Report: Idaho politics need less outside influence

35 percent of 2010 corporate, PAC donations came from outside Gem State

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The role of outsiders' influence in Idaho politics is questioned by a report that calls for reforming the state's campaign system.

The report, authored by AARP Idaho, which represents 180,000 adults older than 50, recommends paring down how much out-of-state donors, including political action committees and corporations, can contribute to state legislative candidates. In its place, the organization says candidates should be required to raise a majority of their campaign war chests from individuals within their legislative district.

Among the report's findings:

- $1.7 million from corporations, businesses and PACs went to Idaho's winning legislative candidates in the 2010 election. Just $533,398 — 23 percent of total contributions — came from individual contributors.

- Thirty-five percent of all non-individual contributions came from outside the Gem State.

The report comes as corporate political spending on the national level has ratcheted up after a 2010 U.S. Supreme Court ruling gave big business more flexibility in how it spends money on campaigns.

Pina gets 15 years for shotgun slaying

Times-News

One of the men involved in the 2005 shotgun slaying of Jesse Naranjo in Twin Falls will avoid a second jury trial for a charge of first-degree murder.

Juan Carlos Fuentes Pina, 38, pleaded guilty on Friday to felony voluntary manslaughter for his role in Naranjo's killing. He will serve 15 years in prison for the crime, and was given credit for the more than five years he's already served.

Pina

In accordance to a plea agreement, Pina waived his right to appeal the new sentence.

A jury convicted Pina of first-degree murder in 2006, but Pina successfully appealed the conviction and a related sentence of 30 years to life in prison. The Idaho Supreme Court ruled 3-2 in 2009 that a Twin Falls jury was given improper instructions by Judge G. Richard Bevan before deliberating on the case.

With the plea agreement, Naranjo joins Johnny A. Shores in pleading guilty to voluntary manslaughter in Naranjo's killing. According to court records, Pina led Naranjo into a Twin Falls drug house on Nov. 29, 2005, and ordered him to kneel at gunpoint. Shores, who had been asleep in the house, joined the two and asked Pina for the shotgun he was pointing at Naranjo.

Naranjo tried to wrestle the gun away from the men during the transfer, but was unsuccessful, and Shores shot the fleeing Naranjo in the abdomen. Naranjo later bled to death. He was 33.

Shores, 23, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in 2007, and is serving a 23-year prison sentence. He will be eligible for Investigators search through debris from a Sunday mobile home fire Monday morning in Buhl. The owner of the home, Johnnie Blair, died in the fire.

Local, state fire officials investigating blaze

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BUHL — Fire officials on Monday continued to investigate the Sunday mobile home blaze that claimed 86-year-old Buhl resident Johnnie Blair.

The fire destroyed the mobile home at 17 Manor Drive in Buhl, where Blair lived alone. Its cause remains unknown.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said there's no reason to suspect foul play at this time, adding that the investigation and an autopsy still need to be completed.

The Idaho State Fire Marshal's office is aiding local fire officials in the investigation. Police and fire officials on Monday were present at what was left of the charred building, which was still barricaded by police tape.

Elaine Tompkins, who lives at the mobile home park, said her father tried to rescue Blair. Ken Caya approached the mobile home's door

Luna cautions Idaho teachers about political activities

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Teachers are being warned they could lose their certification if they participate in efforts to recall Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, repeal his new education reforms or engage in other political activities on school grounds.

In a memo Friday, Luna said his office had received numerous inquiries and reports of teachers using their school email to coordinate political activities: proselytizing to students in the classroom and using pupils as couriers for political materials.

In a note to school superintendents and charter school administrators, Luna cautioned that these types of political activities were ethical violations punishable by a letter of reprimand, or suspension or revocation of a teacher's certification. He also warned that educators who are aware of such political activities and fail to report them face similar consequences.

"Those whose certificates are suspended or revoked can no longer be employed by an Idaho public school," said Luna, a Republican who has been targeted in recent months by education activists who are seeking his

GO VOTE

A number of school district trustee seats, levy issues and other seats are up for election today across the Magic Valley. Here's what you need to know to cast your ballot:

- Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. today
- To find your general election polling place, visit idahovotes.gov or call your local county clerk's office.
- To find out what items on the ballot you are eligible to vote in, call your local county clerk's office.
- Registered voters need to bring their Idaho driver's license or other valid photo identification to the polls.
- Not registered? No problem. You can register at your polling place if you bring valid photo ID and proof of residence, like a current utility bill.

Officials suspend search for missing Canadian man

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Rescuers have suspended the search for a Canadian man who's been missing in the rugged, high desert mountains of northeastern Nevada since March.

Hunters found the man's wife, 56-year-old Rita Chretien, weak but alive on May 6. But there's been no sign of her husband since he set out March 22 from the couple's stuck van.

The Oregonian reports that the Elko County Sheriff's Office in Nevada said Monday that the search for 59-year-old Albert Chretien may resume if conditions improve and snow melts, or if investigators get any leads on his location.

T.F. Co. to discuss regional jail plan

Times-News

The Twin Falls County Commission will review today a study of the costs and benefits of operating a shared detention facility with Gooding County.

The matter will be the focus of a public meeting at 2 p.m.

The study continues the discussion over the need for and challenge of building a regional jail, to reduce jail costs and address a shortage of beds that leads some local jails to pay to send inmates elsewhere. The proposed 150-bed facility in the study would be built in Wendell by a private equity group, coordinated by Rocky Mountain Corrections. Gooding and Twin Falls counties would then lease the facility and share in the operations and maintenance costs.

The savings for Gooding County are apparent — according to the study, joining the regional jail would cut its $1.05 million annual jail budget roughly in half.

Twin Falls County, which has a jail budget nearly three times as large as Gooding's, would incur a net cost of $236,000, according to the study. But Twin Falls County Sheriff's Capt. Doug Hughes said leasing the property would be more cost-effective in the long run, due to savings in staffing, out-of-county housing and future construction.

Currently, Twin Falls is short five jail deputies, and the regional jail would save $252,000 in salary costs needed to bring the the current county jail into staffing compliance.

Also, Hughes said, sending Twin Falls inmates out of county costs $50 a day per person. Sending an inmate to the regional jail would cost about $20 per day.

Expanding the Twin Falls jail or building a new one would cost about $13 million, Hughes said.

Rocky Mountain Corrections coordinated the study with input from a stakeholder group that included representatives of Twin Falls, Gooding and Jerome counties.

Contributions

Irwin said the report follows the input of the organization's members, saying it offers broad recommendations that can be developed further.

For example, the report's policy recommendations don't call for how a candidate would track incoming contributions and when to reject them, a potentially tricky proposition because the money comes in over an extended period of time.

Irwin said the organization would be willing to work on the mechanics limiting out-of-district donations if the issue were to move forward in the Legislature.

Of course, the strength of a contributor's ties to a legislative district is all in the eye of the beholder, regardless of its address. For example, Arkansas-headquartered Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is listed as an out-of-state company, but it has stores across the Magic Valley, said Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, who got a $500 donation from the retailer in 2010.

"I think people who give a candidate a contribution do so because they feel that candidate reflects their values," Hartgen said. "What could be more fair than allowing people to contribute to those they want to see succeed?"

As for PACs, Hartgen said that while they may have addresses in Boise, the organizations also represent people throughout the state like cattlemen, sugar beet growers and medical professionals.

Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, said: "Of course, that's where you like to get your contributions, is from your constituents. But uninvited, unsolicited, the PACs do send you money."

Smith said that several times over his legislative career, he's returned donations from PACs if he was uncomfortable with the high amount. His general practice has been to send back PAC donations exceeding $300, he said, adding that he's only done that about five or six times.

An evening of hate, a quarter-century ago in Jerome

This is the 25th anniversary of an episode the Magic Valley would rather forget.

In 1986, neo-Nazis led by Richard Butler burned a cross on a Jerome County farm and set fire to five buckets representing the Northwest states they hoped to take over: Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Wyoming.

Only 19 white supremacists showed up; they were outnumbered by the media by about 2 1/2-to-1.

The neo-Nazis included six women and a boy 3 or 4 years old. One man wore the white robe of the Ku Klux Klan and two wore camouflage fatigues and holstered pistols.

Across the Snake River in Twin Falls, then-Idaho Gov. John Evans' wife, Lola, denounced Butler at a counter-demonstration.

Gov. Evans had repeatedly said neo-Nazis were not welcome in Idaho and did not represent the views of the vast majority of Idahoans. But Butler said, "Gov. Evans might as well tell the people of Idaho that he's sold his soul to Jew-ery."

Butler's church scorned Jews, blacks, Latinos and other minorities. It hoped to turn the Northwest into the "Northwest Mountain Republic," which would recognize only white Christians as citizens.

He wasn't disappointed with the turnout at the cross-burning, Butler said, adding that Christ needed only a handful of disciples to spread his message around the world.

A retired Lockheed aerospace engineer, Butler moved his family from California to Idaho in the 1970s where he founded the Aryan Nations, whose ideology was a mixture of Christian Identity and Nazism. The organization operated from a 20-acre compound in Hayden Lake, which became the center of a U.S. neo-Nazi network with worldwide links.

Butler was implicated in plots to overthrow the federal government beginning in the 1980s. His group often blanketed the community with fliers and mass mailings, and held an annual parade in downtown Coeur d'Alene. Locals responded almost immediately by forming the Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations, with legal battles often overshadowing the parades.

The Aryan Nations Church

spawned The Order, a criminal gang that in 1984 launched a war against minorities and the government. Twenty-three members were convicted of racketeering in a crime wave that included three killings, arsons and more than $4 million in robberies.

In 2000, Victoria and Jason Keenan, two Native Americans who were harassed at gunpoint by Aryan Nations members, successfully sued Butler, winning a combined civil judgment of $6.3 million from Butler and the Aryan Nations members who attacked them. Butler had to sell his compound.

He died in his home in Hayden in 2004. By that time, the Aryan Nations was down to 200 members.

His 1986 "cross lighting" was the last in southern Idaho.

Murtaugh man charged with striking other with vehicle

Times-News

A Murtaugh man was charged Friday night with two crimes for allegedly driving his vehicle into a man he'd been arguing with.

Ronald Anderson, 44, is charged with driving under the influence and aggravated battery after police say he struck Loren Levesque, 44, with his vehicle after an altercation. He was arraigned on the charges Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies responded to the scene in Murtaugh at 7:30 p.m.

Levesque was taken by ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls with non-life-threatening injuries.

yelled, 'Johnnie, are you in there?' and Mr. Blair yelled out, 'Yes, I'm right in here.'

After 911 was called, firefighters were unable to save Blair.

"He was just really a good person," said Tompkins, who took meals to Blair.

Blair had farmed outside Buhl, later becoming manager of the mobile home park. In 1951, he married Annetta Ruth Blair, who died in 2010.

"I just really like having him as a grandpa," Fasset said. "... He's going to be greatly missed."

ouster over a package of new education reforms.

The sweeping changes phase out tenure for teachers, limit collective bargaining and shifts money from salaries for technology upgrades in the classrooms such as laptops for high school teachers and students. The three-part plan was signed into law earlier this year and has landed in the crosshairs of a referendum campaign.

Amid the fervor over the reforms, at least one state lawmaker thinks Luna's warning to teachers about their political activities went too far.

Democratic Rep. Brian Cronin, a Boise lawmaker who was among the most outspoken opponents of the reform plan in the Idaho Legislature, said Luna's interpretation of the teacher code of ethics is overly broad and doesn't really give sufficient guidance to the school districts.

"I think the superintendent is using fear and intimidation to stifle the opposition," Cronin said.

The statewide teachers union also condemned the memo, saying Luna was trying to "intimidate Idaho educators from practicing their civil rights."

But the state Department of Education contends the note was a reminder to teachers about the ethical code they signed when they received their certification. Idaho's teacher code of ethics for educators bars the use of "institutional privileges" for political activities except for in cases of local union office elections, according to Luna's memo.

"We are in no way trying to stop someone from being politically active. We just make sure educators are following the code of ethics," said agency spokeswoman Melissa McGrath.

The agency has also fielded reports about inappropriate political activities related to school levy elections, she said.

"We've received phone calls and emails with complaints from parents and legislators and others about this happening in their schools and we wanted to send a reminder to school districts about this provision in the code of ethics," McGrath said. "It really honestly was a reminder because we've received so many phone calls."

Judge picks winners, losers in Tamarack Resort fiasco

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A judge has picked winners and losers in the Tamarack Resort foreclosure fiasco, leaving some contractors with the prospect of never collecting millions of dollars for work at the vacation destination that started failing in 2007.

Fourth District Judge Patrick Owen ruled that Banner-Sabey LLC, a Seattle-based joint venture that oversaw Tamarack's unfinished $91 million Village Plaza centerpiece, is due at least $5.5 million if and when the property is sold. Tri-State Electric Inc. of Boise is due about $1.2 million.

But Owen also decided on May 11 that lien claims totaling millions of dollars from some companies including Beaverton, Ore.-based Teufel Nursery and Meridian, Idaho-based YMC Inc., a plumbing contractor, were inferior to those of a lending syndicate led by Credit Suisse Group.

The Credit Suisse-led claims top $306 million — far above what the resort likely will fetch through fire-sale prices at a foreclosure auction. As a result, while Banner-Sabey and Tri-State will likely be paid, Teufel, YMC and others face the prospect of getting nothing.

"As a practical matter, because the property value is almost certainly much less than the total of claims, it is unlikely that any lien claimant whose interest is inferior or subordinate to Credit Suisse will receive any part of the foreclosure proceeds," Owen said. "By the same token, it is more likely that those claimants whose interests are prior to and superior to the Credit Suisse mortgages will have their claims paid."

