Candy drop sweetens history

HAILEY — Retired Air Force Col. Gail Halvorsen still drops candy from an airplane for children — bars of Hershey chocolate and Wrigley gum attached to small white parachutes.

As the candy gently floats down, it comes with a two-pronged lesson: A story more than 60 years old and principles that youngsters can carry with them for a lifetime, regardless of whether they lived in post-war Germany in the late 1940s or are growing up in Hailey.

Halvorsen, the Air Force pilot who started candy drops in 1948 during the Berlin Airlift, recreated the now-famous act Thursday in a field east of Hailey, drawing hundreds of children and parents. More than 200 parachutes of candy dropped down.

At 90, Halvorsen has a straight posture and a sharp memory of the events that have long been etched into history books. His candy drops began during the Soviet blockade of the West Berlin during the early years of the Cold War.

The airlift was an effort to provide much-needed basic food supplies to the entrapped Berliners.

Officer cleared in Fife shooting

T.F. felony suspect shot three times at end of April 5 chase

By Ben Botkin

Fife

Twin Falls Police Officer Isaiah Day acted within the law by shooting Lee R. Fife on April 5, the Ada County prosecutor announced Thursday.

Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower said he won't press any charges against Day, who fired six shots into Fife's vehicle following a high-speed police pursuit that topped speeds of 60 mph.

The chase began shortly after 1 a.m., when Twin Falls Police Officer Aaron Nay attempted to pull over Fife, who was driving with a suspended license in residential areas at speeds of 40 to 50 mph without his headlights, officials said.

TFHS senior plans to continue tackling it all

When Stephanie Filas graduates on Friday, she hopes people will remember not just her smile and fun personality, but also the things she's created to make Twin Falls High School a better place.

Filas' list of activities is about as long as she is tall. Track and cross country athlete, Bruin News features editor, student council member, National Honor Society vice president, spirit club creator — the list goes on.

The 18-year-old daughter of Louis and Eva Filas said she plans to be just as involved next year when she attends college in California.

"I'm excited to get involved in something new," she said. "I think I can slide right in perfectly."

Filas adapts easily to new environments — winning recognition from her peers at Girls State, a program dedicated to teaching young women about politics, when she was elected to the position of governor last summer. Filas said she'll return to Girls State this summer to finish her role and assist the new governor-elect.

BLM fire crews train near T.F.

By Kimberlee Kruesi
Times-News Writer

The overcast skies may not have looked like summer, but that didn't stop firefighters from preparing for it.

U.S. Bureau of Land Management firefighters from across the state met Thursday to participate in engine operator training at Devil's Corral, northeast of Twin Falls in the Snake River Canyon.

The training was part of a weeklong course designed to prep BLM firefighters for the coming fire season. Crew leaders set up seven stations based on classroom training the firefighters received earlier in the week.

"Half the training was done indoors and then half of it was done on the field," said Mitch Silvester, a Twin Falls engine captain and lead instructor of the event. "You can only teach so much in a classroom, but it's really important to have the hands-on training."

Xavier board has its two new members

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Melissa Crane and Debbi Burr were elected to Xavier Charter School's board of trustees on Wednesday. They will start their three-year terms on the Twin Falls charter school's board in July.

Elections were held on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, with Burr receiving 147 votes and Crane receiving 115. Candidate Terry Downs received 106.

The top two vote recipients among the three-candidate pool won seats that will be vacated by trustees Gerardo Munoz and Shawn Willsey.

Candidates were selected out of a pool of seven applicants that were reviewed by a selection committee comprised of two board members, one parent association member, a Xavier teacher and one of Xavier's founders, Becky Baird.

Trustee Joan Hurlock served on the selection committee and said the candidates were chosen for an interview after they had met requirements stated in Xavier's bylaws.

"They needed to be stakeholders, have knowledge of the charter and bylaws, and have a good understanding of classical education," Hurlock said, adding that the candidates were also required to read three books that outline Xavier's education ideals and philosophies.

Crane said she is excited about her new role.

"I'm grateful for the support and am really enthusiastic about the worth that lies ahead," she said. "I'm eager to move forward."

Burr could not be reached for comment on Thursday afternoon.

The training included 24 BLM firefighters from Boise, Salmon, Idaho Falls and Twin Falls.

As summer approaches, the firefighters' training runs will eventually become the real thing. Silvester said the average wildfire a BLM firefighter will face covers about 3,000 acres. Fires that size take up to two to three days to put out, he said.

"The training is important because it keeps safety standards high and it makes sure the drills are all done consistently," he said.

Stations included changing a flat tire, pumping water from a creek, defending an engine when it is surrounded by fire, and training on how to use foam equipment.

"We train so our engines are ready for protection," said George Chambers, an Idaho Falls engine captain who led the engine fire defense station. "There is a certain amount of high pressure we put on them out here because these situations are supposed to be as realistic as possible."

Keegan Kirkpatrick, a Pennsylvania resident, works for the Idaho BLM fire service during the summer. This is his third season working in Idaho.

"It helps to get familiar with the engine before fire season," he said. "It makes everyone safer and I've seen how this training can save a life."

Four residents of south-central Idaho named to tech task force

Times-News

On June 13-14, 38 people will gather at Idaho's Capitol to start hashing out how millions of dollars of classroom technology will flood into Idaho public schools.

Four south-central Idaho residents will be at the table as members of the Students Come First Technology Task Force, a provision of Senate Bill 1184, part of state public schools' chief Tom Luna's sweeping education reform package. The task force will develop plans to bring laptop computers into high school classrooms, implement online courses to fulfill new requirements under Luna's law, and provide professional development for teachers.

Among those tasked with those goals are Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, Cassia County School Board Chairwoman Debbie Critchfield, Gooding Elementary School teacher Marne Curtis and Minidoka County School Board Chairman Brian Duncan.

The task force's largest job

LOCAL REPRESENTATION

Here's some biographical information about the local Students Come First Technology Task Force members:

Debbie Critchfield, school board trustee, is chairwoman of the Cassia County School Board. She has served on the school board for the last 10 years and was a member of the Idaho School Boards Association Executive Board. She holds a political science degree from Brigham Young University.

Marne Curtis, at large, is a fourth-grade teacher at Gooding Elementary School. She recently received her Master of Educational Technology from Boise State University.

Brian Duncan, Idaho School Boards Association, is chairman of the Minidoka County School Board. He is the manager of Evans Grain and Evans Mineral and Nutrition in Heyburn. He has also served as president of the Idaho School Boards Association and holds a degree in sociology from Weber State University.

Wendy Jaquet, at large, is a Democratic state representative from Ketchum. She serves on the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee and the Idaho Education Network Program Advisory Committee. Jaquet served as House Minority Leader from 1998-2008.

will be to figure out how $28 million for the "one-to-one" computing devices will be used over the next three years, starting when $3 million will start to be spent in July on training teachers to use the computers.

"This task force will play a critical role in implementing key components of the Students Come First laws and creating the 21st Century Classroom for every Idaho student, no matter where they live," Luna, who will be the task force's chairman, said in a written statement.

Drop

Halvorsen was inspired to drop candy after seeing the excitement of youngsters when he shared two sticks of gum with them.

"When you're helping somebody that needs help, somebody that's desperately in need of help, you forget your own needs," said Halvorsen, a Utah native who lives near Tucson, Ariz. "It gives you a reward you can get in no other way than serving somebody else, especially somebody in need."

That's the lesson of the Berlin Airlift — and what made it a success, said Halvorsen, who talks about the operation at schools and air shows across the world.

Halvorsen was the first candy bomber, earning the nickname "Uncle Wiggly Wings" among the children because he would rock his aircraft's wings to and fro so youngsters would know a candy drop was approaching.

Driggs at the controls of a Navy Grumman Albatross plane on Thursday, Halvorsen, who still has a pilot's license, dropped the candy.

As the airplane approached the field, children scrambled as the candy came down. A wind quickly blew the parachutes into a nearby sagebrush-covered hillside.

That didn't deter the youngsters, who raced across the green field and up the rugged landscape in search of candy.

The lesson of helping others wasn't lost for Hunter McMurdo, 10, of Bellevue. The boy found six parachutes with candy, but shared them with other children.

Students in a Wood River High School history class helped assemble some of the parachutes. They also heard from the candy bomber himself before the event.

Brittany Parker, 17, a junior at the school, said it made history come alive.

"He was very cool," she said. "It was very experiential because no one else got to experience it, except people in Germany."

Shooting

Fife attempted to elude the officer by making multiple turns, and the officer ceased pursuit when speeds exceeded 60 mph, Bower said.

When police noticed Fife drove down a dead-end street, officers in three vehicles followed. Fife turned at the end of the cul-de-sac and drove toward officers at a high rate of speed, striking Nay's vehicle, according to the report.

He then hit Day's patrol car head-on, the report said. Day exited his vehicle and fired six shots into Fife's vehicle, believing Fife was trying to run him over.

The task force investigating the scene found "extensive front-end damage" to both Fife's and Day's vehicles, acceleration marks where Fife quickly turned around, and a damaged sidewalk that Fife had struck, the report said.

Fife, 40, survived three gunshot wounds to his upper left chest and shoulder areas. According to hospital records, doctors removed two bullet fragments from Fife, who also suffered rib fractures and other injuries. He was not under the influence of drugs or alcohol, the prosecutor's report states, but had been taking prescription drugs after recent suicide attempts.

Fife faces felony charges of eluding officers and aggravated assault, with a trial scheduled for September. Fife has claimed innocence.

Twin Falls Police Chief Brian Pike said Day returned to duty several weeks ago. In cases like this, a period of administrative leave and a psychological screening are part of the normal process before an officer is cleared to return to work, Pike said.

"These are traumatic experiences, and you forget to Filas said she's learned the art of time management through all of her activities, and while she said they were often hard to balance, the end result was worth it.

Tracking app helps T.F. police nab cell phone theft suspect

Times-News

Looking for a bag of stolen cellphones? There's an app for that.

Police arrested a Twin Falls man on suspicion of breaking into the Sprint Store at 181 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. to steal cell phones and cash worth thousands of dollars in the early morning of May 20. Twin Falls police used a tracking application on one of the phones to find 20-year-old Omar Christopher Padilla in possession of two of the stolen phones, one of which Padilla was reportedly using for personal calls.

Police say a later search of Padilla's girlfriend's house turned up a bag full of stolen cell phones.

Padilla was arrested and arraigned on Thursday for felony grand theft, burglary, malicious injury to property and misdemeanor providing false information to an officer. He is held on $11,000 total bond, and is scheduled for a June 3 pretrial conference for the three felony charges.

Police who responded to the burglary scene early on May 20 say the basement door to the store had been kicked open and a window had been broken on the building's north side.

Idaho National Laboratory not as interested in airport as promised

Times-News

Don't count on the Idaho National Laboratory to build a research center in the Wood River Valley anytime soon.

INL was mentioned this week as a candidate that would consider building a research and development center in Hailey once Friedman Memorial Airport is replaced. However, INL officials say they never expressed interest in building a campus in that area.

"We were asked if we would be willing to read material about a project in Hailey and we said yes," said Amy Lientz, INL's director of communications.

INL's supposed interest in Hailey was promoted by Rick Hill, a real estate strategist for Village Solutions Co., on Monday to a meeting of those interested in the site — mostly government officials from Hailey, Sun Valley, Blaine County and the Friedman airport board. Hill and another presenter shared one plan of how the former airport could be transformed.

Hill declined Thursday to name who he talked to from INL. However, Lientz said Hill contacted the Technical Deployment department. So far, she said, they haven't received the information

Hill promised.

"At this point we're focusing on our own facilities, so I don't believe this is something we would commit to," she said.

Yet some city officials who attended the meeting were unfazed by the discrepancy.

"The concept is not reliant on INL," said Beth Robrahn, Hailey's community development director. "The concept is to create a campus environment and attract businesses that are not currently located in the valley, like research and development companies, a university campus or institute."

Rivers run high in Northwest

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Heavy rains and melting snowpack are raising rivers in the Inland Northwest to dangerous levels.

The Spokane River at Post Falls Dam is running at a rate of more than 1 million gallons per hour, the National Weather Service said. That is dangerously fast, and people are being urged to stay out of the river this holiday weekend.

Meanwhile, the Coeur d'Alene River at Cataldo Mission in Idaho is expected to crest at 42.2 feet early Friday morning, about three-quarters of a foot below flood stage.

Another Palin insider critic: this one with Twin Falls ties

It's been a tough month for Sarah Palin. Two tell-all books have been published in May about the shortcomings of her 31-month tenure as governor of Alaska, including Blind Allegiance by ex-Palin aide Frank Bailey. The second, The Lies of Sarah Palin by Geoffrey Dunn, includes some pointed comments about Palin from former Twin Falls newscaster Rhonda McBride.

McBride, who worked as a reporter at KMVT-TV during the mid-1980s, was appointed Palin's rural adviser in 2007, dealing with Alaska Native affairs. She got the job in part because of her reporting on rural issues for Anchorage television station KTUU and before that for KYUK, a public radio and television station in Bethel, Alaska.

But after she was hired, Palin and senior members of her staff rebuffed McBride's efforts to meet with her and with Native leaders.

"It became very clear what her priorities were and what they were not," McBride told Dunn. "Alaska Native issues were not on her radar."

Dunn quotes McBride as saying she was "not sure (Palin) was up to the job" when Republican presidential nominee John McCain chose the governor as his running mate in the summer of 2008. She compared the announcement of Palin's candidacy to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in terms of personal impact on Alaskans.

McBride was asked to write a letter of support for Palin explaining why Palin's job as governor was comparable to or even "more demanding" than governing a state with a larger population. McBride reluctantly complied, but resigned two months later, calling the Palin administration "well intentioned" but declaring that "the Native community deserves more." McBride, who is not of Native ancestry, said she "never felt authentic in my role."

YOU DON'T SAY

Now 55, McBride is back at KTUU, and still reports on Native issues.

Officials: Montana floods could be worst in decades

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press

ROUNDUP, Mont. — Another Montana town Thursday was swamped with floodwaters that have washed out roads and rushed though houses across the state, and hundreds more homes downstream in the Dakotas could be hit as heavy rains and melting snow force record releases from bloated dams on the Missouri River.

Ongoing flooding in beleaguered Montana could end up being the worst in decades, officials warned.

The conditions are ripe: unusually heavy snowpack in the mountains, persistent spring rains and waterlogged ground incapable of soaking up any more moisture.

The U.S. Geological Survey said Thursday it was measuring record flows in many rivers and streams, topped by the larger Yellowstone and Musselshell rivers.

“These are major floods, and we know that people’s lives could potentially be at risk,” said John Kilpatrick, the agency’s Montana water science center director.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers predicted hundreds of homes in downstream states could flood as the water flows eastward toward North Dakota. The problem could persist into July in the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska and elsewhere.

The agency was being forced to plan for record releases of water to relieve reservoirs nearing the top of the six big dams that contain the Missouri River, a river that ultimately collects much of the water in the region.

In Bismarck, N.D., residents were being told to prepare to leave their homes if necessary as the Army Corps of Engineers readied to dump more water than predicted from the Garrison Dam. Animals at the Dakota Zoo were being evacuated Thursday to other zoos in the Dakotas, and the National Guard was beefing up its presence with hundreds more soldiers.

South Dakota also braced for floods. Officials warned that 100 to 150 homes in Pierre and another 200 in Fort Pierre would be hit by flood waters or underground water seeping through basement floors. Residents were moving furniture and other possessions to safe havens and trying to protect homes with sandbags.

“It’s unreal,” said Lahnee Martin, 22, who was piling sandbags around the Fort Pierre house she just bought a year ago. “It’s hard to believe it’s going to happen.”

