At 14, Roy Araiza Jr. was living on the streets of San Antonio, kicked out of the house where he would drink beer and smoke crack with his father.

Homelessness jarred him enough that he moved back to his mom's home in Jerome, but not enough to shake him out of addiction. He traded crack for meth and continued, as his father and uncles warned him, on the path to prison.

He calls it part of God's plan that he was stopped just short of completing what had seemingly become his family's destiny.

Araiza eventually served seven months for felony eluding a police officer. Seeds of faith were planted while he was in jail, but again skidded when he was put on parole. He hung around the same people, began using drugs again and eventually cut off his ankle monitor and ran.

When arrested again for violating his parole, a judge disregarded the recommendations of a parole officer and prosecuting attorney, allowing Araiza to enter the Victory Home, a no-charge, Bible-based rehabilitation program. Two years later and Araiza, 22, is bright-eyed, quotes scripture with enough enthusiasm to embarrass any Christmas-time Christian and is Pastor Tony Lopez's pick to lead the next phase of the program's expansion.

FISHING 101: INTRO TO ANGLING

Volunteers, Fish and Game teach Murtaugh students to fish

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — Rocky Matthews didn't like the idea that many children in Murtaugh's school system had never gone fishing.

So on Tuesday, he remedied that.

In an era of slashed state funding and fewer field trips for Idaho's youngsters, Matthews invited the sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders from his town to come fishing at his personal pond outside of Murtaugh. He wasn't alone, either. With the help of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game and the Murtaugh School District, Matthews planned a fishing day that included a fish fry and hot dog lunch for the about 50 students who attended.

Fish and Game has been offering similar outings through its Take Me Fishing trailer and Trout in the Classroom program. Volunteer Lanny Ames said the Trout in the Classroom program has visited nearly every school in the valley this year.

Shoshone students preach fire safety on the radio

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Bailee Owens pulled the microphone down to her lips and started to read in a clear, sweet voice.

"When I go camping, I normally don't like to see something dead. But the next time I go camping, I want to see your fire dead out!"

James Rabe, host of the Big Buzz morning show on the Twin Falls FM radio station 99.9 The Buzz, mouthed the words to Owens' script silently while she forged through the rest of her winning entry on fire safety. He then quickly edited the sound bite so she could hear the final product.

On Tuesday, Owens, 10, and Shallen Schoessler, 10, recorded their winning entries on preventing fire damage. The announcements will be aired on Lee Family Broadcasting stations through-

Utah players take home Idaho lottery money — again

BOISE (AP) — For lottery riches, a group of Utah residents went north to Idaho.

Michael Baca of Ogden and a group of his co-workers were the winners of last week's $1 million Powerball ticket after matching five out of six numbers.

There was no jackpot winner. Utah doesn't have a state lottery, so many of its residents go north to Idaho, spending millions on its lottery annually.

Baca's group's win marked the third time in six months that Utah lottery players have won $1 million on a Powerball ticket sold in southeastern Idaho.

Baca and his group have won before in Idaho, too, collecting $50,000 in November 2010.

A Bible rests on a pool table as residents of the Victory Home mingle in the background Tuesday afternoon in Twin Falls. The Victory Home is a live-in rehabilitation center for recovering addicts and is looking to expand.

Rehab

Araiza said. “It’s offered me a family. That’s why we call it a Victory Home.”

The Victory Home is a live-in treatment facility that seeks to rehabilitate gang members and drug addicts into productive members of society. It doesn’t charge its participants anything, relying instead on donations to pay the bills. The complete program takes a year and teaches participants life skills and job skills. And Lopez has big dreams for it, working toward new facilities throughout the Magic Valley.

Lopez wants its current location, attached to the Because of Jesus Ministries church in Twin Falls, to become a training center. And he wants to open another facility in Burley, where he wants Araiza to go, for a first-phase treatment center. He wants to open a ranch where addicts and the downtrodden can be given a diet of “beans, rice and Jesus Christ” and learn how to work within society. And he wants to open a house in Twin Falls where life skills such as holding down a job can be furthered.

Lopez said his program offers the addicts and downtrodden something most of them never had or now need to find: a family. Participants aren’t patients, they’re brothers, sisters, fathers and mothers, he said.

“(The participants) watch you for validation: They want to know what you are selling is real,” Lopez said. The only way to prove that is by showing them love and living a life for God, he said.

Araiza points to two men he preaches to: one came from a wealthy family and got addicted to heroin, the other ran with street gangs and got addicted to meth. They both hit rock bottom, Araiza said, and entered the program refusing the change.

“It was their way or no way,” Araiza said, adding that “their way” got the men in trouble. “If they surrender their way to God, and allow God to guide them, they can begin to improve.”

When the men opened their hearts to God, he said, they practically glowed. After initially refusing to change, their mannerisms are now different. And they now teach Bible classes. They’ve taken steps toward what Lopez said is the ultimate goal of the Victory House: turning addicts, gang members and the hopeless into hopeful members of society.

I can see by your tan lines that you’re still a tourist

My wife Victoria is coming up on her 25th anniversary of living in this green and pleasant land, so she asked me the other day when she might be considered an Idahoan.

I didn’t have the heart to tell her. Would you?

Especially since she’s spent all that time in Boise. Had she dwelt instead in, say, Mud Lake, Malad or Mullan, we could maybe let it slide. But I’m thinking that two score years and change in the shadow of the Boise Town Square Mall aren’t that challenging.

Granted, she used to live in California, so the requirements for Idaism are sterner. But Victoria was born in Minnesota, for pity’s sake, so she deserves a point or two for style (no other Americans wear so much funny-looking winter headgear as Idahoans and Minnesotans, and that includes Michele Bachmann).

Cynics among Idaho sojourners will argue that a non-native can never live here long enough to be considered a true Idahoan, but that’s just silly. Any newcomer can — within months — be considered one of us if he or she is willing to perform a few minor labors of Hercules:

DON’T ASK ME

- Keep a bottle of salmon eggs in the fridge — and not hidden in the vegetable crisper either: right there next to the carton of milk.
- Throw out your Dockers and replace them with Wranglers at least two waist-sizes too small and 3 inches too long.
- Install at least five dogs, three of whom must sleep underneath the porch and one of which must be named Ruckus.
- Avoid on all occasions using past tenses of verbs, and substitute the past participle. (Wrong: “I saw.” Right: “I seen.” Wrong: “I did.” Right: “I done.”)
- Repair at least one broken window in your home with duct tape, and if you haven’t got a broken window, then you need to have the neighbors over more often.
- Finally — and I can’t emphasize this enough — always pronounce “Idahoan” with the emphasis on the first syllable, not the third.

Former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, who was born in San Bernardino, committed that sin early and often. Which is why, despite spending more than 30 years in the Gem State, he resides principally in the District of Columbia these days.

Seems to me that anyone who still calls himself an “IdaHOan” after all that time can’t fully be trusted not to up and build himself a retirement bungalow next door to Nancy Pelosi’s beach house and subsist on goat-cheese brie and a sustainable Sonoma County cabernet.

Granted, our standards here may seem harsh, but so is our history of trusting insider outsiders.

In 1946, a Oregon newspaperman named Richard Neuberger wrote a famous article in the Saturday Evening Post titled “They Never Go Back to Pocatello.” It was a humorous essay — and an enduring object lesson to us Spudkickers — about politicians elected by voters in rural states who never set foot there again.

By Neuberger’s time, fully half the surviving former Idaho congressmen were living in big cities and making a lot more money than you and I paid them.

Case in point, Glen Hearst Taylor, United States senator from Idaho from 1945-51. Born in Portland, Taylor was a struggling country-western singer when Idaho took him in during the Great Depression, made him respectable and sent him off to Washington, where he crooned, “Oh, give me a home, ’neath the Capitol Dome!” After Idahoans voted him out of office, he got his nose out of joint, decamped to California and started his own toupee company, Taylor Toppers.

’Course, by then we couldn’t exactly revoke his citizenship: There were all those old newspaper clippings, and it would have been pretty hard to argue that Idaho didn’t know the guy.

So I’m especially pleased that my wife knows how to pronounce “Idahoan.” Even if that doesn’t make her a native.

Not yet, anyway.

While Murtaugh’s fishing day experienced a few hiccups — weather postponed it twice — Matthews said it wasn’t hard to put together and gave kids something they’ll “remember for a long time.”

The Take Me Fishing trailer comes fully loaded with rods, reels, bait, and the fixings for a fish fry. The program aims to teach children everything they need to know about the art of fishing from start to finish.

“We teach them to bait a hook, catch a fish, and then how to take care of the fish they catch,” said Tim Dobbins with Fish and Game.

While the Fish and Game folks gave students tutorials on how to skin, de-bone, fillet and season their catches, Matthews prepared hot dogs for the students who weren’t keen on fish.

Matthews said he’s going to open his pond to the public from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 11, in conjunction with

Cassia Co. police search for robbery suspect

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Police continued their search Tuesday for the man who robbed a Burley convenience store at gunpoint on Monday night.

Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd said the robbery occurred at 9:25 p.m. at the Mr. Gas Quik Pik at 301 W. Main St. in Burley.

“A male entered the store with a gun and demanded money,” Kidd said.

Kidd said the suspect was carrying a handgun.

The suspect was described as a Hispanic male in his 20s, 5 feet, 9 inches tall and weighing 150 pounds. He was wearing a dark, hooded zip-up sweatshirt with a white graphic of a skeleton on its front.

“He left with an undisclosed amount of money and there were no injuries,” Kidd said.

There was one convenience store clerk in the business at the time of the incident. Kidd said the sheriff’s office was releasing limited information on the robbery due to its ongoing investigation.

Consultant: INL, BSU interested in Hailey airport

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Idaho National Laboratory and Boise State University have expressed interest in building a research and development center and institutional campus where the airport runway currently sits in Hailey.

But Hailey leaders need to show that they're serious about attracting such prospective tenants when Friedman Memorial Airport is replaced by a new airport elsewhere, said a pair of consultants.

"The city has to put forth a plan to indicate they're serious and ready to move ahead," said Roland Aberg

READ THE REPORT

The Friedman Memorial Airport Redevelopment report is available at the Hailey City Library, Hailey City Hall or flysvra.com.

with Minneapolis design firm Hart Howerton. "You want to be on the radar screen."

Aberg and Rick Hill, a real estate strategist with Village Solutions Co., presented their initial report to about three dozen people — mostly government officials from Hailey, Sun Valley, Blaine County and the Friedman airport board — Monday night at the Wood River High School.

They unveiled a proposed sketch of how the 210 acres that currently comprise the airport could be transformed.

Small parcels for townhouses and retail shops that reflect Hailey's urban parcels would line the north end, where Idaho Highway 75 makes its curve into Hailey.

A hotel and conference center, fitness center, and research and development park would anchor the middle. The southern end would hold three 40,000-square-foot retail buildings, hidden from the highway by landscaping. The retail buildings could become big-box stores if the community chooses to go that route, Aberg said.

The rendering included a couple of small lakes, bicycle and pedestrian trails designed to connect to existing and proposed trails, some open space and lots of landscaping.

"We're talking about a whole new vision for the valley — a fairly dramatic change from what you have here today," said Hill.

Far from set, Monday's proposal was only an attempt to visualize what could be there, Aberg said.

"All this is just opportunity — a huge opportunity to do new and different things to help our economy," said Beth Robrahn, Hailey's planning director.

Hill said it's better to focus on attracting land uses that don't currently exist in the valley than fill the site with a hodgepodge of tenants.

"INL has expressed an interest and BSU is interested if INL is there," he said. "It's like herding cats. If one expresses interest you get two. If two, you get four. If four, you get eight."

"In talking to INL and BSU, it was clear we were not putting ideas in their heads that they're not already thinking about."

Aberg suggested the city put together a steering committee as soon as possible so that potential tenants can visit the site in early fall. Test marketing still needs to be completed, as does determining what is available in the way of water, sewer, fiber-optic line and other infrastructure.

Sun Valley has a national and international reputation and can offer the quality of schools, access to skiing and other amenities that firms need to attract the best and brightest, Aberg said.

"Don't think you don't have a great story to tell that isn't competitive with others," he said.

Meth trafficking suspect pleads guilty

Times-News

Christopher James Roland, 38, of Twin Falls, pleaded guilty to felony trafficking in methamphetamine on Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Roland was arrested and held on $100,000 bond in late April, accused of possession of 47 grams of meth and 1.4 grams of cocaine. Twin Falls police were looking for Roland due to an outstanding warrant.

One charge of felony possession of a controlled substance against Roland was dropped.

The minimum mandatory sentence for trafficking meth is three years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Sentencing is set for July 18.

Lewd conduct charges dropped against T.F. man

Two counts of felony lewd conduct with a minor under 16 were dropped against a Twin Falls man last week, prompting his trial, scheduled to start Tuesday, to be vacated.

Richard Fierros, 28, will not be prosecuted, as Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs filed to dismiss the two felony complaints last week, citing that the alleged victim — she was described as about 7 or 8 years old in 2001 when the crimes supposedly took place — has moved out of state and is "uncooperative."

Fierros was indicted by a Twin Falls County grand jury in August.

Teen faces 13 felony theft charges

A Twin Falls teenager was arrested and held on $10,000 bond over the weekend after allegedly going on a spending spree with someone else's credit cards.

Tyler Roper, 18, is charged with seven counts of criminal possession of a financial transaction card, three counts of grand theft and three counts of burglary. According to multiple reports from Twin Falls and Filer police, Roper charged hundreds of dollars in merchandise at stores in the Magic Valley Mall in Twin Falls on Saturday with credit cards supposedly stolen from a Filer woman's car. Roper is also accused of taking a laptop from a car parked at Twin Falls High School and pawning it for cash.

Each of the seven financial card crimes accounts for each time Roper is alleged to have used a stolen credit card, while each count of grand theft is for each card reported as allegedly stolen by Roper. The burglary charges are for each time he is accused of illegally entering a vehicle.

Roper is scheduled for a June 3 preliminary hearing.

Idaho driver testifies in pedestrian deaths trial

BOISE (AP) — A Boise driver charged with striking and killing an elderly couple as they walked home from church told jurors he believes he saw the pedestrians wave him by at the crosswalk.

John Tiemann testified Monday for the first time in his vehicular manslaughter trial in Idaho's 4th District Court.

Tiemann, who was arrested eight months after the crash, has pleaded not guilty to two felony charges in the August 2009 deaths of Tom Woychick, 78, and Mary Woychick, 76.

The trial started on May 9. Prosecutors say Tiemann is blind in one eye, has diminished sight in the other, and it was reckless of him to be driving. They also argue the 60-year-old was under the influence of an over-the-counter antihistamine and an anti-seizure medication.

The Idaho Statesman reports Tiemann told jurors his last seizure was in the summer of 2010 and didn't think his condition affected his driving.

NEVADA Battle Mountain watches rising river

BATTLE MOUNTAIN — Record-setting rain in northeast Nevada has prompted the National Weather Service to post some warnings and watches for potential flooding in that region but so far, no major problems are expected.

The service says the Lower Humboldt River in Lander County should inch past the flood stage of 9.5 feet as early as today causing minor flooding of some low lying areas and rural roads. Forecasters say it's the kind of flooding expected about every three years.

Panel reverses budget addbacks

CARSON CITY — Nevada lawmakers backtracked Tuesday after approving a budget almost $1 billion over the governor's recommendations, reversing about $250 million of those education and mental health "add-backs" as dreams for a compromise with Republicans waned.

A joint Senate and Assembly money panel had approved $968 million of state services beyond Gov. Brian Sandoval's budget in hopes of passing two tax bills to make up the difference.

But Republicans are holding firm on their no-new-taxes policy, and Democrats have lowered their expectations, hoping their gesture will allow them to extend temporary taxes set to expire at the end of June.

Nevada city attorney facing DUI charge

HENDERSON — Henderson's city attorney told police she'd had "bottles" of wine and acknowledged she was intoxicated after crashing her vehicle into landscaping and a fire hydrant in the middle of the afternoon near a casino.

A police report made public Tuesday says Elizabeth Quillin was arrested after witnesses told police she first tried to drive her Lexus RX400 away and then tried to walk away from the 2:50 p.m. Monday crash near the Green Valley Ranch Resort, Spa & Casino.

Henderson police didn't report any injuries in the crash.

IDAHO Construction of tech school to begin

BOISE — Construction of a professional-technical high school in northern Idaho is expected to begin in September.

State lawmakers passed legislation during the 2011 session to expedite plans for the $9.5 million Kootenai Technical Education Campus. Voters in the Post Falls, Coeur d'Alene and Lakeland school districts approved financing last year to build the project.

But the project couldn't break ground until all the money was collected from taxpayers, under a state law.

North Idaho College goes tobacco-free

COEUR D'ALENE — North Idaho College officials say that starting in July, no tobacco use will be allowed on campus.

That means no cigarettes, cigars, pipes, hookahs, and no smokeless tobacco products like chew or snuff.

But the smoke-free campus is not an official policy. Instead, NIC Vice President John Martin told the Coeur d'Alene Press, it's a guideline approved by groups representing students, staff and faculty.

California denies first medical parole

CORCORAN, Calif. (AP) — California parole officials rejected a plea on Tuesday from a quadriplegic convict who had hoped to become the first state prison inmate released under a new law aimed at cutting the number of inmates and the cost of care in the nation's largest state prison system.

Corcoran State Prison inmate Steven Martinez, a 42-year-old convicted kidnaper and rapist, qualified under the law that took effect this year because he was left paralyzed when his spine was severed in a knife fight with other inmates 10 years ago. He's served 12 years of a 157 years-to-life sentence.

