May's answers are invalid.

May also claimed that Andersen threatened him with 65 years in prison if he didn't plead guilty. Andersen testified that he told May 65 years was the possible maximum prison term he faced if he was convicted and ordered to serve the terms consecutively. Bevan called Andersen a competent lawyer and rejected any notion of coercion.

Sentencing will likely be set for next week or possibly as late as July, depending on Bevan's schedule.

Officials decided to review the agreement further before approving it.

In another sign of further transition ahead, board Chairwoman Teresa Berry announced that she intends to resign for family reasons. She said she's "learned a lot" in the last two years and will formally submit her resignation within a few weeks.

The board also heard a budget presentation from its interim administrators, Kelly Murphey and Mel Wiseman. For the coming fiscal year, which begins July 1, Xavier will need to decide how to patch a budget hole of $620,670.

The decisions of what to trim will be up to the school's stakeholders and board, Wiseman said.

"You folks need to be part of the process," he said, encouraging them to call with questions and look through the budget. "Everybody's going to have to give a little."

A budget work session was scheduled for Tuesday. After the administrative team finished, the audience of about three dozen gave the duo a round of applause.

new permits, even after the president's moratorium on new offshore drilling following the 2010 BP oil spill was lifted last October. The new legislation, which also requires proposals to meet safety rules, still faces a vote in the U.S. Senate.

Locally, concerns of those feeling the pinch at the pump are more about today's prices and less about energy policy. Motorists stopping at the Flying J truck stop near Jerome for gasoline on Friday had mixed but strong opinions about what approach to offshore drilling is best.

Mike Black, a trucker from Lakeland, Fla., on his way to pick up a load of spuds, said drilling is necessary to reduce the nation's reliance on others.

"Will we do what the bleeding-heart liberals want us to and not do offshore drilling so other countries can drill and we have to buy oil from them?" he asked.

Others are less familiar with offshore drilling and more focused on the federal government's 51-cent mileage reimbursement rate for business travel, which helps less as gasoline prices have increased.

BY THE NUMBERS

Average gasoline prices
Idaho: $3.78 per gallon of regular unleaded
Nation: $3.98 per gallon of regular unleaded
Source: AAA

Analysts say pump prices across the nation could drop to about $3.50 a gallon or less by Memorial Day, as refineries sidelined by temporary outages produce more gas and oil prices drop in reaction.

With Idaho's average already 20 cents below the national norm, the state could continue to see a trend of lower-than-average prices as costs drop.

"Our longer-term prognosis, two to three weeks out, is that gasoline prices will settle a little bit," said Dave Carlson, director of public and government affairs at AAA Idaho.

Members of Idaho's congressional delegation supported the legislation to increase offshore drilling, saying it's needed for the future.

"Domestic energy production is vital to our nation's future security. Refusing to develop our own resources threatens our own nation's security by increasing our dependence on a volatile, foreign-based energy supply," said U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, in a statement. "The 2010 tragedy in the Gulf underscored the need to ensure that we have the proper oversight mechanisms in place to prevent future catastrophes, but it did not change our country's growing demand for oil and natural gas."

"From small businesses to the basic needs of a family — we simply just cannot afford to see the prices at the pump become exponentially more expensive," said U.S. Rep. Raul Labrador, R-Idaho.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Filer school panel recommends cuts

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — After two years of cuts to state funding for education, conditions aren't expected to improve in the near future for the Filer School District.

A special finance committee of community residents and teachers formed in January to examine district finances and come up with suggestions on how to manage a $600,000 shortfall. Members of the Filer School Board heard those recommendations on Wednesday evening.

Committee Chairwoman Lindsay Hubsmith said the group's basic goal was to find areas where possible cuts could be made, and then come up with suggested amounts to cut.

"We decided to leave no stone unturned, but look at each department and arrive at a decision as fairly as possible," Hubsmith said "This list was voted on as a committee, so they're rough numbers and not necessarily my personal opinion."

Suggestions included cutting extracurricular activities across the board by $80,000. Also proposed: cutting information technology by $15,000, the maintenance department by $65,000 and Special Services by $60,000. The food service program would not be cut, but needs to work on balancing its budget.

An additional $200,000 could come from having each school move to a six-hour class schedule. And committee members also recommended that the district approach residents about supporting a $30,000 supplemental levy for the next two years.

"I attended most of these finance committee meetings and there were some tough decisions made," said school board Trustee Fred Jaynes. "We really do appreciate those who participated on the committee."

Some teaching staff in the audience asked board members to approach the committee recommendations and any final decisions with a degree of caution.

"Things are going to be tight but there are other tax dollars yet to come in before the end of this fiscal year," Filer High School teacher James Waterman said "Things are not quite as bad as the powers that be want us to think, so keep this as an option but don't burn bridges."

Others present at the meeting suggested the school board take a deeper crisis-management approach and concentrate funding sources around saving academic educational programs.

"You must take this approach," said high school health science teacher Susan Courtney. "My kids were in sports and did well, but academic education must be the only thing that survives if necessary, and sports is not part of academic education."

Bush says he wasn't overjoyed by bin Laden news

LAS VEGAS (AP) — George W. Bush says he was "not overjoyed" when President Barack Obama told him Osama bin Laden was dead because the campaign to track down the al-Qaida leader was done not "out of hatred, but to exact judgment."

ABC News reports Bush made his first candid public comments on bin Laden's killing Wednesday at a hedge fund conference in Las Vegas.

The former president says he was at a restaurant when he got Obama's call. Bush says Obama described the secret mission in detail.

Bush says he told Obama, "Good call," and noted "the intelligence services deserve a lot of credit."

Bush has kept a low profile since bin Laden's death May 1. He has declined interview requests and Obama's invitation to join him at Ground Zero.

Finances worsen for Medicare, S.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bad economy is worsening the already-shaky finances of Medicare and Social Security, draining the trust funds supporting them faster than expected and intensifying the need for Congress to shore up the massive benefit programs, the government said Friday.

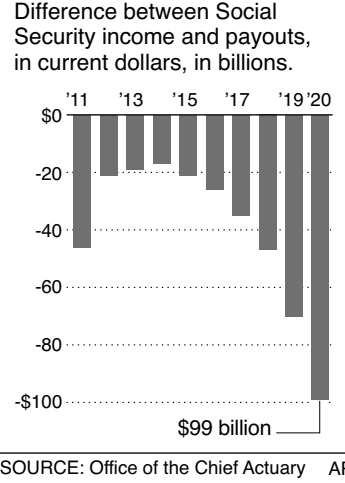

Both Medicare and Social Security are being hit by a double whammy: the long-anticipated wave of retiring baby boomers and weaker-than-expected tax receipts, according to the annual report by the trustees who oversee the programs.

The Medicare hospital insurance fund for seniors is now projected to run out of money in 2024, five years earlier than last year's estimate. The Social Security trust funds are projected to be drained in 2036, one year earlier than the last estimate. Once the trust funds are exhausted, both programs can only collect enough money in payroll taxes to pay partial benefits, the report said.

More immediate bad news for seniors: After they've gone two years with no cost-of-living increase in Social Security payments, the trustees project a 0.7 percent increase for next year, a raise so small that it will probably be wiped out by higher Medicare Part B premiums for most beneficiaries.

"There can no longer be any doubt or denial: Our nation's Medicare and Social Security programs are unsustainable and will run out of money sooner than expected," said Senate Republican

Social security funds

Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky. Congress and the Obama administration are negotiating possible changes to Medicare and other benefit programs as part of a deal to increase the government's ability to borrow. The $14.3 trillion debt ceiling will be hit Monday, though Treasury officials are taking measures to put off an unprecedented default on government bonds until August, Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said.

Congress is putting off changes to Social Security, but Medicare, the government health insurance program for older Americans, is still on the table.

The longer Congress waits to fix the programs, the more likely it is that lawmakers will be forced to impose tax increases, deep benefit cuts, or both, to save them, the report said. By acting sooner, the trustees said Congress can impose gradual changes that reduce the impact on current beneficiaries and give future retirees time to prepare.

"The financial shortfalls confronting both Social Security and Medicare are substantial and — absent legislation to correct them — quite certain," wrote two of the trustees who oversee the programs, Charles P. Blahous III and Robert D. Reischauer. "Elected officials will best serve the interests of the public if financial corrections are enacted at the earliest practicable time."

The weak economy is hurting Medicare and Social Security because fewer people are working and paying payroll taxes that support the programs, the trustees said. Medicare is in worse shape than Social Security, in part because it is also being hit by rising health care costs.

To illustrate the challenges facing the programs, the trustees calculated the tax increases or benefit cuts that would be necessary to make both programs solvent for the next 75 years.

Fixing Social Security would require an increase in the payroll tax of 2.15 percentage points, or an immediate and permanent 14 percent cut in benefits, the report said. Fixing the Medicare hospital fund would require an increase in the payroll tax of nearly 1 percentage point, or a 17 percent cut in benefits.

Tea party godfather Paul to run for president

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Rep. Ron Paul announced Friday that he will run for the GOP nomination for president in 2012, the third attempt for the man known on Capitol Hill as "Dr. No" for his enthusiasm for bashing runaway spending and government overreach.

"Time has come around to the point where the people are agreeing with much of what I've been saying for 30 years. So, I think the time is right," said the 75-year-old Paul, who first ran for president as a Libertarian in 1988.

Paul made his announcement in an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America" from New Hampshire, where he held a rally later Friday.

Three years ago, the former flight surgeon and outspoken critic of the Federal Reserve became an Internet sensation — and a prodigious fundraiser — when he made a spirited but doomed bid for the 2008 Republican presidential nomination.

First elected to Congress in 1976, he is known for holding unconventional views while keeping a smile on his face, espousing a sort of modern Republican populism.

The obstetrician has delivered more than 4,000 babies and is personally against abortion, but he doesn't think the federal government should regulate it. That's a function of state government, he says.

He has also said he wants to abolish the Internal Revenue Service, favors returning the United States to the gold standard in monetary policy and wants the U.S. out of Iraq and Afghanistan.

Democrats have tried repeatedly to beat him in a congressional district that stretches from the outskirts of Corpus Christi to Galveston.

But the independent swath of coastal Texas seems a good fit for the maverick doctor. He has 18 grandchildren, according to his website, and he and his wife of 54 years, Carol, are known widely in Paul's district for the cookbooks they give away to supporters.

"The secret to his success is his authenticity," said Democratic consultant Jeff Crosby, who grew up in Paul's district. "He's an authentic nut."

Crosby, who worked to defeat Paul in 2006 — unsuccessfully — described the difficulty he had trying to persuade voters to reject what he thought were the candidate's radical views.

"Just the mere fact that he does what he says he's going to do, regardless of how nutty or ineffective it may be, they like it," Crosby said. "A lot of folks along the coast have never expected much from government, and they're getting it."

Paul, a native of Pittsburgh, is both a spiritual father and actual father in the tea party movement. His son, tea party darling Rand Paul, won a Senate seat in Kentucky last year and has become an ardent proponent of spending cuts and smaller government.

PETA offers money for anti-dissection ads

KUTZTOWN, Pa. (AP) — People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals has offered a cash-strapped school district an undisclosed amount of money if it allows ads in school promoting alternatives to animal dissection.

PETA recently sent a letter to Kutztown School District Superintendent Nicholas Lazo Jr., offering to pay money if the school allows the posting of ads that say, "STOP SCHOOL VIOLENCE. DO YOUR HOMEWORK — CHOOSE NOT TO DISSECT." Different versions of the ad feature rats, frogs and fetal pigs.

This week the school board approved a $28 million budget that calls for cutting nearly 13 teachers.

Officials to open Louisiana spillway

Move expected to flood thousands of homes, but may avoid bigger disaster

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La. (AP) — In an agonizing trade-off, Army engineers said they will open a key spillway along the bulging Mississippi River as early as today and inundate thousands of homes and farms in parts of Louisiana's Cajun country to avert a potentially bigger disaster in Baton Rouge and New Orleans.