In Montana, more roads and highways were being closed Thursday and three more counties declared flood emergencies as dozens of rivers and streams overflowed their banks. Interstate 90 east of Bozeman was reduced to one lane of travel, and only one route to the central Montana town of Roundup remained open.

Roundup was the latest victim of the ongoing flooding, as up to 6 feet of water coursed through the mining and agricultural town of about 1,800 and forced the evacuation of roughly three dozen homes. State officials were sending cots and bottled water to help.

“There’s never been water like this since we’ve been here,” said 88-year-old Dan McCaffree, a retired mechanic and rancher.

A dike along the river’s north bank gave way in the middle of the night, residents said, sending the river surging through the southern part of the town. The dike was built following a 1967 flood but couldn’t handle a river bursting with 13 times more water than normally seen this time of year.

Oil drums, gas cans, a telephone pole and trees were in the water floating through residential areas and swamping vehicles.

The river was expected to crest between Friday and Sunday, authorities said. Thirty to 35 homes were evacuated.

More rain was forecast through the weekend as flood emergencies were announced in Jefferson, Sanders and Musselshell counties. Musselshell County residents were urged to conserve water Thursday morning until emergency services could get an update on the situation.

Relief officials said drinking water, diapers and formula for infants will be distributed over the next two days on the Crow Reservation, where dozens of families were left homeless by earlier flooding from the Little Bighorn River. Floodwaters have retreated on the reservation, but problems persist.

Albert Richmond, a National Weather Service meteorologist, says another “fairly big storm” is expected to move through the area Sunday night into Monday, bringing 2 to 4 inches of rain.

“It’s not going to help,” he said. “A lot of the rivers and creeks will be going down Saturday and Sunday, but they can come back pretty quick.”

On Thursday, residents and officials in Carbon, Yellowstone and Big Horn counties continued to pump water from hundreds of flooded basements. The Office of Public Assistance in Yellowstone County was closed for at least two days after it flooded.

Xavier Ventura Lopez

Nov. 22, 1963–May 25, 2011

RUPERT — Xavier Ventura Lopez, our beloved brother, went home to be with the Lord on the morning of Wednesday, May 25, 2011.

He was born Nov. 22, 1963, in Rupert, Idaho, to Benito and Juanita Lopez and was a lifelong resident of the Magic Valley area.

Xavier is survived by his wife, Margie Montoya Lopez of Rupert; his son, Nicolas Lopez of Rupert; his loving brothers and sisters, Benito Jr. (Tricia) Lopez of Boise, Delilah (Joel) Loya of Pharr, Texas, Eduardo (Margie) Lopez of Rupert, Rebecca (Preston) Powell of McAllen, Texas, Homer (Pamala) of Phoenix, Ariz., Ramiro (Robin) Lopez of American Falls and Ernesto (Rosie) Lopez of McAllen, Texas. He was preceded in death by his mother, Juanita Ventura Lopez, on Dec. 28, 2007; his father, Benito Garza Lopez, on Jan. 25, 2010; and his brother, Hector, on June 28, 1983.

The funeral will be held 10 a.m. Saturday, May 28, at the Mountain View Christian Center, 317 W. 27th St. in Burley, ID, with Pastor Jim Powell officiating. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. Visitation for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, May 27, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, and one hour prior to the service Saturday at the church.

Mary Viola Underwood Saunders

Feb 12, 1923–May 25, 2011

JEROME — Mary Viola Underwood Saunders, 88, beloved mother, wife and grandmother, passed away peacefully from this life surrounded by her family Wednesday, May 25, 2011, at the home of her daughter, Reba Davis, where she had resided for the past 10 years.

Mary Viola Underwood Saunders was born Feb 12, 1923, in Sterling, Idaho. She was one of nine children born to Frank Underwood and Emma Jane Standley Underwood. She was raised on the old Underwood homestead, which is in Aberdeen, Idaho, on Underwood Loop.

She met Frank William Saunders when he came to work for her dad and they married on Sept. 28, 1940. They eloped and were married at Bishop William Kendall’s house in his kitchen in Sterling, Idaho. They hopped a freight train and headed to St Louis, Ill., where Frank was from. They traveled all across the country hitchhiking, hopping trains, in model A Fords before they settled in Jerome, Idaho. So the children were born all across the country, Illinois, Colorado, Texas and Idaho.

To this union were born six children, Frank William (Carol) Saunders III of Windermere, Fla., Fred Wayne (Pennie) Saunders of Blackfoot, Ferd “Shorty” Wyse (Judy) Saunders of Richfield, Anita Kathalene (Noel) Harris of Buhl, Reba Marie (Kevin) Davis of Jerome and F. Wyatt (Sandy) Saunders Sr. of Heyburn.

Mary Viola is survived by her brother, Jimmy (Evelyn) Underwood of Jerome; four sons, two daughters, 33 grandchildren, 73 great-grandchildren; six great-great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews and nephews and other extended family members. She is preceded in death by her husband, her parents; five brothers; three sisters; her beloved son-in-law, Noel Harris; and her beloved great-grandson, Joshua Kelly Peterson.

A special thank you to Visions Home Health and Hospice Visions for the special and exceptional care you provided for our mother during her extended illness. Special thanks to Casey, Dorinda and the artist lady for you loving kindness and care to our mother over the last five months.

Special thanks to Mary’s granddaughters, Janella and Suzette, for coming and sitting with GiGi and taking care of her while Uncle Kevin and Aunt Reba worked. And finally, a very special thanks to my husband for the sacrifice of your service to my mother for all these years. Thank you for your servant’s heart and the care you provided to her each day.

A visitation will be held Friday evening, May 27, at Farnsworth Mortuary Chapel, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, where family and friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. and again Saturday one hour prior to the service. The funeral will be conducted at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 28, also at Farnsworth Mortuary.

Chau Minh Pham

June 15, 1950–May 23, 2011

Chau Minh Pham, our beloved father and grandfather, passed away unexpectedly Monday, May 23, 2011, in Twin Falls, Idaho, at the age of 60.

Chau was born June 15, 1950, in Thanh Hoa, Vietnam, to Boa and Huyen Pham. He immigrated to Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1995 with his three children, where he was an avid gardener, a hard-working man and loving father.

He is survived by his wife, Ann Nguyen; and children, daughters, Theresa Pham of Twin Falls and Trang Pham Baker of Jerome; and son, Trung Pham of Lincoln, Neb. He had four siblings, three sisters and one brother, who all are alive living in Vietnam. He had one grandchild, Sophia Baker, daughter of Patrick and Trang Baker.

The viewing will be held from 6 p.m. to midnight Friday, May 27, at White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls. The memorial will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 28, at St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church, 212 Seventh Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

Thank you to all of those who have helped our family in this time of need; our father would be proud.

Richard ‘Rick’ Allen Levin

April 17, 1952–May 22, 2011

Richard “Rick” Allen Levin, age 59, of Twin Falls, passed away Sunday, May 22, 2011, at St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Rick was born on April 17, 1952, in Fargo, N.D., the son of Bob and Mavis Levin. He grew up in Fargo, N.D., finished his high school days in Lake Park, Minn., and graduated from Casselton, N.D. His college years included working on the Alaska Pipeline and then graduating from NDSU in Fargo, N.D. After that, an opportunity arose that brought Rick to Twin Falls, Idaho. He loved his new home in the West.

He was a lifelong member of the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, a very successful cowboy action shooter and an accomplished card shark. As a registered nurse in the emergency department, his medical career took him through many changes and advances in the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center system. It culminated in his being one of the first new patients served by the new St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center.

Surviving Rick is his mother, Mavis Levin of Fargo, N.D.; brother, Mike Levin of Lake Park, Minn.; and his lifelong partner, Joyce Chaffey of Twin Falls.

Also surviving are his nieces and nephews and multitudes of friends and co-workers. He was preceded in death by his grandparents; four uncles; and his father, Bob Levin.

A memorial service for Rick will be held at a later date. Cremation and private inurnment are under the direction of the Parke’s Magic Valley Funeral Home and Crematory of Twin Falls.

The family requests that contributions in Rick’s memory be given to the American Cancer Society of Twin Falls. Those wishing to share condolences may do so at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

Leonora Carrington, leading Surrealist, dies at 94

Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY — She painted eerie rituals with cloaked figures in forests, dancing deer with trees growing from their backs, and breathing buildings that shot planets and stars.

Leonora Carrington, a leading figure of the Surrealist movement and perhaps the last great living Mexican artist, died Wednesday in Mexico City, the government said. She was 94.

Carrington painted, drew, made sculptures, and wrote fiction and plays over a career that spanned much of the 20th century and featured affairs and friendships with some of the greatest artists of her time. Surrealist painter Max Ernst was an early lover in Paris. Remedios Varo was a close friend and fellow female painter in the vibrant artist community of Mexico City in the 1940s and 1950s.

Surrealist Andre Breton and filmmaker Luis Bunuel were also among her acquaintances and contemporaries, and she sometimes brushed up against the tumultuous lives of artists Diego Rivera and Frida Kahlo.

Carrington’s style became recognizable worldwide, a combination of anthropomorphic whimsy and an undercurrent of shadowy darkness. Yet she often rejected the label “Surrealist,” insisting instead that she painted what she observed in the magical space between the corporeal world and the subconscious.

AROUND THE WEST

WASHINGTON STATE Company blames flows for fish kill below Grand Coulee

SPOKANE — Huge releases of water from dams on the bloated Columbia River are causing a massive fish kill at a fish farm south of Grand Coulee Dam.

The operators of Pacific Aquaculture Inc. said they are losing 100,000 fish a day because the water releases are oversaturating the river with gases that are toxic to the fish. They have sent a letter to the Northwest congressional delegation asking for an immediate stop.

“The Columbia River is running at a fevered peak right now,” said Charles Hudson, head of governmental affairs for the commission. “The fact is that Mother Nature is running the river right now, not federal agencies, not judges and certainly not Congress.”

Steve Barton, the Army Corps of Engineers chief of reservoir control for the Columbia Basin, said the corps is aware of the complaint but the river is being managed to prevent flooding.

WYOMING Reservoirs lowered for Snake runoff

JACKSON — Jackson Lake has been drawn down to less than half of its capacity and Palisades Reservoir just downstream in Idaho is down to 22 percent, but not because of lack of water.

Just the opposite: The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation has lowered the big reservoirs on the Snake River to make room for heavy mountain runoff.

Mike Beus, water operations manager for the bureau, says runoff in the Snake River this year will compare to the record years of 1996 and 1997. The Jackson Hole News & Guide says water content of snow in the mountains above the Snake River is well over twice the normal amount.

COLORADO Groups seek protection for boreal toads

DENVER — Three conservation groups are petitioning the federal government to list boreal toads in the southern Rocky Mountains, Utah, northeastern Nevada and southern Idaho as threatened or endangered.

Colorado and New Mexico consider boreal toads endangered, and it is a protected species in Wyoming. But the Center for Biological Diversity, Center for Native Ecosystems and Biodiversity Conservation Alliance said Wednesday there’s still not enough protection of the toads’ habitat.

Boreal toads have been hurt by a parasitic fungus, but the groups say timber management, livestock grazing, pesticides, water management, recreation, development and road building also have hurt.

IDAHO Horse racing poised for return to Les Bois

MERIDIAN — Horse racing is poised to return to the Boise market this summer. Ada County officials set dates on Wednesday for live races at the track that has been dormant since 2008.

Les Bois Park is scheduled to have live racing every Wednesday and Saturday in July and the first two weeks of August. Races are also planned for July 4 and August 12.

Suicide kits rekindle debate on assisted suicide

By Tami Abdollah
Associated Press

SALEM, Ore. — The door to the room was locked, and there was no response as Jake Klonoski knocked, looking for his younger brother.

He picked the lock and made a grim discovery: his dead brother lying on the bed, his head covered in a plastic bag connected by a tube to a helium tank. He had gassed himself to death using a suicide kit he learned about online and ordered through the mail from a woman in California.

“Somewhere in her cash register is a check for $60 from my brother for his life,” Jake Klonoski, 30, said of the suicide kit vendor.

The death of 29-year-old Nick Klonoski has prompted Oregon lawmakers to consider outlawing the sale of suicide kits as they respond to a disturbing twist on the assisted suicide debate in the state. Law enforcement officials are also looking into the 91-year-old woman who sold the “helium hood” that killed Klonoski, with agents raiding her California home on Wednesday.

The Oregon legislation, prompted by a March story in The Register-Guard of Eugene about Klonoski’s death, would make it a felony to sell or transfer “any substance or objects to another person knowing” that person plans to use it to kill themselves. The proposal unanimously passed the Senate earlier this month and the House is looking at tightening the bill’s language to make it easier to prosecute.

Klonoski suffered from chronic fatigue syndrome for years and was often depressed, his brother said.

Activists have long argued about a person’s right to take their life, and what exactly it means to assist them. In the late 1990s, Michigan doctor Jack Kevorkian brought the debate into American homes by airing his assist of a suicide on “60 Minutes.” Now that debate, and its ethical implications, is being rekindled by the increasing use of helium hood kits.

“Until recently nobody would have thought, ‘Gosh we have to define the word assisting,’ because it was just kind of, like, duh,” said Rita Marker, executive director of Patients Rights

Council. “But now someone says, what does assisting really mean?”

In 1994, Oregon became the first state to enact a law that lets terminally ill people end their lives with a physician’s assistance, with voters approving the policy twice. Physician-assisted suicide is also legal in Washington and Montana. Oregon law mandates multiple doctor consultations and looks at possible psychological evaluation before such a suicide can happen. The state says 65 Oregonians took their lives under the law in 2010.

But the laws are often vague and provide little detail as to what “assist” or “aid” means.

While the Oregon physician-assisted suicide law requires that people abide by certain rules and consult with a doctor, the ready-made kits can be ordered by anyone, with no checks to their background, through the mail or phone.

BLM asked to keep domestic horses from mustangs

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Concerned about the threat of a catastrophic outbreak of a herpes virus among wild horse herds in the West, national animal advocates on Thursday called on the federal government to keep potentially infected domestic horses away from mustangs and burros on public lands.

The Humane Society of the United States urged the Bureau of Land Management to “discourage and, if possible and appropriate, prohibit” owners of private horses from bringing animals at risk of Equine Herpes Virus-1 onto federal lands where they could have contact with wild horses.

“The potential for a catastrophic outbreak of EHV-1 among wild horse herds needs to be addressed by the BLM on an emergency basis,” Holly Hazard, the society’s chief innovations officer, wrote in a letter to BLM Director Bob Abbey.

The federal agency should launch a public education campaign immediately about the highly contagious disease, which has infected dozens of horses and killed at least nine, as officials plan horse-related activities for the upcoming holiday weekend, she said.

EHV-1 poses no risk to humans, but can be fatal to horses. It can be airborne and transmitted by touch or by sharing feed, brushes, bits and other equipment.

The virus “is a highly transmittable disease, and the symptoms don’t show up immediately,” Hazard told The Associated Press.

“You can have a horse that may have been exposed and you are not even aware they are carrying the virus. The most vigilant thing for everybody to do is enjoy their horses on their own property until the health officials have it sorted all out,” she said.

Traced back to a cutting horse competition earlier this month in Ogden, Utah, the virus has been exposed to more than 1,000 animals through direct or indirect contact with infected horses. Symptoms include fever, decreased coordination, nasal discharge, loss of tail tone, hind limb weakness and inability to rise.

So far, no animals managed by the BLM are known to have been infected, BLM spokesman Tom Gorey said Thursday. He said the agency is considering limiting horse movement on a case-by-case basis and may cancel some scheduled adoption events.