There are dozens of other lien claims against Tamarack behind Credit Suisse totaling "many more millions of dollars," Owen wrote.

"You look at the business that came as a result of Tamarack resort, and how few are remaining," said Rick Christensen, who heads Teufel's landscape and design business in Beaverton. "We're one of those casualties. When the Tamarack project closed, we were forced to leave the area, as many businesses were."

It's now clear the resort 90 miles north of Boise was in dire straits by mid-2007 — despite public claims at the time by majority owner Jean-Pierre Boespflug that it was slowing the pace of work only to get a handle on what was then Valley County's largest construction project.

Mitt Romney, standing, greets supporters during a phone bank fundraiser Monday in Las Vegas.

Romney's Las Vegas fundraiser raises $10.25M in a single day

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Mitt Romney wants his money to show his might.

The all-but-declared Republican presidential contender, who has kept his head low for much of the year as he collected cash, raised $10.25 million in a single day Monday after bringing together his network of wealthy donors to dial for dollars in a city with no shortage of them. It's a hefty one-day total that Romney's team hopes will show his strength in the emerging GOP field.

Romney's phone bank fundraiser at the Las Vegas Convention Center, much like one during his first attempt at the Republican nomination, was the centerpiece of a series of fundraising events that included a conference call with volunteers who were asked to solicit their friends and neighbors for donations.

"This is a big kickoff for us, for our fundraising effort. It's kind of a celebration," Romney told the more than 400 supporters tuned in to watch him host a brief town hall-style broadcast on Facebook. "It's important to me that we get that started, the ball rolling today."

In truth, the former Massachusetts governor has spent the better part of the year raising money for a campaign he has yet to officially launch.

He's held few political events in recent months, focusing almost entirely on private meetings with donors nationwide. He wants to emerge from the fundraising quarter that ends June 30 having far outraised his rivals, and displaying financial fortitude in hopes that Republicans will choose him to challenge President Barack Obama. The Democrat shattered fundraising records in 2008 and could raise as much as $1 billion for his re-election campaign.

A wealthy former businessman and a Mormon, Romney is trying to tap into Wall Street and Mormon donors as well as line up support from influential contributors who fueled the campaigns of George W. Bush and John McCain. It's unclear whether he will invest any of his own fortune into his second campaign.

During his 2008 run for the GOP nomination, Romney used more than $40 million of his own money to pay for campaigns in Iowa and New Hampshire.

Body found with gunshot wound at Expo Idaho lot

GARDEN CITY (AP) — Ada County authorities have released the name of a 63-year-old man who was found dead in a vehicle at the Expo Idaho fairgrounds in Garden City.

Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg says Thomas Albert Rahnn was found dead Saturday in his pickup truck, which was parked at the fairgrounds during the Lewis Clark Trader Gun Show. He had been shot in the chest.

Sgt. John Laraway has said he believes the man's death was accidental.

The Idaho Statesman reports Rahnn appears to have been standing outside the truck when the gun was fired. Reports say he then slumped over into the driver's seat.

AROUND THE WEST

IDAHO Motorist dies in collision with train

BOISE — Authorities say a 77-year-old man has died after a collision with an oncoming train at a railroad crossing in northern Idaho.

Law enforcement and an official with BNSF Railway say the accident occurred Monday morning at a private rail crossing west of Bonners Ferry.

Authorities identified the man as Richard Kelson, of Bonners Ferry.

Idaho State Police investigators say Kelson was hit as he was pulling out of a tree farm nursery adjacent to the Mirror Lake Golf Course. The investigation is ongoing.

BNSF Spokesman Gus Melonas said the section of single track is posted 40 mph for trains and the crossing is equipped with stop sign warning signal.

The train, powered by three locomotives, was traveling northeast at the time and destined for eastern Montana.

NEVADA Governor vetoes school funding bill

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Nevada Gov. Brian Sandoval vetoed a school funding bill Monday, saying the measure is a "circuitous attempt to secure a tax increase" and would increase state funding by $660 million above his budget proposal.

Democratic lawmakers said Sandoval's veto sends a message that he "accepts mediocrity" and has adopted "an extreme position that puts him truly outside the mainstream."

Monday's veto showed the administration and Democratic-controlled Legislature were nowhere close to a budget compromise.

Democrats do not have the votes needed to override the governor's veto, meaning the budget battle remains at square one with three weeks left in the 2011 session that ends June 6.

Sahara hotel-casino closing in Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS — The venerable Sahara hotel-casino on the Las Vegas Strip is closing after six decades, remembered as one of the Rat Pack's favorite haunts and where an emphasis of lounge acts set standards for other joints that followed.

The Sahara was expected to close Monday after 59 years, with owners SBE Entertainment deciding earlier this year it was no longer economically viable to keep the casino open.

Unlike other casino closings in Sin City that make way for newer projects, it's not clear what the future of the site will be.

MONTANA Officials say flooding threatens state

HELENA — More flood threats loom for Montana as an already-deep mountain snowpack increases and a cool spring brings more moisture.

River basins in the mountains are nearly double their average snowpack levels, and eastern Montana has already dealt with some rivers and flooding in places. The National Weather Service said flood threats could persist into early July due to the cool weather.

"It is going to be a big flood year," said Gina Loss, a hydrologist with the National Weather Service. "There is not any part of the state void of any chance of flooding."

The potential for flooding increases if a big rainfall prompts a snow melt, she said.

WYOMING Districts grapple with funding cuts

CASPER — Federal budget-trimming measures are trickling down to Wyoming school districts.

The U.S. Education Department notified states in April of possible cuts to the Title I grant program, which supports schools with large populations of students in poverty. In turn, the Wyoming Department of Education advised districts to plan for a 5 to 10 percent cut in their Title I budgets.

Wyoming's Title I program received $33.8 million in 2009-10, dispersed to districts according to their student populations.

Early estimates by the federal Education Department are that Wyoming will receive about $1 million less next year, but final numbers won't be available until June.

The Casper Star-Tribune reports that school and district administrators are looking for ways to make up for the possible cut.

Road near Jackson likely closed for days

JACKSON, Wyo. — The Wyoming Department of Transportation says a massive mudslide over the weekend in the Snake River Canyon will likely keep the highway between Alpine and Jackson closed for several days.

Bruce Burrows is spokesman for the highway department in Cheyenne. He says the mudslide has covered about 100 yards of US26-89, about 25 miles south of Jackson.

Burrows says the highway department is sending a team of geologists to the site. He says it appears that wet spring conditions contributed to the slide.

Burrows says some work to clear the road may have to wait until the mud and other debris stops shifting and sliding slowly down the hillside. Weather forecasts for the Jackson area call for a chance of rain and snow through this week.

The space shuttle Endeavour lifts off from Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla., Monday. Endeavour began a 14-day mission to the international space station.

Giffords sees husband's shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — It was an improbable scene on a historic day: Rep. Gabrielle Giffords, still recovering from a gunshot wound to the head, on the rooftop of a NASA building watching in awe-struck silence as her astronaut husband rocketed into the clouds, in command of the next-to-last space shuttle flight.

“Good stuff, good stuff,” Giffords said when the rocket’s roar had ended, according to a congressional aide.

It was a classic Gabby Giffords expression “that she uses regularly;” chief of staff Pia Carusone told The Associated Press.

It was a moment that a few months ago seemed so unlikely for Giffords and husband Mark Kelly. She was shot in an assassination attempt Jan. 8, and he dropped out of training for the mission to be at her side.

The tragedy catapulted the relatively unknown congresswoman and anonymous astronaut into America’s sweethearts, Gabby and Mark.

Before her devastating injury, the loquacious congresswoman, with a long interest in space issues, would have had much more to say about this launch, Carusone said. There is only one more shuttle mission after this one as NASA retires its fleet to move on to new-generation spacecraft.

But Giffords has difficulty speaking now. She also has trouble walking. She was in a wheelchair for the launch, but that was to help keep her balance as she looked up into the sky, according to Carusone.

Judge: No sign Obama was aware of any seat swap bid

CHICAGO (AP) — There’s no evidence Barack Obama knew that Rod Blagojevich may have sought to trade an appointment to the president-elect’s vacated U.S. Senate seat for a Cabinet post or other top administration job, the judge at the ousted Illinois governor’s retrial said Monday.

The issue arose at the start of a third week of testimony, which otherwise turned sharply away from the Senate seat charge toward accusations that Blagojevich attempted to shake down executives for campaign cash.

A sometimes-contentious

The 40-year-old representative has been out of public view since the shooting and she is “far from” any public appearances, Carusone said. But she is not avoiding people she knows. On the roof she was with the wives and children of her husband’s five-man crew.

Kelly’s twin brother, Scott, also an astronaut, presented her with red tulips when the shuttle safely reached orbit.

Mark Kelly had taken her wedding ring into space, which he has done before. But this time she wanted something, too: his ring to stay on Earth. She had it around her neck on a silver chain from a funky Arizona jewelry store that included a heart and an Arizona map.

“She was very proud. She’s always proud of Mark;” Carusone said at a post-launch press conference.

Hidden somewhere aboard Endeavour is a handwritten note for her husband to read later.

Monday morning’s liftoff generated the kind of excitement seldom seen on Florida’s Space Coast on such a grand scale — despite a delay of more than two weeks from the original launch date because of an electrical problem. This time the countdown was close to perfect.

Endeavour disappeared within seconds into low clouds, so that launch manager Mike Moses apologized to the hundreds of thousands who jammed area roads and towns. The launch made up in sound for what it lacked in visuals.

day of testimony began with Judge James Zagel refusing a request from defense lawyers to let them look at FBI interview notes with Obama to see if the Democrat from Chicago ever reported to authorities that Blagojevich had tried to trade the Senate appointment.

“In all honesty, it is possible that the victim of this was busy with other matters at the time,” Zagel said about Obama, who is not accused of any wrongdoing in the case. “There is nothing to indicate that he was aware of” any attempted trade.

Trump decides to stick to business

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Trump to self: You’re fired.

Out of the presidential race before he was officially in it, the celebrity real estate mogul announced Monday he would not seek the 2012 Republican nomination. He could have won the White House, he said, but instead will continue to steer his business empire and remain host of his reality show “Celebrity Apprentice.”

The announcement, ending a colorful and attention-grabbing chapter in the unfolding GOP nominating race, surprised some strategists who said Trump had been assembling a campaign team and had been expected to announce his candidacy soon. This spring, Trump had gained considerable attention by stirring renewed controversy over President Barack Obama’s Hawaii birth, leading the White House to persuade the state to release a copy of Obama’s long-form birth certificate after two years of dismissing the issue.

Trump revealed his decision Monday at a meeting of advertising executives who had come to learn about NBC’s fall television lineup. The network had been pressing him for a decision, fearing the loss of millions of dollars in ad revenue if “Celebrity Apprentice” didn’t return next year.

“I will not be running for president as much as I’d like to,” Trump said to cheers from the audience.

His office also released a formal statement, in which Trump said he felt confident he could have won both the Republican nomination and a general election showdown with Obama.

“Ultimately, however, business is my greatest passion and I am not ready to leave the private sector,” Trump said.

While Trump’s consideration of a run was dismissed as a stunt some Republican pundits and lawmakers, several polls showed him at or near the top of the field both nationally and in early voting states. John McLaughlin, a pollster who would have served as the campaign’s senior strategist, said he met with Trump last Thursday to finalize plans for a May 25 announcement, three days after the “Celebrity Apprentice” finale.

“There was a path for him to win. If he got in and showed he was serious, his vote would have doubled and tripled again,” McLaughlin said. “His message had resonance because he was the most anti-Obama candidate or potential candidate of the bunch.”

U.S. hits credit limit, setting up 11-week fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has maxed out its credit card.

The United States reached its $14.3 trillion limit on federal borrowing Monday, leaving Congress 11 weeks to raise the threshold or risk a financial panic or another recession.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner formally notified Congress that the government would halt its investments in two federal pension plans so it won’t exceed the borrowing limit.

Geithner said the government could get by with bookkeeping maneuvers like that through Aug. 2. After that, the government could default on its debt for the first time, threatening the national credit rating and the dollar.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT

Now that the U.S. Treasury has hit its debt limit, it can free up $232 billion by taking what Geithner calls “extraordinary measures.” Besides suspending contributions to federal employee pension funds, the government can halt payments to a government fund that buys and sells foreign currencies. Geithner estimates he’ll run out of options Aug. 2.

Geithner sent Congress a letter saying he would be unable to make the pension investments in full. He urged Congress to raise the debt limit “in order to protect the full faith and credit of the United States and avoid catastrophic economic consequences for citizens.”

Republican leaders in the House have said they won’t raise the debt limit unless the Obama administration first agrees to big spending cuts or to steps to lower the debt over the long run.

House Speaker John Boehner repeated the pledge in a statement Monday. The statement did not address Geithner’s warning about what would happen if the limit were not raised.

“Americans understand we simply can’t keep spending money we don’t have,” Boehner said. “There will be no debt limit increase without serious budget reforms and significant spending cuts.”

Republicans have also ruled out any tax increases, including any plans to end tax cuts for high earners enacted in 2001 and 2003.

“We need to have a vote to lift the debt ceiling because the consequences of not doing so would be quite serious,” White House spokesman Jay Carney told reporters. “And those who suggest otherwise are whistling past the graveyard.”

Other states still want Idaho's water

Try as hard as we might to forget it, Idaho — a state designed by committee — is still a single community, despite its widely divergent economic, political and cultural interests.