About 25,000 people and 11,000 structures could be in harm's way when the gates on the Morganza spillway are unlocked for the first time in 38 years.

"Protecting lives is the No. 1 priority," Army Corps of Engineers Maj. Gen. Michael Walsh said during a flyover of Mississippi flooding, before the decision was made to open the spillway.

The opening will release a torrent that could submerge about 3,000 square miles under as much as 25 feet of water in some areas but take the pressure off the downstream levees protecting New Orleans, Baton Rouge and the numerous oil refineries and chemical plants along the lower reaches of the Mississippi.

Engineers feared that weeks of pressure on the

Karsten Simrall, 41, expresses his frustrations Thursday over his loss of income, loss of crops and his belief that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has done little to address the potential for Mississippi River flooding over the years at his Redwood, Miss., home. All but 150 acres of his 2,500 acres of farmland is underwater.

levees could cause them to fail, swamping New Orleans under as much as 20 feet of water in a disaster that would have been much worse than Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

Instead, the water will flow 20 miles south into the Atchafalaya Basin. From there it will roll on to Morgan City, an oil-and-seafood hub and a community of 12,000, and then eventually into the Gulf of Mexico, flooding swamps and croplands.

The corps said it will open the gates when the river's flow rate reaches a certain point, expected Saturday. But some people living in the threatened stretch of countryside — an area known for small farms, fish camps and a drawling French dialect — have already started fleeing for higher ground.

Sheriffs and National Guardsmen will warn people in a door-to-door sweep through the area, Gov. Bobby Jindal said. Shelters are ready to accept up to 4,800 evacuees, the governor said.

"Now's the time to evacuate," Jindal said. "Now's the time for our people to execute their plans. That water's coming."

The Army Corps of Engineers employed a similar cities-first strategy earlier this month when it blew up a levee in Missouri — inundating an estimated 200 square miles of farmland and damaging or destroying about 100 homes — to take the pressure off the levees protecting the town of Cairo, Ill., population 2,800.

This intentional flood is more controlled, however, and residents are warned by the corps each year in written letters, reminding them of the possibility of opening the spillway.

Meanwhile, with crop prices soaring, farmers along the lower Mississippi had been expecting a big year. But now many are facing ruin, with floodwaters swallowing up corn, cotton, rice and soybean fields.

In far northeastern Louisiana, where Tap Parker and about 50 other farmers filled and stacked massive sandbags along an old levee to no avail. The Mississippi flowed over the top Thursday, and nearly 19 square miles of soybeans and corn, known in the industry as "green gold," was lost.

Gadhafi taunts NATO, says he won't be killed

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Taunting NATO, Moammar Gadhafi said Friday that he is alive despite a series of airstrikes and "in a place where you can't get to and kill me." The defiant audio recording was broadcast after the Libyan government accused NATO of killing 11 Muslim clerics with an airstrike on a disputed eastern oil town.

Gadhafi had appeared on state TV but had not been heard speaking since a NATO attack on his Tripoli compound two weeks ago, which officials said killed one of his sons and three grandchildren. In a brief recording played Friday on Libyan TV, Gadhafi said he wanted to assure Libyans concerned about a strike this week on his compound in Tripoli.

"I tell the coward crusaders — I live in a place where you can't get to and kill me," he said. "I live in the hearts of millions."

He referred to a NATO airstrike on Thursday that targeted his Bab al-Aziziya compound in Tripoli, claiming it had killed "three innocent journalist-civilians."

Porn found at bin Laden compound

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two U.S. officials say pornography was among the items seized when U.S. Navy SEALs raided the Pakistani hideout of Osama bin Laden almost two weeks ago.

The officials say it was unclear who the material belonged to, or whether Bin Laden viewed it. Bin Laden's son and two other adult male couriers lived at the compound, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss matters of intelligence.

The pornography was confiscated in addition to a handwritten journal, five computers, ten hard drives and 110 thumb drives seized at the site, which are now being analyzed by a CIA-led team.

The journal's contents include Bin Laden's musings over how to kill President Barack Obama, U.S. officials say. Bin Laden concluded he was too well protected.

“We have plenty of study on the various options to reduce spending. It’s a question of which ones are we going to pick up and do.”
— Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell after calling for cuts in the day-to-day budgets of government agencies as well as in long-term spending programs

Heroism and compassion in Nevada’s high country

CHEERS: To three northern Nevada residents, Chad Herman, Whitnie Sill Herman and Troy Sill, who were responsible for the dramatic rescue of motorist Rita Chretien from the Elko County outback last weekend.

Sill, of Spring Creek, and the Hermans, of Elko, came across the Canadian woman who had been stranded near the Bruneau River south of the Idaho border for seven weeks. After four days in St. Luke’s Magic Valley, Chretien is recovering in a hospital near her Penticton, British Columbia, home. Her husband Albert, who went looking for help after the couple’s van became stuck on March 19, is still missing.

The three Nevadans were riding ATVs when they came across Rita Chretien by chance. They drove nine miles to the nearest ranch and summoned a rescue helicopter.

Chretien’s survival is remarkable; she subsisted on trail mix, hard candy, fish-oil pills and water from a nearby creek. March and April are still wintertime in the Nevada badlands, and she had to endure many days of sub-freezing temperatures.

Our hearts go out to Chretien and her family as hopes of finding Albert alive dim.

JEERS: Few aspects of state government work as well as the Public Employee Retirement System of Idaho. It doesn’t need fixing, as some lawmakers are contemplating.

According to the Idaho Reporter, state Rep. Jeff Thompson, R-Idaho Falls, likes Utah’s new pension program better. Starting July 1, that state will offer new employees the option of choosing a defined-contribution plan or a new hybrid that includes that system and a defined-benefit plan, which is the basis of PERSI.

Under a defined-benefit program, government agencies and employees contribute certain amounts to the investment pool. Upon retirement, workers receive a set monthly pension based on months of on the job and highest salary levels over 42 consecutive months of employment with a particular government agency.

Under a defined-contribution plan, public employers and employees would pitch in a set amount to retirement accounts on a monthly basis.

There would be no set amount that a beneficiary would receive upon retirement. If investments perform well, more money is available for retirement. If investments crash, so do defined-contribution plans.

PERSI is now 91.7 percent funded, up from 78.9 percent at the end of the last fiscal year; the preferred standard for such plans is to be at least 80 percent funded for all future liabilities. The PERSI fund’s value has jumped nearly 65 percent in two years; it’s now valued at $12.2 billion, up from $7.6 billion a year ago.

Senior legislators like Senate Finance Committee chairman Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, and House Revenue and Taxation Committee chairman Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot, are opposed to tinkering with PERSI. So are we.

CHEERS: So long to one of the best lawyers — and public servants — Twin Falls has ever seen.

Tom Nelson, a senior judge of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, died at his Boise home last week at age 74. Before being appointed by President George H.W. Bush to the federal bench in 1990, Nelson practiced law from 1965 to 1979 with the Twin Falls firm of Parry, Robertson and Daly and from 1979 until 1990 with Nelson, Rosholt, Robertson, Tolman and Tucker. He served on the Twin Falls City Council from 1970-74.

Nelson was also a director of what’s now the United Way of South Central Idaho and chaired citizen committees that established a temporary shelter for non-delinquent children and a facility providing special services to kids with developmental disabilities.

A respected trial lawyer, on the federal bench Nelson provided a voice of common sense on the often-left-leaning Ninth Circuit court.

“Tom Nelson was a lawyer’s lawyer and a judge’s judge,” said U.S. District Judge Richard Tallman of Seattle. He’ll be missed.

GOP can’t evade budget arithmetic

This has to be one of the funniest political stories of recent weeks: On Tuesday, 42 freshmen Republican members of Congress sent a letter urging President Obama to stop Democrats from engaging in “Mediscare” tactics — that is, to stop saying that the Republican budget plan released early last month, which would end Medicare as we know it, is a plan to end Medicare as we know it.

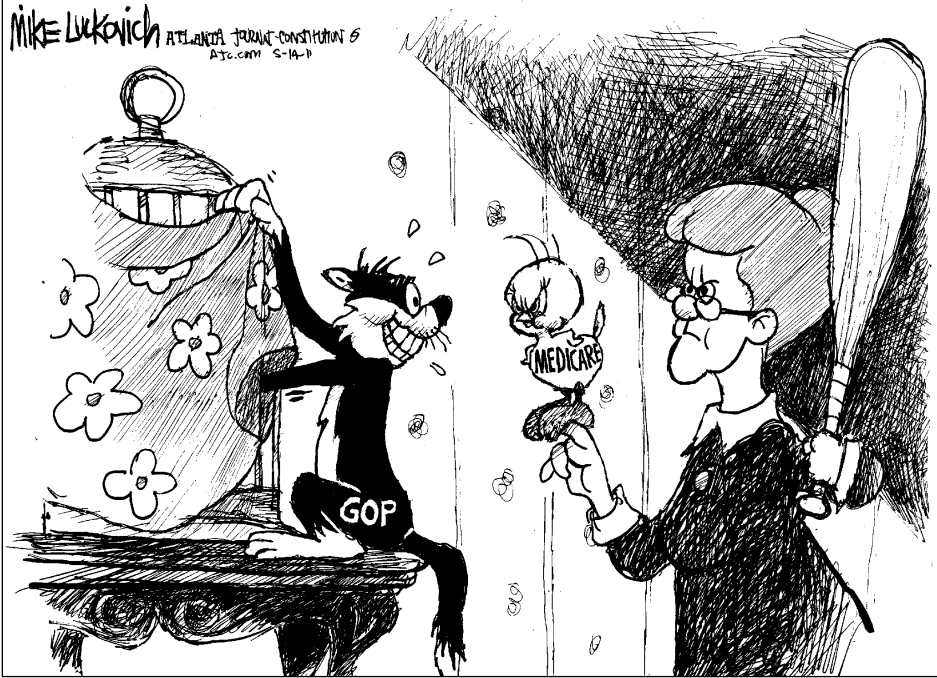

Now, you may recall that the people who signed that letter got their current jobs largely by engaging in “Mediscare” tactics of their own. And bear in mind that what Democrats are saying now is entirely true, while what Republicans were saying last year was completely false. Death panels!

Well, it’s time, said the signatories, to “wipe the slate clean.” How very convenient — and how very pathetic.

Anyway, the truth is that older Americans really should fear Republican budget ideas — and not just because of that plan to dismantle Medicare. Given the realities of the federal budget, a party insisting that tax increases of any kind are off the table — as John Boehner, the speaker of the House, says they are — is, necessarily, a party demanding savage cuts in programs that serve older Americans.

To explain why, let me answer a rhetorical question posed by Professor John Taylor of Stanford University in a recent op-ed article in The Wall Street Journal. He asked, “If government agencies and programs functioned with 19 percent to 20 percent of GDP in 2007” — that is, just before the Great Recession — “why is it so hard for them to function with that percentage in 2021?”

Taylor thought he was making the case for not increasing spending. But if you know anything about the federal budget, you know that there’s a very good answer to his question — an answer that clearly demonstrates just how extremist that no-tax-increase pledge really is. For here’s the quick-and-dirty summary of what the federal government does: It’s a giant insurance company, mainly serving older people, that also has an army.

The great bulk of federal spending that isn’t either defense-related or interest on the debt goes to Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid. The first two programs specifically serve seniors. And while Medicaid is often thought of as a poverty program, these days it’s largely about providing nursing care, with about two-thirds of its spending now going to the elderly and/or disabled. By my rough count, in 2007, seniors accounted, one way or another, for about half of federal spending.

And in case you hadn’t noticed, there will soon be a lot more seniors around because the baby boomers have started reaching retirement age.

Here are the numbers: In 2007, there were 20.9 Americans 65 and older for every 100 Americans between the ages of 20 and 64 — that is, the people of normal working age who essentially provide the tax base that supports federal spending. The Social Security Administration expects that number to rise to 27.5 by 2020, and 31.7 by 2025. That’s a lot more people relying on federal social insurance programs.