The federal agency “has been working with state and federal animal health officials to help protect the health and well-being of wild horses and burros on the range, along with those in BLM holding facilities,” Gorey said.

Horse owners should contact local BLM offices to see if there are any restrictions before bringing domestic horses onto federally managed public lands.

Tom Collins, a Clark County commissioner who owns horses and runs a cattle ranch outside of Las Vegas, said he felt the federal agency generally was taking the proper precautions but that prohibiting domestic horses on public lands in some areas was going too far.

“To tell people not to ride in areas that are public lands because of this horse virus, in my opinion, is a probably a little over cautious,” Collins told AP. “It’s probably more of a reaction to a request by the horse lovers than common sense. But at the same time, I can see their point, because it is airborne!”

Closure of work center reflects new corrections reality

Across the political spectrum in Idaho, there’s probably no more admired state agency director that the Department of Correction’s Brent Reinke. That’s because nobody in state government squeezes more out of a taxpayer dollar than Reinke, a former Twin Falls County commissioner. IDOC’s state general fund budget has been cut by 11 percent since 2009, but through some remarkably innovative cost-cutting — and with cooperation from the court system — Reinke has managed to keep the state’s prison from bursting at the seams.

Our view:
The recession — and some prudent changes by judges — are transforming Idaho’s criminal justice system.

So last week’s announcement that IDOC will close its 19-year-old Twin Falls Work Center wasn’t unexpected. And while we hate to see its 13 jobs go elsewhere after Aug. 1, this will be a small step toward a more responsive criminal justice system. Reinke says IDOC will ship the 78 prisoners at the Twin Falls center to other IDOC facilities in the state, saving about $900,000 in the process.

He hopes to leverage those savings into fewer furloughs for his employees — a major issue for a public agency charged with protecting the public from felons. IDOC doesn’t have as much of a need for the work center because judges are using other options for low-risk offenders, such as making the parole system more efficient and using retained-jurisdiction sentencing programs. The latter allows judges to place some offenders into drug and alcohol treatment programs instead of putting them in prison. Those changes pull directly from the Twin Falls work center candidate pool, Reinke said. Although it’s gone largely unnoticed because of other consequences of the recession and spending cuts, Reinke and the Idaho Judiciary have wrought a quiet revolution in the state’s criminal justice system. Seven years ago, IDOC had 9,555 offenders under supervision and 6,312 — or 63 percent — were behind bars. Now the agency supervises 14,000 offenders and 7,490 — 54 percent — are incarcerated. If you wonder how much difference that makes, consider this: The cost to the taxpayers of keeping an inmate locked up in Idaho is $53.22 a day. The cost of probation is $4 a day.

The wobbly greenback takes another hit

“Money talks,” the old saying goes. The U.S. dollar has been the world’s reserve currency for decades.

Peter Goldmark

That means the world has made its trades in dollars, settled accounts in dollars, and that the dollar has been “the safe haven” investors looked to when the going got tough. That is changing. And if we don’t get our financial affairs in order, starting with the deficit, movement away from the dollar will continue. The Chinese are already telling the world that a global financial system dominated by the Atlantic nations is no longer either fair or workable. And the financial collapse of 2008 — driven by irresponsible American financial institutions peddling phony mortgages, debt run wild and Bush-era abdication from policing the markets — rattled faith in America around the world. Suddenly our financial system looked not so safe and not so wise. Today the United States has a growing budget deficit and a huge trade deficit, the latter largely because we’re hemorrhaging roughly $400 billion a year for imported oil. If we were a patient, our doctor would tell us: “You’re overweight, your blood pressure is too high — and your addiction is going to kill you one of these days.” If the dollar began to be replaced as the world’s reserve currency, it would mean a drop in U.S. standard of living — because when the dollar gets weaker, you and I have to pay more here at home for everything imported from overseas. That’s all bad enough. But meanwhile, the countries with piles of foreign reserves, such as China and the oil emirates, created sovereign wealth funds to deal with the ups and downs in their own revenues from oil or export surpluses, and to avoid having those funds sit idly in low-interest U.S. Treasury bonds. These sovereign wealth funds, which make long-term investments, now control trillions of dollars of capital and are often used by the nations that control them to advance national policy. When a Saudi sovereign fund buys farmland in “... a country can’t be as fat, as out of shape, and as out of balance fiscally as ours and still expect to play on the team that makes history, rather than the teams that have to live with the history others have made.”

an undeveloped country, that’s not trade; that’s trying to lock up a food supply for themselves in the future. Growth and technological progress have always required long-term investors. Who will the next generation of long-term investors be? Who will shape the systems we use for transportation, for generating and distributing electricity, for conserving and purifying water? And who will do this in ways that allow the human adventure on this planet to thrive, rather than choke itself to death in a purgatory of pollution, contaminated and shrinking water supplies, rising sea levels, and high temperatures that lower food production? Historically, the long-term investors have usually been governments, or government-backed. It was government-backed credit that built a lot of the framework — our canals, railroads, interstate roads and airports — that allowed the United States to become the world’s largest economic power. But in the United States, our present politics make it hard to talk about intelligent, long-term, government-sponsored investment at the national level. So the sovereign wealth funds, by default, take center stage as important, trend-creating long-term investors. And the sovereign wealth funds respond to the wishes of other sovereigns — not the United States. It’s a tough world out there, and Americans are used to calling a lot of the shots. But a country can’t be as fat, as out of shape, and as out of balance fiscally as ours and still expect to play on the team that makes history, rather than the teams that have to live with the history others have made. Peter Goldmark, a former publisher of the International Herald Tribune, headed the climate program at the Environmental Defense Fund. He wrote this for Newsday.

New weapons needed for old battle: Superbugs threaten troops

Buried under the dirt in Iraq and Afghanistan, amid the rubble and improvised explosive devices, lurks an invisible enemy. It has struck hundreds of U.S. soldiers in the last decade. There are some weapons in our arsenal that we can use to fight this threat, yet in a growing number of instances we are completely unarmed. The foe in question is a microscopic germ so commonly associated with wounded soldiers that it is nicknamed “Iraqibacter.” Its real name is Acinetobacter baumannii. The story of this bug and the soldiers it has harmed illustrates what the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the World Health Organization have identified as one of the greatest public health threats: antibiotic resistance. The emergence of nearly untreatable bacteria threatens everyone. The most notorious superbug is MRSA — methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus. It kills 19,000 Americans each year and is responsible for more than 360,000 hospitalizations. Other multidrug-resistant bacteria claim the lives of tens of thousands of people in this country alone. Unfortunately, soldiers face unique threats of multidrug-resistant infection. The CDC reported the first 102 cases of Acinetobacter infection among U.S. military servicemen and women between 2002 and 2004 alone. More have occurred since; many have been marked by “widespread resistance to antimicrobial agents.” Worse still, Acinetobacter is not the only, nor even the most deadly, superbug that afflicts our troops. These germs can infect the lungs, bloodstream, bones, heart and other vital organs and systems. Bacteria inevitably develop resistance to antibiotics, but the process can be slowed by prescribing these drugs only when they are absolutely needed and taking them exactly as prescribed. Fortunately, health-care practitioners and hospital administrators are making great strides both in controlling the spread of superbugs and in preserving the effectiveness of antibiotics. Yet as effective as these measures have been, bacteria will always evolve and doctors will always need novel antibiotics. Lately, however, these new drugs have been few and far between. In the 40 years after the discovery of penicillin, drug makers brought an astonishing 13 classes of antibiotics to market — not just slight variations on a chemical theme but distinct categories that kill microbes in their own unique way. In the last 40 years, however, drug makers have added a paltry three new antibiotic classes. Why are there so few new antibiotics? In short, their development costs are too high and their earning potential is too low. Ultimately, it costs hundreds of millions of dollars to bring a new drug to market, whether that drug is a big-earning cholesterol drug that millions of people will take every day for years, or something like an antibiotic that gets prescribed for only a few days at a time. Antibiotics are not the first drugs to fall through the cracks of the free market. Congress passed the Orphan Drug Act to incentivize drug makers to develop a range of life-saving medicines to treat conditions from which fewer than 200,000 people suffered. Since this law was enacted in 1983, the Food and Drug Administration has approved more than 350 orphan drugs to treat various forms of cancer, leukemia and AIDS-related diseases, among many other conditions, saving many thousands of lives in the process. Congress can take similar steps to spur the development of new antibiotics. The FDA also can give drug makers greater confidence to invest in these drugs by streamlining and clarifying the antibiotics approval process. Our ability to treat wounded soldiers in the field of battle and rapidly evacuate them to medical facilities has dramatically improved over the past decade. More of our troops are surviving injury and making it home. That comes with a duty: We must now care for an increasing number of soldiers with a variety of difficult-to-treat conditions. Part of this responsibility entails ensuring we have the best drugs to treat them. This Memorial Day, as we reflect on the sacrifices so many Americans have made in defense of our freedom, let us take a moment to consider the steps we can take, collectively and proactively, to ensure our antibiotic armamentarium is fully stocked to protect our servicemen and women from deadly infection. ## THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Joyce M. Johnson

America the stony-hearted

When the political history of the last 30 years is written, scholars will no doubt describe a rightward revolution that jolted this country out of its embrace of New Deal, big-government progressivism and into a love affair with small-government conservatism. But this change, significant as it is, has been undergirded by a less apparent but no less monumental revolution that has transformed the nation's values, ideals and aspirations. Over those same 30 years, we have become a different country morally from what we were.

The United States has always had a complex national moral system. On the one hand, there is the Puritan-inflected America of rugged individualism, hard work, self-reliance and personal responsibility in which you reap what you sow, God helps those who help themselves, and our highest obligation is to live righteously. These precepts run from Cotton Mather to Ralph Waldo Emerson to Billy Graham.

On the other hand, there is also an America of community, common cause, charity and collective responsibility. In this America, salvation comes from good works, compassion is among the greatest of virtues, and our highest obligation is to help others. These precepts run from Walt Whitman to the late 19th century Social Gospel movement to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Neil Gabler

These two moralities managed to coexist — often within the same person — because they were not seen as mutually exclusive, especially in the 20th century. Nor was either the province of one political party or the other. Conservatives could subscribe to the ideals of generosity and compassion, just as liberals could subscribe to hard work and individual responsibility. To paraphrase Thomas Jefferson's famous declaration in his first inaugural address after the contentious 1800 election that "we are all Republicans, we are all Federalists," one could say that Americans in general were all believers in the Protestant ethic, all believers in the Social Gospel.

Or at least that is the way it was.

But over the last 30 years or so, something has happened to reshape the country's moral geography. Everyone knows about the rise of Moral Majority-style Christian evangelicals as a potent force in right-wing politics. It injected a certain aggressive moralism into our political discourse and led to campaigns against abortion rights, homosexual rights, sexual freedom and other issues perceived as and then framed as moral matters. As a result, our politics became "moralized"; they were transformed into a contest of one set of values pitted against another.

This was hardly the first time politics was overtaken by morality. One has only to think of abolition and Prohibition. The difference this time was that as politics were being moralized and polarized, our morals were also being politicized and polarized. The two moral systems that had so long coexisted suddenly became mutually exclusive, oppositional and finally inseparable from the two regnant political ideologies.

One can see this division in something as simple as the denigration of the term "liberal," the "L" word, with its attendant idea that to be compassionate, caring and tolerant — virtues that had been celebrated, if only via lip service, by most Americans — is really to be mush-minded, weak and, more concretely, willing to give taxpayer largesse to the undeserving and lazy.

It is easy to miss how significant a change this is. It transforms compassion, a bulwark in practically any moral system, into a negative force that undermines the good of individual initiative. Indeed, conservative ideologue Marvin Olasky wrote a book to this effect, pungently titled The Tragedy of American Compassion, in which he called for the privatization of all charitable efforts. It rapidly became a conservative touchstone.

None of this is to say that conservatives don't sometimes act in ways that demonstrate compassion, though that compassion is more likely to be exercised for victims of natural disasters than for victims of social disasters, or for victims of overzealous regulation than of the callous market. Just ask those who have lost their health insurance and want national healthcare, or those who want to save the environment — none of whom receive succor from the right.

But it is to say that this moral reconfiguration has not only changed our politics and our perception of morality; it has changed us. If compassion is seen as softness, tolerance as a kind of promiscuity, community as a leech on individuals and fairness as another word for scheming, we are a harder nation than we used to be, and arguably a less moral one as well. In undergoing a revolution for the nation's soul, we may have found ourselves losing it.

Edwards meets leading figure in criminal probe

By Nedra Pickler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former presidential candidate John Edwards met Thursday with a leading figure in the investigation into funds used to cover up his extramarital affair, certain to attract the attention of the Justice Department as it prepares possible criminal charges against him.

William Taylor, an attorney for heiress Rachel "Bunny" Mellon, confirmed they had lunch at her Upperville, Va., home but said they did not discuss the case.

"It was entirely personal and social," Taylor said in a telephone interview. "There was no discussion of anything related to his situation."

Mellon is the 100-year-old widow of banking heir Paul Mellon and was a top donor to Edwards' presidential campaign. She also reportedly gave hundreds of thousands of dollars used to keep Edwards mistress Reille Hunter in hiding while he pursued the White House — funds are at the center of the criminal investigation.

The meeting was first reported Thursday by ABC News. Taylor, a prominent Washington attorney who also is representing former International Monetary Fund leader Dominique Strauss-Kahn against rape charges, said he was at the meeting and Edwards did not ask Mellon for any financial help for his case.

The meeting comes within days of the Justice Department's plans to bring criminal charges against Edwards, a former Democratic senator from North Carolina. Prosecutors have spent two years investigating whether money from political backers, including Mellon, used to cover up his affair and out-of-wedlock daughter should have been reported as campaign contributions since they arguably aided his presidential bid.

Justice Department officials would not comment on what charges might be brought. Both sides refused to say whether a plea agreement was possible.

Edwards attorney Gregory Craig said in a statement Wednesday that prosecutors have never found that campaign funds were misused and the government's theory in the case is without precedent and "wrong on the facts and wrong on the law."

The investigation has centered largely on allegations leveled by former Edwards campaign aide Andrew Young, who as the scandal began to unfold in 2007 publicly claimed to be the baby's father to protect his boss' career.

Young has said that two wealthy Edwards supporters supplied the money and the private jet that Young used to hide Hunter from the news media, first in North Carolina, then in Colorado, and finally at a home in California.

Young has said that Edwards agreed in 2007 to solicit money directly from Mellon.

Don't know much about much at all

According to the latest survey of Things Americans Are Ignorant About, high school and middle school students don't know much about civics.

The report, released two weeks ago, comes on the heels of an April poll by CNN and the Opinion Research Corp. that disclosed that most Americans are ignorant about the federal budget (median sample answer to the question of what percentage of the budget is spent on the Corporation for Public Broadcasting: 5 percent, or $175 billion a year. Correct answer: about $,000 of the budget, or $441 million).

Last year the Pew Research Center for Just About Everything reported that most Americans are ignorant about religion. (Sample result: Fewer than half the Protestants surveyed knew that Martin Luther had inspired the Reformation.) Previous studies have shown Americans to be equally ignorant about history, geography, civil rights and current affairs.

Nobody should be surprised at this anymore, except maybe ignorant people themselves. In his "Jay Walking" segment on The Tonight Show, Jay Leno has been dining out on this phenomenon for decades, going up to people on the streets to ask questions like:

Jay: Where do they speak Gaelic?

Woman: San Francisco?

Jay: Who was the first

Kevin Horrigan

man on the moon?

Woman: Armstrong.

Jay: First name?

Woman: Louie.

The question is, unless Jay Leno is standing in front of you with a microphone, does it make any difference how ignorant you are?

