

Dredge miners strike Idaho environmentalists' ire

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — As a recreational suction dredge miner, Michael Emerson has encountered numerous obstacles in his small-time bid to hit big-time pay dirt: Angry property owners trying to boot him off an impromptu claim in the Owyhee Mountains, a 4 1/2 day stranding deep in the forest near Grangeville, even near-drowning last summer in the Salmon River.

Now, the 51-year-old Kuna resident has a new foe: The Boise-based Idaho Conservation League, which wants the Environmental Protection Agency to enforce long-neglected federal pollution laws that would, if they were followed, shut down recreational river mining in Idaho, at least for this summer.

“Oh, yeah. They (environmentalists) shut it down in California,” Emerson says, adding that opponents have been “screaming up and down” in Oregon, too.

The Idaho Conservation League is asking the EPA to enforce provisions of the Clean Water Act that require hundreds of recreational suction dredge miners like Emerson to get pollution permits before they can stir up rivers with their floating, motorized vacuum cleaners with 5-inch hoses.

Not one permit has ever been issued for recreational mining. The EPA says it just doesn’t have the resources, even if somebody actually applied.

That means everybody who lugs a suction dredge to Idaho’s gold country rivers this summer will be breaking the law.

The fear, ICL activist Bradley Smith says, is that neither Idaho nor the federal government has any idea of the cumulative impacts of hundreds of small mining out-fits on rivers from the Canadian border to Utah. The rivers are home to sensitive species like bull trout and spawning salmon and steelhead, as well as any of the gold that might be left since first luring prospector in the 1860s.

Last year, more than 400 people applied for the $10 state permit to use a recreational suction dredge on open Idaho rivers. The state permit, however, doesn’t cover the federal Clean Water Act permit — that miners must get from the EPA.

With the price of gold near $1,500, Smith says interest will only rise — as could the impacts. Suction dredges create artificial gravel bars that make for attractive spawning areas for fish, but may be more susceptible to be washed out by high water rushing from the mountains the next spring, he said.

“Given the number of operations that are occurring, the price of gold, the impacts to water quality and native fisheries that are happening as a result, until there’s a federal program in place to regulate that activity, it would be appropriate to step up the enforcement,” Smith said.

Dave Tomten, an EPA geologist in Boise, said his agency is working on streamlined rules meant to reduce the administrative burden, but that the general permit won’t be ready until at least next year.

Fire engulfs Buhl home

Fire officials mum on injuries to occupant

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BUHL — A mobile home in Buhl was totally destroyed in a fire on Sunday, with the question unanswered of whether the blaze took any lives.

In the mobile home park along Buhl’s Manor Drive, neighbors said the home’s occupant is Johnnie Blair, an elderly retired man who lived there alone. Firefighters responded to his home, located at 17 Manor Drive, at about 5 p.m. Sunday, arriving to find the fire roaring.

“There was fire throughout the whole building,” said Buhl Assistant Fire Chief Nathan Fawcett. “It was fully engulfed when we arrived.”

A neighboring mobile home to the east had slight exterior damage from the blaze, with firefighters preventing it from spreading further. Fawcett wouldn’t confirm or deny that there were any fatalities, saying it’s still under investigation.

“I can’t talk about that right now,” he said. “We are looking, though. We are looking to make sure nobody was inside the fire. We’re just going to comb the area.”

Fawcett said the cause of the fire is unknown, along with what part of the building it

TOMORROW’S ELECTIONS: WHAT’S AT STAKE

Tuesday’s south-central Idaho elections will be a blip in the grand scheme of America’s elective process. Only a handful of candidates involved in 15 contested area races chose to speak publically about their reasons for running. Even fewer up for a taxing district or school board seat campaigned. Still, it’s an important day for representative government, especially to the area educators and municipal leaders who are asking voters to approve spending more than $4 million for new facilities or just to maintain the services they provide.

Buhl, Hansen, Richfield and Cassia schools seek help

Not even a potential infusion of $50 million in unexpected state funding for Idaho’s K-12 public schools is helping paint a rosy picture for area education budgets.

School districts in Buhl, Hansen, Richfield and Cassia County hope voters will give them about $1.5 million in combined supplemental funding wiggle room for the coming fiscal year.

Bond opponents say a potential funding bump from better-than-expected state revenues means districts are unnecessarily reaching into taxpayer pockets with these proposals.

But consider this: Next year’s planned $47 million cut means Idaho will have slashed state schools spending by $284.5 million since 2009.

School board elections pit experience against idealism

Tuesday’s election will bring new blood to multiple area school boards, as more than 20 newcomers are running unopposed or against fellow prospective board newbies.

While 13 board incumbents are unopposed in their bids to keep their seats, three people are challenging two board mainstays — and both races are in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls School Board incumbents Lori Ward and Kenney Young have touted their experience and familiarity with the tough financial decisions of the past couple years as vital to steering their district through Idaho’s changing educational landscape.

But Young’s challenger, Paul McClintock, and retired educators Mary Catherine Barron and Dixie Lee Siegel — both challenging Ward — say it’s time to bring a new perspective to district decisions.

Water, cemetery could mean big changes for little Dietrich

Voters in Dietrich — population 332 — will decide if they’re willing to pay up to $2 million to improve the city’s domestic water system. Bond funding would pay for a new well and water storage tank, along with other system improvements.

The downside? The project’s expected $3.7 million in bond principal and interest garnered over 40 years can only be repaid through water system revenues. That’ll mean bigger numbers on residents’ water bills.

Voters in the Dietrich area will also decide if they still want to form a taxing district that would give them a place to bury and honor their dead. The proposed Dietrich Cemetery District passed a November 2010 election, but a hiccup in the public notice process for the elections means a new vote is needed.

Go vote

- Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday
- To find your general election polling place, visit idahovotes.gov or call your local county clerk’s office.
- Registered voters need to bring their Idaho driver’s license or other valid photo identification to the polls.
- Not registered? No problem. You can register at your polling place if you bring valid photo ID and proof of residence like a current utility bill.

Jerome event honors injured officer Dennis Clark, police fund’s support

By Sky Buffat
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — In the hours after Jerome Police Officer Dennis Clark was shot during a Feb. 7 high-speed pursuit, calls came flooding in to his fellow officers.

One of the first, Detective Dan Kennedy said during a Saturday fundraiser and appreciation dinner for Clark, was from Boise Police Department representatives who asked how they could help. That question came before Clark was loaded on an air ambulance bound for Boise, where doctors would treat the officer for a nonfatal shotgun blast to the face.

The keepers of the 512 Fund, which helps injured officers injured in the line of duty and their families, knew Clark was headed their way, and knew they could help.

“We know that the trauma center is here in Boise,” 512 Fund Director Wade Spain said. “Any officer hurt in the state is likely to be coming here, where we know the area.”

On Saturday, Jerome’s police and fire departments also showed their appreciation for the fund

"If there was someone in this structure, they're deceased," he said, calling the home a "complete and total loss." "The fire was extremely hot."

Under the drizzling rain, neighbors huddled to watch firefighters put the fire out. Thick gray smoke still poured out of the charred structure at 6:30 p.m., rising up and blending into the cloudy sky.

Don Morton, who lives nearby, said Blair had managed the mobile home park before retiring. Blair had lived by himself in the residence after his wife passed away, neighbors said.

About 25 firefighters from Buhl responded. Filer firefighters also aided the effort, along with Magic Valley paramedics.

Manor Drive was blocked off to all traffic by police.

Ire

After the Idaho Conservation League raised the issue, Tomten's agency sent warning letters to groups including the Idaho Gold Prospectors Association, telling them they set up their dredges on the Payette, the Clearwater and the Boise rivers at their own financial peril. Miners face fines of up to $37,500 if they're caught operating without a permit in such a way that hurts water quality.

Still, Tomten concedes the scenario of federal environmental agents swooping in on river dredges near historic mining towns like Idaho City, Rocky Bar or Placerville remains unlikely.

"It's been a low priority," Tomten said. "If we saw somebody that was tearing up a streambed, egregiously doing things harmful to the environment, we would intervene. But we don't see a lot of environmental harm happening."

Just the suggestion of intervention, however, has recreational miners jumpy.

They see what happened in California, where a court-ordered moratorium has been in place since 2009.

And in Oregon, litigation prompted environmental regulators to reissue their suction dredge mining permit last year, but dredging was never banned. New lawsuits by groups including the Hells Canyon Preservation Council are pending.

"Some of this is relatively benign, but if it's a fish-bearing stream, it's not benign, period," said Greg Dyson, Hells Canyon Preservation Council director.

Recreational miners in Idaho say they enjoy the outdoors and their activity's historic panache as much as diving into frigid mountain streams in thick wet suits to suction up the gravel in hopes that golden flakes will settle out over their sluice box riffles.

It's hard work, mostly for little pay.

"They struck nothing — absolutely nothing," said Christine Ballard, a Caldwell resident who bought a dredge with her husband in 2010 and mined near Rocky Bar in the Boise National Forest.

Environmental groups should focus on big mining operations, not mom-and-pop outfits more interested in recreation than riches, said Gary Scott, Idaho Gold Prospectors Association president.

Idaho already has adequate regulations, he said. For instance, Idaho's Wild & Scenic River system, the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness Area and other rivers are already closed to mining. Scott also contends recreational miners actually can improve habitat, by loosening gravel for spawning.

"I retired and I wanted something to do," Scott said. "It's good to see a little color in the pan. I equate it to my going to Las Vegas or Jackpot or Reno. In each shovel full, there's a little anticipation."

The Idaho Conservation League sent out a press release warning miners to sit out the coming season — or face the possibility of a fine, however remote.

"It's not like anybody is going to be surprised about this," Smith said. "They've had fair warning."

Dietrich pins growth hopes on water upgrade

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

Dietrich's population has more than doubled in the past decade.

But that's not likely to happen again unless the Lincoln County town and its 332 residents figure out how to fund the expansion of Dietrich's "maxed out" domestic water system. Voters will get a chance to do so on Tuesday, when the city hopes they'll approve a $2 million bond issue to bring a new backup well and other improvements to town.

Dietrich Mayor Don Heiken said the city has been unable to run water or sewer service to its west subdivision, which it annexed into town six years ago. He hopes that approval of the bond issue will allow the city to run new water line down Waucanza Street, and facilitate further city growth by offering more residents city water service.

"It's something that we've needed for quite a while," he said. "And I do suspect the town will keep growing."

While Heiken said the city's 160-gallon-per-minute pumping system runs between 18 to 24 hours per day in the summer, strain on the current system isn't the only reason Dietrich is seeking an expansion. Two years ago, Heiken said, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said the city couldn't continue to use the Dietrich School's well as a backup.

Building a new backup well is expected to cost about $745,000, while the $2 million total would also be spent on delivery line improvements and potential construction of a storage tank that's larger than Dietrich's current 100,000-gallon tank.

While details depend on what kind of loans and grants Dietrich can secure for the work, the bond would be repaid through an increase to residents' water bills. Heiken said Dietrich can take advantage of a $1.4 million EPA loan at 2 percent interest — some of which may be forgiven — and is looking into further grant funding.

Eric Larsen may be reached at elarsen@magicvalley.com or 735-3246.

About the bond

Amount: $2 million

Term: Repaid over 40 years at between 2 percent and 5 percent interest, for estimated total of $3.7 million

Taxpayer cost: Not yet determined, but will come in the form of a water utility bill increase. However, the city is seeking grants to offset the cost.

Approval needed: 50 percent simple majority

What it does: Provides funding to make improvements to the city's domestic water system, including construction of a new well, upgrades to an existing well, possible construction of a water storage tank, and installation and replacement of water lines.