“ ... when people like Boehner reject out of hand any increase in taxes, they are, in effect, declaring that they won’t preserve programs benefiting older Americans in anything like their current form. It’s just a matter of arithmetic.”

Nor is demography the whole story. Over the long term, health care spending has consistently grown faster than the economy, raising the costs of Medicare and Medicaid as a share of GDP. Cost-control measures — the very kind of measures Republicans demonized last year, with their cries of death panels — can help slow the rise, but few experts believe that we can avoid some “excess cost growth” over the next decade.

Between an aging population and rising health costs, then, preserving anything like the programs for seniors we now have will require a significant increase in spending on these programs as a percentage of GDP. And unless we offset that rise with drastic cuts in defense spending — which Republicans, needless to say, oppose — this means a substantial rise in overall spending, which we can afford only if taxes rise.

So when people like

Boehner reject out of hand any increase in taxes, they are, in effect, declaring that they won’t preserve programs benefiting older Americans in anything like their current form. It’s just a matter of arithmetic.

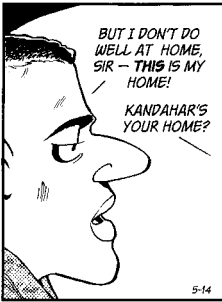

Which brings me back to those Republican freshmen. Last year, older voters, who split their vote almost evenly between the parties in 2008, swung overwhelmingly to the GOP, as Republicans posed successfully as defenders of Medicare. Now Democrats are pointing out that the GOP, far from defending Medicare, is actually trying to dismantle the program. So you can see why those Republican freshmen are nervous.

But the Democrats aren’t engaging in scare tactics, they’re simply telling the truth. Policy details aside, the GOP’s rigid anti-tax position also makes it, necessarily, the enemy of the senior-oriented programs that account for much of federal spending. And that’s something voters ought to know.

Laura Jean Tubbs

June 5, 1974–May 11, 2011

BURLEY — On Wednesday, May 11, 2011, Laura Jean Tubbs passed peacefully from this earth back into her Father in Heaven's presence.

She was born June 5, 1974, in Malad City, Idaho, to Marvin Dean and Mary Etta Bowen Tubbs. She was so anxious to come to earth that she came early, and the doctors did not expect her to live. But she had a strong spirit and came home six weeks later. When she was school age, the "special education law" came into effect, and Laura attended schools in Burley and American Falls, Idaho; Billings, Mont.; and Morgan, Utah, where she graduated from Morgan High School (through her IEP) and Morgan Seminary. When she lived in Burley, she was a March of Dimes poster child.

While living in Morgan, she and Mary Etta had the opportunity to participate in the television ads for UCARE/2-1-1 to locate resources for people with disabilities. Although she was very petite, Laura had a contagious laugh and smile that helped others feel more comfortable with her physical limitations. She loved riding in her van, listening to music, being read to and the many people in her life (especially children). She also enjoyed activities with her family. She attended MDC Magic Valley during weekdays, and enjoyed the activities and her friends.

She is survived by her parents; a sister, Julie (Rhett) Jenkins; a brother, Dean (Kimberly) Tubbs; maternal grandfather, Ned Bowen; paternal grandmother, Carma Peterson; six nieces and nephews; and numerous extended family and friends. She was preceded in death by her paternal grandfather, Dean Tubbs; and maternal grandmother, Eva Bowen.

Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, May 15, at the Morrison-Payne Funeral Home, 321 E. Main in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Monday at the church.

In lieu of flowers, it is requested that donations be made to the following nonprofit disability organizations: IFAD, P.O. Box 191355, Boise, ID 83719; or Tri-County LLC, P.O. Box 428, Ogden, UT 84402.

Northwest power surplus might halt wind energy

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The manager of most of the electricity in the Pacific Northwest is running such a surplus of power from hydroelectric dams that it put wind farms on notice Friday that they may be shut down as early as this weekend.

The Bonneville Power Administration has more than enough electricity during a cold, wet spring that has created a big surge in river flows where hydroelectric dams are located. The agency responded by announcing its intentions to curtail wind power until the grid has more capacity, in a move likely to cost the industry millions of dollars.

The decision reflects an overlooked issue amid the push to add wind farms around the country: The capacity of power grids has not kept pace.

How soon and how long wind farms might be shut down depends on how quickly the region warms up and the water shoots downriver to the Pacific Ocean, said Steven Wright, administrator of the BPA. The farms that would be shut down are mostly in Washington and Oregon.

The main culprit for the wind slowdown is spring weather that followed a winter with heavy snow in the mountains feeding the Columbia River basin. The spring surge is expected to be the largest of this century.

When water levels are this high, the agency said, it has no choice but to use the water to generate electricity in hydroelectric dams. Laws protecting endangered species prevent it from sending all the excess water through spillways and around the dams. That beats up salmon and steelhead. It also creates so much nitrogen gas bubbling in the water that the fish get the equivalent of the bends.

Grid operators say they have run out of capability to sell the surplus electricity, store the water or shut down gas, oil, and nuclear plants — leaving wind farms the unfortunate victim.

The financing of many wind farms relies on tax credits that are of benefit only if electricity is produced. And the decision could set the stage for even more significant fights in the years to come if the Northwest wind industry doubles its capacity, as projected, over the next decade.

Major wind interests, including mainstream utilities such as Portland General Electric, have opposed the BPA's proposal and are suggesting lawsuits are next. The utility says the move could violate antitrust and market manipulation laws.

The critics also noted that President Barack Obama and Energy Secretary Steven Chu, who reappointed Wright just last year, have been staunch advocates of alternative energy such as wind power.

Salmon advocates also lined up with the wind industry out of solidarity between two groups with a long history of common environmental interests.

"It is strange how a federal agency could make this kind of decision," said Nicole Cordan of Save Our Wild Salmon.

Officials plan more intensive search for Chretien today

BOISE — The family of a Canadian man who's been missing in the northeastern Nevada mountains since March 19 says authorities plan to begin a more intensive grid search today if there's still no sign of him.

Hunters found his wife weak but alive May 6, but there's been no sign of 59-year-old Albert Chretien since he set out March 22 from the couple's truck van.

Elko County Sheriff Jim Pitts says, "We don't want to give it up yet."

Seventeen searchers on four-wheelers scoured the wilderness for Albert Chretien on Friday.

Rita Chretien remains hospitalized in good condition and "relatively good spirits." The 56-year-old survived on trail mix, hard candy, fish oil and snow.

Her family released a statement Friday saying she hasn't determined how and when she might tell her story.

Ex-state worker charged in school bus scam

BOISE — A former state employee arrested with his wife last year in the Caribbean is scheduled to be sentenced next month for using his position with the Department of Environmental Quality to illegally secure a contract to work on school buses.

Jorge Garcia's scheme went undetected for about a year and was discovered only after some public school districts started to complain about problems with buses that were spewing smoke and leaking oil, federal prosecutors said.

Garcia and his wife, Karen Damberg, were arrested at a beach in St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands, in March 2010. Authorities believe the couple was trying to flee the country.

They have each pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit mail fraud in connection with the scam. Garcia and Damberg are on supervised release until their June 20 sentencing. They face a hefty restitution bill and up to five years in prison.

Attorneys for the couple declined to comment. According to court documents, Garcia helped Emissions Control Systems Inc. win a contract to install devices on buses aimed at lowering emissions. The environmental quality agency later learned the company was operated by Garcia and his wife, said Curt Fransen, the department's deputy director. "What we knew was that we had basically had a fraudulent contract and that the project officer was basically overseeing himself," Fransen told KTVB-TV.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK — A blanket of heavy snow is causing problems in Yellowstone National Park.

Sylvan Pass — which connects Fishing Bridge to the park's east entrance — remained closed for the third straight day Friday because of multiple snow slides onto the road. The slopes on either side of the road are covered by deep fields of heavy, wet snow.

KODI-AM in Cody also reported that snow contributed to the collapse of the roof at an RV repair facility this week and damaged the roof at the Grant Village Visitor Education Center.

How one Japanese village defied the tsunami's wrath

FUDAI, Japan (AP) — In the rubble of Japan's north-east coast, one small village stands as tall as ever after the tsunami. No homes were swept away. In fact, they barely got wet.

Fudai is the village that survived — thanks to a huge wall once deemed a mayor's expensive folly and now vindicated as the community's salvation.

Fudai Town Mayor Hiroshi Fukawatari poses April 26 at his town hall in northeastern Japan. Fudai has a 51-foot-tall flood gate, which protected the town when it was hit by the 20-meter-high tsunami on March 11.

The 3,000 residents living between mountains behind a cove owe their lives to a late leader who saw the devastation of an earlier tsunami and made it the priority of his four-decade tenure to defend his people from the next one.

His 51-foot floodgate between mountainsides took a dozen years to build and meant spending more than $30 million in today's dollars.

"It cost a lot of money. But without it, Fudai would have disappeared," said fisherman Satoshi Kaneko, 55, whose business was ruined but who is happy to have his family and home intact.

The floodgate project was criticized as wasteful in the 1970s. But the gate and an equally high seawall behind the community's adjacent fishing port protected Fudai from the waves that obliterated so many other towns on March 11. Two months after the disaster, more than 25,000 are missing or dead.

"However you look at it, the effectiveness of the floodgate and seawall was truly impressive," Mayor Hiroshi Fukawatari said.

Towns to the north and south also braced against tsunamis with concrete seawalls, breakwaters and other protective structures. But none were as tall as Fudai's.

The town of Taro believed it had the ultimate fort — a double-layered 33-foot-tall seawall spanning 1.6 miles across a bay. It proved no match for the tsunami two months ago.

In Fudai, the waves rose as high as 66 feet as water marks show on the floodgate's towers. So some ocean water did flow over but it caused minimal damage. The gate broke the tsunami's main thrust. And the community is lucky to have two mountainsides flanking the gate, offering a natural barrier.

The man credited with saving Fudai is the late Kotaku Wamura, a 10-term mayor whose political reign began in the ashes of World War II and ended in 1987.

Fudai, about 320 miles north of Tokyo, depends on the sea. Fishermen boast of the seaweed they harvest. A pretty, white-sand beach lures tourists every summer.

But Wamura never forgot how quickly the sea could turn. Massive earthquake-triggered tsunamis flattened Japan's northeast coast in 1933 and 1896. In Fudai, the two disasters destroyed hundreds of homes and killed 439 people. He vowed it would never happen again.

In 1967, the town erected a 51-foot (15.5-meter) seawall to shield homes behind the fishing port. But Wamura wasn't finished. He had a bigger project in mind for the cove up the road, where most of the community was located. That area needed a flood-gate with panels that could be lifted to allow the Fudai River to empty into the cove and lowered to block tsunamis.

He insisted the structure be as tall as the seawall. The village council balked.

"They weren't necessarily against the idea of floodgates, just the size," said Yuzo Mifune, head of Fudai's resident services. "But Wamura somehow persuaded them that this was the only way to protect lives."

Construction began in 1972 despite lingering concerns about its size as well as bitterness among landowners forced to sell land to the government. Even current Mayor Fukawatari, who helped oversee construction, had his doubts.

The concrete structure spanning 673 feet was completed in 1984. The total bill of 3.56 billion yen was split between the prefecture and central government, which financed public works as part of its postwar economic strategy.

On March 11, after the 9.0 earthquake hit, workers remotely closed the flood-gate's four main panels. Smaller panels on the sides jammed, and a firefighter had to rush down to shut them by hand.

The tsunami battered the white beach in the cove, leaving debris and fallen trees. But behind the floodgate, the village is virtually untouched.

Army 'birther' doctor released from confinement in Kansas

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — An Army doctor who disobeyed deployment orders because he doubted President Barack Obama's birth records has been freed from a military prison in Kansas.

A Fort Leavenworth spokesman says Terry Lakin was released Friday after serving five months of a six-month sentence for refusing to go to Afghanistan.

