Fewer days, but more learning?

As Shoshone schools move to four-day week, educators say plan is working in Gooding

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Three-day weekends are on the horizon for Shoshone students after the district's 2011-12 calendar was approved Thursday. The new school week was nicknamed "four plus one" by school administrators in an attempt to describe the changes headed to schools — students will receive four weekly days of instructional learning followed by a day of various activities and learning opportunities. Transportation won't be provided on Fridays, but extra tutoring and other activities will be available at the Shoshone school.

The district will save money with the change, but district chief Rob Waite said that more importantly, students will gain instructional time.

"It's not 100 percent about cost savings, but a way to meet our district's goals," he said, adding that savings will only scrape about $120,000 from next year's budget.

Costs for transportation and classified employees will be cut, but Waite said the plan will add as much as 55.25 hours of classroom instruction for middle school students over the course of the year.

BLM firefighters take annual pack test

Anticipation drives the first mile. Determination spurs the second. But it's pain that fuels the final mile.

Tuesday, U.S. Bureau of Land Management firefighters participated in the agency's annual physical fitness test — completing three miles around the College of Southern Idaho campus in less than 45 minutes while wearing a 45-pound vest.

"All you can think about is finishing," said Arie Blom, a BLM engine operator from Bellevue. This year marked his sixth time participating in the pack test.

No matter how many times a person completes the course, the pain never really goes away, he said. For some, the pain is in their shoulders, visible Tuesday when they lifted their packs a few inches off their shoulders while they walked the final mile.

For others, the pain is in their legs.

"It's all about bending your knees to take the blunt of the force off your calves," Blom said. "You may even have to walk on the grass."

Jerome Co. takes next jail step

Commissioners vote to pursue smaller facility

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Jerome County's fourth attempt at wooing voters to pass a bond issue for a new jail has something different going for it this time: size.

County commissioners on Tuesday decided they want to shape the November vote around a 120-bed facility. That's substantially smaller than previous attempts stretching back to 2009, when the county first sought money for a 165-bed lockup to replace its aging, crowded 30-bed jail.

County leaders also agreed to start negotiating with Ormond Builders Inc., an Idaho Falls construction firm, for an agreement that would cover the preliminary work needed to put together a fourth proposal. That work will include help with deciding a site for the new jail and coming up with a cost for the bond, which rough estimates have put at $8 million to $11 million. The Ormond agreement won't cover the actual jail construction itself, which will need to be selected separately.

See JAIL, Main 2

Fourth try

Jerome County has sought for several years to replace its existing jail, which officials say is overcrowded and falling apart. After voters failed thrice to approve tax money for a new facility, the county plans another try with a bond issue vote this fall.

What's next: County commissioners will begin negotiating with Ormond Builders, an Idaho Falls construction firm, for an agreement to provide preliminary work for the bond proposal. Once an agreement is finalized, ideally by mid-June, the company can begin working on details like the cost and site for the new facility. The county will need to have its bond cost decided by September so the proposal can go on the November ballot.

If you haven't been voting, you're running out of time to show support for your favorite local businesses! Pick your favorite local band, the best local sandwich or best place to get a cup of coffee. The voting ends at noon on Friday, and you can only vote once per day.

Schools again provide chance to grab a bite

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

With the school year winding down, children who rely on school districts to provide a daily lunch can again take advantage of a free lunch program.

More than 43 locations across south-central Idaho — as far west as Glenns Ferry, east to Mini-Cassia and up north in Hailey — are participating in the Simplified Summer Food Program, with many starting service on June 6.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Idaho State Department of Education's joint program helps local sponsors offer breakfast, lunch or both for a limited time during June and July, allowing kids up to age 18 to have a free, nutritious meal.

The USDA estimates that it spent $359 million of federal money in 2010 to fund summer lunch programs across the country, which bought nearly 134 million meals at an average of $2.70 per meal. About 1.3 million meals were served in Idaho that year, accounting for $3.5 million of federal spending.

The demand for summer meals is growing at a rapid pace in the Gem State. A USDA study shows the average daily attendance for summer lunches across Idaho has grown from 16,900 in 2007 to 21,365 in 2010, a 26.4 percent increase in less than five years. Idaho's demand for free summer lunches has surpassed the national average. Across the U.S., the average number served has grown 20.5 percent, from 1.9 million in 2007 to 2.3 million in 2010. There are 312 serving locations across the state, mostly in schools, with Ada and Canyon counties accounting for 151 locations.

No cause determined in ‘suspicious’ Jerome fire

Times-News

A Monday evening fire that completely destroyed a mobile home was “suspicious,” according to Jerome City Fire Chief Mike Hatfield.

But investigators have not been able to determine how it started because of the amount of destruction, he said Tuesday morning.

One engine and nine city firefighters responded to the blaze, on Birch Street north of Eighth Avenue, shortly after 7 p.m. The mobile home was abandoned, had been stored in an empty lot for some time and no one was injured in the fire, Hatfield said.

The structure was uninsured and of very little value, according to what its owners told firefighters, Hatfield said.

It had been vandalized in the past.

Jerome’s rural fire department provided backup staffing for the fire.

Test

Blom doesn’t use lucky pieces of clothing or perform any pre-course traditions to get through the test. To him, it’s just about drinking water and focusing on finishing.

“The first time I was out there, I was nervous. I wasn’t sure I was going to finish,” he said. “I was awkward about my form, too.”

Almost 100 new and seasoned firefighters participated in this year’s Twin Falls “pack test fest,” said Serrah West, an engine captain for the BLM Twin Falls District.

The BLM split up the firefighters into three different meets. Though told they could only walk during the course, many jogged throughout certain parts of it to get it over faster.

“This is the one physical test you have to pass to be a firefighter for the BLM,” West said. “But it’s also something firefighters have to pass every year.”

Blom finished second this year in his meet, with a time of 32:31. However, he was quick to point out it wasn’t his best time. The second pack test he participated in, he finished at 31:30.

“I guess I was in better shape then,” Blom said.

the event, waiting for the test to begin can be the worst part.

“I was nervous at the beginning of the course,” said Lacey Kniep, a BLM fuels crew member. “I just didn’t want to look, like, pathetic in front of my crew.”

While growing up, Kniep developed an interest in firefighting by observing the firefighters in her hometown of Shoshone.

“It’s important to be able to finish this because you need to be able to demonstrate to your crew that you can handle carrying weight or be up for a physical challenge,” she said.

After completing the course, rookie firefighters’ next stop is fire school in the Sawtooths to train to become wildland firefighters.

Jail

Though there’s still plenty of work ahead before November’s election, Commission Chairman Charlie Howell said he’s confident a proposal with specifics will be ready.

Once the county has an agreement finalized with Ormond — ideally by mid-June — the county will have until September to finish its bond proposal.

“We feel like we’re within our timeline,” Howell said, adding that presentations from different firms have brought helpful ideas, such as putting in high-quality insulation to save in utility costs.

Howell said the decision to pare down the jail’s size is in response to feedback from residents.

The reduced size means that the county won’t rely on money from renting out cells to federal agencies to help pay for the jail.

“We’re not banking on that,” said Sheriff Doug McFall. “The plan is the bond will pay to build the facility, and the ongoing county budget will continue to run the facility and staff it.”