However, parole board Commissioner John Peck said after a four-hour hearing that the 42-year-old inmate "would pose an unreasonable threat to public safety" because he has said others could carry out his Prisoners watch television in a day-room converted into a housing room due to overcrowding at the California Institution for Men in Chino, Calif., Tuesday. For decades, the prison population has steadily risen, but according to a Supreme Court ruling issued Monday, California must eliminate overcrowding in its prisons by shedding some 30,000 prisoners over the next two years.

repeated threats against prison nurses and guards. Martinez's medical care has cost taxpayers about $625,000 a year, according to court documents. His attorney, Ken Karan of Carlsbad, said the state also paid his client $750,000 in damages after Martinez suffered a severe pressure sore requiring six months of treatment at an outside hospital.

Once paroled, about half of most inmates' medical costs could be paid by the federal government through Medicare or Medicaid. Moreover, the state would no longer have to pay to guard incapacitated inmates who require care at medical facilities outside of prisons.

The first medical parole hearing came a day after the U.S. Supreme Court ordered California to lower its prison population by about 33,000 inmates over two years to reduce prison crowding and improve treatment of physically and mentally ill inmates.

However, only about 50 inmates are likely to be initially eligible for medical parole, many fewer than lawmakers had anticipated when they approved the law last year. The savings also are projected to be much less than legislators had hoped as the state struggles with a lingering $10 billion budget deficit.

"What we've been doing is spending money and not getting anything for it. We have a man in prison who can't hurt a fly and we're spending hundreds and thousands of dollars — I think it's around over $600,000 a year — to guard this man when he can't do anything but annoy somebody," Karan argued.

"Vengeance for vengeance' sake is a luxury we can no longer afford."

He declined comment after the two parole commissioners ruled against releasing his client from Corcoran, which is in the southern San Joaquin Valley between Fresno and Bakersfield.

Arizona coal plant focus of congressional hearing

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Leaders of three American Indian tribes said Tuesday that closing a coal-fired power plant in northern Arizona would devastate their communities, leave hundreds without jobs and threaten water rights settlements.

Others speaking at a joint congressional hearing on the role of Navajo Generating Station in Page said the dire predictions are overblown. They urged Congress to transition the plant from coal to renewable energy to protect people's health and the environment.

The hearing came as the EPA considers whether to require further reduction of nitrogen oxide emissions from the plant on the Navajo Nation.

The plant's owners say an upgrade of pollution controls would be negligible in clearing up haze around the Grand Canyon and other areas under the Clean Air Act. Without approval of lease extensions and right-of-way grants, the upgrade would not be worth the expected $1.1 billion cost, said Richard Silverman, general manager of Salt River Project, which operates the plant.

The EPA plans to release its proposal on pollution controls this summer and a final rule next year. That would start a 5-year clock on installing controls. The plant's operators want to keep Navajo Generating Station running until 2044.

The Clean Air Act passed by Congress requires that visibility in the nation's most pristine areas be protected. The EPA developed the regional haze rule to implement the law and is considering the best available technology to reduce nitrogen oxide emissions.

The EPA said it's evaluating the potential impact on water and electricity bills, the cost of compliance, the existing pollution controls at the plant, the life of the plant and the coal source, and the degree of visibility.

Democratic Rep. Edward Markey of Massachusetts said the owners of Navajo Generating Station were well aware they would have to make investments to clean up the pollution. The plant is among the nation's top producers of nitrogen oxide emissions.

Question:
How do we determine who gets what from grandma's estate? What's fair?

Answer:

- "Fair" is a subjective term - everyone defines it differently.
- The key is good communication among family members.
- Keep in mind that fair does not always mean equal distribution.
- Hold a family meeting to discuss "fairness".
- Discuss what is fair (the outcome)
- Utilize questionnaires or other tools to define what's "fair".
- Decide what the rules are (the process).
- Follow the process.
- Work towards accomplishing the "fair" outcome.

Receding water reveals ruined homes, crops

Nine survivors had been pulled from the aftermath in Missouri, and searchers fought the clock because anybody still alive after the deadliest single tornado in 60 years was losing precious strength two days after the disaster. And another round of storms was closing in.

Shoddy class work costs Idaho schools on the playing field

In the realm of challenges facing Idaho State University, Tuesday’s news from the NCAA that ISU has been banned from the postseason football playoffs next season isn’t the gravest.

But the fact the school was penalized because too many of its student-athletes don’t spend enough time being students should disturb Idahoans — and get the attention of the State Board of Education.

The sanctions were part of the NCAA’s Academic Progress Rates. Each Division I sports team calculates its APR each academic year, based on the eligibility and retention of each scholarship student-athlete. Teams scoring below 925 out of 1,000 can face penalties, such as scholarship losses and restrictions on practice and competition. Rates are based on the past four years’ performance.

The ISU football program’s APR score was 888. Since the APR’s inception in 2004-05, Idaho State has never achieved a score of even 900, leading to the penalties.

The average football APR score for the Big Sky Conference’s other eight colleges is 932.

In addition to a postseason football ban, Idaho State also faces practice time reductions and a loss of 2.98 scholarships.

The Pocatello school isn’t the only Idaho college with APR problems. The NCAA said Tuesday that the University of Idaho’s football APR is 923, below the 925 threshold for penalties, and took away a football scholarship. In the past four years, the Vandals have lost 15 scholarships because of APR.

Boise State faces no sanctions. Its football APR is 981.

Among Idaho’s three Division I schools, ISU has the worst APR in several sports besides football. For men’s basketball it’s 923, compared with 976 at BSU and 942 at Idaho. In women’s basketball it’s 931, compared with 953 at Idaho and 947 at BSU. ISU also ranks last among the state schools in APR for men’s cross country, men’s tennis, men’s outdoor track, women’s golf and women’s tennis.

And in the Big Sky Conference, ISU has the lowest APR in football and women’s basketball and the second-lowest in men’s basketball.

Across the NCAA, 103 teams at 67 schools were sanctioned this year for poor academic performance; three — ISU, Southern University and Jackson State — were banned from the football playoffs. Five others (Cal-State Northridge, Chicago State, Grambling State, Southern University-Baton Rouge, and Louisiana-Monroe) won’t play in the men’s basketball postseason next year.

Seems to us the issue in Pocatello isn’t the quality of student-athletes. The problem is that their class work hasn’t been a high enough priority for the university.

That must change.

Our view:

College student athletes are first of all students.

How much more can we soak the rich?

The Wall Street Journal reported recently that the Joint Committee on Taxation found that “the percentage of U.S. households paying no federal income tax ... reached 51 percent for 2009.”

The paper also reported: “A 2008 study by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, for example, found that the highest-earning 10 percent of the U.S. population paid the largest share among 24 countries examined, even after adjusting for their relatively higher incomes.” Taxation is most progressively distributed in the United States, the OECD study concluded.

Upper-income taxpayers’ pretax income has grown more rapidly than other taxpayers. The Journal article cited the Congressional Budget Office in reporting that “average pretax incomes for the top 20 percent grew from $140,300 in 1979 to $264,700 in 2007, in inflation-adjusted dollars; for the top 10 percent, they grew from $182,800 in 1979 to $394,500 in 2007 ...

Incomes for all groups rose at least somewhat during the period, in inflation-adjusted dollars, albeit much more slowly for lower earners.”

Contrary to liberal rhetoric, however, the Bush tax cuts have not impeded the trend toward greater progressivity. “A series of federal tax breaks for lower earners also has increased tax-system payouts and helped reduce tax shares for lower and middle-income earners,” the Journal said.

This is not an argument for making the tax system less progressive, but the data are a necessary corrective to the impression advanced by the Democrats that the rich don’t pay their “fair share.” They pay much more than that.

In his budget speech last month, President Obama asserted: “In the last decade, the average income of the bottom 90 percent of all working Americans actually declined. Meanwhile the top 1 percent saw their income rise by an average of more than a quarter of a million dollars each. That’s who needs to pay less taxes? They want to give people like me a $200,000 tax cut that’s paid for by asking 33 seniors to each pay $6,000 more in health costs? That’s

“We can’t solve the debt problem by grabbing more money from the rich. And we simply don’t have, as Obama asserts, a tax system that undertaxes the rich.”

But Republicans are merely declining to raise taxes — the same decision Obama made in the 2010 lame-duck session. And Republicans, such as those on the president’s own debt commission, are seeking a flatter, simpler tax system with fewer deductions.

Democrats are perpetuating a fundamental untruth: If we tax only the rich more, we can keep entitlement programs just the way they are. But the math doesn’t work that way. As Rep. Paul Ryan explained, “It’s mathematically impossible, if you agree with Obama’s proposed spending, to not tax everybody.”

There are legitimate arguments about how progressive our tax system should be; at what level of taxation do we risk impeding economic growth; and which goals we want to promote through the tax code (e.g., family economic stability, homeownership, investment)? But we should at least be clear on the facts and our starting point. We can’t solve the debt problem by grabbing more money from the rich. And we simply don’t have, as Obama asserts, a tax system that undertaxes the rich.

The myth of American exceptionalism

The problem of the 20th Century is the problem of the color line,” W.E.B. Du Bois wrote in 1903 — and I will not quibble. But the problem of the 21st century is the problem of culture, not just the infamous “culture of poverty” but what I would call the culture of smugness. The emblem of this culture is the term “American exceptionalism.” It has been adopted by the right to mean that America, alone among the nations, is beloved of God. Maybe so, but on some days it’s hard to tell.

Richard Cohen

The term “American exceptionalism” has been invoked by Mitt Romney, Mike Pence, Newt Gingrich, Rick Santorum, Mike Huckabee and, of course, Sarah Palin. I would throw in Michele Bachmann, since if she has not said it yet, she soon will because she says almost anything. She is no exception to the cult of American exceptionalism.

The phrase has an odd history. As Princeton history professor Sean Wilentz reminds me, American exceptionalism once applied to the hostility that the American worker — virtually alone in the industrialized world — had toward socialism. Now, though, it is infused with religious meaning, which makes it impervious to analysis. Once you say God likes something, who can quibble?

What God prefers should not be monkeyed with. But certain kinds of exceptionalism raise certain kinds of questions. For an industrialized nation, the United States has a very high murder rate and, no surprise, a very high execution rate. We have a health care system cleverly designed to bankrupt the average person and a political system so dysfunctional that we may go into national bankruptcy, blaming one another for spending too much or taxing too little, but not both. God indeed works in mysterious ways.

American exceptionalism has produced a dysfunctional education system — more than 14,000 school districts, lots of bad (but job-protected) teachers, oblivious parents and students who are too dumb to know they’re dumb. American eighth-graders score 66 points below their Japanese counterparts in math, yet almost 40 percent of American children think they’re good in math. That figure for Japan is 4 percent.

What a Brookings Institution report termed “the happiness factor” occurs pretty much across the board. Brookings should have called the phenomenon the “ignorance-is-bliss” factor, which now may be the true meaning of American exceptionalism. Its current iteration comes in the form of self-esteem, which holds, as best as I can figure, that how you feel is more important than how you perform. A consequence of this is that students in Singapore or Shanghai have almost no self-esteem. But they do, however, know their math.

Let no person think there is not a certain kind of American exceptionalism that I believe in and cherish. It is our astounding capacity for tolerance. European history is a sad, sanguinary tale — massacres, pogroms, population transfers and genocides. Most European nations have rid themselves of pesky minorities. The Germans of Hungary are gone. So, too, the Poles of Germany and, of course, the Jews of almost everywhere. The United States has not been perfect in this regard. The American Indians were virtually extirpated, and African Americans suffered plenty. Yet the melting pot — aided by lots of land — turned out to be more true than false. We live among each other, often blissfully ignorant of religion or ethnicity.

It turns out, however, that some of those most inclined to exalt American exceptionalism are simply using the imaginary past to defend their cultural tics — conventional marriage or school prayer or, for some odd reason, a furious antipathy to the notion that mankind has contributed (just a bit) to global warming. Their enemy is what Gingrich calls “the secular left” — people who not only approve of gay marriage but also apparently don’t fly charter as he does.

The huge role of religion in American politics is nothing new but always a matter for concern nonetheless. In the years preceding the Civil War, both sides of the slavery issue claimed the endorsement of God. The 1856 Republican convention concluded with a song that ended like this: “We’ve truth on our side/ We’ve God for our guide.” Within five years, Americans were slaughtering one another on the battlefield.

Therein lies the danger of American exceptionalism. It discourages compromise, for what God has made exceptional, man must not alter. And yet clearly America must change fundamentally or continue to decline. It could begin by junking a phrase that reeks of arrogance and discourages compromise. American exceptionalism ought to be called American narcissism. We look perfect only to ourselves.

Compassionate consumerism?

Not all forms of charity are equal

Compassionate consumerism — as some critics describe to-day's hottest trend in philanthropy — encourages people to feel socially conscientious while guiltlessly enjoying the good life. The idea is that you “give” by buying or selling a product, a portion of whose proceeds go to the needy. I don't think so.

Parachute do-goodism is a little closer to a charitable ideal, but it still allows you to think you can succeed at saving the world merely by helping faraway strangers on a one-off spring break or during a gap year before college.

I thought about all of this last week when I learned that my friend, Sister Mary Rose Christy, had died. I wrote about her in this column four years ago, describing her as a “brusque, opinionated, hard-headed” woman who was nonetheless “the closest thing to a saint I (had) ever met.”

I'm one of those Catholics who believes the church should ordain women as priests and allow priests of either gender to marry and have families. (If the pedophile priest scandal taught us nothing else, it's that the Roman Catholic Church needs to widen the universe of potential applicants to serve as shepherds to its flock.) But meeting people like Sister Mary Rose, who took a vow of poverty, chastity and service in 1947 when she joined the Sisters of Mercy at 24 years old, also convinced me of the good that's possible in traditional Catholic religious orders. There is a powerful need for people to give their whole lives to improving the lives of others.

It's not for everybody. But neither is the life of an athlete or an astronaut. And like athletes and space explorers, nuns, monks and others who take religious vows can serve as examples of courage, discipline and excellence to the rest of us.

When I met Sister Mary Rose in Sibiu, Romania, 14 years ago, she was running a small nonprofit dedicated to supporting women and families and caring for orphans. Her work in Eastern Europe was the final chapter in her long history of service to the disadvantaged. It began in California and Arizona. As I followed her on her daily routine, I realized that in addition to her faith, it was the act of sacrificing a romantic life, a family and “getting ahead in the world” that enabled her to give so much of herself to others.

A different culture of service, the kind exemplified by Good Magazine and compassionate consumption, pushed the idea that It's easy enough to see that actively working for a cause is different — and better — than passively supporting it through what you buy. And it's easy enough to see that real money or real time spent is genuine sacrifice — you'll have to surrender one thing for the sake of another that is more important.

charity can not only be hip but entirely compatible with living large or even getting rich — no sacrifice necessary.

Of course, any form of charity is a good thing, but it's important to remember that all forms aren't equal. I wonder where Maimonides, the 12th-century Spanish Jewish philosopher who articulated eight levels of charity — selflessness and willingness to give are important markers for him — would have put ecotourism or compassionate consumerism on his scale.

It's easy enough to see that any cause is going to be better served by those willing to sacrifice more than a few pennies in cost or profit in its pursuit, a la compassionate consumption. It's easy enough to see that actively working for a cause is different — and better — than passively supporting it through what you buy. And it's easy enough to see that real money or real time spent is genuine sacrifice — you'll have to surrender one thing for the sake of another that is more important.

The Sister Mary Rose Christys of the world, of course, happily surrender not just “more time” and “more money” but their whole lives to a cause. I fear that the culture of easy giving, however helpful, obscures our appreciation of that higher level and meaning of service and charity.

We understand the concept of “no pain, no gain,” when it refers to the sweat needed to get in shape physically. We should apply the same concept to the exercising of the heart that underlies our gifts to others. I'm not saying that real gifts require deep suffering, but the energy spent, the risk taken, the sacrifice made is commensurate with the love shared, the commitment made.

And ultimately those two elements, not a few heedless pennies for one product over another, are what make the world a better place.

Gregory Rodriguez is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times.

Americans can move past fear of terrorism

Other threats are more easily fought

Now that American forces have slain Osama bin Laden, can the average person finally stop worrying about terrorism? We can and we should, even in the New York area, which will always be a target. There are signs most Americans already had before the death of bin Laden. Gallup polls during the previous decade show a slowly diminishing level of concern moving forward from 9/11.

In all that time, there's been no significant attack on American soil, although several have been thwarted. But everyone knows that, sooner or later, one will succeed. So we ought to decide right now, in advance, that when terrorists strike again we'll just repair the damage, mourn the dead with dignity, and get on with life as quickly as we can.

Future attacks are unlikely to reach the scale of 9/11, thankfully, and in general the odds of any one person dying in such an event are vanishingly small — which is why most people shouldn't worry.

That doesn't mean that, as a nation, we should let down our guard — or let up in the pursuit of al-Qaida leaders. The organization bin Laden founded is far from vanquished, and the ease of terrorism in an open society will always make it tempting for our enemies. That's why we need to learn from the past. As a nation, we ought to be more careful about how we respond to future attacks, zeroing in on the perpetrators instead of trying to rebuild entire countries. And as individuals, we'll have to take the very low possibility of encountering terrorism in stride. Most people aren't very good at assessing risks, so now that bin Laden is gone it's useful to remind ourselves what kills most Americans — including those in and around attack-prone New York.

The short answer is, diseases. And while terrorism is hard to combat, diseases are surprisingly easy. Even without highly trained Navy commandos to swoop down and take away your matches, you can easily avoid becoming one of the 443,000 Americans who die annually from smoking. The same goes for avoiding the many ills associated with obesity, although a team of Navy SEALs screaming “drop that fork and step away from the table!” could be quite effective.