Lakin, of Greeley, Colo., pleaded guilty in December to disobeying orders and was convicted of missing a flight that would have gotten him to his eventual deployment. Lakin was tried at Fort Meade.

The doctor had aligned himself in YouTube videos with the so-called "birther" movement that questioned whether Obama is a natural-born citizen, as the Constitution requires for presidents.

The White House put the controversy largely to rest last month by releasing the president's detailed Hawaii birth certificate.

Presbyterian Church ratifies measure allowing ordinations; T.F. pastor calls it an improvement

By Mitchell Landsberg
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A debate that has raged within the Presbyterian Church for more than three decades culminated Tuesday with ratification of a measure allowing the ordination of gay and lesbian ministers and lay leaders, while giving regional church bodies the ability to decide for themselves.

With the vote of its regional organization in Minnesota, the Presbyterian Church USA became the fourth mainline Protestant church to allow gay ordination, following the Episcopal and Evangelical Lutheran churches and the United Church of Christ. The Minnesota vote was closely followed by one in Los Angeles.

“This is an important moment in the Christian communion,” said Michael Adey, a Presbyterian elder who heads an organization that fought for gay ordination. “I rejoice that Presbyterians are focusing on what matters most — faith and character, not a person’s marital status or sexual orientation.” The change to the Presbyterian Church constitution was approved last summer by the church’s General Assembly, its governing body. But under church rules, such changes must then be ratified by a majority of the 173 regional organizations known as presbyteries.

Late Tuesday, at a meeting in St. Louis Park, Minn., a Minneapolis suburb, the Twin Cities Presbytery put the measure over the top with a vote of 205-56, becoming the 87th regional body to vote yes. About 90 minutes later, the Pacific Presbytery, representing parts of Southern California and all of Hawaii, added its voice, voting 102-60 in favor.

It was the fourth time the church has voted on issues related to gay ordination, and the votes reflect a shift in attitudes within the church, and within American society, as public attitudes against homosexuality have softened. Since the last time the matter was brought to a vote, in 2008-09, 19 presbyteries have switched their votes from “no” to “yes,” including some in relatively conservative parts of the country, such as central Nebraska and northern Alabama.

In Idaho the Rev. Phil Price, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Twin Falls, said the local Presbytery, which stretches from Wendell to the Wyoming border and from Hollister to Salmon, voted against the provision. But, he said, he views the change as an improvement for the church.

The amendment ratified Tuesday changes language in the Presbyterian constitution regarding the “gifts and requirements” of those ordained, whether as clergy or in the lay positions of elder and deacon. Since 1997, the constitution has required those

Making friends

T.F. Episcopal members to join in walk to know their neighbors

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Jesus taught, “love thy neighbour as thyself.” In an effort to better know who their neighbors are, members of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension will host a neighborhood walk around the church on Tuesday.

“We’re doing this as part of our strategic planning in terms of who are our neighbors,” said Pastor Deb Seles.

She hopes that members will reach out and talk to people they might meet on their walk.

“At the beginning of Lent, when we held our pancake supper, we went and put door hangers at the apartments near the church, inviting people to the supper,” Seles said. “I don’t think we’ve done as much in the way of outreach at those apartments.”

Nor in some of the other neighborhoods near the church, she said.

When members meet Tuesday at the church, they’ll be assigned different routes in a one-mile radius. Members, whom Seles said should invite a friend to join them on the walk, are to be observant as to what they see and who they meet.

“We draw farther than one mile,” she said, “but we thought we’d start with that and see what we learn.”

They’ll start at 7 p.m., and members should plan to meet back at the church by about 8:30 p.m., Seles said, where they’ll talk about what they learned on their walks.

The event coincides with the national Jane’s Walk USA, an event that aims to help communities better get in touch with their environment and their neighbors.

Is it wrong to be angry with God?

McClatchy Newspapers

STRONG FAITH LEAVES ROOM FOR COMPLAINTS

The Rev. Pat Rush, pastor, Visitation Catholic Church, Kansas City, Mo.: In the Bible, it seems that God’s people of the First Covenant are more comfortable arguing with God and complaining about God’s perceived lapses in duty than most Christians are. The prophets Jeremiah and Habakkuk, as well as the Book of Job, are prime examples of this.

Those writings evidence the presumption that even a divinely made covenant is a two-way street and the sense that sometimes God forgets about God’s end of the bargain. Habakkuk complained that God was not listening, because God had promised to be a rock of safety for his people, and, when their enemies attacked and defeated them, God failed to intervene.

People influenced by this tradition are not afraid to argue with God and complain when it feels that the Lord is neglecting them. This attitude is not rooted in a shallowness of faith.

Rather, it is usually rooted in a faith relationship so strong that an honest exchange is acceptable and in no way damaging. It is rooted in a faith conviction that God’s commitment to us is so deep that God can handle our disappointment and anger.

God did respond to those biblical heroes who brought their complaints to him. God said, “stay faithful because good things will come, just not now and not as you expect?” God said they and we must live in patient trust.

Hospitalized Billy Graham begins to recover

By Tim Funk

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The doctor treating Charlotte-born evangelist Billy Graham for pneumonia said Thursday that he was getting better.

Dr. Shaw Henderson, a pulmonologist, said Graham’s congestion was clearing in response to antibiotics and that his temperature was normal, according to a news update released by Mission Hospital in Asheville, N.C., where Graham was admitted Wednesday.

The hospital continued to list Graham’s condition as fair on Thursday, and there was no indication when the 92-year-old evangelist would be able to return to his mountaintop home in nearby Montreat.

Graham remained in good spirits, the hospital reported, and continued a light therapy program. According to the hospital, Graham was visited Wednesday night by his eldest daughter, Gigi. Ruth Graham, his youngest daughter, posted this on her blog Thursday morning: “I got in from the West Coast late last night. Before I left Portland I was called with the news of my father’s pneumonia and hospitalization. I was told that the pneumonia came on fast so they are treating it aggressively. He was in good spirits and visiting with the doctors and nurses. I thank you for your prayers and concern.”

Two of Graham’s other grown children — Franklin Graham and Anne Graham Lotz — are on mission trips overseas and were not expected to come back early.

Thursday morning, the elder Graham met at the hospital with his pastor, the Rev. Don Wilton, of First Baptist Church of Spartanburg, S.C. Graham spokesman Larry Ross also said the evangelist wanted to pass along his gratitude “for the outpouring of love, concern and prayers of so many individuals across the country.”

Doing what you have to do

They were just grasshoppers. But there were millions of them. Which is why Dad was so anxious to get rid of them.

"They're totally destroying our beans and the strawberry plants," he told Mom over our lunch-time sandwiches one Saturday. "I've been trying to keep them out of the tomatoes, but I don't know if I'm going to be able to do it."

"Isn't there something you can do about them?" Mom asked. She was mostly concerned about the tomatoes. I don't think there was anything Mom savored as much as a vine-ripened tomato fresh from the garden.

"I think there's a spray or something," Dad said. "I'm going down to the garden center after lunch and see if they have any suggestions."

I'm pretty sure that's what he said. But what I heard was, "While I'm gone, why don't you and George come up with your own plan for getting rid of the grasshoppers?"

And so that's what we did. It was the summer between fifth and sixth grade, so we were feeling pretty smart and mature. We knew stuff — or at least, we thought we did. Certainly we knew how to get rid of a few measly grasshoppers.

"Grasshoppers are dumb," George said as we stood in the middle of the garden. "Look at them. They jump right on you. It's easy to catch them."

"And then what do we do with them?" I wanted to know.

George squeezed his fingers together, crushing a grasshopper into instant uckiness.

Well, that seemed simple enough — although I didn't much care for the ucky part.

So we came up with a few alternate methods of dispatching the little critters, including bricks, safety pins and his big brother's magnifying glass. Eventually Ron and Don joined us and — well, things got a little crazy. Before we knew it we were conducting macabre experiments in grasshopper physiology. I won't describe our experiments — this is, after all, a family newspaper. Let's just call it "The Adventures of the Marquis de Orkin" and leave it at that, shall we?

Dad came home in time to see one of our more grotesque executions (remember the end of "Braveheart"? Yeah, it was kind of like that). We were laughing, but the laughter quickly turned to silence when we saw the look on my Dad's face.

"What are you boys doing?" he asked, incredulously.

"We're — you know — just sort of — um — helping to, uh, get rid of the grasshoppers," I stammered.

"This isn't 'getting rid of grasshoppers,'" Dad said. "This is killing."

I was confused. I looked at the can of insecticide that he was carrying. "But aren't you going to kill grasshoppers with that?" I asked.

"Yes, because it's something we need to do for the protection of our garden," he said, soberly. "But I'm not going to enjoy it."

I've been thinking about that the past couple of weeks, as the world has come to terms with the physical elimination of a person who caused much pain and suffering in the world.

While public opinion polls suggest that people think the death of this man was necessary, there seems to be some difference of opinion as to whether or not it is appropriate for us to actually celebrate his death. I'm not completely sure of the answer myself, but then I remember Dad and those grasshoppers and I'm reminded that sometimes in life you have to do what you have to do.

What you don't have to do is enjoy it.

Glass artist restoring church stained glass

By Jean Tarbett Hardiman
Huntington Herald Dispatch

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Several churches in Huntington have had to shut their doors because membership dwindled, said stained glass artist Dennis Shobe.

But he's proud to say that right now, his business — Shobe's Stained Glass Art Studio — is doing some work for a church that is finding a way to survive.

Community of Grace United Methodist Church is a consolidation of Faith, South Side and Highlawn United Methodist churches. And Faith United Methodist was a consolidation of St. Luke and Otterbein United Methodist churches.

It's Shobe's job to take stained glass windows from some of those churches, restore them, and put them together in the new church. And it's an honor, he said.

"It's a combined project that's for the good of all," Shobe said. "Now, they have strength in numbers again. So many churches have gone by the wayside, and they refuse to die."

Working on such projects is something that has always been rewarding, Shobe said. His company has been manufacturing and restoring stained glass windows for area churches for 41 years. He has one contractor with whom he works closely, Greg Thomas, and several other contractors who help with various aspects of some jobs.

In a shop filled with historic stained glass art, some in boxes waiting to be restored and others propped up and ready to go, Shobe flips through a photo album filled with colorful pages of windows he has either designed and manufactured, or brought back from near destruction. Some are "before and after" photos. Shobe has taken depictions of Christ that were at one time so aged they were impossible to make out, scrubbed them clean, repaired broken glass and painted them with oxide and re-fired to make them look like new.

Each piece must be treated with tremendous care, and Shobe and Thomas take caution in deciding whether a piece can be fired again, or if it would end up damaged. If a piece is damaged, particularly if it's a piece of the face, it can ruin the entire window.

There are thousands of small pieces of glass that must be worked on to restore the windows for Community of Grace church.

The project, which for Shobe's dates back to 1996, when the first two churches consolidated, will likely take months to complete from this point, Shobe said.

"We have broken places and we have to put them back in (top) shape," Shobe said. "It will be spread out (over time). I hope not another 15 years."

seeking ordination to be living "in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman, or chastity in singleness." Now, it will simply require church officials to examine "each candidate's calling, gifts, preparation, and suitability for the responsibilities of office."

That gives enough leeway that even the amendment's advocates say it is likely to mean that more conservative presbyteries will continue to deny ordination to gays and lesbians.

"The new language is, in some respects, truer to who we've been for centuries," Price said. "I do see it as an improvement in the way we govern our churches. But I don't know that all my colleagues in the Magic Valley would agree. ... In our church we have people all across the theological and political spectrum, so there might be some consternation."

He said it is local church bodies that determine who may serve in the Presbytery.

"It's always been left up to the local body," he said. "It is the local body who knows that person best, whether they are following Christ in all areas of their life.

"It's important for any person in the Presbyterian Church to submit joyfully to Christ in all things."

People on both sides of the issue predicted that the vote would lead some churches to leave the denomination, while others would seek more compatible presbyteries. Already, several have requested reassignment to different regions.