McFall said the reduced size is as low as the county can go in planning a large enough facility that’s worth the long-term investment.

“We can also hopefully design a facility where it could be expanded as needed in the future,” he said.

Are you a back-patting hugger too?

I’m of Swedish extraction, and like all Scandinavians we have a hard time embracing humanity.

It’s not that we’re aloof, exactly; just fumbling. A Swede has all the natural physical grace of a roller-skating buffalo.

Other folks are much more at ease with a hug — the Spanish and the Italians, for example. They even have words for a hug — abrazo in Spanish, abbraccio in Italian — that don’t have exact equivalents in English. The Italian word abbraccione, which translates as “big hug,” describes an experience closer to being adopted than being embraced.

But we Swedes hang back with our hands in our pockets, and when a hug becomes unavoidable, we make a pig’s breakfast of it. Inevitably, we end up patting the recipient of the hug on the back as if he or she had swallowed a steakbone.

DON’T
ASK ME

The back-pat, Swedish-style, is a reflex, not an expression of affection. I’ve resolved many times not to do it, but I can’t help myself.

And I’m not alone. My wife and I were sitting in a Boise restaurant recently where there was a large dinner party going on nearby.

People kept coming and going, and with wine flowing freely, there was much hugging.

I’d say that nine-tenths of those hugs were accompanied by pats on the back.

I asked a friend who’s a clinical psychologist about the reasons for all that back-patting. She explained that it’s a distancing device designed to demonstrate there are no sexual overtones to the embrace.

Yet I’ve seen my Italian relatives — my 250-pound, seventy-something Aunt Celia comes to mind — engulf perfect strangers in a public embrace that would get her arrested in Utah.

And in the course of these greetings, never once have I seen her pat anybody’s back.

I was pretty well resigned to accepting my limitations as a hugger until recently, when I saw the movie “Wild Strawberries” on cable TV. Directed by Swedish filmmaker Ingmar Bergman in the 1950s, it’s the story of an aging college professor striving to come to terms with his past.

The professor goes to visit his aged mother, who has one foot on the platform and the other on the running board of the hearse. He hasn’t seen her for a while, so the professor steps forward and warmly ... shakes her hand.

That’s a Swede for you, and that’s just wrong.

So the next friend I encountered, I resolved to wade right in with an abbraccione.

Worked out great until we accidentally bumped heads in the process. Didn’t pat his back, though.

I was too busy trying to find an ice pack for his eye.

T.F. hospital receives $1M rehab grant

Times-News

St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center has received a $1 million grant that will go toward furthering services at the Twin Falls hospital’s new rehabilitation center.

The Craig H. Neilsen Foundation, a private paralysis research foundation named for the longtime Ameristar Casinos Inc. chairman and CEO, donated the money to the hospital’s Gwen Neilsen Anderson Rehabilitation Center, which offers physical, speech and occupational therapy services.

“This is an incredibly generous donation and is the largest contribution ever given to enhance health care in the Magic Valley,” St. Luke’s Magic Valley Health Foundation Executive Director Larry Baxter said in a written statement. “This gift will truly transform the lives of those in need of rehabilitation.”

The donation will help local patients particularly, allowing them to remain in the area when receiving treatment instead of forcing them to travel, said Dr. Jonathan Myers, the medical director for rehabilitation services at St. Luke’s Magic Valley.

“This donation will support a new state-of-the-art rehabilitation center and will be life-changing for patients recovering from spinal cord injuries, strokes, brain injury and other physical impairments,” Myers said.

The new rehab center includes a therapeutic gym, a private assisted-dining area for speech and swallow therapy patients, 14 patient rooms, and a full scale “simulated apartment” for patients practicing everyday activities before they return home.

The center is named after Craig Neilsen’s mother, Gwen, a longtime Twin Falls resident.

According to the National Conference of State Legislatures, Shoshone is among the growing number of school districts across the U.S. that have moved or are moving toward a four-day school week. More than 120 school districts in 20 states currently operate on a four-day week, and more districts are eyeing it as an option as they sort out shrinking budgets.

Four-day school weeks aren’t new in south-central Idaho, either. Three Creek and Gooding school districts both participate in the realignment of time and education, and while the move includes both benefits and drawbacks, Gooding School District Superintendent Heather Williams said it has worked well for her schools.

Williams said that in 2009-10, the district’s first year with the new format, student attendance increased and teachers took fewer days off. That reduced costs for substitute teachers.

Williams also attributes school days that are about 40 minutes longer to better test scores. The district hit its Adequate Yearly Progress mark for the first time last year, as Gooding students

BY THE NUMBERS

Gooding School District Superintendent Heather Williams said moving to a four-day school week in 2009 has helped Gooding schools trim costs in a number of ways. Among them in 2009-10:

- $60,000 transportation savings
- $52,000 utility savings
- $30,025 in reduced staff leave
- $93,535 in additional state funding by increasing average daily attendance by 5 percent beat state averages in language, reading and math proficiency in the Idaho Standards Achievement Test.

The new calendar is working, Williams said, but community support has made the difference.

When Gooding educators started discussing dropping Friday classes two years ago, a variety of Gooding institutions gathered to discuss options for students who would need somewhere to go on Fridays. From the public library and the College of Southern Idaho North Side Center to churches and the Boy Scouts of America, various organizations have provided new options for students who need positive activities.

For Gooding School Board Chairwoman Tracie Anderson, a stay-at-home mother of three young children, the longer weekends have been what she calls a “nice balance.”

“It was easy. I love it and my kids love it. We spend more time together as a family,” she said. “I didn’t see any test score problems. Ninety percent of parents seem to really like it and everyone has found a way that works for them. The day cares have adjusted to work with people too.”

The change also lengthened class periods to 70 minutes in Gooding, which seventh-grade language arts teacher Janet Dotson said creates a more efficient environment for teachers and students.

“I teach harder, I really do,” she said. “You have to be smarter about everything. Those 70-minute classes make so much more sense for teaching and for kids. It makes us teach better lessons and be more innovative in the classroom.”

Scott Rogers, Minidoka County School District superintendent, said a district’s choice to move to four-day weeks is individualized and may work well for smaller, rural school districts. But he said schools shouldn’t move toward longer weekends if saving money is the main goal.

“You better do it because it philosophically fits the needs of your school like a glove,” he said, adding that cost savings for utilities are low and most savings comes from cutting hours of classified employees like paraprofessionals, custodians and bus drivers. His district will continue to operate on a traditional school week next year.

“It’s a very slippery slope,” he said of the change. “I have to ask myself if it would be good for the community if those employees lost wages.”

Williams said that the change added more than 100 hours of instructional time in Gooding, and she would recommend the four-day schedule to other districts if their communities back it.

“It really takes the whole community,” she said. “It allows us to think of time differently. Usually we think of time as the constant and learning as the variable, but this allows us to think of learning as the constant and time as the variable.”

ISP aims for safe summer travel

Emphasis patrols increase during peak travel times

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

JEROME — As the weather warms, southern Idaho motorists shouldn't be surprised to see an increased police presence on Idaho's highways.