The strangely heartening fact is that Americans are much better at killing Americans than al-Qaida is. Secondhand smoke, for instance, kills 46,000 non-smokers annually via heart disease, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control. Homicide took 13,636 lives in 2009 — most at the hands of family, friends and acquaintances. Another 10,839 were killed in alcohol-impaired car crashes. SEALs aside, government can play a role. The best estimate of Americans who die for lack of universal health insurance is 45,000 a year. Given what we already spend on health care, all could be saved at no extra cost if we adopted the kind of nonprofit national health system used in every other comparable nation.

Worrying too much about terrorism can be tragically counterproductive. Cornell University economists found that as many as 2,300 extra deaths occurred after 9/11 because so many travelers drove instead of flying — flying is safer. One of the economists, bemoaning the consequences when people improperly assess risk, said that when she saw the number in her study, “my heart sank.” Let's not encourage our enemies to believe that, by inflicting violence here at home, they can turn our society upside down, drain our treasury and win the world's attention. Terrorism is just one of life's risks, and not an especially big one.

Toastmasters helps members conquer speaking fears

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

The butterflies began building in Rick Ryerson’s stomach when his attempts to develop a subdivision in Carey forced him to start speaking before the Carey planning and zoning commission.

To prepare, he sought out the help of a local Toastmasters Club.

He gave a speech. Then he presented a couple short extemporaneous speeches on topics suggested by attendees. Then he sat back and listened carefully as the two dozen listeners in the room offered suggestions on how he could improve.

“I had been so nervous. But that helped me feel comfortable as I prepared to make my presentations before the P&Z,” he said.

The non-profit Toastmasters International has been helping businessmen and others become more confident speakers and leaders since 1924. Today Toastmasters International has more than a quarter million members worldwide in more than 12,500 clubs.

In the case of the Wood River Valley group, interested parties meet around wine and a potluck dinner. Then they get down to the business of public speaking.

One or two people offer a prepared or extemporaneous speech of about 10 minutes. Others can volunteer to offer two-minute spiels on the topics of the night, which have ranged in recent weeks from whether a Starbucks should be allowed at the Sun Valley Visitor Center to Tom Luna’s education reforms to Ketchum’s casual dress code.

The Wizard of Ahhhs counts the “ahhs” each speaker makes. Others offer brief constructive evaluations of various speakers.

Though designed to help businessmen, the topics are far from boring treatises on business protocol.

During a recent meeting, Peggy Hollitz described how what Americans call the bathroom and the British call the loo was adapted from French “lieu” for place. And former Bellevue Mayor and veterinarian Steve Fairbrother decried the vulgar language served up by Howard Stern and others on the radio.

Jerome Chamber to take part in Operation Facelift

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Jerome is the latest city to jump on board the “Operation Facelift” initiative.

Operation Facelift is a week-long regional effort aimed at sprucing up communities throughout southern Idaho.

The revitalization program, established by the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization (SIEDO), will take place June 13-18.

“We’re really excited to have Jerome on board with the project,” said Larry Hall, director of Southern Idaho Rural Development, which is partnering with SIEDO on the project.

Communities, from Buhl to Kimberly and everywhere in between are participating in the clean-up drive.

Local Operation Facelift teams are involving civic clubs, city representatives, churches, students, citizens and businesses.

Jon Melone, Jerome Operation Facelift co-coordinator and Jerome Chamber of Commerce executive director, said a committee has already identified four building on Jerome’s Main Street for a facelift.

“Operation Facelift falls hand in hand with the chamber’s mission to promote and grow business,” Melone told the Times-News in a phone interview Tuesday. “The committee chose the four properties because they are downtown and right in a row, side by side. We thought that giving those storefronts facelifts and cleaning up their facades would really have an impact. With the businesses side by side people are really going to notice.”

The four buildings are at 115, 117, 123 and 125 Main Street W. St.

Although SIEDO is offering communities $1,000 for supply purchases Melone said Jerome won’t have to tap into those funds.

“The community support has been incredible,” he said. “We’ve just announced our involvement in this and have already had several donations. The Boy Scouts held a car wash on Saturday and raised $235 for the clean up.”

The committee has collected more than $2,000 in cash donations, Jerome’s Valley Country Store promptly donated 19 gallons of paint and many volunteers have stepped forward to help where they can.

Melone said the committee, which meets weekly, is already looking at how to expand the clean up effort to continue after the week of Operation Facelift.

“We’ve already identified buildings that need some help that we can target after the initial event,” Melone said. “It really comes down to civic pride and we think that we can help a lot of businesses, which in turn will help attract new businesses to move into Jerome.”

Melone said Gary Stone, a well known painter from Twin Falls, has agreed to paint a mural on the side of a downtown building this summer as part of the effort.

Finding a niche with Miche

Twin Falls woman branches out into unique handbags, renting space for home parties

When Vicki Overacker was given a Miche bag a few years ago she never envisioned that one day she would be selling them.

Many people know Overacker as a real estate broker with Westerra Real Estate Group but the 48-year-old Twin Falls resident is ready to announce her new endeavor, as a Miche Fulfillment Center Representative and owner of the Vendor Blender, a retail space where people can host home parties — like those for Tupperware, Scentsy candles and more.

Overacker said she is one of just a handful of people allowed to sell Miche products in a retail environment.

“I won’t ever give up real estate. I’ve done it for decades and love it. But the market is the way it is and selling Miche is a lot of fun,” Overacker said.

Although Overacker has sold Miche for a couple of years it took a while for her to fully trust the company.

She didn’t want to get involved in a multi-level marketing (MLM) arrangement, where representatives earn a percentage of sales from people they’ve signed up to sell a product.

“I certainly didn’t want to brand myself with them and I didn’t until now. I was relieved they weren’t MLM and they’ve earned my trust, slowly, over the years I’ve worked with the company,” she said. “They’ve gone through some growing pains and maturing. I was also worried about the

As prices rise, coffee drinkers keep chugging

By Christina Rexrode
Associated Press

NEW YORK — People are paying more to fuel up these days — on coffee.

From high-end prepared drinks to store-brand ground beans, coffee price increases have outpaced even the hike in gasoline prices the past year.

While many coffee drinkers are paying more for lattes some coffee shop owners say price hikes haven’t trickled down—yet.

“It’s something that I keep an eye on, and I’ve heard on the news that coffee prices are on the rise but I’m not paying more today than I was months ago,” JC Smullin, manager of Zulu Bagels and Java Jungle in Twin Falls, said.

However, Smullin expects his roaster may raise prices in the future. “Just because it hasn’t effected us yet doesn’t mean (a price increase) isn’t coming,” he said.

J.M. Smucker Co., the maker of grocery store stalwart Folgers and of packaged varieties of Dunkin’ Donuts coffee, said Tuesday that it is raising on most of its U.S. coffee products by 11 percent, its fourth increase in a year. And Kraft Foods Inc., Peet’s Coffee and Tea Inc., and Starbucks Corp. also have recently raised their prices for brewed and packaged coffee.

But the drink remains essential for many.

Eboney and Tyson Owens say they’ve noticed coffee prices rising. They aren’t about to give up coffee, but they’re buying different brands depending on what costs least among their top four preferred brands — Starbucks, Dunkin’ Donuts, Godiva and Seattle’s Best.

“I’m a Starbucks fan, I swear by it,” Eboney Owens, 32, said.

However, if something else is on sale or has a coupon available, she’ll switch.

YOUR MONEY

Don’t pay for unnecessary extras

Consumers unwittingly pay millions of dollars each year on “extra” fees and services tied to cell phone contracts.

To save your hard-earned dough, check your cell phone bill every month to make sure you are only being charged for features you agreed to. If your bill is inaccurate, contact your carrier’s customer service center right away.

Another way to save money on cell phone service is comparing what you “want” with what you “need.”

Review your minutes. Are you using more than is allotted? Do you have a large balance of minutes at the end of the month? By aligning your contract with the minutes you know you’ll use and need, you could save on overages or paying for minutes you don’t use.

Call around. Competition among carriers means you may not have to pay early termination fees. If you find a carrier with a better and less expensive plan, see if they’ll pick up your contract termination fees. Many will.

If you’re near the end of your contract, take time to negotiate. You may end up paying less and receiving a free top-of-the-line device.

YEMEN
Officials: 38 killed in capital fighting

SANA — Fighters from Yemen's tribes fired on government buildings Tuesday, and soldiers responded with intense shelling in street battles that left at least 38 dead as the uprising against President Ali Abdullah Saleh threatened to become a militia-led revolt.

Medical officials said 24 tribesmen were killed in the fiercest fighting on San'a's streets in years. Government officials said 14 soldiers were killed and 20 were missing as the situation deteriorated following the collapse of an Arab mediation effort to get Saleh to step down.

EGYPT
Mubarak to be tried in criminal court

CAIRO — Egypt's prosecutor general ordered former President Hosni Mubarak on Tuesday put on trial on charges of corruption and conspiring in the deadly shootings of protesters during the uprising that ousted him.

The announcement that Mubarak would face a criminal court grants a major demand of Egyptians who have threatened a second revolution amid growing worries about the slow pace of change under the country's new military rulers. The charges could carry the death sentence, said the prosecutor-general spokesman Adel el-Said.

It would be the first time an Arab leader is sent to trial solely by his own people in modern history.

ICELAND
Flights canceled due to volcanic ash

LONDON — Ash spewing from an Icelandic volcano is bringing disruption and days of uncertainty to more parts of Europe, as officials in Germany said dozens of flights will be grounded on Wednesday.

Even though some say it's been a massive overreaction by badly prepared safety regulators — one airline even claims the official scientific findings are simply wrong — hundreds of flights were canceled Tuesday as winds blew the cloud of ash from the Grimsvotn volcano over Scotland and other parts of Europe.

LIBYA
U.S. reaches out to rebels amid strikes

TRIPOLI — The Obama administration reached out Tuesday to the Libyan rebels and said Moammar Gadhafi would "inevitably" be forced from power as the U.S.-backed NATO coalition launched a withering bombardment on the Libyan leader's stronghold of Tripoli.

The NATO airstrikes struck in rapid succession shortly after midnight, setting off more than 20 explosions in the most intensive bombardment yet of the Libyan capital.

And late Tuesday, NATO hit Tripoli again, aiming at least six airstrikes at the same targets. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

IRAN
U.S. hits foreign firms with sanctions

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration on Tuesday hit seven foreign companies, including Venezuela's state-owned oil company and an Israeli shipping firm, with sanctions for doing business with Iran that helps fund its nuclear program. At the same time, the administration imposed separate sanctions on more than 15 people and companies in China, Iran, North Korea, Syria and elsewhere for illicit trading in missile technology and weapons of mass destruction.

Netanyahu ready for compromises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told a cheering U.S. Congress on Tuesday he was willing to make "painful compromises" for peace with the Palestinians, but he offered little concrete to entice Palestinians back to the bargaining table.

By giving such a high-profile speech before overwhelmingly supportive U.S. lawmakers, Netanyahu was able to demonstrate to Israelis that he retains strong backing in the United States despite his frosty relations with President Barack Obama.

He also moved the needle on territorial compromise, for the first time explicitly saying in his address that Israel would have to give up some West Bank settlements.

But Palestinians immediately rejected his overall peace package, which for the most part was a recycling of previously stated positions that the Palestinians had turned down. One senior Palestinian official even dubbed Netanyahu's peace blueprint a "declaration of war."

Speaking before a sympathetic Congress that showed him with more than two dozen sustained standing ovations, Netanyahu said Is-his country maintain a long-term military presence on the eastern edge of the West Bank and that Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas scuttle his power-sharing agreement with the violently anti-Israel Hamas militants.

He also restated Israel's refusal to repatriate millions of Palestinians who lost homes in Israel during the fighting over the Jewish state's 1948 creation.

Unlike the Americans, Palestinians had no accolades for Netanyahu.

In the West Bank, Nabil Shaath, a senior Palestinian official, called the speech "a declaration of war against the Palestinians."

"This is an escalation and unfortunately, it received a standing ovation," he said, noting that Netanyahu had rejected Palestinian demands on central issues such as borders, competing claims to Jerusalem and the fate of refugees.

Gates urges Iraqis to ask for U.S. troop extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recalling the enormous American investment in Iraq, Defense Secretary Robert Gates said Tuesday he hopes Baghdad asks U.S. troops to stay beyond their Dec. 31 departure date.

"I hope they figure out a way to ask, and I think that the United States will be willing to say yes when that time comes," Gates said in response to a question about Iraq after delivering a speech on Pentagon budget cuts.

Gates said a longer U.S. military presence could help sustain the security and other gains Iraq has made in recent years. Iraq could become a model for a multi-sectarian society in the Arab world "that shows that democracy works," he said.

Gates was bullish on Iraq's political prospects.

"Something we could not have predicted five months ago is that Iraq would emerge as the most advanced Arab democracy in the entire region," he said.

IN SEARCH of the PERFECT PAIRING

Tips on matching wine with food

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

You want to host a fancy dinner party, but you're not sure if you should serve a cabernet sauvignon or a merlot with that steak?

Pairing food and wine isn't an easy task, but with a little practice, there are ways to find great matches. The Times-News spoke to Twin Falls sommelier Jon Melone and chef Lynn Sheehan, owner of Cucina Gemelli in Twin Falls, to get tips on food and wine pairings.

Wine experts do intensive training to familiarize themselves with the more than 200 chemical compounds that give wine its personality, Melone said.

"Wine is the most complex food group that there is out there," said Melone, who received training through the Court of Master Sommeliers and practices his skills as a freelancer in Magic Valley. But you don't have to know what a tannin is to enjoy a great glass of wine with your meal.

Here are some ways to find your favorite pairings:

Plan the food around the wine — or not. If you have a fabulous wine you want to feature, Sheehan said, make the menu around that. That way, you can plan the flavors around the features of the wine. But if you've already made the menu, don't fret. "You could work it either way," she said.

Melone recommended making the menu first so you can take into account all of the flavors before committing to a bottle.

Look past the meat. It's not as easy as pairing reds with red meat and whites with white meat, Melone said. Sheehan agreed. "You can't go by that guideline," she said. Full-bodied whites can pair well with steak, and a chicken breast served with red sauce might be better served with a red.

Don't forget other wines. Sparkling wine, rose, and fruit wines all have a place at the table. "I particularly like rose wines with smoky flavors," Sheehan said. Try a dry rose with bacon or barbecued meat. "Rose is spectacular with that," she said.

Highlight the flavors. Look at every component of the meal, Malone said. There might be an herb or sauce you want to feature. If that's the case, the wine pairing will be different than if you were matching to another flavor.

Sheehan agreed, pointing out that there isn't always one right answer. At Cucina Gemelli, Chef John Ash will be offering two classes at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise in Twin Falls in June.

In addition to his seminar on pairing wine with food (see information elsewhere on this page), he will offer a class on foods that evoke the California wine country.

Ash, lauded as the "father of wine country cuisine," owns the critically acclaimed John Ash & Company restaurant in Santa Rosa, Calif., and has hosted wine and food talk shows on radio and television. He is an adjunct professor at the Culinary Institute of America at Greystone in the Napa Valley, and was voted "Cooking School Teacher of the Year" in 2008 by the International Association of Culinary Professionals.

Ash's cookbooks include "John Ash Cooking One-on-One: Private Lessons in Simple Contemporary Food from a Master Teacher," which won a 2005 James Beard award, "From the Earth to the Table: John Ash's Wine Country Cuisine," which won the IACP awards for Best American Cookbook and the Julia Child Cookbook of the Year, and "American Game Cooking."

The menu will feature: wild mushroom pate with olive bread; corn soup with Dungeness crab and spring herb salad; frisee salad with poached eggs and bacon; lamb spiedini with artichokes, pancetta and white beans; and artisan cheeses with walnuts, olive conserve and fig chutney.

Students who take both the California cuisine class and the wine pairings class receive a discount of $10.

The class will be 7-9 p.m. June 8, and costs $75. Information and to register: Rudy's, cooksparsadise.com, 147 Main Ave. W., Twin Falls, or 733-5477.

Cake pops explode in popularity

By James A. Fussell
McClatchy Newspapers

Cake pops — those colorful dipped and decorated golf ball-sized rounds of cake on a stick — are everywhere. They're popping up at school functions and weddings, birthday parties and baby showers.

There are books about cake pops, classes and YouTube videos.

Even Starbucks sells them. Popularized by a blogger known as Bakerella (www.bakerella.com), cake pops have taken over as the new cupcake. In her New York Times best-seller, Bakerella shows readers how to craft cake pops that look like robots, koalas, puppies and ghosts.

The classic cake pop is a super-sweet and mushy mouthful. In its original form it is made of finely crumbled cake and frosting creamed together, chilled, then dipped in colorful candy melt and deco-

Today we examine the cake-on-a-stick trend in more delicious detail.

Babycakes Cake Pop Maker (an appliance that resembles a waffle iron with deep round wells that bakes a different kind of round cake ball)

There's more than one way to make a cake pop. And the Babycakes Cake Pop Maker — while not the original way — is certainly the fastest. Heat it up, pour cake batter in the 12 round holes, then close the lid.

Poof! Perfectly round cake balls, ready in minutes. Put on a stick, then chill, dip and decorate.

The product was one of the hottest things at the recent International Home & Housewares Show in Chicago, drawing oohs and ahhs from the large crowds. Kathy Moore and Roxanne Wyss, local food professionals and home economists known as "The Electrified Cooks" (who also develop recipes for The Star's Eating for Life column), wrote the instruction book and demonstrated the appliance at the March show.

Everyone loved it, Moore said.

