Dept. of Correction to close T.F. work center

Cut could save $900K a year, stave off employee furloughs

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The Idaho Department of Correction will close its Twin Falls Work Center Aug. 1 — shipping its 78 prisoners to other facilities in the state, offering new positions to its 13 employees and hopefully saving more than $900,000 in the process, officials said.

IDOC Director Brent Reinke said his department hopes to turn those savings into fewer furloughs for his employees. They won't know until the fall how much money is saved by closing the center, he said, or what that extra cash means for furloughs. The Twin Falls Work Center has been in operation since July 1992.

Reinke said the department doesn't have as much of a need for the work center because judges are using other options for low-risk offenders, such as making the parole system more efficient and making more use of retained-jurisdiction sentencing programs. The latter allows judges to place some offenders into drug and alcohol treatment programs instead of putting them in prison.

"There are several key changes and tweaks in the system that are leading to the different kind of offenders," Reinke said.

Those changes pull directly from the former work center candidate pool, Reinke said.

May to serve 10 years for Buhl shooting

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Terrified and horrified. James Lambert used those words to describe the day Marcus May aimed a gun at his chest and fired.

Because of the miracle of a misfire, or that May forgot to chamber a round in the 9 mm semiautomatic pistol, Lambert lived to tell a Twin Falls court on Friday about May 20, 2010 — the day he hid behind a friend's car while at a Buhl residence to avoid his girlfriend's bullet-spraying, obsessed ex-boyfriend.

Since he shot Lambert in the leg and not the chest, May will spend a minimum of 10 years in prison with the possibility of another 20 for felony aggravated battery, rather than a potential murder conviction and life behind bars.

May, 26, had nothing to say at his sentencing, and Judge G. Richard Bevan called him on it.

"My feeling is that you've had almost a year now to contemplate your conduct," Bevan said. "There has yet to be truly any acknowledgment before this court to them or to the citizens of the state of Idaho that you're taking responsibility for this conduct, which was in all intents and purposes an attempted murder upon the life of James Lambert."

Canyon Ridge students raise Relay for Life funds with first pig wrestling event

What started out as a pig-wrestling contest soon morphed into a mud wrestling free-for-all at Canyon Ridge High School as students enjoyed a little midday downtime on Friday.

Students streamed out of the Twin Falls high school to the grassy hill by the tennis courts, where a few Twin Falls vendors had set up shop to sell food during students' lunch break. On the far side of the courts, a large crowd gathered around a small wire pen filled with mud.

Four students from each grade were chosen by the student council to tackle a piglet donated by Requa Farms and place it bottom down into a barrel.

Jake Groesbeck, 15, said his freshman team wrestled the pig into the bucket in 46 seconds, but it wasn't good enough to bring home the bacon. The team of seniors in bright pink shirts claimed the

Xavier likely to run own finances

Charter management company Paragon to close shop in Idaho

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

After a tumultuous relationship over the last three months, Xavier Charter School and private school management company Paragon Schools are not only ending their relationship, but Paragon is also shutting down shop in Idaho.

Paragon CEO Brandon Fairbanks said Friday his company has taken steps to wrap up its agreements in Idaho in preparation to leave the state, mostly due to its involvement with Xavier.

He said any efforts to clear the company's name and "clean up" its reputation were too great a task.

"The damage had already been done," Fairbanks said about approaching Xavier board members about exiting its $200,000 annual contract to manage the Twin Falls charter school's finances and other operations. "I told them, maybe it's time to end our agreement. It doesn't have to be negative, but it's in the best interest of the school and us."

On Thursday, Xavier trustees approved terminating the school's association with Paragon by a 2-1 vote. Paragon's services will end on July 1, although Board Chairwoman Teresa Berry said she wasn't sure how the school will handle its finances in the future.

"We've just started looking at it and will probably go in-house," Berry said, adding that she didn't know how many positions would be created for the job, since the board is still working out the school's budget for the coming year.

Xavier's financial year ends on June 30, and electronic media of all records maintained by Paragon are to be delivered to the school by July 15.

National Guard soldiers on leave surprise kids

In their "Faces of the 116th" series, writer Melissa Davlin and photographer Ashley Smith followed four members of the Idaho Army National Guard's 116th during deployment to Iraq, and took readers inside the lives of those guardsmen's families. On Sunday, Davlin and Times-News photographers will revisit several of the families as soldiers on leave try to make the most of the short time they have with their loved ones. Read the story in People

ITD slows traffic north of bridge to allow turns

Times-News

The Idaho Transportation Department has started using pace cars to slow down southbound traffic along a stretch of U.S. Highway 93, the agency announced Friday.

The cars create gaps in the traffic to allow northbound vehicles to turn left on Golf Course Road, preventing congestion in those lanes. The pace cars were first used in the area, north of the Perrine Bridge and south of Interstate 84, earlier this week.

Drivers are seeking to use Golf Course Road as a route around construction at the junction of U.S. 93 and I-84. The pace cars will be used from about 4-6 p.m. on weekdays, slowing traffic to about 35 mph. Each gap should provide space for up to 20 vehicles to turn.

ITD will review the need for the pace cars when work shifts to the southbound lanes in mid-July.

Knife River Corporation Northwest, of Boise, is the contractor for the $5.2 million rehabilitation project to reconstruct and widen U.S. 93 from south of the I-84 junction, north for about two miles.

Shooting

When Lambert and Rebecca Ward, who dated May for about a year in 2009, testified in court, they spoke of barricading themselves in a back room in an attempt to save themselves from May. Ward had heard the shots from outside the house and seen Lambert stumble inside with blood pumping from his leg. Lambert said May shot at him four times after re-chambering the gun, hitting him in the calf with the final shot. Lambert managed to get inside the house and get to Ward, who saw May through a window and later heard glass and wood breaking.

She took Lambert inside the back room, where they dialed 911 for help and faced what they felt may have been the last moments of their lives.

"I thought we were going to die," Ward said. "I think about it every day."

May never got to them. He fled by car and was pursued by police along U.S. Highway 93. Spike strips brought May's vehicle to a halt, and during the apprehension he was shot in the head by Filer Police Officer Tarek Hassani.

After recovering from a grazing bullet wound to the left side of his skull, May was charged with felony aggravated battery with a deadly weapon, three counts of felony aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, felony burglary and misdemeanor eluding officers. At his September arraignment, May entered a not-guilty plea, which he changed in December. At that point, he pleaded guilty to aggravated battery and eluding police while the remaining charges were dismissed.

This month, he unsuccessfully attempted to withdraw his guilty plea, stating he didn't understand the prison terms but not making a claim of innocence.

Closure

He said he came through Twin Falls recently to tell local leaders and business owners who employ the prisoners of the decision.

"We really do appreciate that," he said. "And we appreciate the relationship we've had with the city and county on this facility. This has not been an easy decision to make, as the population changes and these changes occur."

State Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, defended the decision in an email, writing that the center's closure and the greater use of the drug and alcohol treatment programs in general, is a more responsible use of taxpayer money.

"While (the closure) means a reduction in corrections staffing locally, it is a fiscally responsible decision to reduce costs by, in this case, perhaps an additional $1 million annually," Hartgen wrote. "Here we have an agency which is 'cutting the cloth to fit' where it can. I think that's what taxpayers want government to do in these tough times."

Charge against anti-wolf activist dropped

Times-News

A Twin Falls anti-wolf activist no longer faces a felony charge for his alleged 2009 poaching of a trophy bull elk in Blaine County.

On May 2, the state dropped a charge of killing, possessing or wasting an animal worth $1,000 or more against Tony Mayer, a 59-year-old Twin Falls resident and founder of the anti-wolf website SaveElk.com.

He still faces three related misdemeanor charges, to which he could plead guilty to as part of the plea agreement that dismissed the felony charge, according to the Idaho Mountain Express in Hailey. Mayer is scheduled to be sentenced in Blaine County 5th District Magistrate Court at 1:30 p.m. June 3.

Mayer was accused of elk poaching in northern Blaine County on Oct. 3, 2009, three days after the close of the bow hunting season. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game started an investigation after Mayer posted photos of the elk on some websites.

The felony charge Mayer faced was originally dropped in October 2010, but re-filed by prosecutors five days later.

Mayer faces up to six months in jail and a three-year loss of hunting and fishing privileges in Idaho for each misdemeanor charge: hunting without an appropriate tag, hunting without an archery permit, and unlawful taking of game animals.

The maximum penalty he faced for the felony charge was five years in prison, a $50,000 fine, and loss of hunting and fishing privileges for three years.

State firms up wolf-management framework

Times-News

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has received more guidance as it goes about resuming management of Idaho's gray wolf population.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission gave state wildlife officials several directives regarding wolf management at a meeting Thursday in Lewiston, according to a department press release.

The instructions are largely in line with the state's past approach to handling wolves. They include managing the predators in a way that will keep oversight from returning to the federal government, and controlling the population where it conflicts with domestic animals, humans or game animals such as elk. The state's actions will be consistent with its 2002 wolf plan approved by the Legislature and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Department staff will draw up a plan for this fall's wolf hunt by July, as previously expected.

Along with the instructions, the commission also agreed to support Idaho's defense to any court challenges of the wolf's return to state control. And, though the animal is back in the state's hands, commissioners will push Congress to continue to fund monitoring and control efforts and compensation for livestock depredations.

Obama orders aid for N. Idaho

BOISE (AP) — President Barack Obama has issued a major disaster declaration for Idaho and made federal funding available to counties with flooding damage.

Earlier this month, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter requested more than $5 million in federal money for six northern Idaho counties to pay for fixing roads that were damaged by flooding and landslides during the first several weeks of April. Obama signed off on the disaster declaration Friday, the White House said.

Obama ordered federal money go toward repairs in Bonner, Clearwater, Idaho, Nez Perce and Shoshone counties and the Nez Perce Tribe reservation.

The northern Idaho damage includes more than 50,000 cubic yards of debris that covered two sections of Dent Bridge Road north of Orofino when a hillside gave way.

championship in a mere eight seconds, and turned their attention from chasing the pig to sharing muddy hugs with friends and unsuspecting students who were unfortunate enough to be within arm's reach.

History teacher Jeremy Belliston said the event was a brainstorm of Kelly Ann Buddecke. The student body senator and the rest of the council brought in sponsors and created a fun day for students to remember. Part of the proceeds will go toward the high school's Relay for Life team's fundraising efforts.

Student Body President Braden Coleman, 18, said the school has garnered close to $3,000 for the annual American Cancer Society fundraiser that wraps up today in Filer, with the pig wrestling sure to fatten up the final amount.

"We were trying to establish new traditions and spirit for Canyon Ridge," Coleman said about Friday's event. "I hope they continue it — I'll even come back and help out next year."

Paragon

According to its termination agreement, Xavier will pay Paragon $16,666 on both June 1 and July 1 for services rendered.

Trustee Joan Hurlock, who voted against the termination agreement, said she wasn't comfortable giving Paragon a final payment before all records in its possession are handed over to school officials and properly accounted for.

"Based on a pattern that has been set by another school and this school, I have reservations about releasing Paragon from any liability," Hurlock said, referencing Nampa Classical Academy, which also employed Paragon. The Nampa school was closed by the state last year.

Hurlock specified that she wasn't accusing Paragon of mismanaging Xavier funds. But she said the company hasn't delivered all the documents officials from the shuttered Nampa school need for tax purposes.

Huber and Chairwoman Teresa Berry said they would personally call Fairbanks to make sure all of Xavier's documents are received by July 15.

"We've done significant damage to Paragon by the press in the paper. (Board members Gerardo Munoz and Shawn Willsey) did all of this work and didn't find anything, so we have no reason not to trust them," Huber said. "And they have no reason to trust us."

The fallout from the Xavier-Paragon split has affected at least one other south-central Idaho school.

Kelly Bangerter, board president of Heritage Academy Public Charter School in Jerome, said his new school has contracted with Paragon to help it prepare for its fall opening. Heritage would have signed a long-term contract with Fairbanks' company after August if the latter wasn't closing its doors in Idaho.

"I had absolutely no reservations with them and would be more than happy to enter into a contract with them," Bangerter said. Asked if Xavier's issues with Paragon have given Heritage officials pause, he said he hasn't changed his attitude toward the business.

"I'm saddened by the fact they are no longer going to be in the state of Idaho," he said.

In other business Thursday, Xavier's board amended its bylaws to stagger board terms by three years. Huber and Berry recently announced their intent to resign from their board seats, and the board voted to appoint whoever replaces them to one-year terms for the coming year. A discussion on the timeline for the appointments will occur in a future board meeting.

A discussion and vote on bylaw and policy revisions related to the board composition was tabled after Berry stated she had gone fishing that day and hadn't read through the changes.

A hand in their own housing

SCCAP program begins placing families in homes

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The city of Kimberly welcomed three families Friday who will build new homes in town, thanks to South Central Community Action Partnership’s fledgling Mutual Self-Help Housing program.

While SCCAP is better known for the weatherization and energy assistance programs it offers to low-income residents across the Magic Valley, its new program aims to provide more Idahoans with the realization of home ownership.

“I heard about the project through a friend that works at South Central,” said Hillary Martinho, a single mother and participant in the Kimberly housing project.

A future project in Jerome will put seven families to work for 35 hours a week to build houses with minimal up-front cost, as SCCAP has received a grant of $422,110 to build 21 more homes in the Kimberly and Jerome areas over the next two years.

“We were awarded the grant from the USDA Rural Development program,” said Ken Robinette, SCCAP CEO.

The project that Martinho is a part of consists of only three families. About a year ago, the nonprofit housing organization Mercy Housing shifted its focus from building single-family housing to constructing multiple-family dwellings.

In doing so, it left behind a grant it had received for 10 years to provide families across the Magic Valley with affordable homes. This year, SCCAP assumed $62,000 remaining from that grant to continue Mercy Housing’s earlier work and develop new single-family homes.

Aside from Martinho, Melissa Flieger and her 3-year-old daughter will build a new home in Kimberly, as will Misty and Evan McEwen and their two children.

“I am so happy that I was able to get into the Kimberly project,” Flieger said at Friday’s groundbreaking ceremony.

Chad Whitaker, the construction coordinator for the Kimberly project, said the three homes are expected to be completed by Thanksgiving.

While other programs like Habitat for Humanity provide families with homes, the new SCCAP program serves a slightly different income bracket and builds multiple houses at once. In addition, the families must provide 65 percent of the labor, which, according to Shandlee Kristie of SCCAP, is more than Habitat requires. The families are also given low-interest loans so that they can afford their new homes.

The foundations for the new Kimberly homes will be poured by professionals, but the framing — which will begin in about two weeks — and much of the work from there will be done by the families.

Hillary Martinho and her two sons, 18-month-old Sunny and 9-year-old Wyatt, are among three families who will help build their own homes in Kimberly through a South Central Community Action Partnership housing program.

“I am thankful for my family and friends, my parents and my sisters who have helped me with this so far and will be helping me with the work,” said Flieger.

Wendell devises plan to replace old street signs

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The city of Wendell voted to revamp some of its street signs at Thursday’s City Council meeting.

At a previous meeting, Public Works Director Bob Bailey proposed an about $9,000 project to replace street signs on Idaho and Main streets. Beginning the project now would be a way to spread costs over the next few years that are necessary to keep Wendell in compliance.

Bailey, who was not at Thursday’s meeting, had also looked at ways to save on shipping costs for the sign materials.

Councilman Kent Bates said replacing Wendell’s signs is long overdue, a feeling Mayor Brad Christopherson shared.

“I know we have a lot of complaints from Gooding County when they have to deliver papers and they can’t find the addresses,” Christopherson said. “It is past due.”

The council also voted to include a newly written volunteer policy in the city’s personnel manual. The policy sets up standards for interviews, supervision and which positions need background checks. The city worked with policies from other communities and input from people who oversee volunteers, such as head librarian Elaine Dalton, to create the plan.