If you doubt that, look no farther than the Idaho Panhandle: the dampest, most verdant part of the state. However, northern Idaho may be about to experience a reality that the south has lived with since statehood: the specter of losing its water to another state.

In this case, to Washington. According to Oregon-based journalist and historian Randy Stapilus — one of the preeminent experts on Idaho water — folks who live in Idaho's northernmost counties may face the prospect of having some of their water piped over the western border in the years ahead.

Our view: Nearly 50 years ago, then-U.S. Sen. Frank Church pushed legislation through Congress preventing California from taking Idaho's water. But the threat of having Idaho's lifeblood pumped elsewhere hasn't ended.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

A Washington Department of Ecology study concluded the aquifer that straddles the Idaho-Washington border is running dry. "The study looked at three alternative sources for water to recharge the aquifer and the drier reaches of the Spokane River: the Spokane River during high flows; pumping aquifer water from a site in Washington up into Idaho; and using groundwater near the southern end of Lake Pend Oreille," Stapilus writes. "Spring runoff water would be piped to Idaho and discharged to the aquifer, arriving in the Spokane River in the late summer. The technically preferred source is the latter."

Washington wouldn't necessarily be making a grab for Idaho water, but we're talking about working right along the border, with an aquifer that cuts across both states.

If you're a Panhandle resident with water rights, this news may come as a rude shock. Especially if you're one of those who've been opposed to state adjudication of water rights.

During the 20-year process of adjudication of Snake River water rights, Panhandle elected officials have been at best indifferent and at worst hostile to spending taxpayer dollars to protect southern Idaho's lifeblood. Now the tables may be about to turn.

Not that anyone in southern Idaho should be gloating. Our state's water has been protected from diversion elsewhere mostly because public officials such as U.S. Sen. Frank Church, state Sen. Laird Noh and Deputy Attorney General Clive Strong had the wit and insight to see over the horizon.

In short, we've been lucky. Idaho is still a small state whose water is much in demand elsewhere — Washingtonians, after all, outnumber Idahoans 4 1/2 to 1. We — Idahoans north and south — really are all in this together.

Big Oil is heavily taxed already

First-quarter profits for American oil companies are jaw-dropping. Exxon earned nearly $11 billion, up 69 percent from a year ago. Royal Dutch Shell PLC, Europe's largest oil company, announced it made $8.78 billion in the first quarter, a 60 percent increase over last year. Much of it, but not all, is due to higher gas prices, over which the companies have very little control due to our heavy reliance on foreign oil.

Some in Congress — mostly Democrats, but a few Republicans — are calling for an end to tax breaks enjoyed by the oil companies and in some cases, higher taxes on their profits. But the Obama administration is contributing to higher energy prices, which inflate the companies' bottom line.

The Environmental Protection Agency has prevented Shell from proceeding with its Northern Alaska drilling project after Shell reportedly invested more than $4 billion in the project. How can companies make costly investments when they are uncertain that policies allowed in one administration will still be allowed in the one that follows?

In March, when visiting South America, President Obama promised that the United States would help Brazil develop its offshore resources. But he won't allow much new drilling in the Gulf of Mexico, or Alaska. So we are going to help Brazil drill for oil, and then import it? Gas prices have nearly doubled since Obama's inauguration and yet the media don't blame him for it, as they blamed his predecessor when prices soared to current levels.

What about taxes? Oil companies are already heavily taxed. According to the energy research firm Wood Mackenzie, between 1998 and 2008, the oil and gas industry paid $1 trillion in total income taxes. That's in addition to the $178 billion the companies sent the federal government in rent, royalty and bonus payments between 1982 and 2009. What oil companies pay in taxes is higher than the average American manufacturer, more than their "fair share."

Wood Mackenzie also found that should taxes be increased on oil companies by $5 billion a year, that "would result in a $128 billion loss in government revenue and would reduce domestic production by 400,000 barrels per day by 2025," with an additional 1.2 million barrels per day at risk. "This tax increase would increase, not decrease our reliance on foreign sources of oil."

As for those large profits, the American Petroleum Institute reports that in the latest published data for last year's third quarter, "the oil and gas industry earned 6 cents for every dollar of sales in comparison with all manufacturing, which earned 8.6 cents for every dollar of sales."

This administration gives lip service to the successful, while punishing them and subsidizing the unsuccessful. If the president is seri-

"... between 1998 and 2008, the oil and gas industry paid $1 trillion in total income taxes. ous about reducing the cost of oil (and given candidate Obama's frequent statements in favor of increased energy prices to force more of us (but not him) to drive hybrid, even electric cars — he can emulate George W. Bush.

In July 2008, President Bush lifted an executive order banning offshore drilling, a token gesture since a federal ban on offshore drilling remained in place, but his action caused oil prices to drop, as suppliers believed we were getting serious about obtaining more oil from domestic sources. The argument from the anti-drilling side is that new drilling projects would have no effect because of the time it takes to find and then refine the oil. If new drilling had begun five or 10 years ago we would be pumping far more oil than we are now. If we begin now, in five or 10 years we'll see the results.

Demonizing the oil companies won't produce one more drop of oil. Neither will higher taxes, which will affect employment and create many more negative consequences.

Earlier this month, former President George W. Bush reiterated his support for more drilling: "I would suggest Americans understand how supply and demand works. And if you restrict supplies of crude, the price of oil is going to go up."

President Obama either doesn't understand supply and demand, or he is deliberately ignoring it in hopes of imposing his radical environmental views on us all.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Downtown T.F. needs more than fun shops

Response to Cathy Freeborn:

I don't understand what Ms. Freeborn wants. Perhaps if she thinks downtown needs a hotel, she's willing to put her money where her words are. I.B. Perrine built a nice hotel there. It's gone. Wake him up and see if he'll do it again, although if that's what tourists wanted, it would still be standing.

Right now there is about 40 percent vacancies where she wants "fun little shops." Many towns like Reno, Virginia City and Sacramento have restored their aging downtowns. They started with a positive tourist draw. Visitors to the Magic Valley attend the falls, the bridge jumpers and the river sports. They don't come to traipse Main looking for souvenirs. Reno and Virginia City did it by flaunting their old gambling, bars and houses of ill repute. Is that what she wants? We already have quaint shops like tattoo parlors, bars and, not long ago, drug paraphernalia shops on Main. Would she accept these as "fun little shops"? If she wants more patrons for the bars, perhaps she's suggesting porn shops and strip clubs.

There is a history of successful downtown churches. There are still some in existence. What bright lights is she talking about? Why didn't she offer to solve the problems of the defunct downtown commission? They didn't need money as a bailout; they ended with about $80,000. What might help downtown is eliminating parking meters. Committed shop owners could keep employees from parking in front, leaving open spaces for shoppers

If offended by library book, don't deface it

This is an open letter to a self-appointed censor.

When you crossed out one word in a 550-page book from the Twin Falls Public Library, you infringed on the author's right to free speech and, by extension, my right to read what that author wrote. I challenge you to find an appropriate way to register your disapproval.

As I would tell my sons when they were toddlers: Use your words. Or perhaps you should just stick with authors who do not offend your delicate sensibilities or look for books in the juvenile department.

The librarian at the circulation desk said that it is likely that the defaced book will be removed from circulation and replaced with another copy. I assume that the taxpayers in the Twin Falls Public Library district will cover that cost. In a more perfect world, the Twin Falls Public Library would be able to determine your identity and recover the replacement cost from you.

Oh, the poetic justice of it, if you had to purchase a book that you found offensive.

Obama made right call to take out bin Laden

This letter is to Bill Coffey: Who are you and where did you come from? Outer space?

Even though we do not approve of our president's antics most of the time, we feel he did the right thing by taking bin Laden out. That man was a killer, more than we were in this episode. Did you forget he was the ring leader in destroying the Twin Towers and killing thousands? We are sure there will be an attempt for reprisals, but as a great nation, we will get through whatever is done.

We are two people who are proud to be members of our great nation and condone what was done.

Funding for early child care pays off

The United States is sitting on a vast, untapped economic development tool that has received too little notice: our children.

Investing in children before they enter school pays dividends, and yet child care subsidies are at risk as Congress mulls questions about how to reduce the federal deficit. Before you tune this out as the same old “it’s for the kids” chorus, consider:

- Children in high-quality programs are more likely to be employed — and paying taxes — when they reach adulthood.
- Parents who receive child care subsidies are less likely to need other forms of public assistance. A 2006 report by the Department of Health and Human Services noted that the subsidies are associated with the largest increase in employment for people formerly on welfare.

- Children who receive high-quality care, either at home or outside, are ready to succeed in school, showing a reduced need for special education programs and increased graduation rates.
- Bad child care is more likely to produce juvenile criminals. A Chicago study showed that at-risk children not enrolled in early care and education programs were 70 percent more likely to be charged with a violent crime by age 18.

This last point prompted more than 600 police chiefs, sheriffs and prosecutors — calling themselves Fight Crime: Invest in Kids — to write to Congress this spring, urging continued funding for Child Care Development and Block Grants. The grants are the federal government’s primary child care assistance to states.

Despite a sizable budget — $19 billion in federal and state spending in 2008 — child care subsidies have never kept up with the need. Only a fraction of eligible families received any subsidy that year, according to the Urban Institute; most were stuck on long waiting lists.

In February, Republicans in the House proposed cutting the child care block grants by $39 million. That didn’t happen, but the funding is still at risk. In the name of deficit reduction, Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan’s, R-Wis., plan for 2012 would reduce spending to 2008 levels. Democrats say that would cause 170,000 families trying to find or keep jobs to lose child care.

To be sure, we must get federal spending under control. But it’s fair to ask our leaders to responsibly weigh the value of programs they want to cut.

Child care costs are mind-boggling. A survey by the National Association of Child Care Resource & Referral Agencies found that, in every region of the United States, the average child care fees for an infant were higher than the average amount that families spend on food.

One culprit in underfunding child care is the culture war. Often, those who believe that a parent — a mom — should stay home and raise children oppose child care subsidies. But given modern economic realities, parents will work. Seventy percent of mothers with young children are employed outside the home.

Besides, 50 years of research has found that children of working parents don’t turn out to be much different from those with stay-at-home parents, at least when it comes to academic achievement and behavior.

It’s the decent thing to do to help families get on their feet and stay there, not to mention to raise a generation of kids who are prepared for success. But if decency isn’t persuasive, think of all the money we’ll save on special ed, public assistance and juvenile incarceration.

Anne Michaud is a columnist for Newsday.

The bandwagon rolls on for illegal immigration

The public relations campaign for President Obama’s latest revival of “immigration reform” makes one thing crystal clear: This is not, and never has been, about homeland security. This is not, and never has been, about economic security. It’s about political security, plain and cynical.

In conjunction with the renewed White House push in Texas for a “new pathway to citizenship” for millions of illegal immigrants, disgruntled Latino activists are ratcheting up their radical anti-enforcement rhetoric. Illinois Democratic Rep. Luis Guterrez — a persistent critic on Obama’s left flank — lambasted federal workplace enforcement raids this weekend. On Sunday, he repeated his hyperbolic attacks on homeland security agents “terrorizing” neighborhoods and ripping babies from the breasts of nursing moms. Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano made no public effort to defend her employees.

Michelle Malkin

ing in 2021.” And that doesn’t include the costs of the unlimited family members. A separate cost analysis by the Washington, D.C.-based Center for Immigration Studies concluded that the illegal alien DREAM Act bailout would cost taxpayers $6.2 billion a year and “crowd out” U.S. students in the classroom.

To help gloss over those sobering realities and blur the lines between legal and illegal immigration, Obama summoned Latino celebrities such as actresses Eva Longoria and Rosario Dawson. The starlets — deemed important “stakeholders” in the immigration policy debate by the celebrity in chief — have served as glamorous distractions from the vocal complaints of Southwest governors, ranchers, farmers and other victims of continued border chaos. These are the real stakeholders whose lives and livelihoods are at risk. But none had a seat at the Hollywood-filled table.

While proudly emphasizing her ethnic loyalties, Dawson (an outspoken critic of Arizona’s immigration enforcement law) insists immigration reform “isn’t just a Mexican” or Latino issue. But for more candid liberal strategists, the illegal alien amnesty bandwagon is nothing more than a tool to motivate current and future Latinos to protect the Democrats’ grip on power.

If, as widely expected, Obama fails to deliver amnesty through the legislative process, there’s always amnesty by executive fiat. White House insiders first floated the idea in June 2010 to unilaterally extend either deferred action or parole to millions of illegal aliens in the United States.

While Obama’s homeland security officials hang their “mission accomplished” banner over the border, the feds have barely made a dent in the three-year naturalization application backlog or the 400,000-deportation fugitive problem.

Meanwhile, law enforcement witnesses told a House subcommittee last month that border smuggling has grown so out of control that federal prosecutors are simply declining to pursue cases.

And just last week, the General Accounting Office reported another massive 1.6 million illegal visa overstayers backlog — a problem exposed by five of the 19

September 11 hijackers who benefited from systemic failure to enforce visa regulations.

So much for “never forget.”

IMF head accused of sex assault

PARIS (AP) — French voters who've shrugged at politicians' infidelities for decades are suddenly grappling with something far more serious: allegations that International Monetary Fund head Dominique Strauss-Kahn engaged in a pattern of sexual assaults dating to at least 2002.

Strauss-Kahn's defenders say his self-acknowledged reputation as a womanizer made him vulnerable to a baseless smear campaign aimed at derailing the most serious threat to President Nicolas Sarkozy in national elections next year. They point out that Strauss-Kahn's accusers in France have yet to file formal complaints, let alone offer evidence.