Residents puzzle over man who died near Ore. town

By Tami Abdollah
Associated Press writer

MARION FORKS, Ore. — Three miles. That was all that separated Jerry William McDonald from a cold death alone in the Oregon woods and a warm meal back at the local restaurant.

Residents in this old logging town in the remote foothills of the Cascade Range are puzzled over why he did not leave his stranded truck. Authorities have not said how the 68-year-old Oregon man ended up stuck in the woods and unable to seek help.

A U.S. Forest Service crew found his body Thursday in a sleeping bag in the back of his 1997 baby blue GMC pickup, about 60 miles east of Salem, the state capital. McDonald kept a log as he stayed in his pickup on a small road from Marion Forks, detailing a 68-day ordeal that ended in his death from hypothermia and starvation.

"He could have walked right down here to this restaurant," said Kerry Boenisch, who was having brunch with her husband in Marion Forks. The couple from Newberg, Ore., own a cabin in town and often walk, even with a couple feet of snow on the ground.

"Instead, you sit there and write in your journal for nearly 70 days," she said Saturday. "That's a long time. It's downhill. He's not out far enough to be doing that, to be lost in the woods."

His body was discovered nearly a month after his last entry, on April 15, which read "rain." His first entry was Feb. 7, when he arrived in the area to camp, authorities said. Days later, he awoke to find himself in the middle of a heavy snowstorm, said Linn County Sheriff Tim Mueller.

Authorities say McDonald was a transient, though his pickup was registered in Unity, Ore., about 250 miles away. He was estranged from his family, and no one had reported him missing.

Mark Bennett, a rancher in the town of 115 residents and Unity's unofficial mayor, said he did not know McDonald, but that many transients and miners use the area as a base.

"It's sad that no one missed him enough to call or for anybody to look for him," said Evie Grindstaff, restaurant manager at the Marion Forks Restaurant. "That's a long time to be gone and have somebody not notice."

McDonald's story parallels that of Christopher McCandless, who was found dead in his sleeping bag 25 miles from a nearby town after embarking on a trip into the Alaskan wilderness in 1992. He also maintained a journal, which spanned 112 days.

More recently, a Canadian couple went missing in March as they drove through Oregon on their way to Las Vegas. McDonald's body was found just a week after hunters in remote northern Nevada rescued the woman, who had been stranded in her van for seven weeks. Her husband, who went for help on foot, remains missing.

McDonald

McDonald lived out the last days of his life about a quarter-mile up a forest service road off Horn Creek Road, an area frequented by elk hunters and people seeking a good view of Mount Jefferson. He camped along a ridgeline in the Cascade Range foothills about 2,500 feet up in elevation, with Douglas firs and a bubbling creek nearby.

His truck was found along an unpaved portion of the road, which was muddy and difficult to pass in places due to snowmelt. The remnants of his stay there include a man-made pit off the trail filled with paper scraps, cardboard from a case of Pepsi and torn pages from a phonebook. Pieces of burned wood were scattered nearby, as well as piles of wood.

In his log, McDonald noted every change in weather. He labeled his efforts to dig out — "Dig o" — during the first three days of his ordeal, and noted when the day he ran out of food: "No Fo" on March 16.

Authorities believe McDonald liked to camp. He had gallons of water, extra fuel and warm clothes, but not enough food for the length of his ordeal. Although he did not have a compass, cell phone or GPS device, he had $5,000 in cash, a jack for his truck, and chains on his tires.

McDonald seemed to know the area well. His log showed he spent time in Oregon's coastal countryside, stopping in towns like Kitson, Ore. He had plans to drive near Salem, and then on to the tiny community of Powers by April.

His body is at the AAssum-Dufour Funeral Home in Albany, Ore., said owner James Dufour. The family planned to make funeral arrangements Monday, Dufour said.

T.F. woman in critical condition after accident

Times-News

A Twin Falls woman was in critical condition on Sunday following a weekend traffic accident along U.S. Highway 93 near Filer. Wilma L. Keen, 77, of Twin Falls, was airlifted to Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center in Idaho Falls on Saturday with serious injuries after a two-vehicle crash. She remained there in critical condition late Sunday, according to the hospital. At about 7 p.m., Keen was driving eastbound on 3700 N when she failed for unknown reasons to yield for a stop sign at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93, according to Idaho State Police. A semi-truck driven by John B. Vodden, 50 of Alberta, Canada, was driving southbound on the highway and hit Keen's Chevrolet Cavalier, police said. Vodden's truck tipped over onto its side, blocking the highway for six hours. Vodden and his passenger, Ruth M. Probert, 62 of Wells, Nev., were taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls. Vodden was listed in fair condition on Sunday, and Probert was listed in serious condition, hospital officials said. All occupants were wearing seatbelts.

Arab protesters descend on Israeli borders

By Aron Heller
Associated Press writer

MAJDAL SHAMS, Golan Heights — Mobilized by calls on Facebook, thousands of Arab protesters marched on Israel's borders with Syria, Lebanon and Gaza on Sunday in an unprecedented wave of demonstrations, sparking clashes that left at least 15 people dead in an annual Palestinian mourning ritual marking the anniversary of Israel's birth. In a surprising turn of events, hundreds of Palestinians and supporters poured across the Syrian frontier and staged riots, drawing Israeli accusations that Damascus, and its ally Iran, orchestrated the unrest to shift attention from an uprising back home. It was a rare incursion from the usually tightly controlled Syrian side and could upset the delicate balance between the two longtime foes. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who heads to Washington at the end of the week, said he ordered the military to act with "maximum restraint" but vowed a tough response to further provocations. "Nobody should be mistaken. We are determined to defend our borders and sovereignty," he declared in a brief address broadcast live on Israeli TV stations. The violence showed Israel the extent of Arab anger over the Palestinian issue, beyond the residents of the West Bank and Gaza, and came at a critical time for U.S. Mideast policy. President Barack Obama's envoy to the region, George Mitchell, resigned Friday after more than two years of fruitless efforts. The U.S. president may now have to retool the administration's approach to peacemaking. Obama is expected to deliver a Mideast policy speech in the coming week.

Cookout

named in remembrance of Boise Police Officer Mark Stahl, who was killed in the line of duty in 1997. Stahl's badge number was 512. As Becky Houser, Clark's mother, drove to be with her son on the day he was shot, she received a call on her cell phone. She was offered a police escort from Mountain Home directly to the hospital. There, 512 Fund trustees met her and took her directly to Clark's room. They had a hotel room reserved and gave her gas and food cards. The Boise Police Department also provided a 24-hour honor guard outside of Clark's room during the five days he remained in the hospital while undergoing two surgeries. "All the officers were so respectful and such a big comfort," Houser said Saturday. "The 512 Fund was just really, really great." Kennedy said Saturday's event was Jerome's way of giving back — a way to thank those who helped care for its native son. "Donations have been phenomenal," one of Clark's fellow officers and volunteer firefighters, Rick Bernsen said. "Dennis is just an outstanding person. I couldn't do what he's done, nor would I want to. A braver thing I've never heard of." Clark, who has recently returned to light police duty, attended Saturday's event, greeting friends and supporters. He spoke of how he continued pursuing convicted felon Christopher Taylor, even after his windshield had been shot out. "There was a lot of pain and blood, but it wouldn't have done any good to just sit there on the side of the road," Clark said. "The last thing I wanted to do was start something and not stop it." Clark pursued Taylor for three miles after they exchanged shots, finally ending the chase by ramming Taylor's car, causing him to lose control. Taylor is charged with four felonies related to the chase, and is scheduled for a July jury trial. Clark has lost sight in his left eye from the shooting, but he hopes to return to patrolling Jerome within eight weeks. "When you think of a policeman, you think of them in that patrol car," he said. "At this point, I can't imagine doing anything else." Police Chief Dan Hall said it's his department's intent to return Clark to full duty. "There have been others cases of patrol officers with monocular vision," Hall said. "As long as he demonstrates he's capable, I have no concerns for him coming back. We're making our decisions based on how he feels and how the doctors feel." Clark thanked those who have supported him on Saturday, and in turn, Jerome police and firemen presented the 512 Fund with two $500 donations for their part in Clark's care.

Chicago destroys Heat in Game 1

By Andrew Seligman
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Frustrated by a rough start, Derrick Rose stood up at halftime and apologized to his teammates. As makeups go, they'll take it.

Rose scored 28 points, Luol Deng contained LeBron James and the Chicago Bulls struck first in the Eastern Conference finals, pulling away to beat the Miami Heat 103-82 in Game 1 on Sunday night.

The Bulls are off to a good start after sweeping the Heat during the regular season. They went on a 10-0 run midway through the third quarter, then pulled away in the fourth.

As the final minutes ticked away, fans chanted "Over-rated!" and "Beat the Heat!"

Game 2 is Wednesday night in Chicago, and they'd be just fine with another performance like this.