In other business, Christopherson shared how he recently presided over a council made up of somewhat shorter representatives of Wendell. On a recent tour of City Hall for local kindergarten classes, Christopherson taught the students firsthand how city government works by putting together a pint-sized council to pick from five movies for an event in the park this summer.

“We had a little kindergarten council meeting,” Christopherson said.

The representatives picked animated supervillain film Despicable Me.

Resident’s idea becomes grant

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

Kimberly resident Lowell Ihler had never gotten involved in city politics before. But a camping trip gave him an idea that ended up netting Kimberly a $311,500 grant.

After returning from a South Hills RV trip with his wife, Ihler got the idea to turn an unused parcel of city land on the corner of Ash and Main streets into an RV dump. In September, armed with information from Kimberly’s Parks and Recreation Department, Ihler found himself pitching a construction project to the City Council — which saw the idea as an easy economic boost.

“One day in the paper, I saw a mention that (Mayor Dave) Overacre said the city had some spare land,” Ihler said. “I just took it down to (the council) and presented it to them and they took it over and the grant worked out.”

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation awarded the $311,500 to Kimberly last week.

City Administrator Polly Hulsey, who helped write the grant along with Jeff McCurdy from Region IV Development, said that while Ihler’s participation is unusual for citizens, it is certainly welcome.

“I would say it’s probably not the norm. Usually when people come in, they have a problem they want us to follow up on,” Hulsey said. “I just can’t say enough as far as what that means to have a citizen willing to help like that.”

Besides providing the original idea, Ihler also helped collect signatures as a show of community support, a requirement for the grant.

The hope of Ihler, Hulsey and the Kimberly City Council is that the RV dump will reach out to more than just Kimberly residents with RVs.

Hulsey said the dump will have plenty of parking, so passing drivers can take a break from the road by walking around Kimberly’s businesses. There will also be a kiosk at the dump site with information about the city and surrounding area.

“I’m just glad we can do a lot of stuff with that,” Ihler said. “I’m hoping we can draw people in and help the economy.”

At a Jan. 11 council meeting, Councilman Brandon Hoobler said bringing new people to downtown Kimberly was the reason for his support.

“Even if people don’t stop, (the dump) gets them driving through and they see the Quilt Shop and make a note to come back,” Hoobler said. “I do think there may be an ancillary effect.”

Though the city will have to wait for more information before breaking ground, Hulsey said that, when possible, the city plans to use employee man-hours as part of its matching funds for the grant, saving money at the same time.

Unknown Huntsman presses White House bid

By Philip Elliott
Associated Press

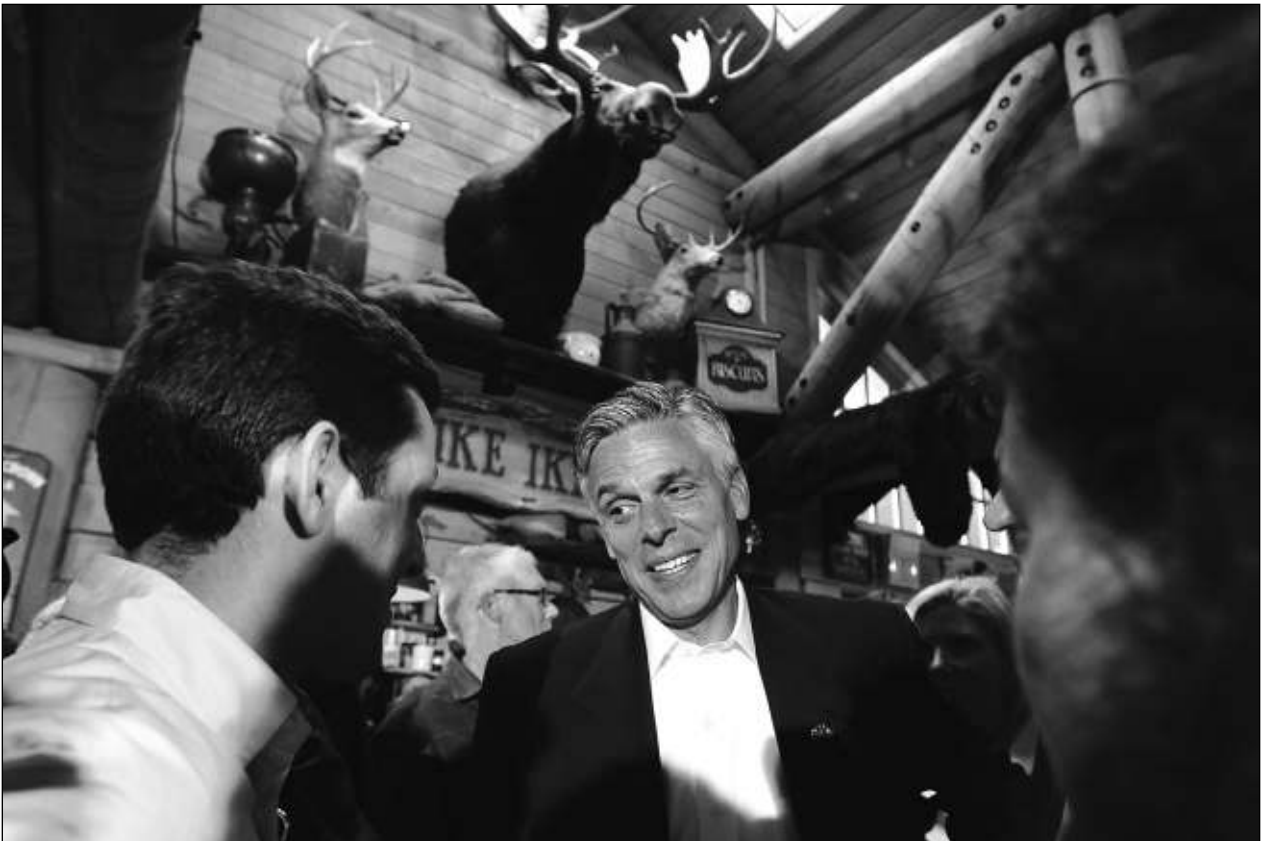

HANCOCK, N.H. — Republican Jon Huntsman on Friday heard a major hurdle to his White House aspirations summed up in a single voter's question: "Aside from Utah, who are you?"

The little-known former Utah governor, who is almost certain to run for president, was using a five-day visit to the first-in-the-nation primary state to provide an answer to Republicans here and elsewhere searching for a candidate to challenge President Barack Obama.

"Get to know us. We're approaching this with honest and honorable intentions," Huntsman said at one stop, all but pleading with New Hampshire Republicans to hear him out even if their first inclination is to balk at him because he served as Obama's ambassador to China.

From intimate dinner conversations to small house parties and larger town hall events, Huntsman packed the schedule for his first retail-style campaign trip to a state that votes early in the GOP nominating process. He was making all the right moves and looking every bit the presidential candidate he is likely to become in the coming weeks.

His family traveled with him. He met privately with the state's political kingmakers. He lingered after each event to shake hands and engage in small talk. He stood among the crowds and not on stages or behind podiums. He dressed casually, opting for a denim jacket over a sports coat at some events. And he lined up veterans of previous New Hampshire political campaigns who know the terrain.

On Saturday, Huntsman was set to deliver a commencement speech at Southern New Hampshire University. It was all designed as a show of force, sending a message that he would campaign seriously in a state that would be central to his nomination strategy, even if rival Mitt Romney is considered the hometown favorite.

At each stop, Huntsman fielded questions about globalization and education, corporate tax rates and trade. He spent a half-hour being grilled on climate change, questioned on how he would pay for Social Security and asked for details on how a health care overhaul he implemented in Utah differs from national Democrats' effort.

When a voter asked the Huntsmans if they recycle, Mary Kaye Huntsman stepped in: "We just got home from China. We're still getting our trash cans."

Later Friday, the Huntsmans visited a Veterans of Foreign Wars post near the state capitol in Concord. Within minutes, veteran Rick Angwin was pushing Huntsman for a U.S. draft so military members wouldn't have to deploy as often.

"I happen to think the volunteer approach works but I'm going to think about what you're saying," Huntsman said.

But the friendly who-are-you question from a voter in Hancock stood out among the rest. It was, after all, the reason Huntsman was in New Hampshire.

"I am a dad. I am the father of seven kids," Huntsman said, then ticked through his professional resume: a former governor, business executive and member of three Republican administrations.

In describing his experience, he mentions but doesn't linger long on his time in the Obama administration, recognizing that the affiliation is toxic for the party's conservative base. And he offered a quick explanation — honed in the three weeks since he returned stateside — within three minutes of his first stop in New Hampshire.

"I'm the kind of person who, when I'm asked by my president, I stand up and serve my country," Huntsman said in Hanover, standing under a stuffed moose and exposed wooden beams.

He sought to play down a policy record that's more moderate than his rivals, telling voters that labels are too simple in politics.

Testing out a stump speech throughout his trip, Huntsman offered himself to voters as a candidate whose experience as a diplomat, business executive and politician could usher in what he calls America's third industrial revolution. He argues that the United States could grab hold of a high-tech revolution if Washington lowers taxes and reduces regulation.

"We've had two industrial revolutions in our history. We're the only nation in the world that has been able to deliver this kind of industrial and manufacturing might. ... The question is do we want it?" he asked.

He didn't shirk from criticizing his former boss.

Asked during an interview with ABC News about his earlier praise of Obama as a "remarkable leader," Huntsman, replied: "History will show how effective he is."

Huntsman also sought to address some pieces of his biography some conservative voters might find disqualifying.

He backed away from previous statements supporting a "cap and trade" policy aimed at expediting corporate efforts to curb harmful emissions. And he declared himself "very proud of my Mormon heritage."

Idaho Falls man faces charges in Ponzi scheme

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Federal prosecutors have filed wire fraud and money laundering charges against an eastern Idaho man accused in a Ponzi scheme.

The charges were filed against Daren Palmer, of Idaho Falls, Wednesday after a more than two-year investigation by the FBI, the Post Register reports. Palmer has already been ordered to pay some $90 million in restitution and fines in the case.

Prosecutors believe Palmer operated a Ponzi scheme dating to at least 2002 that fraudulently took $76.8 million from about 68 investors. Prosecutors say Palmer used money invested with Trigon Group for personal use, including paying himself a salary of up to $35,000 a month.

Last year, two financial regulatory agencies won civil suits against Palmer, who is scheduled to be arraigned Wednesday in Pocatello.

The Post Register was unable to reach Palmer or his attorney for comment.

Palmer, who has not been arrested, is expected to be arraigned next Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Pocatello.

"We're pleased that it's moving toward resolution," Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Haycock.

Last year, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission won civil lawsuits against Palmer. But this is the first time Palmer has been criminally charged in what investigators have called the largest securities fraud case in Idaho history.

If convicted, Palmer faces up to 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine for wire fraud, along with another 10 years in prison if he is found guilty of money laundering.

Most of the people who invested with Palmer live in eastern Idaho including friends, family members and neighbors, according to authorities.

Palmer's consistent guarantee of high returns should have raised suspicions among the investors, said Wayne Klein, a receiver appointed to seize and liquidate Palmer's assets in order to repay investors who were swindled during the scam.

"Anyone who believes the notion they can get a high rate of return with minimal or no risk ... (should) understand that is almost certainly a fraud," Klein said.

Poll finds prices at gas pump painful for 4 in 10 Americans

By Jennifer C. Kerr and Jennifer Agiesta
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As $4 a gallon gasoline becomes commonplace, drivers have made tough choices: scaling back vacations, driving less or ditching the car altogether. And a new Associated Press-GfK poll shows the impact of sustained high prices is spreading among seniors and higher-income Americans.

According to the poll, the share of all Americans who say increases in the price of gasoline will cause serious financial hardship for them or their families in the next six months now tops 4 in 10.

Overall, 71 percent said rising prices will cause some hardship for them and their families, including 41 percent who called it a "serious" hardship. Just 29 percent said rising prices are not causing a negative impact on their finances.

While those with household incomes under $50,000 were already feeling strained in March, the new poll shows financial pain is increasingly spreading to those with higher incomes. Among those with annual household incomes over $50,000, 63 percent now say rising prices are causing them financial hardship, up from 55 percent in March.

For older Americans, it's worse. The share of seniors expressing financial hardship over gas prices hit 76 percent; it was 68 percent in March.

Nettie Cash, 65, of Dallas, Ga., is cutting back on her medicine because of the cost of fueling up her Buick. Cash is still taking her heart pills but is forgoing her inhaler and ulcer medicine for now.

"It's not easy," she said.

"You have to do what you have to do."

The public's coping strategies are largely unchanged from March, with 72 percent having cut back on other expenses, 66 percent saying they've reduced the amount of driving they do and 48 percent changing vacation plans.

Since January, gas prices have shot up about 90 cents, with the national average for a gallon of regular this week at $3.96.

Financial analyst Nicole Polite in Baltimore sold her

Nissan Altima recently and is taking public transportation, opting for the bus, rails and walking to get to work. Gas prices were just too high, she says, so she and her boyfriend downsized to a one-car household. She says they kept their Lexus sedan, which requires pricey premium gas.

"It's definitely a financial strain because now you have to reassess everything," said Polite, 32.

But analysts say relief is coming. Fred Rozell, retail pricing director at the Oil Price Information Service, expects the price at the pump to drop as much as 40 cents in the next four weeks.

Until that happens, Ross Cobb in Boerne, Texas, will still try to keep his highway miles down. Cobb says he and his wife have been driving less and curbing trips into the city for their children's clothing and other supplies.

The Associated Press-GfK Poll was conducted May 5-9 by GfK Roper Public Affairs and Corporate Communications. It involved landline and cellphone interviews with 1,001 adults nationwide and has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 4.2 percentage points.

David Sims demonstrates a custom stand that he uses to play his electric guitar on April 14 in his Post Falls home. Sims has reunited with his band as lead guitarist after being paralyzed in a biking accident more than a decade ago.

13 years after accident, N. Idaho man rejoins band from his youth

By Bill Buley
The Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Dave Sims didn't believe he could play the guitar again. After all, he was a quadriplegic, confined to a wheelchair. He couldn't control his fingers. He had limited use of his arms.

That's the way it had been for 13 years, ever since that biking accident.

Mark Hedstrom believed otherwise.

"I want to hear you play," he told Sims last year during one of the reunions of their old band, "Archer," as an electric guitar was set before Sims.

"I can't," the Post Falls man responded.

Hedstrom stared him in the eyes.

"Music comes from your heart," Hedstrom said. "It doesn't come from your fingers. I'm not buying it. Play!"

He put a glass slide on Sims left thumb, a pick in the thumb of his glove on the other.

"Play!"

Because he knew that Sims had heart. "You've got to trust me. We can do this," Hedstrom said.

So 50-year-old Dave Sims, for the first time in more than a decade, played. He hit the notes. He hit the chords. He made music. Again. It felt absolutely, positively, wonderful. Sims looks back on that day with a big smile, his eyes bright.

"That was it. I was hooked," he said. He credits Hedstrom with pushing him, with refusing to accept no.

"He was really an inspiration to me," he said.

"I'm humbled that I planted the idea," Hedstrom said. "He took it and ran with it."

When they played together, it seemed not much has changed. A little older, a little grayer. But the same sounds. Hedstrom, of Kalispell, Mont., considers them a "band of brothers." Then and now.

"It's like blinking. We just went forward 25 years," he said.

The reunited Archer will play at a private party later this month — the first time they've done so since 1983. Their rehearsals in the studio at Sims' home, have gone well. Surprisingly well.

"It's just like we're kids again. It all came back," Sims said. "Our vocals are probably better now than they were 20 years ago."

There's Martin Smith on lead vocals. Doug Buell back on keyboard and guitar. Brian Elship on bass. Hedstrom behind the drums, vocals and guitar. And of course, Sims on guitar.

