‘Coincidence’ underscored education passions

Luna’s office added third panic button during height of school reform effort

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Idaho public schools chief Tom Luna’s staff ordered an additional panic button for their office while emotions ran high and state lawmakers weighed his proposed education overhaul in late March.

Public expense records show that the state paid $868.31 on March 31 to Allied General Fire and Security Inc. for installation of a third panic button in the State Department of Education office in Boise.

By then, Luna and his controversial “Students Come First” proposal were at the forefront of the legislative session, ushering in sweeping changes to eliminate tenure for new teachers, reduce the scope of teacher contract negotiations and increase the role of technology and online learning in Idaho classrooms. The proposal sparked emotional testimony, protests outside the State Capitol and the vandalism of Luna’s truck — all before the panic button was installed. Luna’s spokeswoman, Melissa McGrath, called the timing a coincidence.

“Staff sitting near the third entrance to the office, on the west side of the building, requested a panic button be installed back in 2010,” she said in an email. “Due to the cost of installing the button, it took us several months to get the button installed, but we did so in March 2011.”

The cost of the panic button, often used to alert security or police to a hostile visitor or other threat, is a miniscule part of the department’s $33.6 million budget for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

Tea Party targets schools for ‘Constitution Week’

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

MALTA — America’s kids will be learning about the U.S. Constitution this coming school year with help from a decidedly conservative Idaho publishing house, if a tea party group gets its way.

The Tea Party Patriots, Georgia-based but claiming 1,000 chapters nationally, are instructing members to remind teachers that a 2004 federal law requires public schools to teach Constitution lessons the week of Sept. 17, commemorating the day the document was signed. And they’d like the teachers to use material from the Malta-based National Center for Constitutional Studies, which promotes the Constitution as a divinely inspired document. The center’s founder, W. Cleon Skousen, once called Jamestown’s original settlers communists, wrote end-of-days prophecy and suggested Russians stole Sputnik from the United States. In 1987, one of his books was criticized for suggesting American slave children were freer than white non-slaves.

Ada County prosecutors to announce findings in officer-involved shooting

Times-News

The Ada County Prosecutor’s Office will present conclusions today regarding its investigation into an April officer-involved shooting in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls Police Officer Isaiah Day, a K-9 officer who has been on the force since 2005, shot into the vehicle of Lee Randel Fife, 40, on April 5. Officers were attempting to end a vehicle pursuit and apprehend Fife, who is accused of trying to ram officers’ patrol cars with his own car after he was cornered in a cul-de-sac on Elizabeth Park Circle.

Day was placed on administrative leave for a short period following the shooting, as mandated by department policy.

Fife was injured by the gunfire but has recovered enough to appear in court on felony charges of aggravated assault and eluding officers. He pleaded not guilty on Monday and is scheduled for a September trial.

The investigation was conducted jointly by Ada County prosecutors and Idaho State Police. The findings will be announced at 11 a.m. in the Twin Falls County Prosecutor’s Office, which is on the third floor of the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

Jerome Co. detectives investigating burglary

The Jerome County Sheriff’s Office has released two videos from a burglary earlier this month.

Detectives are asking for the community’s help in identifying a suspect or the vehicle the suspect used in the burglary. More than $5,000 in undisclosed items were stolen from a parked semitrailer on the evening of May 10. The videos show a white male with glasses wearing a ball cap and a light-colored jacket. The vehicle appears to be a pick-up truck with a row of lights mounted on the roof of the passenger cab.

It’s unclear from information released Wednesday where the burglary took place.

Still images from the videos can be seen at magicvalley.com. Contact the sheriff’s office at 644-2770 with any information on the burglary.

with a goal to one day work in the aerospace field. He’s been accepted to Gonzaga in Spokane, Wash., where he hopes to join to the Bulldogs’ track team as a non-scholarship walk-on after an injury derailed his senior season as a Tigers cross country runner.

Avila’s coach and science teacher, Ken Nordquist, said Avila showed up to every practice, even if he couldn’t participate.

“He works super hard to get the most out of his abilities,” Nordquist said. “He dealt with an injury this year which hobbled how much he could do, but he always kept his chin up and supported the team.”

Avila has also put his heart into his community, volunteering every other week at the Jerome Soup Kitchen and serving as president of the National Honor Society at Jerome High this year.

“Helping other people is so important – not only giving back to your community, but your family and friends too, so they can catch that and give it back,” Avila said.

His sixth-grade letter includes a few notes about his teachers and close friends at the time. Avila said he has been taking time to visit each teacher and thank them for influencing his life. He said Nordquist was one of his favorite teachers and was influential on the track, in the classroom and in his personal life as well.

“He’s one of those special kids that strives for excellence in everything he does,” Nordquist said of Avila. “He is a very genuine, down-to-earth person. Joey’s always been kind and caring.”

Idaho’s Jeff D. lawsuit revived

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A federal appeals court on Wednesday revived a decades-old lawsuit against the state of Idaho over claims of substandard children’s mental health care.

The case began in 1980 when a little boy known only as Jeff D. brought a class-action lawsuit against the state for institutionalizing mentally ill children instead of providing care for them.

Jeff D. won, and several years ago the court settled on 250 action items — a to-do list of sorts — that the state had to complete in order to be in compliance with the ruling. In 2007, U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnill decided that the state had substantially complied with the action items, and closed the case.

But in Wednesday’s ruling, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals found that setting a list of action items wasn’t enough to show indigent and mentally ill kids were getting the care they needed. Instead, the court must consider whether the state was meeting the larger goals represented by the list — providing community-based mental health care to indigent children with severe emotional and mental disabilities.

The decision means that the Jeff D. lawsuit will go back before Winnill in Boise’s federal court.

Ultimately, the state should be required to prove that it has complied with the action items, the appellate court found, rather than expecting the plaintiffs to prove that the state wasn’t following through with the tasks on the list.

“We wish to make clear at the outset that we recognize and appreciate that the district judge has expended a great deal of time and effort wrestling with the attempted enforcement of these consent decrees for at least the last 13 years, and has issued orders that helped to move the state towards the achievement of the agreed goals,” Judge William Canby wrote for the three-judge panel that decided the case.

But Winnill should consider the state’s record of compliance, which has been “far from exemplary,” the judges noted.

Idaho Deputy Attorney General Michael Gilmore said he couldn’t immediately comment on the ruling because his office was still reviewing the ruling and needed to talk with its clients, the Idaho Departments of Health and Welfare and Juvenile Corrections.

Howard Belodoff, the attorney representing Jeff D. and the other families in the class-action case, said the ruling was a vindication for children with severe emotional disturbances and their families.

“The department (of Health and Welfare) basically turned their nose at the court orders and refused to do it,” Belodoff said. “Now it’s worse than even before the lawsuit was closed. They’ve had huge cuts to services.”

As part of the action items, the state created the Idaho Council on Children’s Mental Health in 2001. The council was an independent agency with members from several state departments and the public, and they were charged with the job of improving community-based services for children with severe emotional disturbances.

But in the months after the Jeff D. case was closed, the council quietly disbanded. Children’s mental health advocates complain that the state also walked away from other requirements under the Jeff D. action plan, cutting funding and along with it, access to services.

Belodoff said that the state simply created an “illusion of compliance.”

Now, just like before the lawsuit, kids with severe emotional disturbances are left untreated until they’re sick enough to be institutionalized or have a major crisis and end up in the custody of the Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections, Belodoff said.

“Mental health is no different than cancer or any other kind of physical ailment: It can be treated in most cases,” Belodoff said. “It’s not fatal unless it’s left untreated, and it’s blatant discrimination to not provide these families with the treatment that is proven to work.”

Tea Party

Interest in Skousen, a former FBI employee and Salt Lake City police chief who died in 2006 in Utah, soared in tea party circles after praise from talk show host Glenn Beck. Not surprisingly, groups battling the tea party — and Beck — warn that Skousen’s center shouldn’t be teaching kids about American history.

“It’s indoctrination, not education,” said Doug Kendall, director of the Constitutional Accountability Center in Washington, D.C. “They’re so far from the mainstream of constitutional thought that they are completely indefensible.”

Though the National Center for Constitutional Studies is best known for its promotion of Skousen’s work, including “The 5,000 Year Leap,” a 1981 book that suggests Biblical inspiration for the Constitution, those materials aren’t included in the packet being touted by the Tea Party Patriots.

Instead, a $19.95 order buys “A More Perfect Union,” a movie DVD created by Mormon-run BYU in 1989 depicting the 1787 Constitutional Convention, as well as an accompanying teacher’s guide, a poster and a pocket-size Constitution.

Bill Norton, the Tea Party Patriots leader in charge of the group’s “Adopt a School” push, gives seminars for the National Center for Constitutional Studies. He says the BYU movie was endorsed 20 years ago by the federal Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, proving its educational merit.

“It has the stamp of approval of this federal entity,” Norton said, adding he’s not demanding schools use it. “It’s just a suggestion.”

But not everyone is convinced the film and study guide are the best resources.

David Gray Adler, who directs the University of Idaho’s McClure Center for Public Policy Research, said some of its assertions — that “Americans’ confidence in republicanism stemmed largely from their shared commitment to Christianity,” for example — exaggerates religion’s impact on the framers while neglecting European enlightenment figures who shaped early American views on government.

“Give them (the Tea Party Patriots) credit for urging adherence to the federal law,” Adler said. “But there are many other, better, more scholarly documents on the Constitution.”

Another constitutional education group, the federally funded Center for Civic Education in Woodland Hills, Calif., suggested those unhappy with the Tea Party Patriot’s choice of educational materials should promote alternatives.

“The Tea Party Patriots are doing what Americans are supposed to do,” said Robert Leming, who directs his group’s “We The People” program. “What that should do is encourage others of a different point of view to do the same thing.”

The current leader of the National Center for Constitutional Studies, Zeldon Nelson, met Skousen in the mid-1980s, when the author was raising money for his latest book, “The Making of America.” Nelson said he took over amid financial difficulties after sales-damaging criticism of the book, including from then-California Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, for its characterization of slavery.

Asked if the Tea Party Patriots’ push is helping sales, Nelson responded, “I would have to say, probably no.” But he anticipates business could pick up closer to the school year.

Today, there’s a question over whether Nelson has a right to distribute the BYU-produced materials. And further complicating matters is an acrimonious lawsuit between Skousen’s adult children and Nelson over rights to Skousen’s work.

Three years ago, BYU canceled a longstanding licensing agreement with Nelson because he wasn’t paying royalties.

“They didn’t send in reports for some years,” said Giovanni Tata, director of BYU’s copyright department in Provo, Utah.

Nelson, who estimates he has shipped out 500,000 copies of the movie since 1991, contacted BYU last week in a bid to resolve the matter following The Associated Press inquiry, Tata confirmed.

Meanwhile, Skousen’s sons are fighting Nelson in federal court in Utah after enlisting Glenn Beck to write a new preface for “The 5,000 Year Leap.” After that, tea party adherents pushed the book to No. 1 on Amazon.com’s sales charts in 2009.

Now, Paul, Brent and Harold Skousen contend Nelson is selling a version without Beck’s preface without proper permission, interfering with their efforts to strike lucrative new deals.

Nelson, who farms 700 acres of wheat in this windy Mormon farming community near the Idaho-Utah border, says in a countersuit that Skousen granted publication rights to the center. He also maintains he contacted Beck first, but that Skousen’s sons went behind Nelson’s back to cash in.

“Empires fall from within,” Nelson said, standing amid the boxes of Skousen literature he ships from his basement. “That’s where the jealousies originate.”

Nelson maintains Beck had been promoting “The 5,000 Year Leap” even before lending his name to the family’s version. That elevated profile, Nelson said, has helped him fulfill his life’s work — teaching that God inspired the Constitution — to an audience broader than just Skousen devotees.

“It’s helped us preach beyond the choir,” Nelson said.