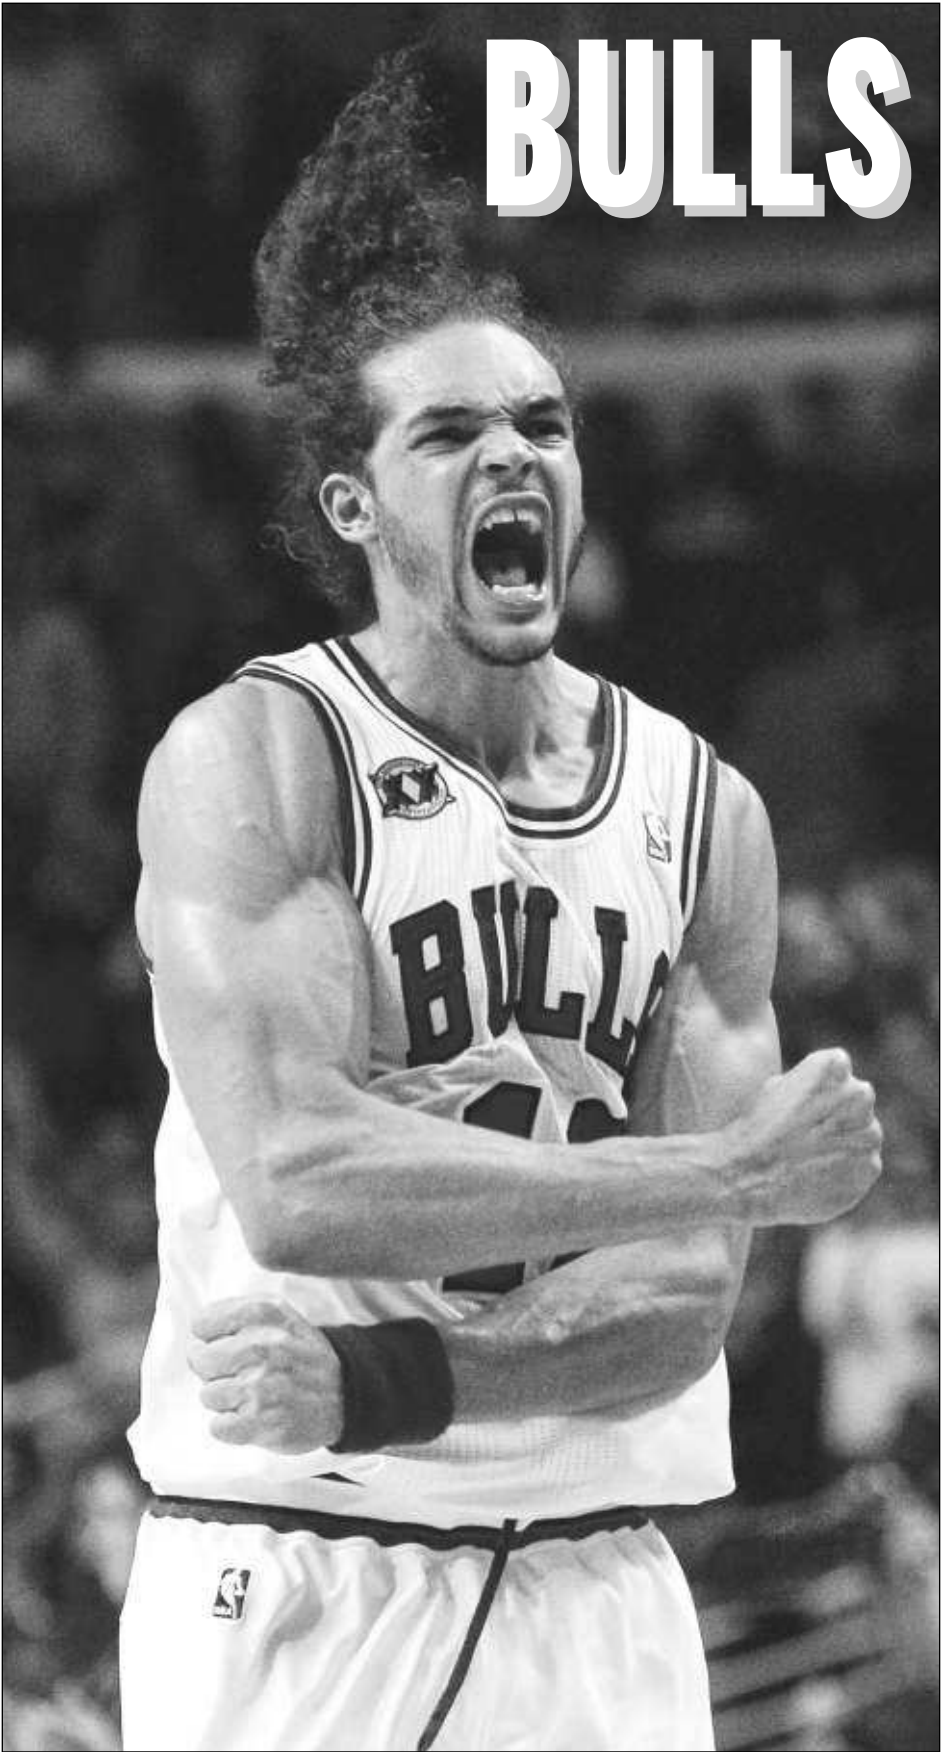

Rose settled down after committing three of his four turnovers in the opening minutes and showed why he is the MVP. He hit three 3-pointers and the Bulls converted 10 of 21 in all.

As for his apology? "It was on me," Rose said. "Careless turnovers. You can't do that against this team. When they get into the open court, they're too dangerous. ... I'm the point guard. I've got to do way better."

He did just that after the early hiccup, particularly in the second half and hit some big shots down the stretch. Even so, this was no solo act.

Deng had 21 points. He hit four 3s, had four steals, seven rebounds and simply put the clamps on The King, holding James to 15 points on 5-of-15 shooting.

"Definitely to guard a guy

Chicago Bulls center Joakim Noah reacts after beating the Miami Heat 103-82 in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference Finals in Chicago on Sunday.

like that the whole defense has to stay focused," Deng said. "There were times we switched and times we forced him into the double. Our bigs were great at forcing him into the front."

Carlos Boozer added 14 points and nine rebounds. Joakim Noah had 14 rebounds and the Bulls pounded the Heat on the glass, 45-33, grabbing 19 on the offensive end while outscored them 31-8 on second-chance points.

"You play defense. You play defense hard and the shot goes up and they get an offensive rebound, kick it out for a three or get a layup or a dunk," James said. "Those are demoralizing for a defensive team. We've got to figure out a way to clean that up."

Chris Bosh led Miami with 30 points and nine rebounds. Dwyane Wade scored 18 points, but the Heat simply were over-matched down the stretch.

"Dwyane and LeBron are going to create a lot of attention," Bosh said. "This is a good defensive team. ... They're going to make them distributors. We have to look at where we fell short as a team for Game 1 and come back with a better approach."

Fox extends District V all-around lead

Times-News

CAREY — Glenns Ferry cowgirl Darby Fox's got her momentum going in the right direction at the right time.

Fox strengthened her hold on the District V rodeo girls' all-around standings with another strong showing last weekend, the final outing before the circuit's district championships.

Fox improved her all-around total to 283 points and was able to put more ground between herself and Valene Lickley of Jerome, who has 244.

Fox added 52 points over the weekend with a pair of wins in barrels, to go with single wins in poles and breakaway roping. She also added a third in breakaway and seventh in goat tying.

First wins were recorded by Katie Sparks of Jerome, who ran the poles on Saturday in 21.695 seconds, and Lickley and Garrett Webb of Wendell teamed up for their first win in team roping on Friday night.

Jared Parke moved into the top spot in the boys all-around standings with 179 points, leading fellow Gooding tcowboy Brogan Bennett by nine points.

Parke picked up wins on Saturday in calf roping and steer wrestling, the latter coming by a season-best 5.38-second run. Parke also added a second and fourth in team roping with partner Ty Faulkner of Gooding, and he added a third place finish in calf roping and fourth in steer wrestling.

Webb won the calf roping with the year's best time of 8.79-seconds on Friday night.

After a week off, District V returns to Shoshone for the district finals next weekend. Friday action starts at 7 p.m., and Saturday's events begin at noon.

Tuttle shines on wild night at MVS

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Andrew Tuttle's double victory headlined an action-packed Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway that included a demolition derby, roll-over contest and a bus flying through the infield, in addition to three normal races.

Tuttle came from the rear of the field to win the Pro Hornets main event, after taking advantage of a mid-race caution. Kris McKean was in the lead up to Lap 11, but he and Scott Gilligan got tangled up and went to the back of the pack. After the restart, Tuttle was able to break away from his followers as the laps wound down, crossing the finish line more than 6 seconds ahead of runner-up Jeff Peck. McKean came back to finish third.

Dog "Tank" Brownfield held the lead in the Thunderdogs main event race, but the car got loose at lap six allowing Tuttle to take over for the next two laps. McKean led at the white flag, but Tuttle snuck past him on the final lap to snatch the victory.

In the Jr. Stingers main event, driver Jay McDonald was the winner after showing the way from the drop of the green flag. A couple of cautions allowed Jason Quale to come within striking distance of the leader, but McDonald kept his foot on the accelerator while focusing on the turns to capture his second main-event win of the season.

Casey Pehrson won the roll-over contest by making a high-speed run at the ramp before performing some amazing aerial feats in the infield. The car took heavy damage, but Pehrson walked away unscathed.

Oakley pair tops cowgirl field

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — As the regular season ended and the District VI high school rodeo circuit prepares for its championships, it's come down to a two-horse race between McKenzie Zollinger and Oakley teammate Jacee Bedke in the all-around standings.

Zollinger strengthened her hold on the top spot over the weekend, adding 44 points for a total of 341.50 with a win and second in goats, a first in barrels, a fifth in breakaway, and a sixth and seventh in poles.

"It's taken me four years to go how I know to go and to know to just concentrate on one event at a time," said Zollinger. "Jacee is my hardest competition. We feed off of each other and cheer each other on. My biggest goal this year is to make it to nationals."

Zollinger and Bedke are close friends that practice together, but they still don't talk much about the standings, according to Bedke. They have enjoyed the last two weekends in Oakley, where they say they feel comfortable having their families and friends motivating and cheering them on.

"This year has been both fun and stressful," said Bedke, who has a total of 285 all-around points after adding 32 points following a win in breakaway (2.86 seconds was the best of the year), a second and sixth in goats, and a third in barrels.

"McKenzie brings the highest level out of me and make me work harder," Bedke added. "She deserves to win (all-around) her senior year."

Kyndal Stradley, the girls all-around winner of a year ago, is currently third.

With some catching up to do, the Filer junior is making a late surge. Stradley made up some ground in Oakley picking up 78 points.

On Friday, Stradley recorded her first win in goats this year with the fastest time of the year at 7.26 seconds, also had her first win in barrels, finished first in breakaway and second in poles. On Saturday, she was second in breakaway, poles and team roping with partner Brogan Parkin of Minico. She also added a third in barrels and seventh in goats.

There were several first time winners in Oakley.

Late pit strategy switch lifts Kenseth to victory

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press writer

DOVER, Del. — Matt Kenseth's first idea was to skip pit road, take a chance he could start first on a restart and hang on for a victory.

Then, he had another thought. Why not just take two tires on pit road instead of four?

With his No. 17 Ford on the jack, Kenseth called the audible and told crew chief Jimmy Fennig he wanted two.

"Two tires! Two tires!" Fennig said.

His crew made the switch before they dropped the car and that was the perfect strategy Kenseth needed to win the Sprint Cup race at Dover International Speedway on Sunday.

Kenseth led the final 32 laps to win for the second time this season. He also won at Texas and became the third driver to win twice this season.

Under NASCAR's revamped rules for qualifying for the Chase for the championship that emphasize wins, Kenseth strengthened his bid to make the field with his second win.

"My mind is to be up there and try to lead those points going into the Chase and try to make the Chase in championship form," Kenseth said. "We don't want to have to slide off of wins. We want to go up there and race like this every week."

Mark Martin was second and Marcos Ambrose third. Kyle Busch and Brian Vickers rounded out the top five. Busch was forced to start in the rear of the field because of an engine change.

Kenseth made his Cup debut at Dover in 1998 as a fill-in for Bill Elliott. He won for the second time in the Cup series on the high-banked, 1-mile concrete track.

"It's one of those tracks that's a challenge to get around fast, whether you're racing someone or not," Kenseth said.

The 400-mile race was dominated by long stretches of green flag racing. Jimmie Johnson and Edwards turned this into a two-car battle for first for the majority of the race. Edwards led 117 laps before falling to seventh place. Johnson led a race-high 207 laps and finished ninth.

Unlike Kenseth and crew, Edwards' crew chief Bob Osborne made a four-tire call on the last restart that dropped him to ninth and spoiled his chance at the win.

"I didn't have any choice in it, really," Edwards said. "That's up to the guys in the box. That is too tough of a choice to make right there and I don't blame Bob Osborne one bit."

Boston completes sweep of bumbling Yankees

NEW YORK — Kevin Youkilis hit a tying three-run homer, David Ortiz had a go-ahead drive and the Boston Red Sox completed a sweep of the reeling New York Yankees with a 7-5 victory Sunday night to reach .500 for the first time this season.

Jon Lester (5-1) shrugged off a slow start to beat New York again and Jarrod Saltalamacchia hit his first homer with Boston as the Red Sox swept a three-game series in the Bronx for the first time since April 2004.

Heavily favored to win the AL East, the Red Sox opened the season 0-6 but finally evened their record (20-20) on their fourth try.

BLUE JAYS 11, TWINS 3
MINNEAPOLIS — Jose Bautista hit three homers for the first time in his career Sunday, adding to his major league-leading total and sending the Toronto Blue Jays to a sweep of their three-game series.

Jose Molina also had three hits for the Blue Jays, who scored in each of the first four innings. Yunel Escobar and Aaron Hill also had a pair of hits for Toronto.

RANGERS 5, ANGELS 4
ARLINGTON, Texas — Chris Davis homered and later drove in the tiebreaking run with an eighth-inning single and the Rangers beat the Angels, winning only their second series in the past month.

The Rangers loaded the bases to start the eighth after Rich Thompson (1-2) failed to retire any of the three batters he faced.

WHITE SOX 4, ATHLETICS 3
OAKLAND, Calif. — Alexei Ramirez had three hits, including a home run off previously unbeaten Trevor Cahill, and the White Sox topped the Athletics.