The five once formed Archer, a popular band in the Seattle area. For years, in the late '70s and early '80s, they hit the nightclubs and bars throughout the Pacific Northwest. Classic rockers. They traveled, drank beer, and played their music. Money? There wasn't much, but who noticed?

"I'm surprised we all survived it," Sims said.

"Every time we went out it was an adventure," Elship recalled.

Eventually, they moved on and went their own directions. Sims settled in North Idaho, worked in the electric business. He loved recreation and the outdoors. But when he was 38, while biking, he crashed, flipped over, and landed on his head.

It left him paralyzed, with limited use of his arms.

He did not stay down. Today, he drives his van and takes his boat out from his dock on the Spokane River. It was 2008 when Sims began wondering about his old Archer buddies. Using the Internet, he found them.

"Let's have a reunion," he said.

In July of that year, they did. And again in 2009 and 2010.

Each time, they sang and played around the campfire. They tried to give Sims an acoustic guitar, but he couldn't hold it. He couldn't play. Not until last year when Hedstrom rejected his no.

"A sound came out and I was hooked," Sims said. "I thought, 'Maybe there's a chance.' At that point, I started playing."

And practicing. Hours, alone, in his studio or living room. He had a keyboard stand custom-made to hold his guitar. It's a bit of a struggle, because he can't push down, but he manages to guide the slide and pick across the strings. He doesn't hit every note, but darn near.

"I'm not ever going to be Eddie Van Halen. My fingers don't move," he said. "I play overhand instead of underhand, like most slide players. I'm not really a slide guitar player but I'm learning."

Buell is thrilled Sims is back. The Marysville, Wash., man said when they started playing again, it was like they never stopped. From the first chords and harmony, their music clicked.

"I was shocked," he said. "That totally caught me off guard."

Sims, he said, is an inspiration.

"He's a miracle," the 51-year-old Buell said.

Police: Boise couple blamed each other in child's 2009 death

BOISE (AP) — A Boise man accused of beating his girlfriend's 8-year-old son to death nearly two years ago told police he had bruised the boy but denied any responsibility during interviews.

Daniel Ehrlick's conversations with law enforcement were played Thursday during his first-degree murder trial in Boise. Ehrlick has pleaded not guilty in the 2009 killing of Robert Manwill, whose body was found in a canal about a week after his disappearance set off a massive search across Boise.

Ehrlick had tortured the small boy that summer in a pattern of escalating violence that ended with a fatal head injury, prosecutors said. Ehrlick stuffed rocks into the child's pockets before dumping his body into the irrigation canal to cover up the crime.

The boy's mother, Melissa Jenkins, said Ehrlick had abused the boy, police said. But Ehrlick also pointed blame at Jenkins when talking to investigators.

During a recorded interview on Aug. 9, 2009, six days after the body was found, Ehrlick told police Jenkins was blaming him for the abuse Robert had suffered because Ehrlick had threatened to leave her.

Ehrlick also told police it was Jenkins who came up with the idea to hide Robert in a closet when social workers visited their apartment to check on her other son, an infant who had been previously removed from the home.

During the taped interview, Ehrlick told police he had bruised Robert in the past by swatting the child's bottom with a board. But when Ehrlick was asked about what happened to Robert and who killed the boy and dumped his body in the canal, Ehrlick said: "I can't explain what happened. I can't," in the taped interview played in court.

Jenkins had lost custody of Robert in 2008 but had visitation rights. Robert, who lived primarily with his father in New Plymouth, was visiting his mother at the time of his disappearance. Jenkins knew Ehrlick was beating Robert but did nothing to stop him, prosecutors have argued.

She pleaded guilty in January to aiding in Robert's killing as part of an agreement with prosecutors and faces up to 25 years in prison at her August sentencing.

Ehrlick's trial is expected to last five or six weeks and if convicted, he could spend the rest of his life in prison.

IDAHO Coroner: Man fatally shot daughter, self

BOISE — A coroner says an Idaho man died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound after he shot and killed his 3-year-old daughter.

Police found the two bodies at about 6:30 p.m. Thursday in a car parked outside a Meridian theater in southwestern Idaho.

The Ada County Coroner performed autopsies Friday and identified the man as 38-year-old Andrew Davis of Boise, and the toddler as his daughter, 3-year-old Natasha Echon-Davis.

Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg says Davis shot his daughter, who was in the back seat of his car, before turning the gun on himself.

A handgun was recovered from the vehicle, according to police.

Meridian Deputy Police Chief Tracy Basterrechea said Thursday police had no idea what a motive might have been for the shootings.

Idaho anglers get new bag limit on jack chinook

LEWISTON — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission says anglers can keep more jack chinook.

The Lewiston Tribune reports that starting Friday, the bag limits have increased on the Clearwater River and its tributaries, the lower Salmon River, Little Salmon River and the Snake River in Hells Canyon.

In the Clearwater Basin, anglers will be able to keep six hatchery Chinook per day as long as at least five of them are jacks — Chinook that return to freshwater after spending just one year in the ocean. Any chinook 24 inches long or shorter is considered a jack.

Anglers fishing the lower Salmon River, Little Salmon River and the Snake River in Hells Canyon can keep six Chinook per day as long as at least four of them are jacks.

MONTANA Public told to heed signs as bear research begins

BILLINGS — Researchers plan to begin trapping grizzly bears next month in Yellowstone National Park and western Montana as part of their monitoring of the threatened animals.

State, federal and tribal wildlife agencies said Thursday that all areas where bear field work is being conducted will have warning signs posted along major access points.

Members of the public are advised to stay out of those areas.

A 70-year-old Illinois man was killed by a grizzly in Wyoming last year after he went hiking in an area where a bear had just been trapped, tranquilized and released.

Man gets 10 years for hot cocoa robbery

BILLINGS — A 31-year-old man accused of throwing a cup of hot chocolate at a Billings convenience store clerk to access the till has been sentenced to 10 years in prison after the judge denied his request to withdraw his guilty plea.

Michael Richard Barreca, who pleaded guilty in January to robbery, was sentenced Friday. He also must serve a concurrent 10-year sentence for an unrelated casino theft.

Prosecutors say Barreca walked into the store Dec. 10 and filled up a cup of hot chocolate. When the clerk opened cash register to make change, they say he threw the hot chocolate in her face, took $48 from the register and fled. The clerk suffered minor burns.

WASHINGTON 2 more cases of horse virus found

PULLMAN — The Washington State University College of Veterinary Medicine has confirmed two more horses with Equine Herpes Virus. That brings to six the number of confirmed cases in the state.

Horse herpes is very contagious and horse events across the state are being canceled because of this outbreak. The disease cannot be transmitted to humans but is easily spread among horses, alpacas and llamas.

Al-Qaida eyed oil tankers as bombing targets

By Eileen Sullivan and Matt Apuzzo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Osama bin Laden's personal files revealed a brazen idea to hijack oil tankers and blow them up at sea last summer, creating explosions he hoped would rattle the world's economy and send oil prices skyrocketing, the U.S. said Friday.

The newly disclosed plot showed that while bin Laden was always scheming for the next big strike that would kill thousands of Americans, he also believed a relatively simpler attack on the oil industry could create a worldwide panic that would hurt Westerners every time they gassed up their cars.

U.S. officials said the tanker idea, included in documents found in the compound where bin Laden was killed nearly three weeks ago, was little more than an al-Qaida fantasy. But the FBI and Department of Homeland Security issued a confidential warning to police and the energy industry Friday. The alert, obtained by The Associated Press, said that al-Qaida had sought information on the size and construction of oil tankers, had decided that spring and summer provided the best weather to approach the ships, had determined that blowing them up would be easiest from the inside and believed an explosion would create an "extreme economic crisis."

"We are not aware of indications of any specific or imminent terrorist attack plotting against the oil and natural gas sector overseas or in the United States," Homeland Security spokesman Matthew Chandler said on Friday.

With about half the world's oil supply moving on the water, industry and security experts have warned for years that such an attack would be pertankers that move oil around the globe, it would barely dent the world's oil supply, said Jim Ritterbusch, president of Ritterbusch and Associates. A tanker holds about 2 million barrels, or enough to supply world demand for about a half hour.

Friday's alert was significant because it linked the scheme directly to bin Laden, meaning the idea probably has circulated among al-Qaida's most senior leaders.

Former International Monetary Fund leader Dominique Strauss-Kahn leaves court and returns to jail after his bail hearing in New York state Supreme Court, Thursday.

Former IMF chief released from jail under house arrest

By Jennifer Peltz and Colleen Long
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Former IMF chief Dominique Strauss-Kahn was released from jail Friday and will be held under house arrest near ground zero after the luxury apartment where he had arranged to stay fell through because the neighbors objected to the media frenzy.

Prosecutors said he will be temporarily housed in a building on a small street in lower Manhattan within the Police Department's "Ring of Steel" — a network of private and police cameras near where the World Trade Center stood.

While he is there, his family and lawyers will look for a more permanent place for him to await trial on charges he tried to rape a hotel maid.

The original plan was for Strauss-Kahn to move into a luxury residential hotel under armed guard on Manhattan's well-to-do Upper East Side. Even though the address was never officially released, police and reporters soon converged on the building, the Bristol Plaza.

"Last night there was an effort by the media to invade the building," attorney William Taylor said. While Strauss-Kahn's family had a lease and could have stayed, he decided to leave "out of respect for the residents."

Late in the day, after the snag over where the banker would serve his house arrest had been resolved, Strauss-Kahn was released from the city's Rikers Island jail on $1 million cash bail. The 62-year-old former managing director of the powerful International Monetary Fund had been behind bars since last Saturday.

During his time in temporary housing in lower Manhattan, at least one armed guard will be watching him at all times, and he will have to wear an ankle bracelet. His apartment's exterior doors will be outfitted with alarms and video cameras, on orders from the judge who granted bail.

Strauss-Kahn cannot leave his temporary housing at all. Once he is settled somewhere permanent, he will be allowed to leave only for court dates, meetings with his lawyers, doctor's appointments and weekly religious services, and he will have to give prosecutors at last six hours' notice. No trial date has been set.

He is accused of attacking a 32-year-old housekeeper in his $3,000-a-night hotel suite. The West African immigrant told police he emerged naked from the bathroom, chased her down and forced her to perform oral sex. He has denied the allegations.

Rising revenue increases pressure on states to restore budget cuts

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin's Republican governor and GOP leaders in several other states are facing increasing pressure to back off from deep spending cuts to education and social programs in light of higher than expected revenue projections as the economy improves.

The surge in revenue is giving rise to an awkward question — are the governors making the deepest cuts because they have to or because they choose to?

The issue is unfolding in Michigan, Ohio, New Jersey, Colorado and several other states where tax revenue forecasts have turned up just as legislatures are working through budget reduction packages.

In Wisconsin, local school board members and superintendents are pressing lawmakers and Gov. Scott Walker to scale back his proposed 8.4 percent cut in aid to public schools and 5.5 percent reduction in how much schools can collect from state money and property taxes combined. The Republican-controlled Legislature has backed Walker's agenda so far, but did not reject this appeal outright.

Miles Turner, director of the Wisconsin Association of School District Administrators, said the earlier cutbacks were based on a leaner budget outlook. Continuing with the entire reduction now, he said, would show "there's a greater interest in following through with an ideological campaign against public education than there is to support public education."

Many school districts have been planning to lay off teachers, increase class sizes and cut back programs like music and foreign languages to cover the reductions.

Elsewhere, the Colorado Legislature has approved $22.5 million less in education cuts than originally proposed by Democratic Gov. John Hickenlooper following improvements in the state's revenue projections. In Michigan, Republicans who control the Legislature and Republican Gov. Rick Snyder are reducing their original proposed cuts to schools by as much as two-thirds.

Gov. Scott Walker, R-Wis., answers questions from the media after reading to Anna Greenman's third grade class on March 31 at HOPE Christian School: Prima in Milwaukee.

A similar effort isn't getting much traction in New Jersey where Republican Gov. Chris Christie has refused to back off his program of cuts although revenues are projected to increase between $500 million and $900 million over two years.

Tax revenue projections in Wisconsin were revised last week to show the state will receive $636 million more through the end of the budget cycle than expected. The increase amounts to only 1.6 percent, but would be enough to reduce layoffs and cuts in school programs. Milwaukee, the state's largest school district, expects to eliminate about 1,000 fulltime teaching and staff positions.

Republican Sen. Alberta Darling, co-chair of a budget committee, said Republicans were considering softening the cuts for some schools that would be hurt the most. She wouldn't say how much of Walker's cuts might be rolled back.

She and other Republican leaders also no longer plan to go along with Walker's plan to change a popular prescription drug program for seniors. Walker had targeted that program for $15 million in savings.

A sign warning of flooding is almost covered by Mississippi River floodwaters on a road in Vicksburg, Miss., Friday.

High water makes Mississippi River tricky to navigate

By Mary Foster and Alan Sayre
Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Travis Morace has been running boats on the Mississippi for two decades, witnessing all of the mighty river's many moods. He's seen it calm and smooth as a newly paved road and endured jarring rides filled with treacherous twists and bumps.

But even experienced river pilots have never seen anything like the roiling current now racing to the Gulf of Mexico. Since spring floods pushed the Mississippi to historic heights, America's busiest inland waterway has become one of its most challenging to navigate.

"If you're not scared of it, you should be, because it has a lot of ways of hurting you," Morace said this week as he slowly nudged his tugboat, the Bettye M. Jenkins, along the river bank near Vidalia, La.

The high water brings with it a host of hazards. Debris is everywhere, and the unusually swift current makes it difficult for pilots to go upstream. Good luck stopping if you're headed downstream. For those who make their living on the water, the river is a respected adversary in the best of times. Now it just plain frightens them.

On Friday, the Mississippi at Vidalia looked more like a stormy ocean than a river. Whitecaps frothed under the bridge that connects the city to Natchez, Miss., and whirlpools churned across the channel.

In many places, obstacles were hiding just beneath the surface. Some trees in Natchez were nearly submerged. A basketball hoop protruded about 2 feet above the water at a flooded-out court.

The current was filled with flotsam of every sort, including whole trees and long, green ribbons of vegetation. A nearby alligator struggled against the water's pull, finally finding refuge on the porch of a building partly concealed by the rising water.

The high water and rapid current caused at least two barges to break loose from a towboat Friday and hit a bridge. Three barges of corn sank, the towboat's owner said. No one was hurt.

The barges went down near Baton Rouge, prompting the Coast Guard to close a five-mile stretch of the river. Officials did not know when it would reopen.

Earlier in the week, the Coast Guard briefly closed a 15-mile span of the river near Natchez because of the current and concerns that the wakes from passing vessels would put pressure on floodwalls protecting communities. The wakes were also washing floodwater into some businesses.

Although the river was soon reopened near Natchez, barge and tug traffic is still being tightly regulated.

The Coast Guard normally asks vessels to maintain a minimum speed of 3 mph going upstream. But these days, they can go only about 1 mph to avoid generating wakes. When heading south, many have trouble stopping in the fast current.

"You ask me, they should close it down altogether," said Jerry Batson, captain of the tug Gladys Batson. "It's awful risky for any vessel."

On Wednesday, Batson watched as a boat pushing two empty chemical barges stalled while trying to pass under the Vidalia-Natchez bridge.

Before the river began to flood, the Gladys Batson routinely pushed four, 200-foot barges at a time. But the current now makes it hard to steer or to move that much cargo.

Farther south in Louisiana, the high water also presents a challenge to pilots who guide oceangoing vessels into ports from New Orleans to Baton Rouge.

Michael Lorino, head of the Associated Branch Pilots, said pilots have to maneuver through tricky currents made worse by the river's many bends, and they must stay away from sandbars built by the huge amount of silt carried down during high-water season, usually in the spring.