The Rev. Dan Chun, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Honolulu, said his church has formally petitioned to move from the Pacific Presbytery, which favors gay ordination, to the San Diego Presbytery, which does not. There are other reasons, he said, including the large military populations in both places, but gay ordination was a major factor.

He said he feared the vote would be "divisive for our denomination, which has, for the past 50-plus years, been losing membership."

The Rev. Mark Brewer, the pastor of Bel Air Presbyterian and another opponent of gay ordination, said he didn't think the vote would cause any immediate crisis in the church. "I think this is a tectonic plate slowly separating, more than a big earthquake," he said.

Ideally, he added, the Presbyterians will find a way to get along, in the way that the Anglican Communion has largely, if not entirely, held together. The communion, of which the Episcopal Church is the U.S. branch, also is sharply divided on the same issue.

"I think that's probably where the Presbyterians will end up," he said. "Stay on the same ship; just live on different decks."

GOD'S LOVE IS STEADFAST IN THE FACE OF ANGER

The Rev. Duke Tufty, Unity Temple on the Plaza, Kansas City, Mo.: This is a question that only you can answer. I say get angry with God. Yell and scream at the top of your lungs. Stomp your feet, clench your fists, slam doors and kick the furniture. Maybe even throw an expensive vase at the wall and shatter it into hundreds of pieces. "There, take that God!"

Now then, how did that feel? Did it feel good or bad? Did it feel right or wrong? The greater question might be, what did God do to warrant such anger and blame?

God is life. The energy, power, spirit and life force within you, and you have free will to use it as you choose. Nothing to blame God about there.

God is love. The most incredible, blissful, wonderful, serene sense of being alive that we can experience. Nothing to blame God about there.

God is the wisdom that permeates your body and mind. That wisdom directs more than 100,000 intricate physical actions necessary for you to be alive. Nothing to blame God about there.

If you want to get angry with God, go ahead. God doesn't care. God's love and provision remain undiminished. But perhaps rather than directing blame and anger at God, maybe it would be more beneficial if

Save your food, save some dough

By Sarah Skidmore
Associated Press writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Americans waste an estimated 14 percent to 40 percent of the food produced for their consumption. It happens in fields, in stores and in your kitchen. That's bad for the environment and it can be very bad for your wallet.

“Food waste is one of those things that hide in plain sight,” says Jonathan Bloom, author of “American Wasteland,” about food waste. “When it’s really put in front of people, it does surprise them.”

Farmers toss imperfect heads of lettuce, grocers chuck bruised tomatoes and, by best estimates, consumers waste about 25 percent of the food they buy — throwing out browned bananas, outdated cheese and unused leftovers.

This has all sorts of environmental, social and ethical ramifications. But if you look just at the financial impact on the consumer, that is the equivalent of a family of four tossing $1,500 to $4,000 in the garbage each year. That’s a lot of dough.

Here are a few tips on how to make better use of your food — and money:

PLAN AHEAD: If you buy just what you need, you’ll find yourself wasting less right away.

Try planning out meals for a week at a time. Or shop for a few key meals at a time so you can fix them depending on your preference of the day. While it works for some people to buy everything in one big shopping trip, others find they waste less if they make smaller and more frequent trips.

No matter your approach,

figure out what you toss most often and think about other options you have. Broccoli going bad in the fridge each week? Try frozen veggies. Need more than a can’s worth, but less than a jar’s worth of beans? Buy in bulk so you can use what you need each time and save the rest more easily.

“Don’t bring so much into your home that you have to waste food,” Bloom says. “The strategy is up to (you).”

TIDY UP: If you can’t see it, you probably won’t use it.

In many households, big, overcrowded refrigerators are major culprits in food waste, Bloom says. Think of the zucchini at the bottom of the vegetable drawer that could have made it into last night’s stir fry, if only you had seen it.

Storing things well and labeling them can make them less mysterious when you come across them in the freezer — and more appealing to defrost and use. And you can extend the shelf-life of a lot of foods with proper storage, including produce containers with vents or strainers. Even simply putting a paper towel in with their lettuce can keep it crisp longer.

CHILL OUT: If you keep food cool, it will keep longer.

You keep milk in the fridge, and you know vegetables stay fresh longer in the crisper.

Exports hit record $1.5B in first quarter

Times-News

Idaho’s export sales in the first three months of 2011 hit a record $1.5 billion, bolstered by record foreign sales of agricultural goods, precious metals and near record sales for computer chips and other technology products

The three-month period was the seventh straight quarter of billion-dollar-plus exports for the Gem State.

The $1.52 billion total was 16 percent higher than the final quarter of 2010 and 25 percent higher than the first three months of 2010, placing the state ahead of last year’s pace toward a record $5 billion in exports, the Idaho Department of Labor reported Thursday.

Idaho’s year-over-year growth rate ranked 15th among the states and was well above the national export increase of 18.4 percent.

“It was a welcome sign for a state economy that is otherwise struggling to free itself from the grips of the recession,” the release stated.

Labor reported that performance reflected a weaker U.S. dollar to other world currencies. In the case of precious metals, it was the steadily increasing price of silver that helped push prices higher. Silver prices peaked at near record levels in April.

Judge issues warrant after Tamarack owner skips court

Idaho Statesman

BOISE — An Idaho judge issued a warrant in a bid to get Tamarack’s majority owner into court after he skipped a hearing meant to determine the value of his assets.

The Idaho Statesman reports Jean-Pierre Boespflug was supposed to be in court Wednesday to disclose his assets after Bank of America’s leasing arm previously won a $4.9 million judgment over lifts installed at the resort about 90 miles north of Boise.

Fourth District Judge Michael McLaughlin set bail at $3.5 million to force Boespflug, a native of France, into court. There’s a contempt hearing on May 26.

Judge McLaughlin said Boespflug’s behavior was “of concern.”

Boespflug’s whereabouts are unclear.

Last week, he told The Associated Press he “needed time to clear his head” but refused to disclose his location.

He was reached on a phone that rang with a European tone, a sign he may be out of the country.

“I will return to Boise,” Boespflug told the AP during the phone conversation.

Brad Goergen, the Seattle lawyer for Bank of America Leasing & Capital LLC, contends Boespflug might skip town and shield all his money and possessions that could be used to satisfy the $4.9 million judgment over the two lifts. They remained idle this winter even as others were operated during a limited ski season run by the resort’s homeowners association.

Boespflug might have transferred his assets, including proceeds from the sale of his $1.2 million home in Boise, to a specially formed Nevada company, Goergen said.

In antitrust slugfest, consumers always lose

Before Google could buy DoubleClick and AdMob, the Internet giant needed to get antitrust approval from the Federal Trade Commission.

But when Google wanted to buy ITA, a leading maker of travel software, the review was conducted by a different agency: the antitrust division of the Justice Department. It was also Justice that earlier nixed the idea of a merger with Yahoo.

Now both agencies appear to be quietly, and separately, laying the groundwork for a much broader investigation to determine whether Google is using anti-competitive practices to protect its dominance in the Internet search business. The leaders of both agencies would like nothing more than to bring a high-profile case that would take its place in history along with the government’s landmark challenges of Standard Oil, IBM, AT&T, Microsoft and Intel. The FTC appears to have won the initial coin toss on this round, but don’t count out the team from Justice just yet.

Gee, I thought the idea of the antitrust laws was to encourage competition between businesses, not regulators.

Google is hardly the only turf being fought over by the antitrust cops. Every big merger, it seems, is now the occasion for extended wrangling over who is going to review it. And over the past six months, sharp elbows have been flying in all directions in the fight over which one will oversee the implementation of the new health-care law, which explicitly encourages collaboration among doctors, hospitals and other providers in what are called “accountable care organizations.”

While ACOs hold the promise of reducing costs and improving quality, creating them is likely to reduce competition in certain areas. Both agencies laid claim to the job of formulating the guidelines and approving individual transactions, with FTC officials accusing Justice of wanting to sacrifice the antitrust law to the White House’s political agenda and Justice officials accusing the FTC of trying to undermine health-care reform. Only when the dispute spilled out onto the front page of the Wall Street Journal did the embarrassed regulators sign on to an uneasy truce that divides the work between them.

This rivalry is not new — it’s been going on since 1914, when Justice opposed the law creating the Federal Trade Commission and balked at giving it a concurrent role in antitrust enforcement. But in recent years the flare-ups have become more frequent, more ideological and, at times, more personal. One big reason is that the traditional way that the work has been divided, with each agency specializing in particular industries, has become less useful as changes in technology and supply chains have blurred the boundaries between industries.

William Kovacic, a Republican member of the FTC and a former chairman, says it has gotten to the point that his agency has better relations with competition regulators overseas than it does with fellow American regulators two blocks away.

While old-fashioned bureaucratic rivalry explains much of the bad blood that has developed over the years, there are other reasons behind it.

The FTC is an independent commission run by five appointees with staggered terms and different party affiliations with a tradition of consensus decision making. The agency has broad responsibilities for consumer protections that go well beyond antitrust, although, unlike Justice, it has no power to bring criminal actions.

Justice, by contrast, is part of the executive branch. Although White House staffs have generally been careful not to interfere directly in any particular antitrust case, the direction of the division can change dramatically depending on the party in power, with Republicans showing increasing skepticism of government interference with markets. Christine Varney, head of the antitrust division, made a big splash after taking office by announcing that she was tearing up the more lenient guidelines for the behavior of dominant firms such as Google that were issued just a year earlier by her Bush-era predecessor.

If congressional politics dictates that there must be two agencies, however, surely there must be a better way for them to divide the work.

My suggestion would be to leave all the merger reviews to the FTC. The commission operates under a somewhat broader and more flexible consumer protection mandate, while its bipartisan governance structure would help to assure greater consistency in the standards by which mergers are reviewed. The FTC's broader and deeper economic expertise is also better suited to the task of continuously monitoring the activities of companies whose mergers are approved with limitations and conditions, which has frequently been the case in recent years.

Why does any of this matter? Because, thanks to globalization and new technology, business in many sectors has come to be dominated by fewer and fewer giant companies. This consolidation has helped to lower prices, increase efficiency and, in some cases, spur innovation, but it has also led to a concentration of economic and political power that the antitrust laws were meant to prevent. An updated and rationalized regulatory structure would help to revive those laws after years of timid and reluctant enforcement while making that enforcement more predictable and fair.

Put another way, we'd all be better off if antitrust regulators spent more time and energy protecting consumers and less protecting their own turf.

Columnist Steven Pearlstein writes about business and the economy for The Washington Post.

It's also worth looking at the temperature of your refrigerator, which ideally should be 40 degrees, says Carolyn Raab, a registered dietician and food and nutrition specialist with Oregon State University's extension program. If you keep it at 45, your milk and other perishables won't stay good as long.

And if your ice cream goes soft, your freezer's a bit too warm.

"That has several hallmarks of a fraudulent transfer," he said. "They sold (the home) through Cerulean Holdings. There's no explanation for what happened to those proceeds."

Goergen said he's also suspicious because the deed was notarized by someone from the Cook Islands, a collection of islands in the South Pacific and "a notorious haven for fraudulent asset-protection trusts."

The new developments come as Boespflug's lawyer withdrew from the Bank of America case.

T.J. Angstman said he can't find Boespflug, making it impossible to represent him.

Some golfers come just as much for strip clubs as for the golf, she said.

"There's golf courses everywhere else. Why come to Myrtle Beach if you don't have strip clubs?" 27-year-old Roberts said between dances.

Golf is big business for South Carolina's northern coastline, known as the Grand Strand, during the spring shoulder season as players fill up courses, book hotels and eat at area restaurants. But less discussed among tourism industry leaders, elected officials and golfers themselves is the money they spend on adult entertainment. That spending has given rise to an array of strip clubs drawing women from across the United States and other countries to dance.