"Because you can, for the first time, bake balls of cake batter so easily and in just four minutes," she said. "People were thrilled that you could do them so easily, and make them with pure cake rather than with the cake and frosting combination. And these are small bites. There's so much less guilt. Times-News grilling contest deadline nears

For this competition, it's not enough to have a delicious recipe and masterful barbecue skills — we're looking for something extra-special. Perhaps you built your own barbecue, designed your own tools, came up with a new technique, or concocted your own family-favorite spice rub.

To compete, send in your favorite grilling recipe, with a description of what sets your barbecuing apart from the average tong-wielder. The top contestants — chosen on a combination of recipe and flair — will be contacted the week of June 6, and must be available to grill that recipe for a Times-News reporter and photographer during the week of June 13.

Send your recipe and description to writer Ariel Hansen at ahansen@magicvalley.com (or drop off your entry at the Times-News' Twin Falls office) by 5 p.m. Friday. Include a phone number where you can be reached during the day.

ruin the caloric input for the day?"

One limitation. Since the cake is not mixed with frosting, it is not moldable. It's round, or nothing.

Still, the machine has proved popular.

"My neighbor has been converted," Wyss said. "She keeps (cake balls) in her freezer and pulls them out as she needs them. She's used them as teacher appreciation gifts and taken them to a friend who was in the hospital. At Easter, instead of doing eggs, she decorated cake pops and took them up and down the neighborhood."

The cake pop maker costs $24.95 at Kohl's and also is available on the company's website, thebabycakeshop.com.

Browniepops

Cake isn't the only dessert you can set on a stick. It was a Leawood, Kan., woman who introduced the world to Browniepops.

Since 2006, Marsha Pener Johnston has made them for Paris Hilton, Carson Kressley and the band Kiss and has shipped them to Sweden, Russia, China and more. In the last two years, she has sold at least a half million.

In December she sold Browniepops to a company that owns ProFlowers and Shari's Berries. She now works for that company as its corporate baker in charge of new products. For now she still makes Browniepops in a commercial kitchen in Prairie Village, Kan.

Pener Johnston, a trained pastry chef, describes Browniepops as a cross between a truffle and a gooey brownie.

"Our formulation is such that we can hand-mold it," she said. "We do bunny rabbits and chickens, and right now we are working on Father's Day. I'm watching the artists hand-mold them into footballs and hand-paint baseballs and basketballs."

CAKE POP FLOWERS

Makes 48 cake pops

- 1 boxed cake mix, baked
- 3/4 can vanilla frosting
- 3 (1-pound) packages white chocolate candy coating
- 1 package of 50 cake pop sticks
- Multicolored candy corn
- 1 cake pop stand (available at most craft stores)
- 1 pastry bag
- 1 small bag pastel-colored M&Ms

In a large bowl, break up cake into fine crumbs, eliminating all chunks. Add frosting, then cream together with cake crumbs until mixture reaches a Play-Doh-like consistency. With your hands (wearing thin, latex gloves) mold batter into small, cone-shaped balls, then place on cookie sheet lined with waxed paper. Cover with plastic wrap and chill for at least 2 hours in refrigerator. Do not freeze.

Melt candy coating, one package at a time, according to package directions. (Tip: if candy coating is too thick, add 3 tablespoons solid shortening per package to candy coating and reheat in microwave to achieve a thinner consistency).

Taking a few cake balls out of the refrigerator at a time, dip the end of an empty cake-pop stick into the melted candy coating, then pierce the center of the narrowest end of cone-shaped cake ball, pushing no more than half way through. Holding the stick with the pop facing down, dip entire pop into the melted candy coating. Remove pop slowly and lift upward, allowing excess candy coating to drip down toward the stick. Rotate (or spin) the pop as the coating drips down to achieve even coating and cover all "bald" spots. Set coated pops in cake pop stand. Add melted candy coating to pastry bag.

Using coating like glue, squeeze a thin layer on top of cake pops. Carefully arrange candy corns in desired colors to make the petals of the flowers. Squeeze more candy coating on the middle of the flower petals, and top with M&M of your choice.

Pairing

Sheehan serves a panna cotta topped with blackberries. She recommends two wines to accompany the dessert: One domestic white muscat, and one red moscato from Italy. The red highlights the fruit, while the white makes the cream stand out.

Take advantage of resources. There are plenty of websites that can help with food pairings, Malone said. Get on Google and check them out. And don't forget to check out your favorite wineries' websites — many feature recommended pairings. Look for local education opportunities, like John Ash's upcoming class at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise in Twin Falls, or Malone's classes at College of Southern Idaho.

Have fun with it. Not sure where to start? Make some hors d'oeuvres and buy a few bottles of wine, then invite friends over to see how the flavors interact, Sheehan said.

Malone agreed, saying one person's perfect pairing might be different from another's. And there's nothing wrong with that, he said. "It really comes down to taste."

Lighten up a barbecue salad

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

A salad like this starts showing up at takeout counters as the weather warms up. Tempting as it might be to buy it, try making it yourself. You can control the quality and quantity of the ingredients, and the flavors will be fresh and exactly to your liking.

To keep things manageable, make more barbecued chicken and corn than you need for dinner one night; use the leftovers for this salad the next. If you don't have a prepared barbecue rub, you can just mix together chili powder, garlic or onion powder, cumin and a little salt.

MAKE AHEAD: The corn, chicken and beans can be prepared a day or two in advance. The salad is best the first day but can be refrigerated for up to 3 days. For optimal flavor, bring to room temperature before serving.

BARBECUED CHICKEN, CORN AND BLACK BEAN SALAD

Makes 5 cups (4 to 6 servings)

MARK GAIL/The Washington Post

Barbecued chicken, corn and black bean salad.

- | | |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
| 2 ears fresh corn, shucked, rinsed and wrapped in aluminum foil | 2 ears fresh corn, shucked, rinsed and wrapped in aluminum foil |
| 1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breast halves, trimmed of fat | 2 tablespoons dry barbecue seasoning |
| 3 tablespoons olive oil | 4 tablespoons barbecue sauce |
| 1 tablespoon | |
| 2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar | 1/4 teaspoon sugar |
| Salt | 1 1/4 cups (from one 15-ounce can) cooked black beans |
| 4 scallions (trimmed) white and light-green parts, finely chopped (1/4 cup) | |

Prepare the grill for direct heat: If using a gas grill, pre-heat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 seconds. Lightly coat a grill rack with oil and place it on the grill.

Place the wrapped corn ears on the grill. Cover with the lid and cook for 20 to 24 minutes, turning the ears every 4 to 5 minutes, until the corn is tender and has started to brown lightly. Remove it from the grill, unwrap the ears and cool for at least 10 minutes.

While the corn cooks, prepare the chicken: Sprinkle it with the barbecue seasoning on both sides, then rub it with 1 tablespoon of the oil. Transfer to the grill and cook, covered, for 7 to 12 minutes, turning once, until the chicken is cooked through. The cooking time will vary based on the thickness of the chicken breast halves.

As soon as the chicken is done, use 1 tablespoon of the barbecue sauce to brush the chicken (still on the grill). Cover and cook for 1 to 2 minutes to set the glaze. Transfer to a clean plate. Cool for 5 to 10 minutes.

Whisk together the remaining 2 tablespoons of oil and the remaining 3 tablespoons of barbecue sauce, the cilantro, vinegar, sugar and salt to taste in a large bowl.

Use a small, sharp knife to cut the kernels from the corn ears; discard the cobs. Add the corn to the dressing.

Cut the chicken into 3/4-inch cubes; add to the corn and dressing, along with the black beans and chopped scallions. Stir to combine. Serve right away, or cover tightly refrigerate up to 3 days.

Super-fast pasta relies on a few tricks

By Susan M. Selasky
Detroit Free Press

You can't beat a pasta dish when you need to toss together a quick dinner.

Dried pasta is the ultimate got-to-have pantry staple.

It's ideal because most dried pastas can be ready to eat in less than 10 minutes. If you're really in a hurry, fresh pasta can be ready in about 3 minutes.

While the pasta cooks, you can multitask as you prepare the other ingredients. The pasta cooking water can double as your kitchen helper.

Here are a few tips:

Cook the vegetables with the pasta. Add them during the last 2 minutes of cooking time. This saves time and energy. It also cooks the vegetables just the way I like them — crisp-tender. Add them sooner if you like them on the softer side.

Make sure the vegetables are cut uniformly for even cooking. Any vegetables will do. Think asparagus, broccoli, cauliflower, green beans and even spinach. In today's recipe, half a bag of mixed yellow and green beans squirreled away in the freezer did the trick.

While the water heats, instead of covering the pot with a lid to speed up the boiling process, set a heat-proof bowl inside the pot. Add sauce ingredients, such as butter, olive oil and cheese to the bowl and whisk until heated through or melted. Once the water boils, remove the bowl and set it aside.

Before you drain the pasta, take a glass measuring cup or large coffee mug and scoop out some of the cooking water. You can use the water to thin out the sauce if needed or to moisten the pasta.

The most time-consuming part of this recipe is prepping the herbs. You can use any variety, just make sure they're fresh, not dried.

WILLIAM ARCHIE/Detroit Free Press/MCT

You can't beat a pasta dish when you need to toss together a quick dinner. Here, pasta with herbs and green beans are featured in Free Press studio, May 12.

Keep in mind, too, that sage and rosemary are fairly strong and can easily overpower a dish.

When preparing fresh herbs, gently rinse them under cool water, but don't soak them. Dry them well with paper towels before chopping. It's best to chop them just before you add them to the recipe.

Finally, grate the Parmesan fresh. This pumps up the flavor, and you will use less of the pricey cheese.

PASTA WITH HERBS AND GREEN BEANS

Serves: 4 / Preparation time: 25 minutes / Total time: 35 minutes

- | | |
|--------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Sea salt and freshly ground black pepper | 1/2 cup dry white wine |
| 1 tablespoon olive oil | 12 ounces linguine, fettuccini or spaghetti |
| 2 medium shallots, peeled, finely chopped | 2 cups frozen mixed green and yellow beans |
| 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped | 1/2 cup packed fresh basil leaves |
| 8 fresh sage leaves, finely chopped | 1/4 cup loosely packed fresh flat-leaf parsley leaves, plus more for garnish |
| 1 tablespoon fresh oregano leaves, chopped | 1/4 cup snipped fresh chives |
| 1 teaspoon fresh rosemary, finely chopped | 1/3 to 1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese |
| 1/2 cup vegetable broth or fat-free, less-sodium | |

Heat a large pot of water to a boil. Salt the water, if desired.

Meanwhile, in 10-inch skillet, heat the oil on medium. Add the shallots; cook 2 minutes, stirring frequently. Add the garlic, sage, oregano, rosemary and 1/4 teaspoon each of salt and pepper. Cook 1 minute, stirring. Add broth and wine. Heat on high to boiling. Reduce heat to medium; cook, stirring, for 5 minutes or until reduced by half. Remove from heat.

While the sauce cooks, add pasta to boiling water and cook according to package directions. During the last 2 minutes of cooking, add the frozen beans to the pasta.

Reserve 1/4 cup pasta cooking water; drain the pasta and beans. Return them to the pot. Stir in wine mixture along with the basil, parsley, chives and reserved pasta water. Toss until well-combined.

Divide pasta among 4 serving plates or bowls and sprinkle with Parmesan. Garnish with parsley sprigs.

Asparagus, thick and thin

By Jill Wendholt Silva
McClatchy Newspapers

Stick with asparagus, through thick and thin. Recently a Cook's Illustrated reader wondered whether pencil-thin or fat-and-meaty spears were preferable. The magazine's team of culinary experts headed to the kitchen for a taste test. They steamed and tossed thick and thin spears in olive oil and salt. Both sizes tasted equally sweet, nutty and grassy. But the testers expected the thinner spears to be more tender, when the reverse was actually true.

In the end, both sizes were endorsed as "good bets," although testers advised choosing the size that best suits your cooking method. For instance, thick stalks are better for broiling and roasting because they stand up better to intense dry heat. Thin spears are better for boiling, steaming and eating raw.

Asparagus of any size is low in calories and high in antioxidants and folic acid, a nutrient that helps prevent birth defects. The Star's Orange Sesame Roasted Asparagus Salad adds an Asian-style sesame oil dressing to highlight the light, fresh taste of this spring vegetable. Sesame oil is high in polyunsaturated fats, ranking behind safflower, soybean and corn oil. Top Boston Bibb lettuce with asparagus and add juicy orange segments for more fiber and vitamin C.

Shopping tip: For extra flavor, spray asparagus with olive oil-flavored nonstick spray instead of regular nonstick spray.

Cooking tips: The best way to "trim" asparagus is to hold each spear in your hand and break at the point where it becomes tough, discarding the woody end.

Raw sesame seeds tend to have a slightly bitter taste. To toast sesame seeds so they release their nutty flavor, spread them in a pie pan and toast for 5 to 10 minutes in a 350-degree oven. Be careful not to overbrown, or the seeds will become bitter.

ORANGE SESAME ROASTED ASPARAGUS SALAD

Makes 4 servings

4 to 6 cups Boston Bibb lettuce

- 1 orange
- 1 pound asparagus, trimmed
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 2 teaspoons grated, peeled gingerroot
- 1 1/2 teaspoons sesame oil
- 1 tablespoon toasted sesame seeds

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Divide lettuce between four salad plates. Zest orange and reserve zest. Segment orange and divide evenly onto salad plates. Place asparagus on a baking sheet and spray generously with nonstick spray. Roast asparagus 12 to 15 minutes or until tender. Divide evenly on top of lettuce.

Whisk together orange juice, gingerroot, sesame oil and reserved orange zest. Drizzle over salads and sprinkle evenly with sesame seeds.

After a few bites, sandwich guide shows what it's made of

By William Hageman
Chicago Tribune

"The Encyclopedia of Sandwiches: Recipes, History, and Trivia for Everything Between Sliced Bread"

By Susan Russo (Quirk Books, $18.95)

...

What it is:

"The Encyclopedia of Sandwiches," a 320-page compendium of sandwiches from Susan Russo, who comments on (NPR's "Kitchen Window") and blogs (Food Blogga) about food. Her words are accompanied by the photography of Matt Armandariz.

Praise and quibbles:

If you take a spin through the table of contents, the list of sandwiches is not eye-popping. I mean, a roast beef sandwich? How difficult can that be? But go to the recipe. Kaiser roll. Swiss cheese. Tomato and red onion. Not bad. And then Russo really steps it up, explaining how to create advanced versions: beef on a weck, a Brazilian Bauru, the California roast beef.

These variations — and some sound truly spectacular — give the book added depth. Meat-and-potato types may not get excited about some of the recipes, such as the toasted chocolate sandwich or the doughnut sandwich.

Why you'll like it:

The book is compact, and the recipes are tempting and not overly involved. A nice touch is a six-page ingredient index, listing breads, condiments, sauces, meats, cheeses, fish, vegetables, fruits and nuts that appear in Russo's recipes. What to do with those pineapple rings in the fridge? There's a recipe that uses them.

Also, you have to like any book that opens with a page devoted to the wisdom offered by singer/songwriter Warren Zevon when asked what he had learned during his long, and ultimately losing, battle with cancer: "Enjoy every sandwich." With this book, you will.

Beef stew, Central American style

By Linda Cicero
McClatchy Newspapers

Q: There is a young man who comes to our church who is from El Salvador, and when we had a potluck dinner he told me about how much he missed his mother's cooking, especially her beef stew which he called sopa de res. Can you help me find an authentic recipe for this? I'd very much like to surprise him. —Katherine James

- 3 ears corn, husked and cut into thirds
- 2 chayotes or zucchini, quartered
- 1 medium head cabbage, cored and cut into 8 wedges
- Garnish
 - 2 habanero or serrano peppers, minced
 - 1/4 cup finely chopped onion
 - 1 cup chopped fresh cilantro
 - 2 limes, cut into wedges
 - 4 radishes, shaved paper thin

A: Sopa de res is soup made with beef shank, but from that point there is a lot of variation from one Latin American country to another. My recipe is from a friend who spent years in Mexico, and is fiercely flavored with habanero chiles. The Salvadoran dishes I've tried lean toward the spicy, so I'm hoping this comes close to what you are trying to recreate for your friend.

MEXICAN SOPA DE RES

- 2 to 3 pounds beef shank, with bone
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 (14.5-ounce) can diced tomatoes
- 2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 4 cups beef stock
- 2 to 3 bay leaves
- 2 medium carrots, peeled and coarsely chopped
- 2 small potatoes, quartered

Heat oil in a Dutch oven, and brown the shank over medium-high. When well-browned, remove meat from pot and add onion, garlic, tomato, and cumin. Cook until onion is transparent, about 5 minutes.

Return shank to pot. Add stock, bay leaves and enough water to cover the meat by about 2 inches. Reduce heat to low, cover and simmer about 1 hour, or until meat is tender. Set shank aside to cool.

Meanwhile, bring broth to a boil. Add carrots, potatoes, corn, squash, cabbage and water if needed to just cover vegetables. Cook 10 minutes, until vegetables are tender.

Remove cooled meat from the bones, cut it into bite-size pieces and return it to the pot to warm through. Serve with the garnishes on the side. Makes 8 servings.

Earthy sauce tops quick-cooking steak

By Linda Gassenheimer
McClatchy Newspapers

A mushroom pesto sauce goes perfectly with a pan-roasted steak, and the meal won't break your calorie bank.

Pesto sauce made with fresh basil, parsley, olive oil and Parmesan cheese originated in Genoa, Italy. Adding mushrooms to prepared pesto gives it an earthy flavor.

The Hot Pepper Potatoes are microwaved and then browned in the same skillet used to cook the steak. Microwaving the potatoes saves time and there's no pot to wash.