An American flag reflects off Mississippi River floodwaters in south Vicksburg, Miss., Friday.

Tenn. Senate OKs ban on teaching homosexuality

By Lucas L. Johnson II
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A bill passed Friday by the Tennessee Senate would forbid public school teachers and students in grades kindergarten through eight from discussing the fact that some people are gay.

Opponents deride the measure as the “don’t say gay bill.” They say it’s unfair to the children of gay parents and could lead to more bullying. Supporters say it is intended to give teachers clear guidance for dealing with younger children on a potentially explosive topic.

The bill isn’t likely to be taken up by the House before lawmakers adjourn this spring, but the sponsor there has said he would push it forward in 2012 when the General Assembly comes back for the second year of the session.

Passage would make Tennessee the first state to enact such legislation, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. In 2003, Washington defeated a proposal similar to Tennessee’s, as did California in 2005 and 2006. A Louisiana law forbids the use of sexually explicit materials depicting homosexuality in sex education classes.

Under the proposal, any instruction or materials at a public elementary or middle school would be limited to age-appropriate lessons about the science of human reproduction.

The legislation was amended from the original version, which said no elementary or middle schools will “provide any instruction or material that discusses sexual orientation other than heterosexuality.” Republican Senate sponsor Stacey Campfield of Knoxville said some of his colleagues were uncomfortable with that language.

He said the language is appropriate because “homosexuals don’t naturally reproduce,” and he said it’s necessary because the state’s curriculum is unclear on what can be taught.

However, Sen. Roy Heron, D-Dresden said the instruction or materials at a public elementary or middle school would be limited to age-appropriate lessons and abstinence.”

AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka speaks during a luncheon at the National Press Club on Friday in Washington.

AFL-CIO may reduce support for Democrats

By Sam Hananel
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Prominent labor leaders, frustrated that Democrats in Washington aren't aggressively pursuing the union agenda, are threatening to limit their campaign support for Democrats, an act that would hamper the party's bid to regain control of the House next year and keep a majority in the Senate.

AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka's threat of a pullback Friday was the latest warning to a party that has long relied on labor's cash and grass-roots support. If it makes good on its threat, labor probably would spend more time and money combating union-busting efforts by state officials.

"We will change the way we spend, the way we do things and the way we function that creates power for workers," Trumka said.

In a speech at the National Press Club, Trumka called for "an independent labor movement" and said unions were not responsible for building the power of any political party, but for improving the lives of working families. He promised that unions would spend the summer holding leaders in Congress and the states accountable.

If labor makes itself truly independent of the Democratic Party, it would mark a major shift in a long-standing political relationship.

"It doesn't matter if candidates and parties are controlling the wrecking ball or simply standing aside to let it happen," Trumka said. "The outcome is the same either way. If leaders aren't blocking the wrecking ball and advancing working families' interests, then working people will not support them."

The AFL-CIO's executive council is considering a plan that could spend less on congressional races and more on fighting state battles like those in Wisconsin and Ohio, where lawmakers want to weaken collective bargaining rights and reduce union clout.

But Trumka made clear the federation had no plan to follow the lead of the nation's largest firefighters union, which announced last month that it would halt all political donations to members of Congress because they are not fighting hard enough for union rights. The move has won praise in many corners of the labor movement, where union activists have openly grumbled about House and Senate Democrats being too quiet while unions are getting pummeled in dozens of states.

"We've spent money where we have friends and we will continue to do that," he said.

Leon Fink, a labor historian at the University of Illinois at Chicago, said unions are tired of being taken for granted and discouraged that their influence with moderate and conservative Democrats has been limited.

"Spending a lot of money electing conservative Democrats in marginal districts had no legislative payoff for unions," Fink said. "They don't seem to have the capacity to impose their will on the party."

Unions have been disappointed that Congress has not passed a more ambitious stimulus plan to create jobs, that health care reform didn't go far enough and that Democrats — when they held a majority in Congress — couldn't muster enough votes to pass a bill that would make it easier to organize unions.

Shuttle crew to take closer look at damaged tile

HOUSTON (AP) — NASA ordered Endeavour's crew to take an unusual close-up look at a damaged tile in the space shuttle's delicate heat shield early Saturday morning.

Using the shuttle's robotic arm, astronauts will scrutinize the gouge on the shuttle's underbelly with a high resolution camera and a laser attached to a boom.

"There's nothing alarming here and we're not really concerned," said LeRoy Cain, chairman of the shuttle mission management team that decided Friday to order what's called a "focused inspection."

Cain said the two-hour maneuver is being done out of an abundance of caution and won't cause any disruption to the crew or its 16-day mission to the International Space Station.

The damaged tile was spotted in photos snapped by the station crew just before the shuttle linked up Wednesday.

Wrestler known as 'Macho Man' dies in Fla. wreck

By Harry R. Weber
Associated Press

Randy "Macho Man" Savage, the professional wrestler known for his raspy voice, the sunglasses and bandanas he wore in the ring and for the young woman named Miss Elizabeth who often accompanied him, died in a car crash Friday in Florida. He was 58.

A Florida Highway Patrol crash report said the former wrestler — whose legal name was Randy Mario Poffo — was driving a Jeep Wrangler when he lost control in Pinellas County around 9:25 a.m. The Jeep veered over the raised concrete median divider, crossed over the eastbound lanes and crashed head-on into a tree.

Police said he may have suffered a "medical event" before the accident, but the report did not elaborate, and it said officials would need to perform an autopsy to know for sure.

The report said a woman in the vehicle, identified as Barbara L. Poffo, 56, suffered minor injuries. A statement from Stamford, Conn.-based World Wrestling Entertainment said the passenger was the wrestler's current wife. Both were wearing their seatbelts, according to the police report.

"Poffo will be greatly missed by WWE and his fans," the statement said.

Savage was a charismatic wrestler made famous for his "Macho Man" nickname and his "Oooh Yeah!" catchphrase. He was a champion in Vince McMahon's World Wrestling Federation, and later Ted Turner's now-defunct World Championship Wrestling.

Poffo was under contract with WWE from 1985 to 1993 and held both the WWE and Intercontinental Championships.

"Our sincerest condolences go out to his family and friends. We wish a speedy recovery to his wife," WWE said.

Savage defined the larger-than-life personalities of the 1980s World Wrestling Federation (now WWE). He wore sequined robes bejeweled with "Macho Man" on the back, rainbow-colored cowboy hats and oversized sunglasses, part of a unique look that helped build the WWF into a mainstream phenomenon.

For most of his career, his valet, Miss Elizabeth, was by his side. The woman, Elizabeth Hulette, was his real-life wife at the time. They later divorced, and Hulette died in 2003 at 42 in what was later ruled a prescription drug overdose. She was among many performers in the sport to die young.

Others include Curt "Mr. Perfect" Hennig, who died of a cocaine overdose in 2003 at 44, and Chris Benoit, who killed his wife and son and then committed suicide in their Georgia home in 2007. Benoit was 40.

The WWF made Savage their champion after a win over Ted DiBiase in the main event at WrestleMania in 1988.

Savage had not appeared for a major wrestling organization since 2004, when he performed for Total Non-stop Action.

He was at times both the most popular and most hated wrestler in entertainment. His flying elbow off the top rope was mimicked by basement and backyard wrestlers everywhere. Savage made good use of his deep, raspy voice as a corporate pitchman as well, for years ordering Slim Jim fans to "Snap into a Slim Jim!"

He's most known for his legendary rivalries with

Hulk Hogan, Ricky Steamboat and Ric Flair. Wrestlers took to Twitter to let fans know Savage won't be forgotten.

"There's probably five or six of us, with Andre (the Giant) and Hogan and thankfully myself and Flair, that, when their names pop up, even if you're not a fan, you know who in the hell these people are," said former wrestler and WWE Hall of Famer Dusty Rhodes. "You say, 'I know this guy. I know Macho Man Randy Savage.' He was part of that breed. We lost a good one."

Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson hailed Savage as one of his childhood inspirations and heroes, while Mick "Cactus Jack" Foley called Savage "one of my favorite performers."

Hogan said he and Savage had just started talking again after 10 years.

"He had so much life in his eyes & in his spirit, I just pray that he's happy and in a better place and we miss him," Hogan wrote.

While so many personalities who left the WWF for WCW like Hogan, Roddy Piper and Mean Gene Okerlund were welcomed back to the company and even inducted into the Hall of Fame, Savage never returned.

Red, white and you: T.F., Jerome merge fireworks shows

CHEERS: To Fourth of July fireworks organizers in Jerome and Twin Falls, for agreeing to join forces for this year's pyrotechnics.
 It's an approach that makes perfect sense, and will provide a better show than either community could afford otherwise. Backers say they'll need $35,000, and Twin Falls organizers have so far raised $11,000. Since last year, Twin Falls residents have had the option of paying $2 on their monthly city water bills.
 This is the kind of volunteer regional effort that should be a model for other community projects.
JEERS: Leave it to the federal government to do the nonsensical.
 The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has ordered the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to remind families that voluntarily pay premiums to a special Medicaid program for kids that they aren't required to pay.

 The Katie Beckett program provides medical services for children with medical or developmental disabilities so they can be cared for at home instead of institutionalized. Families don't have to be low-income to qualify.
 In 2009, the Legislature set optional premiums for the program, based on family income. Federal guidelines prevent the state from making the premiums mandatory. After the optional premiums were set, the Health and Welfare sent letters to all the participants explaining that they would be receiving bills but that delinquent accounts wouldn't affect their child's eligibility or experience in the program.

Earlier this year, the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services ordered the state to send out surveys to families that have been billed to ensure they understood that premium participation isn't required for eligibility. The state was also ordered to start printing the bills with reminders that paying the premiums isn't mandatory.
 Out of 1,332 participants, more than 96 percent — 1,285 families — have incomes large enough to voluntarily pay premiums under the guidelines set by the Idaho Legislature. But of that group, just 175 have opted to pay.

 Department of Health and Welfare said 213 participants responded to the survey and more than half of them said they didn't know the premiums were voluntary.
 Of the respondents, 114 said they would continue to pay voluntarily.
 “I think it's commendable to those people who understand those of us who are more fortunate need to pay our way,” said state Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, a member of the Health and Welfare Committee.
 We couldn't agree more.
CHEERS: To taxpayers in Idaho communities, for voting to raise their property taxes to support public schools after the Legislature cut funding.
 Despite last Tuesday's high-profile supplemental levy defeats in Meridian, Kuna and Buhl, the Idaho Department of Education said Friday that 27 of the 36 levy proposals on the ballot statewide passed — including Cassia County, Hansen and Richfield.

 All told, that means that this spring 65 of Idaho's 115 school districts asked their voters to raise their own property taxes to add to the school district's operating funds, and in 54 of those districts — that's 83 percent — voters said yes.
 Since the Legislature adjourned in April, Idaho patrons have approved more than $77.3 million a year in additional property taxes for their local schools, and another round of levy elections is scheduled for Aug. 30.
 That says a lot about how Idahoans value their public schools, whatever legislators do.

Political power of loyal wives

Sometimes it takes a love child to get a political wife to leave her husband and for the American public to turn on him — even as that public revels in every salacious detail.

Joan Vennoch

“Everyone who's shocked by this is reacting to the fairy-tale picture that was promoted,” a friend of Maria Shriver and former California governor Arnold Schwarzenegger told the Los Angeles Times after the couple announced their breakup, but before they revealed the reason why.
 Now the world knows the reality versus the mythology of a marriage that both worked to market. After he left office and no longer needed her public support, Schwarzenegger told Shriver that he had fathered a child with a member of their household staff. The child, reported to be a boy, is now about 14. His mother worked for the family for 20 years and was pregnant when Shriver was pregnant with her youngest child. She recently left their employ with a severance package.
 For a wife, it doesn't get more humiliating than that — but Shriver helped Schwarzenegger get a pass from voters from the outset.
 Allegations of sexual misconduct involving the bodybuilder-turned-movie-star-turned-politician have been around for years. The Los Angeles Times detailed some in October 2003, when Schwarzenegger first ran for governor.
 Six women who came into contact with him on movie sets, studio offices, and other settings told the newspaper that “he touched them in a sexual manner without their consent,” the newspaper reported then. His campaign dismissed the charges as dirty political attacks; ultimately Schwarzenegger

“It's up to a spouse to decide what to forgive and how long to keep a marriage going. But harsh as this judgment may sound, in the case of these political marriages, each wife also enabled her husband to lie to the public for a long time.”

mately Schwarzenegger apologized for “bad behavior.”
 At the time, Shriver told voters, “You can listen to all the negativity and you can listen to people who have never met Arnold, or who met him for five seconds 30 years ago. Or you can listen to me.”
 What, exactly, did she know then? Only she knows, and she is now asking for privacy.
 Her request is wishful thinking. High-profile political marriages like the one between Shriver and Schwarzenegger don't pass magically from public to private. By choice, the spouses included a universe of voters in their relationship. Both of them sold the public not only a political platform, but an image of marital love and commitment.
 When a wife vouches for her husband's trustworthiness, voters listen. Political consultants have a name for it: third-party validation, and there's no one more validating than a loving spouse. Unfortunately, when the family-friendly packaging falls apart to reveal untrustworthiness, those same voters tend to wonder who knew what when, and whether the storybook romance ever existed.

 The fact pattern in the Shriver-Schwarzenegger marriage is familiar. It's a variation on the scandal involving Democratic presidential candidate John Edwards, who fathered a daughter with Rielle Hunter, a filmmaker who worked on his campaign. After the National Enquirer first reported on the affair in 2007, his wife, the late Elizabeth Edwards, stood by Edwards and remained a cornerstone of his campaign.
 Published accounts suggest that Elizabeth Edwards knew about the affair and the baby but remained silent about it, even as Edwards went on to pitch himself as a vice presidential candidate in 2008. The couple finally announced their separation after Edwards put out a statement admitting his paternity in January 2010.

 It's up to a spouse to decide what to forgive and how long to keep a marriage going. But harsh as this judgment may sound, in the case of these political marriages, each wife also enabled her husband to lie to the public for a long time.
 A child born out of a consensual affair was the line in the sand for Shriver and Elizabeth Edwards.
 But what about the line in the sand for voters?
 A senior advisor to Gray Davis, the Democrat who lost to Schwarzenegger, told The New York Times, “There were all sorts of rumors flying around like this. Voters knew what they needed to know on this topic with Arnold Schwarzenegger and honestly they just didn't care.”
 But now, following the news about Schwarzenegger's love child, a Survey USA poll found that 52 percent of California voters said they would never vote for him again.
 For wives and voters, sometimes it takes a baby to burst the bubble.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

End slacker-state subsidies

OK. Just for the hell of it, let's go after the debt and the deficit the Republican way. No new taxes. All through cutbacks. And I'll confine my quibbles to a few parenthetical asides.

To begin, then: We're broke! We can't afford any more taxes! (Well, America's 400 wealthiest taxpayers certainly can. In 1955, according to the Campaign for America's Future, the country's 400 wealthiest taxpayers had an average income of $13.3 million (in 2008 dollars) and paid 51.2 percent of that in federal income taxes. In 2008, according to IRS calculations, they had an average income of $270.5 million and paid 18 percent of that in federal income taxes. And in 1955, by the way, we could afford to pave roads.)

Republicans' concern over the growth of government is moral as well as fiscal. To quote the House Republican "road map" that accompanied the release of Rep. Paul Ryan's budget, "Americans were known and admired everywhere for their hopeful determination to assume responsibility for the quality of their own lives; to rely on their own work and initiative. . . . But over time, Americans have been lured into viewing government . . . as their main source of support; they have been drawn toward depending on the public sector for growing shares of their material and personal well-being. The trend drains individual initiative and personal responsibility."