Idaho State Police and the Idaho Transportation Department's continued partnership to combat aggressive driving and other unsafe practices is hitting high gear in the summer. Locally, ISP Trooper Tyler Barrett of Burley is counted among the officers currently cracking down on folks who go too fast — and those who neglect to wear their seat belts while doing so.

"We are pulling more people over for speeding, following too close, unsafe lane changes, anything that could be considered aggressive or distracted driving," he said. "With the warm weather people are complacent and have a lack of attention on their driving."

ISP will concentrate efforts by placing multiple officers in one area — especially flat, straight sections of interstate and construction zones — where speeding is common. And as anyone who's been pulled over for going too fast through a construction zone can attest, fines there are double.

"Everyone speeds, but

ISP SAYS 'BUCKLE UP'

Idaho State Police across the state are conducting seat belt emphasis patrols through Tuesday. According to ISP statistics for south-central Idaho:

- 19 of 31 (61 percent) vehicle occupants killed in Region 4 in 2009 were unrestrained
- 55 of 162 (34 percent) vehicle occupants injured were unrestrained
- From 2008-10, 32 percent of all fatalities and 21 percent of all serious injuries resulted from speed-related crashes

most of the time it's not intentional," Barrett said. "The most common thing people say when I ask them how fast

they were going is 'I don't know!'"

ISP is also conducting emphasis patrols through Tuesday to curb the number of Idahoans who drive while unrestrained. While troopers can't pull a driver over simply for not wearing a seat belt, Barrett said he makes sure to educate drivers about their importance.

"The number of deaths in highway car crashes could be cut in half if we could get everyone to wear their seat belts," he said.

Officers concerned about their safety and the safety of others who are pulled over on Idaho's interstates and highways are also spreading the word that drivers are required to slow down and move into the farthest left lane possible when emergency vehicles are stopped along the right side of a road.

"My biggest fear is being hit by a car while I'm issuing a citation," Barrett said.

As Idahoans take to the roads in busy summer travel months, Barrett reminds drivers to buckle up, drive at safe speeds and keep those distractions like cellphones and road snacks out of their driving habits.

Eva Stutzman can be reached at estutzman@magicvalley.com or 735-3288.

New charges filed in T.F. bank robbery case

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The man accused of robbing two Twin Falls banks this winter pleaded not guilty to the hold-ups on Tuesday morning.

Nicholas Sites, 26, entered his plea in 5th District Court in front of Judge Randy Stoker, who set a trial date of Aug. 23. The trial is scheduled to last four days. Twin Falls County grand jurors indicted Sites on five counts of felony robbery and one count of felony aggravated assault, all with a weapons enhancement. He faces a maximum life sentence if convicted on even one count.

According to a police report that accompanied the two initial charges of robbery, Sites was arrested in late April during a traffic stop that allegedly turned up a pack of $20 bills with a hole in the center, typically used by banks to house dye packs or tracking devices. Sites is also claimed to have bragged about robbing the U.S. Bank on Blue Lakes Boulevard in December and the First Federal Savings Bank on Falls Avenue in January to another Twin Falls County Jail inmate.

Police also allege that a search of Sites' residence and vehicle turned up a pistol and clothing matching the description of the heists' suspect.

Filer man pleads guilty in shooting spree

A 19-year-old Filer man faces up to five years in prison for putting bullet holes in cars parked in a Twin Falls neighborhood.

Kristofer Hass pleaded guilty to one count of felony malicious injury to property on Tuesday morning in 5th District Court, while four remaining counts of malicious injury were dropped. He was initially charged in March with unlawful discharge of a firearm.

On March 6, witnesses reported multiple gunshots fired at the 1500 block of Vista Circle, not long after Hass and three other men were asked to leave a party there. No one was injured in the shooting.

Upon questioning, Hass told police he fired 18 to 25 rounds in a drive-by shooting, purposely aiming for cars and other property but not people. A search of the vehicle turned up a 9 mm bullet casing, and police found two guns, one a 9 mm semiautomatic pistol, in the safe of his father's business.

Sentencing is set for Aug. 8, but Hass was released on his own recognizance on Tuesday.

Police charge rape case witness

Twin Falls County sheriff's detectives say a witness in a recent rape case is engaging in felony intimidation.

Colby Redgrave, 21, is charged with two counts of witness intimidation because of alleged threats made to a 19-year-old female who has accused Jason Ward, 35, of rape.

Ward was arrested and charged last week in 5th District Court on felony rape.

The police report claims that Redgrave sent text messages to the alleged victim and family members despite being warned by detectives not to contact them. The messages contained vulgar slurs and claims that authorities don't have a case against Ward.

Redgrave was arrested after detectives were notified of the messages. He is held at Twin Falls County Jail on $50,000 bond.

T.F. announces road closures for parade

The city of Twin Falls will close a number of roads on Saturday morning for the annual Western Days Parade.

Falls Avenue will be closed from Blue Lakes Boulevard to Harrison Street from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. for staging. The parade route will begin on Falls Avenue at Frontier Road and head east, then turn south onto Blue Lakes Boulevard North. The route will head southwest on Shoshone Street and end at Second Avenue South.

The parade is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Motorists traveling in Twin Falls during this time should use other thoroughfares, such as Eastland Drive or Washington Street to drive north and south, or Pole Line Road or Kimberly Road to go east and west.

Calvillo changes plea after re-capture

A Twin Falls man who skipped his jury trial last year has changed his plea to guilty following his re-capture.

Valentin Calvillo, 50, was scheduled for a July sentencing last week in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

He was set to face trial in November on eight counts of lewd conduct with a minor under 16 and two counts of sexual abuse of a minor under 16, but he never showed, prompting Judge G. Richard Bevan to issue a $2 million warrant for his arrest. Calvillo was taken back into custody a few weeks ago after being extradited from San Diego County in California.

Calvillo was accused of having inappropriate contact with a 10-year-old girl multiple times in 2010. A grand jury handed down an indictment last June. Sentencing is set for July 18.

Time to take risk to T.F. pedestrians seriously

Statistically, Idaho is one of the safest places in America to walk down the street or ride a bike, according to a just-released study by the nonprofit group Transportation for America. But that doesn't mean every place in Idaho is so secure for pedestrians and cyclists.

Between 2000 and 2009, 13 pedestrians were killed in Twin Falls County — the second-highest total in the state. By contrast, in Canyon County — with 2 1/2 times more people — 11 walkers died. Those 13 deaths represented 10.2 percent of all traffic fatalities in Twin Falls County for that period.

Our view: Transportation safety in Twin Falls County doesn't end with cars, trucks, SUVs and motorcycles. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

That's too much. Twin Falls is not an especially pedestrian-friendly place, largely because the city's infrastructure is designed to move vehicles, not people. There are lots of multi-lane ribbons of concrete with too few controlled crossing zones.

And the farther you move away from the city's center, the fewer sideways — and the greater the prospect that pedestrians will be walking on the roadway.

Statistically, Cassia County had seven pedestrian deaths in 10 years — which by Idaho standards is high for a county with 22,000 population. But Burley is safer than Twin Falls because of fewer congested main arterials and lower speed limits in areas pedestrians tend to use.

In November, the Twin Falls City Council formed a subcommittee to research pedestrian- and bicycle-friendly upgrades for any future road work, making the harassment of a pedestrian or bicyclist a misdemeanor crime and forming more right-of-way ordinances. The council should make all of those goals priorities.