But other commentators are wondering if the long-standing French tolerance for private sexual misadventures has allowed criminality by one of France's best-known public figures to go unpunished. Questions are being raised about what some call an "omerta" — or unofficial law of silence — in France about sexual misconduct.

The lawyer for a 31-year-old novelist, Tristane Banon, said Monday that she was likely to file a criminal complaint in coming days accusing Strauss-Kahn of sexually assaulting her nine years ago. Banon first made a public accusation against Strauss-Kahn in a 2007 French television interview, saying he wrrenched open her bra and tried to unbutton her jeans during an attempt to rape her.

Dominique Strauss-Kahn, head of the International Monetary Fund, center, leaves court Monday after his arraignment in Manhattan Criminal Court in New York.

ARREST ADDS TO EURO WORRIES

LONDON (AP) — The arrest of International Monetary Fund chief Dominique Strauss-Kahn adds more uncertainty to Europe's debt crisis by removing a widely respected expert from talks on how to save the 17-nation eurozone.

Strauss-Kahn, who was France's finance minister when the euro was created in 1999, is an authority on Europe's economic issues and comfortable with the region's complex web of power politics. His leadership is broadly perceived to have been crucial to the currency union's struggle with the biggest crisis since its inception. His absence will increase worries about the IMF's longer-term capacity to help Europe.

"It's like losing an experienced ship's captain, while navigating particularly difficult, uncharted waters," said Jan Randolph, head of sovereign risk analyst at IHS Global Insight.

Banon's attorney said that she had been dissuaded from filing charges by her mother, a member of a regional council who belongs to Strauss-Kahn's Socialist party. Lawyer David Koubbi told French radio RTL that Banon now "knows she'll be taken seriously."

Strauss-Kahn, who is married with four children, has long had a reputation for making sexual approaches to other women that he's done little to dispel. Three years ago, he found himself clinging to his IMF job after its board chastised him for having an affair with a married subordinate.

In response to the accusations, Strauss-Kahn has said only that he has a passion for women, and made vague promises to behave better. French voters and pundits met the tales of straying with knowing winks.

"We are not in an Anglo-Saxon country, and stories of cheating and affairs or adultery make us smile," said Jerome Fourquet, a pollster with IFOP agency. "But here the logic is different. It's about a crime, and if it's proven to be true — a rape attempt — this is different."

A New York judge on Monday ordered Strauss-Kahn, 62, held without bail until a Friday hearing on charges of attempted rape and other charges stemming from a maid's accusation that he assaulted her at a New York hotel over the weekend. Defense attorney Benjamin Brafman said Strauss-Kahn was innocent and the case had only just begun.

An outspoken member of Sarkozy's conservative party alleged that Strauss-Kahn had engaged in other misconduct at the hotel.

"It's not the first time that DSK is involved in this kind of actions at the Sofitel," Michel Debre was quoted as saying on the Internet site of weekly L'Express. "That's where he always stayed. It happened several times and for several years."

"Everyone knew it in the hotel," he added.

Debre offered no evidence to back up his claims, which Sofitel called "baseless and defamatory." Assistant District Attorney John A. McConnell said in court, however, that New York authorities were investigating at least one other case of "conduct similar to the conduct alleged."

Vatican suggests bishops report abuse to police

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican told bishops around the world Monday that it is important to co-operate with police in reporting priests who rape and molest children and asked them to develop guidelines for preventing sex abuse by next May.

But the letter from the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith made no provision to ensure the bishops actually follow the guidelines, and victims in groups immediately denounced the recommendations as "dangerously flawed" because they stress the exclusive authority of bishops to determine the credibility of abuse allegations.

The letter marks the latest effort by the Vatican to show that it is serious about rooting out pedophiles from the priesthood, a year after the sex abuse scandal exploded on a global scale with thousands of new victims coming forward in Europe and beyond.

It is significant in that it marks a universal directive to all the world's bishops to establish "clear and coordinated procedures" with superiors of religious orders to deal with pedophiles and care for their victims. It puts on paper that it is "important" for bishops to co-operate with police in investigating abuse allegations and that bishops should follow civil reporting laws where they exist.

The measure failed to impress advocates for victims "There's nothing that will make a child safer today or tomorrow or next month or next year," said Barbara Dorris, outreach director for the main U.S. victims group Survivors Network for Those Abused by Priests.

Local trends in remodeling and efficiency

Can't stand the look of your kitchen for one more minute? Eager to reduce the cost on your monthly utility bills? Want to beat those Joneses at their own game? ■ The Times-News has found some of the hottest trends and new products in home remodeling in south-central Idaho, and we're passing them along to you. None are as inexpensive as, say, a new coat of paint, but the increased home values or lower electricity bills might put a smile on your face even after you see the contractors' invoices. ■ And one more thing: If you're thinking about a color scheme emphasizing browns, make sure it's really what you love, because the trade shows are predicting grays will be the next big trend in neutrals.

A solar investment

1 It may be the right time to invest in a solar water heater or a solar photovoltaic panel. The costs for the equipment and its installation keep dropping, and you can get 30 percent of your investment back in the form of federal tax credits if you install before the end of 2016. "We have 270 days of sunshine here a year, and it lowers our power bill and lowers our cost of heating our hot water," said Dan Brizee, owner of Brizee Heating and Air Conditioning in Twin Falls. "I've got a lot of people who are talking, they're trying to figure out how it works for them. There's a lot more knowledge, a lot of people very interested in ways to reduce their home energy costs." A photovoltaic system costs about $2,000 per panel, and when the panels are generating electricity you're not using, you can send that back into the electrical grid and get paid for it by the utility. Brizee said the panels at his house meet about 15 percent of his household's needs, and he's still calculating how long at that rate they will take to pay for themselves. And the solar water heater? At a savings of $30 to $40 a month — about half what it cost to heat water at Brizee's home with gas — it'll take about two decades to pay off the $7,000 to $8,000 installation cost. "Between the two of them I'm seeing some great things," Brizee said.

Plush underfoot

2 When it's freezing, snuggle your bare feet into some frieze. "Everyone's coming in looking for the same thing," said Amy Kurtz, in-house designer for Pioneer Carpet One in Twin Falls, describing the new carpet style that is sweeping south-central Idaho. Pronounce it "freh-ZAY." "It's not a shag, where it's really thick; it's curled over on the ends, so you're walking on the side of the yarn and not on the top of it." That makes the fibers softer to walk on, and more durable than a traditional cut-pile carpet. And because they're primarily in earth tones (jewel colors are also available), dirt just disappears into the medium-length fibers. "Anyone who's got an active lifestyle where kids are coming in and out or have pets, are trying to cover any kind of dirt or wear" would like frieze, Kurtz said. It might not be as appropriate in a formal space. The carpet, a version of which is made by most of the major manufacturers, runs about $16 to $20 a yard for materials. Many of the styles feature flecks of color, which are in high demand locally, Kurtz said.

Facelift in the kitchen

3 Edna Morgan of Jerome has a small kitchen, and her old cabinets just made it too dark. But instead of painting, which can be done only a few times before the cabinets must be stripped, or going the expensive route of replacing them all, she had them refaced last fall. "I'm really well pleased with what I did," Morgan said. "They are so much easier to keep clean than the other ones." Refacing, which usually involves replacing the cabinet doors and drawer fronts, and adding matching laminates to the cabinet boxes, costs about 40 to 60 percent of the price of replacing cabinets, or about $4,000 to $6,000, said Donna Erickson, owner of Kitchen Tune-Up of Twin Falls. It can be done anywhere there are cabinets, including kitchens and bathrooms, and some minor rearrangement of cabinets can be done at the same time — adding a pantry, moving a cabinet or putting in a microwave hood, for example. "It's just getting more and more popular as more people hear about it and understand the concept. The variety is expanding exponentially," Erickson said, adding that thousands of color and style options are now available. And there's less waste than with replacement, she said. "It's eco-friendly; you're not tossing the cabinet boxes if they're in perfectly good shape." The doors and drawer fronts can be made of solid wood, if that's the look you're going for, or a new product called thermofoil that wraps a fiberboard core in laminate, much like a laminate countertop.

High-def countertops

4 If you like the look of granite, but not the cost, countertop manufacturers have a solution for you: high definition. "They're developed from photographs of granite; there's no pattern or pattern matching, so it looks when it's installed like granite, but it's Formica," said Jeff Martin, owner of JM Kitchens in Twin Falls. It is also textured so that parts shine and sparkle, reflecting light the same way granite does. And because of that texture, scratches disappear into the surface, rather than being as obvious as they would be on traditional laminate countertops. The cost varies, depending on the complexity of the counters, but runs about $8 a square foot for materials (and double that installed). Because of the expensive look but inexpensive price tag, Martin said, high-definition laminates are increasingly popular among customers in the lower end and middle of the market, while those on the higher end are still opting for traditional granite or solid-surface countertops.

Gussy up your tile

5 Tile can sometimes be a little boring, with one shape repeated over and over. Sure, the backsplash can bring in color or pattern, but have you thought about bringing that to the floor? Manufacturers are doing just that with pre-designed sets of tiles called listellos, said Amy Kurtz, in-house designer for Pioneer Carpet One in Twin Falls. Most use various colors of natural stone interspersed with glass pieces, in designs intended to complement the larger traditional tiles that make up the rest of the floor. "It just looks good, the glass pops, it draws your eye to it," Kurtz said. Usually, the pieces are used as backsplashes, as borders or in the center of a room to create the look of a throw rug. Although some are sold by the square foot and some by the linear foot, they run an average of $20 a linear yard — making them a splurge, but affordable decorations.

No more chilly showers

6 Unless you want one, of course. But with a tankless water heater, your family and guests are guaranteed a hot shower for as long as they want, no matter how many in a row. "You should never run out of hot water, and you're not paying to store the hot water, so you're saving money there. And it's more efficiently heated, so you're saving money there," said Dan Brizee, of Brizee Heating and Air Conditioning in Twin Falls. He said the new models are up to 98 percent efficient, compared with an efficiency of about 75 percent with the old tank water heaters. And if you heard years ago that the tankless ones are prone to failures, never fear: "Most of the bugs have been worked out of them from the manufacturers," Brizee said. They cost between $2,500 and $3,500, including installation, and there are federal tax credits of about $300 available for those installed before the end of the year.

2. This neutrally toned frieze carpet has deeper pile than many carpets from the past decade, but shorter than '70s shags. It is popular in south-central Idaho right now, and a good choice to hide the evidence of kids and pets, says Amy Kurtz of Pioneer Carpet One. (Courtesy Pioneer Carpet One)

3. After having her dark, dated cabinets refaced with a cream-colored bisque thermofoil laminate, Edna Morgan says her Jerome kitchen is brighter and more comfortable. Refacing is a less expensive option than replacing cabinets, as long as you don't want to make major changes to the room's layout, says Donna Erickson of Kitchen Tune-Up. (Courtesy DONNA ERICKSON)

Do homework on warranties

By Melissa Kossler Dutton
For The Associated Press

Home sellers hoping to close a deal sometimes agree to purchase home warranties to give their buyers peace of mind.

Prospective homeowners, however, should do their homework to make sure the policies, which typically cover the major mechanicals and appliances in a home for one year after the sale, will actually help, say consumer protection experts.

The warranties range in price from $350 to $800. If purchased from reputable companies, they can help homeowners deal with broken appliances, malfunctioning air conditioning and other problems, the experts say. The policies usually call for homeowners to contact the service company when something breaks. The company then sends out a repair person who provides an evaluation for a set fee, usually about $65. Once a professional has determined what the problem is, the warranty company pays for the broken item to be repaired or replaced.

Often, homeowners dislike transferring that decision-making power to a third party, said Angie Hicks, founder of Angie's List, the national consumer rating service based in Indianapolis. Users of home warranty or home service companies have been the least satisfied group of reviewers on the site for the past six years, she said.

Homeowners often expect the companies to replace the item and are disappointed to learn it's going to be repaired, added Bob Miller, president-elect of the Ohio Association of Realtors in Columbus, Ohio.

"They're going to try and fix things before they give new ones," he said.

It wouldn't be economi-

MORE TIPS

Other tips for selecting a home service provider:

- Find out exactly what the contract covers and how much the service fee is. Pools, spa tubs and other specialty items might not be included.
- Check to see if the company has policies on pre-existing conditions, and whether those repairs would be covered.
- Find out how the company handles complaints about the contractors who handle repairs.
- Ask if the company will let you buy a new appliance or item at a reduced rate if you would rather not have it repaired.

cally viable to replace furnaces, washers and garbage disposals that can be repaired, said Art Chartrand, spokesman for the National Home Service Contract Association, headquartered in Olathe, Kan.

"If servicing it will take care of it, we'll service it," he said. "We certainly don't want our product oversold."

Policies typically cover the major mechanicals and appliances in a home for one year after the sale.

Homeowners may end up surprised by the details of their policies because the contracts are often bought as closing gifts, so the person using the service is not the one who bought it, Hicks said. That means the user did not have a chance to research the company and carefully evaluate the policy before it was purchased, she said.

When William Merritt bought his first house last summer in Leander, Texas, the seller purchased a warranty for him. He's been satisfied with the service so far, but wishes he had had the opportunity to vet the company himself.

"When I go to renew, I'll look at all the options," said Merritt, whose warranty recently covered an $800 repair to his pool pump. "I'll definitely do my research."

Sheila Adkins, a spokeswoman for the council of Better Business Bureaus, in Arlington, Va., recommends researching home warranty or home service contract providers before making an offer on a house. When it's time to buy, ask for the company by name in the offer, she said.