To remedy this, House Republicans passed a budget that chiefly increases the opportunities for initiative and responsibility available to seniors by reducing their dependence on Medicare and Medicaid (which devotes two-thirds of its funding to nursing-home care). By converting Medicare from a guarantee of payment for medical care to a voucher to purchase insurance, the Congressional Budget Office calculated, the share of medical bills that seniors would have to pay themselves would rise from 25 percent to 68 percent.

Republicans are right to aim big if they mean to reduce the deficit through cuts alone. By most measures, seniors are the major spongers on taxpayers, chiefly through their insistence on not working productively once they hit 65, 78, 92 or whatever. But for the sake of argument, suppose we don't want to put that burden on our mothers, fathers, grandparents and ourselves. Where else can we identify a comparably large group of drainers of the public till?

Happily, the Tax Foundation — a conservative Washington-based think tank — has, however unintentionally, provided the answer. In 2007, the foundation published a survey of 2005 federal spending in each state and compared that with each state's contribution in federal taxes. In other words, the foundation identified the states that sponge off the federal government and those that subsidize it. The welfare-queen states and the responsible, producing states, as it were.

The list, alas, hasn't been updated — in part, no doubt, because conservatives didn't like what it revealed: that those states that got more back from our government than they paid in were overwhelmingly Republican. The 10 biggest net recipients of taxpayers' largess were, in order, New Mexico, Mississippi, Alaska, Louisiana, West Virginia, North Dakota, Alabama, South Dakota, Kentucky and Virginia. The 10 states that paid in the most and got back the least were New Jersey, Nevada, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Minnesota, Illinois, Delaware, California, New York and Colorado.

Now, that list has surely changed since the middle of the last decade — Virginia has probably gotten richer and paid in more; Nevada has surely gotten poorer and paid in less. But today's ranking are probably much the same, unless farming and manufacturing suddenly pay more than finance and high-tech. Even allowing for cyclical variations and political transformations, it's patently clear that the states that drain the government also constitute the Republicans' electoral base, while those that produce the wealth constitute the Democrats'. Far from strengthening our moral character, the red states plunge us into the slough of dependency.

If we're really serious, then, about reducing the deficit entirely through cutbacks, the solution is clear: Cut off these slacker states. As we can't very well expect them to support legislating an end to their slothful dependence on our sugar-daddy subsidies, the only real solution is to reduce them to vassal status, strip them of their congressional and electoral college representation, and compel them to pay what they owe America's producing class. If need be — we can't just go on passing the debt to the next generation — by force.

Take taxes off the table and it's either the South (and kindred sponger states) or the seniors. I say, the South. It's time for bold choices. What don't you understand? We're broke!

Harold Meyerson is a columnist for The Washington Post.

California electoral politics get real

In one of his last significant acts as California governor, Arnold Schwarzenegger backed Proposition 14, an "open primary" initiative that California voters passed last June. California has one of the nation's most politically polarized state legislatures and congressional delegations. The open primary has the potential to alter that.

In an open primary, all candidates compete in a single preliminary contest, with the top two vote-getters, regardless of party, going on to compete in the general election. Instead of trying to consolidate their party base, candidates have an incentive to appeal to a broader group of voters, all of whom are free to cast a primary vote. In a solidly Republican district, for example, Republicans might claim first and second place in the primary, but the more moderate of the two candidates would have an advantage by appealing to Independents and Democrats in the general election, a point that might also affect primary voters' calculations.

The first of these jungle primary free-for-alls took place Tuesday in a special election to choose a successor to Rep. Jane Harman, a Democrat who retired in February from the Los Angeles seat she had held for 16 years. Democrats have an 18-point registration edge in the district, and five Democrats competed in the primary along with six Republicans, three Independents, a Libertarian and a Peace and Freedom candidate.

For some candidates, standing out in such a crowded field required unusual measures. Democrat Dan Adler, who balanced an endorsement from former Fox News firebrand Glenn Beck with one from former Disney Chief Executive Officer Michael Eisner, ran ads so peculiar they went viral. (In one, filmed at a dry cleaner, Adler establishes ethnic solidarity with the store's Korean owner on the grounds that, as a Jew, Adler is a minority — and his wife is Asian.) A recent debate looked like open-mike night: each candidate was allotted one minute to make a case on issues ranging from terrorism to sex education.

Los Angeles Councilwoman Janice Hahn and Secretary of State Debra Bowen, both moderate Democrats, led throughout the race. In a surprise, conservative Republican businessman and tea party candidate Craig Huey looks to have squeaked past Bowen into the general election, scheduled for July 12. But with almost 10,000 mail-in, provisional and damaged ballots yet to be counted in a low turnout contest, the results might change.

In the general election, Hahn will be a favorite. She was born in the proverbial smoke-filled room, the daughter of Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn and the sister of James Hahn, a former mayor of Los Angeles. She gathered the endorsements of establishment Democrats, labor unions and the Los Angeles Times.

Schwarzenegger and other moderate Republicans are hoping the new system will be a boon to the GOP, which lost all eight statewide races last year even as Republicans swept to victory across the country. To win their respective Republican primaries, gubernatorial candidate Meg Whitman and Senate candidate Carly Fiorina tacked to the right on abortion, health care, taxes and immigration. (Ronald Reagan might have serious trouble winning a Republican-only primary in the Golden State today; after all, he raised taxes.) Having moved to the right to win over conservatives, Whitman and Fiorina found they couldn't get back to the white stripe in the middle of the road. Their opponents, Democrats Jerry Brown and Barbara Boxer, were both vulnerable. Boxer won handily by 10 points, Brown by 13.

If the open primary idea spreads, it could help put a brake on the GOP's rightward lurch outside California as well. Many congressional Republicans fear that if they vote to raise the debt limit, they will earn themselves a primary challenge from the right. Even House Speaker John Boehner isn't immune to the threat.

Up in Harman's old office this week, her former chief of staff, John Hess, was overseeing the final emptying of desks, scrubbing of hard drives, and painting of walls. With Harman's tenure over, another moderate appears bound to move into her office. This time, it won't be a moderate Republican, as Schwarzenegger had envisioned when he backed open primaries. Next time, it just might be.

Netanyahu rebukes Obama's idea on '67 borders

By Steven Thomma and William Douglas
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — In a public rebuke, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu used a White House appearance with President Barack Obama on Friday to flatly reject any suggestion that Israel might even consider withdrawing from territories it seized in the 1967 Six-Day War.

“While Israel is prepared to make generous compromises for peace, it cannot go back to the 1967 lines,” Netanyahu said with Obama at his side, both seated in the Oval Office. “These lines are indefensible. ... They don’t take into account certain changes that have taken place on the ground, demographic changes that have taken place over the last 44 years,”

The president had called Thursday for new peace negotiations toward a Palestinian state to be based on Israel’s 1967 borders, supplemented with voluntary land swaps and leaving questions about Jerusalem’s status for the future. Presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush had taken essentially the same position, though with different wording.

Netanyahu said the territory added since 1967 gave Israel a better chance to defend itself, and that any retreat would forfeit defensive positions against attack.

“Remember that, before 1967, Israel was all of 9 miles wide. It was half the width of the Washington Beltway,” he said, referring to the area of Washington encircled by I-495. “These were not the boundaries of peace; they were the boundaries of repeated wars, because the attack on Israel was so attractive.”

Moreover, Netanyahu made clear that he intends not only to maintain control of at least some of the seized territory in the West Bank of the Jordan River, but he also said he’d keep Israeli military there.

“We can’t go back to those indefensible lines, and we’re going to have to have a long-term military presence along the Jordan,” he said.

Netanyahu addressed his remarks to the Palestinians. But with Obama’s talk about the 1967 borders in his speech the day before, it was clear that the prime minister was reacting to the president. Obama stared blankly at Netanyahu as the prime minister spoke.

Despite Netanyahu’s face-to-face rebuke — in the president’s office and in front of the news media — Obama aides said that the president didn’t propose that Israel simply withdraw to pre-1967 borders. They said he’d proposed only that the pre-1967 borders serve as an opening point for negotiations with the Palestinians, as long as any agreement included mutually agreed-on swaps of land.

“We believe the borders of Israel and Palestine should be based on the 1967 lines with mutually agreed swaps, so that secure and recognized borders are established for both states,” Obama said Thursday.

White House press secretary Jay Carney also said that the idea of using the pre-1967 borders — also known as the borders set in 1949 — as a starting point for negotiations wasn’t new. President Bill Clinton started from the same premise in trying to broker a peace deal in 2000.

In an April 2004 letter to then-Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, President George W. Bush suggested that the 1949-1967 borders were a starting point, but he also said that any final peace would be subject to agreements that would reflect Israel’s settlements in some of the territory seized since 1967. “It is unrealistic to expect that the outcome of final status negotiation will be a full and complete return to the armistice lines of 1949,” Bush wrote.

Vatican slams modernist sculpture of John Paul II

By Frances d'Emilio and Alba Tobella
Associated Press

ROME — A new, modernist sculpture of Pope John Paul II is turning into a monumental bust.

The Vatican on Friday slammed the giant artwork outside Rome’s Termini Train Station, saying it doesn’t even resemble the late pontiff.

Some Romans and tourists say the bronze statue looks more like Italy’s wartime dictator Benito Mussolini than the widely beloved pope.

“How could they have given such a kind pope the head of a Fascist?” said 71-year-old Antonio Lamonica.

As he pondered the statue in the bustling square, his wife muttered: “It’s ugly. Really ugly. Very ugly.”

The artist, Oliviero Rainaldi, depicted the pontiff as if he is opening his cloak to embrace the faithful. But the Vatican newspaper L’Osservatore Romano said the effect of the nearly 5-meter (16-foot) statue bears “only a distant resemblance to the pope.”

Artistic intent aside, “we find ourselves in the piazza before a violent gash, like a bomb, that ends up assimilating a cloak that almost looks like a sentry box, topped by a head of a pope which comes off too roundish,” critic Sandro Barbagallo wrote in Friday’s L’Osservatore.

“Altogether, the result doesn’t seem to reach the intent,” the newspaper said, noting that it wasn’t alone in its criticism.

Rome Mayor Gianni Alemanno, asked by APTN in an exclusive interview if the city might take down the statue, said public opinion would be considered.

“There’s an ancient saying: ‘Vox populi, vox dei,’” Alemanno said, using the Latin for “Voice of the people, voice of God.”

“And from this point of view we cannot help but take into consideration the opinion of the public,” he added. “If public opinion consolidates around a negative opinion, we’ll have to take that into consideration.”

L’Osservatore Romano acknowledged it is a modern work and called the city’s initiative to erect it “praiseworthy,” but added that “the statue’s sin” is that it is “hardly able to be recognized.”

Rainaldi, in comments reported by the newspaper La Repubblica, said he was sorry his work had been misunderstood.

“I wasn’t thinking about resemblance, but rather a work that was able to synthesize, in the posture of the head and body and in the draping of the cloak, the way the pope went out into the world,” Rainaldi was quoted as saying.

The statue, paid for by a foundation at no cost to the city of Rome, was erected a few days ago to mark what would have been John Paul’s 91st birthday on May 18.

Pope Benedict XVI beatified John Paul, the last formal step before sainthood, on May 1 at a ceremony that drew about 1.5 million admirers to Rome.

The website of the Silvana Paolini Angelucci Foundation, which is dedicated to humanitarian efforts and which donated the statue, makes no mention of the controversy. Calls to the foundation weren’t returned Friday.

The city noted that Vatican culture officials had seen a sketch of the work and approved it.

The Rev. Federico Lombardi, the Vatican’s spokesman, confirmed that the sketch “received a positive opinion by the culture commission” of the Holy See. He couldn’t say what happened between the sketch stage and the final result.

Elizabeth II ends historic trip to Ireland on a high note

By Fiona Smith
McClatchy Newspapers

CORK, Ireland — Britain’s Queen Elizabeth II concluded her historic visit to Ireland — the first by a British monarch to the Republic — with a visit to the southern city of Cork on Friday.

Thousands lined the streets of Cork to greet the queen, whose visit has been almost universally praised for its gestures of reconciliation.

With security slightly more relaxed in Cork than in Dublin, there was a carnival atmosphere on the streets when the queen went on a walkabout to greet locals after visiting the 18th-century English market.

“We are all absolutely delighted with the visit. It was a great honor for the city,” said Cork businesswoman, Claire Nash.

Tom Durcan, a butcher who trades in the English market, said he was “very excited” by the visit.

The massive security operation surrounding the visit had meant that public opportunities to see the queen were limited in Dublin.

SECTION EDITOR ANDREW WEEKS: 735-3233 AWEEEKS@MAGICVALLEY.COM

Southern Idaho's faith community is made up of a number of different religions, many which often are driven by their own ...

By Andrew Weeks ♦ Times-News writer

The United States has been called a Christian nation, and when you get to know places like south-central Idaho you see just how much of an influence religion is on its communities.

But it's not just Christianity that make up the population of the Magic Valley. The area is blessed with a variety of different faiths — Catholic, Protestant, Mormon, Islam, Hindu and others.

What is it that drives these religions? And what is it that sets them apart from others?

In large part, it is their sacred books.

Holy Bible

The word "Bible" means "book of books," and that literally is what the Holy Bible is — a book of 66 books, written over a period of about 1,600 years by at least 40 different authors.

The Bible is divided into two parts, the Old Testament, written from about 1500 B.C. to 400 B.C., contains 39 books; and the New Testament, written from about 40 A.D. to 90 A.D., contains 27 books.

To Christians, the Bible is the infallible word of God that teaches about his laws, the prophets and, the high point, the life and mission of Jesus Christ who came not to erase the Law of Moses but to bring the higher law of the gospel. Instead of an "eye for an eye" (Deuteronomy 19:21), Jesus taught that "whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also" (Matthew 5:19), to "love thy neighbor" (Matthew 19:19), and "Feed my sheep" (John 21: 16-17).

Whereas the Ten Commandments taught it is a sin to commit adultery, Jesus raised the bar by saying adultery is committed in the heart if a man or woman lust after another person who is not their spouse.

The Old Testament contains books by both "minor prophets" and "major prophets," while the New Testament contains the four gospels, epistle by the apostles, most of them from Paul, and an expansive revelation by John the Beloved that is filled with imagery, symbolism and prophecy.

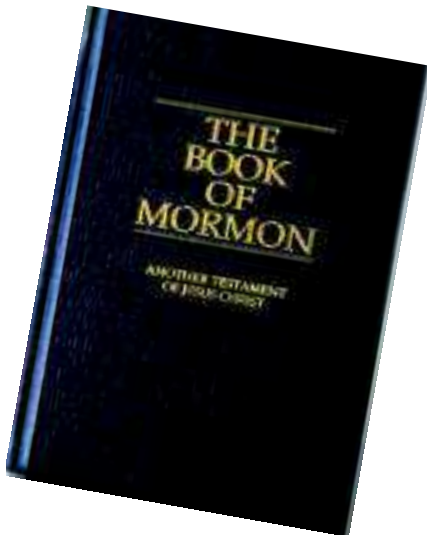

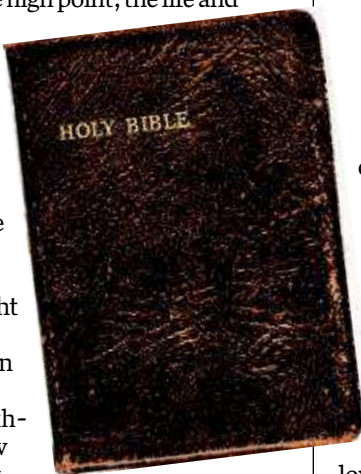

In an effort to protect the Scriptures, the 27 books of the New Testament were canonized in 397 A.D. at the Synod of Carthage.

Perhaps no other book has influenced so many people as has the Bible.

"This book had to be written by one of three people: good men, bad men or God," said John Wesley. "It couldn't have been written by good men because they said it was inspired by the revelation of God. Good men don't lie and deceive. It couldn't have been written by bad men because bad men would not write something that would condemn themselves. It leaves only one conclusion. It was given by divine inspiration of God."