There are at least 14 operating strip clubs in Horry County, which includes Myrtle Beach and has a population of about 269,000, according to the 2010 Census. There's at least one club in southern Brunswick County, N.C., just across the state line. By comparison, Atlanta, with a population of 420,000, has 19 strip

ANSWER:

There are very few positions where you can bid your opponent's suit naturally, but this must surely be one of them. Even if East has four hearts, your partner might quite sensibly be bidding with five or six cards in that suit. In any event, it is safe to raise to three hearts now and let your partner out in three no-trump if he does not agree with your interpretation.

For details of Bobby Wolff's autobiography, "The Lone Wolff," contact kay19072 @aol.com. If you would like to contact Bobby Wolff, e-mail him at bobbywolff@mindspring.com. Copyright 2011, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

In today's deal from the Cavendish, the field reached three no-trump from the South seat, setting West an awkward lead problem. Two of the declarers who were lucky enough to receive a low diamond lead were Jan van Cleeff and Christian Mari. Both saw East pitch a low heart and they won the trick cheaply.

Van Cleeff went for the pressure line: he played four rounds of diamonds at once, on which East (understandably) threw three hearts and a spade. When West shifted to the heart queen, van Cleeff covered, ran his minor-suit winners, and threw East in with the fourth club to lead spades to dummy. This line required East to hold the spade ace, but by this point in the hand, declarer felt very confident that this was the case.

By contrast, Mari played a low diamond from his hand at trick two. When West won the diamond queen and shifted to the heart queen, Mari took this with the king in dummy. What do you think he did next? Logically enough, declarer led a club to the nine and had nine winners.

Mari's play was based on the sensible assumption that East would surely have discarded a small club at trick one or trick two from an original holding of two or three small, on the grounds that without the club nine, he could not easily foresee the problem that declarer might have. Thus East's discards marked him with the club jack.

It's not the bottom of the 9th.

The game is just getting started.

There are lots of new opportunities out there and the job for you could be right here.

magicvalley.com

DEAR ABBY: From time to time, my husband and I are asked by some friends to dine out with them. However, the wife does some things that make us very uncomfortable. She prides herself on being friendly and outgoing. When we're in a restaurant, she'll go from table to table and engage in conversations with people she doesn't know. She'll ask where they're from, what they've ordered, etc. Once, she eavesdropped while the people at the next table discussed what they were ordering and gave them her opinion on what they should "really" order. It progressed to her joining them for a short time at their table for further conversation.

While I appreciate that she's trying to impress us, it embarrasses my husband and me. How do we handle the situation without telling her, making her feel bad and putting a strain on our friendship? We don't enjoy dining out with them like we used to. Are we overreacting, or is this bad manners?

— MORTIFIED IN SALT LAKE CITY

DEAR MORTIFIED: If you and your husband are dinner guests, the lady should be devoting her attention to you and not the other diners in the restaurant. To leave you and go table-hopping is rude. However, to call her on it would be equally rude. So, because you don't enjoy dining out with them the way you used to, do it less often and it will be less upsetting.

DEAR ABBY: How can we convince our married daughter with children to seek a separation or divorce from her husband, who is physically, mentally and economically abusive to her and the kids? We believe she's suffering from low self-esteem, depression and other issues she can't resolve with him.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

She has had to borrow what little money we can spare to buy food, school clothing and other basics. Her husband believes she should be working, taking care of an infant and an older child, paying for day care, half the bills and mortgage. Abby, this man has an income in the lower six figures!

We suggested therapy, but it was ignored. He blames everything on her. There is so much more to this story, but it would take up 10 of your columns. Please help.

— DESPERATE DAD IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR DESPERATE: A lawyer could point out to your daughter that she lives in a community property state, and half of what her husband has accumulated during the marriage is hers. A social worker could warn her that abuse doesn't remain static, that it can escalate to violence if it hasn't already. Statistics could illustrate that men who abuse their wives often go on to abuse their children. There is much that could be done, but not until or unless your daughter is willing to admit to herself that she is the victim of spousal abuse and take action.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law, "Kay" — who is in her 50s — dresses like she's in her teens or 20s. Don't get me wrong, she looks great. She exercises several hours a day to keep in shape and follows a strict diet.

Kay wears spaghetti-strap shirts and short skirts in the summer, and bikinis to sunbathe. I understand that she wants to show off her body, but is there a way to direct her to more age-appropriate clothing? Or am I in the wrong here?

— PRIM AND PROPER IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR PRIM AND PROPER: You are well-intentioned, but if you are giving, you will refrain from wise woman advice. How she dresses is her business, not yours, and I seriously doubt your comments would be welcomed.

IF MAY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: If you truly need a helping hand, the universe will bring you an answer to your prayers during the next four weeks. People who are not good for you seem to fade out of the picture while your true blue supporters are under foot. Feel free to accept new opportunities and move ahead without anything or anyone holding you back. In late June and early July, romantic notions could rear their head and a vacation or amorous adventure might recharge your batteries. Your personal business skills are better than usual in September, so that is a good time to tackle financial and career matters. Mid-October through mid-November maintain a low profile and do not launch key strategies or accept new responsibilities, such as for instance signing for a loan.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Jump on the bandwagon. Support your friends on a key issue or prove that you are a staunch supporter of someone's favorite worthy cause. As far as social activities are concerned, the more the merrier.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep an ear to the ground. Get a clue about someone who secretly harbors romantic notions about you or about behind-the-scene assistance. You didn't get where you are on your own merit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are big hearted enough to forgive and forget. You may be fooled for a while, but that could be your own fault. Unflagging enthusiasm for the job at hand is the best way to acquire the rewards you are seeking.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Temper benevolence with down-to-earth common sense. Don't forget to reward the helpful person who has been reliable and essential to your success. Don't be extravagant; reward in proportion to value.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It takes two to tango. You can't obtain favors unless you are a favorite first. You may undermine your own efforts if you refuse to cooperate with others. Be tireless in your pursuit of a love interest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Love can be a powerful inspiration. Float away on a magic carpet ride of ecstatic feelings with a special someone. Don't hand over the controls to a new acquaintance or someone you are not sure of.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Play hard to get for the best success. When you are actively looking for love, every bit of body language seems like an invitation. You may seem quite attractive to a large number of potential partners.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Drive a hard bargain. Your feelings might change or the facts could be seen in a new light before the weekend ends. Be fair and even-handed when dividing the proceeds from a profitable enterprise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Life and love can both be gambles. It is your job to know when to hold them and when to fold them. Don't ante up your heart even if several fascinating people vie for your undivided attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A Joe Friday, "Just the facts, ma'am," attitude won't get you far this weekend. Inspiring lines from a romantic movie and some silver-tongued flattery will grease the cogs of your social interactions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Concentrate on participating in social events and outings. Find something good to say about someone, even if it causes you to think long and hard. Seclusion might be needed to put puzzle pieces together.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do what you want. "Out with the old and in with the new" is the way to deal with persnickety people and problematic social activities. Amorous fires may be burning brightly in the wee hours of the night.

Pilots head back to 2A baseball tourney

DAVID BASHORE/Times-News
Glenns Ferry third baseman Alan Crawshaw (21) embraces pitcher Adrian Martinez after the Pilots beat Wendell 8-3 in Friday's Class 2A District IV championship game in Glenns Ferry.

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — The Class 2A District IV baseball championship series devolved into a war of attrition. Fittingly, the deeper team won.

Glenns Ferry chipped and chopped its way past Wendell on Friday, winning 8-3 in the decisive third game of the championship series to clinch its third straight berth to the 2A state tournament.

The game featured more hits (12) than runs (11) and more errors (13) than hits, and each starting pitcher went the distance despite throwing more than 110 pitches two days prior.

The Pilots got to Wendell ace Nolan Stouder far more often than the Trojans could touch up Adrian Martinez. Glenns Ferry scored its eight runs on nine hits, and seven different players drove in runs — the eighth scored on a wild pitch.

“We knew that one person wasn’t going to get us to state or to win a championship,” said Glenns Ferry shortstop Michael Willis, who drove in a run and made a SportsCenter-worthy play at shortstop to end the sixth inning.

A soft liner up the middle died on the infield grass short of second base, sending Willis to the second-base side of the bag. He fielded it cleanly, spun nearly 360 degrees and fired a laser to John Acord at first base to record the out just ahead of the runner.

That killed any momentum Wendell had mustered after closing the gap to 6-3.

Martinez was sharp on the mound despite throwing 116 pitches on Wednesday. He allowed just three hits, but the defense behind him kept Wendell in the game more than anything by committing nine errors — three of them came on catcher’s interference calls.

“We’re going to have to clean that up at state,” Martinez said. “We’ve been having around five (errors) a game and that makes us throw a lot of extra pitches. We need to limit our pitches if we’re going to have a chance.”

Stouder doubled home the opening run of the game and put Glenns Ferry down in the first inning without conceding a run. But the toil of throwing upwards of 130 pitches two days before started to show as his pitches lacked their usual zip and he had to gut the outing out from start to finish.

“Wednesday was probably the most physically and mentally draining game I’ve had in my life, but I didn’t think I felt too many side effects today,” said Stouder, who will attend Point Loma Nazarene University in San Diego to continue his baseball career. “The goal is to win the ring, and it’s disappointing that it couldn’t happen. But I feel a lot better about the way we finished the season than the way we started it, so I’m happy about that.”

Glenns Ferry opens the state tournament in Nampa on Thursday against Orofino.

Minico tops Twin Falls for District IV title

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Class 4A District IV baseball championship trophy is back in Rupert.

Minico won its sixth district title in seven seasons Friday, thumping defending champion Twin Falls 14-4 in five innings at Warburton Field.

Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir put it best when he said of Minico, “They’re the hot team right now. They’re swinging it extremely well.”