The Tea Party Patriots’ Norton would also like to wrest the Constitution from the hands of secular scholars.

“They’re eliminating God out of the whole political discussion 100 percent, which is going to the other extreme,” he said.

Luna opposition says reform repeal will be on Nov. 2012 ballot

Times-News

The organizers behind an effort to put this year's state education reforms to a public vote say they've accomplished their goal.

More than 48,000 Idahoans have signed petitions to put a referendum on the Students Come First laws on the November 2012 ballot according to Mike Lanza, chairman of Idahoans for Responsible Education Reform.

The group that has vehemently opposed state public schools chief Tom Luna's three-pronged public education reform laws says it has 47,432 signatures of Idaho voters that have been verified by county clerks across the Gem State.

Signatures gathered will not be considered official until they're reviewed by the Idaho Secretary of State's Office.

Idaho Education Association President Sherri Wood said in a post on the effort's website that members of the state teachers' union have worked to collect the signatures in 40 days.

"Unfortunately, we won't have a chance to vote on the laws until November 2012, but by then, Idahoans will have seen ample evidence on just how damaging these laws are," Wood stated.

In a Wednesday press release, Luna said he knew the referendum was a possibility, but remained confident in Idaho's support of his reform package, which also has the backing of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

"Repealing these laws would mean a return to the status quo, where the hands of local school boards are tied, educators receive tenure, the state distributes retirement bonuses, every teacher is paid the exact same, staffing decisions are

LUNA OPPOSITION PLANS MORE T.F. PETITION EVENTS

Those behind the recall and repeal efforts will continue to collect petition signatures during drives this weekend in Twin Falls.

Signature drives will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Pole Line Road, and the Five Points intersection at Blue Lakes and Addison Avenue. Signature collectors will continue their work until June 6, when they'll turn them in to the state. A separate petition effort is under way to ask voters to recall Luna in an Aug. 30 special election.

Panic buttons aren't new to the office. For several years, they've been in place at entrances near the receptionist's desk and Luna's office in the Len B. Jordan Building, McGrath said.

"The installation was not related to protests over the education reform laws, though I can see how it would appear so," McGrath said. "It was simply an issue of timing."

In mid-February, Luna's truck was vandalized at his home, with its tires slashed and his name spray-painted and crossed out on its side.

There were other confrontations. Also in February — before the panic button's installation — Luna was at his mother's house when a stranger approached, identified himself as a teacher and berated him about the proposal.

That same month, while Luna was a guest on a morning television show at a Boise coffeehouse, an unruly man was escorted off the premises by an off-duty police officer.

In a Feb. 15 press conference about the vandalism and confrontations, Luna and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter stressed the need for civility and condemned the incidents.

The Idaho Education Association, by far the most vocal opponent of Luna's plan, condemned the incidents at

Kimberly tests out recycling program

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly City Council is working with Western Waste Services to potentially roll out a new recycling program.

At Tuesday's council meeting, Scott Parks with Western Waste proposed a pilot program to test a recycling system to work in conjunction with current trash collection services.

Parks said that in addition to the incentive of being more environmentally friendly, recycling could cut the city's costs.

"The value of the material that we would collect in these carts is almost double what you would pay to put it in a landfill," Parks said. "If you're putting it in a landfill, we're offering you a chance to possibly get on the positive side of that."

Parks said 100 homes will get a choice to participate in the pilot program. If the test run begins in June, it would continue through July and August. Then, if the city opted to start the service, Parks said recycling could be adopted citywide as soon as September or October.

But between the end of the pilot program and the start of permanent recycling bins, the city would have to decide to adopt the new program and how to handle costs and potential rebates.

Councilwoman Mitzi Cheldelin said citizens have expressed interest in recycling programs, but she is worried about garbage collection fees going up along with rising water bills.

Councilwoman Lee McKinlay said her son in Pocatello recently joined in that city's new recycling program.

"Now they love it. They're never been able to get all their trash in one bin (before)," McKinlay said. "It's really been a blessing for them."

In other business, the council also voted to raise fees for citizens paying their utility bills with credit or debit cards in person at City Hall.

The fees for card transactions have so far been a $1 processing fee, but Kimberly's fees to the banks and clearinghouses that handle those charges have averaged $1.88 per transaction. City Clerk Jennifer Rowe said that though she looked into cheaper alternatives, she was unable to find any.

"I think we have about as good a deal as we're going to get from the bank," Rowe said.

Councilman Brandon Hoobler cited Twin Falls' $3 servicing fees for the reason he has supported higher fees since the city began accepting payment with cards. He proposed raising Kimberly's fees to $2.

Only Cheldelin voted against the motion.

"I think the intent is that for those using cards, all taxpayers wouldn't have to pay for it, only those using it would have to pay for it," Mayor Dave Overacre said.

BLM clean-up effort nets 20 tons of trash

Times-News

The annual clean-up of public property north of the Snake River Canyon in Twin Falls netted nearly 20 tons of trash on Saturday.

The Twin Falls District Bureau of Land Management announced Wednesday that it paired with the Southern Idaho Off-Road Association,

Magic Valley ATV Riders and other groups to remove refuse from the Devil's Corral area. Illegally dumped trash that was removed included items from furniture and appliances to spent shotgun shells and old baling wire.

"For those of us who love to play and recreate in this area, it is extremely important that we also care for it by organizing this clean-up each spring," Robert DePew, president of the Southern Idaho Off-Road Association, said in a written release.

Area companies provided the use of heavy equipment to remove large items, and donated items ranging from dumpsters to food. Nearly 100 people helped the effort, according to the BLM.

"We are so grateful to each and every person who came out last Saturday to pick up garbage," BLM Shoshone Field Manager Ruth Miller said. "It's nice to see the support by members of the community willing to commit time over a weekend to keep our public lands clean and safe for everyone to enjoy."

Idaho’s system of choosing school trustees isn’t working

Amid great fanfare, the last Legislature consolidated Idaho elections and limited voting to four dates each year. The current Legislature needs to make a few more election reforms. This month, Idahoans went to the polls to choose school trustees and, in 36 districts, to vote on supplemental levy requests. Statewide, turnout was less than 20 percent; in Pocatello’s District 25, it was 1 percent, despite a contested trustee race on the ballot. And in the 1,114-student Gooding School District, only 31 voters went to the polls. Something has to change about how Idaho picks school boards.

For starters, the Legislature should scrap the requirement that trustees chosen from each zone can only be elected by residents of that zone. There isn’t one Idahoan in 10,000 who knows in which school zone he or she lives, where to vote or even if there’s an election in a given year (by state law, uncontested school board elections are canceled).

The present system discourages not only voters but potential candidates. Want to challenge an incumbent school trustee? That’s hard if you can’t even vote against him or her.

There’s no reason why school board members couldn’t be chosen by all the voters in the school district, just as county commissioners — who must live in the district they represent — are elected by all voters in the county.

Secondly, school board elections shouldn’t be held in May of odd-numbered years. They could be consolidated either with city elections staged in November of odd-numbered years or paired with the May primary elections held in even-numbered years.

With the Legislature cutting state support for public schools, the balance of responsibility for education in Idaho is shifting back to local districts. This year, 65 of the state’s districts asked patrons to approve supplemental levies, and voters said yes in more than four-fifths of them.

Idaho needs the best and the brightest serving on our school boards — and an electorate engaged and informed enough to put them there.

Five myths about fixing schools

The end of the school year and the layoffs of tens of thousands of teachers are bringing more attention to reformers’ calls to remake public schools. Today’s school reform movement conflates the motivations and agendas of politicians seeking re-election, religious figures looking to spread the faith and bureaucrats trying to save a dime. Despite an often earnest desire to help our nation’s children, reformers have spread some fundamental misunderstandings about public education.

1. Our schools are failing. It’s true that schools with large numbers of low-income and English-as-a-second-language students don’t perform as well as those with lots of middle- and upper-middle-class students who speak only English. But the demonization of some schools as “dropout factories” masks an important achievement: The percentage of Americans earning a high school diploma has been rising for 30 years. According to the Department of Education, the percentage of 16- to 24-year-olds who were not enrolled in school and hadn’t earned a diploma or its equivalent fell to 8 percent in 2008.

Average SAT and ACT scores are also up. On international exams such as the Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study, U.S. elementary and middle school students have improved since 1995 and rank near the top among developed countries. Americans do lag behind students in Asian nations such as Singapore, Taiwan, Hong Kong, South Korea and Japan on these tests, but so do Europeans.

2. Unions defend bad teachers. Reformers who attack unions for school problems should mind their logic: Some school systems show better results than others, yet most have teachers’ unions. If unions are universally problematic, why are some students succeeding while others languish?

3. Billionaires know best. Bill Gates, real estate developer Eli Broad and Facebook chief Mark Zuckerberg argue that merit pay creates the same incentives for public-sector employees that bonuses do in the private sector.

But the emerging research on merit pay for teachers disputes that.

In a three-year, $10 million study released last fall, Vanderbilt University researchers found no significant difference in performance between students who were taught by middle school teachers eligible for cash bonuses and those who weren’t. That’s no surprise to most teachers; they know that teamwork is key to success. Individual pay-for-performance schemes create the opposite incentive, fostering competition, not collaboration.

4. Charter schools are the answer.

President Obama certainly thinks so. He’s said that state limits on the number of charter schools aren’t “good for our children, our economy or our country.” He and Education Secretary Arne Duncan want more charters — taxpayer-supported schools that operate independently of traditional public school systems. About 1.5 million children, or 3 percent of public school students, attended a charter school this past school year. Some have outperformed their non-charter peers, particularly in inner cities.

But charter school results are not uniformly impressive: A 2010 study of 2,330 middle school students at charter schools in 15 states found that they performed no better in math and science. And a Stanford University study in 2009 concluded: “Nearly half of the charter schools nationwide have results that are no different from the local public school options and over a third, 37 percent, deliver learning results that are significantly worse than their students would have realized had they remained in traditional public schools.”

5. More effective teachers are the answer.

Teachers aren’t miracle workers. There’s only so much they can do to address problems that troubled students bring to class every day, including neglect, abuse, and unaddressed medical and mental health issues. The obvious and subtle ways that poverty inhibits a child’s ability to learn — from hearing, visual and dental problems to higher asthma rates to diminished verbal interaction in the home — have been well-documented.

So let’s seek to improve the state of families. Attacking schools and teachers makes everyone feel like a reformer, but the problems begin long before a child steps through the schoolhouse door.

Paul Farhi is a reporter for The Washington Post.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Downtown businesses may no longer fit plan

Attention fellow business owners and citizens of Twin Falls!

We have been surrounded by pirates! They took aim, fired and struck their first target, which may become only one in a number of future victims.

It has come to my attention that the Idaho Youth Ranch on Main Avenue South has been “asked” to relocate because it doesn’t fit in with the vision of the Downtown Alive committee. Spokesman for the group attorney Jeff Hepworth was quoted in Times-News articles dated April 27 and 28 that the group specifically wanted the Youth Ranch and other thrift stores out of the downtown area because “they don’t fit the plan.”

The plan was apparently brought about by Mark Rivers of Boise, who was hired by the Urban Renewal Agency, and Jeff Hepworth of Twin Falls. (It may be interesting to note that one of the group’s financial backers is First Federal Bank). Although it has been denied that the city of Twin Falls or the URA have anything to do with the move, because they cannot legally say who stays or goes as a business, this could be construed as “guilt by association.”

Hopefully, Mr. Rivers’ and Mr. Hepworth’s plans to add more bars and restaurants don’t lead to the demise of the bars and restaurants that are already here. By last count, using the local telephone book as a reference, there are approximately 125 in the Twin Falls area. How many more can an area of this size support? Instead of bringing business to downtown, their first course of action was to remove a very successful one. Who’s next?