Open a bag of washed, ready-to-eat lettuce and pull out a bottle of reduced-calorie vinaigrette to complete this meal, which contains 545 calories with 37 percent of calories from fat.

WINE SUGGESTION: This savory steak cries out for a bold, red cabernet sauvignon.

HELPFUL HINTS: Save cleanup by using the same skillet to cook the mushrooms, steak and potatoes. Any type of quick-cooking steak such as flank, skirt or strip can be substituted.

MUSHROOM PESTO STEAK

Olive oil spray
3/4 pound beef tenderloin
1/4 pound sliced Portobello mushrooms (about 1 2/3 cups)
2 tablespoons prepared pesto sauce
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Several sprigs watercress (optional)

Cut tenderloin into 2-inch slices. Heat a nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Spray with olive oil. Sauté mushrooms 1 minute, turn and sauté 1 minute more. Transfer to a food processor, add pesto and 1/4 cup water, and blend until smooth. Set aside.

Add the steak to the same skillet. Sear over high heat for 2 minutes; turn and sear 2 more minutes. Reduce heat to medium and cook 4 to 5 minutes for medium rare (145 degrees on an instant-read thermometer), 6 to 7 minutes for medium (160 degrees.) Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Ask a cook: How much sodium does meat pick up during brining?

By Kathleen Purvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Q: As a dialysis patient, I have to be very careful with the amount of salt I use. I like to brine meats, but I'm unsure how much sodium the meat is actually absorbing.

A: It's hard for a home cook to know how much sodium meat absorbs from a brine. The amount of salt in the brine, the time the meat soaks and the type of meat make a difference.

The editors at Cook's Illustrated magazine once did a test in which they brined pork chops and skinless, boneless chicken breasts in a solution of 1/2 cup table salt in 2 quarts of cold water for 30 minutes. After cooking the meat, it was sent to a lab for analysis. The pork chops had a sodium content of 245 milligrams for 100 grams of meat, or slightly less than 1/8 teaspoon per serving, while the chicken breast had 353 milligrams, or just over 1/8 teaspoon per serving.

Because the chicken is less dense, it absorbed more sodium than the pork.

The Food and Drug Administration recommends that anyone in an at-risk category keep daily sodium intake to less than 1,500 milligrams, or slightly less than the sodium in a teaspoon of table salt, so 1/8 of a teaspoon could be a fairly high amount. With so many variables to consider, a person on dialysis should be very careful with something that could raise the sodium level of food.

Fish dinner is flexible, benefits from citrus twist

By Judy Hevrdejs
Chicago Tribune

At a recent dinner, my culinary guru/friend Jolene Worthington served guests a delicious, perfectly glazed, broiled salmon steak atop vinaigrette-dressed spinach.

The salmon's cooking juices gently wilted some spinach leaves, a tangy vinaigrette played well with the rich fish.

As her sous-chef for that entree, I loved its simplicity and tried to replicate it — with a few twists. Diced mango tossed with the spinach produced a mellow version.

Another friend suggested citrus, perhaps ruby red grapefruit. Tried that too, with the grapefruit's tartness brightening the salmon. Would halibut, swordfish or tilapia work? I tried each with tasty results.

BILL HOGAN/Chicago Tribune/MCT

Tiny red potatoes (halved, boiled and buttered) plus a meal capper of vanilla ice cream drizzled with caramel sauce with toasted pecans filled out the feast.

Tips: Use a barbecue grill rather than the oven to cook fish. Serve with iced tea or a French Chablis or Oregon pinot noir.

CITRUS-GLAZED SALMON WITH SPINACH

Prep: 15 minutes
Marinate: 15 minutes
Cook: 10 minutes
Servings: 4

1 large ruby red grapefruit
12 to 16 ounces fresh spinach
3/4 cup white balsamic vinegar, or white wine vinegar with a touch of honey
3 tablespoons olive oil
1/4 teaspoon salt

Freshly ground pepper
4 salmon fillets or steaks, about 4 ounces each
1 medium shallot, finely chopped

Peel and section grapefruit over a bowl, catching the juice; you'll need about 1/4 cup. Dice grapefruit segments; place segments and spinach in a large bowl. Combine 2 tablespoons grapefruit juice, 1/2 cup balsamic vinegar, 2 tablespoons olive oil, salt and pepper to taste in a small bowl. Arrange salmon on a plate; pour 1/2 cup vinaigrette over salmon (reserving remaining vinaigrette). Let stand 15-20 minutes. Meanwhile, heat broiler. Line a broiler pan or shallow baking pan with foil; brush with oil. Remove salmon from marinade, discarding marinade; place salmon in pan. Broil 8 to 10 minutes.

To dress spinach, put reserved vinaigrette in a heavy saucepan; reduce slightly over medium-high heat. Mix remaining 2 tablespoons grapefruit juice, 1/4 cup vinegar and 1 tablespoon oil in a bowl with the shallots and reduced vinaigrette. Pour over spinach; toss to coat. Divide spinach among four dinner plates; top with salmon.

Samuel Bishop Jr.

Sept. 20, 1928–May 22, 2011

BLISS — Samuel Bishop Jr. age 82, a lifelong resident of Bliss, Idaho, died Sunday, May 22, 2011, at his home.

Sam Bishop Jr. was born Sept. 20, 1928, in Gooding, Idaho, the only child of Samuel and Ruby Grace (Lisenbee) Bishop. He was raised on a small farm just north of Bliss until he moved into town with his parents. Sam graduated from Bliss High School in 1947.

As many others of his generation, the primary event of Dad's youth was the Second World War. Shortly after graduation, he enlisted in the Idaho National Guard, where he served for 28 years, retiring as a first sergeant in the Guard. Dad loved military history and took great delight in finding mistakes in history books and correcting them. His love of country and service was started by his father (Samuel Bishop) who enlisted in the U.S. Army during the First World War, and has been carried on by his children and grandchildren, having a son as a career Marine, a grandson in the New Mexico National Guard serving in Kosovo, and a grandson in the Navy serving in Tokyo, Japan.

Dad's career in life was working on the Maintenance of Way for the Union Pacific Railroad. He started out as a section hand in Bliss, became a relief foreman working from Vale, Ore., to Rock Springs, Wyo., and from Fairfield, Idaho, to Salt Lake City, Utah, before getting a permanent assignment in Paul, Idaho. Dad ended his career on the railroad as a track inspector, covering the rails between Orchard to Shoshone, Idaho.

Sam Bishop Jr. married Betty E. Reed of Tuttle, Idaho, on March 12, 1949, in Gooding, Idaho. They were together 62 years this spring. They built the home they would occupy together for more than 60 years. They had four children, David Andrew Bishop, Samuel Hugh Bishop, April Estelle Bishop and Betty Nell Bishop.

When not working on the railroad, serving in the Guard, or trying to keep his children on the straight and narrow, Dad's greatest joy was working his farm. For years, Dad claimed to be the largest farmer in Bliss, with just over 20 acres. There were farmers out of town with larger farms, but in Bliss, Dad's farm was the largest. When not working or farming, Dad needed "something to do while resting," so he served the community he loved so well. He served on the Bliss Fire Department for nearly 50 years, long enough to fight fires alongside of his son and grandson. He helped develop the Bliss Quick Response Unit, was one of the first to be qualified as an EMT, and helped arrange the funding for the current Bliss Fire House. He also served on the school board for the Bliss School District, as a city councilman, and the mayor of Bliss. Dad did a lot of "resting." Dad passionately loved elk hunting in the high country of Idaho. His idea of heaven was a good horse on a mountain trail. On the memorable summer of '64, Dad took the entire family on a six-day pack trip covering the Salmon, Boise and Payette rivers.

The farthest Dad ever got from home was riding a horse in President Johnson's 1964 Inaugural Parade in Washington, D.C. Dad was a member of the Idaho National Guard's "Blue Shirt Cavalry," which had been selected to represent the state of Idaho in that parade. Dad often commented about seeing Lady Bird Johnson pulling on her husband's suit jacket to get him to stop politicking and pay attention to the people in the parade.

After "retiring," Dad worked in the harvest, driving sugar beet truck or spud truck. He took great pride in maintaining his equipment and trying to devise a faster, easier and less expensive way to "accomplish the mission." Dad was always out and about with his four-wheeler and a dog, fixing fence, changing water or cutting firewood, even though his Addison's disease left him weak and unable to "get outside and do something" as much as he wanted to. He was cutting firewood on a daily basis until March of this year when his heart started to fail him.

Samuel Bishop Jr. is survived by his wife, Betty; and three of his children, S.H. Bishop of Bliss (Cheryl) of Bliss, Idaho, April (David) Pohl of Bloomfield, N.M., and Nell Thompson of Glenns Ferry, Idaho. He has nine grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren, plus extra grandchildren and great-grandchildren who were "adopted" into his clan. He was preceded in death by both his parents; his oldest son, David (Kathy) Bishop of Madras, Ore.; and a granddaughter, Heather.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, May 26, at the Bliss Community Church in Bliss, Idaho, with Dad's friend, Pastor Bill Devena officiating.

As per his wishes, Dad was cremated and the scattering of his ashes up in elk country will be done at a later date.

Neil W. Higley

Sept. 28, 1929–May 16, 2011

OGDEN, Utah — Neil W. Higley of Ogden, Utah, died Monday, May 16, 2011, at the age of 81.

He was born Sept. 28, 1929, in Rupert, Idaho, to Ronald Neil and Maggie (Woodall) Higley, now deceased. Neil married Viola Nickerson, and they moved to Ogden to raise their family. They had two sons, Owen LaVare Higley, and stepson, Charles Lee Sherwood. Neil served in the Navy from Dec. 13, 1947, to Nov. 27, 1951. He then gave the federal service another 26 years. He also owned his own business, Higley's Burgers. Neil enjoyed life! He liked hunting and fishing, but was quoted to say, "My outside interest is centered mainly in enjoying life with my family."

Neil was friendly and helpful with his neighbors and they in turn looked out for him as well. Those that rented his flower shop spoke highly of him as a landlord. Neil found a special friendship in June Pendleton of Ogden. They enjoyed dinners and various activities.

Neil will be missed by those he left behind, his son, Owen LaVare Higley; his brothers, Ronald and Glen Higley; his step-sister, Bonnie Clark; and his longtime friend and companion, June Pendleton. Those loved ones who will greet him on the other side will be his much-loved wife, Viola Nickerson; his stepson, Charles Lee Sherwood; his parents, Ronald Neil Higley; and step-mother, Rosetta Baggett Higley; his sister, Opal Arlene Phillips; his brother, Carl Higley; and his four stepsisters and stepbrothers.

It's comforting to recognize that we always have a circle of loved ones around us.

The family will meet friends from 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 25, with the funeral following at 7 p.m. at Leavitt's Mortuary, 836 36th St. in Ogden, Utah. A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, May 26, at the Oakley Cemetery in Oakley, Idaho.

Online condolences may be sent to the family at www.leavittsmortuary.com.

GOODING — Nadine Conrad, our beloved mother and grandmother, peacefully passed away Sunday, May 22, 2011, in Bonners Ferry, Idaho, at the age of 83.

Nadine was born Sept. 20, 1927, in Malad City, Idaho, to Leland and Zilpha Williams. She married William Everett Conrad on Nov. 5, 1948, and was sealed in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple on April 11, 1961. Nadine was a beautician. She owned and operated a beauty shop in her home in Gooding for many years. She loved many types of arts and crafts, including sewing and crocheting. She was a painter and won many awards for her paintings. She also loved working in the yard with Everett. She was very active in the LDS Church, where she served in many callings over the years. She was very proud of all her family and always supported them in their many activities. She is survived by her chil-

Lester O. 'Les' Molt

April 16, 1922–May 23, 2011

JEROME — Lester O. "Les" Molt, 89, of Jerome, passed away Monday, May 23, 2011, in Twin Falls, Idaho, surrounded by his family after a long battle with cancer.

He was born April 16, 1922, in Robinson, Kan., the son of Christian August Molt and Fannie Harriett Sheets Molt. Les was raised in Kansas and moved to Oregon at age 16. In 1964, he settled in southern Idaho, where he worked most of his life farming. He later worked at Volco Inc. in Jerome until retiring in 1984. Les enjoyed hunting and fishing but especially trail riding on horseback.

He is survived by four children, Eldon (Lisa) Molt of Jerome, Doug (Lois) Molt of Jerome, Louella (Frank) Hicks of Lakewood, Colorado and LeAnn (Curt Dietrick) McMillan of Buhl. He is also survived by three sisters, Norma Gifford, Anna Davis and Dorothy (Bob) Collins; nine grandchildren; numerous great-grandchildren; and many extended family members and friends. He was preceded in death by his life partner, Elaine Homan; his parents; two sisters; two brothers; and a son-in-law, Jay McMillan.

The funeral will be conducted at 1 p.m. Friday, May 27, at Farnsworth Mortuary Chapel, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, with visitation beginning at noon. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery.

William Jacob Rambo

Aug. 17, 1927–May 22, 2011

William Jacob Rambo, age 83 of Twin Falls, Idaho passed away Sunday, May 22, 2011, at the Twin Falls Care Center in Twin Falls.

William Jacob Rambo was born Aug. 17, 1927, in Hansen, Idaho, to Robert Hulon and Ida Ellen Reed Rambo. As a young man in his 20s, William enlisted and served in the United States Army from 1946 to 1947. After being honorably discharged, he married Norma Christine Staley on Aug. 15, 1948. To this union were born Steve James (Jane) Rambo, David Allen Rambo, Tammy Rambo (Dick) Van Dyk and Keven Robert (Stacie) Rambo.

These children blessed the family with 12 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren. William was a hard worker. He was a carpenter by trade and began working with Volco's in Jerome, Idaho, for several years before signing on at the College of Southern Idaho, where he worked for 21 years. When he wasn't working, William loved fishing, hunting, camping, woodworking and spending time with his family and friends.

William is survived by his loving wife of 62 years, Norma of Twin Falls, Idaho; his three sons; one daughter; and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, two brothers and one sister.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, May 26, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. Interment will be held following the service at Sunset Memorial Park Cemetery in Twin Falls.

We would like to thank the entire staff of doctors and nurses at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls and the wonderful staff at the Twin Falls Care Center for all their care and compassion. The family requests that contributions be made to the favorite charity of one's choice.

All services and arrangements are under the direction of the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls, Idaho. Those wishing to share condolences may do so at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

Nora Catharine McKinney

Jan. 28, 1917–May 21, 2011

Nora Catharine McKinney, 94, of Twin Falls, passed away Saturday, May 21, 2011, while resting peacefully at home with family by her side.

Catharine was born Jan. 28, 1917, in Russellville, Ill., to Wallace and Laverna Wilber. Catharine worked on the family farm from a young age with her four siblings. In 1947, Catharine left Illinois and moved to Las Vegas, Nev. There, she married Stanley Russell McKinney on Dec. 17, 1948. In 1951, they had their only daughter, Farla Jane McKinney. In 1968, the family moved to Twin Falls, Idaho. In previous years, they had spent their summers fishing on the Salmon River in the Sawtooth Stanley Basin and in the Twin Falls area.

Catharine was a devoted wife, mother, grandmother, sister and lifelong friend to many. She always had a keen sense of humor and loving words. Her charming and witty personality won her the affection and admiration of all who had the pleasure of knowing her. To know her was to be loved by her. Catharine was always full of hugs, smiles and funny stories. She had an infectious laugh that could brighten any situation. She loved her family and grandkids and was always an inspiration to everyone. Catharine was a full-time caregiver to her husband, the love of her life, for many years. Her home and kitchen was always open to her friends and family. As anyone who knew her could tell you, she was the best cook from her sourdough pancakes to her wonderfully famous tacos.

She was one of the original Sawtooth Mountain Mamas in Stanley, and she loved her time spent on the Salmon River with her many wonderful friends and family. Catharine loved sewing, knitting, fishing, baseball, soccer and watching her grandchildren play and grow. She loved life and will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

Catharine is preceded in death by her husband, Stanley McKinney. She is survived by her daughter, Farla Schiermeier, and son-in-law, Tom Schiermeier of Twin Falls; her grandchildren, Chad Schiermeier of Hailey and family, and Ryan Schiermeier and family of Twin Falls; a sister and brother from Illinois; and many nieces and nephews.

The family would like to very sincerely thank the many devoted friends, doctors, nurses and wonderful people who were devoted to her care.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, May 26, at White Mortuary in Twin Falls. There will be a private viewing for family and friends from 8 p.m. Wednesday, May 25, at White Mortuary.

IDAHO

DISTRIBUTION NOTICE

■ 48 HOUR DISTRIBUTION BEGINS: Distribution hotlines open at precisely 8:30am this morning for Idaho residents only. These trucks are being loaded at the National Distribution Center of U.S. based Fridge Electric with new ArcticPro™ high performance portable air conditioners and soon will be delivered to lucky Idahoans.

Idahoans set to get one of 1,577 new portable air conditioners being released by county

Residents who find their county listed below automatically qualify to get a new A/C unit that slashes cooling bills up to 74%, but only the first 1,577 callers who beat the 48 hour order deadline are getting the new A/C units that keep you cool for just pennies

UMS – It just got a lot cooler for lucky Idahoans.

That’s because U.S. based Fridge Electric has just announced that they are releasing brand new portable air conditioners that drastically slash cooling bills by up to 74% to residents of the state of Idaho.

Company spokesman, Ryan Berry, says, “We only have 1,577 new air conditioners to release, so residents of the state of Idaho who find their county listed in today’s paper need to call the Idaho Distribution Hotline immediately to get theirs.”

This is all happening to announce the new ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner that actually cools an uncomfortably hot room in just minutes by blasting out ice cold air.