Mark Buehrle (3-3) won for only the second time in 15 appearances at Oakland. The White Sox went 6-3 on their road trip, winning all three series.

ORIOLES 9, RAYS 3
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — J.J. Hardy hit a grand slam, Nick Markakis added a solo shot and the Orioles beat the Rays.

The Orioles loaded the bases in the sixth with no outs as Rays reliever Rob Delaney walked all three batters — one intentionally — he faced. Hardy then put Baltimore up 8-2 when he hit his third career grand slam on a 2-0 pitch from Cesar Ramos. It was Hardy's first grand slam since May 12, 2007 while with Milwaukee against the New York Mets.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
BREWERS 9, PIRATES 6
MILWAUKEE — Ryan Braun homered, tripled and drove in four runs, leading a shaky Zack Greinke.

Casey McGehee and Jonathan Lucroy also homered as the Brewers beat Pittsburgh for the ninth straight time at Miller Park. The Pirates have lost five in a row overall.

BRAVES 3, PHILLIES 2
ATLANTA — Dan Uggla hit a tiebreaking home run off Roy Halladay in the eighth inning to cap a productive afternoon in which the Braves' second baseman had two hits and a walk.

Freddie Freeman drove in two runs for Atlanta, Jonny Venters (3-0) pitched a perfect eighth and Craig Kimbrel recorded the final three outs for his 10th save.

METS 7, ASTROS 4
HOUSTON — Justin Turner homered and drove in a career-high five runs, and Jason Pridie hit a go-ahead single and stole home for the Mets.

Chris Capuano (3-4) allowed six hits and two runs in five innings. He struck out six.

REDS 9, CARDINALS 7
CINCINNATI — Brandon Phillips hit a bases-loaded double in the seventh inning that ended Chris Carpenter's outing and his five-year streak of beating the Reds.

Carpenter (1-3) hadn't lost to the Reds since June 6, 2006, winning his last 10 decisions.

DIAMONDBACKS 4, DODGERS 1
LOS ANGELES — Ian Kennedy pitched six innings and Xavier Nady and Ryan Roberts hit consecutive homers to help the Diamondbacks beat the Dodgers.

Kennedy (4-1) allowed a run and four hits, struck out eight and walked one to help the Diamondbacks win a series at Dodger Stadium for the first time since August 2007.

PADRES 8, ROCKIES 2
DENVER — Mat Latos snapped a personal 10-game losing streak and Ryan Ludwick homered in the Padres' win over the Rockies.

Latos (1-5) hadn't won since Sept. 7, 2010, and his 10 straight losing decisions were one shy of the club record set by right-hander Gary Ross in 1969.

NATIONALS 8, MARLINS 4
WASHINGTON — Jason Marquis pitched into the seventh inning to win his fifth game, drove in two runs and led the Nationals over the Marlins.

Marquis (5-1) drove in two runs in the first with an RBI double, and added a single in the fourth. He allowed two runs in the second — one of them unearned — and two in the seventh, but still got credit for snapping Florida's eight-game winning streak in Washington.

Choi beats Toms in playoff

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — In a playoff for the first time on the PGA Tour, K.J. Choi conquered an island green and more pressure than he can remember Sunday to win The Players Championship.

He won't forget the way it ended — and neither will David Toms.

Toms went from narrowly missing an 18-foot birdie putt for the win on the 17th hole at the TPC Sawgrass to missing a 3 1/2-foot comeback putt for par, handing Choi the biggest win of his career.

On a hole that is designed to provide great theater, the finish fell a little flat.

Moments earlier, Toms hit his best shot of the week from a divot in the 18th fairway and made an 18-foot birdie putt — only the fourth birdie on that hole in the final round — that got him into a playoff.

Then came the sudden-death playoff at one of the most infamous par 3s in the world. Toms looked to have the advantage when his shot settled 18 feet away and Choi was on the other side of the green.

But the South Korean hit a beautiful lag to just inside 3 feet that he ultimately tapped in for his eighth career PGA Tour win, and his first in three years. He became the fourth consecutive international player to win the PGA Tour's premier tournament.

Toms said his short putt was uphill and into the Bermuda grain, and he knew it had to be hit solidly.

"I kind of hit it on the toe and didn't get it rolling, and when I looked up it was left," he said. "It was just a bad putt. No excuses, no spike marks, no ball marks, no nothing. Maybe a lot of pressure. But other than that, there was no excuse."

Choi closed with a 2-under 70, making a par putt from just inside 5 feet that set up the playoff.

Toms also finished with a 70, and that short putt he missed on the 17th green might not be the only shot that haunts him. Leading by one, he went for the green on the par-5 16th and hit into the water, leading to a bogey.

This from a guy who was famous 10 years ago for laying up on the par-4 18th at Atlanta Athletic Club to win his lone major at the PGA Championship. Even so, he showed some grit at the end with a birdie on the final hole at Sawgrass, which soon was forgotten.

"I'm disappointed," Toms said. "But the way I played 18 shows that I still can do it when I need to. I've got to work on my putting a little bit. I could have put some distance between myself and my competitors."

Canucks rally past Sharks in Game 1

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Defenseman Kevin Bieksa tied it 7:02 into the third period, Henrik Sedin scored on a power play 1:19 later, and the Vancouver Canucks came back to open their first Western Conference final in 17 years with a 3-2 victory over the San Jose Sharks on Sunday night.

Maxim Lapierre scored his first of these playoffs, and Roberto Luongo made 27 saves — and a brutal first period giveaway — for the Canucks. Game 2 is Wednesday night in Vancouver.

Joe Thornton and Patrick Marleau scored, and Antti Niemi stopped 35 shots for the Sharks, coming off an emotional, draining Game 7 victory over Detroit on Thursday night.

San Jose took a 2-1 lead into the third period thanks to a goal on its only power play, and the gift from Luongo. But after failing to finish several great chances late in the second, Vancouver finally converted in the third.

Alex Burrows got behind Dan Boyle on a left wing rush and fed a pass across and back to a pinching Bieksa atop the right faceoff circle. Bieksa's wrist shot that caught Niemi sliding left and went past his blocker on the other side.

Dany Heatley took an elbowing penalty 32 seconds later, and the Canucks' power play, which looked terrible its first three chances after leading the NHL in the regular season, finally converted.

A point pass from former Sharks defenseman Christian

Ehrhoff got Niemi moving right, and Sedin, whose only other goal in these playoffs was into an empty net, skated onto it the other way, waiting for Niemi to slide past before tucking a backhand shot into the empty net.

San Jose, which almost blew a 3-0 series lead before beating Detroit, went up late in the first period thanks to a generous pass from Luongo to Thornton.

Thunder finally put away Grizzlies to reach Western finals

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Coming off his worst performance in the playoffs, Kevin Durant couldn't get his shots to fall again.

Then he caught a glimpse of his mother dancing around during a timeout and, like magic, the ball started going through the net.

Durant scored 39 points for his best offensive outing of the series, Russell Westbrook had his first playoff triple-double and the Oklahoma City Thunder advanced to the Western Conference finals with a 105-90 victory over the Memphis Grizzlies in Game 7 on Sunday.

"I knew she had those dance moves," Durant said. "She used to do it all the time when I was young. She was having fun. I was glad to see that."

Soon enough, he was having fun, too — and the Thunder are two-stepping into Texas for the franchise's first appearance in the West finals since losing in the NBA finals in 1996 as the Seattle SuperSonics.

Game 1 against the Mavericks is Tuesday night in Dallas.

Durant, the NBA scoring champion the past two seasons, followed the lowest-scoring game of his two postseason appearances with one of his best. He heated up in the second quarter after the entertaining exchange with his mother, put the Thunder in control late in the third, then put it away with a pair of two-handed slams in the fourth.

"Durant is a special player, one of the best players in the NBA," said Memphis star Zach Randolph, who was limited to an inefficient 17 points and 10 rebounds. "The kid is a gym-rat, he works hard.

He's one of my favorite players. You've got to give him kudos and give him respect.

"You see what he does night in and night out and he's just relentless."

Westbrook, criticized throughout the playoffs for taking too many shots, was at his all-around best with 14 points, matching his season-high with 14 assists and producing extra possessions with 10 rebounds. It was only the fifth triple-double in a Game 7, according to information provided to the team by the Elias Sports Bureau.

Larry Bird, Jerry West, James Worthy and Scottie Pippen also accomplished the feat.

"He gets picked on a little bit, but one of the things (with) Russell, he keeps playing," Thunder coach Scott Brooks said. "He keeps improving, he keeps getting better and tonight he controlled the game."

Mike Conley scored 18 points to lead Memphis, which had never won a playoff game before this year and made a bid to become the first No. 8 seed to reach the West finals.

derby, the survivor being James Hunt.

The most nerve-wracking time of the night involved a mystery driver and a bus. After gaining speed around the one-third mile track the driver launched the small bus off a custom-built ramp with the intention of landing on two fifth-wheel trailers. However, the jump was short after the bus twisted to the right mid-air. After a few tense moments, safety personnel helped the "mystery driver," track owner Eddy McKean, out of the wreckage. McKean then gave a big wave to the crowd.

"It was a good ride, but I missed the ramp a little bit and I hit the ground hard. I got a little banged up," Eddy McKean said, displaying a bandaged right hand. "We'll build a better ramp and we'll do it better next time."

Recession or not, pay Twin Falls cops what they’re worth

Does it matter that the average Twin Falls police officer earns $3.37 less per hour than cops in similar-sized cities in Idaho?

It does, and here’s why: Twin Falls has the seventh-highest crime rate in Idaho — higher than Boise, Meridian, Nampa, Idaho Falls, Pocatello, Caldwell or Lewiston. And its arrest rate increased 7 percent in the last three years for which statistics are available, according to the Idaho State Police.

Our view: Public safety is the unconditional first priority of city government, in good times and bad. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Simply put, there aren’t enough Twin Falls officers to cover the beat, and those who do make 18 percent less than their counterparts elsewhere in the state. So they take higher-paying jobs, leaving the citizens of Twin Falls even more vulnerable.

That’s why when Twin Falls City Councilman Will Kezele says other needs may be more important than what Twin Falls pays its key employees, we have to disagree.

The salary gap is striking. The average firefighter in Idaho’s largest cities earns $16.25 an hour; in Twin Falls it’s $11.82. This is a community that in addition to its 44,000 residents, doubles or triples in size during a typical weekday.

We simply can’t afford to lose any more of the experienced help we have.

Police Chief Brian Pike says it takes two to five years of experience for officers to develop the level of service he wants. Pike won’t even let them patrol on their own with less than a year on the job.

So when a cop with five years on his or her resume gets a better offer from Boise, or Meridian, or Idaho Falls, the impact is greater than just trying to replace a single officer.

Does that mean roads or infrastructure are less important? No. But it does mean the opportunity cost for getting an experienced cop is greater than that for filling a pothole.

The city of Twin Falls simply can’t afford not to be competitive with comparably sized communities in Idaho on wages for critical jobs. When it is, the city risks a repeat of the disaster of 2005 and 2006 when 16 cops quit, mostly for higher-paying jobs elsewhere. At the time, that represented almost one-fifth of the force.

In some ways, the city still hasn’t caught up. According to Pike, there are adequate numbers of experienced and rookie officers on the Twin Falls police force, but not nearly enough in between.

Those are the middle managers of law enforcement who will be the chiefs of police of tomorrow.

Personnel costs are only part of the equation for a cash-strapped city, but in some areas they’re paramount. Let’s hire enough cops to keep Twin Falls safe — and pay them enough to keep them here.

The medical mystery of Mitt

From China this week came the rare news that twin girls had been born with a single body and two heads.

Here in America, though, we have an even more unusual case: Two people conjoined in the body of a 64-year-old man. His name is Mitt Romney.