Former Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor argues that it does. "We have a crisis on our hands when it comes to civics education," she said in response to results from the quadrennial National Assessment of Educational Progress tests showing that middle- and high-school students had lost ground in civics knowledge since 2006.

"I believe that we are at a critical point in our nation's history," O'Connor said. "We face difficult challenges at home and abroad. Meanwhile, divisive rhetoric and a culture of sound bites threaten to drown out rational dialogue and debate. We cannot afford to continue to neglect the preparation of future generations for active and informed citizenship."

Since leaving the big bench in 2006, O'Connor has stayed extraordinarily engaged. She founded a group called iCivics (icivics.org) that offers civics education through Web-based games. You, too, can argue Brown v. Board of Education or become president for a day.

Fifteen years ago, Michael X. Delli Carpini, who now is dean of the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania, and Scott Keeter, now director of survey research for the aforementioned Pew Research Center for Just About Everything, argued that Americans weren't any less informed than they'd always been.

In a book called What Americans Know About Politics and Why It Matters, they looked at survey questions going back to 1940. In 1945, only 45 percent knew that the government regulated radio. In 1952, only 27 percent could name two branches of government. In 1970, only 24 percent could identify the secretary of state. In 1988, only 47 percent could locate England on a map.

Through the years, they concluded, Americans gave the right answers to such questions about 40 percent of the time. Most of the clueless weren't stupid, but merely ignorant. They weren't motivated to learn or lacked access to information or education.

But here we are today, with more access to more information than at any point in history, with iPhones in our pockets with 932,000 times more memory than the 70-pound, 36K Apollo Guidance Computer that Louie

Armstrong used to land on the moon. And we're still getting things right about 40 percent of time.

You can blame it on the schools. That's always handy. On these "How much do you know about?" surveys, older people tend to get answers correct more often than younger people. Some of that may be schools, but most of it is because the longer you live, the more you're invested in society and the more you pay attention. Who cares about the news when he's 17 years old, particularly if it takes more than a 140-character tweet to explain?

We're more likely to know about gossip and show business and sports than we are civics and history, but history suggests this is nothing new, either. Bread and circuses were not invented yesterday, but today there is more bread being spent to manipulate opinion and far more circuses to distract.

Granted, this is a silly place to make this argument. If you're reading a newspaper or a newspaper website, you're not the problem, particularly if you're all the way down here at the bottom of an opinion column. You're part of what the pollsters call the "information elite."

Voting behavior experts say everybody else takes their cues from you. This is a heavy responsibility. Wear it well.

Palin to embark on East Coast bus tour

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Sarah Palin will embark this weekend on a campaign-style bus tour along the East Coast, sending a jolt through the now-sleepy Republican presidential contest and thrusting a telegenic but divisive politician back into the nation's spotlight.

Palin's tour announcement is the strongest signal yet that she is considering a presidential bid, despite her failure to take traditional steps such as organizing a campaign team in early primary states. The former Alaska governor's approval ratings have fallen across the board — including among Republicans — in recent months. But many conservatives adore her, and she has enough name recognition and charisma to shake up a GOP contest that at this point seems to be focusing on three male former governors.

Beginning Sunday, Palin

plans to meet with veterans and visit historic sites that her political action committee calls key to the country's formation, survival and growth. The tour follows reports that Palin has bought a house in Arizona and the disclosure that she's authorized a feature-length film about her career, which could serve as a campaign centerpiece. She recently said she has "that fire in the belly" for a presidential bid.

Palin said on the website for Sarah-PAC that the nation is at a "critical turning point," and that her bus tour will serve as a reminder of "who we are and what Americans stand for."

Many Republican Party insiders say that Palin, the 2008 vice presidential nominee, has engaged in too many political spats and soap-opera dramas to win the nomination and challenge President Barack Obama.

Senate votes to extend spying bill

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Over fervent but scattered objections, the Senate voted by a wide margin Thursday to extend the government's Patriot Act powers to search records and conduct roving wiretaps in pursuit of terrorists, acting just a month after intelligence and military forces hunted down Osama bin Laden.

Facing a midnight deadline when three terror-fighting tools would expire, the 72-23 Senate vote came after three days of stubborn resistance from a single senator, Republican freshman Rand Paul of Kentucky, who saw the terrorist-hunting powers as an abuse of privacy rights. With the Senate vote, the bill was whisked to the House for an evening vote and transmission to President Barack Obama for his signature.

The measure would add four years to the legal life of roving wiretaps — those authorized for a person rather than a communications line or device — of court-ordered searches of business records and of surveillance of non-American "lone wolf" suspects without confirmed ties to terrorist groups.

The White House gave assurances that the provisions would not expire even though Obama is now in Europe.

"Failure to sign this legislation poses a significant risk to U.S. national security," White House spokesman Nick Shapiro said.

"As long as Congress approves the extension, the president will direct the use of the autopen to sign it," Shapiro said in reference to an automatic signature machine used at the White House.

Obama will be woken up at 5:45 a.m. so he can review and approve the bill and then authorize his signature.

A short-term expiration would not interrupt ongoing operations but would bar the government from seeking warrants for new investigations.

The roving wiretaps and access to business records are small parts of the USA Patriot Act enacted after the Sept. 11 attacks in 2001. But unlike most of the act, which is permanent law, those provisions must be periodically renewed because of concerns that they could be used to violate privacy rights. The same applies to the "lone wolf" provision, which was part of a 2004 intelligence act.

Renewal this time was pushed up against the midnight deadline by Paul, who argued that in the rush to meet the terrorist threat in 2001 Congress enacted a Patriot Act that tramples on individual liberties. He had some backing from liberal Democrats and civil liberties groups who have long contended the law gives the government authority to spy on innocent citizens.

Sen. Mark Udall, D-Colo., said the provision on collecting business records can expose law-abiding citizens to government scrutiny. "If we cannot limit investigations to terrorism or other nefarious activities, where do they end?" he asked.

"The Patriot Act has been used improperly again and again by law enforcement to invade Americans' privacy and violate their constitutional rights," said Laura W. Murphy, director of the ACLU Washington legislative office.

But intelligence officials have denied improper use of surveillance tools, and this week both FBI Director Robert Mueller and Director of National Intelligence James Clapper sent letters to congressional leaders warning of serious national security consequences if the provisions were allowed to lapse.

The Obama administration says that without the three authorities the FBI might not be able to obtain information on terrorist plotting inside the U.S. and that a terrorist who communicates using different cell phones and email accounts could escape timely surveillance.

Cool weather may dampen holiday travel

Motorists see lower gasoline prices

By Blair Koch
Times-News writer

Just as fuel prices begin to slip, giving hope for increased Memorial Day travel and spending, the weather isn't cooperating. It may be cool and damp weather, not fuel prices, that keep people home over the holiday weekend.

According to AAA Idaho the national average price for fuel is down 17 cents a gallon in the last two weeks, now at $3.81.

Idaho's average price is down two cents a gallon, sitting at $3.75 on Thursday.

AAA's projection that 34.9 million people will travel, with nearly 31 million doing so by car, was based on an analysis conducted earlier this month. Declining prices at the pump may give holiday and summer travel an unexpected boost.

The weekend's forecast, according to the Weather Channel's website, www.weather.com, indicates today's high temperature will be 59 degrees with a low of 39 degrees and chances of rain showers

The area will finally see temperatures peaking over 60 degrees on Monday but partly cloudy skies are expected with a slight chance of rain.

"Cooler temperatures may keep some Idahoans home this weekend, especially those who had hoped to pitch a tent or pull a camper to their favorite outdoor getaway," said AAA Idaho spokesman Dave Carlson in a prepared statement. # Agriculture in the crosshairs

Farm subsidies face most serious threat yet

By Dave Helling
McClatchy Newspapers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Liberals and conservatives aiming to close trillion-dollar federal budget gaps may soon reach a rare consensus on a common target for spending cuts: The American farmer.

"Agriculture is clearly in the crosshairs for significant reductions," said Sen. Jerry Moran, a Kansas Republican and a longtime champion of farm interests in Washington.

The nation's creaking, decades-old system of farm subsidies, crop insurance, conservation programs and disaster relief is controversial even in good budget times.

But with federal deficits and debt at unheard-of levels, the $10 billion to $25 billion spent each year on farm supports is attracting new scrutiny from the right and the left.

And their budget-cutting scythes are out.

"Most people who do not directly benefit from farm subsidies seem to recognize that these programs have been an absolute failure and make virtually no economic sense," said Brian Riedl, an economist with the Heritage Foundation, a

Grain group exec urges equity in cuts

Travis Jones, executive director of the Idaho Grain Producers told the Times-News that the organization supports cutting the federal deficit.

"Wheat and barley growers agree that we all need to share in alleviating the federal deficit," Jones said. "But what we would like to see is that every entity receiving federal dollars be cut equitably."

Jones said recent federal cuts to agriculture spending have been disproportionate to other agencies and interests.

"We've known for quite a while that difficult decisions are going to have to be made," Jones said. "We want to be proactive and start having those conversations now."

According to Dick Rush, executive director of the Idaho Farm Service Agency, said Idaho producers received $484,000,000 in payments and loans from the federal government. Seventy-three percent of that spending was in the form of low-interest loans.

Foreclosure properties make up chunk of home sales

Associated Press

Sales of homes in some stage of foreclosure declined in the first three months of the year, but they still accounted for 28 percent of all home sales — a share nearly six times higher than what it would be in a healthy housing market.

Several states had foreclosure sales that accounted for at least one quarter of all home sales in the first quarter: Idaho, Florida, Michigan, Oregon, Virginia, Colorado, Illinois, Georgia and Ohio.

"It's an astronomically high number,"

— said Rick Sharga, senior vice president at RealtyTrac

Foreclosure sales, which include homes purchased after they received a notice of default or were repossessed by lenders, hit the highest share of overall sales in a year during the first quarter, foreclosure listing firm RealtyTrac Inc. said Thursday.

"It's an astronomically high number," said Rick Sharga, a senior vice president at RealtyTrac. "In a normal market, you're looking at the percentage of homes sold in foreclosure to be below 5 percent."

The pace at which homes are entering the foreclosure process has slowed in recent months amid bank and court delays. But distressed properties remain a fixture of a housing market still searching for a sustained recovery. The properties, often in need of repair, typically sell at a discount, weakening prices for other types of homes.

As a slice of all home purchases, foreclosure sales peaked two years ago at 37.4 percent. In the first quarter, they rose from

YOUR MONEY

Scrutinize your cable and satellite bills for savings

Review. Your. Bill.

You've heard it before but scanning the monthly statement for your cable and satellite television service is really key to finding where you're spending money on channels you don't need or fees you're not aware about. Years ago, customers didn't have much choice in paying only for channels they watch. Not a sports fan? ESPN was probably included in your package anyway. But not anymore. Although purchasing channels a la carte isn't yet a choice, satellite and cable companies are becoming increasingly aware they need to tailor entertainment wants with what customers are willing to pay for. It doesn't hurt to shop around to find the best deal.

Another way to save is by keeping track of how often your household watches premium movie channels. The monthly cost for these channels can balloon the bill, so if the cost for such channels outweighs their use, drop them. You can use the savings in many ways: from renting movies on an as-wanted basis to paying off high-interest debt.

Justices uphold immigration law aimed at employers

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents capture undocumented immigrants Wednesday near Phoenix.

By David G. Savage
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Thursday gave Arizona and other states more authority to take action against illegal immigrants and the companies that hire them, ruling that employers who knowingly hire illegal workers can lose their license to do business.

The 5-3 decision upholds the Legal Arizona Workers Act of 2007 and its so-called business death penalty for employers who are caught repeatedly hiring illegal immigrants. The state law also requires employers to check the federal E-Verify system before hiring new workers, a provision that was also upheld Thursday.

The court's decision did not deal with the more controversial Arizona law passed last year that gave police more authority to stop and question those who are suspected of being in the state illegally. But the ruling is likely to encourage the state and its supporters because the court majority said states remained free to take action involving immigrants.

War-weary lawmakers send Obama a message

U.S. House passes $690B defense bill

By Walter Pincus
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House passed overwhelmingly Thursday a $690 billion defense authorization bill for fiscal year 2012 that fully funds operations in Afghanistan and Iraq and limits President Barack Obama’s authority to deal with Guantanamo detainees and to reduce the number of nuclear weapons.

The White House has warned that those latter provisions could prompt a veto if they were included in the final version of the bill. That prospect remains unclear since the Senate version of the measure has yet to be put together by its Armed Services Committee.

The House measure is $1.1 billion above what the Obama administration originally requested for defense spending for next year. All of that increase is going toward overseas operations. However, lawmakers showed in votes Thursday that they have growing concerns about continuing operations in Afghanistan and U.S. fighting in Libya.

An amendment calling for an accelerated withdrawal from Afghanistan and a fixed timetable for turning military operations over to the Kabul government narrowly went down to defeat, 215-204.

At the same time, the House voted 416-5 to prohibit the use of U.S. funds to put ground troops in Libya except to rescue an American, such as a downed pilot or a crew member who had bailed out of an aircraft. The prohibition covered the introduction of even contracted American personnel. This limitation reflected growing concern among some members that Obama has ignored the War Powers Act in failing to seek direct congressional authorization for U.S. participation in the fight against Moammar Gadhafi.

The legislation includes a 1.6 percent pay increase for service personnel and, though it increases the amount working-age military retirees will have to pay for their Tricare health care, it would result in lower future fee increases than Defense Secretary Robert Gates was seeking.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Howard P. “Buck” McKeon, R-Calif., said the bill honors “the service of our military personnel, veterans and their families,” pointing particularly to the pay boost and its protection of Tricare “from steep increases in the future.”

The measure also retains several sections that the Office of Management and Budget warned earlier this week would cause “the president’s senior advisers . . . to recommend a veto.”

One would limit the president on cutting nuclear weapons deployed or retired from the stockpile, while another would continue to bar the transfer of detainees from Guantanamo to the United States and prevent them from being prosecuted in courts in this country.

The bill would open the way for reviving competition for the engine of the F-35 Joint Strike Fighter, which Gates has halted.

And another provision considered objectionable by the White House would re-characterize the fight against terrorism in the wake of the death of Osama bin Laden. It gives expanded authority to use military force against “al-Qaeda, the Taliban and associated forces.” It also would authorize detaining “certain belligerents until the termination of hostilities.”

The OMB said: “At a minimum this is an issue that merits more extensive consideration.”

The bill also contains sections that create new uncertainty about implementation of the repeal of the “don’t ask, don’t tell” policy as well as prohibit same-sex marriages on military facilities.

Wisconsin unions bill may go to high court

Los Angeles Times

In yet another twist in Wisconsin’s bitter fight over the unions, a judge Thursday struck down the Republican-sponsored bill to strip most public workers of their collective bargaining rights, moving the battle to the state Supreme Court.

Dane County Circuit Judge Maryann Sumi ruled the Legislature violated the state’s open meetings law in approving the bill championed by Republican Gov. Scott Walker that sparked massive protests and the flight of 14 Democratic senators to Illinois in a futile effort to prevent its passage.

The state Supreme Court is scheduled to decide June 6 whether to hear the case.

As the Wisconsin fight intensifies — with six Republican and three Democratic senators facing recall elections, most likely July 12 — union workers and their allies in Ohio are about halfway toward their goal of collecting more than 450,000 signatures to put a measure on the fall ballot repealing that state’s law sharply curtailing the collective bargaining rights of public employees.

Sex lawsuit involving Ga. pastor resolved

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Lawsuits brought by four young men who accused a Georgia megachurch pastor of sexual misconduct have been resolved, attorneys for both sides said Thursday, bringing a quiet end to a blockbuster legal complaint that targeted a powerful national religious leader.