This amazing performance was verified by Fridge Electric’s top engineer who researches and develops new products at the company’s highly-secured testing laboratory located at their world headquarters.

The ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioners are being called a work of engineering genius from the China coast because they use 74% less electricity than costly central air conditioners to save you money all summer long.

mer long.

“You see, with central air conditioners you are wasting a lot of money to cool areas of your home that you’re not even using. And window air conditioners are even worse because they weigh so much they’re nearly impossible to move,” said Berry.

But the ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner saves you money because it actually rolls from room-to-room so you can turn down the central air conditioner and stay cool in any room of the house for just pennies a day. Everyone is getting them because all you do is vent them and plug them in.

Just in time to beat the unbearable summer heat, ArcticPro™ portable air conditioners are being delivered directly to the doors of the first 1,577 Idahoans who beat the 48 hour order deadline.

And here’s the best part. Since the ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner is not being sold at any retail stores, residents of the counties listed in today’s paper are actually saving a ton of money by avoiding all the retail markup. That makes getting the ArcticPro™ portable air conditioner direct a real steal for just three hundred ninety-eight dollars and shipping because it only uses about 10¢ an hour of electricity, so you can leave it on all day long and never be hot again.

With all of the money you save over central air, these high performance portable air conditioners pay for themselves in just a matter of weeks. After that, they just keep on putting cash in your pocket month after month.

“We’re trying to make sure no one gets left out, but we only have 1,577 ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioners to release and when they’re gone, they’re gone so residents of the counties listed in today’s paper need to call right now. Those who do will be the really smart ones because we’re letting residents have two air conditioners per household until we run out just as long as they call before the deadline ends,” confirms Berry.

“We’re bracing ourselves for all the calls because with the amount of money these high performance air conditioners save people on electric bills everyone wants one. But since Idaho residents are not paying the retail markup you better believe they’ll be telling the operators they want two,” said Berry.

“So when the lines are busy keep trying. We promise to answer every call. Then we’ll have a delivery truck out to you in no time at all so you can stay cool and start saving money,” Berry said.

“You’ll never have to be hot and miserable again,” he said. ■

■ SAVES ON BILLS: The new ArcticPro™ uses 74% less electricity than costly central air conditioners, so everyone gets lower cooling bills and stays cool all summer long for just pennies a day.

■ NEVER BE HOT AGAIN: Even the hottest rooms are no match for the new ArcticPro™ portable air conditioner because it cools uncomfortably hot rooms with ice cold air in just minutes.

■ COOL NIGHT’S SLEEP: Everyone loves a cool, comfortable night’s sleep. The new ArcticPro™ has a built-in sleep timer that puts you in control of how cool you want to be all night long.

■ EASILY ROLLS ANYWHERE: The new ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner easily rolls from room to room to keep you cool. All you do is vent it and just plug it in to instantly stay cool in any room.

Heat beat Bulls, one win away from NBA Finals

By Ira Winderman
Sun Sentinel

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade wasn't Dwyane Wade until the waning minutes. That was a significant concern Tuesday night.

But Mike Miller wasn't Mike Miller, at least the version that has been on display in recent weeks. And that represented a significant gain.

With Miller compensating for what Wade was unable to provide, and LeBron James playing like LeBron James, the Miami Heat moved within one win of the franchise's second appearance in the NBA Finals with a 101-93 overtime victory at AmericanAirlines Arena.

With Miller scoring 12 points on a night Wade was limited to 14 on 5-of-16 shooting, the Heat rode the 35 points of James and 22 more from forward Chris Bosh to a 3-1 lead in the Eastern Conference finals, with the best-of-seven series continuing Thursday at the United Center.

The Heat closed out the game by converting their final 24 free throws.

Wade managed to keep his playoff double-figure scoring streak alive at 77 when he hit a jumper midway through the extra period, later scoring on a drive to move to 5-of-16 from, the field.

Point guard Derrick Rose led the Bulls with 23 points.

Game 6, if necessary, would be Saturday at AmericanAirlines Arena.

If the Heat win Thursday in Chicago, the NBA Finals could begin as soon as next Tuesday at AmericanAirlines Arena, if the Dallas Mavericks defeat the visiting Oklahoma City Thunder on Wednesday night in Dallas. The Mavericks lead the Thunder 3-1 in the Western Conference finals.

Both teams struggled with their offense early in the extra period, one the Heat started with James, Wade, Bosh, Miller and Udonis Haslem on the floor.

Bosh then got to the line with 3:23 to play and converted a pair of free throws, adding a 19-foot jumper with 2:47 to play for an 89-85 Heat lead.

But Bulls reserve Ronnie Brewer then responded with a 3-pointer to make it 89-88.

That's when Wade converted his first shot since midway through the second quarter, a 19-foot jumper, for a 91-88 Heat lead with 2:08 to play.

Bulls forward Carlos Boozer then got to the line with 1:49 to play, converting only the first free throw, to draw Chicago within 91-89.

James then muscled his way to the rim for a 93-89 Heat lead with 1:36 to play.

The Heat then forced a turnover on Bulls forward Luol Deng, with Wade scoring at the rim for a 95-89 Heat lead, with the Heat holding on from there.

With Miller, who entered 3 of 15 on 3-pointers in the playoffs, converting his second 3-pointer of the night and then a long jumper, the Heat went from a 68-63 deficit entering the fourth quarter to a 70-69 lead.

Miami Heat forward LeBron James and guard Dwyane Wade (3) celebrate their overtime win over the Chicago Bulls in Game 4 of the NBA Eastern Conference finals in Miami on Tuesday.

Burley brothers sign college
letters of intent

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

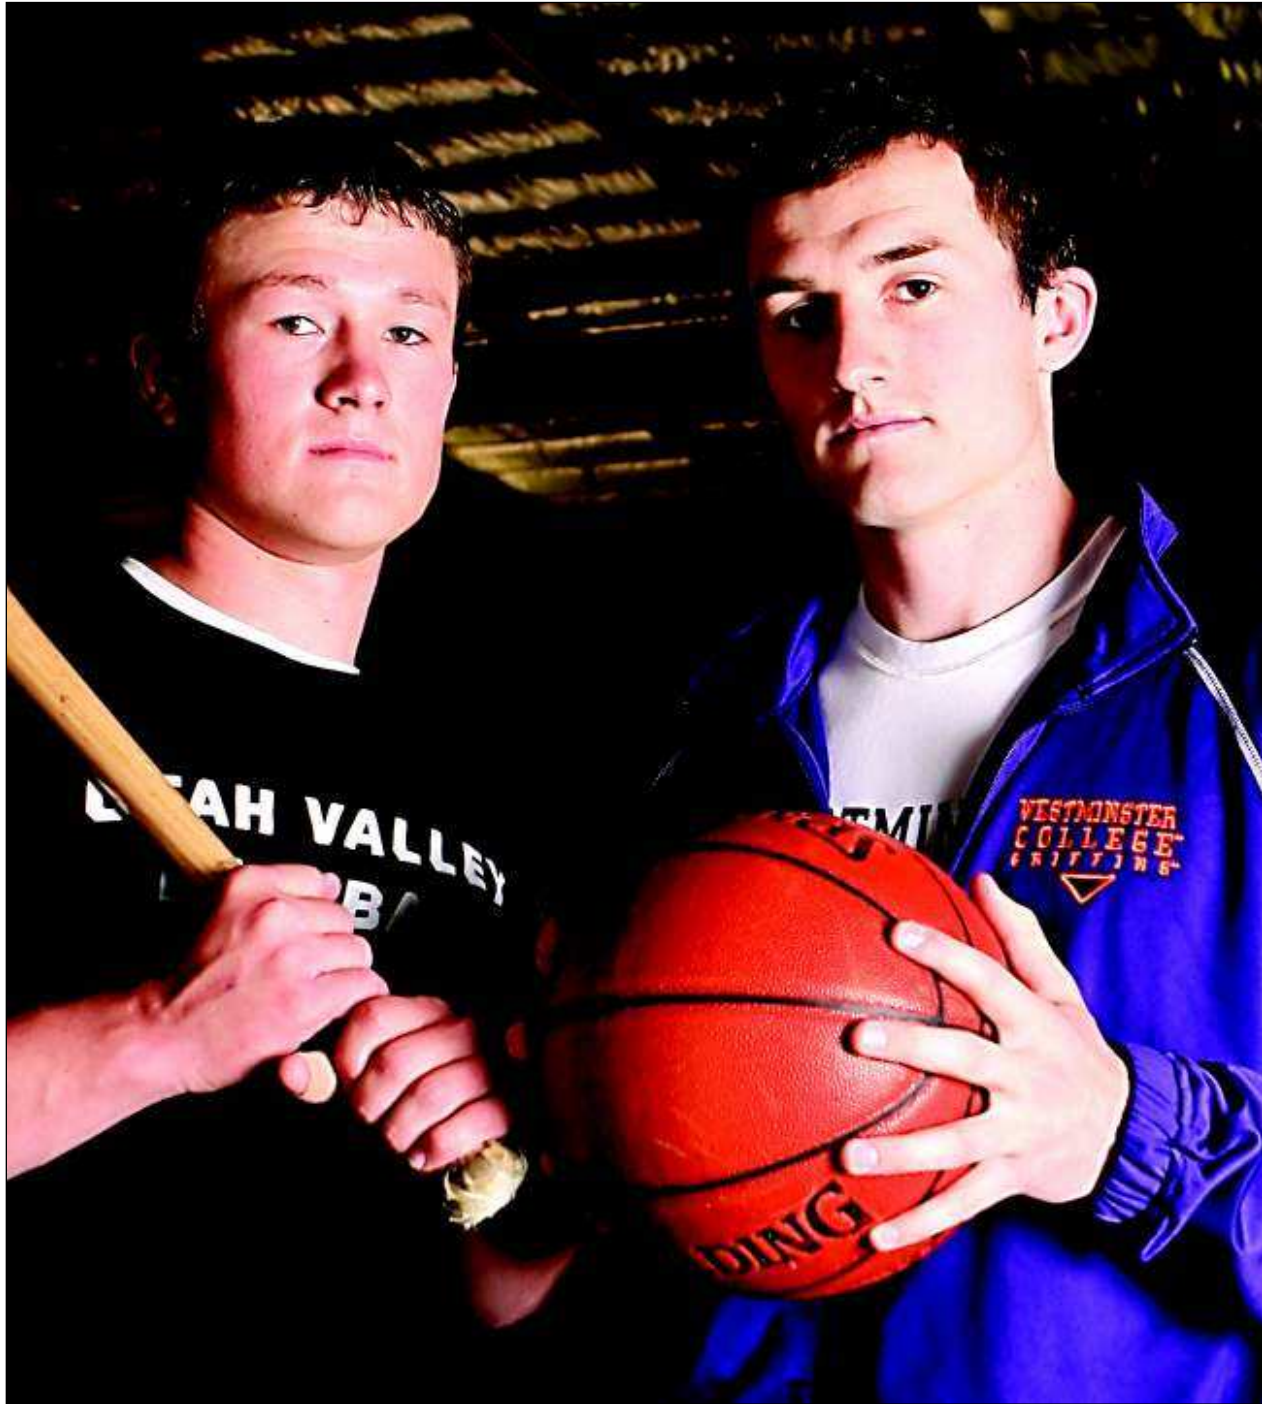

BURLEY — Two brothers. Two sports. One common dream.

Colton Moon and Kody Moon each put ink to paper Tuesday, signing letters of intent to continue their playing careers at the college level. Colton Moon signed to play basketball at Westminster College in Salt Lake City and Kody Moon signed to play baseball at Utah Valley University in Orem, Utah.

The younger of the two, Kody Moon will graduate this week from Burley High School. He batted .449 and had 20 RBIs for the Bobcats his senior season. Perhaps his biggest contribution came behind the plate as catcher, where he shut down opponents' running games while calling his own pitches.

"Having a catcher like Kody back there allows the pitchers to throw any pitch at any time and you're confident that it's not going by him," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "And the way he works with the pitchers, Kody is the coach on the field."

The past three seasons, Kody Moon has been an integral part of Burley baseball's rebuilding project, taking the Bobcats from the Great Basin

Bruins' Sharp signs with ISU

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

With a few strokes of the pen, Jenna Sharp realized two childhood dreams.

Since she was young, the Twin Falls High School senior has wanted to play college golf and attend school at Idaho State University.

She'll get to do both.

"I can't wait to be a Bengal," said Sharp, who emotionally thanked her family, friends and coaches before signing a National Letter of Intent with ISU on Tuesday.

Sharp's grandmother introduced her to the game of golf at age 5. "I've been playing ever since," said Sharp. "I've tried really hard and worked really hard to get where I am."

Her coach agreed. "She's worked hard for four years and it's nice to see it pay off," said Bruin golf coach Matt Harr.

"Not too many kids get to do this so it's something special."

Sharp finished seventh at the Class 4A girls state golf tournament last week, shooting a two-day 166. She finished 10th at state as a junior. Her senior season included medalist honors at three events, highlighted by a 77 shot during some strong April showers at the Dale Mowrer Invitational played at Canyon Springs Golf Course in Twin Falls.

"I'm so used to it now that I usually play better in crappy weather than good," said Sharp.

Rain or shine, she's ready to make her mark at Idaho State under third-year head coach Kellie Hooper.

"It's going to be awesome," Sharp said, "and I'm just really excited to start and get better and improve. ... I'm just going to go in there and try my best to get up to the top."

Tiger Woods, on crutches, expects to play in US Open

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press writer

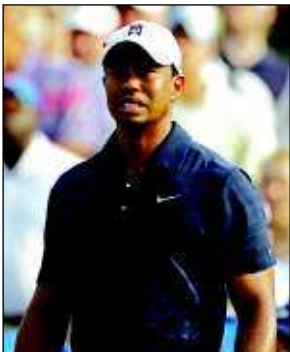

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa. — Tiger Woods says he'll be ready to go for the U.S. Open.

Good thing for Woods there's time to get healthy.

The golfing great hasn't hit a ball in about two weeks. Woods needs crutches and a walking boot for relief on his aching left leg. He won't even start leg training until the end of next week.

But Woods expects to tee off at the U.S. Open June 16-19 at Congressional Country Club in Bethesda, Md.

"You just play through these things," Woods said. "There's a difference be-

Drinking linked to problems in the MLB stands

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press writer

It was "College Night" at the Brewers game and season ticket holder Aaron Gross knew what that meant.

Cheap tickets for sale. Cheap beer at the tailgate parties. Plenty of booze-fueled trash talk inside the stadium. And, eventually, some alcohol-induced insults leading to suds-soaked fisticuffs.

"I have no problem with heckling people, that's part of the game. But they were crossing lines," said Gross, who found himself — along with his wife — caught near a brawl on a night when college students got in for half price. "It got unpleasant to the point where we left the game. The whole section was completely drunk and obnoxious. We left in the fourth inning, just said, 'That's enough.'"

At eight stadiums across the country — Miller Park in Milwaukee, Coors Field in Denver, Busch Stadium in St. Louis among them — fans told The Associated Press similar stories in recent weeks, reinforcing a fact of life at American stadiums: Alcohol is as big a part of going to a baseball game as peanuts and Cracker Jacks.

And while much of the boorish, and even criminal, behavior at the ballpark involves alcohol, expect the suds to keep on flowing. The business partnership between beer and baseball is as intertwined as the bond between pitcher and catcher.

From the 1970s-era debacles of 10-cent Beer Night in Cleveland and Disco Demolition Night in Chicago to this season's most disturbing moment — the coma-inducing attack on a Giants fan at Dodgers Stadium — there's an alcohol-related slant to many incidents involving unruly fans at baseball parks.

Last weekend, authorities arrested 31-year-old Giovanni Ramirez, the man they say was the main aggressor in the beating of Giants fan Bryan Stow in the parking lot at Dodgers Stadium following the season opener. In the days after the beating, Los Angeles canceled six half-price beer nights scheduled for 2011. Witnesses said the

Blackburn, Span lead Twins over Mariners

MINNEAPOLIS — Nick Blackburn came through with a desperately needed complete game and Denard Span had three hits and an RBI to lift the Minnesota Twins to a 4-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Tuesday night.

Blackburn (4-4) allowed seven hits and struck out six, throwing a career-high 127 pitches for his fifth career complete game and the Twins snapped a nine-game home losing streak.

Doug Fister (2-5) gave up four runs and nine hits with six strikeouts in 6 2-3 innings. He balked home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and the Mariners saw their season-high six-game winning streak come to an end.

Miguel Olivo had a homer, a double and two RBIs for Seattle and Jason Kubel added two hits and an RBI for the Twins.

ORIOLES 5, ROYALS 3

BALTIMORE — Adam Jones capped a ninth-inning uprising with a two-run walkoff homer against Joakim Soria, giving Baltimore a 5-3 victory over Kansas City on Tuesday night.

Jones hit an 0-2 pitch over the center-field wall to cap a three-run rally that gave Baltimore its third straight victory.

RED SOX 4, INDIANS 2

CLEVELAND — Josh Beckett picked up first regular-season win in Cleveland, where the Indians lost for just the fifth time at home.

Beckett (4-1) allowed one run and five hits in 6 2-3 innings for his only non-postseason win at Progressive Field. He won here in the 2007 ALCS, pitching eight dominant innings in Game 5 as the Red Sox kept their season alive and eventually won the series.

YANKEES 5, BLUE JAYS 4

NEW YORK — Curtis Granderson had a tying RBI single in the ninth inning then stole second before Mark Teixeira singled him home to give CC Sabathia and New York the win.

The Yankees rallied for two runs in the eighth against relievers Casey Janssen and Marc Rzepczynski, and two in the ninth off Frank Francisco (1-2) for their sixth win in eight games.