‘Porkulus’ fallout: Tax cheats win; private sector loses

When President Obama signed the trillion-dollar stimulus law in 2009, he proclaimed that he was “keeping the American dream alive in our time.” The stimulator-in-chief failed to mention that billions would be spent keeping American tax scammers afloat.

At a congressional hearing on Tuesday, federal auditors reported on the latest porkulus spending gone wild. According to a new General Accounting Office audit conducted over the past year, nearly 4,000 stimulus recipients received $24 billion in

Michelle Malkin

Recovery Act funds — while owing more than $750 million in unpaid corporate, payroll and other taxes.

And this is just the tip of the Cash for Tax Cheats iceberg. The GAO acknowledged in its report that “the estimated amount of known unpaid federal taxes we identified is likely understated” because of rampant underreporting of income and because the analysis did “not include Recovery Act contract and grant recipients who are noncompliant with or not subject to Recovery Act reporting requirements.”

The official response of the Obama administration’s stimulus oversight board? The Recovery Accountability and Transparency Board pointed out that “federal law does not prohibit tax delinquents from getting government contracts or grants.”

Similarly, last week, the Treasury Department inspector general found that the IRS failed to prevent fraud in the stimulus law’s energy tax credit program. Some $6 billion in stimulus energy credits for homeowners have been claimed — but the inspector general’s audit found that 30 percent of credit-claimers had no record of homeownership. “I am troubled by the IRS’s continued failure to develop appropriate verification methods for distributing Recovery Act credits,” the Treasury Inspector watchdog said.

Obama’s notorious slush fund has redistributed wealth to prison inmates, flaky researchers, social justice boondoggles, infrastructure to nowhere, foreign companies, dead people and ghost congressional districts — not to mention $20 million to pay for campaign-style stimulus-hyping road signs across the country emblazoned with the shovel-ready logo.

And for what? Unemployment remains near double-digits. Highway jobs have not materialized. Investor’s Business Daily notes that a new study by economists Timothy Conley of the University of Western Ontario and Bill

Dupor of Ohio State “found that despite the influx of all that federal money, highway construction jobs actually plunged by nearly 70,000 between 2008 and 2010.” Indeed, the researchers found that the stimulus “destroyed or forestalled” a whopping 1 million private-sector jobs by crowding them out with make-work public jobs and programs. # Think you know the Bible? Try this short quiz

Faith is a huge force in American life, and it's common to hear the Bible cited to bolster political and moral positions, especially against same-sex marriage and abortion. So here's my 2011 religion quiz. Choose the best responses (some questions may have more than one correct answer):

1. The Bible's position on abortion is:
a. Never mentioned.
b. To forbid it along with all forms of artificial birth control.
c. Condemnatory, except to save the life of the mother.
2. The Bible suggests "marriage" is:
a. The lifelong union of one man and one woman.
b. The union of one man and up to 700 wives.
c. Often undesirable, because it distracts from service to the Lord.
3. The Bible says of homosexuality:
a. Leviticus describes male sexual pairing as an

Nicholas Kristof

- abomination.
b. A lesbian should be stoned at her father's doorstep.
c. There's plenty of ambiguity and no indication of physical intimacy, but some readers point to Ruth and Naomi's love as suspiciously close, or to King David declaring to Jonathan: "Your love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women." (II Samuel 1:23-26)
4. In the Bible, erotic writing is:
a. Forbidden by Deuteronomy as "adultery of the heart."
b. Exemplified by Song of Songs, which celebrates sex for its own sake.
c. Unmentioned.
5. Jesus says that divorce is permitted:
a. Only after counseling

- and trial separation.
b. Never.
c. Only to men whose wives have been unfaithful.
6. Among sexual behavior that is forbidden is:
a. Adultery.
b. Incest.
c. Sex with angels.
7. The people of Sodom were condemned principally for:
a. Homosexuality.
b. Blasphemy.
c. Lack of compassion for the poor and needy.
- This quiz, and the answers below, draw from a new book, Unprotected Texts: The Bible's Surprising Contradictions about Sex and Desire. It's by Jennifer Wright Knust, a Bible scholar at Boston University who is also an ordained American Baptist pastor.
- Professor Knust's point is that the Bible's teachings about sexuality are murky and inconsistent and prone to being hijacked by ideologues (this quiz involves some cherry-picking of my own). There's also lots we just don't understand: What exactly is the offense of "arsenokoitai" or "man beds" that St. Paul proscribes? It is often translated as a reference to homosexuality, but it more plausibly relates to male prostitution or pimping. Ambiguity is everywhere, which is why some of you will surely harrumph at my quiz answers:

1. A. Abortion is never mentioned as such.
2. A, B and C. The Bible limits women to one husband, but other than that is all over the map. Mark 10 envisions a lifelong marriage of one man and one woman. But King Solomon had 700 wives and 300 concubines (I Kings 11:3). And Matthew (Matthew 19:10-12) and St. Paul (I Corinthians 7) both seem to suggest that the ideal approach is to remain celibate and avoid marriage if possible, while focusing on serving God. Jesus (Matthew 19:12) even seems to suggest that men make themselves eunuchs, leading the early church to ban enthusiasts from self-castration.

3. A and C. As for stoning on a father's doorstep, that is the fate not of lesbians but of non-virgin brides (Deuteronomy 22:13).
4. B. Read the "Song of Songs" and blush. It also serves as a metaphor for divine relations with Israel or with humans.
5. B and C. Jesus in Mark 10:11-12 condemns divorce generally, but in Matthew 5:32 and 19:9 suggests that a man can divorce his wife if she is guilty of sexual immorality.
6. A, B and C. We forget that early commentators were very concerned about sex with angels (Genesis 6, interpreted in the Letter of Jude and other places) as an incorrect mixing of two kinds.
7. C. "Sodomy" as a term for gay male sex began to be commonly used only in the 11th century and would have surprised early religious commentators. They attributed Sodom's problems with God to many different causes, including idolatry, threats toward strangers and general lack of compassion for the downtrodden. Ezekiel 16:49 suggests that Sodomites "had pride, excess of food, and prosperous ease, but did not aid the poor and needy."

Hmmm. "Did not aid the poor and needy?" Who knew that that's what the Bible condemns as sodomy? At a time of budget cuts that devastate the poor, isn't that precisely the kind of disgusting immorality that we should all join together in the spirit of the Bible to repudiate?

Big Labor distances itself from Democrats

This is a maddening time for anyone concerned about the lives of working-class Americans. The frustration and anger that suffused AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka's declaration last week that labor would distance itself from the Democratic Party was both clear and widely noted. Not so widely noted has been a shift in the organizing strategy of two of labor's leading institutions — Trumka's AFL-CIO and the Service Employees International Union — that reflects a belief that the American labor movement may be on the verge of extinction and must radically change its game.

It took a multitude of Democratic sins and failures to push Trumka to denounce, if not renounce, the political party that has been labor's home at least since the New Deal. In a speech at the National Press Club last week, Trumka said that Republicans were wielding a "wrecking ball" against the rights and interests of working Americans. But Democrats, he added, were "simply standing aside" as the Republicans moved in for the kill.

The primary source of labor's frustration has been the consistent inability of the Democrats to strengthen the legislation that once allowed workers to join unions without fear of employer reprisals. American business has poked so many holes in the 1935 National Labor Relations Act that it now affords workers no protections at all.

Many union activists viewed the 2009-10 battle for the most recent iteration of labor law reform — the Employee Free Choice Act — as labor's last stand. EFCA could never attain the magic 60-vote threshold required to cut off a filibuster, despite the presence, at one point, of 60 Democratic senators. Given the rate at which private-sector unionization continues to fall (which in turn imperils support for public-sector unions), many of labor's most thoughtful leaders now consider the Democrats' inability to enact EFCA a death sentence for the American labor movement.

"It's over," one of labor's leading strategists told me this month. Indeed, since last November's elections, half a dozen high-ranking labor leaders from a range of unions have told me they believe that private-sector unions may all but disappear within the next 10 years.

SEIU has embarked on a door-to-door canvass in the minority neighborhoods of 17 American cities. The program — like the AFL-CIO's Working America program — will surely help Democratic candidates. But, it signals a strategic shift by American labor, whose ranks have been so reduced that it now must recruit people to a non-union, essentially non-dues-paying organization to amass the political clout that its own diminished ranks can no longer deliver.

Harold Meyerson is a columnist for The Washington Post.

Smart speaks to kidnapper as he gets sentenced to life

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Elizabeth Smart finally got her chance Wednesday to confront the street preacher convicted of holding her captive and raping her for months when she was just 14. Now 23, she stood tall in the courtroom — stoic, with an even voice and a strength Brian David Mitchell clearly lacked.

Mitchell, frail and skinny with a long, peppery white beard, sang hymns softly and closed his hollow eyes, just as he did throughout his trial, just as he would moments later as the judge gave him two life sentences without parole. That did not stop Smart from looking right at him and coolly speaking her piece.

It took her about 30 seconds.

“I don’t have very much to say to you. I know exactly what you did,” said Smart, wearing a houndstooth checked skirt, an ivory jacket and pearls. “I know that you know that what you did was wrong. You did it with full knowledge ... but I have a wonderful life now and no matter what you do, you will never affect me again.

“You took away nine months of my life that can never be returned. You will have to be held responsible for those actions, whether it’s in this life or the next, and I hope you are ready for when that time comes.”

Mitchell’s sentencing closed a major legal chapter in the heartbreaking ordeal that stalled for years after he was declared mentally ill and unfit to stand trial in state court. A federal jury in December unanimously convicted the 57-year-old of kidnapping and unlawful transportation of a minor across state lines for sex.

When the judge asked if he had anything to say, Mitchell, whose hands and feet were bound, kept right on singing. His bizarre demeanor changed just once during the hearing: As he was sentenced, he sang louder.

Elizabeth Smart talks to the media Wednesday in front of the federal courthouse in Salt Lake City. Smart’s kidnapper was sentenced to life in prison.

Outside the courthouse, a beaming Smart, now a Brigham Young University music student, told reporters that the sentencing “is the ending of a very long chapter and the beginning of a very beautiful chapter for me.” She said she wants to work with other crime victims and lend her support to the cause of missing children.

Smart was snatched from her Salt Lake City bedroom by knife-point in the early hours of June 5, 2002. The massive search to find the blond-haired, blue-eyed girl riveted the nation, as did her improbable recovery while walking with her captor on a suburban Salt Lake City-area street on March 12, 2003.

At trial, she testified in a steady, clear voice about her “nine months of hell.” Mitchell whisked her away to his camp in the foothills near the family home. She was stripped of her favorite red pajamas, draped in white, religious robes and forced into a polygamous marriage with Mitchell. She was tethered to a metal cable strung between two trees and subjected to near-daily rapes while being forced to use alcohol and drugs.

Mitchell, who outlined his religious beliefs in a rambling 27-page manifesto he called “The Book of Immanuel David Isaiah,” took Smart to California for five of the months she was held captive. She recalled being forced to live homeless, dress in disguises and stay quiet or lie about her identity if ever approached by strangers or police. She said he threatened her life and the lives of her family every day.

U.S. District Judge Dale Kimball said Mitchell deserved a life sentence because the facts of the case were “unusually heinous and degrading.”

Charlie Christensen, U.S. attorney for Utah, said the resolution was long overdue for Smart and her family. “It is a measure of justice for Elizabeth and it will certainly ensure Brian David Mitchell will never inflict such intolerable and unspeakable cruelty on anyone else again,” Christensen said.

The defense waived its closing remarks before sentencing. Parker Douglas, a member of Mitchell’s defense team, said outside the courthouse that the sentence was not unexpected.

“I wish Elizabeth Smart and her family the best. I hope they get to move on,” Douglas said.

Idaho PUC to hear wind rates arguments

Times-News

On Wednesday, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission announced it will hear oral arguments between the developer of four proposed Cassia County wind projects and Rocky Mountain Power on June 9.