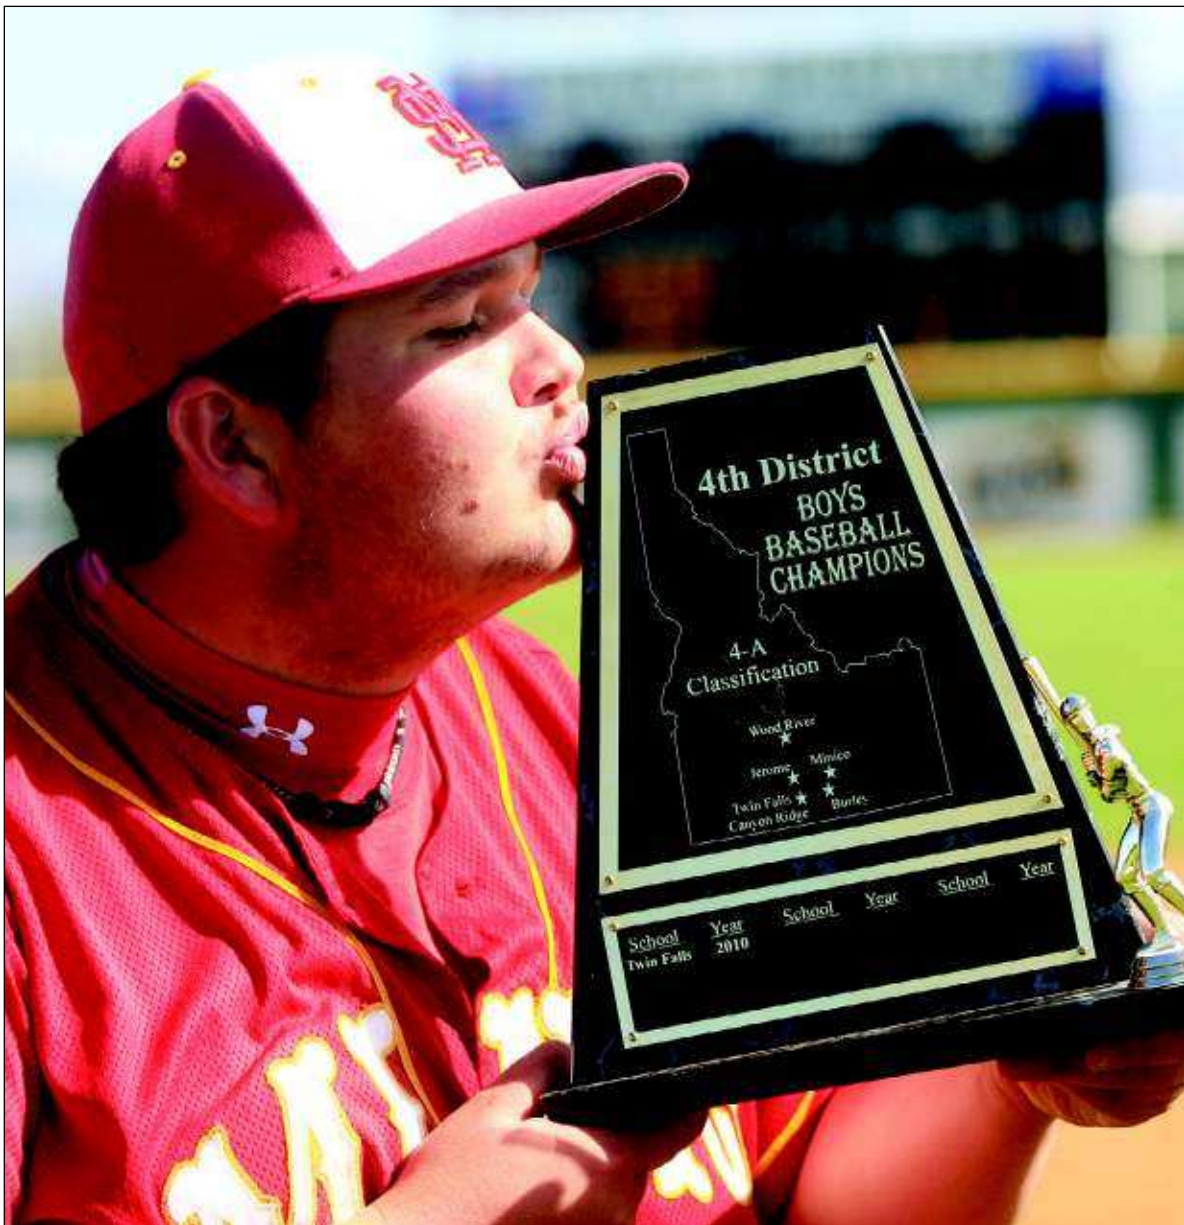

In its three district tournament games, Minico averaged 18.6 hits and 17.6 runs per outing.

The reason behind the hot streak? “The RBI tower has the mojo,” said Minico senior Suede Denker.

The RBI tower is a stack of gloves, 16 high, built atop the railing in Minico’s dugout while the Spartans are up to bat. Some players even gather around it like an altar and perform quasi-ceremonial chants.

But the current streak is more likely due to a renewed focus, with players putting in extra time before school and after practice.

“We kind of lounged in the middle of the season, we didn’t go in the morning or after practice to hit. Then we were like, ‘We’ve got one goal and we’re not getting it accomplished

Flying bus takes air at MVS tonight

Rain may have wiped out the action last Saturday, but tonight fans will be showered with an abundance of entertainment at Magic Valley Speedway.

A demolition derby and roll-over contest are featured on tonight’s ticket along with a daring feat involving a bus driven by a masked superhero. The driver will attempt to launch the bus off a special ramp, jumping it over the infield in his quest to make MVS history. Don’t try this at home.

The Quale’s Electronics Pro Hornets, Jr. Stingers and the TVGoldandSilver Thunderdogs continue the weekly racing action with another round of competition on the asphalt track.

Jason Quale has gathered a sizable lead in the Jr. Stingers standings but Russell Dalton, who lost to Quale on the final lap in the April 30 race, aims to be first across the finish line this time out. KC Gillogly, Brenden Radabaugh and Alyssa Pearson are also in the hunt for their first main-event win.

For the Pro Hornets, Scott Gilligan leads the way in the with an 11-point advantage over his dad, Bob Gilligan.

CSI baseball eliminated by Salt Lake

By Steve Yingling
Times-News correspondent

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Just as they did in their Region 18 baseball tournament opener against the College of Southern Idaho a day earlier, the Salt Lake Bruins responded to a little bit of adversity.

After giving up a game-tying home run to CSI’s Parker Morin, Salt Lake scored four runs in its half of the sixth inning en route to an 8-3 victory that ended the Golden Eagles’ season.

The Bruins’ sixth win in 10 matchups against CSI this season propelled second-seeded Salt Lake into today’s tournament championship against top-seeded Western Nevada.

Extra-base hits were missing from third-seeded CSI’s arsenal during most of the first two days of the tournament. CSI,

Knopp, Declo earn 2A state berth

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

DECLO — Chancey Knopp said she didn’t hit the ball very well in her team’s victory Thursday night over Wendell.

She certainly made up for it with her performance Friday night.

The sophomore catcher drove in seven runs, leading Declo to the 16-1 victory over Wendell to claim the Class 2A District IV championship and a trip to the state tournament.

“This is a really good feeling to win this title. I felt really confident tonight, a lot better than last night that’s for sure. My confidence went way up and I was able to stay on her (Carly Andrus),” Knopp said. “I think she was just getting into our heads. Tonight I was just looking for a good strike at the knees to drive.”

Knopp belted a three-run triple to the fence in center-field in the fourth inning to put Declo up 15-1. Shanice Thompson followed with an RBI single to score Knopp, ending the game on the 15-run mercy rule.

Knopp also hit two-run singles in the first and second innings to help the Hornets build a 10-0 lead. It wasn’t just Knopp that swung a hot bat.

Sarah Hunnelee belted an RBI triple in the second, while Daliss Pickup, Jennifer Bott and Brinlee Breshears each hit RBI singles as Declo poured on eight runs in the inning.

“I’m really happy with our performance tonight. They came out and did it all down the lineup,” said Declo coach Kari Osterhout. “We’re very lucky to have Chancey. She’s very reliable and when she can relax up there, she can get the job done for us.”

Breshears pitched a solid game, allowing only two hits, with Wendell’s lone run coming on a passed ball.

“I was kind of nervous, but we played really strong defense. I have faith in the defense,” Breshears said.

Wendell, however, had troubles in the field, committing seven errors.

“We had a few errors and Declo hit the ball extremely well. That’s probably the best hitting team we’ve seen all year. There wasn’t much we could do, we had only one pitcher. She threw the ball well and they just hit the ball well,” said Wendell coach Phil Wert. “It was a good season overall though for us.”

The district champs now travel to Orofino High School May 20-21 for the 2A state tournament.

“We’ve come a long way this season. We’ve come close as a team this year and we’re excited for state,” Knopp said. “We know we’ve got to step up our game because the competition is going to be tough, but we’ll be ready.”

Friday's first game was a back-and-forth affair between rivals Glenn's Ferry and Wendell, but Ashley Bates led Trojans to a 6-5 win in eight innings, to advance to the district title game.

Glenn's Ferry took a 5-4 lead in the eighth inning on a Mollee Shrum RBI single. Andrus answered back for Wendell in the bottom of the frame with an RBI single of her own and Bates followed two hitters later with the game-winning RBI.

Taryn Mendoza and Kierston Hilt each hit RBI singles in the first inning after Glenn's Ferry jumped ahead 3-0, started by a Sara Arellano RBI double.

however, found its power against the Bruins.

Morin's third homer of the season, a solo shot to right tied the score at 2-2 in the sixth. Earlier, Blake Lively stroked his second double in as many games to drive in the Eagles' first run.

In response, Salt Lake turned to miscue-forcing small ball to retake the lead.

"That's been our bugaboo all year," said CSI coach Boomer Walker. "We don't have that shutdown inning that we need to keep the momentum. It's unfortunate, but the kids battled and played hard."

Dominique Taylor started a four-run sixth-inning rally by beating out an infield hit. Taylor stole second base and went to third on a throwing error. After a walk to Mitch Manning, pinch-hitter Derrick Whitney squeezed home the speedy Taylor with a bunt to the first-base side. Noticeably rattled, CSI surrendered three more runs before catcher Morin threw out Tyson Popoff at second base to end the sixth.

"We're the fastest team in the league," said Salt Lake coach D.G. Nelson. "We just have to find ways to put pressure on (the opponent). That's how we are going to play if we want to win."

Lively delivered. Lively's double along the right-field line plated Andrew Freter to put CSI up 1-0 in the third. But a sacrifice fly by Salt Lake's Sean Moysh scored Popoff with the tying run in the bottom of the third.

Ben Douglas of CSI just missed his second homer of the day in the fourth but Kennedy Kincade of Salt Lake did not, taking a two-out offering from CSI starter Tyler Vavra over the left-field fence for a 2-1 lead.

Douglas later connected for his second homer of the day, crushing a home run to left to open the ninth.

Vavra provided the Golden Eagles with their second solid start of the day, limiting the Bruins to four hits in 5 2/3 innings.

The Eagles, who last won the region tournament in 1999, finished with a 34-22 record. Players hugged and congratulated one another in their dugout afterward.

"Our guys live together, they eat together, they go to class together, they go to study hall together and they have a clubhouse together, so you get some pretty strong relationships," said Walker, who will lose half of his roster to graduation. "It's a tough day. Our guys have given me so much for two years now to say bye."

Earlier Friday, Travis Huber pitched his longest stint of the season and Douglas hit a game-breaking home run as CSI avoided elimination with a 10-2 eight-inning victory against Eastern Utah.

Huber (6-3) worked 7 2/3 innings, scattering eight hits and allowing two earned runs. Douglas' two-run homer in the seventh created some cushion, extending CSI's lead to 6-2.

"It took a lot of pressure off our offense," Douglas said. "We were able to get a little looser and score some more runs."

It was CSI's first extra-base of the tournament.

"We just haven't been driving any baseballs," Walker said. "That was big for us. We were on the ropes for awhile. Finally, we got the big hit to let us relax a little."

Huber was pulled in the eighth after Eastern Utah put together another two-out rally.

"Boomer is the head man, so what he says goes," said Huber, who struck out six and walked three. "I wanted my first complete game, but I was tired as can be."

CSI softball stages dramatic rally at Region 18 tourney

Eagles shock NIC with 10 runs in seventh, also eliminate Snow

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho softball team's trip along the scenic route in the Region 18 Tournament almost ended with them going off a cliff.

But the Golden Eagles saved it at the last possible moment and now are one game from playing for the region championship for the fifth straight season.

Hours after staging one of the most dramatic rallies in the school's athletic history, CSI eliminated Snow College 6-2 to set up a rematch with Southern Nevada this morning. The winner gets tournament host Salt Lake in the championship round, needing to win twice to claim the title.

But the real show came in the seventh inning of CSI's first game of the day, where the Eagles scored 10 runs in the bottom of the seventh, nine coming with two outs, to eliminate North Idaho 12-9. Kelsey Bryant's walk-off grand slam capped the comeback.

"At this point in the season, I don't know that I've ever seen anything like this. We've had some pretty good rallies, but to win like that was pretty amazing," CSI coach Nick Baumert said. "I think once we got around to the top the order, it felt like it was going to kind of roll for us. Then we got to 9-7 and you really feel like you have a chance."

The Eagles (43-18) didn't get their first hit until the fourth inning and were on the verge of getting run-ruled in both the fifth and sixth innings. But they found a way to extend the game and took full advantage when it mattered most.

Trailing 9-2, Mikkel Griffin led off the inning with a single, followed by singles from Marina Groenewegen and Bryant. Nikki Brailsford hit into a double play to put North Idaho within an out of victory, but the Cardinals couldn't record another out. Andrea Jorgensen pinch-hit and singled home Groenewegen, T.J. Surrag walked, then Alyana Watson plated Jorgensen with a double.

Bryant

Marie Williams singled home Surrag and Watson, Lyndi Miller was hit while batting for Jessica Albertson, Griffin doubled in Williams and NIC intentionally walked Groenewegen to load the bases for Bryant.