It's a reasonable request, Miller added. Many home sellers are expecting to buy the agreements and should be willing to go with the company of the buyer's choosing, he said.

"Depending on who you go with, you can get some really good stuff out of these," Miller said.

Angie's List members also have had issues with some contractors that warranty companies send on service calls, Hicks said. She suggests asking the company that holds the policy for a list of the plumbers, electricians and repair people it uses, and checking them out before a problem occurs. When something goes wrong, request the contractor with the best track record, she said.

Floor tips; getting the house organized

The Washington Post

Post staff writers Jura Koncius and Terri Sapienza took questions recently in an online chat. Below is an edited excerpt.

Q I'm looking at redoing the kitchen and expanding it to include a small family room. Although I'd like to have wood floors, I'm considering another floor covering because I have a dog who is very well-behaved but has the rare mishap. What would you suggest?

Sapienza: I would go with the hardwood and put area rugs down where you think you may need them.

Q I'm trying to get the house organized, but I get overwhelmed whenever I wander into a store and attempt to buy on the spot. I need a plan of attack. Any suggestions?

Koncius: You are not alone! In the interest of decluttering and organizing, household hints expert Heloise recommends picking a drawer, shelf or counter to tackle every morning before you leave the house. Take everything out of a drawer and get rid of what you don't need.

This morning I tackled my pashmina drawer; I probably have a dozen of them, usually tossed into a ball, but this morning I took 10 minutes to fold them nicely. Tomorrow, I'll be pleasantly surprised.

Think small and do not start buying organizers until you figure out what you are keeping and what you are tossing. Professional organizers find piles of plastic bins and containers in most people's garages and attics that are unused because they don't really work. Good luck. Get started today.

Reader: 1. If it doesn't fit, give it away.

2. If it's broken beyond repair, put it out with the trash.

3. If there is a handful left in the bottle, use it up so you can ditch the container. This includes alcohol.

4. Scan tear sheets and recipes and throw away the paper.

5. Don't save receipts. Your credit card company has them on file if you need one.

6. Throw away junk mail the minute it enters the house.

Q I want to redecorate my living room but have no idea where to start because it's a clean slate. Should I shop for an item like a rug, sofa or paint color that I love and work around that?

Sapienza: I would first decide what in the room you want to keep and what can go. Then, empty the room and start putting back the pieces you want to keep. Once those pieces are in place, start shopping. Pick the paint color last. Once you have everything else in the room, it will be easier to decide on a color that will tie it all together.

Potting benches simplify gardening

By Melissa Kossler Dutton
For The Associated Press

One of Karen Angelucci's favorite gardening tools is the wood potting bench her father made for her.

The big poplar bench has shelves for storing pots, nails on which to hang utensils, and a large work area, said Angelucci, of Lexington, Ky., an author of gardening books. "I have to have room to work and create," she said. "Potting benches tell the character of a person. That's why mine's large and messy."

Gardeners use the benches primarily for potting flowers and small seedlings.

They can help you become more efficient, said Robin Pokorski, secretary for the National Garden Clubs. She likes having all her tools within arm's reach when she's potting plants. "I wouldn't do without it," said Pokorski, who lives in Los Angeles.

Pokorski chose a plastic bench because she felt it would hold up better under the California sun. Potting benches are available in many materials from wood to vinyl.

Building one can be an easy do-it-yourself project, said Lou Manfredini, Ace Hardware's home expert, in Chicago.

Here are some things to consider before buying or building a potting bench:

Location: Put the bench in a shady spot so you're not working in direct sun, experts recommend. Consider whether to incorporate the bench into the landscape or hide it behind a garage or shed. Remember that a potting bench can get messy and cluttered.

Size: Think about what size plants and pots you will be using, and how much workspace you will need.

Height: Make sure the work area is at a comfortable level. You don't want to have to bend down or reach up.

Storage: Some benches come with shelves, drawers or utensil hooks for storing or displaying gardening tools. Consider hanging tools on hooks so they aren't sitting in wet drawers after it rains.

Material: Pick a material suited to your climate. Many benches are made from cedar or redwood, which can withstand the elements well. Plastic and recycled materials also hold up well in sun, rain and snow.

Wheels: Some benches have wheels so they can be moved around the yard. If you intend to roll yours around the lawn, make sure it isn't too heavy to push.

Cost: Prices vary widely. A do-it-yourself bench could be constructed for as little as $30. A number of gardening websites offer plans for building potting benches. Store-bought benches start at around $100.

Appearance: Benches come in many styles, from rustic to country cottage to simple and functional. If the bench will be visible from a patio, deck or house window, you will need to consider whether it blends with the look of your house or yard.

Accessories: Potting benches can be outfitted with many kinds of equipment. Some have sinks that can be rigged to outdoor spigots. Others have leaves or shelves that can be folded out to create extra work space. Some come with boxes to store soil or catch it while you work.

Meant for outdoors

Designing porches that are stylish, durable

By Melissa Rayworth
For The Associated Press

Options abound for making porches, patios and sunrooms look stylish. But can we have all that gorgeous style while using durable, easy-to-care-for items that will stay looking good all season?

The experts say yes — if you choose carefully.

“When it comes to materials, now more than ever the gap has been bridged between indoor and outdoor. There are a ton of pieces that look fit for your actual living room, but they’re meant to be outdoors,” says designer and decor demon.com founder Brian Patrick Flynn. “A lot of people are beginning to find that perfect outdoor sofa and bring it into their sunroom.”

Here, Flynn and two other experts — Los Angeles-based interior designer Betsy Burnham and decorator and design blogger Nick Olsen — offer advice on creating beautiful sunrooms and porches that you can enjoy effortlessly.

The right fabrics

Outdoor fabrics have come a long way since the plastic-coated 1970s. These designers all praise Sunbrella and other high-end outdoor fabric companies for their wide selection of colors, styles and textures.

“But,” warns Olsen, “really good outdoor fabrics don’t come cheap.” He recommends buying a basic indoor sofa at a reasonable price, then recovering just the seat cushions and a few throw pillows in a pricey outdoor fabric. This will cost notably less than upholstering all of your sunroom furniture in high-end outdoor textiles.

Another use of fabric: Flynn suggests hanging drapes “to soften the feel of a room that’s on the exterior of your house,” and to add a dash of color and pattern.

“Sunrooms usually have so many windows, so much glass,” he says. “You want to soften the hard edges and take away the feeling of being up against the outside of the house.”

Drapes can be hung at windows or used to cover a less-than-attractive wall.

To add color, texture and life to this porch, designer Brian Patrick Flynn of Decor Demon repurposed aluminum trash bins into mobile planters with the addition of casters.

The oldest objects

“Something that’s been through a lot already is going to be able to put up with even more,” Burnham says. She suggests using vintage furniture and accessories that have already withstood the elements to give porches and sunrooms a dose of personality.

Search flea markets for items made of worn wood and metal. If they become further scuffed, it only adds to the beauty.

If you prefer a fresh sheen on vintage items, metal pieces such as old wrought-iron furniture can be sprayed with automotive paint at an auto-body shop. This creates a glossy, colorful surface impervious to the elements.

“It’s an excellent way to take something that might be 50 or 60 years old,” says Flynn, “and make it look showroom new.”

Another option: Burnham

sometimes repurposes cowhides to upholster seats. They’re high-style, she says, but “can take some abuse. The cows certainly have been out in the rain.”

The easiest floors

Flynn suggests using porch paint on wood or cement floors to bring color and pattern without a rug. Spill some food or drink? It wipes up easily. And if the painted floor gets worn as the summer wears on, no problem. A faded patina adds to the charm.

Rugs in outdoor fabrics are also an option.

“Thom Felicia has a line you can get on overstock.com right now that’s super-affordable,” Flynn says.

Olsen also visits overstock.com for outdoor rugs, which he says are very durable. “The dog can chew it up and nothing happens. ... But if worst comes to worst and it’s damaged, you don’t feel guilty, because it was no major investment!”

The sturdiest accessories

Like outdoor fabrics, plastic dinnerware has come a long way in recent years. Burnham has found chic Suzani-print plates that are “fabulous. You’d never imagine they were plastic.”

For durable seating, Burnham says L.L. Bean’s basic rocking chairs have a classic style and are built to last.

For planters, “instead of going crazy with really nice pottery” that can be expensive and fragile, Flynn suggests buying an inexpensive aluminum trash bin (think Oscar the Grouch), remove the label and add casters to the bottom. Fill the entire thing with used two-liter plastic soda bottles, which weigh very little. Then pour in potting soil, packing it tightly at the top.

“Put in a combination of plants that drape over the side, plants that grow really tall like grasses, mossy things that are short and then flowering things,” Flynn says. “You’re using nature as art, and you’re containing the plants with something used out of context” that is durable.

For more fragile accessories, it’s all about location: Olsen says a large framed mirror brings indoor glamour to any porch, and should be safe if it’s hung properly in an area away from the flow of foot traffic. Ditto for table lamps.

The softest lighting

In the evening, you can raise the style quotient of your porch or sunroom by using warm, flattering light.

“Hanging lighting is a very interesting way to dress up your porch,” Burnham says, “and there are certain kinds of fixtures that you can use safely outside.” Look for ones that are “wet-rated,” meaning they’re safe even in rain.

And for the simplest, easiest dash of beauty, Flynn says, “you’d be surprised how far those inexpensive paper lanterns will go.” Hang one over a bare light bulb and it instantly “adds a beautiful soft glow.”

lamppost in a planter box is an attractive option.

The key, of course, is to position your lights for maximum sun exposure. Some lights have a separate photocell that can be placed a distance from the actual bulb component or string, so even a shady-area tree can be lit up.

Solar string lights look pretty illuminating trees around a patio or pool, or entwining a step railing. Plow & Hearth has a line of light bulb-shaped ones, cool for a hipster’s outdoor space. Target’s got butterflies, dragonflies, stars and little crystal globes strung to catch the sun; the effect is magical when night falls.

Solar lights give a garden a finished look. And once you’ve purchased the light, the power is as eternal as sunshine.

Wall of mirrors can present a sticky situation

By Al Heavens
The Philadelphia Inquirer

Q I bought a house with a wall of mirrors I would like to remove. Any thoughts on how they might be attached and how difficult it would be to remove them?

A They’re probably glued right to the wall, which means lots of work and damaged plaster or wall-board.

If the mirror tiles are held by adhesive foam-tape squares, frequently these can be softened and removed by heating with a hair dryer until pliable.

Or, you could use a solvent to take care of the glue and loosen the mirrors, sand the remaining adhesive off the wall, make any needed repairs, prime the walls as if they had new drywall, then paint. Introducing the often-dizzying odor of solvents may not be an option if you or members of your family are chemically sensitive and the area cannot be ventilated enough to prevent the indoor air quality from being compromised.

You can steam the mirrors off the wall, loosening the adhesive as one would wallpaper paste, but the glue used for sticking mirrors to a wall is different from paste.

This is not a task I’d take on myself. Talk with a wallpaper-removal professional, who probably deals with this sort of thing all the time.

Book nurtures gardeners’ skills

Akron Beacon Journal

First-time gardeners might want to add “Week-by-Week Vegetable Gardener’s Handbook” to their gardening supplies.

The book, by father-daughter team Ron and Jennifer Kujawski, guides new gardeners one week at a time through the work involved in growing food. It covers everything from choosing a good spot for a garden to preserving the harvest, with plenty of tips on planting properly, coping with pests and diseases, managing weeds and all sorts of common gardening issues.

What sets the book apart is its ability to be customized to the reader’s region. The timing of the tasks in the book is based on the average date of the last frost in your area, so you have to do a little calculating to set up a timetable that works for your area.

There’s also room for notes, so you can add your own observations to the information in the book.

“Week-by-Week Vegetable Gardener’s Handbook” is published by Storey Publishing and sells for $14.95 in wire-bound softcover.

Solar lighting for the garden

By Kim Cook
For The Associated Press

Few things are prettier in a night garden than soft pools of light illuminating interesting trees, accent rocks and plants, or pathways.

Whether on a small terrace or in a sweeping landscape, lighting creates a welcoming and often dramatic atmosphere.

But in some cases, buried-wire electric lighting can be costly and impracticable. The answer might be solar lighting.

The technology of solar lighting has been refined in recent years to include new batteries that take and hold a charge better — typically 1,000 nights per unit. LED bulbs, too, have become more efficient: They can stay outside in any weather, and are available in various watts and colors.

Jamie Durie, author and host of HGTV’s “The Outdoor Room,” suggests three ways to use solar lighting:

“First, light your perimeter. It gives some perspective, and is a creative way to show the boundaries of your property,” Durie says. “Next, mark out your walks and pathways. Lastly, feature trees and other features with up-lighting, or even by attaching solar lights to walls and fences.”

Durie’s not a fan of “clinical” white LEDs, preferring those with amber light. Make sure when buying solar lights that they’re all the same tone. And for areas where you want greater intensity, look for lights with more than two and preferably four LEDs in them.

In his projects, Durie often combines low-voltage electrical lights with solar.

At mysolarshop.com, find Mission or Tiffany-style glass fence-post caps that fit standard size posts. There are wall-mount and lamp-post styles here as well, and solar stepping stones that would make a wonderful walkway. You’ll find great utility solar lighting as well: motion-sensing security lights, shed lights, address lights and even grill lights.

Stake lights are the quickest to install; Target and Home Depot carry mini lights in copper, stainless or black finishes that can be placed in the ground or in any plant container. Look for coach and Craftsman-style lamps sold in multiples at both retailers. Target’s solar

Dandelions Solution

Kill Dandelions in the Lawn

Even the best cared for lawns will have an occasional dandelion. They are difficult to completely eliminate, and the entire plant (root and all) of the dandelion needs to be removed or they can grow right back. To rid your lawn of dandelions, use a product such as Ortho® Weed-B-Gon MAX® Weed Killer For Lawns. Apply it to the dandelions to kill them without harming the lawn.