Both sides declined to discuss terms of the deal, other than to say the civil suits in state court would not go forward against Bishop Eddie Long, pastor of New Birth Missionary Baptist Church.

The four young men had alleged Long abused his spiritual authority and coerced them into sexual relations with gifts including cars, cash and travel when they were 17. One suit also claimed Long had sexual contact with one of them during trips he took them on in the U.S. and abroad. Long denied the allegations, and federal and state authorities didn’t investigate because Georgia’s age of consent is 16.

Still, the scandal tainted the reputation of Long, who over two decades had transformed his suburban Atlanta congregation of 150 into a following of 25,000 members and an international televangelist empire that included athletes, entertainers and politicians.

Some of Joplin’s missing turn up safe and alive

By Nomaan Merchant and Jim Salter
Associated Press

JOPLIN, Mo. — As emergency workers in Joplin searched Thursday for more than 230 people listed as missing after a tornado tore through the city, one was sitting on a wooden chair outside the wreckage of her home, cuddling her cat.

Sally Adams, 75, said neighbors rescued her Sunday after the storm destroyed her house and took her to a friend’s home. When The Associated Press told her she was on the missing list, Adams laughed and said “Get me off of there!”

Missouri officials had said they believed many of the missing were alive and safe but simply hadn’t been in touch with friends and family, in part because cell phone service has been spotty. The AP found that was the case with at least a dozen of the 232 still unaccounted for Thursday. They included two survivors staying at a hotel, six that a relative said were staying with friends and one that a former employee said had been moved from his nursing home.

Stephen Whitehead, of the Red Cross’ Safe and Well registry, which keeps track of the accounted-for, said that since the missing list came out earlier Thursday, he has learned that at least nine are people who are dead. Whitehead said he did not know whether those nine were among the known fatalities.

Adams said she lost her cell phone in the storm and had no way of contacting her family to let them know she was OK. She was placed on the missing list after relatives called a hot line and posted Facebook messages saying she was missing.

Her son, Bill Adams, said he told authorities his mother was alive after he learned she was safe, yet she remained on their unaccounted-for list Thursday afternoon.

Mike O’Connell, spokesman for the Missouri Department of Public Safety, said he wouldn’t call Adams’ listing a mistake and finding her is “a good thing.” He urged other survivors to check the list and call if they see their names.

The AP found Mike and Betty Salzer at a hotel being used by visiting journalists.

“Well, for Heaven’s sakes,” Betty Salzer, 74, said when the AP showed her the list.

The couple have been staying at the hotel since their home was destroyed Sunday. Betty Salzer said their names might have come from a Facebook message her daughter posted before they reached her Monday morning.

Not all of the stories of the missing will end so well.

Joplin City Manager Mark Rohr announced Thursday that the death toll had risen to 126.

Some of their families waited Thursday for their remains to be released. One victim’s funeral was scheduled for Friday morning in Galena, Kan., and other services were scheduled for the weekend.

But some of the bodies have yet to be identified. Andrea Spillars, deputy director and general counsel of the Missouri Department of Public Safety, said officials know some of the people unaccounted for are dead, but she wouldn’t say how many or when the names of the deceased would be released.

Chris Haddock, 23, said his father was one of the deceased on the missing list. A commercial truck driver found 62-year-old Paul Haddock’s body in his pickup truck behind a flattened Walmart.

“They found his wallet and his cell phone in his pocket,” Chris Haddock said. “That’s how they know it’s him.”

In another example of potential overlap, 12 residents of the Greenbriar nursing home are on the missing list. But nursing home administrators reported earlier that 11 people died in the tornado; only one was known missing.

One of the 12 is Dorothy Hartman, an Alzheimer’s patient. Pamela McBroom, 49, who lives near the nursing home, said one of her daughters used to work there, developed a soft spot for Hartman and introduced them. Hartman was frail “but very positive and full of life,” she said.

McBroom said she and her 16-year-old daughter were hiding in a closet when the tornado tore their walls and roof away. Her walls gone, McBroom could see the mayhem at Greenbriar.

“I could see people flying out of the nursing home by my house,” McBroom said. “I could hear them screaming. Just screaming. It was horrible.”

Nursing home officials haven’t said whether Hartman was one of the 11 killed.

Census: US men narrowing the gender gap of old age

By Hope Yen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Women still outlive men, but the gender gap among U.S. seniors is narrowing.

New 2010 census figures, released Thursday, show men are reducing women’s population advantage, primarily in the 65-plus age group. It’s a change in the social dynamics of a country in which longevity, widowhood and health care for seniors often have been seen as issues more important to women.

In all, the numbers highlight a nation that is rapidly aging even as Congress debates cuts in Medicare, an issue with ramifications for the growing ranks of older men as well as women.

Over the past decade, the number of men in the U.S. increased by 9.9 percent, faster than the 9.5 percent growth rate for women. As a result, women outnumbered men by just 5.18 million, compared with 2000, when there were 5.3 million more women than men.

The male-female ratio in the U.S. also increased to 96.7 from 96.3 in 2000, reflecting the narrowing of the female advantage in overall population. (A score of 100 signifies equal numbers of men and women; a male-female ratio of 95, for example, would mean there are 95 men for every 100 women in the population.) There hasn’t been such a sustained resurgence in the U.S. male population since 1910, when medical advances started to increase women’s life expectancies by reducing deaths during pregnancy.

“We know in the past because of women’s longer life expectancy, women put more emphasis on health care issues because they lived to an older age and often had to rely on the pensions of their husbands,” said Jen’nan G. Read, an associate professor of sociology and global health at Duke University.

“I expect men to become more aware and involved in health care now that they may be affected in the same way as women,” she said.

Broken down by subgroups, men were more numerous than women among those 34 and younger as more boys than girls tend to be born.

At age 35 and higher, the female population historically has been the majority as men were more likely to die prematurely from accidents, homicide or risks caused by workplace stress, alcohol, smoking or other factors. By age 85, the number of women typically is more than twice that of men. Life expectancy at birth is 80.8 years on average for women, compared with 75.6 for men.

But over the past decade, the gender gap has narrowed. Since 2000, men who were 65 and older increased by 21 percent, nearly double the 11.2 percent growth rate for women in that age group. Among those 65-74, the male-female ratio also has narrowed sharply. The number of women in that age group exceeds men by roughly 1.5 million, down from 1.8 million in 2000.

The latest census figures come amid a graying baby boomer demographic of 78 million people — now between the ages of 46 and 65 and looking ahead to retirement — who will have a major voice in the 2012 elections as federal spending and the spiraling costs of Medicare rise to the forefront.

Mladic hauled into court after 16 years on the run

By Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Serbia — Sixteen years after the bull-necked military commander went on the run, a pale and shrunken Ratko Mladic was hauled into a courtroom Thursday to face charges of genocide in ordering torture, rape and the slaughter of 8,000 Muslim men and boys in the Bosnian town of Srebrenica in 1995.

A Serbian government that has changed mightily since Mladic's alleged atrocities trumpeted his early morning arrest as a victory for a country worthy of EU membership and Western embrace. It banned all public gatherings and raised security levels to prevent ultra-nationalists from making good on pledges to pour into the streets in protest.

Mladic was one of the world's most wanted men, and faces charges of genocide and war crimes at the U.N. war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, where judge Fouad Riad said there was evidence of "unimaginable savagery."

"Thousands of men executed and buried in mass graves, hundreds of men buried alive, men and women mutilated and slaughtered, children killed before their mothers' eyes, a grandfather forced to eat the liver of his own grandson," Riad said during Mladic's 1995 indictment in absentia.

Mladic, 69, appeared frail and walked very slowly Thursday evening as he went into a closed-door extradition hearing. He wore a navy-blue jacket and a baseball hat with gray hair sticking out the sides, and carried what appeared to be a towel in his left hand. He could be heard on state TV saying "good day" to someone in the court, and a guard told him, "Let's go, general."

Mladic's lawyer said the judge cut short the questioning because the suspect's poor health left him unable to communicate.

"He is aware that he is under arrest, he knows where he is, and he said he does not recognize The Hague tribunal," said attorney Milos Saljic, adding that Mladic needs medical care and "should not be moved in such a state." Belgrade B-92 radio said one of Mladic's arms was paralyzed.

Deputy war crimes prosecutor Bruno Vekaric said that Mladic is taking a lot of medicine, but "responds very rationally to everything that is going on."

AROUND THE WORLD

AFGHANISTAN Seven Americans among 9 NATO troops dead

KABUL — Nine NATO service members were killed Thursday in Afghanistan, including seven U.S. troops among eight who died when a powerful bomb exploded in a field where they were patrolling on foot, officials said.

Two Afghan policemen also died and two others were wounded in the explosion in the mountainous Shorabak district of Kandahar province, 12 miles from the Pakistan border, said Gen. Abdul Raziq, chief of the Afghan border police in the province.

"Two months ago, we cleared this area of terrorists, but still they are active there," Raziq said.

The Taliban claimed responsibility for the blast.

"A bomb was planted for them in a field," Taliban spokesman Qari Yousef Ahmadi told The Associated Press in a telephone call.

IRAQ Gunmen kill head of de-Baathification panel

BAGHDAD — Ali Feisal al-Lami, a close aide to controversial Iraqi politician Ahmed Chalabi and former director of Iraq's de-Baathification commission, was assassinated late Thursday by an unknown gunman, an adviser to Chalabi said.

Lami was driving in eastern Baghdad when the assassin drew up to his car and shot him in the head at close range, said Entifadh Qanbar, a Chalabi aide.

Chalabi, a U.S. ally while he was in exile who later became friendlier with Iran, oversaw the de-Baathification process, and Lami chaired the Iraqi parliament's de-Baathification committee. In his role of preventing senior members of Saddam Hussein's Baath party from running for high office, Lami made many enemies.

Lami and Chalabi were criticized for directing de-Baathification, which disqualified hundreds of Sunni and secular Shiite candidates, without due process.

YEMEN Clashes widen as tribes warn of 'civil war'

SANAA — Fighting spilled across Yemen's capital and frightened residents fled or cowered in basements Thursday as a powerful militia alliance warned embattled President Ali Abdullah Saleh to either step down or face civil war. At least 28 people were killed as the four-day death toll neared 110.

The bold ultimatum reflected the growing confidence among the opposition forces — led the Yemen's largest tribe — that they could be gaining the upper hand against Saleh's regime with the uprising shifting from near daily street protests to fast-moving urban combat.

But Saleh also has shown he will not go easily. He has managed to ride out swelling anti-government demonstrations for more than three months, defections of military commanders and pressure from Arab neighbors and Western powers to leave office.

The difference this time for Saleh could be the vast influence of Yemen's main tribes, which command well-armed militias and can tap into traditional clan-based loyalties to try to bring down Saleh's 32-year rule.

G-8 rift with Russia over bombing of Libya

By Angela Charlton
Associated Press

DEAUVILLE, France — France says Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi must leave power now and Britain calls him an appalling dictator, but Russia says NATO has gone too far in its bombing campaign against Gadhafi's forces.

Escalating violence in Libya worried a gathering of rich world leaders as much or more than their own debts and joblessness, but they could not agree Thursday on how to punish Libya's leader or restore peace, highlighting the difficulty in making sure Arab uprisings have peaceful endings.

In a possible bid to soften Russian resistance to the NATO-led airstrikes, leaders of the Group of Eight nations asked Moscow to act as a "mediator" with Libya, according to President Dmitry Medvedev's spokeswoman. Natalya Timakova did not elaborate on what kind of role that could be, in comments carried on Russian news agencies.

President Barack Obama "is leading that initiative to work with the Russians" on Libya, said Michael McFaul, Russia adviser at the National Security Council. Obama's deputy national security adviser, Ben Rhodes, told reporters in Deauville, "Russia has relations, not just in Libya but across most of North Africa. ... We can benefit from those types of consultations and contacts with them."

Medvedev met with Obama and French President Nicolas Sarkozy in the Normandy resort of Deauville in a G-8 summit dominated by talk of upheaval in the Arab world. That overshadowed concerns about deficits and joblessness in the Group of Eight nations: the United States, France, Britain, Russia, Germany, Japan, Italy and Canada.

At talks Friday, G-8 leaders plan to marshal their combined economic might behind the grass-roots movements in Egypt and Tunisia, which overthrew autocrats but also scared off tourists and investors and threaten economic growth.

U.S. and other officials say it's too soon to reach a deal on dollar amounts for assistance to the Arab world.

But France offered Egypt up to $250 million a year in development aid, the prime minister said Thursday. And Britain pledged to expand its aid to the Middle East and North Africa to 110 million pounds, in an apparent effort to pressure G-8 partners into coughing up money, too.

"We're demonstrating that there is a chance for people in North Africa to choose their own future and their own freedom rather than have to put up with appalling dictators like Gadhafi," Prime Minister David Cameron told reporters.

The International Monetary Fund is ready to loan up to $35 billion to oil-importing countries in the Middle East and North Africa, as part of its pledge to help the region meet goals on growth, stability, job creation and improving living standards.

A POP-UP musical

Costume quantity and uncommon set presents challenges for biblical production

By Eva Stutzman
 Times-News writer

“Boys don’t know how to dance in dresses,” said Penni Aufderheidi, who has been making costumes for From the Heart Theater Group’s upcoming production of “Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat.”

Not only is dancing in skirts a problem for this up-and-coming theater group, but getting enough dresses has posed a challenge. With a cast of 51 actors, getting the necessary robes can be costly. From the Heart was able to borrow them from the Navarene Church and the First Baptist Church.

The musical adaptation of the biblical story of Joseph was adapted by Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice into a rock opera that encompasses nearly every genre.

“We have a country song and a rap song, the pharaoh is Elvis and the song ‘Go Go Joseph’ is a ‘60s number,” said Jeff Cooper, director of the musical.

Each of these genres requires a different set of costumes — cowboy hats, ‘60s scarves and belts, beach hats and veils — many of which were borrowed from other area theater groups. However, Aufderheidi has already spent about 20 hours making and altering costumes and expects to spend another 60 hours before the show goes on stage Thursday.

The costumes aren’t the only challenge From the Heart has met for this show.

“We wanted it to be like a children’s book because it is essentially a children’s story,” Cooper said.

The children’s book feel will come from the set, which,

Pam St. Clair, front, plays Judah's wife in 'Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat.'

Cooper explained, “will be different than how people have seen this play done before.” The set, which will be in a pop-up book style, is primarily made from cardboard so that the stagehands can lift it from the floor easily.

“The first scene will be a group of students with their Sunday School teacher. As she starts to tell them the story of Joseph she walks through a doorway into the book,” Cooper said. “That’s when the set will be lifted from the floor like a pop-up book.”

This back-to-basics set design has more to offer than just fitting the story. It is also cost effective. To put on a show this size costs about $10,000, Cooper said. The First Baptist Church in Twin Falls, where Cooper is the pastor, fronted the money for the production. After advertisers buy space in the program, tickets are sold and donations are made, the money will be paid back.

While the sets are not yet complete, the singing and dancing aspects of the show have come together nicely.

“From the Heart is made up of seasoned veterans and people that have never been in a show before,” said Paul Bowman, the music director. “The great part is there are groups that the roles get split into, for instance Joseph’s brothers. In that group there are all different types of actors and everyone helps everyone else out.”

The cast has been working for eight weeks and at this point, as the actors dance and sing across the stage, those who have never been in a show before blend in with the rest of the cast.

New book includes unexpected Idaho art

By Melissa Davlin
 Times-News writer

David Alderson’s belt buckles are more than accessories. They’re delicate and beautiful, with swooping silver swirls and intricate carvings.