Because the more Twin Falls grows, the greater the peril to pedestrians and cyclists.

And that danger is already all too real.

A silver lining to housing bust

If you're a 20-something or even younger, your economic future is at best clouded. Your taxes will almost certainly be higher than today's; your public services will almost certainly be lower. Paying for old people, covering rising health-care costs, repairing dilapidated roads and servicing government pensions and the huge federal debt will squeeze take-home pay. Is there any hope for economic gains?

Well, yes — and from a surprising source. Housing. Say what?

Almost everyone considers the housing collapse a disaster, and it is. Since 2007, roughly 8 million homes have gone into foreclosure. Housing prices, according to the widely cited Case-Shiller index, are down about 33 percent from their 2006 peaks. They're still falling, albeit at a slower pace. In some cities, they're at or below 2000 levels. Home sales are stunted, and construction is a quarter of its previous peak. Housing's implosion retards the economic recovery. Aside from unemployed carpenters and real estate agents, there's much unsold lumber, carpet and appliances.

But housing's troubles may have a silver lining. If you're a homeowner, the steep fall in prices is calamitous. But if you're a future buyer, it's a godsend. What we're seeing is a massive wealth transfer from today's older homeowners to tomorrow's younger homeowners. From year-end 2006 to 2010, housing values fell $6.3 trillion, reports the Federal Reserve. Assuming there's no sharp rebound in prices that's $6.3 trillion the young won't pay.

Up to a point, the lower home prices merely deflate the artificial “bubble.” But there's evidence that the declines transcend that. The National Association of Realtors routinely publishes a housing “affordability” index, which judges the ability of median families to buy the median-price home at prevailing interest rates. By this measure, existing homes are the most affordable since the index started in 1970.

Young buyers “will be able to enter the housing market at bargain prices,” argues NAR economist Lawrence

Robert Samuelson

Yun. When home prices again rise, increases will parallel income gains, meaning that the relative burden of housing costs will remain roughly stable, Yun says. He expects only modest increases in interest rates.

Falling real estate prices have also affected new homes. They're getting smaller and less embellished, as they must. New homes typically sell at a 10 to 20 percent premium over comparable existing homes. If prices don't fall, buyers won't buy. From 1973 to 2007, the size of the average new home grew by about 50 percent, from 1,660 square feet to 2,521 square feet. By 2009, that was 2,438 square feet, with more declines expected.

“People have become much more value oriented,” says Jeff Mezger, chief executive of KB Home, a major builder. At the height of the boom, with cheap mortgage credit widely available, over-confident buyers selected five-bedroom homes with Jacuzzis and granite-top kitchen counters, he says. Now, buyers favor practical amenities: more kitchen cabinets and bigger closets.

“What we're seeing is a massive wealth transfer from today's older homeowners to tomorrow's younger homeowners. From year-end 2006 to 2010, housing values fell $6.3 trillion, reports the Federal Reserve. Assuming there's no sharp rebound in prices that's $6.3 trillion the young won't pay.”

We are, perhaps, at a historic juncture. The relentless expansion of home size since World War II — encouraged by federal subsidies, including the mortgage-interest tax deduction — arguably resulted in many Americans being “overhoused.” Homes grew beyond what was “needed” or could even be enjoyed. The reason they kept expanding, Cornell economist Robert Frank has argued, was social competition. People want to be in the “best” neighborhoods with the “best” schools, and these neighborhoods have ever-larger homes. Somewhat smaller homes, Frank contends, won't make people less happy.

If the housing collapse mutes this self-defeating syndrome, the main beneficiaries will be today's young. Their homes will be somewhat cheaper and smaller; their operating costs will be somewhat lower. The sacrifices in living standards will be barely noticeable, and the savings — housing, after all, represents most families' largest expense — will provide some relief from higher taxes and health costs.

Caveats apply. Housing markets are famously local; what's true in one won't be true in another. Moreover, the housing bust still looms large. The young are staying or returning home; new household formations are less than half of previous levels. Mortgage credit is constricted. Private lenders, once promiscuous with loans, are now prudish. Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac are in a state of transition — to what, no one knows. The price adjustment, especially for new homes, is incomplete. Unless these problems are overcome, housing construction will remain depressed. Eventually, the scarcity of homes would push prices up.

But crises pass and have unintended consequences. The young just might catch a much-needed break from this one.

Newsweek columnist Robert Samuelson writes about economics.

Foundation gift comes at convenient time

My mother used to remind me that timing is everything in life. That phrase came back to me with a new emphasis as I read today's (May 24) editorial. It seems that the Albertson Foundation has come to the rescue with a generous donation of $21 million to the state of Idaho, ostensibly to “help equip classrooms with state-of-the-art classroom tools.”

My immediate response is to point out the convenient timing of such a gift to help implement Mr. Luna's legislation for which the state's teachers' association is pushing a referendum to rescind. And did I read somewhere that Mr. Luna has an association with the New York company that will supply the aforementioned “state-of-the-art classroom tools,” i.e., computers?

I sincerely wish to have this point clarified so that I can still believe there is some modicum of statesmanship remaining in our Department of State and additionally in the editorial staff of the Times-News publication. Money rules. Otherwise, the Albertson gift would be used ethically to help Idaho equip its classrooms with well-trained, inspired teachers who can do all of the tasks touted in the T-N editorial among which are developing lesson plans, accessing accurate data, sharing best practices, analyzing student performance and communicating with parents, all in a human arena rather than a digital network. I find this scenario to be not only cynical, but extremely uninspiring as far as learning is concerned.

Books and teachers are part of our children's way of life all of which can be enhanced by computer technology not substituted by it.

CSI grounds provide attractive exercise

Now that spring has finally arrived and you are wondering how you can lose those extra pounds gained over the winter season, I have a great suggestion for you. Have you ever been on the walking paths at CSI?

My dog, Lily, and I walk the paths every morning and discovered the other day that it purchased some new exercise equipment!

It is easy to use and gives you a good, easy workout while walking/jogging. The campus is so beautiful with a variety of trees just leafing out and some with beautiful blooms. Scattered throughout the buildings are beautiful seasonal flowers and the fountain and rose garden.

Getting out and walking the paths you will see what a great job the grounds keepers and Randy Dill have done for CSI.

A ban on circumcision? Only in San Francisco

On the ballot in San Francisco this fall will be a proposal making it a crime to circumcise male children. If the measure passes, anyone convicted of circumcising a baby boy could be fined up to $1,000 and sentenced to a year in prison. Even for San Francisco, this is madness.

According to the federal Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, U.S. hospitals perform the procedure more than 1.2 million times each year. While circumcision rates have declined in recent years, the great majority of American men are circumcised. And in nearly every case, the decision was made for them in their infancy by their parents — just like the decision to breastfeed or bottle-feed, or to use cloth or disposable diapers. Even in the most childless major city in America, it's hard to see voters approving what would be an egregious infringement on parental rights.