The best way to attack dandelions is to kill the whole plant, taproot and all, and then keep new weeds from establishing themselves in your lawn. To take care of your dandelions, apply a weed-and-feed product, such as "Scotts® Turf Builder® With Plus 2® Weed Control in the spring. If that doesn't get them, follow up in 2-4 weeks with an application of "Ortho® Weed-B-Gon MAX® Weed Killer for Lawns. Just be sure to follow the instructions on the label.

Don't hand pull them, as they will grow right back unless the tap root (often 2-3 feet deep) is completely removed.

A thick lawn is the best method for preventing dandelions and other broadleaf weeds in the lawn. Mow your lawn at a high setting on your mower, and follow a regular feeding program to achieve a lawn that is thick enough to keep weeds like dandelions from establishing in the first place.

Corn planting in full swing in southern Idaho

Farmers say cool weather hasn't had large impact on yields

By Cindy Snyder
Times News correspondent

Producers planting corn are keeping one eye on their rows and one eye on the calendar. Even though cold, wet spring conditions have slowed planting, growers say the delay hasn't cut into their yields too much — at least not yet.

Still they are pushing hard to wrap up planting by the end of this week. That's because grain corn, on average, loses a bushel-and-a-half per day of potential yield for every day after May 20 that the crop isn't in the ground.

However, that yield loss projection is based on normal soil conditions and fieldmen point out that 2011 has been anything but normal so far. Cool soil temperatures, in the mid- to upper 50s, have slowed germination of the corn seed that was planted in late April or early May.

Rick Speicher, an agronomy advisor with Land O'Lakes who covers both the Magic and Treasure valleys, expects corn planted this week to yield about the same as the early planted corn.

"This is a good week to plant, we shouldn't see any yield loss compared to what was planted in early May," he said.

Although planting feels later than normal, growers are only about a week behind based on the calendar and not at all behind based on soil temperature. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's weekly crop progress report, Idaho growers had planted 43 percent of their corn acres compared to 57 percent last year and the five-year average of 59 percent.

What those numbers don't show is how much better the crop looks this year compared to last year. Although just 3 percent of the crop had emerged by May 15, that was only 4 percentage points behind last year at this time.

Growers learned just how important soil temperature is to getting their corn crop off to a good start and waited this year for soil temperatures to warm.

When the soil temperature is 50 degrees, corn takes three to four weeks to germinate, and it can take seven to 10 days for the whole field to emerge. But at 60 degrees, the seed will germinate within seven to 10 days and the whole field will emerge within a day.

Nonetheless, growers who can't finish planting this week may want to consider planting a shorter day corn hybrid. Speicher would look at replacing a 100-day corn with a 95-day corn.

Speicher has also been reminding growers he works with that no matter how far behind they feel they are, farmers in states like North Dakota and Missouri who have been fighting flooded fields all spring are in much worse shape. According to the USDA, 63 percent of the nation's corn acres had been planted by May 15, up 23 percentage points from the previous week by behind both the five-year average of 75 percent and last year's pace of 87 percent complete.

USDA also dropped its yield projection for the 2011 corn crop to 158.7 bushels per acre, 3 bu. below the 10-year average. Al Kluis, a grain trader from the Midwest, praised the decision to lower the yield estimate in the May world grain balance sheet.

"A late planting almost always yields below trend line," Kluis said in a press conference call following the release of the May report last week.

However, he does not expect growers will actually plant the additional 4 million acres of corn that they said they would when the March planting intentions report was released.

People who were thinking of taking pastures and alfalfa out to plant row crops this year are not likely to do that if they can't get their regular fields planted because of the mud.

Keeping that additional 4 million acres in the equation allowed USDA to peg U.S. corn production at a record 13.5 billion bu. but still left corn ending stocks at a historically tight 6.7 percent of use. The 2011-12 season-average farm price is now projected at a record $5.50 to $6.50 per bu. compared with the 2010-11 forecast of $5.10 to $5.40 per bu.

Sugar beets all in

Sugar beet growers wrapped up planting by Mother's Day. Even though frequent rains have kept farmers out of fields for days at a time, the rains have also kept the soil soft and allowed the beets to emerge fairly quickly. It is too early to tell how many beets were blown out over the weekend given the strong winds, but before that replants had been at nearly a historical low.

HOPES WASHED AWAY

Robert Jones, 53, is afraid the rising flood waters behind his house will flood him out by the weekend in Yazoo City, Miss.

Flooding makes farming uncertain in South

By Holbrook Mohr and Mary Foster
Associated Press writers

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La. — With crop prices soaring, farmers along the lower Mississippi River had been expecting a big year. Maybe even a huge one.

Now, many are facing ruin, with floodwaters swallowing up corn, cotton, rice and soybean fields.

And even more farmland has been drowned as engineers opened a spillway for the first time in 38 years. Unlocking the spillway could inundate Louisiana Cajun country with as much as 25 feet of water but would ease the pressure on levees downstream, averting a potentially bigger disaster in New Orleans and Baton Rouge.

Trouble has already found the fields in far northeastern Louisiana, where Tap Parker and about 50 other farmers filled and stacked massive sandbags along an old levee to no avail. The Mississippi flowed over the top last week, and nearly 19 square miles of soybeans and corn, known in the industry as "green gold," was lost.

"This was supposed to be our good year. We had a chance to really catch up. Now we're scrambling to break even," said Parker, who has been farming since 1985.

An irrigation system looks like a bridge span from the distance near Yazoo City, Miss.

Cotton prices are up 86 percent from a year ago, and corn — which is feed for livestock, a major ingredient in cereals and soft drinks, and the raw material used to produce ethanol — is up 80 percent. Soybeans have risen 39 percent. The increase is attributed, in part, to worldwide demand, crop-damaging weather elsewhere and rising production of ethanol.

While the Mississippi River flooding has not had any immediate impact on prices in the supermarket, the long-term effects are still unknown. A full damage assessment can't be made until the water has receded in many places.

Some of the estimates have been dire, though.

More than 1,500 square miles of farmland in Arkansas, which produces about half of the nation's rice, have been swamped over the past few weeks. In Missouri, where a levee was intentionally blown open to ease the flood threat in the town of Cairo, Ill., more than 200 square miles of croplands were submerged, damage that will probably exceed $100 million. More than 2,100 square miles could flood in Mississippi.

In some parts of Mississippi, people spent thousands of dollars to build levees around houses, grain silos and even catfish farms. Some of those levees are holding, but others are not, meaning some residents will find their hopes dashed when they return home.

When the water level goes down — and that could take many weeks in some places — farmers can expect to find the soil washed away or their fields covered with sand. Some will probably replant on the soggy soil, but they will be behind their normal growing schedule, which could hurt yields.

For about the last six months, some parts of Louisiana and Mississippi have been battling unusually dry weather. Now they're getting drenched with water.

"We didn't get the rain that inundated the Midwest," said Ted Schneider, who lost $400,000 worth of soybeans when the river spilled across his fields in the northeastern Louisiana parish of East Carroll. "But we're getting all that water now. Just not the way we want it or where we need it."

Many farmers have crop insurance, but it won't be enough to cover their losses. And it won't even come close to what they could have expected with a bumper crop.

"I might get enough money from insurance to take us to a movie, but it better be dollar night," said Karsten Simrall, who lives in Redwood, Miss.

AGRICULTURE IN BRIEF

Neurological form of Equine Herpes Virus observed in Idaho horses

BOISE — A suspected outbreak of Equine Herpes Virus (EHV-1) is being investigated by the Idaho State Department of Agriculture.

The ISDA, in a statement issued Monday, said horses may have been exposed to EHV-1 at the NCHA Western National Championships in Ogden, Utah held April 30-May 8.

Confirmed and suspected cases of the disease have also been reported in Utah, Colorado and several other states.

Two Idaho horses which traveled to the event have died and several others are currently under the care of veterinarians.

State Veterinarian, Dr. Bill Barton is recommending horse owners incorporate strict movement controls or containment methods to prevent the spread of the disease.

"If you participated in this event, or have contact with horses that traveled to this event, you should notify your veterinarian and isolate and monitor these horses for a minimum of 21 days for clinical signs of the disease," said Barton in a prepared statement.

Equine Herpes Virus is highly contagious among horses and llamas and alpacas can also be affected.

The virus poses no health threat to humans although people can spread the virus to horses by means of contaminated hands, clothing, shoes and vehicles.

The virus is easily spread by airborne transmission, horse-to-horse contact and by contact with nasal secretions on equipment, tack, feed and other surfaces.

Currently there is no equine vaccine for protection against the neurological strain of the virus.

ISDA said symptoms may include a fever, nasal discharge, incoordination, hind-end weakness, lethargy, urine dribbling and diminished tail tone. "I encourage owners to frequently monitor their horses and contact their veterinarian immediately should any symptoms of illness be detected," said Barton.

Cases of EHV-1 must be reported to Idaho's state veterinarian.

Anyone suspecting or confirming a case of EHV-1 should call (208) 332-8540 or (208) 332-8570 to report cases.

Simpson cosponsors Farm Dust Regulation Prevention Act

WASHINGTON—Idaho Congressman Mike Simpson is joining his colleagues in opposing EPA's efforts to regulate dust by becoming a cosponsor of H.R. 1633, the Farm Dust Regulation Prevention Act of 2011.

Simpson is the chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Interior and the Environment which oversees funding for the EPA.

This legislation would stop the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in its current review from imposing more stringent dust standards for one year.

In a statement issued Friday, Simpson said he is concerned about the impact of the regulation on "communities in the arid west and believes the increased regulatory burden associated with dust standardss would cause extreme hardship to farmers, livestock producers, and other resource-based industries throughout rural America."

"The EPA acknowledges that the evidence that rural dust is damaging to human health is inconclusive, yet they continue to regulate it in the same manner as other forms of particulate matter, for which evidence is more definite," said Simpson in the release.

Thence South 00°32'53" East along said East boundary for 417.28 feet to the POINT OF BEGINNING.

The property is currently zoned as AL (Agricultural Low) by Minidoka County. It is proposed that the City zones the Crosland and Doyle property as AL (Agricultural Low) and the Helena property IL (Industrial Light). The annexation and zoning would allow for the continuation of the current uses of the property.

The annexation would be made pursuant to the authorization of Idaho Code Section 50-222 (3) (b) (i). The Paul Planning and Zoning Commission and the Paul City Council will consider the annexation and zoning designation. The Annexation Zoning Map Amendment and other materials are on file with the City Clerk at the Paul City Hall, 152 South 600 West, Paul, Idaho 83347 (208-438-4101), and are available for public inspection.

The public is invited to attend hearings regarding the annexation and zoning designation. The hearings will be conducted before the Paul Planning and Zoning Commission on June 1, 2011 at 7:00 p.m. and before the Paul City Council on June 8, 2011 at 7:30 p.m. Both hearings will be held at the Paul City Council Chambers, at 152 South 600 West Street, Paul, Idaho.

Those wishing to testify at the hearing may do so in person or in writing. But the written comments or testimony must be received by the City Clerk before close of business day on the date of the hearing.

FOUND:

A black Terrier mix was found in Filer 5-11-11. It is a neutered male and has a collar but no tags. Call to identify.

AVAILABLE FOR ADOPTION:

Our shelter is full right now. We have to get some of our dogs placed to make room for any new ones. If you have been thinking about adopting a dog please come in soon.

Cinch is a very handsome Border Collie pup. He is about 6-months-old and has beautiful silky medium length hair. He is so sweet and will be a wonderful pet.

Mitch is a wonderful golden retriever mix. He has a beautiful golden coat and big brown eyes that will melt your heart. Mitch knows how to sit and shake a paw. He will be a great family pet.

Bruno is a handsome Chesapeake mix. He is solid brown and has Chesapeake eyes. Bruno is about one-year-old. He enjoys playing with other dogs and loves to give kisses to his human friends.

Deuce is a handsome Labrador. He is middle aged, probably about 5-years-old, and is solid black. Deuce is very mild and sweet and knows how to sit and stay. He will make a nice family companion. Come meet him today.

Barkley is a cute little terrier/chihuahua mix. He has a black and tan wire-haired coat and big brown eyes. He is about one-year-old and has a big personality! Come meet him today! He will find a home quick!

Flash is an adult female Australian Shepherd mix. She is tan and white and is very sweet. She is housebroken and has a very mellow personality. Come meet her today.

Sherlock is an adult Rottweiler mix. He has the traditional black and tan markings and the broad head and shoulder. He does not have a docked tail. Sherlock does well with other dogs. He came into the shelter with his friend Watson.

Watson is an adult Rottweiler mix. He is tan and white but has a more narrow head and shoulders. His tail is not docked. Watson is so sweet and affectionate. Come meet him today.

Bear is a sweet Kitty that is up for adoption. He is solid black and has short hair. Bear is extremely affectionate and lazy! The perfect house cat!! He is litter box trained and wants to be a house cat. Come meet him today.

Theodore-Ted is a handsome kitty that is up for adoption. He is solid gray and is a short haired kitty. Ted is so sweet and wants to cuddle all the time! Ted is litter box trained and needs to go to a home where he can be inside.

Geneva is a cute little ferret. She is very sweet and does well with children. She has been de-scented and spayed. Geneva is free to a good home.

The adoption fee is $75 and includes spaying/neutering and the first set of vaccinations.