Exergy Development Group, of Boise, is asking for oral arguments in response to Rocky Mountain Power's request to dismiss Exergy's complaint against the utility.

According to a prepared statement, "Exergy maintains the yet-to-be-constructed wind projects near Malta should be eligible for a higher rate from Rocky Mountain Power because it submitted a proposed power purchase agreement with the utility in January 2009, well before the commission lowered a published rate wind developers receive in March 2010."

Under the provisions of the federal Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act (PURPA), regulated electric utilities are required to buy power from qualifying small-power producers or co-generators. In March 2010, qualifying PURPA project developers signing a 20-year levelized contract would be paid $79.19 per megawatt hour. The previous rate was $90.90 per MWh.

Rocky Mountain Power filed a motion to have the complaint dismissed, alleging Exergy did not — and still does not — have the necessary interconnection and wheeling agreements with Raft River Electric Cooperative and the Bonneville Power Administration needed to deliver the wind projects' output to Rocky Mountain Power territory.

Exergy alleges that securing firm transmission and interconnection rights before creating a legally enforceable power purchase agreement is not a requirement in Idaho.

Exergy is asking that Rocky Mountain provide a detailed explanation for the utility's alleged failure to earlier realize that transmission would not be a problem "and its reliance on that non-existent problem to stall negotiations," the statement said.

Rocky Mountain Power alleges Exergy delayed negotiations by not responding to discovery requests as to how it planned to deliver its output from the wind farms to the Brady substation. Further, Rocky Mountain Power states, Exergy did not file its complaint requesting grandfathered rates to pre-March 2010 rates until July 29, four months after the March 16 rate change.

PUC spokesman Gene Fadness said the commission has a few options following the hearing.

It can decide whether or not to grant Rocky Mountain Power's request to dismiss Exergy's complaint or dismiss Exergy's claim that it qualifies for the higher rate as other PURPA projects, further along in development than Exergy, have been ordered to receive the newer, lower rate for power.

Farmers National relaxes dress code for a good cause

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Last fall, Farmers National Bank conducted a confidential employee survey.

One common theme was the desire for more casual-dress days and increased opportunity for engaging in community service.

This week, employees are doing both.

"We decided that employees could pay $1 a day, this week, if they wanted to dress casually," said Lee Cline, vice president cashier who works at the bank's Buhl branch.

One caveat to dressing casually is that employees had to wear a jersey from a Magic Valley high school sports team.

"It's been fun. You would think that in Buhl there would be mostly Buhl High School jerseys but that isn't the case. We have representation from schools across the valley and that is true at all of our branches."

Wearing athletic jerseys is representative of the fundraising taking place.

Money raised by employees (matched dollar for dollar by the bank) will be donated to the Shriners Patient Travel Fund.

The Shrine All-Star Football Game is slated for Tuesday at Twin Falls High School.

KETCHUM — An arbitration panel has rejected a bid by actor Tom Hanks and his wife, Rita Wilson, for financial compensation stemming from a long-running dispute with the contractor hired to build the couple's multimillion-dollar villa in Sun Valley.

The three-member panel of the American Arbitration Association has concluded the couple failed to make a compelling case that alleged defects in their $10 million home should be pinned on Storey Construction, based in Ketchum.

Hanks and Wilson sought $3 million in damages from the builder. They claim the home north of the ritzy resort town was built with a series of flaws, including a roof that leaked and nearly collapsed after the house was finished in 2002.

The arbitration panel also sided with Hanks and Wilson in a counterclaim filed by the contractor who alleged the couple pursued the damages out of malice, the Idaho

Learn how to teach teens about personal finances

High school teachers, home-school educators and youth leaders who understand the importance of financial education for today's teens can learn how to teach the seven-unit, "High School Financial Planning Program," at five teacher-training workshops throughout Idaho this summer.

The curriculum is developed by the National Endowment for Financial Education.

"The national award-winning program teaches financial literacy to teens in ways that stick," says Lyle Hansen, University of Idaho Extension educator in Jerome County.

This year's revised and updated curriculum, "Financial Education for a New Generation," covers planning, budgeting, banking, investing, credit, debt, insurance and careers and is provided at no charge to instructors.

Participation in the training is free.

Registrants will receive a copy of the curriculum, instructor's manual and student guide, along with a binder of teaching materials, lunch and snacks. Interested persons should register no later than one week before the date of the training they wish to attend by sending an e-mail to jerome@uidaho.edu.

GAZA STRIP
Egypt to open crossing to Gaza

CAIRO — Egypt's decision Wednesday to end its blockade of Gaza could ease the isolation of 1.4 million Palestinians there.

The Rafah crossing will be opened starting Saturday, Egypt's official Middle East News Agency announced.

The decision puts the new Egyptian regime at odds with Israel, which insists on monitoring people and goods entering Gaza for security reasons.

GERMANY
U.S. says bin Laden knew of Europe plot

BERLIN — The United States has told Germany that evidence pulled from Osama bin Laden's hideout shows the terror chief was linked to a plot to attack targets in Europe last year, a senior German official told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Separately, bin Laden encouraged multiple attacks on Danish targets because of disparaging references to the Muslim prophet Muhammad in Danish media, the U.S. officials said.

MEXICO
500 villagers flee drug cartel violence

MORELIA — Drug cartel violence has prompted as many as 500 frightened villagers to flee hamlets in the western state of Michoacan and take refuge at a swimming park, an official said Wednesday.

It is at least the second time a large number of rural residents have been displaced by recent drug violence in Mexico. In November, about 400 people in the northern border town of Ciudad Mier took refuge in Ciudad Aleman following cartel gunbattles.

Obama, Cameron agree to keep pressure on Gadhafi

LONDON (AP) — President Barack Obama and British Prime Minister David Cameron on Wednesday promised a relentless and punishing pummeling of Moammar Gadhafi's forces in Libya, pressing for his ouster. Obama ruled out a deadline for ending NATO's military assault and said it would be over "in a timely fashion."

"There will not be a let-up in the pressure we are applying" on Gadhafi, the visiting president said Wednesday at a joint news conference with Cameron, ahead of an address that Obama was to make to both houses of the British Parliament.

"Ultimately this is going to be a slow, steady process in which we're able to wear down the regime forces," Obama said.

"I believe that we have built enough momentum that, as long as we sustain the course, we're on, he will step down," the president said.

Cameron rallied behind Obama's approach, saying what was needed in Libya was "patience and persistence."

In a wide-ranging question and answer session that exposed a disagreement over Mideast peace-making strategy, Obama and Cameron reaffirmed their joint resolve on Libya. The statements of mutual support came despite complaints among some NATO countries about the reduced U.S. role since NATO took the lead after the initial days of the two-month-old campaign against Gadhafi.

"We've been extraordinarily successful in avoiding civilian casualties," Obama said at one point. And he once again ruled out ground forces in Libya. "That means that sometimes we may have to be more patient than people would like," he conceded.

Said Cameron: "I would agree that the two key things here are patience and persistence." He said "we're extremely strong together in wanting to see the same outcomes."

France has pushed for a more aggressive military approach in Libya, but Obama gave no indication that increased firepower would be forthcoming from the U.S. even though officials in some allied nations would like to see that.

At the same time, the president said the U.S. is "strongly committed to seeing the job through, making sure that, at a minimum, Gadhafi doesn't have the capacity to send in a bunch of thugs to murder innocent civilians and to threaten them."

The military campaign in Libya began with what seemed a narrowly defined mission: to enforce a no-fly zone and protect civilians from attack. Two months later, the campaign has evolved into a ferocious pounding of the country's capital, Tripoli, in what appears an all-out effort to oust Gadhafi. But that goal remains elusive.

LEAVING NO STONE UNCLIMBED

Thrill seekers compete in annual rock crawl in Twin Falls

Sitting high in her father’s Jeep, Ciara Anderson maneuvered the vehicle over the rocks.

As the course became more challenging, she pressed the gas pedal too hard. The Jeep became stuck.

A part on the Jeep had broke, but Anderson’s spirit had not. Broken parts are to be expected when you’re rock crawling.

Anderson, 15, was one of a few females and the only teenager who competed in the fourth annual Off-road Expo May 14 at Advanced Suspension Design in Twin Falls. The event drew hundreds of spectators, many who huddled beneath canopies when a thunderstorm rolled through that afternoon. It wasn’t quite what shop owner Jeff Trammell had wanted, but the competition went on anyway.

After all, what’s a little mud when you’re driving over rocks?

“I was hoping the weather would have held out better but I think the event turned out well,” Trammell said.

One crowd pleaser was Tony Pellegrino, of Simi Valley, Calif., and his custom off-road machine that made crawling over rocks look like child’s play.

“It’s about 1,500 pounds lighter than a Jeep and has five times the horsepower,” he said. “That helps.”

Jerry Duffy goes for a ride in Tony Pellegrino’s custom rock crawler before a competition at the Off-road Expo May 14 at Advanced Suspension Design in Twin Falls. Pellegrino, of Simi Valley, Calif., comes to the event every year to promote both his business and rock crawling.

Pellegrino, who owns GenRight auto parts, travels from Southern California every year to participate in the Twin Falls event. He said it’s good for business and is something he enjoys doing.

While at the event, Pellegrino gave rides to spectators, including some youth, taking them through the rocks and spinning wheels in the mud afterward. The crowd cheered every time.

In February, Pellegrino took second place in “King of the Hammers” — the country’s premier rock crawling competition — in Johnson Valley, Calif.

“I really love this,” he said. “It’s good to show the local people what Jeeps are capable of doing and what rock crawling is all about.”

LBZ Racing visits Twin Falls shop for next step in dune buggy project

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

“These are the only ones in the world,” James Allinen said of the newly stitched seat belt covers. He stood amid rows of sewing machines and colorful spools of thread.

It’s not the place you’d usually find him, but on this day in early May he didn’t mind.

Allinen and his motocross team, LBZ Racing, were at the Twin Falls shop Threads to see the latest step in his group’s off-road project. The seat belt covers, stitched with official Yamaha and KLIM USA logos, are for the team’s dune buggy they’ve been customizing since about November. Allinen received permission from the companies to use the logos.

It’s been a long, sometimes stressful, journey to this point, but the buggy is nearing completion.

The buggy, however, is means to another end: The team hopes to auction the machine and put the money toward starting a youth center.

The center would be similar to a Boys and Girls club, Allinen said, but with a motocross theme. The group wants to apply for non-profit status, so the extra money needed for the center would come from grants.

“A lot of good has come out of this project,” he said. “But there’s been a lot of sacrifice involved.”

A number of area business owners have stepped up to help the team with its dune buggy project. Karen Thorpe, owner of Threads, is one.

James came in here and I felt like he was trying to help kids in the right direction,” she said. “And I think it’s a good thing for the community.”

Being a lifelong motorsports fan had some influence in her decision to help.

“My dad started taking me to the races in Nashville, N.C.,” she said. “Friday nights turned into kind of a daddy-daughter date for us. ... It (racing) was a way of life.”

Thorpe said she believes motorsports help youth stay focused on something that builds their self-esteem, while keeping them away from questionable activities.

Allinen agrees, and that’s one of the reasons why he wants to start a youth center.

“I’m proud to say, finally, that we have everything we need,” he said about the dune buggy.

He hopes to have the project wrapped up sometime in July. Once complete, the team plans to take it to KLIM USA in Rigby and Yamaha Motors in Cypress, Calif., to show off the customized buggy.

Like the seat belt covers, it’ll be the only one like it in the world.

Big fishing at Big Hill Lake

By Michael Pearce
The Wichita Eagle

BIG HILL LAKE, Kan. — It's a place where oaks and hickories grow dense and tall amid rolling, rock-rimmed hills.

The water is so clear you can almost read the mind of a big smallmouth bass resting in a yard of water, waiting to ambush any crawfish, bluegill or lure passing its rocky lair.