The health benefits of circumcision are clear, if modest. The Mayo Clinic website reflects the medical consensus, noting that circumcised men and boys generally have a lower risk of urinary tract infections, penile cancer, and sexually transmitted diseases, and that circumcision makes genital hygiene easier. At the same time, Mayo endorses the view of the American Academy of Pediatrics, which doesn't consider the advantages of circumcision compelling enough to recommend that infant boys be circumcised as a matter of routine. The academy's bottom line is common-sensical: "Because circumcision is not essential to a child's health, parents should choose what is best for their child by looking at the benefits and risks."

In short, circumcision is something about which reasonable people can disagree. But there is nothing reasonable about the fanatics trying to make it a crime.

The ballot campaign in

Jeff Jacoby

San Francisco is being spearheaded by a group of self-described "intactivists," political crusaders obsessed with the preservation of foreskins. Their mania might be laughable if not for two things: (1) they hijack terminology used to describe a dreadful type of violence against girls and women, and (2) they are attempting to criminalize a fundamental rite of Judaism.

Promoters of the San Francisco initiative call it the "MGM bill." The initials stand for "male genital mutilation," a dishonest phrase meant to link the safe and medically unobjectionable procedure of male circumcision with the frightful cruelty of female genital mutilation.

The two are not remotely comparable. "Female genital mutilation has no known health benefits," the World Health Organization and nine other international organizations stressed in a 2008 report on the scourge, which persists in much of Africa and the Middle East. "On the contrary, it is known to be harmful to girls and women in many ways." It is painful and traumatic; it makes childbearing "significantly" more risky; and it leads to higher rates of postpartum hemorrhaging and infant death.

By contrast, the WHO report emphasizes, "male circumcision has significant health benefits that outweigh the very low risk of complications." Of particular importance in regions ravaged by AIDS, "circumcision has been shown to lower men's risk for HIV acquisition by about 60 percent." Precisely because circumcision is benign, WHO and the other agencies are at pains to distinguish it from female mutilation, which is always dangerous.

Dangerous in quite a different way is the San Francisco initiative's assault on Jewish religious liberty. Circumcision is the oldest practice of the world's oldest religion. Irrespective of any medical value, it is the sign in the flesh that for nearly 4,000 years has marked Jewish males as heirs to the ancient pact between Abraham and God. Many Muslims also circumcise their sons for religious reasons.

But the law proposed by the "intactivists" radiates hostility to traditional religious belief: "No account shall be taken of the effect on the person on whom the operation is to be performed of any belief on the part of that or any other person that the operation is required as a matter of custom or ritual."

The campaign for a law banning the most enduring obligation in Jewish experience amounts to what the American Jewish Committee calls a "direct assault on Jewish religious practice in the United States ... unprecedented in American Jewish life."

Fortunately, even in California, most ballot issues are rejected. When San Franciscans vote this fall, the disgraceful anti-circumcision initiative deserves a decisive defeat.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Local Dish announces immediate closure

James and Leslee Reed announced Tuesday that their store, Local Dish, at 788 Falls Ave. in Twin Falls, is closing. Tuesday was the store's last day of business.

The couple, from Hagerman, have ran the market since last summer.

"Leslee and I think Twin Falls is ready to support a store like this but we were under capitalized to see it through," said James Reed, adding that the couple had the vision for opening the store but weren't "natural restaurateurs."

Reed said they had no choice but to close, and they didn't come to the decision lightly.

Besides the Reeds, the business had two full-time and two part-time employees. The couple invested over $100,000 to get the business going, including remodeling the market's retail space and purchasing kitchen equipment and inventory.

Bank raises more than $3,000 for Shriners

Last week, employees of Farmers National Bank, which has six area branches, participated in a fundraising effort for the Shriners Patient Travel Fund.

Lee Cline, vice president cashier at the bank's Buhl branch, reported that $3,390.30 was raised for the fund.

Cline said employees, including the bank's matching fund, brought in $2,232 and customer contributions totaled $1,158.30.

"Day to day we have about 95 employees throughout all of our branches, and they all participated in the effort," Cline said.

Employees donated money in order to wear casual clothing, each day sporting their favorite high school football team jerseys.

The bank also raised awareness for Tuesday's Shrine All-Star Football Game at Twin Falls High School.

The Shriner organization has a 22-hospital strong health care system dedicated to improving the lives of children by providing specialty care, research and teach programs for medical professionals and provides care regardless of the patients' ability to pay.

"All of the money raised will help children from our communities that need care be transported to and from a Shriner hospital," Lee said.

New dairy planned for Minidoka County

Minidoka County officials approved building permits on March 16 for the proposed Hansen Quality Jersey dairy farm owned by John Hansen.

The dairy, which will house jersey cows, will be built at 347 E Highway 24 outside of Rupert. The approval process began in May 2009. There were public hearings to approve the dairy in August and September 2009.

The dairy recently received approval to build a $510,000 dairy barn and $691,900 pole buildings that will house about 5,100 animals. Minidoka County will oversee the inspection process that goes along with the building of the dairy barn.

The owners of the proposed dairy declined to comment.

Idaho cattle, calves on feed rise 10 percent

Cattle and calves on feed for the slaughter market in Idaho from feedlots with a capacity of 1,000 or more head on May 1 totaled 230,000 head, up 10 percent from the previous year, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service.

The cattle on feed inventory is up 5 percent from April 1. Placements of cattle in feedlots with a capacity of 1,000 or more head during April totaled 34,000 head, up 7,000 head from April 2010 placements. Marketings of cattle from feedlots with 1,000 head or more during April totaled 23,000 head, up 2,000 head from a year ago. Other disappearance totaled 1,000 head during April.

Cattle and calves on feed for slaughter market in the United States for feedlots with capacity of 1,000 or more head totaled 11.2 million head on May 1.

KETCHUM — Atkinsons' Market in Ketchum is about to get some competition for the first time in six years.

Roxy's Market will open Friday on the corner of Main and First streets across from the nexStage Theatre. Remodeling delays postponed the opening from March.

Roxy's will occupy the remodeled building that used to be Williams Market, which closed in 2005. It will have 12,000 feet of retail space and carry 12,000 products with a heavy emphasis on organic and natural.

That includes waffle-cut sweet potatoes, garlic scallion soup, pumpkin flax granola, an array of coconut and hemp milks, micronutrient-flavored waters, breaded vegan shrimp and red cod filets, Greek yogurt, organic barbecue

"Food for me is an adventure — an opportunity to try new things. And there are a lot of great healthy snacks here that maybe people haven't seen before."

— Roxanne Lawler, co-owner of Roxy's Market, which opens Friday in Ketchum sauce, roasted yellow pepper finishing sauce and chili lime crackers.

It also will feature about 150 bulk bins offering tamari pumpkin seeds and other selections. And a full-service, meat, seafood and produce department with a deli offering prepared "grab-and-go" breakfast, lunch and dinner items.

The store is named for Roxanne Lawler, who developed the store with her husband Michael.

"We're real estate developers. And we like to build things — we're all about the projects," said Roxanne. "The food part for me is a learning process but we're going to listen to what our customers want. It's a work in progress. What you see now may not be what you see three months from now."

The couple has lived for the past 10 years in Telluride, Colo., where they operated The Market at Mountain Village. They opened a 6,000-square foot Roxy's Market in Aspen last year.

They took on the Ketchum project last year with the idea of returning full-time to a valley they lived in from 1995 to 1999.