Whatever buttons Baumert pushed worked to ignite the rally. After Thursday's loss he pulled aside Surrag and Watson, the team's No. 8 and 9 hitters, respectively, and declared the team's need for them to step up. Miller was originally ruled out of the tournament with mononucleosis and was struck with a line drive into the dugout Thursday. Little-used Jorgensen had 17 at bats all season, none since April 28.

In the Snow win, Brailsford homered to kick-start a five-run fifth-inning rally that overturned a 2-1 deficit and provided the winning margin.

Friday's improbable day puts CSI one game from the championship round, a position the Eagles have never failed to reach since forming a softball program. To get back there they'll have to beat a Southern Nevada squad that put them in the loser's bracket on Thursday, but they can lean on some history to see themselves through.

"I told the kids, if anybody can do it, this club can do it. We went back and talked about the first year that we were here, we lost to Southern Nevada on the Thursday night and had to work our way back through, and you just start sending teams home and before you know it you're in that championship," said Baumert. "It's just flowed pretty well and the kids held it together. I think we're at that point where we're starting to care for each other. No matter what tomorrow holds I think we have the capability of having a good day."

Grizzlies force Game 7 with Thunder

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Zach Randolph is doing everything he can to keep the Memphis Grizzlies' memorable playoff run going as long as possible.

Randolph had 30 points and 13 rebounds, and the Grizzlies avoided elimination by beating the Oklahoma City Thunder 95-83 Friday night to push their Western Conference semifinal to Game 7.

The Grizzlies had never won a game before when facing elimination, but that was back in 2004, 2005 and 2006, when they were swept out of the postseason each of those years. These Grizzlies are having not only the best playoff run in franchise history, but they now have won more games this postseason than any other No. 8 seed from the West.

Game 7 will be Sunday in Oklahoma City, with the winner advancing to play the well-rested Dallas Mavericks.

place of Sam Young, scored 16 points for Memphis. Mike Conley had 11 points and 12 assists, and Tony Allen added 10 points as the Grizzlies also improved to 5-1 on their home court in this postseason, with a sellout crowd standing for the entire second half cheering to keep this stunning run going at least one more game.

Memphis outscored the Thunder 51-29 in the second half and 46-38 in the paint.

Russell Westbrook led the Thunder with 27 points, and James Harden had 14. Kevin Durant, the NBA's leading scorer in the regular season, was held to a postseason-low 11 points.

Randolph had been limited to just 19.8 points and 31.9 percent shooting since he scored a career-best 34 points in Game 1. He had been the focus of the Thunder's defense.

But the power forward, named to the All-NBA's third team on Friday, scored 11 in the fourth to preserve Memphis' lead. He scored six straight points, capped by a 12-foot fallaway jumper that sent the fans into a frenzy chanting his nickname.

Oklahoma City just couldn't get to the basket or sink shots in the second half. The Thunder had a fast break with Westbrook driving to the basket, but he just couldn't finish the shot. Randolph came up with the rebound, then Mayo hit a 19-footer to push the Grizzlies' lead to 88-79 with 3:11 left.

The Thunder had their biggest lead at 54-41 just before halftime and looked ready to blow out Memphis, just as they did in Game 5 on Wednesday night in Oklahoma City.

But Shane Battier ended the first half with a 3-pointer, and the Grizzlies used that as the start of an 18-5 run into the third. Randolph's bucket with 5:19 left in the third tied it at 59, Marc Gasol tied it again at 65, and Mayo's three-point play put Memphis ahead to stay at 68-65 with 2:10 left.

Mariners lose sixth straight

CLEVELAND — Travis Hafner hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning off Seattle closer Brandon League on Friday night, rallying the Cleveland Indians to their latest dramatic win, 5-4 over the Mariners, who lost their sixth straight.

Hafner belted an 0-1 pitch from League (0-4) over the center-field fence for his first homer since April 17, sending a crowd of 33,774 into a frenzy.

It was Cleveland's ninth last at-bat win in a season growing more surprising by the day.

Hafner's homer spoiled Seattle manager Eric Wedge's homecoming in Cleveland and was yet another punch-in-the-gut loss for the Mariners, who have lost three of their last four on walk-off hits.

Buchholz (4-3) was given an early lead but allowed Russell Martin's tying, two-run homer in the fifth. Youkilis' homer gave Boston a 5-2 lead in a three-run seventh. With the Yankees threatening in the eighth, Daniel Bard got Jorge Posada to end the inning with a groundout on a 101 mph fastball.

David Toms shoots 68 to lead Players

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — David Toms has gone five years without winning, and 10 years since his lone major at the PGA Championship. Now he has to fend off a host of players who have won big events a lot more recently.

Toms went 25 holes before making a bogey Friday and countered with enough good shots for a 4-under 68, giving him a one-shot lead over Nick Watney going into what figures to be another wild weekend on the TPC Sawgrass.

Watney won a World Golf Championship two months ago at Doral, punctuated by a birdie on the tough closing hole. Despite missing four birdie putts inside 12 feet on his last seven holes, he got into the final group.

Luke Donald, the World Golf Championship winner at Arizona in February, became the first player since 2004 to make it around Sawgrass without a bogey for the first 36 holes. He birdied the island-green 17th and shot 67 to finish two shots behind.

Also two shots behind:
• U.S. Open champion and Ryder Cup star Graeme McDowell, who is back on track after a dismal April.

• Former U.S. Open champion Lucas Glover, riding high after his win last week at Quail Hollow.

• Steve Stricker, who has won two FedEx Cup playoff events and has become a regular among the top 10 in the world.

The favorite?

“Whoever plays the best on the weekend,” Glover said, as good of an answer as anyone can provide.

perfect on a course that looks like it demands no less. It led to nearly perfect play over two days at The Players, and pole position going into the weekend.

Toms doesn't have a great record at TPC Sawgrass. In 18 previous attempts, he has missed the cut 10 times and only once has finished in the top 10. He just couldn't figure out the right angle into the greens, and always believed it had to be just right.

“It seemed early in my career around here I was always trying to play the perfect shot,” he said. “I think the last few years, I’ve just learned to try to play my game, my shot ... rather than trying to hit the perfect shot on the golf course.”

Watney did his best to catch him.

He started the back nine with back-to-back birdies, then gave himself a chance on every hole. Watney missed four birdie putts inside 12 feet over his last seven holes, settling for 71 after opening with a 64. His emotions showed what this place can do for you.

“I’m not exactly happy,” Watney said, before ending his remarks with, “I’m excited where I am.”

Toms was at 10-under 134, leading a quality list of contenders at the biggest event of golf's strongest tour.

Looming particularly large was Donald, the Englishman who can go to No. 1 in the world with a victory. He has only been out of the top 10 once since last September. Perhaps even more impressive this week is that Donald hasn't made a bogey all week.

Four major champions are among the top 10 — one of them is Ryder Cup captain Davis Love III, a two-time winner of The Players who was three back going into the weekend. All but Toms among the top six have won tournaments in the last year.

Even with Tiger Woods long departed after withdrawing Thursday, there was no shortage of drama.

A fan offered to be lifted down into the lake off the 18th tee to retrieve Michael Bradley's driver when it came out of his hands. Mark Wilson called a two-shot penalty on himself for a double-hit — even though video evidence was inconclusive — which caused him to miss the cut. Jonathan Byrd challenged a bad time he received, and had Rory Sabbatini argue on his behalf.

UCI deplores leak of Tour doping ‘suspicion index’

PARIS (AP) — Cycling's governing body condemned the leak Friday of a confidential document that ranks riders at last year's Tour de France on a scale of doping suspicion, saying the list does not “under any circumstances prejudice the possible guilt” of any competitors.

French sports daily L'Equipe published what it said was UCI's “index of suspicion” for all 198 riders from the 2010 Tour on a grade of zero to 10, with 10 the highest level of suspicion and zero the lowest.

“The UCI deplores the leak,” UCI spokesman Enrico Carpani told The Associated Press by telephone. “The list exists, yes. We haven't hidden that.”

Two riders were listed at 10 — Carlos Barredo of Spain and Yaroslav Popovych of Ukraine, one of Lance Armstrong's RadioShack teammates; one at 9 — Denis Menchov of Russia; and several more at 8, including Jurgen Van Den Broeck, Belgium. Most of the riders scored below 4.

Armstrong and teammate Levi Leipheimer were listed at 4, while another teammate, Christopher Horner, got a zero.

The ratings were based on readings drawn from each rider's biological passport profile before the Tour, including the latest blood tests on July 1, two days before the start of the race.

Carpani said the list was meant as a “working tool” to support the drug-testing process.

“It is essential to note that the list published by L'Equipe ... is liable to be interpreted in an incorrect and prejudicial manner,” the UCI said in a statement, adding that the article “cannot under any circumstances prejudice the possible guilt of the persons whose names appear on the list.”

“Whatever the assessment of the appropriateness of testing a specific rider,” the UCI added, “the list does not justify any suspicion or condemnation.”

Most of the riders scored below 4, including 49 at 0.

Last year's winner, Alberto Contador, was listed at 5.

Contador was the only rider who tested positive during last year's race. He blamed the positive clenbuterol on eating contaminated beef and was cleared by the Spanish cycling federation. Contador's case is currently under appeal at the Court of Arbitration for Sport.

“The UCI deplores and strongly condemns the breach of confidentiality which allowed this list to be sent to the press,” the cycling body said. “A leak of this kind is highly irresponsible and unacceptable.”

The UCI said it was consulting with the World Anti-Doping Agency to open an investigation into the leak.

Riders reacted angrily to the existence of the list and demanded an explanation from the UCI.

“I'm all for catching cheats but draw the line at this sort of thing which could be based on 1 single wayward statistic,” Australian rider Robbie McEwen, a former three-time green jersey sprint champion on the Tour, said on Twitter. “And who leaked it??”

Sprint champion Mark Cavendish of Britain, a multiple sprint-stage winner at the Tour, also expressed his view on Twitter.

“So there's a leaked 1-10 ‘suspicion’ scale for all 2010 TourDeFrance riders,” he said. “So now EVERYONE'S suspicious, but just HOW suspicious?!”

The UCI said blood tests are carried out on all riders before every major tour, with the results and biological profiles used to determine the testing plans during the race.

“The system enables anti-doping tests to be targeted more effectively and ... the fight against doping as a whole to be enhanced,” the UCI said.

Tour race director Christian Prudhomme said the existence of such a list only serves to underline how seriously the fight against doping is being taken in cycling.

“It's because cycling is a forerunner (in the fight against doping) that there is a list,” Prudhomme said. “There is a list made by one of the only three international federations that uses the biological passport. A tool, certainly a plus, in the fight against doping.”

right now, we need to get on track! Everyone on the team chipped in and we're hitting one through nine right now,” said Denker, who went 3-for-3 with two RBIs.

Casey Christiansen hit 3-for-4 with four RBIs, and also earned the win on the mound. He allowed three earned runs on seven hits. His only major hiccup was giving up a three-run double to Zayne Slotten in the fifth, but by then the game's outcome was basically decided.

Twin Falls' pitchers never got into a rhythm. The Bruins issued 11 walks and routinely fell behind in the count.

Things began to unravel in the third after Twin Falls botched the throw on a routine bunt. The Spartans went on to score eight runs, punctuated by a three-run double by Slade Winmill.

“It really sends a message to everyone else in the state,” Denker said. “Twin always has a great club every year and it's nice to put it to them and come out on top this season after we lost to them last season. It's a little revenge.”

Both teams head to the 4A state tournament next weekend at Bishop Kelly High School in Boise. Minico (19-6) will face District VI champion Bonneville (17-5) in the opening round at 1 p.m. Thursday.

Twin Falls (20-5) opens with the District III champion at 7 p.m. Thursday.

“We ran into a hot team and we're not playing our best baseball right now,” said

Stadelmeir. “We're going to learn from these two games with Minico this week. For a long time we had their number and they had our number this week. Hopefully we are going to be that hot team next week.”