TIGERS 7, RAYS 6

DETROIT — Alex Avila's second homer of the game gave Detroit the lead in the eighth inning.

Miguel Cabrera hit a three-run homer in the fifth, giving him 34 RBIs this season, to help Detroit win its third straight.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
REDS 6, PHILLIES 3

PHILADELPHIA — Jay Bruce hit a tiebreaking, three-run double in the ninth inning and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-3 Tuesday night to snap a six-game losing streak.

The Reds had lost eight straight against NL East-leading Philadelphia, including a three-game sweep in last year's division playoff series.

BRAVES 2, PIRATES 0

PITTSBURGH — Jair Jurrjens pitched six-hit ball into the eighth inning to lead Atlanta over Pittsburgh.

Jurrjens (6-1) struck out four and walked one in 7 2-3 innings while dropping his ERA to 1.56. Craig Kimbrel worked a perfect ninth for his 13th save.

ROCKIES 12, DIAMONDBACKS 4, 1ST GAME
DIAMONDBACKS 5, ROCKIES 2, 2ND GAME

DENVER — Carlos Gonzalez homered twice and Colorado became the first team to decipher Josh Collmenter's tomahawk-pitching style, rallying past Arizona despite losing pitcher Jorge De La Rosa to a torn elbow ligament in the opener of a day-night doubleheader.

Then the Rockies lost the nightcap when Joe Saunders (1-5) snapped his six-game losing streak and Kelly Johnson hit a solo homer and had one of three RBI doubles off Jhoulys Chacin (5-3) in the sixth inning.

Colorado manager Jim Tracy was ejected in the third inning of Game 2 after arguing a call at home plate.

DODGERS 5, ASTROS 4

HOUSTON — Jerry Sands hit a grand slam and Jay Gibbons also homered as Los Angeles snapped a three-game losing streak with a win over Houston.

Astros starter J.A. Happ (3-6) walked Jamey Carroll with two outs in the third inning before a single by James Loney. Matt Kemp reached on an error by second baseman Bill Hall to set up the slam by Sands.

CUBS 11, METS 1

CHICAGO — Ryan Dempster pitched seven effective innings, Starlin Castro had three hits and two RBIs and Chicago pounded the stumbling New York Mets.

The Cubs kicked off a nine-game homestand with their 11th victory in their past 12 games against NL East teams, hours after putting right-hander Matt Garza on the 15-day disabled list with elbow stiffness.

BREWERS 7, NATIONALS 6

MILWAUKEE — Jonathan Lucroy hit a two-out, two-run single in the eighth inning and Brandon Boggs collided into catcher Wilson Ramos to score the go-ahead run, rallying Milwaukee past Washington.

Conference cellar to within one win of reaching the Class 4A state tournament this season.

"No one in this program has put in more time than him since I've been here, not even close," Kunz said. "Some kids talk the talk, but Kody backs it up. He walks the walk, too."

Utah Valley is a NCAA Division I program competing in the Great West Conference. Due to NCAA rules, UVU coaches are not allowed to publicly comment on certain recruits, but Kunz said they are thrilled to land Kody Moon.

"They love how scrappy he is," Kunz said. "It's a good fit for him. The coaches love him, and he loves the school."

Kody Moon said watching the hard work and dedication of his older siblings — Colton in basketball and sister Kyrié in gymnastics — helped motivate him to excel as well.

"I always tell people my dad's sport was football, my brother's sport is basketball and my sport is baseball," Kody Moon said. "I told my dad, 'Dad, I want to play at Utah Valley and nowhere else. I'll do anything to go play there.' We made it a goal and I gave it all I had. I ended up there and I'm very grateful for it."

Colton Moon's path to Westminster, a NAIA program competing in the Frontier Conference, took a detour around the world. After graduating from Burley in 2008, he committed to play at the College of Southern Idaho. He worked out with the Golden Eagles during that summer, but decided to put his college career on hold in order to go on a two-year LDS Church mission to Ukraine.

"I missed playing the game," said Colton Moon, who scarcely touched a basketball for two years — and when he did, it was on broken concrete courts with wooden backboards and bent rims. Ukraine is a soccer nation, and Colton Moon said basketball ranks below even ping-pong in popularity.

His first priority is to get his basketball legs back.

"I've got a lot of work to do," he said. "You can tell I haven't played for a while and I'm out of shape."

In essence, the last organized competitive game Colton Moon played was more than three years ago when he dropped 30 points with seven 3-pointers in the 2008 Class 4A state championship. The point guard was named the 4A Player of the Year as both a junior and senior while leading Burley to back-to-back state titles in 2007 and 2008. During that span the Bobcats posted a 53-1 record. As a senior he averaged more than 14 points and seven assists per game.

Westminster coach Adam Hiatt heavily recruited Colton Moon out of high school.

"I remember just watching the leadership intangibles, his vision, his ability to be a pure point guard," Hiatt said. "He just had what I classify as being a special player."

It took a few years, but Hiatt finally got his man — and he believes it was worth the wait.

"I'm very excited that Colton is going to be a Westminster Griffin. He's a tremendous person, a tremendous student, and he's a great basketball player," Hiatt said. "I fully expect him to have an outstanding career here at Westminster because I believe he is a special player and a special person and he fits into what we do. We're a winning program, and he's a winner."

Opting not to return to CSI, Colton Moon said he decided to become a Griffin before he even left for Ukraine.

"Westminster is a good fit for me," he said. "Two weeks before my mission they invited me down to play and I really enjoyed it down there. It's a great campus and it's just a good fit. It's where I felt like I needed to be."

While the college destinations are set for the Moon brothers, the journey to signing day will always be remembered by their parents, Darin and Valerie Moon.

"Kody and Colton have a great work ethic, and that's what makes us the proudest as a family," Darin Moon said. "We are grateful to be part of this community and we're grateful to everyone who has been a part of the success of our boys and have helped them to get where they're at."

Players file unfair labor charge against NBA

NEW YORK — The NBA players' association filed an unfair labor charge against the league Tuesday with the National Labor Relations Board, a move it hopes could block a lockout it feels owners want.

The union says the NBA hasn't bargained in good faith, has made financial demands without offering concessions to the players, and has bypassed the union to deal directly with players.

The charge filed with Region 2 of the NLRB seeks "an injunction against the NBA's unlawful bargaining practices and its unlawful lockout threat."

The NBA and players are trying to reach a deal for a new collective bargaining agreement before the June 30 expiration of the current one. They plan to meet early next month during the NBA finals, but remain far apart on major financial issues and a work stoppage remains a possibility.

Though both sides insist they realize the importance of negotiating a deal themselves without it reaching the courts, as the NFL's labor situation has, the union hopes the charge could give them legal backing if bargaining fails.

The NBA recently sent a second proposal for a new CBA to the players, who object to the economic changes the league says it needs.

WEST TO BE MORE THAN 'FIGUREHEAD' WITH WARRIORS

SAN FRANCISCO — The hiring of Jerry West as an adviser and a member of the Golden State Warriors' executive board has been described as adding another voice to the room for a franchise looking to reverse a run of ineptitude.

West brings much more than a voice to a downtrodden franchise. He has a pedigree that includes titles as a player and executive and a proven ability to build championship teams.

But his role with the Warriors will be different from the ones he had while running basketball operations for the Los Angeles Lakers and Memphis Grizzlies. Larry Riley is already in place as general manager and the team hired agent Bob Myers in April to be the assistant general manager and GM in waiting.

"I would hope that I will have a voice, but I will not make that final decision," West said Tuesday at his introductory news conference. "I don't want to be the final decision-maker. I don't think it's fair to the people in place. That was my biggest reservation coming here. I didn't want to come here and feel I would overshadow Larry and Bob."

Instead West will advise owners Joe Lacob and Peter Guber, who bought the team last year for a record $450 million, as one of the members of the team's executive board. West also received an ownership stake in the organization.

ON VERGE OF NBA FINALS, MAVS COACH PUSHES BASICS

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki and Jason Kidd were told Tuesday to stay home and relax. The day after leading the Mavericks to one of their greatest comeback victories, and the day before they could earn another chance at their first NBA title, they deserved some time to lounge around and let it all soak in.

Besides, when they arrive at work Wednesday, coach Rick Carlisle will have plenty of other things for them to think about.

Like getting more rebounds, committing fewer turnovers and playing better defense the first 43 minutes so they don't need another historic comeback.

Carlisle doesn't expect his veteran squad to lose its focus after going up 3-1 in the Western Conference finals and getting a day off, but he's not taking any chances. With the Oklahoma City Thunder on the ropes, he wants Dallas to knock them out right away, in Game 5 at home on Wednesday night.

"I know that (the Thunder) are going to come in tomorrow and they're going to come back at us hard, as they've done every game," Carlisle said. "We'll have to play our best game to close them out. ... We've got to be careful about getting away with how happy we are."

Politicians, businessmen supporting NFL players

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Some of the little guys in the NFL labor dispute have thrown their support behind the players in their legal fight to end the owner-imposed lockout.

A 44-member group of local elected officials and small business owners filed an amicus brief in support of the players on Tuesday, saying a prolonged lockout will result in jobs being lost and government budgets being short.

The group includes state lawmakers, city council members and pub owners from Washington to Texas.

The group says a federal court in St. Paul, Minn., was right to order an injunction to lift the lockout. The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has put U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson's ruling on hold temporarily and is scheduled to hear arguments June 3 on the legality of the ongoing lockout.

"This injunction is about far more than the paychecks of the players or the fortunes of the owners," lawyers for the group wrote. "It is also about the livelihoods of the business owners whose livelihoods depend on NFL game day and the taxpayers and elected officials who have committed their scarce resources to the NFL enterprise."

The group is comprised of 32 local government leaders, including Pennsylvania state Rep. Kevin Boyle, Washington state Sen. Steve Conway and Billy Davis, the mayor of Crowley, Texas. It also includes several local sports bar owners and operators in several NFL cities including Denver, Dallas, Green Bay and St. Paul.

The filing argues that players and owners aren't the only parties with something to lose if the $9 billion business does not start on time this fall. They say local governments rely on NFL games for tax revenue and economic stimulus. Stadium workers and pub owners depend on the games for jobs and several cities and states are owed games because they committed millions of dollars in public money to help build new stadiums.

"The NFL's lockout threatens the livelihood of thousands of American workers," the brief stated. "A lockout would also deprive state and local governments of substantial tax revenues that are generated by the league's operations. Such losses could not come at a worse time, when state and local budgets are already stretched to the breaking point."

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello declined to comment on the filing.

The owners also have some support from the business community. Last week the U.S. Chamber of Commerce business lobbying group filed a brief supporting the league. The chamber, like the NFL, noted that the dispute is currently before the National Labor Relations Board in the form of an unfair labor negotiations charge against the players. Until then, the chamber said, the court fight should be on hold and the NFL should be able to lock out its players if needed.

The brief filed Tuesday for the players cites several studies and figures provided by local teams to outline the impact NFL games have on local economies, saying it is in the public interest for the three-judge panel to uphold Nelson's ruling and lift the lockout.

Drinking

people who attacked Stow were apparently drunk.

"When at least a certain portion of folks go to venues, they're there to have a good time and part of the good time is they're going to have a few cocktails before they go and a few more when they're in the stadium," said Robert Pandina, the director of the Center of Alcohol Studies at Rutgers University.

"What's alarming is the increased risk, because you have so many people in the stadium who are becoming intoxicated. A lot of them are young men. It becomes kind of a tinderbox for aggression."

At the University of Minnesota, researchers became interested in the topic of drunkenness at games after seeing a steady stream of small news items involving assaults, car accidents and rowdy behavior by drunken fans. Among the findings from the school's studies since 2005:

— Alcohol laws and guidelines at stadiums are poorly enforced: Researchers said 74 percent of people pretending to be drunk were served and they were three times more likely to buy it from a vendor working the stands than a concession booth.

— Thousands of fans leaving games and getting into their cars are drunk: Researchers took breathalyzer tests of 362 fans at 13 baseball and three NFL games and found 8 percent of them — 1 in 12 — were legally drunk, while 40 percent of them had at least something to drink.

That 8 percent, when multiplied by the thousands of people attending games nationwide, leads to a staggering number.

"I hear from people who'd been going to games their entire life, they say, 'I don't go to games anymore,'" said Darin Erickson, who worked on the University of Minnesota studies. "They tell stories about people swearing blatantly, throwing things and fights. It's not always actual assaults, but some of the people I talk to just aren't comfortable with the environment. And it seems that they're often saying it's attributable to general drunkenness."

Coors Field usher Travis Wilson saw a lot of that sort of behavior play out last season from his perch above centerfield, looking up into the rowdy Rockpile, where the tickets cost only $4 and there's plenty of extra cash for fans to spend on the ballpark's namesake beer.

"Pretty common," said Wilson, who works the Colorado Rockies games in Denver, when asked how often fights broke out in the cheap seats. "Sometimes, it depends on the rivalry in town, if it's a team we have a history with. It doesn't always have to do with alcohol, but a lot of times, it's a contributing factor."

Wilson said he never kept count of how many people got dragged off by police, some of them to the holding cells at the stadium. But, he said, it was hardly a rare event.

NFL to fine clubs for series of flagrant hits

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The NFL will punish teams next season if their players commit multiple flagrant hits that result in fines.

The punishment will be financial, although league vice president Adolpho Birch said Tuesday he didn't rule out Commissioner Roger Goodell applying further sanctions such as stripping clubs of draft choices.

Citing the "notion of club accountability," Birch said details such as the amount of the fines against clubs, or how many player fines would trigger punishment, have not been determined.

"As a club's total increases to a certain threshold, we will enforce some ... payback to encourage clubs to stay below that threshold," Birch said. "We're looking at a system similar to one we instituted a couple years ago with off-field conduct."

The NFL began a crack-down on illegal hits, particularly those to defenseless players, last October. It threatened suspensions, but no players had to sit out games. However, Ray Anderson, the league's chief disciplinarian, has said suspensions will be considered for egregious hits this season.

Now, clubs as well as the players are being put on notice that illegal hits will result in substantial discipline.

Birch would not identify which teams from 2010 would have been subject to fines had the policy been in place, but did say at least three teams might have been punished. One player, Pittsburgh All-Pro linebacker James Harrison, was fined $100,000 for flagrant hits last season.

"We'll check the number of fines and the level of fines going out for infractions that relate to various player safety violations," Birch said. "Particularly head and helmet issues."

The 32 owners voted unanimously Tuesday to approve rules amendments for player safety, including a measure aimed at keeping a player from launching himself into a defenseless opponent. A 15-yard penalty will result for anyone who leaves both feet before contact to spring forward and upward into an opponent and delivers a blow to the helmet with any part of his helmet.

Such tackles will also be subject to fines.

The definition of a defenseless receiver already has been extended. Now, a receiver who has not had time to protect himself or has not clearly become a runner even if both feet are on the ground is considered defenseless.

Defenseless players cannot be hit in the head or neck area with the helmet, facemask, forearm or shoulder. The definition of such players now includes those throwing a pass; attempting or completing a catch without having time to ward off or avoid contact; a runner whose forward progress has been stopped by a tackler; kickoff or punt returners while the ball is in the air; kickers or punters during a kick or a return; a quarterback during a change of possession; a player who receives a blindside block from a blocker moving toward his own end zone.

Nadal rallies to beat Isner at French Open

PARIS (AP) — It's newsworthy enough when anyone manages to win a set against Rafael Nadal at any stage of the French Open — let alone two sets in the first round.

So a buzz built at Roland Garros on Tuesday when unseeded American John Isner pulled ahead of five-time champion Nadal by unfurling his 6-foot-9 frame to pound serves at upward of 140 mph, pushing up to the net time after time for volleys, and generally making the Spaniard uncomfortable for stretches.

"Quite clearly," Nadal acknowledged later, "this is a match that I could have lost."

In the end, he did not. Stretched to five sets for the first time in 40 career French Open matches, Nadal came back to emerge with a 6-4, 6-7 (2), 6-7 (2), 6-2, 6-4 victory over Isner and reach the second round.

"Really, what it came down to is the way he played in the fourth and fifth sets," Isner said. "I haven't seen tennis like that, ever."

It was the most riveting match of a day that featured reigning U.S. Open and Australian Open champion Kim Clijsters' first appearance at the French Open since 2006, a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Anastasiya Yakimova. Also advancing were Maria Sharapova, Li Na, Andy Murray, Robin Soderling and Sam Querrey.

Two seeded women lost: No. 20 Ana Ivanovic, the 2008 champion, was eliminated 7-6 (3), 0-6, 6-2 by Johanna Larsson of Sweden, while No. 22 Dominika Cibulkova of Slovakia was beaten 6-7 (10), 6-3, 6-2 by Vania King of the United States. No. 11 Nicolas Pietrangeli departed with a five-set loss to Lukasz Kubot of Poland.

Nadal's bid to tie Bjorn Borg's record of six championships at the clay-court Grand Slam tournament nearly came to a too-abrupt-to-believe halt.

Consider:

- Nadal entered the day 38-1 at the French Open, his only loss coming to two-time finalist Soderling in the fourth round in 2009.
- Isner's career in Paris before Tuesday? One first-round exit and one trip to the third round, for a 2-2 record.
- Nadal is ranked No. 1 and owns nine Grand Slam titles.
- Isner is ranked 39th and never has been past the fourth at a major tournament. He's best known to date for winning the longest match in tennis history, 70-

68 in the fifth set at Wimbledon last year, and setting a record with 113 aces in that marathon.

- Until the first of Tuesday's two tiebreakers, Nadal hadn't lost a single set at the French Open since 2009. And he hadn't lost a set in any of 12 previous first- or second-round matches in the tournament.