"We look at this as an adventure. We like the people here and we have a lot of friends here from when we lived here before," Roxanne said.

Roxanne considers shopping an adventure, too. That's why, for instance, her store will offer an array of chips, including more unusual ones like Crisp Root Cassava chips, Baked Lentil chips, and Solea Polenta corn chips.

"Food for me is an adventure — an opportunity to try new things. And there are a lot of great healthy snacks here that maybe people haven't seen before," Roxanne said.

Ketchum resident Kevin Kniffen said on Tuesday that the store has been in the remodeling stage for so long that he wasn't even aware it was close to opening, especially with the garbage bin still outside the front door, but will check them out on opening day Friday.

Sherry Propst, who lives north of Ketchum, said she is delighted that a second market is opening in town: I love Atkinsons' — they do a great job. But I think that the United States of America became what it is because of good old-fashioned competition. And I welcome having more choices."

Slight boost seen in Idaho landscaping industry

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho labor officials say they are seeing modest recovery in the state's landscaping and nursery businesses, another sign the economy may be rebounding and positive news for an industry that shed nearly one-third of its jobs during the recession.

The budding growth also comes despite the slow arrival of spring, typically the busiest time of year for the industry, and a construction industry still reeling from the economic downturn.

Still, Idaho Department of Labor Economist Will Jenson said the number of lawn and garden businesses has started to creep upward for the first time since 2007, though for now mainly in south central and southeastern Idaho.

For people like Mike Blickenstaff, owner of Greenhurst Nursery & Garden in Nampa, even the slightest sign of change is welcome after suffering through what he calls the worst economic slowdown in his 40 years in the business.

"We have seen a slight increase over last year," Blickenstaff told the Idaho Business Review.

In 2007, Idaho had more than 7,100 lawn and garden jobs, according to the state Department of Labor. By 2010, it had 5,000, with most losses in south central Idaho. Landscape architect services took the largest hit, followed by the wholesalers who supply flower and nursery businesses.

While overall Idaho industries only saw employment drop 8 percent, construction lost about 40 percent of its jobs. Gardening and landscaping is closely related to the construction industry.

"We saw a lot of landscapers, for sure, disappear," Blickenstaff said. "I've never seen anything quite this severe."

In response to the long downturn, Blickenstaff, who has owned Greenhurst for 38 years, eliminated all overtime and cut an estimated 20 percent of his jobs. Like many others in the industry, Blickenstaff also cut back on retail inventory.

Yet despite some positive signs and an uptick in sales, owners are still taking a cautious approach and holding off bolstering their stock of plants, planters and other inventory to 2007 levels.

"People seem more willing to spend money," said Crickett Rudd, a horticulturist at the 35-year-old FarWest Landscape and Garden in Boise.

U.S. consumer confidence falls unexpectedly in May

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Americans are losing faith that the economy will keep improving, according to a monthly survey.

The Conference Board's Consumer Confidence Index fell to a six-month low of 60.8 from a revised 66 in April, a sign of the toll that high gas prices, a choppy job outlook and a moribund housing market are taking on people's psyches. Economists had expected an increase to 67.

"Consumers are considerably more apprehensive about future business and labor market conditions as well as their income prospects," said Lynn Franco, director of The Conference Board Consumer Research Center. She said fears of inflation that had eased in April rose again in May.

The index, released Tuesday, is still far from the reading of 90 that indicates a healthy economy. It hasn't approached that level since the recession began in December 2007.

The results paint a different picture than earlier this year, when many hoped the economic recovery was gaining steam. In February, consumer confidence hit a three-year high. But since then, consumers have started paying more for food and gasoline and are seeing a "double dip" in the housing market.

Vivian Broadhead

April 29, 1907-May 30, 2011

RUPERT — Vivian Ida Baker was born April 29, 1907, in Farmington Utah, the youngest of four children. She passed away Monday, May 30, 2011, in Rupert.

She is the mother of one daughter, Gwendolyn (now deceased), and step-mother of LaRene Broadhead Anderson (Ottis) of Rupert. She has seen 104 birthdays and celebrated many others with her posterity. She enjoyed almost any celebration: Christmas, Halloween, Fourth of July and, especially, Memorial Day (which she called Decoration Day), when she could remember loved ones and decorate their graves. It is interesting that her passing was on Memorial Day. She has always been a very considerate and positive person.

Vivian was born amid hard times, loosing her mother, Margaret Marshall, at the age of 7 while living in Midvale, Utah. This left Vivian and two slightly older siblings, Theril and Fern, to live with their father, Frank Baker, a hard-rock miner in Farmington, Utah, and to make their own way. Vivian's always, positive attitude has seen her through many difficult times, including the Dust Bowl era in Colorado, the Depression and being widowed since age 48. She has always enjoyed traveling and spent many fall seasons with her sister, Fern Blacker in Colorado. Vivian and Fern were very close, as close as any sisters could be, and they both liked to dance. Summers have always been special as she, with LaRene and Ottis, often spent two or three weeks sightseeing in the western USA. Possibly her favorite places have been Hawaii and the Black Hills of the Dakotas. Traveling and enjoying the wonders of this world have truly been a joy to her. Family, however, always came first. As part of her 100th birthday celebration, she did dance with many loved ones and friends.

She has been married twice. The first marriage in 1922 at age 15 was to Otto Renzelman in Wray, Colo. That union produced one daughter, Gwendolyn Fern (now deceased), who married Rino Grisenti. Vivian has one grandson, Jim Grisenti with wife, Deanna of Jackson, Idaho; three great-grandchildren, Mike, Teena and Nancy; and ten great-great-grandchildren. The second marriage was to Earl Broadhead in 1944, the love of her life, her joy, her happiness, her everything. She loved him deeply at first sight. Earl brought to this marriage a son, Glen; and a daughter, LaRene, who married Ottis Anderson. By LaRene and Ottis of Rupert, Idaho, she has a multitude of family, including four grandchildren, Randy (deceased at age 15), Alicia, Kathy and Diana, and numerous great, and great-great-grandchildren. By Glen Broadhead and Irene, she has another multitude of family, including three grandchildren, Jerry, Richard (Dick) (deceased) and Lynn; and great and great-great-grandchildren.

Vivian and Earl lived on a ranch near Salmon, Idaho, which was, for Vivian, the happiest days of her very positive life. They lived on a creek, and she could stand on her back doorstep and catch fish for breakfast. Earl was a sheep man and rancher. The farmstead included the station and barns of an old stagecoach stop. However, it did not include electric or phone lines. When Earl died in 1955, Vivian tried to keep the ranch, but it was simply too much for her, so she eventually sold it and moved into the town of Salmon.

Her daughter, Gwendolyn, moved to Salmon in 1957, and they shared a home off and on for about 30 years. Later in life (about age 80), Vivian began spending half of each year with Gwendolyn in Montana and the other half with LaRene in Rupert. She has recently lived with LaRene and Ottis, and with Jim and Deanna, and finished her stay in this wonderful world residing at Autumn Haven in Rupert and Country Side Living in Rupert. Vivian has lived in many Idaho farming communities, Acequia, Hazelton, Shoshone, Rupert and Salmon, and also in the states of Utah, Colorado and Montana. Life has been wonderful with many memorable experiences, including many years as the clerk of the Acequia School Board, serving with the LDS Relief Society and with the Republican Women's Association in Salmon. She has been a lifelong member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, most recently of the Acequia 1st Ward. And of course family is No. 1 in the book of lifetime memories.