And George Washington professed his belief, saying:

"It is impossible to rightly govern the world without God and Bible."

Book of Mormon

Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, commonly referred to as Mormons because of their belief in the Book of Mormon, also claim belief in the Holy Bible. The Book of Mormon is not a replacement, they say, but a companion to the Bible.

As its subtitle suggests, it claims to be "Another Testament of Jesus Christ."

The church believes the Book of Mormon was written by ancient prophets who lived on the American Continent long before Christopher Columbus arrived in the New World. Early inhabitants, the book says, arrived at about the time of the Tower of Babel; another group, the book's most popular characters, arrived in about 600 B.C.

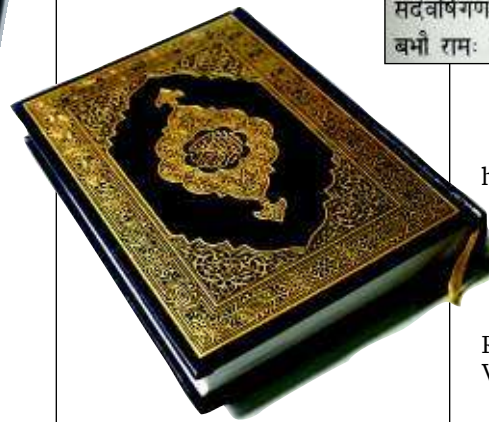

The Book of Mormon contains 15 books, written on "gold plates" that eventually were buried in the earth during a time of great conflict between querulous groups.

The pinnacle event of the Book of Mormon is when Jesus Christ appears to the inhabitants of the New World soon after his resurrection in Jerusalem, claiming that they were "they of whom I said: Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." (3 Nephi 15:21; see also John 10:16).

Church founder Joseph Smith said he was directed to the plates by an angel, and that through the "gift and power of God" he was able to translate the writings into English. The Book of Mormon was first published in New York in 1830, the same year the church was officially organized with six members.

Last month, the church announced that since the first edition, the book has been translated into 82 languages and sold more than 150 millions copies worldwide.

The Book of Mormon is one of four sacred texts used by the church, the others being the Holy Bible, the Doctrine and Covenants, and The Pearl of Great Price.

The Qu'ran

To Muslims, the Qu'ran is the holiest of the world's books. They believe the book contains divine revelations as given from Allah through the angel Jibril (Gabriel) to the Prophet Muhammad over a period of about 23 years beginning in about 610 A.D.

The revelations were recorded by Muhammad during his lifetime and later collected and standardized in about 654 A.D. Vowel pointing and punctuation were added in the seventh and eight centuries.

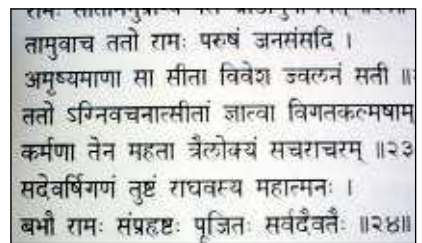

The Qu'ran is divided into 30 equal parts, called suras, 114 chapters, 6,226 verses containing 99,464 words made up of 330,113 letters, according to al-islam.org.

The same website reads, "On reading the Qur'an one is at once convinced that it is the Word of Allah, for no man can write such perfect guidance on so many subjects."

The book teaches its followers to pray to Allah for guidance concerning spiritual and temporal matters. Allah says, "I will respond to your invocations" (90.60.)

Muslims, who practice the religion of Islam, believe the book's poetic form is unique and cannot be written by humans. It is a book to be respected.

Fragments from a large number of Qur'an codices were discovered in Yemen in 1972, and are now lodged in the House of Manuscript in Sana'a.

The Vedas

When God creates worlds, he introduces the Vedas.

When he ends a world, he recalls the Vedas. That, at least, is what Hindus believe of their primary texts.

There are four Vedas: the Rig Veda, Sama Veda, Yajur Veda and Atharva Veda.

The Vedas, composed in the ancient Indo-European language called Sanskrit, contain chants, hymns, incantations, predictions, rituals and stories from ancient India. Along with the Book of the Dead, the Enuma Elish, the I Ching and the Avesta, they are among the oldest religious texts still in existence, starting in about 1500 B.C., according to sacred-texts.com.

"Besides their spiritual value, they also give a unique view of everyday life in India four thousand years ago," the website reads. "The Vedas are also the most ancient extensive texts in an Indo-European language, and as such are invaluable in the study of comparative linguistics."

Hindus regard the Vedas as having been directly revealed and "not of human agency."

"There are also many other works that are not written in Sanskrit, but which also play a major role in modern Hinduism," explains another website, Sanskrit.org. "The most common of these works is the 'Hindi Ramayana' known as the Ramcharit Manas, by Tulsi Das. It is a devotional reworking of the original Sanskrit Ramayana composed in Hindi about 500 years ago."

Besides Hinduism, the Vedas have influenced a number of other movements including Buddhism, Jainism and Sikhism.

Pope's call to astronauts to be streamed live

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican says Pope Benedict XVI's audio and video hookup today with the International Space Station will be streamed live on the Internet site of Vatican Radio and CTV, the broadcasting arms of the Holy See.

While the pontiff is expected to greet all the crew, the Vatican says he will chat in particular with the two Italian astronauts aboard, Paolo Nespoli and Roberto Vittori.

Vittori is carrying a silver medal donated by the pope. The others on the space station are Russian and American.

The hookup was originally set for May 4 after the shuttle Endeavour was due to dock with the station. But an electrical problem set back Endeavour's launch until May 16.

A continuing fight for peace

You probably don't know Wayne, but you might be lucky enough to know someone just like him: friendly, good-natured, easy to talk to, pleasant to be around.

He was even smiling when I bumped into him the other day. I commented on his heavily bandaged arm. When I asked what had happened, his ever-present smile turned a bit uncomfortable.

"I — uh — you know — kinda hurt it in a — you know — a fight," he said.

Now, Wayne is a strong, husky man, and I'm sure he could give a fine accounting of himself in fisticuffs. But his disposition is kind and gentle, and his manner is mild. Trying to picture him fighting is a little like trying to picture David Letterman conducting nuclear arms negotiations. So of course I thought he was joking.

"Yeah, right," I said, laughing. "So really, how did you get hurt?"

"Really," Wayne insisted.

VALUE SPEAK

Joseph Walker

"I got hurt in a fight." He paused for a moment, then added: "Well, OK — it wasn't much of a fight. But this guy came at me with a tire iron, and I had to ..."

"A TIRE IRON —" I interrupted. "That isn't a fight — that's an assault! Why would someone want to come after you like that?"

"The thing is," Wayne said, "I'm not really sure what I did. I was driving home after working late. Suddenly, there was this car behind me flashing its lights. I pulled over to let him pass, but he pulled in behind me. I stopped and got out and this guy jumps out of his car and starts running toward me, waving this tire iron, yelling about how I cut him off or something."

Wayne paused, and looked around thoughtfully. "I don't know," he said. "Maybe I did cut him off. I honestly don't remember. I know I didn't do it intentionally."

"Did you tell him that?" I asked.

"Yeah," he said. "And I told him that if I did cut him off, I was sorry."

"And what did he say to that?"

"Nothing," Wayne said, shrugging. "He just swore at me and started swinging that tire iron."

"So what did you do?"

"I just — sort of — reacted," Wayne said. "I reached into my truck and grabbed a wrench that I had in there. I took one swing at the guy ... and I connected. Solid. Laid him right out. They had to take him away in an ambulance."

Some of us would have rejoiced in this clear victory of good over evil. But not Wayne. He shook his head sadly. "Maybe I did cut him off — I don't know," he said. "But this guy wanted to kill me." Wayne hesitated, then added: "I don't get it. Why did he want to kill me?"

It's a good question, for which there are no easy answers. We live in troubled times, when violence is viewed as an increasingly acceptable problem-solving option. It's a day when peaceable men like Wayne find themselves with blood on their hands, not because they choose to fight but because they have no choice but to fight.

As nearly as I can tell, people have had violent impulses ever since there have been people. Civilized societies have learned how to manage those urges, but for some reason our society is having a hard time staying civilized. Now more than ever, we need to teach peace to our children, and create safe, peaceful harbors in our homes. If our children learn to cherish peace as a virtue, perhaps their generation can make a difference by working for peace.

Idaho jobless rate drops for first time in four years

By Nick Coltraine
Times-News writer

Idaho's job climate appears to be getting better, according to state Department of Labor statistics, although an uptick in employment hasn't quite carried over to the Magic Valley.

adjusted unemployment rate dropped for the first time in more than four years, with more than 3,000 finding work in April, according to a report released Friday. The state rate dropped from a record 9.7 percent to 9.6 percent. But in south-central Idaho, fluctuating labor force numbers illustrate a more complicated picture. The Twin Falls micropolitan area, which includes Jerome and surrounding areas, saw an estimated 242 workers drop out of its labor force between March and April of this year. Its unemployment rate also dropped about a tenth of a percent, to 8.6. In the Burley micropolitan area, which includes Rupert, Heyburn and other communities, while 156 people joined the labor force, unemployment rose by about two-tenths of a percent to 7.8 percent.

“(In Twin Falls,) We have quite a number of exhausted — meaning they have exhausted all their benefits and stuff like that — workers who, when they get off that, find there still isn't anything out there for them,” Department of Labor Regional Economist Jan Roeser said. “They just kind of give up.” Conversely, the growing labor pool in Burley may be more of a result of increased optimism and growth. Residents see news reports of growing job stability and an improving economy and so they jump into the labor pool — something that should be happening in this economy, Department of Labor spokesman Bob Fick said. “Everyone is out there trying to get jobs faster than the economy can create them, even though things are improving,” he said. But the slight down-tick in statewide unemployment, and the improving economies in metropolitan areas like Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, will likely trickle down to the Magic Valley and its export-oriented industries, Fick said. Roeser said she is seeing more positive signs also: people are starting to retire instead work into their twilight years, more folks are investing and some are even starting small businesses. “Just some pretty strong, positive things are starting to show up,” Roeser said. “We are making our way out of the abyss, slowly but surely.”

Summer camp gets serious

By Diane Mastrulli
The Philadelphia Inquirer

PHILADELPHIA — Let's be honest about summer camp — it's no picnic. Well, maybe there's a picnic at some camps. The ones that are still in the woods, by a lake, where the focus is on swimming and communing with nature. But overall, summer camp has evolved into something decidedly less recreational. It's more like (ugh!) a classroom experience, where college and career preparation are the emphasis, not learning the breaststroke. Some camps have had to resort to recruiting abroad to keep enrollment up, due, in part, to still-rough economic times. Costs for insurance and other operating essentials keep climbing. So do the demands of parents, who want the most for their dollars- and their ambitious offspring. Or is it the parents who are ambitious? No matter. Though it all sounds as appealing as a tarantula to an arachnophobe, Justin Lavner sees operating a summer camp as a small-business opportunity he hopes to build into a big one. “I've always been a high achiever,” said the 29-year-old owner of Lavner Camps & Programs of Bala Cynwyd, Pa., who barely looks older than a high school student but has the business confidence of a Trump. Raised by a lawyer father and an educator mother, Lavner claims he was “born an entrepreneur.” Lavner completed his law degree in 2009. By then, he had held his first summer camp, offering only tennis, followed by a similar program in summer 2009, when he relocated the camp to the Cynwyd Club to be more centrally located to his students. One of his 9-year-old players would inspire him to branch out into nonathletic day-camp offerings. Lavner said he had asked the girl whether she would return the following week for more lessons. “She said, ‘No, I'm going to cooking

Pabst's shift to LA could hurt Midwest appeal

By Julie Wernau
Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — Pabst Blue Ribbon: the breakfast of Chicago hipsters. Old Style: beer of the Chicago Cubs. Schlitz: “The beer that made Milwaukee famous.” In Los Angeles? It would be difficult to find a more quintessentially Midwestern pack of brews than those owned by Woodridge, Ill.-based Pabst Brewing Co., whose announcement last week that it would move its headquarters to LA took state officials and branding experts by surprise.

“I do kind of want to grab these guys by the ears and say, ‘Hey, do you not know what this (group of beers) is?’ This is a Midwest portfolio of beers, and it makes no sense to plop them in, of all places, LA,” said Kelly O’Keefe, professor of brand strategy at the Virginia Commonwealth University Brandcenter. A lot has changed since food industry magnate C. Dean Metropoulos bought the company in June and granted control to his Los Angeles-based sons Daren and Evan Metropoulos. The change in power resulted in the departures of its CEO and other executives. In an interview with Bloomberg Television last month, the Metropoulos brothers, the youngest of whom lives in Hugh Hefner’s former LA mansion, touted a new turn for the company that would include a star-studded cast of

Health insurers must soon justify large premium increases

By Duke Helfand
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Health insurers will be required to justify annual premium increases of 10 percent or more to state regulators starting in September under a new rule issued by the Obama administration. Federal officials, pointing out that the average cost of health insurance has more than doubled over the last decade, said the effort would help states curb unreasonable rate proposals for millions of individual insurance buyers and small businesses. The new rule will allow regulators to review rate increases but does not give them authority to reject those found to be unreasonable.

able. It also requires insurers to explain the reasons for increases of 10 percent or more to the public and to post the justifications on the Internet. Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius predicted that public pressure from the review process will keep insurance costs in line. “We know that increased scrutiny works,” Sebelius said in a conference call Thursday with reporters. “Each time a state acts to reduce unreasonable or unjustified premium increases, consumers benefit.” Most consumer groups applauded the new rule. But the insurance industry’s trade association, which had opposed it, called the 10 percent directive an “arbitrary threshold.” The trade group, America’s Health Insurance Plans, said any

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 93.28 points, or 0.7 percent, to 12,512.04. The Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 10.33, or 0.8 percent, to 1,333.27. The Nasdaq composite dropped 19.99, or 0.7 percent, to 2,803.32. Each market index fell by more than 0.3 percent for the week. The Nasdaq lost the most, 0.9 percent. One exception to the retailer gloom was Barnes & Noble Inc. The bookseller jumped 30 percent after announcing late Thursday that Liberty Media Corp. had offered to buy the company for $1 billion in cash.

Stock indexes have been staying within a relatively small range since a May 4 plunge triggered by a sharp drop in oil prices. The Dow fell more than 200 points in two days. After several weeks of waffling, the index is trading slightly above where it was after that two-day fall.

Other notable stats:

- Owyhee County saw a two-fifths percent uptick in unemployment, to 6 percent, and lost its grasp on the lowest unemployment rate among Idaho counties. But it also saw an estimated 28 people join the labor force. New No. 1 Oneida County saw nine people join the labor force and its unemployment rate shrink to 5.3 percent.

- Lincoln County continues to have one of the highest unemployment rates in the state, with 14 percent of its population looking for work. This was a .6 percent increase over March.

Branding experts say such tactics could backfire.

The flagship brand, Pabst Blue Ribbon, or PBR, has a cult following of young, hip urbanites who say they enjoy the beer because it is unsexy, unpretentious and blue-collarMidwest.

“I like PBR because it doesn’t taste like beer,” said Brenna Ehrlich, 26, co-author of the blog “Stuff Hipsters Hate” and a book by the same name. “It tastes like water. Dirty water.”

Hipsters, she said, are “people who define who they are by who they aren’t,” and they wouldn’t drink PBR if it “looked like Urban Outfitters,” she said. “PBR is like the nectar of the hipster gods.”

The company hasn’t done a lot of advertising in recent years, O’Keefe said, because it hasn’t needed to. And with such a band of cult followers, advertising could have the opposite effect as intended.

“It’s a brand people like to feel they’ve discovered. If it’s countercultural, you don’t want to make it cultural.”