Dana Milbank

One head of Romney defends his health-care reform in Massachusetts, the model for President Obama’s version, which also uses an “individual mandate” to force people to buy health insurance — an idea that enrages conservatives.

The other head of Romney denounces Obama’s health care reform as a “power grab,” a “government takeover of health care” and an “economic nightmare.”

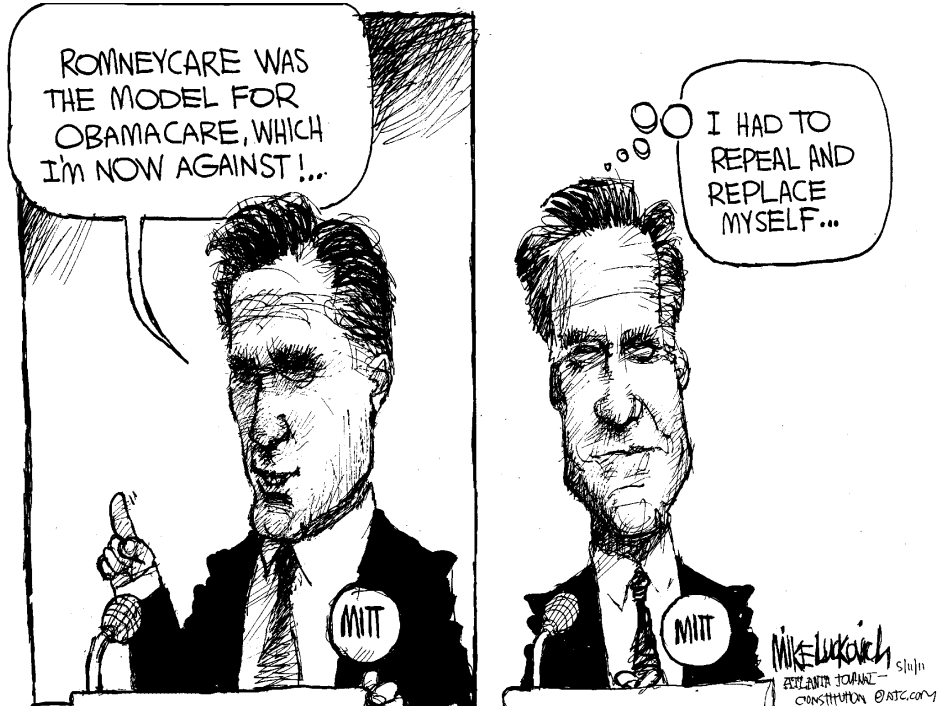

The conservative Romney head, which aspires to be the Republican presidential nominee, is trying urgently to separate itself from its conjoined liberal twin — but the brightest minds in health care have been unable to help him with this logical leap.

And so the Romney twins presented themselves to the University of Michigan medical school on Thursday for a consult. Based on the symptoms, the prognosis is grim.

“Good morning,” he told his audience — a little after 2 p.m.

“You’ve got companies here in Massachusetts like Parago,” he told them — in Ann Arbor. Parago, by the way, is based in Texas.

He shuffled his notes and tripped over words, turning “human resources” into “human rights.” Asked a question by a member of the audience, he hunted for a paper on his lectern, saying, “Yeah, I’m going to — I’m going to — well, I had my — my list here — well, I can’t quite find it.”

It was difficult not to feel pity for Romney in his effort to separate from himself. He’s the titular Republican presidential frontrunner, whose business smarts should make him a solid bet to defeat Romney in this economy. But on the issue that matters most to Republicans, health care, he might as well be, as the Wall Street Journal dubbed him Thursday, “Obama’s Running Mate.” The Journal editorialized that Romney was “compromised and not credible” because of his Massachusetts law, “the prototype for President Obama’s.”

Adding to Romney’s misery, a liberal group in Massachusetts uncovered a 1994 quote in which he supported a plan that would have imposed a nationwide individual mandate — the exact thing Romney now criticizes Obama for doing.

On Thursday, Romney pretended that he had never held such a position, maintaining that only states, not the feds, should be able to force people to buy insurance. Yet even then, Romney gave a more powerful defense of the mandate than Obama has.

“We found in our state we were spending hundreds of million of dollars a year giving out care to people, many of whom could afford to buy their own insurance,” he explained. His solution was “to insist on personal responsibility, and to say to folks who could afford to buy insurance: Either buy insurance yourself, or pay your own way.”

Romney embraced health care reforms that go beyond Obama’s. He praised France’s co-insurance system, and he hailed “capitated rates” — an idea often associated with rationing.

The other Romney twin, though, argued the other side, using the word “Obamacare” 15 times to disparage the reforms he inspired. Obama and his advisors, he determined, “fundamentally distrust free enterprise.” Romney’s current health care plan, he boasted, “includes no mandates.”

Romney has what might be called an Al Gore problem: Even if he’s being genuine, he seems ersatz. He assumed a professorial air by delivering a 25-page PowerPoint presentation in an amphitheater lecture hall — but the university issued a statement saying it had nothing to do with the event, for which the sponsoring college Republicans failed to fill all seats. His very appearance — a suit worn without a necktie — shouted equivocation. His hair was so slick that only a few strands defied the product.

But Romney’s slippery air comes less from pomade than from policies — abortion, gay rights and now health care — changed over time as expedience required. His calibrations continued Thursday. In one breath, he wanted to “applaud” Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wisc., for proposing a plan that ends the Medicare guarantee. In the next breath, he said his own plan “is not going to be identical to the Ryan plan.” How about some specifics, governor? “They’ll be coming,” he said.

Romney, who drew laughter when he acknowledged that his old health reform law is no longer “an asset politically,” allowed that his Talmudic effort to dissociate Romneycare from Obamacare “is not going to satisfy everybody.” But that evidently won’t stop him from trying to split the baby.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Agency violated to keep state-imposed education running

We have a God-given right to choose or reject coerced godless public education. But in this so-called land of the free, we have been denied that right because Karl Marx’s 10th infamous plank of The Communist Manifesto, “a free education for all children in public schools” has been “imposed” upon us by illicit federal, state and county government power.

It is this unjust government violation of our agency that has caused the discontent, the frustration, the financial distress and the contention that is associated with coerced, socialist public education. Every phase of the public school socialist process is run by unjust force and deception. The school tax laws, the attendance laws, the curriculum laws, the licensing laws, the unfair and un-American “mob rule” voting for unwarranted school bonds all violate the agency and rights of man.

We should all be free to choose and to purchase the kind of education we desire, not forced to purchase the goddess, socialist government brand of education. One cannot keep students in toe who have been unjustly enslaved in the name of public education without using undeserved force. Every day the God-given agency of children, the family and the taxpayer is violated in order to keep the state-imposed, money-driven education monopoly operating.

This great evil of denying freedom of education to the American people has been entrenched in our nation for 150-plus years. Public education is an enormous con game, a gigantic money-making racket that usurps family authority, undermines morality and freedom and standardizes our children in mediocrity.

Forced schooling is the premiere breeding grounds of sexual promiscuity, drugs, atheism and socialism. It is one of the greatest deceptions ever perpetrated on the people of the USA.

Fed has been robbing us for more than 97 years

The greatest robbery in history is being conducted now by the Federal Reserve System (The Fed). It has never been audited and it should be abolished. It has been robbing our money for more than 97 years. It was created in 1910 by seven financiers representing Rockefeller, J.P. Morgan and Rothschild European bankers who met secretly at Jekyll Island, Ga. These men represented 25 percent of the world’s wealth. The Fed was passed by an act of Congress in 1913. Since that time, the U.S.A. dollar has lost 97 percent of its value.

The dollar has lost more than 10 percent of its value in just the last two years because The Fed is printing unbacked money to cover the huge $2.7 trillion debt of the Obama Administration unconstitutional spending programs. The Fed is not really federal. There is no reserve and there is no system. We pay billions of dollars to unknown financial institutions on money they create out of thin air! This creates the inflation which is driving up the cost of food and gas as there is more money in circulation.

The best book on the Federal Reserve System is The Creature from Jekyll Island by G. Edward Griffin. Mr. Griffin recommends that The Fed be abolished for the following reasons: It generates a hidden inflation tax as money value drops. It destabilizes the economy, encourages war and tyrannical world government.

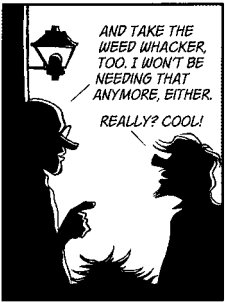

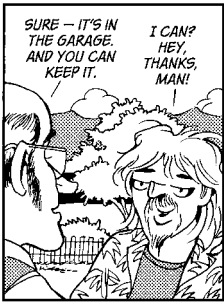

Literally, The Fed is robbing us by printing monopoly money. This devalues existing money. They are using our money to build a world empire of totalitarian power in the United Nations.

We must demand that Congress pass HR459 and S202 to audit The Fed and pass HR1146 to get out of the United Nations! Congress should abolish The Fed, which has been robbing us for nearly 100 years!

Contractor blames Idaho agency for billing mess

BOISE (AP) — A contractor hired by the Idaho Department of Correction is blaming the state agency for failing to adequately supervise work by a subcontractor the state says double-billed Idaho for work the subcontractor actually did for Alaska.

CRI Advantage Inc. officials said oversight of subcontractor AnalyzeSoft Inc. was the responsibility of the state agency, not CRI Advantage. “We believe that it was understood that CRI was not supervising (AnalyzeSoft) and only acted as a facilitator under its contract status,” wrote CRI Chief Operating Officer Ken Malach in an April 11 letter to the state and obtained by the Idaho Statesman.

But Idaho Deputy Attorney General Paul Panther contests that interpretation. In an April 29 letter in reply to Malach’s letter, and also obtained by the newspaper, Panther notes that CRI received 20 percent of the money the state paid AnalyzeSoft.

Panther said Malach’s letter suggests that “CRI had no duties under the contract other than ‘passing paper through’” and “thus realizing a significant profit for doing next to nothing. Such a position is inconsistent with the contract language and amounts to an admission that CRI was unjustly enriched while IDOC was overbilled while work was not completed.”

Environmentalists sue to block E. Idaho timber cut

BOISE (AP) — Two environmental groups have filed a lawsuit in federal court challenging decision by federal forest managers in Idaho to cut lodgepole pines in a 7,000-acre tract they claim includes important Canada lynx habitat along the western border of Yellowstone National Park.

Lawyers from Alliance for the Wild Rockies and Native Ecosystems Council claim the science used by federal agencies to analyze and authorize the Split Creek timber harvest is based on data intentionally altered to favor land development by a discredited Bush Administration appointee.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Idaho, names the U.S. Forest Service, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Interior Secretary Ken Salazar.

The environmental groups claim agency officials also neglected to properly consider the impact the commercial forest-thinning project could have on lynx, its habitat and the government’s own efforts to recover the species. Logging the parcel, located in the Caribou-Targhee National Forest in eastern Idaho, would also force out the snowshoe hare, a primary source of food for lynx in winter months.

“Although these federal agencies are required by the Endangered Species Act to try and recover lynx populations, logging 7,000 acres of critical lynx habitat does just the opposite,” said Dr. Sara Johnson, a former wildlife biologist for the Caribou-Targhee National Forest and current director of the Native Ecosystems Council.

Syrena Hargrove, civil chief for the U.S. Attorney Office in Boise, said they have not yet seen the complaint, but would review it carefully before responding.

Lynx compare in size to bobcats, but are equipped with longer legs and bigger paws to make it a more efficient hunter in deep snows found in the boreal forests where it lives. A decade ago, the species was deemed a threat for extinction across the lower 48 states based on climate change, timber harvests, expansion of ski areas and development and off-road vehicles.