One of her favorite sayings is: "I have seen the horse and buggy replaced by the automobile, which was replaced by the airplane, which was replaced by Sputnik, which was replaced by men walking on the moon, which has given way to marvelous inventions, medicine and intelligence galore. What will they think of next?"

The funeral, under the direction of Bishop Calvin Bailey of the Acequia 1st Ward, will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, June 3, at the Hansen Mortuary Chapel, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, with a viewing from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, June 2, and one hour prior to the service Friday.

Martin Robert

March 20, 1953-May 11, 2011

CHALLIS — Loved ones and friends were stunned when Challis resident Martin Robert, 58, succumbed to metastatic cancer Wednesday, May 11, 2011. He was unaware of his condition until his last few days.

He was born March 20, 1953, in Hokaido, Japan, and raised for nearly three years in an orphanage. Joseph and Helen Robert adopted him from there, brought him to the United States and raised him in a wonderful, loving home with five siblings who were also adopted by the Roberts.

Martin was a multi-talented, very driven man. By the time he graduated from high school, there were many avenues he desired to pursue. He graduated from St. Thomas University in Houston, Texas. He was raised in the Catholic faith. It seemed natural that his initial goal was to enter the priesthood; however, he abandoned that in favor of studying the culinary arts. He was tutored by Master Chef Foulard of Houston. Because of his skills in that area, he worked in several prestigious settings in different states and became well known as a chef. Many of us in Challis have been privileged to taste his creations. He loved to cook. He was gregarious and fun to be around. It made the experience all the more special.

He participated in track and field in high school. He was an avid golfer. His favorite golf companion was his father. His family reports that he was friends with Chris Everett and often played tennis with her. He played piano and said that had he have had the time, he would have loved to be a concert pianist. He loved chess and checkers and was a serious player.

In 2003, he took employment in Stanley, Idaho, at the Mountain Village Resort as a desk manager. He desired to be closer to his parents who were aging and lived in Twin Falls. He met Ruth Ann Black, who was teaching school in Challis. They courted and married in June of 2004. For the summer, they both worked in Stanley. They moved to Logan, Utah, and lived there for a few years while she taught school and he was a manager for Crystal Inn. Then they were off to Alaska for a new adventure. They were divorced in 2009, at which time he returned to Challis and had resided there since. He loved to attend high school athletic events with friends, especially wrestling matches. He was a familiar face to many of the young people. He loved to interact with them. At the time of his death, he was working in the office of the Village Inn. He was an elder in the LDS Church.

He is survived by his mother, Helen Robert of Twin Falls; and two sisters, Pauline Robert of Portland, Ore., and Josette Breaux of Sacramento, Calif.; uncles, Louis Robert, Henry Robert and Ted Feil; and godmother, Marie Burnett. He was preceded in death by his father, Joseph Paul Robert; sister, Jacinta; two brothers, Mark and Matthew; and uncle, Jack Glesener.

The family would like to thank all of those who have shown such love and concern not only to Martin but his mother and sisters during this difficult time.

A memorial service was held in Twin Falls on May 26. There will be a funeral service held in Davis, Calif., on June 24.

He also worked in the Church Employment Center and served a mission in the Boise LDS Temple. He enjoyed fishing, salmon fishing, hunting, horses, camping, bowling and visiting with friends. He loved being with his family. Norman is survived by his wife, Nona Verlee of Rupert; his children, Greg (Jean) Kerbs of Rigby, Terry (Bonnie) Kerbs of Rupert, Denise (Keith) Barnes

Lucy Augusta (Owens) Harmon

Jan. 27, 1915-May 15, 2011

Lucy Augusta (Owens) Harmon, 96, passed away Sunday, May 15, 2011, at the Twin Falls Care Center after suffering a stroke. We are saying goodbye to one known to many as "a sweet lady." She cared for everyone she met and loved her family deeply. She remembered every special event with a card, gift or money, even when it meant going without herself.

She was born Jan. 27, 1915, to Hans Rial Owens and Lucy Francis (Kidd) in what was then known as Hazel (Cassia County) Idaho as the fifth of 11 children. The family moved to Twin Falls, where she attended school. She married Elmer B. Harmon in Buhl in August of 1933. They lived, farmed and raised their children in the Buhl area.

Later as a single woman, she worked as a live-in housekeeper, motel maid, nurses aid, caregiver for mentally challenged young people. She was also involved with the Foster Grandparent Program and finally the Senior Companion Program. She was active with the Senior Companion Program until she was forced to quit due to health problems in 2010, always devoting her time to caring for and about others.

Lucy was a longtime member of the Methodist Church in Buhl and recently the Rock Creek Community Church in Twin Falls. Her religion always played an important role in her life.

She was preceded in death by her son, Elmer H. Harmon. Surviving her are a brother, Verlyn Owens (Della); daughters, Wilma Waddell and Anna Risetter; daughter-in-law, Rubie Jo Harmon; grandchildren, Scott Harmon (Kris), Becci Jo Lierman (Dave), Jeff Harmon (Cindy), Tyna Cummins (R.C.), Rick Harris (Sherry), Lori Harris, Terri Tracey (Drew), Patty Conley, Mike Budreau and Ron Budreau (Christi). She leaves 36 great-grandchildren and 19 great-great-grandchildren. In addition, there are many nieces, nephews and cousins she loved as well.

Special thanks goes to the staff at Woodstone Assisted Living for the love and care she received as a resident there. Deeply appreciated is the tender love and friendship she felt while serving as a senior companion and resident at the Twin Falls Care and Rehabilitation Center.

A celebration of Lucy's life will be held at noon Saturday, June 4, 2011, at the Rock Creek Community Church, 262 Fifth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Pastor Dale Metzger officiating. Following the funeral service, there will be a reception for family and friends in the fellowship hall. At Lucy's request, a private family graveside committal service will take place at Sunset Memorial Park. Services are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests that memorials be given in Lucy's name to the Rock Creek Community Church or a charity of your choice. Contributions may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, P.O. Box 1142, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Lorena Nicholson Wiedenman

Oct. 9, 1917-May 29, 2011

HAZELTON — Lorena Nicholson Wiedenman, 93, of Hazelton, passed away Sunday, May 29, 2011, at Bridgeview Estates in Twin Falls.