– Kelly O’Keefe, professor of brand strategy at the Virginia Commonwealth University Brandcenter

“It’s a brand people like to feel they’ve discovered,” he said. “If it’s countercultural, you don’t want to make it cultural.”

As long as Pabst’s new management doesn’t attempt to become trendy or change the look of the product, he said, they should survive a move to Los Angeles, but the city wouldn’t be his first choice.

“I picture movie stars and sunglasses and people in not-too-much clothing. It’s sort of the opposite of blue collar,” he said.

At The Boiler Room in Chicago’s Logan Square neighborhood, general manager Andy Gould, 27, said brands like Old Style, Schlitz and PBR run in the veins of patrons in a way that can’t be matched.

The cash-only bar and pizza restaurant runs a popular $7.50 special called PB&J (pizza, beer and Jameson) that comes with a tall can of PBR. Locals call it the hipster special.

Hipsters weren’t the only ones disappointed by Pabst’s announced departure.

Pabst’s move to Woodridge from San Antonio in 2006 was backed by $1 million in state tax incentives and training funds. In exchange, the company pledged to create 31 full-time jobs within two years and make an investment of $2.4 million in its facilities.

The company started receiving the tax credits in 2008, state documents show. The agreement required the company to remain in Illinois and retain those jobs for 10 years.

Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity spokeswoman Marcelyn Love said the state could go after the company for those taxes.

“It is unfortunate that Pabst chose to make this decision without consulting with the state,” she said.

A Pabst spokesman said the company’s owners would not provide interviews for this report.

camp,” he recalled. “I said, ‘Next summer, you’ll come to my cooking camp.’”

He spent fall 2009 researching culinary camps, including asking his mother and grandmothers for recipes that would not be too complex for kids. He hired a sous chef from Philadelphia restaurant Le Bec-Fin to do the teaching, and put his brother, Michael, in charge

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I will be attending a milestone birthday party for a friend of his. The fiancée of the birthday guy stated on the invitation, "There will be a surprise during the evening." It has been suggested that a stripper "may" be the surprise.

Abby, I realize this might be OK for some people and it's just for fun, but I'd be uncomfortable if this happens. My boyfriend knows my feelings, but I don't know if we would risk being ridiculed if we left the party. What should I do if I find myself in this situation?

— HATE TO BE A PARTY-POOPER
DEAR "PARTY-POOPER": Contact the birthday guy's fiancée and ask if what you heard is true. If it is, spare yourself the embarrassment and have your boyfriend attend the party without you.

DEAR ABBY: When someone has a serious illness or major surgery, everyone thinks to bring food, which is lovely. But I have a better idea.

When my friend, who has a young family, was diagnosed with breast cancer, I offered to do her laundry. Her recovery was slow, and the chemo and radiation therapies endless. Three years later, we're nearing the end of a short and brave life, and I still do their laundry every week. It has been a help to her, and I have grown closer to her and her family. When she's gone, I will never again do a load of wash without thinking of her.

Perhaps your readers can help another family this way.

— THE LAUNDRY FAIRY
ROCHESTER, MINN.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR LAUNDRY FAIRY: The support you have given to that family extends far beyond doing laundry. Your presence over the long haul has, I'm sure, meant much more.

Read on for a view from the perspective of a caregiver:

DEAR ABBY: My wife has dementia. Our children don't live close by, so I'm her only caregiver. One afternoon a week I hire someone to stay with her so I can grocery shop, do banking and run necessary errands. Neighbors and friends over the years have offered the standard, "If I can do anything to help, let me know," but I'm not the type to call and ask, although it would be wonderful to have more hours to myself to do things in a leisurely manner rather than like running a marathon.

I know people are busy, but it would be great if some of those who offered help would call occasionally, tell me they have an afternoon or evening free (or even an hour or two) and give me a little breathing room.

I don't begrudge one moment of the time I have spent caring for my wife. She has, for 50 years, been a marvelous wife, a wonderful mother and the center of our family. Whatever I do for her can never repay the comfort, strength and joy she has brought into my life. But I cried (privately) on Christmas Day after the family had finished our gift exchange, because I had no time to go and buy her a gift.

Please advise your readers that if the offer of help they extend is real, to please check their schedules, find some time they are willing to give, CALL that friend, neighbor or relative and offer to sit with their loved one. That thoughtful gesture will be appreciated beyond what they could possibly ever imagine.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Necessity has no law."
— Saint Augustine

Sometimes one has to project the complete distribution and work out that bad splits can be more productive than a favorable break. That is especially true of deals like this one, though the underlying idea may be rather hard to spot.

After fairly aggressive bidding by North, Augustin Santamaria of Argentina reached a delicate four-spade contract, made even more challenging because the auction had indicated the danger of bad splits. On the lead of the club jack, Santamaria took dummy's ace and played a low diamond. East won his ace, cashed the club queen, and exited with a diamond.

At this point Santamaria was in a very awkward position. He could see that if trumps were 2-2, then unless West specifically had the doubleton J-10 of trumps, the defenders could promote a trump winner for themselves by leading a third round of clubs after taking the trump ace. Therefore, when declarer led the spade seven from hand and West followed with a small trump, declarer went for his only legitimate chance to make the hand by ducking in dummy! When East produced the spade ace, there was no longer any chance for the defense to produce a second trump trick. Thus the contract made, yielding a 12-IMP pickup for Argentina on the way to an upset victory in a match from the 1986 Rosenblum Cup.

(Even if East had played a third club instead of a second diamond, declarer would have succeeded if he was able to read the position.)

ANSWER: The obvious answer is to reverse with a call of two spades, showing this major-suit pattern and extra values. A viable and to my mind preferable alternative is to ignore the spades (partner won't have length there, after all) and simply to invite game with a call of two no-trump, suggesting a good 17-19 points.

TWIN FALLS</

IF MAY 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Between now and the end of June, extra exercise or sports can help you burn off excess energy and make you healthier. You need to be in good health while Neptune sends energy your way this year because this could make you overly sensitive to outside influences. You might retreat from confrontations, as well as from loud and noisy places. In July, the cosmic weather improves in some ways, so a vacation would fit your bill and you can succeed at anything that requires imagination and inspiration. During the month of August, put key plans into motion and they will fulfill their promise or hook up with other people for wise, beneficial advice or hearty support. Not only is your business expertise flourishing in October, but you may have added opportunities through your social connections.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Wait for your turn in line. When something tweaks your passions, you tend to want it right now. However, your insistence on instant gratification could prove costly because you are more gullible than usual.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you lose your sense of purpose, you can find it through a friend. Your favorite special someone might be able to fire up your enthusiasm or a trusted advisor can point you in the right direction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are likely to run into trouble if you walk around wearing a blindfold. You might experience a temporary blind spot that prevents you from seeing someone's hidden agenda or lack of honesty.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Love might be a many-splendored thing, but it seldom foots the bill. The desire for romance just so you aren't alone or to invest in something that fulfills your fantasies might not pay off in dollars and sense.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Doubts deter you from your destiny. You might be swimming in a sea of insecurity. This is not a good time for key decisions or to enter into commitments. Technology and new age ideals solve problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could be suckered in by the scintillating surface. It is easy to be taken in by appearances. You should be old enough and smart enough to know what they say about something being too good to be true.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Reality isn't always rewarding. You might let folks think you are better or more talented than you really are to win them over. Take a new relationship slowly until you know exactly where you stand.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Making a promise may not make sense. Your heart is in the right place and you are passionate about your feelings, but this is not a good time to pledge future income or to sign a pay as-you-go contract.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Test out a new attitude. It isn't wise to lock in anything new permanently today, but you can experiment with a temporary look. For example, dye your hair blue with something that rinses out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Love and lust both begin with "L." You might fall head-over-heels in love or a new acquaintance might make you aware of an infatuation. Wait until the dust settles to be sure this is a real thing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): People may misunderstand your intentions if you are vague and indecisive. Retreating into a world of the imagination won't help you sustain key relationships. Don't hold important powwows.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your heart can play tricks on you. If your heartstrings are plucked, take some time out to reconsider. Don't waste your valuable time or money on a pastime or a person that can't prove their worth.

Bruins breeze into title game

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BOISE — Two down, one to go.
The Twin Falls baseball team slaughtered Lakeland 21-6 in five innings Friday to advance to today's Class 4A state championship game at Bishop Kelly High School.
Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir said his team has used a one-game-at-a-time mentality with a sharp focus to "win every inning." Now the Bruins (22-5) are seven innings away from reaching their ultimate goal. They will face Kuna (21-5) — which defeated Bonneville 11-3 in the other semifinal — in the 4 p.m. title game.

It's Twin Falls' first state championship game appearance since 2005 when the Bruins competed in Class 5A.
"I've never been on a team that's this close with each other," said Twin Falls senior Cody McBride. "After (Bishop Kelly) beat us out of the semifinals last year and (American) Legion, getting beat by one in the state championship, it feels like it's our turn to do something special."

Tigers go the distance, win girls 4A track title

By John Derr

BOISE — Elmer Musgrave's fishing days in Oregon will begin with a smile on his face.

The Tigers tallied 96 points, many of those coming from the distance races. Bishop Kelly (81 points) was second, followed by Twin Falls (68 points). Canyon Ridge tallied 27 points while Minico had 26.

Jerome didn't claim the title by piling up gold medals — only Mackenzie Chojnacky in the 1,600 meters finished first — but by tallying the plus points, as Musgrave calls them.

In essence, Jerome exceeded expectations all night.

Bruins' Harris wins 800 and 1,600

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

BOISE — Erik Harris desperately wanted redemption for the chance he missed Thursday night. On Friday, he got it.
Twice.
Harris cruised to a successful defense of his Class 4A boys 800-meter championship hours before leading Wood River's James Paris across the line in a 1-2 finish in the 1,600 meters, with Harris taking his second title in as many races.
All that to make up for what the Twin Falls junior called a disappointing performance the day before, when he finished fourth in the 3,200 meters.
"I did what I could, considering the circumstances," he said referring to Thursday's disappointment. "I really wanted redemption. I've learned a lot mentally from this meet. Last year I won the 8 and settled for second in the 16, but I've learned to turn around from that wanting to win the last one."

Harris surged past Paris in the final 100 meters after the Wood River senior kicked first on the mile's final lap. With plenty of energy from a slower-tempo 800 race, Harris waited Paris out and blew past him with about 70 meters to go.
"I thought it was a little early to go into the all-out sprint, so I just let him go and tried to keep a close distance," said. "I felt pretty fresh and in that last 100 I wanted to leave it all out there."

MVS racer Woll sees Victory Lane, ready to fight off predators

Kendel Woll has been the only Project Filter Street Stocks driver to get to Victory Lane this season. Tonight's double main events will test his true grit in the series' competition at Magic Valley

LINDA BRITTSAN/
Times-News

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Kendel Woll knows exactly who is responsible for getting him into racing.
"I blame it all on John Newell," he said, referring to his friend and now competitor. "At least my wife does anyway. I just saw a backup car he was working on and I mentioned I'd like to try (racing), and he said, 'Well, then do it.'"
Just like that, another driver in the Street Stocks division at Magic Valley Speedway was born. But it didn't take long for Woll, a 20-year veteran of the U.S. Coast Guard, to evolve into a true contender.

"Being the kind of person I am, if I was going to do this I wanted to be competitive. I started fixing (Newell's) secondary car. I put a little time and money into it and got it semi-competitive," Woll said. "Then I decided I needed to buy my own car so I bought the Nova that I am driving now. I knew nothing about all this when I first started out, but I had a lot of good support along the way. Two years later I am still at it. I have the car pretty much figured out now."

That much is certain.

Kimberly baseball falls to Fruitland

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

ONTARIO, Ore. — It was going to take the perfect game from Kimberly to beat powerhouse Fruitland Friday night.
The Bulldogs didn't get it.
Fruitland, the 2008 and 2009 state champion, flexed its power and overwhelmed Kimberly 11-2. The Grizzlies will play Payette today for a shot at their third title in four years, while Kimberly is relegated to today's 1 p.m. third-place game against Bonners Ferry.
"Obviously we're disappointed. We were out here practicing without coaches since October," said Kimberly second baseman Jordan Gentry. "Five or six of us have never stopped throwing, preparing for this, so when you lose, it sucks. But we put ourselves in a position to take a trophy home and (someday) win a state title. It just didn't happen today."
Like in its win over Snake River in the first round, Kimberly (20-4) jumped out early, only this time it couldn't keep the opponent down all game.
Seth Morris led off the game with a double and Ridge Lee and James Higginbotham smacked RBI doubles to give the Bulldogs a 2-0 lead, which they held until the fourth inning.
In the top of the fourth, Joe Mortarano and Matt Erskine hit RBI singles for the Grizzlies (23-1) and another run scored on a sacrifice fly.
The knockout punch came courtesy a towering home run over the centerfield wall 386 feet deep by Ryan Wright in the sixth inning to put Fruitland up 7-2.
Kimberly meanwhile, didn't manage another hit after the first inning and drew only a walk and a hit batsmen the rest of the game.
"A lot like last game, we came out aggressive with full of energy, but then we just stopped hitting," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers. "Credit goes to Fruitland though. (Daulton Blackwell) pitched a heck of a game. He was the best we've faced all season."
Blackwell had five strikeouts and at one point retired 12 straight batters. Kimberly pitcher Seth Champlin was knocked out of

Kimberly softball loses to Fruitland in 3A semis, 6-5

POCATELLO — The third time was the charm for Fruitland. After being beaten in the championship round the past two years by Kimberly, the Grizzlies got a measure of revenge with a 6-5 win in the Class 3A state softball semifinals at Ward Park.

A four-run fourth inning was the difference, turning a 2-1 Kimberly lead into a 5-2 Fruitland cushion. Kimberly rallied and had the winning run at the plate, but couldn't get the big hit and saw its dream of a third consecutive title end.

"I thought it was a great game," said Kimberly coach

Rich Bishop. "Two teams battling it out with a lot on the line. But what really hurt us was missed opportunities and in a one-run game against a team with the kind of hitters they have, it's going to cost you."

Kimberly had runners on first and second with nobody out in the third inning, had a runner on third with two outs in the fourth and had a runner on second with no outs in the fifth and couldn't get anybody home against Fruitland pitcher Ambrea Cuellar.

A two-run home run by Kimberly's Jensen Upton got the Bulldogs within 6-4 in the sixth. In the seventh inning, back to back errors by Fruitland second baseman Rhyli Rayo let Kimberly close to 6-5 with the tying run on second. But Nellie Makings grounded one to Rayo who threw to first to finish the game as the Grizzlies and their fans exploded as if they had just won the seventh game of the World Series.

Whitney Carlton blasted a two-run home run in the opening inning to stake Makings to a 2-1 lead. Makings, however, was in trouble most of the game, only retiring Fruitland in order twice.

While Makings pitched Kimberly to a 12-2 opening-round win over Snake River earlier Friday, Bishop said fatigue wasn't a factor for the senior pitcher.

"She usually gets stronger as the game goes on," said Bishop. "Give (Fruitland) credit. She left some pitches up and they hit them."

Kimberly plays Timberlake for third place at 11 a.m. today. Fruitland faces Homedale for the title at 1 p.m.

In the win over Snake River, Carlton went 4-for-4 with three RBIs. Makings went 2-for-3 with three RBIs.

Indians jump out to commanding lead

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

ONTARIO, Ore. — Buhl's seniors walked away from a players-only meeting following the Indians' loss in the first round of the Class 3A state baseball tournament Thursday with one message: Have fun.

Remembering that message and with a return to executing the basics, Buhl beat South Fremont 13-2 in five innings Friday to advance to today's consolation final.

"There was a lot of pressure on us yesterday and we played tight and didn't have fun, so today we wanted to loosen up and throw it, hit it and field it and just play ball and have fun," said senior Marks Lively.

Of course, it's easier to smile when you jump out to 7-0 lead.