Everything about the place speaks of Table Rock, Bull Shoals or other huge impoundment in the Missouri Ozarks. But Big Hill Lake is comparatively small and sits solidly in southeast Kansas, a few miles west of Parsons.

"It's 1,200 acres, so it's not too overwhelming," Jim Zaleski said as he piloted his boat through a flooded forest on the lake last week. "They call us the 'Gateway to the Ozarks.' It sure looks like parts of some Ozark lakes."

The avid tournament angler and tourism official from Parsons said Big Hill shares some similar attention to the larger Ozark waters.

"For years it's been known as a really good largemouth lake," Zaleski said. "It's become a top-end crappie lake and the last few years the smallmouth fishing has gotten a lot more attention."

Minutes from the launch, he slowed his boat and had two guests start casting five-inch plastic baits hooked once in the middle toward shore.

Jigged and reeled, the snapping ends of the lures resembled a baitfish trying to escape.

The ruse was convincing enough that within minutes, a 14-inch largemouth was dancing across Big Hill's placid surface.

By 1:30 p.m., about 29 more bass had added to the aerial show.

Zaleski credits Big Hill's ultra-clear water for helping establish it as one of Kansas' top public bass fisheries.

The Corps of Engineers' willingness to leave plenty of trees standing when the lake was flooded about 30 years ago also contributed.

Bass also get a chance to grow big.

"I think Wildlife and Parks has done a great job of making this a quality bass lake," Zaleski said of the state's 21-inch minimum length limit of largemouths and 18-inch length limit for smallmouth bass. "You come here, you've got a chance to put a fish in the boat of six-pounds-plus. They're certainly here."

Hoping to show off one of Big Hill's big smallmouth, Zaleski began the trip casting toward rocky points and sections of shorelines along the lake's main body.

As he moved the boat along, he pointed to places where he's caught small-mouth bass of three to four pounds.

His best two from Big Hill were more than five pounds and caught last year.

Northeast truckers celebrate spring

LEBANON, Maine (AP) — A group of guys with giant trucks have celebrated Maine's mud season by getting dirty.

Organizer Kurt Zeller says a week of rain created plenty of mud and participants adopted the attitude "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em." The event dubbed "Spring Muddervention" was held Sunday on his property in the town of Lebanon in southern Maine.

About 70 off-road trucks participated in events in three 200-foot-long mud pits.

Events included drag racing in shallow mud, as well as other events aimed at testing the ability of trucks to handle deep mud without getting stuck. Zeller says one bonus from all the recent wet weather is that there's little need to pump in water because there's been plenty of rain.

Dale Roberts of Acton, Maine, attaches a hook to get his Toyota pulled out after traveling about 142 feet before getting stuck in deep mud while competing Sunday.

Now's the time to protect property from nuisance birds and animals

Question: "I'm having problems with skunks around my house. What can I do to keep them away?"

Answer: Spring is the time when many wild animals begin looking for places to make their summer home, find easy foraging for food, and raise their young. Warm temperatures also mean people start spending more time outdoors.

Now is the time you should do a thorough evaluation of your property for things that attract nuisance birds and animals. Scattered garbage or refuse, pet food, and bird feeders should be cleaned up and put away for the summer. Holes in foundations of buildings or in the skirting of trailers are inviting places for wild animals to take up residence.

Now is also the time to repair woodpecker holes and close up other inviting openings in your eaves for squirrels, starlings and bats.

Homeowners must also be vigilant to prevent swallows from packing mud into the eaves of a house. Continuous removal of the mud and providing an alternate nesting site usually results in the swallows moving to the alternate. For plans for an alternate nest area for swallows, contact your local Idaho Fish and Game regional office.

Most wild animals easily adapt to human food. Skunks, foxes and raccoons will take young fowl raised for human table fare. They are also adept at eating birdseed, fruit, and pet food left outside intended for the cats or dogs.

Porcupines pose a threat to many pets and can girdle valuable landscaping, but if handled carefully can be easily removed from residential areas and released back into the wild. Once they are on the ground, a broom or long-handled shovel can be used to sweep them into a garbage can. Place the lid on the upright can and transport them out of the area for release.

Hawks and owls thrive in close proximity to humans and agriculture. For many farmers, they are worth their weight in gold because they prey on crop-eating rodents.

ASK THE OFFICER

Gary Hompland

Great horned owls are an important predator on skunks. If owners fail to take precautions they can also prey on small domestic pets. Hawks and owls have also been known to draw blood while protecting their nests. In areas where this is a problem, we usually recommend allowing the birds to raise their young and leave the nest and then remove the nest the following year.

In the Hailey area, now is the time to make plans for bear-proof refuse containers. Bear-proof garbage bins used in subdivisions and around restaurants make those areas less attractive to black bears. I strongly suggest all concessionaires utilize bear-proof Dumpsters.

As bears develop patterns of use on human food sources, our attempts to protect landowners and the public become less effective. With each success at getting the "easy meal" bears get bolder and more determined to defeat attempts to protect private property.

In several cases last year, bears entered residences and made a shambles inside the houses. Bears that habituate to human food present a significant threat to public safety. Those showing aggressive tendencies will be humanely killed. It's much easier to prevent a bear problem than it is to correct it once it develops.

Hikers need to be aware of wildlife in the springtime as well. Sow bears with cubs and cow moose with calves are not fond of human intrusion. They are even less fond of fido walking at your side. The lesson here is, make sure they know you're coming. Make lots of noise and they will move out of your way.

Like old Ben Franklin said, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Take inventory of your situation and decide how to best protect yourself from nuisance animals.

FISHING REPORT

Underwater debris poses threat to boaters

Idaho Department of Fish and Game

Magic Reservoir is full. Fishing has been slow recently due to high, murky water. It is beginning to clear and as it does fishing is expected to improve.

Salmon Falls Reservoir is extremely high and water is still coming in. Anglers should be cautious if they launch boats from the backwaters. There is a lot of debris underwater that could cause boaters issues.

Water is murky, fishing is slow, but water starts to clear up toward the dam.

Roseworth Reservoir also has extremely high water. Fishing is very slow and the water is cloudy.

The Big Wood River is running high. It's likely safe wading conditions are at least a month away on the main river as well as the tributaries. The prospects of fishing in the upper valley between now and July 4 depends on how quickly the snow melts.

None of the local ponds have been stocked yet.

How do we determine who gets what from grandma's estate? What's fair?

Answer:

• "Fair" is a subjective term - everyone defines it differently.

• The key is good communication among family members.

Bobby Gene Shults

March 16, 1927–May 23, 2011

BURLEY — Bobby Gene Shults, passed away surrounded by his family Monday, May 23, 2011, after a short bout with advanced lymphoma.

Born March 16, 1927, to Charles Leslie Shults and Et-tie Belle Harris, Bob spent his childhood in California, Texas and Oklahoma. His family loved to hear his stories of the Dust Bowl days, covered wagon trips and practical jokes he and his siblings played on each other. A World War II veteran; he joined the Navy in 1945 and was assigned to the USS Antietam for the duration of the war.

Bob graduated from Fresno State University in 1952 with a degree in animal husbandry and was hired by Swift and Company to work its feedlot in Burley, Idaho. While working in Burley, Bob met and married Anna Mae Kelsey Pace on Nov. 23, 1956. A job transfer took them to Sacramento, Calif., for three years, where Bob traveled extensively buying cattle. In 1960 Bob went to work in the cattle auction business and moved back to Burley, where he and Anna made their home for the next 51 years. Bob worked in the cattle industry as part owner of the Burley Commission Co. and the Shults and Allred feedlot for several years. He then farmed until 1986, when he and Anna bought the Package House in Burley. He retired in 1996 and Bob spent his days watching his grandchildren play ball, reading and tending his very large garden.

Bob joined The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1962 and served faithfully in many callings, including second counselor to Bishop Tom Geary, Scoutmaster, high priest group leader and temple coordinator. He and Anna also served as church service missionaries at the Burley Cannery.

Bob is survived by his wife of 53 years and his three children: Tom (Gael) Shults, Diana (Mark) Elder, and Nancy (Troy) Winmill; fifteen grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren. He is also survived by a sister, Helen Shults Jensen of Montana, and sister-in-law Lee Ann Shults of Fresno, California. He is preceded in death by his parents and his brother.

Bob was loved and respected by everyone who knew him. He will be greatly missed by his friends and family.

A funeral will be held in Bob’s honor at 11 a.m. Friday, May 27, at the Pella LDS Ward LDS building, 152 W. 400 S. of Burley. A viewing will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, May 26, at the Morrison-Payne Funeral Home, 321 E. Main St. in Burley, and again one hour prior to the funeral at the church.

Eric Fuller, a victim of the January mass shooting in Tucson, Ariz., leaves a federal courthouse Wednesday after a competency hearing for Jared Loughner in Tucson, Ariz.

Tucson shooting suspect incompetent

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The man accused of wounding Rep. Gabrielle Giffords in a deadly rampage lowered his head to within inches of the courtroom table Wednesday. When he lifted it, he began yelling, angry and loud.

Federal marshals had to drag Jared Lee Loughner out of the packed federal courtroom. Minutes later, he was in a nearby room and, over a closed-circuit TV, could watch as U.S. District Judge Larry Burns declared him incompetent to stand trial.

Mental health experts concluded that the 22-year-old college dropout suffers from schizophrenia.

Burns ordered Loughner to a federal facility in Missouri for up to four months, where doctors will try to give him enough treatment to bring him to a point where he understands the case against him.

“You don’t have to be a psychiatrist to know that the boy is disturbed,” said Eric Fuller, who was shot in the knee and the back during the Jan. 8 shooting spree at a Giffords event outside a Tucson, Ariz., supermarket. Fuller said he wouldn’t be bothered if Loughner spends the rest of his life in a mental health facility.

“Hinckley has been gone for forever,” Fuller said, referring to John Hinckley Jr., who tried to assassinate President Ronald Reagan 30 years ago and has since been committed to a psychiatric hospital.

Loughner spent five weeks in March and April at the federal facility in Springfield, Mo., where he was examined by psychologist Christina Pietz and psychiatrist Matthew Carroll. The two were asked to determine if Loughner understands the consequences of the case.

Burns viewed 18 hours of the experts’ videotaped interviews with Loughner. He said the experts’ reports and videos were confidential, but he summarized their findings at the hearing.

The judge said Carroll concluded Loughner’s mental health has declined in the past two or three years and his thinking on legal issues is confused. Carroll believes Loughner doesn’t grasp the gravity of the charges and is instead fixated on inconsequential issues.

Pietz concluded Loughner’s thoughts are random and that he suffers from delusions, the judge said. She noted Loughner gave nonsensical answers to questions and doesn’t understand the role of judges or jurors.

Neither expert thought Loughner was faking his mental health problems, with one of the therapists saying Loughner doesn’t want to be perceived as mentally ill. A hearing to revisit Loughner’s mental competency is set for Sept. 21.

Winfrey finale devoted to fans

CHICAGO (AP) — There were no free cars or vacations. No favorite things or makeovers. No celebrity guests on stage — though there were plenty in the audience.

The finale of Oprah Winfrey’s talk show, taped Tuesday and aired Wednesday, was all about the one thing that made her a billion-dollar success: the unique connection she made with millions of viewers for 25 years. In what she called her “love letter” to fans, she made clear that to her, all those TV friendships went both ways.

“Something in me connected with each of you in a way that allowed me to see myself in you and you in me,” Winfrey said. “I listened and grew, and I know you grew along with me.”

Winfrey was the only person on stage with little background music and short flash-back clips. The show went to commercials with “Twenty-Five Years,” a soft song that musician Paul Simon wrote and recorded for her.

She called fans her “safe harbor” and became teary eyed when reflecting on her upbringing in rural Mississippi.