His work, along with pieces by 35 other Idaho crafters and artists, is featured in Cort Conley’s new book “Idaho Artists: A Contemporary Selection.” The book shows a diverse cross-section of works from across the state and makes it clear that art isn’t limited to metropolitan areas.

The book is made of three dozen profiles that tell the artist’s name and craft, including six south-central Idaho artists: sculptor Rod Kagan of Ketchum, sculptor Mark Stasz of Bellevue, silversmith Alderson of Twin Falls, luthier Lawrence Smart of McCall and Hailey, poet Jim Irons of Twin Falls, and photographer Teresa Tamura of Ketchum and Nampa. The profiles give brief overviews of the creation process, descriptions of works, brief biographies and quotes from the artists.

Boise State University professor Tom Trusky originally came up with the idea to feature Idaho artists in a book, but died in 2009 before bringing his idea to life. Conley took over, picking the artists and interviewing each of them in person for at least half a day or reprinting profiles he had written about them.

Throughout the process, Conley stayed true to Trusky’s original goal of making Idaho art accessible.

“He had a very generous view of the arts,” Conley said in a Wednesday phone interview. “He did not want us to do a book that simply showed, let’s say, painters or sculptors.”

There are no artist headshots in the book. Conley wanted to concentrate on showing the artists’ works.

“I was absolutely determined that there would not be photographs of the artists at the expense of showing the art itself,” Conley said. “I don’t think it’s relevant what they look like.”

Irons was impressed with the book, adding that he liked the variety.

Writing fiction in a flash

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Alex McPherson never dreamed he would be a published author.

But last month he had his first piece of work published on MonkeyBicycle.net.

It was just a title — “Mindreader” — followed by one sentence: “Now that the shower was on, she could think without being heard.”

But, then, that’s flash fiction for you.

“This was just 12 words. But you can write more. Flash fiction opens up the field of short story writing to a lot more people. Just about anyone can write a story of 750 words or less,” said McPherson.

McPherson is among a half-dozen people in the Sun Valley area who have been meeting two to three times a month since November.

Four of them read selections at a writing workshop featuring Teresa Jordan that the College of Southern Idaho organized in late April. One concerned an animal gone extinct; another, a vagrant named Shenandoah; a third, a man dying of a heart attack in the woods with only his dog at his side.

They also share their writing through a Facebook group that is currently open to only those who have attended meetings.

“So far we’ve produced about 70 pieces. Not all are great but most are really good. It gives people a voice,” said Lee Stoops, who started the group.

Stoops is a Hailey engineer who is working on his Master’s degree in creative writing at Antioch University in Los Angeles. A graduate of Whitworth University, he has written a short story that will be published in the June issue of ProvoOremWord.org. And he’s writing two novels — a psychological character study and a coming-of-age story about a man in his early 40s who realizes he’s let go of something that he needs to get back.

Stoops wants to teach creative writing at the college level.

“I love writing and I love storytelling,” he said. “Storytelling is a fundamental part of cultural evolution — a part of our very survival. Even if I were a New York Times best-selling author, I would still teach creative writing because I believe storytelling is a way to change people’s lives.”

The flash fiction version consists of powerful prose pieces confined to two pages or less. It’s becoming more popular, thanks to the Internet, although numerous print magazines publish flash fiction.

“It engages people who wouldn’t be able to sit down and write a long story. And telling just enough story in a few words gives readers the chance to fill in the blanks and use their imagination,” said Joshua Mayes of Carey.

Mayes, who received a degree in literature from Idaho State University last year, has been writing since middle school and frequently attends writing workshops while working as a substitute teacher in Shoshone.

Flash fiction has taught him to be more precise with his words, saying more with less.

McPherson, in contrast, had never written anything save for a personal journal and class essays. But flash fiction has him jazzed: “Getting published certainly gave me the confidence to continue to write.”

KAREN BOSSICK/Times-News correspondent
Lee Stoops says flash fiction appeals to those who don’t want to — or aren’t able to — write a 5,000-word short story or a novel.

A FEW TIPS FOR FLASH FICTION WRITING

- Set the stage in the first paragraph.
- Start the action in the first paragraph, rather than building up to it.
- Have a twist or punch line at the end.

From the Heart is a relatively new theater group. Its first production, “Godspell,” debuted in March 2010 and the upcoming show will be the second time the group hits the stage. It was started after Cooper decided he wanted to promote more community involvement, and although the group is sponsored by the First Baptist Church, members come from all backgrounds and faiths.

“It’s not just painters and poets, et cetera. It’s everybody,” Irons said, citing the knife maker and luthier. “I think that’s a nice touch.”

Irons’ profile was a reprint of a piece Conley had written about him in 2001, Irons said, and includes an interview with Trusky and three new poems.

Stasz, the Bellevue sculptor, said he hadn’t received much feedback about his inclusion in the book, but added it has been out for only a few weeks. What mattered more to him, he said, was that he had been chosen to be included.

“I think it’s an incredible opportunity,” he said. “I’m privileged to be in that book.”

A new gallery, a new night

Sun Valley art walk features fresh artwork

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Gallery walkers will have a new art space to peruse during Saturday's Gallery Walk.

The First Avenue Contemporary Art Gallery is opening at 360 First Ave. in Ketchum. The owner is Shirley Barer, a degreed art instructor who specializes in the human figure.

"To capture the gesture of the human figure is to tell a story of the subject's character. It's in capturing that gesture that I find my interest," she said.

Barer said she plans to offer art education workshops that will enrich people's understanding of art. She will also show a diverse range of artists and mediums.

This month's selection, for instance, includes JoAnn Belson and her "Choke Series" of colorful, abstract large-scale artichokes. Belson, who will be present at Saturday's Gallery Walk, has had her work featured in The New York Times and Los Angeles Times.

The widow of Jerry Belson, an Emmy-winning comedy writer who worked on "The Odd Couple," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "The Lucy Show," and "Gomer Pyle," Belson has sold plenty of her art to Hollywood celebrities. Her corporate collectors include Sony Pictures, Dreamworks and Jim Henson Films, while private collectors include Danny DeVito, Rhea Perlman, Robin Williams and Billy Crystal.

Gallery DeNovo, 320 First Ave. N., will have a professor emeritus of sorts present during the gallery walk.

Artist and author Fred Martin was part of the San Francisco Institute of Art early on and is currently dean emeritus and associate professor of drawing and painting there. He studied under such great artists as David Park, Mark Rothko and Clyfford Still before going on to teach today's generation of artists.

"He has so much knowledge of the art world, having known some great artists and watching others grow in their careers. So he has a really unique perspective,"

A NIGHT OF ART

A number of Ketchum galleries in addition to those mentioned in the story will open their doors from 5 to 8 p.m. Saturday to offer visitors a chance to peruse new art, visit with some of the artists, sip a little wine and enjoy nibbles.

Here are other places to see art: Sun Valley Center for the Arts, Fifth and Washington streets; Broschofsky Gallery, 360 East Ave.; Gail Severn Gallery, 400 1st Ave. N.; Kneeland Gallery, 271 1st Ave. N.; Friesen Gallery and Frederic Boloix Fine Arts, 320 First Ave., N.; Ochi Gallery, 305 Walnut Ave.; David M. Norton Gallery, 511 Sun Valley Road; Mountain Images Gallery, 400 Sun Valley Road, and Toneri Hink Gallery, 400 Sun Valley Road.

said gallery owner Robin Reiners.

The gallery is exhibiting several of Martin's journal paintings, which feature thoughts about his golden years.

"He paints like a lot of people journal. It's a daily activity for him. And within his paintings he reveals many interesting thoughts, particularly about his appreciation of so many things," said Reiners. "Each painting features a golden light or bright element that draws him in."

Gilman Contemporary, 661 Sun Valley Road, is celebrating its fourth anniversary with paintings by Seattle artist John Dempcy, who draws on microbiology and genetics to explore the myriad ways in which form and function unfold in nature.

Dempcy systematically applies drops of paint to canvas, creating building blocks or button-like figures that resemble a network of interrelated components like you might see in DNA and other scientific patterns.

"He conveys a sense of balance that is struck between order and chaos, growth and decay," said gallery owner L'Anne Gilman.

Facebook seeps into pop music performance

By Chris Richards
The Washington Post

This summer, the rock stars aren't just headlining the music festivals — they're booking them, too.

Hip-hop vets the Roots will throw the fourth annual Roots Picnic in Philadelphia on June 4. Chicago rock-folkies Wilco will host the second annual Solid Sound festival in western Massachusetts from June 24 to 26. And Pearl Jam will celebrate 20 years of bandhood with a two-day festival in East Troy, Wis., on Sept. 3 and 4.

With each festival come heaps upon heaps of supporting acts, all handpicked by the headliner. It's a chance for some of the biggest names in music to surround themselves with their heroes, their heirs and their friends.

Is it the Facebookification of popular music?

"People want to connect with an artist," says Glenn Peoples, senior editorial analyst at Billboard magazine. "They want to enjoy the same music that an artist enjoys. . . . They want to experience bands that are all friends, that are all part of the same social network."

With every passing summer, we want to feel closer to our favorite touring acts. We not only want them to be our pals, we also want to meet their pals. And so they become our Sherpas, ready to slash through the bloggy bramble and lead us to kindred musicians worthy of their endorsement.

That feels most evident in the case of the Roots, a group that can be seen canoodling with different pop musicians every weeknight. They're the house band on "Late Night With Jimmy Fallon," a show that offers the most adventurous music programming on television.

The group threw its first Roots Picnic in 2008, the summer before "Fallon" hit the airwaves. This year's event again takes place at Penn's Landing in the group's native Philadelphia. The bill features rap heroes young (Wiz Khalifa) and old (Nas), but the undercard is refreshingly hip. Jazz princess Esperanza Spalding, neo-glam troubadour Ariel Pink and Swedish soul troupe Little Dragon are scheduled to appear, and all — surprise! — have appeared on "Late Night With Jimmy Fallon."

Also performing are recently re-formed Dismemberment Plan, the Washington post-punk group that was invited to play the Picnic moments after it performed on "Fallon" in January. Plan bassist Eric Axelson says he admires the spirit of the festival. "It's like, 'Here are bands we like,'" he says. "Come check it out."

And the love is mutual. "I've been a Roots fan for a while," Axelson says. "'The Picnic' has always had a good mix of hip-hop and rock and everything in between. . . . It's a cool lineup!"

The Roots might have the coolest friends, but Dave Matthews has more. Instead of a one-day, one-off event, he's throwing four three-day festivals: in Atlantic City, June 24-26; in Chicago, July 8-10; on New York's Governor's Island, Aug. 26-28; and at the Gorge in George, Wash., Sept. 2-4.

Dubbed the Dave Matthews Band Caravan, these massive bills read like a movable Bonnaroo festival. Ray LaMontagne, the Flaming Lips, Michael Franti and Spearhead, O.A.R. and David Gray have each signed on for the first two Caravan stops and will be joined by dozens of other acts. For the second two festivals, Matthews will be joined by Dispatch, Gogol Bordello and, actually, the Roots.

The bill at Pearl Jam's PJ20 festival isn't huge, but some of the names are. The Strokes and Queens of the Stone Age will help fill out the top of the bill. Meantime, Pearl Jam will use the opening slots to endorse undersung veterans (Mudhoney, John Doe of X) and give a boost to younger unknowns (the Young Evils, Star Anna and the Laughing Dogs, the-newno2).

Wilco's Solid Sound festival in North Adams, Mass., appears to be taking a similar tack. The bill includes rock legend Levon Helm, Sonic Youth leader Thurston Moore, and indie buzzbands Sic Alps and Purling Hiss.

"The band just wanted to do something fun with their friends and the bands they love in a sort of nice summery place," says Wilco manager Tony Margherita. "You have people's attention for a few days. Musically and otherwise, it becomes much more of a communal thing. You're not just popping in and out of people's lives. You're actually spending some time with them and having a conversation."

That fan-centric approach seems like a smart move in a challenging summer touring market. According to Pollstar, a trade publication that tracks the health of the concert industry, the top 50 tours in North America grossed 15 percent less in 2010 than in 2009. Ticket sales, meantime, dropped 12 percent while the total number of concerts dropped about 3 percent.

Peoples at Billboard thinks this might be part of the reason why we're seeing a bump in artist-curated festivals. "Sometimes, just going out on tour isn't enough," he says. "There's a lot of competition."

And next summer? "I expect that we'll see more of it," he says. "It's a great innovation to keep people interested in live music."

Heat earn trip to Finals

James, Wade lead charge as Miami eliminates Bulls

By Andrew Seligman
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh teamed up to win a championship. Well, now they have their shot. James scored 28 points, Wade added 21, and they led a furious rally in the final minutes as the Miami Heat eliminated Derrick Rose and the Chicago Bulls 83-80 in Game 5 of the Eastern Conference finals on Thursday. James and Wade were simply spectacular down the stretch, each scoring eight during a game-ending 18-3 run as Miami wiped out a 12-point deficit to win the series. Now, the Heat are headed back to the NBA Finals for the first time since 2006, and in a fitting twist, See HEAT, Sports 2

Twin Falls residents collect plethora of golf balls

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

Many people consider golf their favorite hobby. For Eddie Chappell and Vic Graybeal, the golf balls themselves have created an altogether different hobby. While the two Twin Falls residents both play golf, they also have a passion for collecting logo golf balls. Logo golf balls come from every corner of the world with logos for almost anything printed on them. Businesses use them for marketing and golf courses use them as promotional items. Chappell started collecting golf balls while he worked at Bowladrome in Twin Falls. "Golf balls were a lot easier to collect than bowling balls," Chappell said. "Someone brought me a set of logo balls, maybe 20 balls, and then people would see the collection and bring me more." Most of Chappell's nearly 1,600 golf balls came from friends he made while working in the bowling industry. He said his clients were always good about remembering his growing collection when they went on vacation somewhere interesting. The same has been true for Graybeal. "People would see the collection and so when they were somewhere interesting they would find a ball to bring back for me," Graybeal said. Graybeal, 91, was introduced to the hobby through a friend. "Ben Bartlett from CSI got me my first set of golf balls," said Graybeal, a prominent Magic Valley photographer. "I started getting more every time my wife and I traveled." A collection of more than 1,400 balls lines the walls of Graybeal's garage, representing many different businesses, colleges, athletic teams and, of course, golf courses. Chappell's collection includes golf balls from as far away as Guam and as close as Blue Lakes Country Club. "I probably have a ball from every golf course in the state," Chappell said. While working with Brunswick Bowling, Chappell traveled the northeastern United States, picking up balls of all sorts. "There are balls from businesses, colleges, places, just about everything," Chappell said. "My favorites are those that were signed." A ball signed by the professional golfer and announcer Johnny Miller is one of Chappell's favorites. In the same manner, Graybeal prizes the golf ball autographed by golfer Payne Stewart, but admitted that there's not a specific ball that makes the collection special to him.

BSU-Toledo football moved for television

For the Times-News

BOISE — Boise State's nonconference football game at the University of Toledo has been moved to Friday, Sept. 16, and will be televised by either ESPN or ESPN2. The game, which was originally slated for Sept. 17, will kick off at 6 p.m. (MDT). The Broncos will have three games broadcast on ESPN's family of networks, including the season-opener against the University of Georgia in the Chick-fil-A Kickoff Game on Sept. 3 at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta. The Friday, Oct. 7 contest at Fresno State will also be on ESPN. Boise State's remaining nine games will be televised by either CBS Sports Network, VERSUS and The Mtn. Network, with three games on each network, as the Broncos join the Mountain West Conference. The Broncos are coming off a 12-1 record in 2010 and were ranked No. 9 in the final Associated Press media poll last year.