STEPHEN MEYERS/Times-News
Buhl infielder Kyle Van Patten (22) greets shortstop Matt Hamilton after he scored in the Indians' 13-2 win over South Fremont Friday in the consolation round of the Class 3A state baseball tournament in Ontario, Ore.

The Indians scored five runs in the first inning as Lively hit an RBI single to drive home Matt Hamilton, Brody McClain hit a three-run double and Tyler Hansen hit a bloop single just over the head of starting pitcher Rayce Speth to score McClain.

Buhl starter Hunter Littlefair was effectively wild, walking six, but allowed only four hits. He worked his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the bottom of the first inning by inducing a 6-4-3 double play.

Hansen also hit a two-run triple in the fourth inning and McClain hit his second double in the fifth to score two runs and put the Indians up 13-1.

Buhl coach Brady Swallow played 10 seniors, opening the game with an all-senior lineup.

"We wanted to give that opportunity to the seniors. The kids were really upset about the game yesterday and didn't want to let the seniors go out that way," Swallow said. "We played much better today. Everyone stepped up and did what they needed to do."

The Indians will play Snake River for the fourth-place trophy at 10 a.m. today.

"A lot of people didn't think we'd be here, much less playing on Saturday. Now we have the chance to bring home some hardware," Lively said.

Spartans go two-and-out at state

For first time in 7 years, Minico returns without a trophy

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BOISE — For the first time in seven years, Minico returns home from the state baseball tournament without a trophy.

The Spartans (19-8) had plenty of offense, but struggled to find consistent pitching in a 13-11 loss to Pocatello in the Class 4A consolation round Friday at Bishop Kelly High School.

Minico's eight seniors hoped to go out in style, but instead their high school careers end with a two-and-out showing in the state tournament.

"We came here expecting to be state champs, and not even placing is disappointing," said Minico senior Slade Winnmill. "We had everything to be a great team and to win it all, but it just wasn't our year."

Casey Christiansen went 3-for-5 with two RBIs, including a home run in the final at-bat of his stellar high school career.

Not to be outdone, K.J. Redder went 3-for-4 with four RBIs, including a pair of home runs in his final two high school at-bats.

"It's sad that we're done, but I know that our team did really good and we came out and did our best," Redder said. "I'm not leaving with any regrets."

Pocatello (11-10) scored nine runs in the second inning, punctuated by sophomore Bodie Cooper's grand slam.

After trailing 9-4, Minico closed the gap to 10-9 in the sixth with an RBI double by Christiansen, a three-run homer by Redder and Winnmill scoring on a wild pitch. But the Indians tacked on three insurance runs in the top of the seventh and, despite back-to-back solo homers by Christiansen and Redder, Minico's final rally fell short.

"The thing that is frustrating for me, in the nine years I've been here I haven't had a senior group work as hard as this group. It's frustrating when you see the guys put in the time and effort and they're working toward a goal, and then we just don't play well at the tournament," said Minico coach Ben Frank. "With the amount of effort they put in, this group deserved to have a good state run."

Although seniors Winnmill, Redder, Christiansen, Dakota Rupard, Jeremy Castaneda, Suede Denker, Nate Hanks and Zac Delado have played their last high school game, Frank is confident the baseball factory at Minico will continue to march forward.

In fact, that the last time the Spartans didn't earn state hardware, 2004, they bounced back the next year and won a state championship.

"We'll get better in the summer and we'll be back," Frank said.

Glenns Ferry baseball falls in 2A semifinals

Times-News

Miscues and missed opportunities doomed Glenns Ferry on Friday night.

The Pilots saw their championship dreams end with a 12-1 loss to New Plymouth in the Class 2A state baseball tournament in Ontario, Ore.

The Pilots committed five errors and had a couple balks to aid New Plymouth's cause. "We shot ourselves in the foot," said Glenns Ferry coach Denis Uhl.

Glenns Ferry also loaded the bases in the fifth inning but came away empty.

"We just couldn't get anybody in. That really killed us," said Uhl.

The Pilots got a home run from Michael Willis in the fourth inning for their lone run.

New Plymouth's Jake Mettenthin got the win on the mound, limiting Glenns Ferry to five hits.

The Pilots face Grangeville at 1 p.m. today for third place.

Jerome, TFHS softball squads to play for 3rd place

Times-News

Jerome and Twin Falls will square off today in the Class 4A state softball tournament — but not in the game they'd hoped for.

The Tigers and Bruins won their state openers Friday, but both fell in the semifinals, relegating them to play for third place at noon (MDT) today.

"We're going to be excited to play them," said Jerome coach Adam Reynolds, whose team is 5-0 against Twin Falls this season.

"Hopefully we get them when it counts," said Twin Falls coach Leslie Phillips. "They're a good team and we've seen them enough now and we know what to expect. We'll see how much girls want third place."

Jerome (18-8) beat Hillcrest 5-1 in the first round, getting an inside-the-park home run from Crystal Luna and steady pitching from Colby Argyle.

The Tigers committed six errors in falling 6-1 to Emmett in the semifinals. While that loss led to some sad faces, Reynolds pointed out that his squad doesn't start a single senior and should be poised for a huge 2012 campaign.

Twin Falls (17-11) scored eight runs in the seventh inning to beat Skyview 8-4 in its opener. Megan Hinojos and Rainey Dyerson hit two-run homers in the inning, while Liz Tolbert added a two-RBI double.

"That was an amazing game," said Phillips.

The Bruins fell 2-0 to Columbia in the semifinals, getting a solid outing from Dyerson (seven strikeouts, five walks) in a pitching duel.

Class 2A

DECLO REACHES CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

Declo softball coach Kari Osterhout summed up her team's day with two words: "We're ecstatic."

Rightly so. The Hornets advanced to today's Class 2A state championship with a 12-8 win over Orofino Friday night. Declo beat Melba 5-4 in Friday's first round.

Declo's solid group of four-year seniors led Osterhout to proclaim, "It's our year," ahead of today's 2 p.m. (MDT) title game against Marsing.

Brinlee Breshears pitched both of Friday's wins. Against Orofino, Melissa Carson had two triples and a double. Declo exploded for seven runs in the sixth inning to take control. Five of the Hornets' 13 hits in the win went for extra bases.

Jessica Duke and Breshears also earned praise for impressive diving catches.

Said Osterhout: "It's just been an outstanding experience so far."

Hunt, Wilander reach 4A tennis semifinals

Times-News

It could be an all-District IV boys singles final at the Class 4A state tennis tournament in Boise.

Twin Falls sophomore Dallas Hunt and Wood River's Karl Wilander reached today's semifinals. If they win there, they'll face off in a rematch of their district title match, where Wilander won a thrilling affair 7-5, 7-6 (8).

Hunt reached the semis with a 6-2, 6-0 win over Sandpoint's Kevin Kirby, while Wilander won his quarterfinal match 6-1, 6-1 over Moscow's Hunter Levy. Hunt faces Century's Josh Goodwin in the semifinals, while Wilander squares off with Hillcrest's Brody Wright.

Wood River's boys doubles team of Josh Morell and Charlie Grabow also reached the semifinals. They won their quarterfinal match 6-4, 7-5.

Twin Falls' Jeff Ward and Mike Zitterkopf are still alive in the consolation bracket after a 6-0, 6-1 win on Friday afternoon. Teammates Natalie White and Kayla Ash staved off elimination Friday with a 7-5, 6-3 win in girls doubles and could still take home third place.

In mixed doubles, Wood River's Raleigh Grossbaum and Jessica Hamilton are in the semifinals after a 6-1, 6-1 quarterfinal win over Madison. Burley's Alex Greener and Makena Haynie are in contention for third place.

No District IV players remain alive in the girls singles bracket.

KANELITSAS REACHES SEMIFINALS

Community School's Tim

Kanellitsas was the only District IV participant still in the championship hunt after the opening day of the Class 3A state tennis tournament in Caldwell.

Kanellitsas beat Payette's Leo Brito 6-4, 6-0 to reach today's championship semifinals. He'll face Fruitland's Bryce Nattress for the right to reach the title match.

Community School's Zach Lindahl is still alive in the consolation bracket today. Other area players who could still place in the consolation bracket include Community School's Chloe Chrysikopolous (girls singles), Colin Waycott and Gray Reidinger (boys doubles), and Reed Roudabush and Chloe Francois (mixed doubles). The Community School sits fourth in the boys team standing and third on the girls side.

Gooding's Rico Mendez and Angel Garcia can still earn third place in boys doubles, while teammates Rachel Griese and Celene Nino were eliminated with two losses in girls doubles.

Golden girl: Kimberly's Keller claims fourth straight triple-jump title

By Dave Bashore
Times-News writer

BOISE — As a freshman Kaitlin Keller left it until the end to claim the Class 3A state title. As a senior, she made sure she didn't have to wait long.

The Kimberly triple jumper posted a mark of 36 feet, 3 inches on her second try Friday. She bettered it by three inches in the finals, but no one else came close as Keller capped her high school career the way it started — the way it went from beginning to end, actually.

"I'm just really excited. I came into high school athletics wanting to do something special, and this doesn't happen very often," said Keller, believed to be Kimberly's first four-time champion in the same event. "I've had the right coaches to keep me going and build me into someone who's been a lot more consistent, so I don't have to rely on one big try at the end."

The Idaho State-bound Keller wasn't the only District IV athlete to claim triple jump gold at the state championships at Bronco Stadium, nor was she the only Kimberly athlete to finish first.

Teammate Wesley Kelly played possum with the 3A boys two-mile field for most of the race, lingering in the back of the pack until the midway point. From there he threw on the accelerator and crossed the line in 10 minutes even, bettering his career best by 20 seconds.

"It was the same way I ran at districts, so I knew I could do it," said Kelly. "I started my kick with about 600 (meters) to go. I wanted to make sure I didn't have anything left in the tank when I was done."

In his first full season of triple jumping, Buhl's David Murdoch won the 3A boys title with a jump of 42-3. It was his second jump of the day, and after he heard the measurement he clapped fiercely and pumped his fist.

"I knew it was a good one," said Murdoch, who struggled with triple jumping last season and eventually gave up on it to help Buhl earn more team points in other events. "Last year I was only jumping 38s and the other guys were going 42, 43 (feet). I just worked on my form and kept practicing. It just came to me, I guess."

Buhl's Whitney Amoth claimed gold in both throwing events, capping a sterling prep career in the same venue where she'll begin her college career next fall as a Boise State Bronco. She was disappointed with her marks in both the shot put and the discus, but added she was happy with the result.

"We did well as a team today, and that's an important thing for me," said Amoth. "It's always been me against me this season, and today I told myself not to embarrass myself in my new home. That got me in trouble a little bit, but it's still a win."

Amoth's teammate Paige Ward won the girls high jump at 5-4 as Buhl leads the girls team standings with 38 points.

Filer's Jacob Bogner got in on the act as well, winning gold in the 3A boys discus.

Buhl figures to be in good position to vie for a boys state title. Sprinter Elenes Ramos qualified for today's finals in all three events — he was seeded first in all three coming out of districts — and Buhl has three more relays in which it's seeded no lower than second. The Indian boys finished second in the medley relay.

It looked for a while like no District IV champions would be crowned in the 2A ranks on Friday. But the Gooding girls medley relay team led wire-to-wire to earn gold.

"I've never won at state, so this is an awesome feeling," said Gooding anchor runner Audrey Youren. "Our handoffs were fabulous, the best they've been all season. This gives us confidence with the rest of the relays that we can do it."

As far as individuals went, Valley's John Cauhorn and Gooding's Rachel Youren came closest, finishing second in the boys shot put and the girls 3,200, respectively.

In the 1A ranks, Camas County junior Katelyn Peterson set a classification state-meet record by clearing 5-foot-7 in the high jump to break the old record by an inch. She also defended her triple-jump championship.

After dabbling with other events during the season, Peterson decided to go to districts and state in the same four events that she did last year. She's already doubled her state title haul from 2010 and is looking for more when she competes in the long jump and the 300 hurdles today.

"I went down to the last minute (to decide) but ultimately we wanted to go with events I was seeded higher in around the state," said Peterson. "I'm really happy with two titles. I want more but I won't be disappointed if I don't get them as long as I try my best. That's all you can really ask."

Richfield's Sasha Kent went wire-to-wire to win the 1A girls 3,200 meters.

"I just kept going how the other girls were going. If they went fast, I made sure I went faster," Kent said. "I just didn't want to get outkicked like I did last year. When I heard the announcer say my lead was growing, it just made me want to go even faster."

position atop the rankings.

"I am doing pretty well so far but it's not that I am that fast this year, it's that some of the top cars are not there yet. I'm thinking there are probably some drivers out there who are going to catch me pretty quick. I'd be happy if I could finish in the top three or four tonight, but I am not going to pass up any opportunity that's there for a win."

Newell is a two-time champion in the series. He trails Woll by 21 points in the standings going into tonight and knows exactly who he is up against.

"He has gotten more confident with his driving and he is a little more determined to get the car to the front of the pack now," Newell said. "I just hope he doesn't get too comfortable, because I am going for my third championship this year."

Harris

Harris brought home District IV's only boys championships of the day, helping Twin Falls finish fourth. Minico's Cade Owen might have delivered another, but he couldn't do anything to thwart Columbia's point machine Jake Arslanian.

Owen didn't get to run his anchor leg of the 4x200 due to a botched baton exchange, and he struggled in the 200 meters and 110 hurdles.

Arslanian edged Owen in the 400 as part of a four-win showing at the state meet.

"He's just a man among boys," Owen said of Arslanian. "It's really tough with not being able to see him (due to lane staggering), but I'm happy with the time (in the 400) considering the day I had."

Rigby won the boys team title.

The Bruins certainly did something special in the third inning on Friday, scoring 12 runs. The ambush was sparked by McBride's leadoff home run — his first out-of-the-park homer of the season.

Lakeland (14-13) struggled through three pitching changes, issuing 12 walks. Twin Falls was patient and capitalized.

"I told these guys before the game, the more disciplined team is going to win this tournament," said Stadelmeir. "The team that's disciplined at the plate, disciplined to stay with what they've been working at all year and not trying to do too much."

Cy Sneed went 2-for-3 with a home run and four RBI's, while T.J. Ellis hit 2-for-3 with four RBI's. Zayne Slotten, who also earned the win on the mound, drove in a pair of runs.

"It means a lot. We've always wanted to win a state championship and now we have our shot to. It's a great feeling to get there," said Casey Merritt, who went 3-for-3 with three RBI's. "We will just keep the same routine going (today). It's just another game."

sell Clegg charged at the end to finish sixth — well ahead of her seeding.

The trio would be back in the 1,600. Chojnacky, who lost to Emily Nist in Thursday's 3,200, moved past Nist in the third lap and cruised from there, winning in a personal best time of 5 minutes, 7.9 seconds.

"I didn't think I could do that. I have never run under 5:10," said Chojnacky, who described the feeling as extraordinary. "When you cross the line and know you have it, it is just awesome."

Clegg finished fourth in the 1,600 while Nesbitt moved up three spaces down the final stretch to finish fifth.

The Tigers' 4x100 team, made up of all underclassmen, took third, again ahead of expectations.

"We know we can run faster, but it feels better knowing that we improved," said Haylee Burnham, who ran the leadoff leg.

District IV's only other gold medal Friday went to sophomore Claire Goss of Twin Falls.

She started the night by taking fifth in the 100 hurdles, but struggled with her footwork.

"In the 100 I had to four-step in the last two hurdles," said Goss, who also earned a silver in the medley relay.

She had no trouble in the 300 intermediate hurdles, the game in the sixth inning after Wright's home run. Higginbotham relieved Champlin and allowed four runs, all unearned, as the usually strong Kimberly defense committed three errors in the final two innings.

Myers said.

"We didn't play our best game today, but this is where we want this program to be and we plan on bringing home some hardware,"