“It is no coincidence that a lonely little girl,” Winfrey said, choking up, “who felt not a lot of love, even though my parents and grandparents did the best they could, it is no coincidence that I grew up to feel a genuine kindness, affection, trust and validation from millions of you all over the world.”

Winfrey told viewers that sometimes she was a teacher, but more often her viewers instructed her. She called Wednesday’s episode her “last class from this stage.”

At one point she thanked viewers for sharing her “yellow brick road of blessings” — something she said back in November 2009, when she announced that she would end her show. The program gave rise to a media empire, including a magazine and Winfrey’s own cable network, which she launched in January.

Wednesday’s show was the last piece of a months-long sendoff, but as the hour wrapped up, Winfrey stopped short of saying farewell.

“I won’t say goodbye. I’ll just say, until we meet again,” she said.

She hugged and kissed her longtime partner Stedman Graham and shook hands with audience members before walking through the halls of Harpo Studios in Chicago, hugging and crying with her staff. She shouted, “We did it!”

The last shot of the finale showed Winfrey walking away with her cocker spaniel, Sadie.

Some fans across the country had parties for the finale. Sharon Evans, 53, of Chicago had pancakes with her mother and girlfriends.

“She was very subdued today and I appreciated that she was taking that last hour not to showcase any celebrities or favorite things,” Evans said. “It was truly what she said, a love letter to us.”

Amy Korin, 32, of Chicago, was in the studio audience when the show taped on Tuesday. She described Winfrey’s monologue as having the feeling of a graduation commencement speech. “It was just amazing to witness,” she said.

Celebrities in the audience included Tyler Perry, Maria Shriver, Suze Orman and Cicely Tyson. None of them joined Winfrey on stage. A week earlier, Hollywood A-listers and 13,000 fans bid Winfrey farewell in a double-episode extravaganza at Chicago’s United Center.

In the bare-bones final taping there were just 404 audience members, according to Harpo Productions. The show received 1.4 million ticket requests throughout its final season, the company said.

Winfrey became famous over the decades for landing hard-to-get celebrity interviews and her annual give-away shows, when she bestowed audience members with such stunning gifts as cars and Australian vacations.

A television journalist, Winfrey came to Chicago in 1984 to WLS-TV’s morning talk show, “A.M. Chicago.” A month later the show was No. 1 in the market. A year later it was renamed “The Oprah Winfrey Show.”

After Emanuel’s cameo, Blagojevich plans to take stand

CHICAGO (AP) — On just his 10th day in office, Chicago’s new mayor found himself on the witness stand in the federal corruption trial of a former governor, testifying just after a congressman who talked about money and political deals.

Rahm Emanuel’s appearance, the most anticipated by a Chicago mayor in a federal courtroom in decades, was over in just five minutes.

Even in a city renowned for its unholy mix of politics and graft, Emanuel’s courthouse cameo on Wednesday brought the limelight back to former Gov. Rod Blagojevich’s retrial on charges that he tried to leverage his office for personal gain.

Blagojevich plans to take the stand himself, his spokesman said. Glenn Selig told The Associated Press it wasn’t immediately clear just when that might happen, but court discussions Wednesday evening about FBI wiretap evidence indicated it could be Thursday when the defense resumes its case.

Emanuel testified that, in his former job as chief of staff to President Barack Obama, he knew of no deal in which Blagojevich had asked for a top job in exchange for appointing Obama’s preferred candidate to the president-elect’s vacant Senate seat in 2008. Among the 20 charges that Blagojevich faces are several involving allegations that he tried to sell or trade the seat.

Attorneys paint 2 sides of mother

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The mother accused of killing her 2-year-old daughter was a party girl who promoted events at Florida nightclubs, though at times she was also an attentive, devoted parent, witnesses testifying at her murder trial said Wednesday.

The prosecution and defense offered jurors strikingly different portrayals of what Casey Anthony was doing in the days immediately after her daughter Caylee was last seen alive.

Anthony, 25, is charged with first-degree murder. Prosecutors said Caylee died from three pieces of duct tape being placed over her mouth and nose, while Anthony's attorney has claimed the toddler accidentally drowned in her grandparents' pool.

Caylee was last seen June 16, 2008. One of the grandparents' neighbors, Brian Burner, testified that Anthony asked him two days later if she could borrow a shovel to "dig up a bamboo root." She returned the shovel about an hour later, he said.

Burner also said he remembered seeing Anthony's white car backed into the garage on the night of June 16.

About a month before that, Anthony met Tony Lazzaro during a party. They soon became romantically involved and she moved into an apartment he was sharing with four other people.

Lazzaro and his ex-roommates testified that they met Anthony's daughter several times and then at some point in early June, they never saw her again.

When they asked about Caylee, her mother told them she was with her nanny at a theme park or going to the beach.

Lazzaro and the roommates said Anthony's demeanor never suggested anything was wrong. She would cook, clean and help out around the apartment, they said.

"She was a regular 22-year-old girl," said Cameron Campana, a club promoter who was a college student at the time. "Peppy. She seemed normal."

Another roommate, Nathan Lezniewicz, said Anthony liked going out and having a good time.

"She was not an introvert by any means," he said.

Lazzaro echoed their sentiments and also identified Anthony in several nightclub party photos, including a "hard body contest" in which Anthony danced in a short skirt. Prosecutors also showed jurors surveillance videos of Anthony and Lazzaro going to the video store and shopping at JC Penny after the time Caylee was believed to be missing.

"She was the way she was every day — happy," Lazzaro said.

Forecasts helped avoid catastrophe in Oklahoma

PIEDMONT, Okla. (AP) — When three tornadoes marched toward Oklahoma City and its suburbs, thousands of people in the path benefited from good forecasts, luck and live television to avoid the kind of catastrophe that befell Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Joplin, Mo.

Although at least 15 people died in the latest round of violent weather that started Tuesday, schools and offices closed early, giving many families plenty of time to take shelter. And even stragglers were able to get to safety at the last minute because TV forecasters narrated the twisters' every turn.

"We live in Oklahoma and we don't mess around," Lori Jenkins of Guthrie said after emerging from a neighbor's storm shelter to find her carport crumpled and her home damaged.

The people of Oklahoma City, which has been struck by more tornadoes than any other U.S. city, knew the storms were coming. Anxiety was perhaps running higher than usual Tuesday after last month's twister outbreak in the South that killed more than 300 people and a Sunday storm that killed at least 125 in Joplin, Mo.

The Oklahoma twisters proved to be weaker than the other tornadoes. But the minute-by-minute accounts of the developing weather helped thousands of people stay abreast of the danger.

Television helicopters broadcast live footage while the system approached the metropolitan area of 1.2 million people — calling out to specific communities like Piedmont to "Take cover now!"

In Guthrie, about 30 miles north of the capital city, Ron Brooks was watching when he learned that a tornado was barreling toward him. He heeded the weatherman's warning, scooped up his two children and took cover with his wife in their laundry room.

"When they told us to get into the shelter or interior room, we did that," Brooks said. "The first year I moved to Oklahoma, in 1997, I saw a funnel drop out of a wall cloud. Since seeing one, I've always taken it pretty seriously." He emerged 20 minutes later, relieved to learn that the tornado passed just north of his home.

Another line of severe storms swept through the nation's midsection Wednesday, mainly east of Oklahoma. A tornado warning was briefly issued for downtown Kansas City, Mo., and at least two weak tornadoes touched down in or near the suburbs.

A few others were reported in Illinois. The storms moved later into Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee.

In Joplin, the city manager said Wednesday that 125 people had died in the storm, raising by three the toll of the nation's deadliest single tornado since 1950. He said more than 900 people had been injured.

Rescue and recovery work continued, with crews repeating grid searches for any survivors who might still be buried in rubble. Structural engineers were sent inside the ruins of St. John's Medical Center, which was crippled by the twister, to see if the hospital could be saved.

Back in the Oklahoma City area, at least nine people were killed, despite broadcasters offering live coverage of the storms for two hours before the bad weather actually hit around the evening rush hour.

AROUND THE NATION

Edwards could be indicted within days

RALEIGH, N.C. — The Justice Department plans to bring criminal charges against John Edwards after a two-year investigation into whether the former presidential candidate illegally used money from some of his political backers to cover up his extramarital affair, a person familiar with the case said Wednesday.

An indictment could come within days unless the 2004 Democratic vice-presidential nominee reaches an agreement with prosecutors to plead guilty to a negotiated charge, said the person, who spoke on condition of anonymity because of the case's sensitivity.

Diplomats ordered to leave Yemen

WASHINGTON — The State Department on Wednesday ordered nonessential U.S. diplomats to depart Yemen and urged all Americans there to leave as security conditions deteriorated with the country's embattled leader refusing to step down.

The decision to tell most nonessential personnel and the families of all American staff at the U.S. Embassy in San'a to leave was a sign of Washington's increasing concern about the situation in Yemen, where street battles between supporters and opponents of Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh raged for a third day. The clashes have left at least 41 dead and dozens badly injured.

Palin signals ambition to run

JUNEAU, Alaska — Former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin has authorized a feature-length film about her rise, added staff and recently said she has "that fire in the belly" for a presidential bid — all steps that fuel speculation she's inching toward a White House run.

Her supporters are putting together a campaign-in-waiting in Iowa, the lead-off nominating caucus, in case the Republicans' 2008 vice presidential nominee decides to join the race.

There are even reports she bought a home in Arizona that aides have suggested could be a campaign headquarters if she goes forward.

Senate votes down House budget

WASHINGTON — Joined by several moderate Republicans, Democrats controlling the Senate rejected a controversial House budget plan for turning Medicare into a voucher-like program for future beneficiaries.

Five Republicans joined every Democrat in killing the measure, which calls for transforming Medicare into a program in which future beneficiaries — people now 54 years old and younger — would be given a subsidy to purchase health insurance rather than have the government directly pay hospital and doctor bills.

Texas boy wins geographic bee

WASHINGTON — A 13-year-old boy from Texas won the National Geographic Bee on Wednesday by correctly identifying the country that is home to the Tungurahua volcano.

Tine Valencic of Colleyville didn't miss a single question during the final round of the geography bee and took home a $25,000 scholarship and a trip to the Galapagos Islands. The answer that made the difference: Ecuador.

Club soccer championships come to town

Event to bring 84 teams to Twin Falls area

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Remember the soccer influx two weeks ago for the Canyon Rim Classic? Get ready for it to happen again.

In addition to the area's signature club soccer tournament, Twin Falls earned hosting rights for a second tournament this season. This one carries a bit more weight: it's the Idaho Youth Soccer Association's 2011 State Cup.

Eighty-four teams will complete for championships in 10 age divisions, five each for boys and girls ranging from U13 to U17. The U18-U19 tournament was held last weekend in Boise, due to conflicts with high school graduations.

Play begins at 5 p.m. Friday and continues through the weekend, with championship play scheduled for Monday. Sunway Soccer Complex and Canyon Ridge High School will both stage games over the course of the competition. The event is held every other year in the Treasure Valley, according to Twin Falls Rapids vice president Chris Clark, and the site for the other years is voted upon based on proposals from interested hosts.

"Idaho Falls, Coeur d'Alene, and Twin Falls submitted proposals and the board chose us," said Clark. "I think everyone agrees it's the most fair way to do it."

In order to compete in State Cup play, teams must compete in a sanctioned club league within Idaho. Most Rapids teams competed in the Snake River League associated with eastern Idaho, Clark said, while a couple played in a Boise-area league.

Clark and the Rapids are responsible for most of the groundwork leading up to the event, he said. Once the whistles are blown Friday, the IYSA takes over running the event and he and his colleagues are free to help visitors find their way to the soccer sites — and around the Magic Valley in general.

Club Canyon U16 volleyball headed for national championships

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

In the Jerome Recreation gym gather some of the best volleyball players from the Magic Valley.

Players from Twin Falls, Jerome, Kimberly and Rupert all practicing on the same team for the Club Canyon AAU teams.