Time for IndyCar to get over case of DanicaMania

INDIANAPOLIS — Danica Patrick was holding court at the Brickyard and, as always, no one had more reporters crowded around them. Across the room, though, was another intriguing story. With thick bandages covering both hands, Si-mona de Sil-vestro re-counted how she stared down her fears after a terrifying crash, how she climbed into a backup car when all good sense told her not to and qualified for the Indianapolis 500. She still can't bear to look when the gauze is changed each day, turning away from limbs that are missing one key element we all take granted: skin. She's still in quite a bit of pain but plans on beating that, too, at least while behind the wheel for three-or-so nerve-wracking hours Sunday. Good stuff. Now, the key question: Are de Silvestro and all the other compelling racers who'll take part in the 100th anniversary of America's most famous race — from See NEWBERRY, Sports 4

Twins say one last goodbye to Killebrew

By Jon Krawczynski
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — For 14 seasons, Harmon Killebrew was the cleanup hitter for the Minnesota Twins, the ferocious slugger who used his incredible strength to knock baseballs out of the park. At a memorial service on Thursday night for the Hall of Famer, who died last week at the age of 74 after a bout with esophageal cancer, Killebrew's shy, quiet wife, Nita, exhibited an entirely different, and perhaps even more impressive, kind of strength. After heavy hitters like Rod Carew, Paul Molitor and Justin Morneau set the table with touching remarks, Nita took over the cleanup duties, delivering a powerful, tear-jerking thank you to about 4,000 fans, 45 relatives and dozens of former teammates and current Twins at Target Field. "Thank you for loving my husband," said Nita, who detailed her husband's previous health problems that nearly claimed his life 20 years ago. "Thank you for healing his heart and his soul.

Thank you for sharing him with me and giving so much to him so he had so much to give back to all of us. "His body is at rest at his home in Payette. His soul is at peace in that big ballpark in the sky. But his heart will always be in Minnesota here with you." Killebrew died on May 17, just a few days after issuing an incredible public statement acknowledging that he had lost his battle with cancer and was entering hospice care. He hit 573 home

Lee bats, pitches Phillies to win

PHILADELPHIA — Cliff Lee drove in three runs and worked eight effective innings, leading the Philadelphia Phillies to a 10-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds on Thursday.

Raul Ibanez hit a three-run homer, and Chase Utley also connected to help the Phillies take three of four from the Reds. The teams were playing with little rest following a 19-inning game ended at 1:19 a.m. local time Thursday, after 6 hours, 11 minutes and 600 pitches.

Lee (4-4) threw 114 pitches in eight innings.

Bin Hammam fights back in bribery scandal

ZURICH (AP) — In a FIFA presidential election blighted by a bribery scandal, Mohamed bin Hammam hugged Sepp Blatter on Thursday, then attacked his campaign.

Their contest for soccer’s top job turned increasingly hostile the day after bin Hammam was accused by the governing body of bribing voters in the Caribbean.

The Qatari challenger flew to Zurich for a FIFA finance meeting and faced the opponent he suspects plotted to wreck his chances in Wednesday’s vote of 208 soccer nations.

Their warm embrace, witnessed by a select few of FIFA’s inner circle, disguised deeper passions.

Hours later, bin Hammam issued a statement urging the same FIFA ethics committee that is investigating him to also examine Blatter for breaching its behavior code.

Blatter, meanwhile, talked up his opponent’s “public humiliation” in his regular campaign column for a soccer website. He denied conspiring to remove his former ally from the ballot.

FIFA INVESTIGATES EXHIBITION IN UAE

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — FIFA says it broke up a scheme to rig a soccer game in the United Arab Emirates that it believes is part of a wider match-fixing scandal stretching from Finland to the Far East.

Tipped off on alleged plans to manipulate a March 26 exhibition between Jordan and Kuwait, FIFA sent investigators to the stadium in Sharjah, the emirate just north of Dubai.

FIFA says the game bore all the hallmarks of suspicious matches in Turkey and elsewhere — local referees were replaced by foreigners and the match ended in a 1-1 draw with both goals coming from penalties.

According to FIFA’s early warning system of betting monitoring, online gambling sites were abuzz with action from the match. That prompted FIFA investigators to reveal their presence to organizers at halftime.

The dysfunctional spectacle finally prompted disapproval from a major sponsor that helps bankroll FIFA’s billion-dollar annual income.

The sporting goods firm Adidas, a top-tier backer since the 1970s, lamented the “negative tenor” of FIFA’s debate.

Soccer’s increasingly discredited ruling body already has eight of its 24-man executive committee under investigation. Blatter would be the ninth if, as bin Hammam requests, he is brought before an ethics hearing in Zurich on Sunday.

Bin Hammam has been summoned along with his fellow confederation boss Jack Warner, a FIFA vice president, for allegedly offering bribes to 25 Caribbean soccer leaders on a May 10-11 campaign trip to Warner’s native Trinidad.

While rejecting the bribery allegations, bin Hammam said FIFA’s evidence showed Blatter broke its ethical code by not reporting an apparent corruption attempt.

“The accusations also contain statements according to which Mr. Blatter, the incumbent FIFA president, was informed of, but did not oppose, payments allegedly made to members of the Caribbean Football Union,” bin Hammam said in a statement.

Bin Hammam insisted the scandal is a “plan to damage” him and, like Warner, has questioned the timing.

Blatter wrote that he was “shocked” by the corruption claims against bin Hammam that shed a “very bad light on FIFA yet again.”

“It gives me no pleasure to see him suffer public disgrace before an investigation would even have started,” Blatter said in a column for Inside World Football. “To now assume that ... this entire matter was somehow masterminded by me is ludicrous and completely reprehensible.”

The election rivals met briefly Thursday — their first encounter since May 1 in Paraguay — in FIFA’s main committee forum, according to senior vice president, Julio Grondona.

Heat

they’ll be facing the Mavericks. Back then, with Wade leading the way, Miami beat Dallas to capture the championship. This time, it’ll be James and Dirk Nowitzki going for their first rings.

The Heat will host Game 1 on Tuesday night.

For Miami’s Big Three, this was the plan right from the start. The Heat had their difficulties along the way, but look at them now.

They just knocked off the team that won more games than any other, that boasted the league’s MVP in Rose and sent expectations soaring around Chicago in a way not seen since Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen were racking up championships.

Rose led Chicago with 25 points but hit just 9 of 29 shots. He fouled Wade on a key four-point play and missed a tying free throw with 26.7 seconds left.

James had 11 rebounds and six assists. Wade’s late surge helped negate his nine turnovers. Bosh added 20 points and 10 rebounds as the Heat pulled out a dramatic win.

The Bulls looked like they were in good shape up 77-65 with about three minutes to go, but Wade started the deciding run with a runner and layup. A 3 by James pulled Miami within 77-72 with 2:07 left. Rose then scored on a spin move in the lane, but fouled Wade as he nailed a 3, resulting in a four-point play.

Then, after a miss by Rose, James tied it at 79 with another 3 with 1:01 remaining, sending a loud groan through the arena.

James buried another jumper to put Miami ahead 81-79 with 29.5 seconds left. Rose immediately got fouled by James, but missed the second free throw after making the first.

Kurt Thomas then tipped the inbounds pass, but the Heat recovered, leading to two free throws for Bosh. The Bulls still had one more chance to tie it, but Kyle Korver got doubled up top and passed to Rose on the wing. His 3-pointer got blocked by James, with Udonis Haslem doubling him as time expired.

Killebrew

runs in his career, but was remembered as much for his gentlemanly nature off of the baseball diamond on Thursday night.

“Harmon had I don’t know how many home runs,” former home run king Hank Aaron said. “In his case, really, in all fairness to him, he was No. 1 really. He hit 1,000 home runs because he did so many great things off the field. That’s what counts, it’s not how you play the game, it’s how you play it afterward.”

Commissioner Bud Selig, Jim Kaat and Jim “Mudcat” Grant were among the dignitaries who made the trip to pay tribute to one of the most beloved players in Twins history, with Grant singing a stirring rendition of “What A Wonderful World.”

“Harmon was as tough and feared a competitor on the field as the game has ever known. ... He was the dominant slugger of the 1960s,” Selig said. “In this region of the country, Harmon Killebrew was the face of baseball and the game could not have been blessed with a better ambassador.

“Yet we all know the irony of his nickname, ‘The Killer,’ because as a human being he was just the opposite.”

Michael Cuddyer and Morneau both spoke of Killebrew the mentor, telling funny stories about being chastised for their sloppy autographs early in their careers.

“Now write it so I can read it,” Morneau remembered Killebrew telling him during their first meeting. “After a few hundred tries, he finally gave me the OK.”

And Carew spoke of visiting Killebrew, who called Carew “Junior,” in his final days. Carew called Killebrew “Charlie.”

“No matter how many players pass through the Twins organization, there will only be one face of this organization and that’s Harmon Killebrew,” Carew said through tears. “Charlie, I know that you’ve taken a safe voyage. I love you, and I’ll see you one day.”

SPORTS IN BRIEF

NFL: Court must honor labor law in ruling

MINNEAPOLIS — The NFL hasn’t wavered in this message to its locked-out players: Get out of the courts and come back to the bargaining table.

Reiterating that mantra, lawyers for the league issued written arguments Thursday that a recent legal response by players does not dispel “serious doubts” previously expressed by an appeals court about a federal judge’s order that the lockout end immediately.

Repeatedly during this dragged-out, employer-employee dispute over the future of this lucrative, ever-popular professional sport, the NFL has insisted the only path to a new agreement is through face-to-face talks.

In the league’s reply brief, which again urged the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn Minnesota-based U.S. District Judge Susan Richard Nelson’s April 25 decision to lift the lockout, it claimed anew Thursday that the NFL Players Association shed union status only as a tactic to gain leverage through an antitrust lawsuit filed in Nelson’s court.

“No student of the history of this industry — and no one familiar with the NFLPA leadership’s very recent statements of purpose and intent — believes that the Union is gone, let alone gone forever,” attorneys for the NFL wrote.

The appeals court put a stay May 16 on Nelson’s ruling, when it expressed those “serious doubts” about the legality of Nelson’s ruling. That stay kept the work stoppage in place until the process is complete, and will hear oral arguments from each side in St. Louis on June 3.

The NFL also asked the appeals court Thursday to “make clear that the solution” to this impasse “lies with the labor laws and not in the antitrust courts.”

Lance Armstrong adds to legal team

AUSTIN, Texas — Lance Armstrong is adding two lawyers to his legal team who previously won a major legal victory against federal investigators in a doping case.

John Keker and Elliot Peters of San Francisco represented Major League Baseball players as they won a key appeals court case two years ago in which a panel of federal judges ruled that agents had no right to seize baseball’s anonymous drug-testing results from 2003.

A top investigator in that case, Jeff Novitzky, has been leading a federal probe into whether seven-time Tour de France winner Armstrong took performance-enhancing drugs and led a systematic doping program on his U.S. Postal team.

Last week, “60 Minutes” broadcast a report in which former Armstrong teammate Tyler Hamilton, who has testified before a federal grand jury, said he saw Armstrong use performance-enhancing drugs. The CBS program also reported that George Hincapie, Armstrong’s close friend and former teammate, told federal authorities that he and Armstrong supplied each other with performance-enhancing drugs and discussed them.

Armstrong has always denied doping during his seven consecutive Tour de France victories from 1999-2005.

Kings owners ‘optimistic’ about arena efforts

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Kings owners Joe and Gavin Maloof say they are “optimistic” that Sacramento can help finance a new arena after a feasibility study was released at a special City Hall meeting.

The Maloofs said in a statement released by the team Thursday that “the political and public will are here” in Sacramento despite years of failed measures to finance a facility.

The study was only preliminary and didn’t outline how an arena would be paid for. The report only called for “significant contributions” from the private and public sectors.

The Kings were close to moving to Anaheim before deciding earlier this month to stay at least one more season. NBA Commissioner David Stern has told Sacramento it must have a new arena plan by March 1 or the franchise will likely relocate.

Ex-Buckeyes player says he sold rings for cash

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A former Ohio State wide receiver told the school’s student newspaper that he sold Big Ten championship rings and other memorabilia for cash and got special car deals.

Ray Small, frequently benched, suspended or disciplined during an erratic career at Ohio State from 2006-2009, confirmed to The Lantern that when it came to getting improper benefits “everyone was doing it.”

He also said it was no big deal selling personal items given to the team: “We had four Big Ten rings. There was enough to go around.” And added that, despite Ohio State’s large and proactive NCAA compliance department, most of the school’s student-athletes “don’t even think about (NCAA) rules.”

Ohio State didn’t dismiss his charges but also didn’t sound as if it would try to find out any more about them.

“At this point, the university does not have enough information regarding the reported matters concerning a former student-athlete who has been gone from the football program for two years,” athletic department spokesman Dan Wallenberg said in an emailed statement.

Small was suspended for the 2010 Rose Bowl in what would have been his final game.

Five Buckeyes players are suspended for the first five games of the 2011 season for selling memorabilia to the owner of a local tattoo parlor.

Graybeal has organized his collection into rough categories with sports teams grouped together on one rack and beer labels on another.

“My daughter was the secretary for the San Francisco Giants so she got a bunch of baseball team balls,” Graybeal said, pointing to the row of balls stamped with MLB team logos.

Some of the balls are of the joke variety, like the ones that look like they are wrapped in $100 bills in Chappell’s collection. Some are brightly colored, but most look like traditional golf balls.

While the number of balls in each collection may not reach “sands of the sea” proportions, they are extensive. And ever growing.

“I don’t know how many golf balls there are in the collection,” Graybeal said. “I counted them one time but then I got more.”

Donald holds early edge in England

VIRGINIA WATER, Eng-land — Luke Donald shot a 7-under 64 on Thursday to take the lead in the sus-pended first round of the BMW PGA Championship, leaving him eight strokes ahead of No. 1 Lee West-wood in their battle for the top spot in the world rank-ing.

Donald mastered the wet and windy conditions on Wentworth's West Course to match his lowest Euro-pean Tour round. He had five birdies in a seven-hole stretch and finished with eight birdies and a bogey.

"That was probably one of the best rounds I've ever played," said Donald, the runner-up last year. "It was tough conditions out there. The wind was swirling. There was some rain show-ers, and this isn't an easy course in the best of condi-tions. I was just seeing the shots and was able to hit them."

The second-ranked Eng-lishman needs to outper-form Westwood to take the top spot.

"The goal is to try and win this event, and if I finish ahead of Lee, then great," Donald said.

Italian star who became the youngest winner on the Eu-ropean Tour at 17 years, 188 days last October, shot a 66 to tie for second with Swe-den's Johan Edfors.

Play was interrupted for 36 minutes because of light-ning and the round was sus-pended because of fading light with five groups still on the course. Sweden's Oscar Floren was 4 under with four holes to play.

OVERTON LEADS AT BYRON NELSON

IRVING, Texas — Jeff Overton shot a bogey-free 6-under 64 to take a one-stroke lead over Ryan Palmer after the first round of the Byron Nelson Cham-pionship.

A year after tying for sec-ond at TPC Four Seasons, Overton began his back nine with four birdies in a seven-hole stretch. He had his best score in 15 career rounds at the Nelson, even after his 22-foot birdie at-tempt on the closing hole lipped out.

Sergio Garcia, who with-drew from a British Open qualifier earlier this week and didn't even play a prac-tice round because of an in-fected fingernail on his left hand, was two strokes back at 66 along with Dustin Johnson, Jeff Quinney, Scott Piercy, Will Strickler, Chris Riley, Josh Teater, Joe Ogilvie and Keegan Bradley.

MUROTA STEALS SHOW AT SENIOR PGA

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Japan's Kiyoshi Murota shot a 6-under 66 to over-shadow stars such as Mark O'Meara and Tom Watson and grab the first-round lead in the weather-plagued Senior PGA Cham-pionship.