So all seemed rather ho-hum when Nadal was leading Isner by a set and a break at 4-2 in the second. But Isner broke back to 4-all when Nadal missed a forehand, and suddenly, a tight match ensued.

"That's when I started to sort of believe a little bit more," Isner said, "and started to play with more confidence and strut around more out there."

Even Nadal was a bit worried. So was Toni Nadal, Rafael's coach and uncle, who would later say that from his perch in the stands he felt "very, very nervous, because losing in the first round is not too good for us."

But his nephew steeled himself, and made zero — yes, that's right, zero — unforced errors in the fourth set, while Isner made 12. Nadal broke Isner for a 2-1 edge in the fourth set, and called that "the turning point."

Isner's coach, Craig Boynton, agreed.

"Rafa getting up an early break in the fourth really helped his psyche," Boynton said.

College finals rodeo still on, despite horse virus

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A highly contagious virus that can kill horses has forced the cancellation and postponement of some rodeos and events throughout the West, but others, including the College National Finals Rodeo, are going ahead, officials said Tuesday.

The CNFR, which describes itself as the "Rose Bowl" of college rodeos, attracts teams from more than 100 colleges from around the nation and Canada that bring up to 700 horses.

"We're still on go, and until something changes, that's the way it'll be," Roger Walters, commissioner of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association, said.

The rodeo is set to run June 12-18, but contestants usually arrive several days beforehand.

Walters said he's not aware of any teams or contestants deciding to stay away from the rodeo. "Safety is foremost, and we're going to do everything to keep the safety of not only our students but our livestock foremost on all fronts."

The Equine Herpes Virus-1 has infected dozens of horses in at least 11 states and Canada after being traced to an equine event in Ogden, Utah, this month. At least nine horses have died.

The disease poses no threat to humans, but is easily spread among horses. Various other horse events, including rodeos and competitions in Oklahoma, Nevada, Colorado, Washington and Kansas, have been canceled or delayed. In Wyoming, a junior college canceled its horse riding class this spring.

State veterinarians are leaving it up to event organizers to decide whether to cancel.

"We're not recommending to organizers to immediately cancel events at this point," said Bob Meyer, assistant state veterinarian. "We're watching it real closely this week and next, and hopefully it will go ahead and subside and there will be a lot less risk."

Wyoming, which does not have any confirmed cases of the virus, is requiring that all horses be inspected by a veterinarian 72 hours before entering the state.

Walters said his association puts the safety of its students and livestock foremost and accepts the Wyoming requirements.

"Those requirements are not absurd by any means, and we're sure going to meet those requirements," Walters said.

In fact, the association is advising teams and contestants on how to protect their horses, he said.

"We have told our students to be proactive and that means for about five days prior to them coming to the college finals, have a temperature reading both morning and night on all horses that they're going to transport to the finals," he said.

States with confirmed cases are: Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah and Washington.

Horses from Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Wyoming were exposed to the virus in Utah, but those states have yet to report any confirmed cases.

Woods

Woods is bothered by pain in his left knee, left Achilles' tendon, tightening in his calf, and has a sore lower back. He says doctors have not mentioned leg surgery. But he doubts he'll play the Memorial next week in Dublin, Ohio.

Woods said he'll start training by the end of next week. How his leg responds will determine when he can start hitting balls again — all but ruling out the Memorial.

"I've had four surgeries on it," Woods said. "Obviously, it's not what it was when I was little."

That means Woods would go to the U.S. Open with little competition, although this is nothing new for him. In 2008, he had arthroscopic surgery after the Masters and didn't play again until the U.S. Open. Doctors discovered a double stress fracture in his left tibia in the weeks before the major. Going against his doctor's advice, Woods not only played the U.S. Open, he won it at Torrey Pines in a 19-hole playoff.

Now, he says his left leg is not nearly as bad as it was then.

His golf, however, is a different story.

In the 11 tournaments Woods played before the U.S. Open, he won eight times, was runner-up twice and didn't finish out of the top five. In the 11 tournaments before this U.S. Open, he has only five finishes in the top 10.

Woods said he was more worried about his health in 2008.

"I'm a lot better off," Woods said. "I feel that in the next week or so, I can start getting back toward that and start practicing pain free. That's where I'm at."

Woods spoke Tuesday at Aronimink Golf Club to promote the upcoming AT&T National.

Woods withdrew after only nine holes this month at The Players Championship. He also fell out of the top 10 rankings for the first time in 14 years.

He has been No. 1 for 623 weeks in his career, by far the longest of any golfer since the rankings began in 1986. He had been No. 1 from June 2005 until Lee Westwood of England supplanted him last November.

"I haven't played. It's one of the reasons I've fallen as far as I have," Woods said. "When I did play, I haven't played well. Winning takes care of all of that."

He acknowledged he did come back too early for The Players Championship. He hurt himself on the opening tee shot at Sawgrass. Woods' status was borderline for the tournament to begin with, but he pressed on and did further damage. He won't risk additional injury to the leg.

"It'd certainly be nice to come up here and play practice rounds," he said, "and do all the other prep I do for the majors."

Not a chance this week, even on a gorgeous Tuesday.

Woods posted on Twitter that he would donate $1 million to his foundation if no reporters asked him about his leg. There was no chance of that on the very first question. Woods later posted on Twitter he would donate the money anyway.

UConn, Idaho State take hits in new APR reports

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The NCAA has put Connecticut on notice — improve in the classroom or face tougher penalties.

The Huskies men's basketball team was one of six BCS teams sanctioned Tuesday for sub-par marks in the NCAA's annual Academic Progress Rates report. The Associated Press reported last week that UConn will lose two scholarships for the upcoming season because of the APR report.

And if the grades don't get better, the Huskies' punishment could get worse.

"We are all disappointed in our academic performance and going forward we are going to attack this in the only way I know how, and that is to work as hard as possible to get better every day," coach Jim Calhoun said in a statement. "I do know that over the past year, we have made improvements and are moving in the right direction."

To avoid losing more scholarships or practice time, UConn will have to prove it. And the Huskies weren't the only school getting hit Tuesday.

Southern University in Baton Rouge, La., became the first school to face postseason bans in two programs — men's basketball and football — because of academics.

The APR measures classroom performance of student-athletes on every Division I team. Teams scoring below the 925 outline in one year can face immediate penalties. Those scoring below 900 or with low scores for several years face tougher historical sanctions.

This year's data covers 2006-07 through 2009-10. A perfect score is 1,000.

The average APR number for all athletes jumped three points to 970 in the latest report. Baseball (959) and men's basketball players (945) each had a five-point increase while the football score (946) improved by two points.

But the improvement was tempered by two things — a record eight teams receiving postseason bans and the punishment of a prominent national champion that went before the NCAA infractions committee last year and now has seen a one-year drop from 930 to 893 in the classroom.

"It is disappointing to see that drop at UConn," said Emmert, who once served as Connecticut's chancellor. "We certainly hope it's a one-year drop."

Since postseason bans became part of the penalty structure in 2008, only four teams have received the punishment.

This year's group consists of men's basketball teams at Cal State-Northridge, Chicago State, Grambling, Louisiana-Monroe and Southern, and football teams at Idaho State, Southern and Jackson State, Walter Payton's alma mater.

No team has ever been given the harshest penalty, a one-year membership restriction.

The NCAA handed out 58 penalties this year to schools that have had consistently poor showings over more than one year. These harshest penalties — postseason bans, practice reductions or guaranteed scholarship cuts — affected only one BCS conference team: Arkansas, which will lose one scholarship in men's basketball.

Five other BCS teams will lose scholarships only if an equal number of academically ineligible players leave school. Football teams at Maryland and Louisville could lose up to three scholarships. Men's basketball teams at Georgia Tech and LSU could each lose one.

A seventh BCS team, Southern Cal men's basketball, fell below the outline at 912, but was not penalized.

UConn has already said it will lose both its scholarships because two players have left the school in poor academic standing. The school posted the second-lowest score of any BCS team in the three major sports: football, men's basketball and women's basketball. Arkansas' men's basketball team had an 892. Butler, the two-time national runner-up, had a perfect 1,000.

UConn's score also prompted the NCAA to notify the school it was in danger of facing the harsher historical penalties if the APR number doesn't go up next year.

Walter Harrison, president at the University of Hartford and chairman of the NCAA's committee on academic performance, said he plans to meet with UConn's new president, Susan Herbst, soon and plans to discuss the classwork.

Emmert is willing to go a step further.

"In our office, we have routinely and would be willing again to send people to campuses to do things like best practices," he said. "We want to help them understand their relationship with the NCAA and what we can do to be helpful, and I'm sure they've got the culture there (at UConn) to respond appropriately."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The degree of civilization in a society can be judged by entering its prisons."

— Fyodor Dostoyevsky

Declarer in three no-trump wins the heart jack with his king in hand as you signal with the nine (always signal with the highest card you can afford). He then plays a spade to dummy's 10, which you should duck. The point is that you are not costing yourself a trick in the suit if you do. (You know that if declarer has a doubleton spade, you will still collect two tricks in the suit, but you are happy for declarer to waste his entries to hand to play on spades. If you win the first spade trick, you make declarer's life easier in the spade suit, AND you do not know which minor to play!)

Now South plays the king and queen of diamonds and a diamond to his ace before playing another spade to the jack, queen and your king. What do you do now?

A spade or a heart would clearly be disastrous, so it has to be a club. Because you need to put partner in so that he can play another heart through dummy's queen, you must switch to the club KING. Whether declarer wins or ducks, you have forced an entry to your partner's hand.

This play does have a name — the Deschappelles Coup, named after the famous 18th-century whist and chess player. By shifting to an honor, you save partner from having to put up his potentially vulnerable high card and insure that you can put him on play sooner or later.

ANSWER: In this sequence the five-club call is a cuebid for diamonds. (With both majors, your partner would have started with a cuebid of four clubs at his first turn.) With nothing to be ashamed of here, you should bid five hearts in case your partner is looking for a grand slam. You are certainly too good to sign off in five diamonds.

Today is Wednesday, May 25, the 145th day of 2011. There are 220 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On May 25, 1961, President John F. Kennedy told a joint session of Congress: "I believe that this nation should commit itself to achieving the goal, before this decade is out, of landing a man on the moon and returning him safely to the earth." (That goal was accomplished eight years later with the Apollo 11 mission.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1787, the Constitutional Convention began meeting in Philadelphia after enough delegates had shown up for a quorum.

In 1810, Argentina began its revolt against Spanish rule with the forming of the Primera Junta in Buenos Aires.

In 1895, playwright Oscar Wilde was convicted of a morals charge in London; he was sentenced to two years in prison.

In 1911, Mexican President Porfirio Diaz resigned; he went into exile in France for the rest of his life.

In 1935, Babe Ruth hit the 714th and final home run of his career, for the Boston Braves, in a game against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In 1946, Transjordan (now Jordan) became a kingdom as it proclaimed its new monarch, Abdullah I.

In 1968, the Gateway Arch in St. Louis was dedicated by Vice President Hubert Humphrey and Interior Secretary Stewart Udall.

In 1979, 273 people died when an American Airlines DC-10 crashed on takeoff from Chicago's O'Hare airport.

In 1981, daredevil Dan Goodwin, wearing a Spiderman costume, scaled the outside of Chicago's Sears Tower in 7½ hours.

In 1986, an estimated 7 million Americans participated in "Hands Across America" to raise money for the nation's hungry and homeless.

Ten years ago: A federal appeals court panel lifted an injunction against publication of "The Wind Done Gone," Alice Randall's satirical retelling of "Gone With The Wind" from a black viewpoint.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush and British Prime Minister Tony Blair held a White House news conference in which they acknowledged making costly mistakes in Iraq, but vowed to keep troops there until the fragile new government took hold. Former Enron Corp. chiefs Kenneth Lay and Jeffrey Skilling were convicted in Houston of conspiracy and fraud for the company's downfall. (Lay died in July 2006 from heart disease and his convictions were vacated; Skilling faces resentencing after his original 24-year sentence was overturned.) Pope Benedict XVI began a four-day pilgrimage to Poland, the homeland of his predecessor, Pope John Paul II.

One year ago: President Barack Obama ordered 1,200 National Guard troops to boost security along the U.S.-Mexico border. NFL owners voted to hold the 2014 Super Bowl in New Jersey. Nicole Scherzinger of The Pussycat Dolls and her professional dance partner, Derek Hough, won the 10th season of ABC's "Dancing with the Stars."

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

DEAR ABBY: I started a relationship with a co-worker. We went out for several months, and I found myself really enjoying his company. The feeling was mutual. After several months I told him I was developing feelings for him, more than just friends. He told me he was gay. I was shocked, saddened and angry all at the same time, but we went on to develop an even stronger friendship.

I have fallen in love with him, but I have had counseling and I believe those feelings are in check. We have a special bond that's hard to explain. For lack of a better term, we have used the words "soul mate" to describe this feeling. He has even said he would like a lifelong commitment with me and has thought about marrying me. He said holding hands, walks on the beach and romantic things aren't a problem for him to share with me, but he cannot offer me anything sexual.

He wants to share his life with me. We aren't kids — we're in our 40s and 50s. He's a wonderful man, and I do want him in my life. Is it wrong to think about a future with him?

— CONFUSED ON WHAT TO DO

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR CONFUSED: It's not wrong to think about it. But while you're thinking, consider carefully how important sex is to you. Some, not all, women would be content with what he's offering. But what if you should meet someone? You also need to know whether this man is ready, willing and capable of forgoing a sexual relationship with a man. How would you feel about it if HE met someone? My advice is not to make a decision this important alone. Check in with your therapist and examine all of your feelings there. Also, contact the Straight Spouse Network, which was mentioned in a recent column, and talk frankly with others who are involved in mixed relationships. You'll find it online at www.StraightSpouse.org.

DEAR ABBY: I grew up thinking my mother was a good cook. Now that I'm married and have lived away from home for 10 years, I realize that Mom, with all her good intentions, was an awful cook. She was never adventurous, prefers canned and frozen foods, no vegetables and highly processed grains. I have chosen a completely opposite path and buy lots of natural, unprocessed fresh foods.

As a result, I now cook all the holiday meals — with Mom helping with the prep and small tasks. I have tried to encourage her to eat better and expand her horizons, but it isn't sinking in. Every time we have dinner at her house, I feel like I have just eaten at a fast-food establishment.

I don't want to be a control freak and say, "My way with dinners at my house only," but I'm struggling to find a compromise when she wants to "treat" us to dinner at her place. Suggestions?

— FOODIE IN COLORADO

DEAR FOODIE: It's one thing to be a "foodie" and another to be a food snob. A "fast-food" meal once every few weeks won't kill you, so be a sport and let your mom reciprocate. And the next day, return to your normal routine to make up for it.

DEAR ABBY: How do you politely refuse letting someone borrow something when he or she asks? Even if it's your best friend or a relative?

In the past, I have loaned items that were not returned in their original condition, or it was a pain in the neck to get them back in a timely manner when I needed them for myself. Help, please!

— TOO UNSELFISH IN PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR TOO UNSELFISH: Here's how. Smile and tell the person you no longer lend items to anyone, because they have been returned damaged or late, so that is now your "policy." Period.

IF MAY 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: In the year ahead, you may be challenged to deal with upsets that affect your love life or career. Right now your business sense is somewhat out of kilter, so avoid business decisions or investment. Because there is a lack of commitment on someone's part, whether you or another person, this is not a good year to get engaged or to change jobs. Issues of trust can be problematic especially in July, when you might have a great time on a vacation but when you could mistake a casual fling for a soul mate situation. November is the best month for you to make key business decisions.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Turn up the heat. You know what it means to engage in an argument when you know you are right. Your pure sincerity can blowtorch a way to a win. In the heat of the forge even metal is transformed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Others can be swayed by the force of reason, and like malleable metal, be bent to your purpose. You can sway and persuade a captive audience today, but take care not to sign a financial contract.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What you see isn't always what you get. This isn't a good time to make a deal or sign an agreement. Your trustworthiness could be put to the test or someone else's desire to commit fully could falter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are quite able to cope with and adjust to changing currents. For a few hours today, you might fall prey to daydreams and become vulnerable to anyone who dangles an attractive tidbit in front of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When offense is taken, reason flies out the door. You should check your sensitivity at the door today as you might inadvertently take offense and make a scene. Your ability to trust others is in low supply.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A flirtatious fantasy needs no fanfare. You would be wise not to broadcast your latest amorous conquest because feelings are quite possibly going to fade before anything of importance is accomplished.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your timing is terrific. You are solemn and serious about some things that are of minor importance, but can be cautious about key issues too. Your wait and see attitude will keep you out of harm's way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may lock doors to prevent intruders from entering your home, but love may be stifled if you shut out others, hide from sight and defend yourself against those who would knock at your heart's door.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could receive sound guidance today from someone who is a religious or community leader of some type. Rely on someone who is pleasant in the face of adversity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sometimes you are warm and friendly, but then you reverse and are standoffish. You confuse those who would help you become more successful. You are not practical in financial matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sometimes those with the greatest abilities develop them due to a great handicap. Pressure may be brought to bear on you to perform at a higher level even though you must overcome a weakness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Wave bye-bye to the person who missed the boat. Someone is not on the same wavelength. One of you in a key relationship may have stopped striving before reaching a goal or completing the terms of a promise.

Saturday's Jumbles: FLASH COMET BREEZY DAZZLE

Answer: When he talked to the lawyer about suing the brewery, it became a — CASE OF BEER

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME
by David L. Hoyt and Jeff Knurek

I'll guess $1,958.

That's not too much.

AFTER SEEING HIM ON TV, JUMBLE ARTIST JEFF KNUREK DID THIS.

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.