A Lighthouse Christian player sets the ball to a Hagerman outside hitter, while a Buhl player dives for the dig on the other side of the net.

Jerome twins Stephanie and Mackenzie Martens share high-fives with their Twin Falls teammates.

"It's a fun deal. We have the best players from the Magic Valley on the same team and we play the best teams in the state and in the nation," said Club Canyon director Jim Cartisser.

These all-star players are taking their talents to the Sunshine State.

The Club Canyon U16 volleyball team won the Idaho Classic in Boise this month to earn an invitation to the 2011 AAU Girls Junior National Volleyball Championships June 18-22 in Orlando, Fla.

The girls will stack up against 160 other club teams from across the country at the ESPN Wide World of Sports Complex at Disney World.

"We're so excited. It's going to be a lot of fun," said Twin Falls freshman Sierra Starley. "It's pretty neat to be able to go down there and play with the best teams in the country."

"We didn't really expect to be able to go, so now that we are it makes it so much better."

Club Canyon will play three matches each day during the first three days in Orlando and will enter a single elimination tournament on the fourth day.

"We want to finish in the top 20, if not higher," said coach Guy Stubbs.

Stubbs, a Jerome graduate, played collegiate volleyball at Montana State-Billings in the late 80s and has coached volleyball for 17 years. This is his third year with Club Canyon.

"It's a challenge coaching this team because it's a higher level of competition. The game is more intricate. We play some of the best teams in the nation and you have to coach to that level," Stubbs said. "It's a great group of girls and it's a lot of fun coaching this team."

The U16 team consists of freshman and sophomores from every reach of the Magic Valley. Six of the 13 players come from Twin Falls and Jerome high schools, but there are also players from the Minico, Buhl, Kimberly and Glenns Ferry.

"It's really crazy to see how many great players we have in the area, especially from the smaller schools," Starley said. "It's fun playing with all the different girls, like Katelyn Peterson from Camas County (U18). She was so much fun to play with and so good. I learned a lot from her."

Declo junior Keva Robinson, who plays along with Peterson on the U18 team for coach Babes Kalulu, said she enjoys the experience of playing with the best players in the region.

"You play at the big tournaments and against the best players around and it's really helped me improve my game. It brings your game to the next level," Robinson said. "It's also fun to play on the same team with the girls from the bigger schools."

Mets find not all gambles pay off

Desperate men do desperate things, not that Fred Wilpon needed an excuse to speak out. Forced to watch the players he made rich under-perform season after season, it's a wonder the Mets' owner was able to hold his tongue this long.

Tim Dahlberg

Maybe there's something about facing possible financial ruin that makes it easier to say what you really think. Kind of cathartic in a way, a small price to pay for peace of mind even if some of Wilpon's high-priced talent might take offense.

Somewhat surprising in the wake of Wilpon's comments is that the talent didn't. Not publicly anyway, even when Wilpon went so far as to call himself a "schmuck" for signing Carlos Beltran to a seven-year, $119-million deal and say that David Wright is nothing more than a decent player.

Wright's way of firing back? He issued a statement calling Wilpon "a good man" who is "obviously going through some difficult times."

Not exactly the kind of fight that plays well on talk radio in New York. But there's always reason to spend some air time on one of Wilpon's connections from outside baseball.

We're talking about Bernard Madoff here, whose friendship with Wilpon is the major reason the Mets' owner is in such a mess. Wilpon's "investments" with Madoff helped fund the Mets during good times, and they could conceivably cost him the team if a trustee trying to recover more than $1 billion for Madoff victims from Wilpon and his partners is successful.

Wilpon's current plight is the subject of a sympathetic article in Sports Illustrated this week, where he said the team was "bleeding cash" and may lose $70 million this year. He's in search of a minority owner to help shore up the ballclub's finances, though even that may not be good enough to hold onto the team if the trustee is successful.

But it was the comments that Wilpon made in another interview to The New Yorker about Wright, Beltran and Jose Reyes that overshadowed his own dire situation simply because owners — at least those not Dallas Mavericks forward Dirk Nowitzki celebrates his team's win over the Oklahoma City Thunder Thursday in Dallas. The Mavericks reached the NBA Finals with the win.

Nowitzki, Mavs reach NBA Finals

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki, Jason Kidd and the Dallas Mavericks are going back to the NBA Finals.

Nowitzki swished a go-ahead 3-pointer with 1:14 left and Shawn Marion followed with a three-point play off a steal, the pivotal plays in yet another fourth-quarter comeback, this one sending the Mavericks to a 100-96 victory over the Oklahoma City Thunder on Wednesday night that closed out the Western Conference finals in five games.

After clawing back from down 15 with 5:04 left in Game 4, the Mavericks were down by six with 4:37 left in this one when they rallied again, outscoring the Thunder 14-4 the rest of the way.

Dallas has never won a championship, and neither has any of its players. Nowitzki and Jason Terry were part of the only Mavericks team to make the finals, in 2006. They were up 2-0 and leading late in Game 3, but lost the series to the Miami Heat in six games.

Dallas could get another crack at the Heat.

LeBron James and Miami lead the Chicago Bulls 3-1 in the Eastern Conference finals. If the Heat win Thursday night, the finals will begin Tuesday in Miami. If the Bulls win Thursday night, the finals will begin next Thursday in the East winner's city.

"All I can tell everybody is, we ain't done yet," Mavs owner Mark Cuban said during the on-court trophy presentation ceremony. Seconds later, fans began chanting, "Beat the Heat,"

Bedard, Gutierrez lead Mariners past Twins

MINNEAPOLIS — Erik Bedard threw six shutout innings, and Franklin Gutierrez hit his first home run of the season to help Seattle beat Minnesota.

David Pauley threw two scoreless innings in relief, Brandon League pitched a perfect ninth for his 12th save in 15 attempts and the Twins managed only seven singles on their way to their fifth shutout loss of the season. They have the worst record in the majors at 16-32 and the fewest runs with 164.

Bedard (3-4) stretched his scoreless innings streak to 14. The Canadian left hander, sidelined last season because of a shoulder injury, allowed six hits and one walk and struck out four.

Tampa Bay Lightning's Martin St. Louis (26) celebrates with teammates Steven Stamkos, center, and Vincent Lecavalier (4) after scoring against the Boston Bruins during the second period in Game 6 of the NHL Stanley Cup playoffs Eastern Conference finals in Tampa, Fla., Wednesday.

Lightning beat Bruins, force pivotal Game 7

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Martin St. Louis and Teddy Purcell each scored twice, resilient goalie Dwayne Roloson weathered a hat trick by Boston's David Krejci, and the Tampa Bay Lightning stayed alive in the Eastern Conference finals with a 5-4 win over the Boston Bruins in Game 6 on Wednesday night.

Game 7 is Friday night in Boston. The Bruins are seeking their first trip to the Stanley Cup finals in 21 years, and the Lightning will try to clinch their first appearance on hockey's biggest stage since they won their only NHL championship in 2004.

The Western Conference champion Vancouver Canucks await the winner in the finals.

St. Louis also assisted on a third-period goal that put the Lightning up 4-2. His second goal — and NHL-leading 10th of the playoffs — restored Tampa Bay's two-goal lead after Boston pulled within 4-3 on one of two goals Krejci scored to keep the Bruins within striking distance in the closing minutes.

Roloson, who didn't play in Game 5 after being pulled from two of the previous three games because of ineffectiveness, also gave up a pair of first-period goals and finished with 16 saves.

Boston's Tim Thomas

gave up another early goal, then struggled after Krejci and Milan Lucic scored to give the Bruins a 2-1 lead through one period.

The Lightning took control when St. Louis, Purcell and Steven Stamkos scored power-play goals within a 12-minute span of the second and third periods.

Roloson improved to 7-0 in elimination games during his career, including 4-0 this postseason. The Lightning rallied from a 3-1 deficit to beat Pittsburgh in the first round, with their 41-year-old goalie shutting out the Penguins in Game 7 on the road.

Tampa Bay coach Guy Boucher gave backup goalie Mike Smith his first career playoff start Monday night, saying he felt Roloson — whose midseason acquisition was one of the keys to Tampa Bay emerging as a contender — needed a "breather" after starting the Lightning's first 15 postseason games.

Smith stopped 17 of 19 shots in the Game 5 loss, however Boucher didn't hesitate to go back to Roloson with the Lightning facing elimination.

"Personally, I don't like the word desperation. ... To me, it's just another game," Roloson said following the Lightning's skate Wednesday morning. "You have to focus on your job."

tured in the team's logo — for a black hat that read "The Finals 2011" with a Mavs logo and the championship trophy. Fans roared again when the overhead video board showed Nowitzki wearing the hat.

Russell Westbrook scored 31 points and seemed to be on a mission to force the series back to Oklahoma City. But he had two crucial turnovers during the furious finish.

Kevin Durant and James Harden finished with 23 points apiece for the Thunder, a young team whose future is bright but who at this point still has a lot to learn about closing out big games.

Lakers reach deal with Mike Brown

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers have reached an agreement in principle with former Cleveland coach Mike Brown to succeed Phil Jackson, the team said Wednesday.

"We've met with Mike and are very impressed with him," said a statement issued by the Lakers. "In addition, we have an outline for an agreement in place and hope to sign a contract within the next few days."

Brown will get a four-year deal worth roughly $18 million, a person with knowledge of the discussions told The Associated Press on Wednesday on condition of anonymity because the Lakers hadn't yet formally hired Brown.

With a strong interview last weekend, Brown jumped to the front of the line of candidates for the daunting challenge of succeeding the 11-time NBA champion Jackson with one of the NBA's iconic franchises. Brown will be the 22nd coach of the Lakers, whose 16 NBA titles trail only the Boston Celtics' 17 in league history.

Rather than promoting one of Jackson's assistant coaches, the Lakers are changing course after an abrupt end to their two-year title reign and the long-anticipated departure of Jackson, the coach with the most championship rings in NBA history.

After nearly quitting last summer,

Former Cleveland Cavaliers head coach Mike Brown has reached an agreement to coach the Los Angeles Lakers.

Jackson retired earlier this month after the Dallas Mavericks swept the defending two-time champion Lakers out of the second round of the playoffs.

Although Kobe Bryant endorsed Jackson assistant Brian Shaw for the vacancy, Jim Buss — the Lakers' executive vice president of player personnel and the son of owner Jerry Buss — became intrigued by Brown after Saturday's interview.

Heat's Big 3 one win from reaching finals

Conference finals and a win Thursday at the United Center means they'll be playing for a championship.

That's exactly the way James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh envisioned it when they decided to join together in the offseason. Miami is on the verge of its first trip to the finals since 2006 after beating Chicago 101-93 in overtime on Tuesday.

James led the way with 35 points and helped contain Rose down the stretch. Bosh chipped in with 22, Wade came up with three big blocks in overtime and the bench again delivered as the Heat took a commanding lead.

Now, they'll try to close this one out.

"We understand it's going to be a tough game," Wade said. "But we have the team and we have the guys that are capable of showing up and putting on a performance that we need to win the game. It's not going to be pretty, but that's not Miami Heat basketball anyway."

The Bulls dropped consecutive games only four times during the regular season and never lost more than two in a row. Their first three-game skid could not have come at a worse time.

"When you look at the score, 3-1, it looks bad," Chicago's Luol Deng said.

But he was quick to point out the games have been close. That's one reason he insisted the Bulls are not out of it.

"I really believe we've got a group of guys that are going to keep on fighting," Deng said. "There's no quit in us. There's no quit in that locker room. It's really going to come down to the end of the game again."

Many expected the Heat to run away with the Eastern Conference after they hit the free-agent jackpot, reeling in James and Bosh while re-signing Wade. Instead, it was the remade Bulls who jumped to a league-leading 62 wins and the top overall seed, with Rose becoming the youngest MVP and ending James' two-year reign.