After a 90-minute delay at the start of the round and a later suspension of play that lasted more than 3 hours, half the field was still on the course when dark-ness fell. Those 78 players will hit Valhalla Golf Club early Friday to complete the first round.

Murota had a one-shot lead over alternate Trevor Dodds, with former Mas-ters and British Open win-ner O'Meara another stroke back after a 68. Watson, an eight-time major champi-on, shot a 70.

Murota's 66 was built around a short game that consistently helped him avoid trouble. He had four sand saves and 11 one-putt greens without a bogey.

Clijsters stunned in Paris; Sharapova comes back

PARIS (AP) — There were plenty of excuses available for Kim Clijsters after a stun-ning collapse in the second round of the French Open against a woman ranked 114th.

In assessing her 3-6, 7-5, 6-1 loss to Arantxa Rus of the Netherlands on Thursday, the second-seeded Clijsters could have pointed to her heavily taped right ankle, which she hurt while danc-ing barefoot at her cousin's wedding last month.

In recounting how she managed to waste two match points and drop 11 of the last 12 games after leading 5-2 in the second set, the Belgian could have mentioned that she last entered the French Open in 2006, and had played a total of five clay-court matches anywhere since.

And in explaining her 65 unforced errors — 43 more than her opponent made — and 10 double-faults, Cli-jsters could have reminded everyone that she hadn't competed at all since late March because of that bum ankle and previous injuries to her right shoulder and wrist.

Instead, the winner of the last two Grand Slam titles, and four overall, pointed a finger squarely at herself and an odd crisis of confidence.

"I started doubting a little bit," said Clijsters, the French Open runner-up in 2001 and 2003. "When you start doubting yourself on any surface — but for me, defi-nitely on clay — it's the wrong attitude to have."

The 27-year-old Clijsters also gave credit to the 20-year-old Rus, who entered the day with a 3-4 career record in major tournaments and only twice before had been to Court Philippe Cha-trier — and those visits were as a spectator.

After delivering one of the most surprising tennis re-sults in recent years, Rus ac-knowledged she was nervous at the outset, perhaps because Clijsters is one of her favorite players, someone she used to cheer for when watching on TV.

"She obviously started building up more confi-dence, started playing a lot better, and was really kind of putting me on my back foot all the time," Clijsters said. "I couldn't really play my ag-gressive tennis anymore in that third set."

A similar scenario played out later in that stadium Thursday, except it was the heavy favorite, three-time major champion Maria Sharapova, who appeared to be down and out against an inexperienced kid, 17-year-old French wild-card entry Caroline Garcia, before reel-ing off the final 11 games to win 3-6, 6-4, 6-0.

"Look," the seventh-seed-ed Sharapova said, "it could have easily gone the other way."

She said she had trouble dealing with wind that gust-ed at upward of 20 mph, making the balls move unex-pectedly at times and occa-sionally kicking up clouds of loose clay into players' eyes.

Those conditions led to this bon mot from Rafael Nadal: "If you play good, seems like much less wind. If you are playing bad, seems like a hurricane."

three-time winner Helio Castroneves to defending champ Dario Franchitti to unlikely pole-sitter Alex Tagliani — enough to give this still-struggling sport a stern slap to the face when it comes to that lingering ad-diction known as Danica-Mania?

Well, they better be.

She's just about out the door. It's time for IndyCar to show it can stand on its own.

"If the sport is going to have to depend on one indi-vidual," Mario Andretti said Thursday, "we're in deep trouble."

Despite Patrick's persistent claims that she's made no decision on her racing fu-ture, we all know she'll be rubbing fenders full time with the good ol' boys in 2012. There's just too much money to pass up, too much media exposure for her sponsors to ignore. Whether she's ready or not is beside the point. This sport is as much about selling yourself as winning races — "we work in advertising," Tony Kanaan quipped — and no one is better at that than Danica.

Although NASCAR has experienced its own prob-lems in the economic downturn, it's still the hottest thing on four wheels in this country. To carry the Danica brand to the next level, Patrick surely will leave the open-wheelers behind.

For the record, she again denied reports that she al-ready has a tentative deal in place to move to the Sprint Cup series next year. She even had a little fun with it. When some-one suggested she'd have to move from Scottsdale, Ariz., to the NASCAR hotbed of Charlotte, N.C., Patrick said, "They have that red clay there, don't they? That would get my shoes dirty, and I have a lot of nice shoes."

Of course, this decision will be about pedals, not pumps. Many people around the IndyCar garage already speak of Patrick in the past tense, no more per-suaded by her denials than the rest of us.

"I think she's going," said Kanaan, a former teammate. "I have no doubt about that."

It might sound like heresy, but that could be a good thing for IndyCar. A very good thing. The casual fan may not realize it, but there are actually other drivers in this series. They're not too bad, either.

Lot 3 of Amended Plat of Lot “E” of Hansen Townsite, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the official plat thereof

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 436 Adeline Ave., Hansen, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Mike J. McAhren, sole and separate property, as Grantor(s) with Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc. as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded February 19, 2008, as Instrument No. 2008-003669, in the records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. The Beneficial interest of said Deed of Trust was subsequently assigned to PHH Mortgage Corporation, recorded May 13, 2011, as Instrument No. 2011-009203, in the records of said County.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows:

Monthly payments in the amount of $607.12 for the months of November 2010 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $65,735.98 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 6.0% from October 1, 2010, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“He is an expeditious man who likes to hurry his patients along; and when you have to die, he sees to that quickest in all the world.”

— Moliere

Today’s deal saw one player at the table lulled into a false sense of security. Before I spell out the details, you might care to look at all 52 cards and listen to an analysis of the play, before determining whether you might have made the same mistake.

Defending against four spades, West led a top heart, and despite his partner’s play of the queen, indicating possession of the jack in case West wanted to underlead to his partner, West simply cashed a second top heart and shifted to a trump.

Declarer took the trump king and led a spade to his jack, then led a club to the king, and drew the last trump. Now came four rounds of diamonds, ending in hand, and South exited with a low club. East won the jack and now had nothing but hearts left. That gave declarer the ruff-sluff he needed, to discard his club loser from one hand and ruff in the other.

So who did well, and who did badly? First of all, declarer deserves credit for giving both defenders a chance to err. He led clubs early enough to tempt West into flying up with the ace and losing his side’s second club trick. But he also picked his spot to persuade East to lose focus. On the first round of clubs, East needed to unblock his jack. Had he done so, West would have been able to cash his two club winners, whatever declarer did.

ANSWER: Some questions of bidding are more about partnership agreement than right or wrong. Here I believe North has shown both minors, but has almost denied extras. He could have jumped to three diamonds with modest extras, or cuebid, then bid diamonds, with a game-forcing hand. This sequence is natural but shows a minimum hand, so pass while the going is good.

Tues. - Sat. – 1 p.m.

the day before.

For Sun. & Mon.

2 p.m. Friday.

Today is Friday, May 27, the 147th day of 2011. There are 218 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights:
On May 27, 1941, amid rising world tensions, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed an "unlimited national emergency" during a radio address from the White House. The British Royal Navy sank the German battleship Bismarck off France, with a loss of some 2,000 lives, three days after the Bismarck sank the HMS Hood.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1861, Chief Justice Roger Taney, sitting as a federal circuit court judge in Baltimore, ruled that President Abraham Lincoln lacked the authority to suspend the writ of habeas corpus (Lincoln disregarded the ruling).
In 1896, 255 people were killed when a tornado struck St. Louis, Mo., and East St. Louis, Ill.

In 1911, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey was born in Wallace, S.D.; actor Vincent Price was born in St. Louis, Mo.; longtime Jerusalem mayor Teddy Kollek was born in Austria-Hungary.

In 1929, Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. married Anne Morrow in Englewood, N.J.

In 1935, the Supreme Court struck down the National Industrial Recovery Act.

In 1936, the Cunard liner RMS Queen Mary left England on its maiden voyage to New York.

In 1937, the newly completed Golden Gate Bridge connecting San Francisco and Marin County, Calif., was opened to pedestrian traffic (vehicular traffic began crossing the bridge the next day).

In 1964, independent India's first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, died.

In 1985, in Beijing, representatives of Britain and China exchanged instruments of ratification on the pact returning Hong Kong to the Chinese in 1997.

In 1993, five people were killed in a bombing at the Uffizi museum of art in Florence, Italy.

Ten years ago: Indy rookie Helio Castroneves led teammate and fellow Brazilian Gil de Ferran in a 1-2 Roger Penske finish, giving the renowned owner a triumphant return to the Indianapolis 500.

Five years ago: A 6.3-magnitude earthquake in central Indonesia killed some 5,800 people. Shiloh Nouvel Jolie-Pitt, daughter of Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie, was born in Namibia, where the family had traveled for privacy.

One year ago: On the defensive more than five weeks into the nation's worst-ever oil spill, President Barack Obama insisted his administration, not oil giant BP, was calling the shots in the still-unsuccessful response. The Senate Armed Services Committee and the full House approved measures to repeal the 1993 "don't ask, don't tell" law that allowed gay people to serve in the armed services only if they hid their sexual orientation. Activist Lori Berenson walked out of a prison in Peru after serving three-quarters of a 20-year term for aiding leftist rebels. (Under her parole, Berenson cannot leave Peru until her sentence ends in 2015, or her sentence is commuted.)

AVAILABLE FOR ADOPTION:

Our shelter is full right now. We have to get some of our doggies placed to make room for any new ones. If you have been thinking about adopting a dog please come in soon.

Mabel is a beautiful mastiff Boxer mix. She is a gentle Giant. Mabel has had some training. She knows how to sit and stay. She is probably one or two years old.

Mario is a handsome schnauzer Shitzu mix. He is solid white with black eyeliner around his eyes. Mario was relinquished to us because his owner was moving and could not take him :( He is house broken and does great with other dogs and kids.

Snapps is a 9-year-old dachshund. He is brown and is very sweet and playful. He is housebroken and does very well with dogs cats and kids. He is a mighty hunter, so no homes with chickens or water fowl. Snapps loves to snuggle in laps and give kisses.

Rowan is approx 8-mos-old. She is a female black lab. Very good with kids and other dogs. Has had first shot. She is not in the shelter, but was found by a family that would like to see her find a good home. For more information please call.

Bruno is a handsome Chesapeake mix. He is solid brown and has Chesapeake eyes. Bruno is about one-year-old. He enjoys playing with other dogs and loves to give kisses to his human friends.

Deuce is a handsome Labrador. He is middle aged, probably about 5-years-old, and is solid black. Deuce is very mild and sweet and knows how to sit and stay. He will make a nice family companion. Come meet him today.

Barkley is a cute little terrier/chihuahua mix. He has a black and tan wire-haired coat and big brown eyes. He is about one-year-old and has a big personality! Come meet him today! He will find a home quick!

Sherlock is an adult Rottweiler mix. He has the traditional black and tan markings and the broad head and shoulder. He does not have a docked tail. Sherlock does well with other dogs. He came into the shelter with his friend Watson.

Watson is an adult Rottweiler mix. He is tan and white but has a more narrow head and shoulders. His tail is not docked. Watson is so sweet and affectionate. Come meet him today.

Geneva is a cute little ferret. She is very sweet and does well with children. She has been de-scented and spayed. Geneva is free to a good home.

The adoption fee is $75 and includes spaying/neutering and the first set of vaccinations.

DEAR ABBY: While I am not from the South, many of my relatives are. They all were raised in medium to large cities, not rural areas. I'm embarrassed when they use crude terms and call their parents "Ma" and "Pa" in public. These are well-educated people, but they come across sounding like hicks and buffoons.

They think it's funny, but no one outside our family does. If someone laughs with them, it's because of embarrassment or discomfort. No one else is willing to speak up and when I try to, they make me feel like I'm a spoiled brat.

If these people were from rural areas or uneducated/uncultured I'd understand, but they're not. The sound of their "fake hickness" is like fingernails on a chalkboard! Please help.

— KEEPING IT REAL IN LAGUNA BEACH, CA.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR KEEPING IT REAL: I'm sorry that visits from your relatives are so painful for you. However, I see nothing wrong with calling one's parents "Ma" and "Pa" if those are the names they have been called all their lives. Believe me, I have heard parents called much worse.

The best advice I can offer would be for you to grow a thicker skin and, if that doesn't work, spend less time with your relatives. With your attitude, you'll be doing them a favor.

DEAR ABBY: Should I be a bridesmaid in my best friend "Carla's" ex-husband's wedding? I'm still friends with him, which is fine with Carla. I have also become quite close to his fiancée, "Jenny." We have a lot in common and have been hanging out for some time. Jenny has asked me to be in her wedding.

I haven't talked to Carla yet to see how she'd feel about it. I don't feel like she'll be completely honest with me. Would I be stabbing her in the back if I'm in the wedding? I need advice, and quick — the wedding is soon!

— FRIENDS WITH EVERYBODY

DEAR F.W.E.: Because you're concerned about Carla's reaction to your being a part of her ex-husband's wedding, you should address your question to her. My gut reaction is that if it feels to you like it could be stabbing her in the back, it might be perceived that way.

DEAR ABBY: When closing window blinds for the night, is it normal or proper to close them with the blades or slats in the upward or downward position? My wife and I disagree on this. I maintain they should be closed in the upward position. What do you or the experts say?

— IN THE DARK IN TEXAS

DEAR IN THE DARK: I have never encountered this question, so my staff and I experimented with the mini-blinds in our office, which has many windows. Tilting the slats up blocked more light than when we tilted them down. However, this is not a question of what is "normal" or "proper." It's a matter of what works best for you.

IF MAY 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are so passionate about success in some area of your life that you can almost taste it. The problem might be that during the next six to eight weeks your professional edge is a bit dull and your business sense lacks logic. Early August is the best time for an amorous adventure, no strings attached, or a family vacation that exceeds expectations. If you avoid being influenced by well meaning friends you can make solid investment decisions or business launches in late October or November.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A rags-to-riches story could go either way. Your social skills could be tested to the nth degree if someone ignores your invitation. An ability to judge what constitutes a good bargain could be lacking as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can't get money for nothing. Your set of talents won't bring you the hoped rewards today. You may be placed in a tense situation where diplomatic finesse must be brought to bear.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Bring in the clowns. The head of an enterprise can take his position too seriously and appear absurd to others. When ambition is burning brightly humor is needed or it is possible to be seen as a wet blanket.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are bored by the banal. You care little about the world's opinion or anyone else's and you prefer to travel your path in your own unique way. Fun is found at home tonight, not out and about.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You could accumulate so many personal belongings that you are tied to one place. A relationship begun now may bog you down or restrict you. This isn't a good time to make promises for the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can talk a lot about a subject, but do not always follow through. Bide your time about making a decision or a promise. This is not a great time to make major purchases even if they are on sale.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Abstinence or indulgence can make the world go round. You could receive unexpected reactions to your generous gestures. Someone may have a temporary change of heart or do an about face.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Group dynamics can be daunting. Your ambition to succeed will keep you within the good graces of a group, club or organization but you might not be able to maintain the very same position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Caution and fear prevent may prevent you from having fun. There may be a decided feeling of social climbing going on at any group gathering. You may be afraid to step into the ring tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accentuate the positive. Too many negatives can attract the very thing you do not want. This isn't the time to concentrate on what you don't want or like because that is all your subconscious hears.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your partner is just as trustworthy and faithful as you are. A passing remark might make you question your companion or suspect that something is not on the up and up. Judge others by your own behavior.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Price isn't the problem. Something cheap could be inexpensive or of dubious value. The question that faces you is whether a low price means a bargain or a scam. Better keep your money in your pocket.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