Earlier this year, federal wildlife officials backed off an appeal of a federal court ruling that forced the agencies to rethink and revamp its strategy for protecting critical habitat for the species in Idaho, Montana and Colorado.

Officials have struggled to come up with an acceptable habitat plan — a process marred by political meddling during the Bush administration that led to a 2006 plan being scrapped.

A second plan in 2009 designated 39,000 square miles in Maine, Minnesota, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and Washington as critical habitat. But U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy in Montana last year faulted wildlife officials for excluding Colorado, where lynx are making a strong comeback, and some national forests in Montana and Idaho.

The service has not set a deadline for finishing its new plan. But until a plan is in place, environmentalists claim it’s inappropriate for the forest service to sign off on plans to cut timber in the middle of lynx habitat.

In their 48-page complaint, the Montana-based environmental groups contend the Split Creek logging plan prepared by forest officials is based on science that is flawed and intentionally altered by a former Bush appointee Julie MacDonald to favor industry.

MacDonald, a deputy assistant secretary, was hired to oversee the wildlife service until her resignation in May 2007. She was found to have exerted improper political interference on nearly every decision made on the protection of federally endangered species over a five year span.

That period of MacDonald’s influence coincided with the time when forest officials in eastern Idaho revised their map designating lynx habitat. The revisions included dropping several lynx habitat areas from managed protection. The new map was approved in April 2009, then months later the forest authorized the Split Creek timber sale.

Endeavour ready to go; Giffords arrives to watch

Seth Borenstein
Associated Press writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — With wounded Rep. Gabrielle Giffords on hand to watch, the space shuttle Endeavour is poised to give the work week a roaring and historic start Monday morning, overcoming wiring problems that grounded it last month.

Giffords' arrival Sunday afternoon included a quick fly-by of Endeavour on the launch pad, then she bid Kelly goodbye at the bucolic beach house used by shuttle crews before launch.

"Gabrielle is excited for tomorrow's launch. Do you plan to see history in the making?" her staff tweeted. Later, her staff added: "Gabrielle & Mark said goodbye during visit before launch. Beach House made for picturesque setting."

NASA officials said conditions — from weather to technical issues — couldn't look much better for the scheduled 8:56 a.m. launch Monday.

Giffords, traveling on a NASA jet with the family of pilot Gregory Johnson, arrived shortly after the protective structure that surrounds Endeavour was moved out of the way — a milestone in launch preparations that allows fueling to begin late Sunday night.

NASA was so ready to get the flight off the ground that they moved the protective scaffolding 15 minutes earlier than planned.

There was only a 30 percent chance of a weather delay, mostly because of crosswinds.

The conditions were far different from last month's futile launch attempt. The protective cover wasn't removed for five hours because of storms, and the launch was scrubbed because of an electrical problem.

Because of the early morning launch, Endeavour's crew will be working odd hours, going to bed when most people are ready to eat dinner. Just before 5 p.m. Sunday, Endeavour astronaut Mike Fincke tweeted that he was going to sleep and then promised an early morning update to his more than 10,000 Twitter followers: "I plan to tweet until they take my phone away!"

Endeavour's pilot, Johnson, then tweeted that he couldn't sleep: "I'm a little too excited to hit the rack just yet."

NASA is expecting slightly smaller crowds — 400,000 people instead of 750,000 people — for the second attempt. The media horde is also slightly thinned — even though the April attempt was on the same day as the royal wedding — but includes television anchors such as Katie Couric of CBS, said NASA spokesman Bob Jacobs.

With the story of Giffords' remarkable recovery from the January shooting having been the focus of media attention in April, now more people are paying attention to the other parts of Endeavour's planned 16-day mission. The shuttle's main goal is to haul a $2 billion astronomy and physics experiment to the international space station.

This is also the next to last flight for the 30-year-old space shuttle fleet. And it is the final flight of the shuttle Endeavour, NASA's youngest orbiter, which has flown 116.4 million miles in 24 previous flights.

Giffords was wounded in the head in mass shooting in January that killed six people. Doctors have cleared her to travel to see the launch. She came for the April attempt, flew back to Houston to resume her rehabilitation work and even had dinner out with her husband.

People in campers and cars started Sunday afternoon lining up the best viewing spots to see Endeavour lift off.

Along the Indian River lagoon in Cape Canaveral, Gary and Gail Isackson of Kansas City, Mo., were looking forward to seeing the shuttle but worried that they might be chased off one of the prime viewing spots by police.

"I didn't spend all day sweating with love bugs to miss this," Gary Isackson said.

Beverly Haller of Spring Hill, Fla., and Owosso, Mich., said she wanted to see Endeavour's last flight and her first shuttle launch. She worried that if the shuttle didn't launch Monday, she'd miss her only chance because she won't be able to see Atlantis in July.

"This is it," she said. "I mean I've got to see it. Don't over sleep anybody."

IMF head's NYC hearing delayed in sex assault case

By Angela Charlton and Colleen Long
Associated Press writers

NEW YORK — Dominique Strauss-Kahn's reputation with women earned him the nickname "the great seducer," and not even an affair with a subordinate could knock the International Monetary Fund leader off a political path pointed in the direction of the French presidency. All that changed with charges that he sexually assaulted a maid in his hotel room, a case that generated shock and revulsion, especially in his home country.

Police said the maid picked Strauss-Kahn out of a lineup. Unless the charges are quickly dropped, they could destroy his chances in a presidential race that is just starting to heat up.

An arraignment expected Sunday night was postponed until Monday. Strauss-Kahn's lawyer William Taylor said testing for evidence delayed the arraignment.

"Our client willingly consented to a scientific and forensic examination," Taylor said. Strauss-Kahn is "tired, but he's fine."

The IMF, which plays a key role in efforts to control the European debt crisis, named an acting leader and said it remains "fully functioning and operational" despite Saturday's arrest of its managing director.

A second lawyer for Strauss-Kahn, Benjamin Brafman, told The Associated Press that his client will plead not guilty. He and another lawyer went in and out of the Harlem police precinct where Strauss-Kahn was being held early Sunday afternoon, and declined to answer reporters' questions until the arraignment.

"He intends to vigorously defend these charges and he denies any wrongdoing," Brafman said Sunday night.

Brafman is one of the city's most high-profile defense attorneys. His clients have included mobsters and such celebrities as Sean "P. Diddy" Combs and ex-New York Giants star Plaxico Burress.

Strauss-Kahn, 62, was arrested less than four hours after the alleged assault, plucked from first class on a Paris-bound Air France flight that was just about to leave the gate at John F. Kennedy International Airport.

The white-haired, well-dressed, thrice-married father of four was alone when he checked into the luxury Sofitel hotel, not far from Manhattan's Times Square, on Friday afternoon, police said. It wasn't clear why he was in New York. The IMF is based in Washington, and he had been due in Germany on Sunday to meet with Chancellor Angela Merkel.

The 32-year-old maid told authorities that when she entered his spacious, $3,000-a-night suite early Saturday afternoon, she thought it was unoccupied. Instead, Strauss-Kahn emerged from the bathroom naked, chased her down a hallway and pulled her into a bedroom, where he sexually assaulted her, New York Police Department spokesman Paul J. Browne said.

The woman told police she fought him off, but then he dragged her into the bathroom, where he forced her to perform oral sex on him and tried to remove her underwear. The woman was able to break free again, escaped the room and told hotel staff what had happened, authorities said.

Strauss-Kahn was gone by the time detectives arrived moments later. He left his cellphone behind. "It looked like he got out of there in a hurry," Browne said.

The NYPD discovered he was at JFK and contacted officials at the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which runs the airport. Port Authority police officers arrested him.

The maid was taken by police to a hospital and was treated for minor injuries.

Stacy Royal, a spokeswoman for Sofitel, said the hotel's staff was cooperating in the investigation and that the maid "has been a satisfactory employee of the hotel for the past three years."

Strauss-Kahn was arrested on charges of a criminal sex act, attempted rape and unlawful imprisonment. Authorities were looking for any forensic evidence and DNA.

His wife, Anne Sinclair, defended him in a statement to French news agency AFP.

"I do not believe for one second the accusations brought against my husband. I have no doubt his innocence will be established," said Sinclair, a New York-born journalist who hosted a popular weekly TV news broadcast in France in the 1980s.

A member of France's Socialist party, Strauss-Kahn was widely considered the strongest potential challenger next year to President Nicolas Sarkozy, whose political fortunes have been flagging.

"At the top of the polls," Strauss-Kahn tweeted proudly in French last December, linking an article that showed him ahead in opinion polls when French voters were asked whom they would choose in a primary. At a soccer game in a Washington suburb last September, he, his wife and others were seen wearing T-shirts that read, "Yes we Kahn," a play on Barack Obama's 2008 campaign slogan, "Yes we can."

Strauss-Kahn also noted that he trailed only Warren Buffett and Bill Gates on a list of 100 "global thinkers" compiled last November by Foreign Policy magazine. Strauss-Kahn was cited for his "steely vision at a moment of crisis" — for convincing Germany to help bail out Greece's debt-laden government, and for helping to put the brakes on defaults in Hungary, Pakistan and Ukraine.

The arrest could throw the long-divided Socialists back into disarray about who they could present as Sarkozy's opponent. Even some of his adversaries were stunned.

"It's totally hallucinating. If it is true, this would be a historic moment, but in the negative sense, for French political life," said Dominique Paille, a political rival to Strauss-Kahn on the center right, on BFM television. Still, he urged, "I hope that everyone respects the presumption of innocence. I cannot manage to believe this affair."

Candidates need to announce their intentions this summer to run in fall primary elections.

CUT THE NOISE

Avoid damage to ears during summer concert season

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

When Donald White listens to his MP3 player, he cranks the volume.

"All the way up," the 15-year-old Filer Middle School student said Thursday. "Gotta rock out." His friends Eric Gutierrez, 13, and Flavio Gomez, 14, nodded in agreement.

But what are the long-term repercussions of rocking out? Mary Whitaker, audiologist and instructor at Idaho State University, said repeated exposure to loud music — from headphones, speakers or at concerts — can damage hair cells in the inner ear, causing ringing in ears or hearing loss.

Imagine walking across the same spot on your lawn, Whitaker said — eventually, you wear down a path. The same thing happens when you listen to loud music all the time.

"The big deal is how loud and how long," she said. If you're listening to music through headphones at 100 percent volume, your ears won't last long, but 60 percent volume allows you to enjoy music longer.

Despite the risks, Gutierrez, White and Gomez weren't concerned. And while their parents occasionally ask them to turn down their stereos, they don't bring up hearing loss, Gutierrez said.

So what's a music lover — or his parents — to do? Here are some ways to protect your ears while enjoying the tunes you love.

Turn it down. If you want to listen to your music for more than 60 seconds at a time, don't crank your iPod or speakers up to 100 percent, Whitaker said. "The louder it is, the less time you can be around it," she said.

Morgan Lang of Filer doesn't monitor exactly how loud she listens to her iPod, but the 13-year-old won't turn it up so loud that it hurts her ears.

"I usually keep it to the point where it doesn't bother me," she said.

If the kids are wearing headphones, how can parents tell if it's too loud? Just listen, said Bob Schroeder of Hearing Counselors and Audiology of Twin Falls. "If parents or others can hear music the kids are listening to, those kids are at risk."

Wear ear plugs. At concerts, the music is loud enough that you can still enjoy the songs through foam plugs. Travis Capps, bass player for Twin Falls band Otto Pilate, wears ear plugs when playing especially rowdy shows. He doesn't always use hearing protection while practicing, though, and he suffers for it — Capps has a constant ringing in his ears, he said.