Today is Tuesday, May 17, the 137th day of 2011. There are 228 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On May 17, 1954, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, unanimously struck down racially segregated public schools.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1510, Early Renaissance painter Sandro Botticelli died in Florence, Italy; he was probably in his mid 60s.

In 1792, the New York Stock Exchange had its origins as a group of brokers met under a tree on Wall Street.

In 1849, fire erupted in St. Louis, Mo., resulting in the loss of three lives, more than 400 buildings and some two dozen steamships.

In 1911, actress Maureen O'Sullivan was born in Boyle, County Roscommon, Ireland.

In 1939, Britain's King George VI and Queen Elizabeth arrived in Quebec on the first visit to Canada by reigning British sovereigns.

In 1946, President Harry S. Truman seized control of the nation's railroads, delaying – but not preventing – a threatened strike by engineers and trainmen.

In 1961, Cuban leader Fidel Castro offered to release prisoners captured in the Bay of Pigs invasion in exchange for 500 bulldozers. (The prisoners were eventually freed in exchange for medical supplies.)

In 1971, “Godspell,” a contemporary musical inspired by the Gospel According to St. Matthew, opened off-Broadway at the Cherry Lane Theatre.

In 1980, rioting that claimed 18 lives erupted in Miami's Liberty City after an all-white jury in Tampa acquitted four former Miami police officers of fatally beating black insurance executive Arthur McDuffie.

In 1987, 37 American sailors were killed when an Iraqi warplane attacked the U.S. Navy frigate Stark in the Persian Gulf. (Iraq and the U.S. called the attack a mistake.)

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush unveiled his energy plan, bracing Americans for a summer of blackouts, layoffs, business closings and skyrocketing fuel costs and warning of “a darker future” without his aggressive plans to drill for more oil and gas and rejuvenate nuclear power.

Five years ago: The FBI began digging at a Michigan horse farm in search of the remains of former Teamsters leader Jimmy Hoffa; the two-week search yielded no evidence. It was announced that Paul McCartney and his second wife, Heather Mills McCartney, had agreed to separate. Broadway producer Cy Feuer died at age 95.

One year ago: The Supreme Court ruled, 5-4, that young people serving life prison terms must have “a meaningful opportunity to obtain release” if they haven't killed their victims. Laura Silsby, the last of 10 Americans detained while trying to take 33 children out of Haiti after the Jan. 2010 earthquake, was freed after a judge sentenced her to time already served in jail.

IF MAY 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Right now, your boots are made for walking, so some extra exercise will give you a chance to make a fresh start with your health. By July, you can be in top form and ready for action. Your business savvy is at an all-time high then, but because you are open-minded and wise beyond your years, you attract good luck and good fortune. Accept any offers that come your way, as these will bring you lasting benefit or an improvement. In September, you can make progress on the ladder of career or job success and your financial strategies can be successful. Make no crucial changes or commitments during November, as your judgment can be off center and you may end up saddled with something that holds you back.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your high spirits may encourage you to howl at the full moon. You are more likely to spend money on something of dubious value than usual because passing pleasures seem more important than usual.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Read the headlines without regret. You don't need to be in the public eye to get attention from the key people in your life. Today's full moon in your opposite sign might bring relationships into sharp focus.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Telegrams are no longer in style. In contemporary times there are numerous ways of communicating with other people, so it should be no trouble, and you have no excuse to delay sending a message.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You could have your head in the clouds, daydreaming of what could be. Today's full moon could very easily mark the beginning of a month where joys, pleasures and creativity fill your daily life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Reflect and refute. Today's full moon may seem to throw some light on your public persona and reputation for the next few days. With savvy maneuvering, you will be able to stop negative gossip in its tracks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tender is the night. The full moon lights up the dark areas that you rarely see. You may get a glimpse inside someone else's psyche or understand something that you never fully contemplated previously.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could be forced to walk the plank when someone plays pirate with your heart. The Full Moon might act as a beacon lighting up your financial connection to others and ways to handle shared resources.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Today's full moon is in your sign. You may spend the next several days sorting out the various impressions and insights gathered from numerous personal contacts. It is who you know that counts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Where there's smoke, there's fire. Pick up the scent of something that will warm your heart. A hidden desire or whim can be set aflame. You are tempted to explore something fun or financially beneficial.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A full moon is a time for werewolves and weirdoes — and sometimes for wisdom. You might be more aware of how others can help you achieve your goals. A new friendship offers excitement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ponder the peaks and valleys. During the days after this full moon, you might feel a tiny tug of war between your career aspirations and your family obligations. Money can't buy love or happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The tides of emotion run higher than usual under the pull of a full moon. You have a yen to become one with the universe, but your kindness and consideration could be perceived as weakness by others.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"I celebrate myself; and sing myself,
And what I assume you shall assume;
For every atom belonging to me
as good belongs to you."*
— Walt Whitman

When you have reached game after a defender has opened the bidding, it still may not be right to play the opener for all the outstanding points. Today's deal is from the European 2002 Mixed Teams Championship.

In most matches, East opened the bidding with one spade, but South ended in three no-trump. West led the spade three, East inserted the jack — good technique for the defenders to retain communication in the spade suit — and South took the king.

Five clubs, one spade, plus the ace and king of diamonds bring the trick total to eight. Knocking out the heart ace allows the defenders to cash four more spades, so that was not an option.

Many declarers saw matters in a simple light. With only 13 points outstanding, East was favored to hold them all. Therefore, they entered dummy with a top club and took the diamond finesse. That was two down, and no doubt South would consider himself unlucky, but he had missed the point of the deal.

Other more thoughtful declarers appreciated that East would come under pressure on the run of the club suit if he held the missing honors. As it transpired, East needed to find four discards. If these included a spade, then a heart could have been set up in safety.

At the table, East discarded three diamonds plus a heart. Now South cashed both top diamonds and was gratified to find the queen dropping doubleton, though not from East as expected, but from West.

ANSWER: Although it may look obvious to pass now, you have really not shown any values yet, and in a slam your hearts might prove useful as discards for partner's slow diamond losers. Given that your partner is almost sure to have five clubs and four spades, the logical call is to bid four clubs, showing real support and some slam interest. Let partner take over now, if he can.

DEAR ABBY: My 18-year-old graduating senior, "Renee," has told me I have taught her nothing about living life. Furthermore, she informed me that her school counselor agrees with her, saying I have failed to teach her the skills needed to be successful in life.

At first I was angry and denied everything my daughter said. Now I am beginning to doubt myself and the way I have raised her. Have I taught her the necessary skills to live her life? Does she lack what it takes to make it through the good and bad parts of life?

How can I know my Renee will be able to "fly out of the nest" because there is no safety net to catch her?

— DOUBTING MOM

IN MINNESOTA

DEAR DOUBTING MOM: Before you second-guess yourself any further, check with Renee's school counselor to make certain he or she was quoted correctly. Does your daughter know how to save money? Balance a checkbook? Hold a job? Does she know right from wrong and how to assert herself?

Many of life's survival skills are learned by imitation, the rest from experience. You can't protect your daughter from everything. Like most parents, you should cross your fingers and pray, and avoid blaming yourself for anyone else's poor choices.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am part of a circle of five guy friends. We're all around 30. Some of us date regularly, looking for the right girl. One of us, "Ian," is with "Jenny," who we're concerned about. They are now living together.

Jenny doesn't abuse Ian or cheat on him. We just think he could do better. She's pushy and materialistic, and it's impossible to have a two-way conversation with her. This isn't just my opinion. Some of Jenny's friends describe her the same way.

Because we're all so close to Ian, we hate to see this relationship progress. We worry he'll be forced to give her what she's aiming for — a ring. I know he's a grown man and can make his own decisions. Would it be wrong for one of us to tell Ian what we think of her? We hate watching what we consider a slow train wreck that's bound to get worse.

— GOOD BUDDY

IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR GOOD BUDDY: It wouldn't be wrong, but it might be unwise for one of you to tell Ian what you think of Jenny. He might get the message better if you ALL tell him during a boys' night out. It may be difficult to extricate himself from the relationship now that they're living together — providing he even wants to. (Some men like overbearing women.) But at least he will know that his friends have second thoughts about her, and that may open his eyes.

DEAR ABBY: I had a falling out with my oldest son and his wife two years ago. They have two daughters whom I dearly love, and I know they love me.

I wrote my son and daughter-in-law to beg for forgiveness. I messed up partly out of hurt and anger, and also because of the medications I was taking.

I asked my son if they really want to take away the only grandma the girls have left. I also wondered if two years of not being able to see my granddaughters was punishment enough for them and me.

I have held out the olive branch, but apparently they're not ready. Can you think of anything else I can do?

— HOLES IN MY

HEART IN KANSAS

DEAR HOLES IN YOUR HEART: Consider asking another family member or religious adviser to intercede for you. However, if that fails, then there is nothing else you can do. Hope and pray that time will bring reconciliation. You have my sympathy.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Bruin boys on course for 4A state golf title

Buhl's Crossland leads 3A tourney; Castleford boys in 2A driver's seat

Times-News

Another state golf title could be coming home to Twin Falls. With four golfers among the top 10 after Monday's first round, the Bruin boys are cruising toward the Class 4A state championship. Twin Falls shot a 301 team score on Day 1 at Centennial Golf Course in Nampa to hold a 10-stroke lead over Middleton (311) entering today's final round. Kyle Miley led the Bruins with a 74, while Alec Perkins fired a 75. Matthew Frank and Alec Meyerhoeffer carded 76s for Twin Falls, which is seeking its first boys state title since claiming the 5A crown in 2007.

In its first-ever state appearance, Canyon Ridge shot a 318 and sits in fourth place.

Sawyer McMillen led the Riverhawks with a 77 and is tied for 12th individually with Minico's Kody Miller.

The Twin Falls girls will need a big day today to claim their third state title in four seasons. The Bruin girls shot a 348 Monday and are 21 shots behind first-place Moscow (327). Three Twin Falls golfers are in the individual top 10, including Katherine Reed (81), Sydney Lee (82) and Jenna Sharp (83).

Wood River got an 89 from Jenna Williams, but otherwise struggled its way to eighth place with a 466.

Class 3A

After winning Class 3A District IV medalist honors last week, Kade Crossland expressed confidence that he would play well at the state tournament.

He was right. Crossland shot an opening-round 75 to lead the way at the 3A state tournament at Scott Pines Golf Course in Payette. Crossland opened with a 36 on the front nine en route to a one-stroke lead over Dakota Chavez of American Falls, who shot a 76.

The Kimberly boys are seven strokes back of defending champion Marsh Valley after shooting a 331. Stephen Clements led the Bulldogs with a 79, good for fifth place individually. Both Derek Maloney and Gage Huft shot an 82 and are tied for ninth.

On the girls side, Filer's Lexi Meyerhoeffer is sixth after shooting a 95. The Kimberly girls got a 98 from Tenecia Grover and are third in the team standings behind Weiser (401) and Kellogg (410) after shooting a 422.

Class 2A

It was a good day for Castleford.

JUST PART OF THE GAME?

Rules, equipment change fighting's impact on NHL

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press writer

Detroit Red Wing opponents knew better than to mess with Steve Yzerman. Take a cheap shot at him — or any of the other Wings, for that matter — and you'd have to answer to Bob Probert and, in later years, Darren McCarty.

It was an on-ice code of justice, and it's proven so effective over the years that players like Probert, McCarty and Derek Boogaard built careers dishing out punishing hits.

But Boogaard's sudden death Friday five months after a season-ending concussion, and his family's decision to donate his brain to the Boston University project that found Probert had signs of brain trauma resulting from blows to the head, is bringing added scrutiny to fighting's place in the NHL.

"I think the league does a good job. They're trying to limit head shots," Tampa Bay Lightning center Nate Thompson said Monday. "I don't think they can (ban fighting entirely). That's part of the game. It's a physical sport and it always has been. If they take that out of the game that takes a part of the history out of the game."

Like football, hockey is a game of controlled violence. Players are skating full-speed around an enclosed rink, and collisions — some intentional, some not — are bound to happen. Referees are there to make sure transgressions are punished. But when they don't, or don't see them occur, that's when players take matters into their own hands.

Boston's Big Bad Bruins brought the rough-and-tumble style to the ice, and the Philadelphia Flyers' Broad Street Bullies are considered the role models for modern-day enforcers. What people forget is that the Flyers only started beating people up because owner Ed Snider got tired of other teams picking on his.

"That fighting stuff way overshadowed the talent we had on the team," Bob "the Hound" Kelly said. "We don't have talent, we don't win anything."

But the Flyers did win, hoisting the Stanley Cup in 1974 and '75.

By the 1980s, every team had an enforcer or two whose primary role was to protect his teammates by whatever means necessary, whenever necessary.

"These guys are so big and strong," said Dave "the Hammer" Schultz, who often wrapped his hands in tape for protection and set an NHL record in the 1974-75 season with 472 penalty minutes. "We weren't big and strong. I could punch a guy, hit him right in the nose, and he's not going to get a concussion. But I didn't train to punch."

Advances in equipment and rules changes elevated the level of fighting. Schultz said he never would have slammed into opponents shoulderfirst because it would have hurt him. But players now wear helmets with face shields, and football-like padding.

Players can now pass all the way up to their opponents' blue lines, increasing the speed of the game. And like every other sport, the players have been supersized.

"The game has gotten very fast, much faster than it's ever been," said Stan Fischler, the MSG hockey analyst and leading NHL historian. "And the players are much bigger than they've ever been so, as a result, collisions are at a higher speed."