Along the way, they swept three close games from the Heat during the regular season. They even left them in tears after beating them in March, when they were in a five-game losing streak and appeared to be unraveling.

Now it's Miami that has Chicago's players and Coach of the Year Tom Thibodeau rubbing their eyes.

"We still have games to play," Rose said. "Thibs talked to us in the locker room about it, where we're going back to play at home, and we have to stay positive, where they are beatable."

Djokovic gets 41st win in row

PARIS (AP) — Even if Novak Djokovic is tennis' man of the moment, there's a long, long way to go before he'd approach most of Roger Federer's many accomplishments.

So far to go, really, that it's not worth discussing.

Still, there is one area in which, as of Wednesday, the two men are equal: Djokovic was credited with his 41st consecutive victory — matching the best streak of Federer's career — when second-round opponent Victor Hanesescu of Romania quit at the French Open because of a left leg injury.

Novak Djokovic returns in his match against Victor Hanesescu of Romania during the second round match of the French Open tennis tournament Wednesday at Roland Garros stadium in Paris.

"I'm not thinking about when this streak — this amazing streak — will end. So I guess that's the right mental approach," said the second-seeded Djokovic, who was serving at 6-4, 6-1, 2-3, 30-love when Hanesescu decided to stop playing at Court Philippe Chatrier.

It was a far quieter and less theatrical ending than what transpired a few hours later on Court 1. Sabine Lisicki of Germany was bothered by dizziness and muscle cramps and was carried off on a stretcher, sobbing, after wasting a match point and a 5-2 lead in the third set of a 4-6, 7-5, 7-5 loss to two-time Grand Slam finalist Vera Zvonareva of Russia. Lisicki was treated by a trainer — including a blood-pressure check — during changeovers.

"I hope she feels OK," the No. 3-seeded Zvonareva said. "No matter what, I had to keep doing my job."

Also reaching the third round: No. 1 Caroline Wozniacki of Denmark, past champions Francesca Schiavone of Italy and Svetlana Kuznetsova of Russia, 2010 runner-up Sam Stosur of Australia, and unseeded Bethanie Mattek-Sands of the United States.

Men's winners included No. 3 Federer, No. 7 David Ferrer of Spain, and three Frenchmen: No. 9 Gael Monfils, No. 13 Richard Gasquet and No. 17 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga.

Federer improved his career second-round mark at Grand Slam tournaments to 42-0 by beating French wild-card entry Maxime Teixeira 6-3, 6-0, 6-2. Teixeira is ranked 181st and never had played a tour-level match until winning in the first round Sunday.

Federer, who counts the 2009 French Open among his record 16 Grand Slam titles, knows what it's like to be the inexperienced kid across the net from one of the game's greats. Back on Oct. 6, 1998, Federer played his sixth career match against Andre Agassi at Basel, Switzerland, and lost 6-3, 6-2.

"You know, on the one hand, that you can't win," said Federer, who went on a 41-match unbeaten run from August 2006 to March 2007. "And if you win, it's like a miracle."

Against Teixeira, Federer won 13 games in a row in one stretch.

NFL sees signs fans are turned off

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The NFL is seeing the early signs of cracks in fan loyalty.

Ten weeks into the owners' lockout of the players, Commissioner Roger Goodell noted Wednesday the negative effect the labor dispute is having on pro football.

"Clearly it has had an impact on the fans," Goodell said as the owners completed their spring meetings. "We see it in various metrics. There's been a noticeable change, TV ratings were down on the draft roughly 4 million people. NFL.com traffic (is down), we see that." Ticket sales also are down.

"Fans want certainty," Goodell added. "We can't underestimate that the fans are going through challenges just in the general economy."

That certainty isn't likely to come soon. Both sides have a date in 8th U.S. District Court on June 3 for hearings on the league's appeal to uphold the lockout. A decision probably won't come for several weeks, and while another set of mediation sessions is scheduled to start June 7, not much is expected from those discussions while the appeal is being considered.

The owners' meetings included lengthy talks about the labor dispute, but no deadlines have been set — yet — for the opening of training camps, which usually happens in late July. That drop-dead date "obviously is coming," Goodell said, barring a collective bargaining agreement.

"We've made it clear that

NFL coaches side with players in lockout fight

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — NFL coaches are teaming up with the players in their legal fight to end the owner-imposed lockout.

The NFL Coaches Association filed a brief with the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Wednesday expressing support for the players and saying that the lockout is putting their jobs in jeopardy.

"Owners and fans increasingly demand immediate success, and coaches whose teams cannot fulfill such severe expectations face likely dismissal, which means the uprooting of families, economic dislocation, and a significantly less promising career path," lawyers for the NFLCA wrote.

No individual coaches were identified in the brief, which said that the eight new coaches hired this year face particularly daunting odds of success if the lockout is not lifted soon. The NFL grants new coaches two extra summer minicamps to get players familiar with the new staff, and the elimination of those camps puts them at a competitive disadvantage heading into the season.

"To meet management's expectations, coaches need adequate time in the off-season to prepare their players for the season ahead," the filing said. "The lockout has already interfered with the coaches' off-season plans for their players, and each day lost in preparing for the season further diminishes coaches' opportunities to prove themselves and advance their career."

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league was not surprised by the filing.

FIFA investigates bin Hammam, Warner for bribery

ZURICH (AP) — One week before FIFA's presidential election, a new bribery scandal erupted that could destroy the candidacy of Sepp Blatter's only rival and punish one of the federation's longtime power brokers.

FIFA on Wednesday summoned Asian Football Confederation leader Mohamed bin Hammam and FIFA vice president Jack Warner to an ethics hearing Sunday to face allegations of corruption during the Qatari official's campaign visit to Trinidad two weeks ago. The timing and the source of the allegations, longtime Warner ally Chuck Blazer of the United States, gives them a gravity not seen with FIFA's other scandals.

Bin Hammam hopes to end Blatter's 13-year presidency in a June 1 vote of FIFA's 208 national members. But he could wind up barred from the vote in Zurich if the ethics panel decides to provisionally suspend him from all soccer duties while it prepares its case — leaving the 75-year-old Blatter clear to claim a fourth and final four-year term atop the governing body for the world's most popular sport.

Bin Hammam denied wrongdoing and suggested, on "a difficult and painful day for me," that the accusations were instigated by Blatter's camp.

Soccer

"We have to have the background logistics and all that, but they run the event. That takes a huge burden off the volunteers, and I can watch games and recommend people visit Shoshone Falls or do other things," said Clark. "This actually isn't as stressful (as the Canyon Rim Classic), which is a great thing."

Hotel revenue alone is expected to reach $264,000, according to Boise-based SelectHospitality, the hotel-booking firm used by the Twin Falls Rapids Soccer Club. Clark estimated the tournament's total economic value to the area at $1 million, a similar amount as estimated generated from the Canyon Rim Classic two weeks ago.

"Two events, $2 million into the local economy," he said.

DEAR ABBY: My dad died four years ago. He and Mom had many friends and did everything together, including raising nine children.

Mom was always in charge of things. Dad reinforced any decisions she made and vice versa. Since his death, Mom has become progressively more bitter. Eight children are alive today, and we all avoid her if we can. She cries because no one stops by to see her, but if we do, she has a long chore list waiting. I have my own home, work two jobs and don't want what little time I have with her spent working as her slave.

If by chance I feel brave enough to take her out in public, she embarrasses me with her verbal outbursts. She waits until I start to pay, then asks loudly, "Are you sure you have enough money in the bank to pay for that?" Another time, she stopped a complete stranger, told him I was single and asked if he wanted to know my bra size!

I have tried talking to her. She just gets mad and makes my life even more miserable. Mom will be 70 in a few months. I want to enjoy her and what time we have left together, but I find myself running away from her wrath! I don't want to live without her, but I don't want to live with her, either. Please tell me what to do.

— DRIVEN AWAY
IN GEORGIA

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR DRIVEN AWAY: Was your mother always this way? If not, please understand that she may be seriously ill. You have described some symptoms of the onset of dementia. Instead of shunning her, you and your siblings need to encourage her to see her doctor because she needs a thorough physical and neurological examination. Offering you to a strange man was extremely inappropriate, and her chore list may indicate that she's no longer able to do what's on it for herself.

Your mother NEEDS all of you right now. Go with her to the doctor, and be sure her physician knows what's been going on. It may take insistence from all of you to get her there. Please don't let her down. You have my sympathy and so does she.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Some old crone let us seek,
To spit on us for luck and keep unlovely things after."

— Theocritus

Luck comes in all shapes and sizes. At the Dyspeptics Club, South is the big winner — though all the other players in his four-some would swear this was simply because of the rock-crushers that he picks up. He would tell you that the cards never lie well for him. Judge for yourself, given today's deal, who had the best of the argument.

West not unnaturally led a top heart against four spades. Declarer won and cashed the top trumps, discovering the loser there, then reverted to hearts. West won his heart queen and after much thought played a club. Declarer could win and lead hearts, but when East ruffed in and played a diamond through declarer, the contract was one down. South pointed to the combination of bad breaks as conclusive proof that he was born under a black cloud. Do you agree?

South failed to understand the need to keep East off play for the duration of the hand in case the diamond honors were offside. While it is normal to play for the drop when there are four trumps out missing the queen, this is the exception that proves the rule.

Win the heart ace, cash the spade king, then play a small spade to your seven. If this loses to West, he can do you no harm. You can win his return and knock out the heart queen, establishing a winner on which to discard a diamond.

ANSWER: This sort of hand will get players worked up, some claiming that an overcall of one spade is absurd, others telling you that it is automatic. I am closer to the second camp. You bid with this hand, not because you expect to make a spade partscore or game, but to help partner in the bidding and play. When you don't overcall in spades, you don't got 'em!

IF MAY 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Keep on working diligently and you can make great progress with your ambitions in the year to come. Inconstancy is the worst problem that might bar your path. This is not the time to impulsively change jobs or drop one lover for another. If you want to earn trust and respect, you will need to remain steady as a rock especially during the next eight weeks. Early August is a great time for a romantic escapade or exotic vacation. October and early November are your best times to launch important projects or enterprises with the best chance for success.

Jeraldine
Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The sweet and superficial is supported. Buckle down and research a deal or a person. Look very intensely at someone or something. An in-depth analysis will reveal whatever you would miss on the first glance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hold out for the best and highest. This isn't the time to jump into a new relationship just because you are at loose ends. It is worthwhile to pass up a fling, as true love will show up if you wait.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep up appearances. When you are respected and well liked, you are given more responsibilities and trusted to take care of them without supervision. You should be very careful not to let anyone down.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The people you deal with believe in "law and order." Someone expects you to follow the rules and bow to promises and agreements made in the past. Intense drive for financial success is accentuated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't push your luck or your luck may push back. Someone has not yet made a decision as to whether the two of you have a valid tie in the sense that you can demand loyalty. Make no demands.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If it feels good, do it. You enjoy enhanced social popularity today because others apparently think you possess better than average qualities. Someone however is watching to see if you will betray a trust.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can frolic with fancy fantasies. A new romance might not be fated. If you find a message in a bottle today, you would be wise to throw it back. True love comes to you by following the karmic laws.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be inspired to reach for material success. Your finances must remain liquid, so you are free to roam. It is possible that that travel or further education may help you improve your finances.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A condition that uses up all your resources can be averted. Education can be the key to luck in life. Career success depends on what you learn and the credentials you accumulate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your work or career becomes crucial. You may be thrown into the realm of dealing with matters of life and death, matters to do with confidential material or matters to do with the inevitable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It is tempting to take a detour on the road of love. Remain on a straight path to receive the cosmic gift of harmony and love. A new attraction might not be as appealing when examined in the light of day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can't get anything without giving something of equal value in return. Your timing is off-center, so you might not be able to impress your boss. You move when you should stand still and vice versa.