Take a break. When you're at a concert, go outside for a few minutes, Whitaker said. Not only will you get some fresh air, but you will relieve your ears of the pounding bass.

Consider surrounding noise. For example, people who wear earbuds while mowing the lawn almost certainly have their music turned up too loud, Schroeder said. The mower is loud by itself, he said, so to hear their music people crank up the volume even more. If you need to turn up your music to 100 percent to hear it, consider going without.

Use volume limits on iPods. Parents, this one's for you: You can set the maximum volume limit on most iPods, including the Shuffle and Nano. Go to Settings and click on Volume Limit, then use the wheel to select the maximum volume. GenerationDeaf.com recommends 70 percent. For more information on this setting, visit support.apple.com.

Don't panic. If you have ringing in your ears after a concert — or any loud event — that doesn't mean you'll go deaf tomorrow.

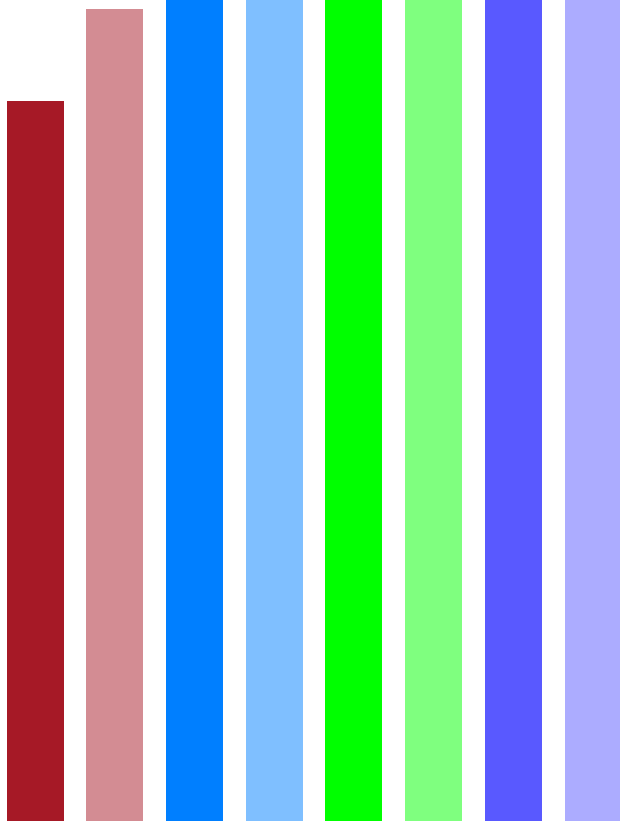

Reporter Melissa Davlin may be reached at 735-3234 or melissa.davlin@lee.net.

How loud, how long

The human ear can safely take eight hours of continuous noise at 85 decibels, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health. For every 3 decibels over 85, the permissible exposure time is cut in half to avoid damage. So if a noise comes in at 88 decibels, the safe time limit drops to four hours; two hours for 91 decibels, and so on.

What does this mean for music fans? According to The Noise Navigator database, concerts blast music at an average of 106 decibels — a safe exposure limit of 3 minutes and 45 seconds.

How does that compare with other noises?

Pistol, .22 Magnum — 157 decibels

Car horn — 120 decibels

Sporting event — 106 decibels

Chain saw — 100 decibels

Movie theater — 81 decibels

Toilet flush — 75 decibels

Crying baby — 70 decibels

Speech — 62 decibels

Guess what those flip-flops are doing to your feet ...

By Rachel Saslow
The Washington Post

Sam Hobert, 19, has suffered for his flip-flops. A few years ago, he broke his right big toe after slamming his foot into a rock while hiking in New Hampshire in his favorite summertime footwear. On a warm day a few weeks ago, the George Washington University freshman was nursing foot blisters, courtesy of a pair of new brown leather 'flops from the Gap.

"It's looks over comfort," he says. "But I'm regretting it a little bit, I'm not gonna lie."

It's springtime and flip-flops — the airy sandal with the distinctive thwack-thwack soundtrack — are back, much to the frustration of podiatrists (but to the delight of their billing departments). Wearing flip-flops can cause problems ranging from stubbed toes and cuts to overuse injuries such as foot stress fractures.

Now that the weather is warm, says Howard Osterman, a podiatrist who has practiced for 20 years, he will see at least one patient with a flip-flop injury every day through September.

The No. 1 problem he sees from the shoes are overuse injuries such as stress fractures of the metatarsals, the five long bones that reach out to the toes. A stress fracture happens after constant, repetitive stress to a bone and is generally treated with rest, more-supportive shoes and perhaps a walking boot.

Many of the less-expensive flip-flop styles consist of just a flat piece of rubber and the toe thong. The lack of arch support can cause another common foot injury: plantar fasciitis, inflammation of the thick band of tissue along the bottom of the foot that causes a stabbing pain, especially in the heel. People with flatter arches are more prone to such overuse injuries because they need more support for their muscles and ligaments, Osterman says.

Flip-flops also leave the feet unprotected and exposed to the elements, which can mean cold toes, sunburns, cuts and bruises.

Very few studies have looked at the pros and cons of flip-flops. In 2008, Justin Shroyer, a biomechanics graduate student at Auburn University in Alabama, studied 39 college-age men and women to see how they walked when wearing flip-flops compared with sneakers. A native Floridian and a lifelong fan of flip-flops, Shroyer was inspired to study the shoes when he noticed how many fellow students wore them all day long and when he realized that it was a practically untouched area of research in biomechanics.

Shroyer, now an assistant professor at the University of Louisiana at Lafayette, found that while wearing flip-flops, participants in his study took shorter steps. He hypothesized that this was because the wearer was trying to get his or her foot on the ground faster, to prevent the shoe from flying off. Also, flip-flop wearers did not bring their toes up as much during the leg's swing phase because they tended to grip the sandals with their toes.

"Your toe flexors are fighting what you're naturally trying to do," Shroyer says. "It's kind of an antagonistic push-pull, tug-of-war going on, and it's not happening in running shoes or bare feet."

The researchers speculated that the altered gait could result in pain from the foot up into the hips and lower back.

Thonglike sandals have been around at least since the ancient Egyptians, according to Elizabeth Semmelhack, senior curator at the Bata Shoe Museum in Toronto, founded by the family behind Bata shoes. Flip-flops as we now know

AIDS prevention office gets new Twin Falls location

Times-News

Allies Linked for the Prevention of HIV and AIDS (a.l.p.h.a) has moved its Twin Falls office to a new location that offers more room and better privacy for clients.

The organization will host a chamber of commerce open house and ribbon cutting with refreshments, 10 a.m. to noon May 25 at the new office, 213 Third St. E.

For the past eight years, a.l.p.h.a has been collaborating with others in southern Idaho for testing and education to prevent the transmission of HIV and other sexually transmitted infections, while providing supportive services to affected individuals. That mission was expanded to Magic Valley with the opening of the Twin Falls office last year.

Over the past year, said Duane Quintana, a.l.p.h.a. founder and director, the group has worked to identify areas of need in Magic Valley for HIV testing, education and support for those affected by HIV and AIDS.

"We also continue to expand our testing locations, services and volunteer opportunities," he said.

You can't skate through this

By Vicky Hallett
The Washington Post

It's about time somebody named a move after figure skater Kristi Yamaguchi. As you might expect, it requires strong legs, body control and endurance. But what might surprise you is that it's not on ice, and neither is the rest of the Olympic champ's new DVD, "Kristi Yamaguchi: Power Workout" ($17, Acacialifestyle.com).

She partnered up with veteran trainer Erin O'Brien, who's strung together circuits combining cardio, strength and core exercises. The one O'Brien dubbed "The Yamaguchi" is a series of jump squats punctuated with 90-degree turns. Even its namesake finds that exhausting. "It's tough after repeating it over and over," Yamaguchi says.

But, of course, she's used to jumping around, both from her skating days and her current routine. After she drops her two daughters off at school, she joins her husband — former pro hockey player Bret Hedican — for a workout that usually involves plyometric exercises to build stamina and strength.

"We try to motivate each other," says Yamaguchi, who also remains devoted to Pilates, which she was first introduced to at age 12. Those are the exercises she uses to "rebalance and rehabilitate." (And they're what she relied on in 2008 to get her body prepared for her winning season of "Dancing With the Stars.")

Her interest in Pilates and yoga will be on display in her second exercise DVD, set to be released in December. The two types of exercise reflect what Yamaguchi had to master as a skater.

"There's the athletic side, because you need cardio, strength and power. Then, there's the artistic side that's flowing and lyrical and graceful," she says.

Looking at Yamaguchi, there's no doubt she's achieved incredible balance in her life — except when she attempts to stand on one foot for certain exercises. "On the ice, you're gliding. You have motion and movement to help you adjust and find the right spot," explains Yamaguchi, who says that repeated ankle injuries have made her even wobblier on solid ground.

So there's a chance viewers will find themselves looking steadier than the gold medalist. But there's one move you can't beat her on: the Yamaguchi.

Flip-flops

they were inspired by the traditional Japanese zori sandal, worn with kimonos, and originally marketed to American women after World War II. The style became popular in the 1950s and '60s with the rise of surfer culture and then walked its way into mainstream fashion in the 1990s, Semmelhack says.

Flip-flops have come a long way from the $5.99 bin at the gas station.

Nicole Camier, 27, was wearing black, rhinestone-studded flip-flops one sunny late-March day in Washington. She was hustling to a job interview, where she planned to change into a pair of heels.

Camier owns about five or six pairs of flip-flops and wears them because they're "comfortable and easy," she said. "When it's raining, I find myself slipping and sliding, but normally I don't have any problems."

Osterman doesn't suggest avoiding flip-flops entirely, but he says that people should wear them in moderation — for a few hours on the beach or at the movies, for example.

Shoppers should look for flip-flops with a stable sole, he says. Brands such as Reef, Rainbow, FitFlops, Teva and Merrell make models that throw more of the weight into the heel and out of the forefoot, he says.

"When you only have something between your toes to keep the shoe on, you have to curl your toes excessively," Osterman says. "You have to spend all day firing your muscles to keep the shoe on the foot."

Rethinking hormone therapy: Armed with better info, menopausal women take charge of their choices

By Tammy Stables Battaglia
Detroit Free Press

DETROIT — Johanne Erickson could handle two to three hot flashes a week when her perimenopause symptoms began two years ago, when she was 44.

But by February, 40 to 50 hot flashes a day plagued the Oxford, Mich., woman.

Erickson, a human resources manager for an automotive supplier, turned into the office joke. Friends bought her a cache of fans.

“At some point you either have to laugh about it and have a sense of humor, or otherwise you jump out the window,” she said.

The situation led Erickson to start hormone therapy — a $2.2 billion industry — despite risks of breast cancer, heart disease blood clots and stroke indicated in research in the early 2000s.

For women like Erickson, the pendulum of hormone-therapy treatment is swinging once again. It's offering relief to those struggling with hot flashes, night sweats, insomnia and mood swings as they leave their reproductive years in their 40s and 50s.

Since she began taking nonsynthetic hormones, Erickson's hot flashes are gone and she's begun sleeping better.

“You have to weigh your quality of life,” she said. “Is this something I'd consider staying on the rest of my life? No. But is it something I'm willing to consider for a year or two? Yes.”

Menopause, a woman's last menstrual cycle and the end of her fertility, occurs, on average, at age 51. But the transition phase, called perimenopause, can last six years or more, with myriad symptoms. Gone are the days when doctors doled out prescriptions for oral estrogen and progestogens, telling women that replacing their naturally dwindling hormones would do everything from stop their hot flashes and mood swings to combat wrinkles and prevent late-age health issues.