CSI men's players Patton, Lafayette to transfer

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Two members of the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team's NJCAA championship squad have decided to transfer for their sophomore seasons.

CSI head coach Steve Gosar said backup center Chris Patton and reserve guard Terrance Lafayette are "looking elsewhere for a place where they can have more opportunity to play, so we're going to grant them a release."

Patton, a 6-foot-10 center from Victoria, Australia, averaged 5.6 points and 3.5 rebounds per game, playing 11.2 minutes per game for the 33-4 Golden Eagles. He told the Times-News he had not decided where he'll play next season.

A 6-2 guard from Baton Rouge,

La., Lafayette chipped in 4.1 points and 1.9 rebounds in 10.9 minutes.

Redshirt freshman Nemanja Grujicic, a 6-7 forward from Serbia, is also departing and is considering options at the NCAA Division II level, according to Gosar.

CSI has already re-signed four members of the 2010-11 squad to return for next season, including guards Fabyon Harris and Kevin Attila and posts Gerson Santo and Paul Bunch.

That leaves the status of only one scholarship freshman in doubt. Jerrold Brooks, CSI's second-leading scorer at 15.4 points per game, remains suspended following his March 22 arrest on drug possession charges. Brooks' future in the program is still being determined.

"Nothing's changed with his situation," said Gosar.

Brooks and transfer forward Luke Cothron received suspended jail sentences May 10 in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court.

The duo, initially charged with misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance in March, entered guilty pleas to lesser charges of frequenting a place where controlled substances are used. Judge Roger Harris ordered both men to serve 12-month probationary periods in lieu of 90-day jail terms. Each man must also complete 20 hours of community service.

Next stop: One sophomore from CSI's national championship squad is still deciding where he'll play next season. Reserve point guard Issiah Grayson had his trip to Cal State Bakersfield postponed and will visit the campus this weekend, according to Gosar. Grayson previously visited Bethune-Cookman University in Florida.

Once he signs, Grayson will be the fifth CSI player to ink with a four-year program, joining Pierre Jackson (Baylor), Kenny Buckner (Boise State), Darius Smith (Eastern Illinois) and Mitch Bruneel (Utah State).

If the bike fits, ride it

(Editor's note: This is part of a four-month series as Times-News writer Ryan Howe starts from scratch and trains for the 25th Annual Spudman Triathlon, July 30 in Burley. Follow his progress at Magicvalley.com/blogs and Facebook: Times-News Ryan Howe.)

After several weeks pedaling the bike on a trainer, it was time to take it outside.

I met bike enthusiast Ken Stephens at an empty parking lot. I was 7 years old all over again. Since my setup didn't come with training wheels, I asked Ken to run alongside me, holding onto the back of the seat while I relearn to ride a bike. He declined, so only one of us would lose our dignity.

The 6th Annual Century Ride was last Saturday in Rupert. I told everybody I couldn't make it because I had to cover a Buhl baseball game. Truthfully, I could have done both. I'm just afraid to ride my bike in public.

Anybody can sit on a stationary bike indoors and spin the pedals. Out on the road, it's a whole different animal.

Riding a bike is more difficult than I remember it being last time I rode — 15 years ago. Navigating the bumpy road with tires as thin as pizza pans, I'm nervous and unsteady while avoiding gravel, cars and a yappy wiener dog that comes out of nowhere to attack my wheels. Not to mention the moving pavement below that waits to tear off my flesh should I take a tumble.

I don't fear the bike, but it makes me anxious. I witnessed an unfortunate accident near transition two at last year's Spudman. Plus, there is a reason I stopped bicycling during my childhood: While riding his bike down the street from my house, my close cousin was hit by a pickup, leaving him paralyzed from the neck down.

As I discussed in a previous column, the bike I've borrowed is a triathlon-specific bike. It's designed to rotate the rider forward, placing him or her in a low, aerodynamic position to reduce drag and go faster. Unfortunately, I pedal too slowly to take advantage of that feature.

Westbrook, Cardinals beat Phillies

ST. LOUIS — Jake Westbrook allowed one run in seven innings and St. Louis snapped a three-game losing streak in manager Tony La Russa’s first game back from illness, capitalizing on Cliff Lee’s career-high six walks to beat Philadelphia 3-1 on Monday night.

Lee (2-4) is winless in six starts since throwing a three-hit shutout at Washington on April 14. He departed after 122 pitches in 6 1-3 innings. Ryan Theriot, Matt Holliday and Lance Berkman each walked twice against Lee.

Fernando Salas worked the ninth for his fourth save in four chances.

The Phillies totaled four hits and had only three runners in scoring position against Westbrook (3-3).

Jimmy Rollins had two of the Phillies’ five hits.

The 66-year-old La Russa was back on the job after missing a six-game trip while getting treated for shingles.

ROCKIES 7, GIANTS 4

DENVER — Colorado’s Carlos Gonzalez capped a five-run sixth-inning with a three-run homer off an unusually wild Tim Lincecum.

Seth Smith homered off Lincecum (3-4), who set up the Rockies’ big inning with a throwing error on a potential double-play comebacker that led to four unearned runs.

Lincecum allowed seven runs, three earned, and nine hits and walked six in 5 2-3 innings.

The Rockies turned four double plays.

BRAVES 3, ASTROS 2

ATLANTA — Eric Hinske had three hits, including a tie-breaking single in the seventh, and Atlanta used a makeshift lineup in the victory.

Manager Fredi Gonzalez subbed Hinske in left field and Joe Mather, who had a two-run single in the sixth, in right as the Braves were missing third baseman Chipper Jones and right fielder Jason Heyward from their starting lineup.

REDS 7, CUBS 4

CINCINNATI — Jonny Gomes hit his first homer in nearly a month, completing Cincinnati’s seven-run rally that ended Carlos Zambrano’s run of road success.

Zambrano (4-2) had won his last 10 starts on the road, matching the second-longest such streak in Cubs history since 1919. He took a one-hitter into the sixth, then fell apart.

NATIONALS 4, PIRATES 2

WASHINGTON — Danny Espinosa broke out of a slump with a two-run homer in the seventh inning and Washington extended Pittsburgh’s losing streak to a season-worst seven games.

Espinosa, who was 8 for 73, drove the first pitch thrown by reliever Jose Ascencio into the left-field bullpen, scoring Mike Morse, who had singled off hard-luck starter Paul Maholm (1-6). Espinosa’s 22 RBIs leads all rookies, but has seen his average dip from .281 to .193 in the last 20 games.

MARLINS 2, METS 1

NEW YORK — Florida reliever Burke Badenhop got his second career hit with two outs in the 11th inning, driving in Mike Stanton with the go-ahead run and the Marlins beat the New York Mets.

Badenhop (1-0) came to bat after escaping a two-on, two-out jam in the 10th. Stanton was already on second and Emilio Bonifacio was on first when Badenhop lined a single up the middle off Ryota Igarashi (2-1).

AMERICAN LEAGUE INDIANS 19, ROYALS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Michael Brantley’s three-run homer and Travis Hafner’s bases-loaded double keyed a 10-run fourth inning Monday night that sent Cleveland to a 19-1 win over Kansas City.

Vin Mazzaro, the third Royals’ pitcher, was charged with 14 runs and 11 hits in 21-3 innings.

RED SOX 8, ORIOLES 7

BOSTON — Adrian Gonzalez hit a two-run double off the left-field wall with one out in the ninth inning for Boston.

Trailing 7-6 going into the inning, the Red Sox put runners at first and second on one-out walks to Jacoby Ellsbury and Dustin Pedroia. Gonzalez, the AL leader with 37 RBIs, then got the winning hit on the first pitch he saw from Kevin Gregg (0-1).

RAYS 6, YANKEES 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Sam Fuld and B.J. Upton hit two-run homers to help Tampa Bay hand New York its sixth consecutive loss.

It’s the first time the Yankees have lost this many consecutive games since a seven-game skid in April 2007.

BLUE JAYS 4, TIGERS 2

DETROIT — Kyle Drabek pitched seven strong innings as Toronto snapped Detroit’s seven-game winning streak.

Drabek (2-3) allowed one run despite walking six, and gave up three hits and struck out two. Frank Francisco

RANGERS 4, WHITE SOX 0

CHICAGO — Texas’ Colby Lewis pitched a five-hitter for his first career shutout.

Endy Chavez had three hits for the Rangers, who have won four of their last five games. Chavez was hitless in nine at-bats since he was promoted from Triple-A Round Rock on Saturday.

Bike

After our first outdoor ride, Ken informed my coach Alice Schenk that I was not very stable. Alice didn’t know if he meant I was unstable on the bike, or unstable in general. Either way, he’s right.

Michael Hays, president of Personal Best Performance, told me it’s important that a cyclist feels confident and comfortable. Right now, I feel neither.

I’m wobbly as a drunkard on ice skates. My back and arms ache from leaning on the handlebars. Is it me, or is it the bike? According to Lance Armstrong’s book, “It’s Not About the Bike,” so I’m guessing it’s me. But if I were racing the Tour de France, I would say, “Bicyclette c’est futile!”

Like politics and religion, everyone has a differing opinion when it comes to triathlon training (and for some, triathlon is their religion). Some say I should buck up and get used to it. Others suggest trying a regular bike for a while and then gradually transitioning to the tri bike.

One of my Facebook triathlete friends said, “Everyone feels like that at first. You will get used to it. I promise it will be second nature to you soon.” Another said, “Starting to bike again using a tri bike is like learning how to drive in a Formula 1 car. ... If there is any chance you can borrow a standard road bike you might be a lot more comfortable. That extended position on a (tri) bike is an acquired taste.”

In time, I believe I’ll become more confident on the bike. However, as I timidly rode 10 miles on Monday, another realization hit me.

The Wolves shot a 355 team score on the boys side and own an 11-stroke lead over Soda Springs at the midway point of the 2A state tournament at Lakeview Golf Course in Meridian.

Dylan Kinyon shot a 79 for Castleford and Mitch Howard fired an 80 to finish second and third, respectively, in the individual scoring. Defending champion Travis Robison opened with an 84 and is in seventh place.

Castleford’s Sierra Harr shot an 81 Monday to lead the girls medalist race. She is four strokes up on Garden Valley’s Johanna Backe entering today’s final round.

The Gooding girls are second in the team scoring after a 464, well back of Nampa Christian’s 424. Declo’s Angela Vitek shot a 93 to finish third individually.

Animal Kingdom thriving at Fair Hill

Preakness

2:30 p.m., Saturday, NBC

ELKTON, Md. (AP) — Graham Motion loves being surrounded by acres of lush grass while working in peaceful solitude at the Fair Hill Training Center.

Kentucky Derby winner Animal Kingdom does, too, it seems.

Which is why Motion is strongly considering waiting until Saturday to ship his chestnut colt 40 miles south to Pimlico Race Course for the Preakness.

After watching Animal Kingdom gallop 1½ miles Monday in relative obscurity, Motion decided there was no rush to move his horse from spacious Herringswell Stables to a bit cramped Stall 40 at Pimlico, the traditional home of the Derby winner.

“I’m leaning more toward Saturday morning,” Motion said. “Have quite a few horses to run on Saturday, and that’s what they’re going to do. I don’t really know why I need to do anything differently with (Animal Kingdom). He’s very happy here and I just want to keep things as normal as they can be.”

Motion is the first Maryland-based trainer to win the Derby since Michael Matz saddled Barbaro in 2006. Before Barbaro tragically broke his right hind leg in the Preakness, the undefeated bay colt enjoyed munching on buttercups and running free on the heavenly green fields of Fair Hill, an equine oasis nestled in the hills of this rural community.

It’s the perfect place for Motion and Animal Kingdom, who won the Derby at odds of 20-1.

“Pimlico, unfortunately, is pretty much tarmac everywhere,” Motion said. “Here we’ve got this beautiful property where we can do so many different things. The horses can get turned out in small paddocks, and we’ve got plenty of pasture they can graze on. It’s just a much more natural environment for the horses.”

Born in England, the 46-year-old Motion still has an accent after decades of living in the United States. He spent only one summer overseas as a horseman, yet he’s constantly asked how his European roots have influenced his methods on the track.

Motion long ago made a name for himself in Maryland, but Animal Kingdom’s win at Churchill Downs earned him fame around the world. The victory was even more noteworthy because it came after his other entrant in the Derby, Toby’s Corner, was scratched days before the race.

More than a week later, Motion still shakes his head in amazement when recounting the feeling of saddling up the Kentucky Derby champion.

“It’s fairy tale stuff,” he said.

MINNEAPOLIS — The NFL's lockout remains in place, a federal appeals court ruled Monday. That means the league likely won't get back to business until at least next month — and maybe much longer than that.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the lockout can stay until a full appeal is heard on whether it is legal. That hearing is scheduled for June 3 in St. Louis, before the same panel that issued this 2-1 decision.

The appellate court said it believes the NFL has proven it "likely will suffer some degree of irreparable harm without a stay." The court also cast doubt on the conclusions of U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson, who ruled April 25 that the lockout should be lifted to save the players from irreversible damage. The 8th Circuit panel put her decision on hold four days later.

"The league has made a strong showing that it is likely to succeed on the merits," the appellate court majority wrote.

The decision came as NFL owners and players finished their latest round of court-ordered mediation behind closed doors, a session that lasted more than eight hours. This was the fifth day of talks in front of U.S. Magistrate Judge Arthur Boylan, the first since April 20.

Tiger aiming to be at U.S. Open

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — Tiger Woods says he didn't do any more damage to his left leg at The Players Championship and expects to play the U.S. Open next month.

Woods made it only nine holes last week at The Players — his shortest tournament ever — when he