Many women stopped taking hormones in the early 2000s, scared after National Institutes of Health researchers abruptly halted a Women's Health Initiative study that indicated that some hormone therapies can increase women's risk of breast cancer, heart disease, blood clots and stroke.

“There have been a lot of updates” since that study, said Detroit Medical Center Dr. Susan Hendrix, a clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Michigan State University and a principal investigator for the study. “As any research goes, you get the big picture first, then you try to narrow down the information.”

The Journal of the American Medical Association's April 6 issue reported that another branch of the study continued through 2009 and found that women who had a hysterectomy and who used estrogen did not experience many of the health risks. The study also showed that those women saw a decreased risk of breast cancer.

Dr. Margery Gass, executive director of the North American Menopause Society, said the use of hormones to treat symptoms of menopause has evolved with ongoing research.

Before the National Institutes of Health study, “they were telling women to take them forever, and that's changed,” Gass said. “Basically (now) it's using them for a reason, and using the lowest dose that treats the symptom.”

One of the relatively new ways to deliver hormones is with transdermal skin patches, which have not been studied long-term but may reduce the risk of blood clots, Gass said.

Virginia Reader, 72, of Orion Township, Mich., started taking hormones in pill form at age 48, after dealing with hot flashes and not feeling like herself. Then, her doctor suggested the patch version, and she has used the patches for seven years.

Reader's doctor, obstetrician-gynecologist Luana Kyselka, said researchers now realize that the original studies looked at mostly women older than 60 who may have already been predisposed to

WHAT ARE THE TREATMENT CHOICES?

Prescription hormones: Once loved, then scorned, prescription hormones are again accepted as a viable option for many premenopausal women.

“I think there's consensus. If you're early menopausal (and) you don't have cardiovascular disease, it's safe and effective to use hormone therapy,” said Beaumont obstetrician-gynecologist Luana Kyselka. “But I would use the FDA-approved bioidentical transdermal estrogen.”

Bioidentical hormones: Chemically the same as those produced by a woman's body, bioidentical hormones are either plant-based or produced in a lab.

Board-certified family physician Dr. David Brownstein, author of “The Miracle of Natural Hormones” (Medical Alternatives Press, $18), said he saw a jump in women looking for alternatives to prescription hormones after a study in the early 2000s indicated that some prescription therapies increased women's risk of heart disease and cancer.

“Definitely women got the message, and there was an increase in interest in non synthetic hormones,” said Brownstein, who encourages the use of hormones that have not been chemically altered and that are custom-mixed in compounding pharmacies. The prescriptions he writes combine drugs produced in FDA-approved facilities and are custom-mixed for a woman's size and situation.

Other drugs: Detroit Medical Center's Dr. Susan Hendrix, co-author of a “Chicken Soup for the Soul” Healthy Living Series book about menopause, at times will look to medications other than hormones to treat symptoms. She prescribes selective serotonin or selective serotonin/norepinephrine re-uptake inhibitors, like the antidepressants Prozac and Effexor, which research has shown reduce hot flashes and night sweats. She also sometimes prescribes the seizure medication gabapentin to reduce the intensity of hot flashes.

Alternative treatments: Dr. Charla Blacker, a Henry Ford Health System obstetrician-gynecologist, said many of her patients have reduced their hot flashes with acupuncture, deep breathing exercises and yoga.

Studies of the herb black cohosh as well as soy products are inconsistent on hot flashes, Blacker said.

Brownstein suggests that women first minimize processed foods, drink plenty of water and undergo blood tests to ensure they're getting adequate vitamins and minerals.

“No. 1 is cleaning up their diet and eating a better diet,” Brownstein said. “When women clean up their diet, their menopausal symptoms get much better.”

late-life disease, rather than those first experiencing symptoms in their late 40s and early 50s.

“We have this window of opportunity to use hormone therapy without as much risk as we thought,” she said, adding that more recent research has shown that women who begin hormone therapy within months of first experiencing the symptoms of menopause, or who use low-dose estrogen/progestogens, may not be as at risk.

Today is Monday, May 16, the 136th day of 2011. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On May 16, 1811, an American frigate, the USS President, pursued and engaged a British sloop-of-war, the HMS Little Belt, off North Carolina after initially mistaking it for the HMS Guerriere, which had seized and impressed an American sailor. (The more seriously damaged Little Belt lost 11 crew members; both sides claimed the other had fired first.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1770, Marie Antoinette, age 14, married the future King Louis XVI of France, who was 15.

In 1868, the Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on the eleven articles of impeachment against him.

In 1910, the U.S Bureau of Mines was established. (It ceased operations in 1996, its functions having been transferred to other agencies.)

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized by Pope Benedict XV.

In 1929, the first Academy Awards were presented. The movie "Wings" won "best production," while Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor were named best actor and best actress.

In 1939, the government began its first food stamp program in Rochester, N.Y.

In 1948, CBS News correspondent George Polk, who'd been covering the Greek civil war between Communist and nationalist forces, was found slain in Solonica Harbor.

In 1961, Gen. Park Chung-hee seized power in South Korea in a military coup.

In 1975, Japanese climber Junko Tabei became the first woman to reach the summit of Mount Everest.

In 1991, Queen Elizabeth II became the first British monarch to address the United States Congress.

Ten years ago: Former FBI agent Robert Hanssen was indicted on charges of spying for Moscow. (Hanssen later pleaded guilty to 15 counts of espionage and was sentenced to life in prison without parole.) Nathaniel Brazill, a 14-year-old boy who'd shot and killed English teacher Barry Grunow, was convicted of second-degree murder in West Palm Beach, Fla. (Brazill was later sentenced to 28 years in prison without possibility of parole.)

Five years ago: The Pentagon released the first video images of American Airlines Flight 77 crashing into the military headquarters and killing 189 people on 9/11. Richard Hatch, who'd won $1 million in the debut season of "Survivor," was sentenced in Providence, R.I., to more than four years in prison for failing to pay taxes on his reality TV prize and other income. Joe Paterno and Bobby Bowden, the winningest coaches in Division I-A football, were elected to the college football Hall of Fame.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please explain to me why today's brides still take formal bridal portraits?

To me, the "W-E" in "wedding" signifies a bride and groom sharing equally in earning a living, raising children and performing household functions. Shouldn't a wedding portrait be of the two people together?

— SHIRLEY IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR SHIRLEY: Superstition may have something to do with it. It's supposed to be bad luck for the groom to see the bride's dress before the wedding, which is when the bridal portrait is usually taken. In years past, couples would pose together for their engagement picture, which was then published in the newspaper with their engagement announcement.

In the early 20th century, couples did have their wedding portrait taken together. I have a copy of my maternal grandparents' wedding picture in which my grandfather is sitting (formally dressed) and my grandmother is standing next to him in her wedding dress.

After receiving your question, I called celebrity photographer Harry Langdon, and we had an interesting discussion. He explained that the rules for wedding photography are constantly evolving, reflecting the time in which they are taken and the culture of the couple involved.

He went on to describe a memorable photo shoot in which he was taking wedding pictures for a royal family. Not understanding the culture, Harry posed the bride standing in front of the groom, thinking it would symbolize the man's "power and protection of his wife." A security guard promptly pulled Harry aside and pointed out that in their country, women do not stand in front of the men — they stand behind them. In addition, a very attractive female makeup artist had been booked for the photo session, and the king proceeded to flirt with and ogle her in such an obvious manner that she became embarrassed, walked out and refused to return.

Another couple was the photogenic governor of a state I won't mention and his bride, a famous beauty. As he was posing them, Harry instructed the governor, "You sit here, and we'll have your bride stand behind you — the 'supportive woman behind the man' ..."

"No," she interrupted. "I'm going to be in front."

"No, wait," the governor interjected. "I'm the governor. I should be in front!"

The proceedings went downhill from there. The disagreement then turned to the lighting Harry was using. The bride was wearing heavy makeup, and after checking the lens, Harry said, "We'll need to change it because the man is usually darker in these pictures."

"Why?" asked the bride. "Because the guys are out there, beating the bushes, hunting and gathering, supporting the family," answered Harry.

"What about us women? We're out there supporting the family, too!" she retorted.

It was a difficult session — and no, the marriage didn't last.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Cut your coat according to your cloth."

— Anonymous

In today's deal the level of the slam dictates the line of play, whether it is the small or the grand slam that is reached. The hand came along during the four-session Swiss Teams Championship, the main event of the second weekend of the 2007 10-day Brighton Summer Congress in England.

When six spades was the contract, declarer rose with dummy's ace on the club lead, then drew trumps. The 2-1 trump break leads to a 100 percent line for the slam: Cash the diamond ace, then lead the diamond queen. If East covers with the king, ruff. Then comes the heart ace, followed by a heart ruff in dummy, to allow South's losing club to be jettisoned on the diamond 10. And if East does not contribute the diamond king, declarer discards the losing club. West may take the diamond king, but that is all. The diamond 10 takes care of one heart loser, and the other three are trumped in dummy.

However, when it is the heady heights of seven spades that has been reached, following an excess of zeal by South, it is to the heart suit that declarer turns for the extra tricks. As it is dummy's and not declarer's club losers that must be disposed of, the straightforward heart finesse will not suffice.

After drawing trumps, play out the heart ace, then the queen for a ruffing finesse. So long as West has the heart king, two heart tricks can be established in hand for club discards from dummy.

ANSWER: My best guess would be to lead the heart ace, playing partner for heart shortage. East appears to have passed initially with six spades, so may well have four hearts on the side, making your decision to play for heart ruffs more appealing. You also have trump control, often important when playing for ruffs.

IF MAY 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Count your blessings. During the end of June and first half of July, you may be a bit wiser and more visionary than usual. Dream big, because you have a good chance to achieve your ambitions. This is a fine time to make plans for the future or to put your most important plans into motion. Anything worth your time and effort will move forward without a hitch. If you can't get a door to open then you know that whatever lies on the other side is not good for you. July is also a blissful month for romantic escapades. September is a great month for business related success or to show off your excellent financial prowess.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You tend to flip your luck like an hourglass and go from one thing to another without a care in the world. You might be filled with energy, but scatter it, just hoping that everything will turn out in the end.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are happy to sign on the dotted line. You give your heart as well as your money freely, because you trust that everything will work out as planned, but you might forget to read the fine print.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Kibitzers care enough to send the very best. You might obtain some valuable information during short discussions at the water cooler. This is a good time to ask for advice or search for knowledge.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hang on tight. The roller coaster emotional ride you take today could be triggered by group dynamics. You could feel somewhat out of your element at a meeting or in a group of your peers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Maintain the vantage point. You can handle any problems or disputes by remaining tolerant and wise. Find a way to hover above the baseless, groundless fears that prompt other people to run for cover.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can earn some fame for your forums. You have the knack for asking the most delightful questions and can guide conversations right down the garden path. You may be called upon to act as a mediator.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You might be more concerned about style than content. People might perceive you as being more attractive and desirable than you really are, so this is a good day to knock on doors or pursue a new hookup.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could have mixed feelings about irrational logistics. For a few hours a family issue could mystify you, because the harder you try to do the right thing the more likely it is that it appears illogical.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are so anxious for fun that you fail to think of fear. If there is a lottery ticket to be purchased or a pair of dice to be thrown, you might act like a dog waiting for a turn at the world's last bone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Crank up the search engine and find the answer. It is a time to investigate mysteries that intrigue you. You are at your best pretending to be the powerful Oz and working behind the scenes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dream big and beautiful. Heaven is something you can't enjoy while your feet still walk the earth. Yet you can make everything that surrounds you as heavenly as possible through sheer force of will.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You prefer to be pampered and you are primed for a party. You don't care that it is the middle of the week or that there is work to be done. You might have the urge to flirt outrageously all day long.