She was born on a cotton picking farm at Howe, Texas, on Oct. 9, 1917, to William Francis Nicholson and Lettie Elizabeth (Cates) Nicholson. She attended schools at Howe and Sherman, Texas, and graduated in 1936. She enlisted in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in 1942, had basic training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, and served as a personnel clerk in the Army Corps of Engineers at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. While there she was assigned to temporary duty at Army and Navy General Hospital in Hot Springs, Ark. She then went back to Fort Leonard Wood as a surgical and medical technician at the base hospital. After three years in the Women's Army Corps, she was discharged from service on points at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. For two years, she served as a supervisor in the admissions office at the Veteran's Hospital at McKinney, Texas. From there, she worked in the personnel office at Fitzsimon's General Hospital in Denver, Colo. Lorena received the American Theater Campaign Ribbon, the Good Conduct Medal, the Victory Ribbon and the WAAC Ribbon all for her devoted service in the Army. After three years there, she contracted with the Civil Service for two years to go to Japan as a classified secretary for the Far East Medical Command Headquarters in Yokohama, Japan. While in Japan, Lorena toured the Philippines and Hong Kong for two weeks on American President Lines. In July of 1953, she returned to the United States. She had met Roy Wiedenman at her sister's family farm in Kimberly and, on Oct. 24, 1953, they were married in Twin Falls. For about three years, they farmed near Jerome. With a desire for a better farm, they made applications for a farm unit opened to entry by the Minidoka Project on the North Pumping Division. In the third drawing, Wiedenman's name was drawn, after proving eligibility for the homestead, where they lived for 55 years.

Lorena enjoyed sewing, knitting, crocheting, cooking, painting and gardening. She was a member of the First Baptist Church in Paul, a member of the E-dah-ho Chapter 77 of the Order of the Eastern Star and a member of the Kosota Sagehens.

She is survived by her daughter, Patricia (Lawrence) Orleans of La Salle, Colo.; two brothers, Walter Nicholson and Elbert Nicholson; and two special grandchildren, Jasmin Orleans of Kersey, Colo., and Christopher Orleans of La Salle, Colo. She is preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Roy Wiedenman; one son, Carl Wiedenman; four brothers, Loran Nicholson, Frankie Nicholson, Lee Nicholson and Bob Nicholson; and two sisters, Anna Mae Laughlin and Bonnie Clark.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday June 3, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park" with interment to follow at Sunset Memorial Park.

High court rejects lawsuit against Ashcroft

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Tuesday threw out damage claims against former Attorney General John Ashcroft over an American Muslim's arrest, but four justices said the case raises serious questions about post-9/11 detentions under a federal law intended to make sure witnesses testify.

The justices were unanimous, 8-0, in holding that Ashcroft cannot be personally sued over his role in the arrest of Abdullah al-Kidd in 2003. The court sets a high bar for suing high-ranking officials, and all the justices agreed al-Kidd did not meet it, even though he was never charged with a crime or called to testify in the terrorism-related trial for which he ostensibly was needed.

Mexican food is a favorite in Magic Valley, but even lovers of tacos and burritos may not have ventured into the pastries that are a traditional part of the cuisine.

The treats are simple and cheap, with most cookies and rolls costing less than 50 cents. More decadent varieties, like empanadas, are still less than a dollar.

Don't be afraid to ask if you are curious about the flavors you'll find in the filled pastries. Although some of the attendants have only limited English, they are still happy to explain what goes into the cultural breads and sweet treats.

Pastries can be purchased in Mexican grocery stores, panaderias and even some Mexican video stores that also vend food products, though the bakeries generally offer the largest selections.

La Michoacana Bakery and Mexican store in Jerome has more than 20 types of baked goods, ranging from fresh breads and tortillas to cakes and dessert pastries, all baked on site. Some stores like Mi Pueblo in Buhl and Video Centro Regalos in Wendell get their fresh-baked supply every morning from one of the other bakeries in the valley.

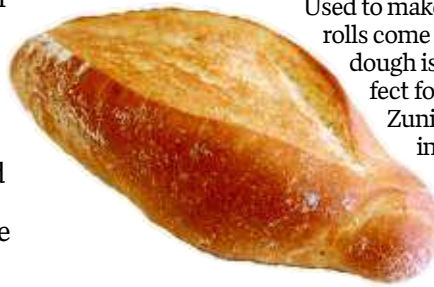

Ready to try Mexican pastries? Here's a primer on some of the most common varieties.

Conchas

With a name that means "shell" in Spanish, it's not surprising these look like something you'd find on a beach. The giant cookies are topped with a paste flavored with cinnamon, vanilla or cocoa and can be a variety of colors. Try one with coffee or milk for a sweet breakfast that is healthier than a doughnut.

Bolillos

Used to make tortas, a sandwich-like dish, these giant rolls come in rounds and narrow baguettes. The dough is slightly salty, which makes it perfect for more savory meals. Sheyla Zuniga, the manager at La Michoacana in Jerome, said the rounds are more popular than the baguettes. Local taco wagons often purchase their bolillos from local panaderias like La Michoacana.

Libros

Named for their book-like appearance, these crunchy pastries (pictured at top) are perfect for a dessert or sweet snack. They are flavored with cinnamon sugar and are crispy like a wafer. To make libros, the dough is rolled thin and brushed with sugar and butter. The baker then folds the dough four or more times and rolls it thin again, repeating the process multiple times to create the thin pages of the "book," which comes out of the oven brittle and flaky. Another Mexican cookie, oreja, uses the same ingredients but is formed to look like an ear instead of a book.

"I like libros for breakfast with milk, but they are very sweet," Zuniga said.

Ninos Envueltos

Translated as "child in a blanket," ninos envueltos' jelly filling represents a child, while the fluffy sponge cake is a blanket around it. They are similar to the American jelly-roll, while the outside of the cake is coated in jelly and rolled in coconut. Traditionally, this dense cake pastry is white cake with raspberry or strawberry filling, but it comes in many different flavors and fillings. La Michoacana in Rupert carries pineapple and peach with white cake.

This pastry is delicioso with hot chocolate or dipped in cold milk.

Empanadas

If you're looking for the dessert version of a hand-held pot pie, try empanadas, which are a simple dough crust with a variety of fillings. The empanadas can either be baked or fried, but in Magic Valley, bakeries all specialize in the baked version.

"My favorite is the pineapple," Zuniga said. "Great for dessert or a snack."

Fruit-filled empanadas are somewhere between a slice of pie and a turnover. They make a tasty afternoon pick-me-up, but with ice cream on top can be turned into a decadent after-dinner treat.

Empanadas at Mi Pueblo Bakery in Twin Falls come in strawberry, pineapple and pumpkin; Plaza Mexico in Jerome specializes in cream-filled empanadas; and Mi Pueblo Bakery in Buhl sells squash, pineapple, strawberry and Bavarian cream.

"The squash empanadas have cinnamon in them," said Nidiy Soria, who works at the Buhl branch of Mi Pueblo. "They are good for dessert with milk"

However, empanadas also come filled with just about anything. Cheese and jalapeno is a lunchtime favorite at Michoacana.

These are just some of the basic Mexican baked goods. Every panaderia offers something different, so don't be scared to try something new — it'll cost you less than a dollar, and you might find a new favorite.

Tuna noodle casserole, I'll do you one better

By David Hagedorn
Special to The Washington Post

After a lifetime of ambivalence toward the casserole, I have reconsidered my position.

When a surfeit of obligations comes up against a paucity of time, it's not such a bad thing to have a lamb-and-eggplant shepherd's pie in the freezer for relatives or unexpected guests.

To many, the all-American casserole evokes heartwarming comfort-food memories. But that is not my experience. My mother turned her nose up, literally, at the mention of the word; having made nothing but casseroles as a newwed, she could not stand the thought of them once she "learned how to cook."

"Casserole," she liked to say, "is the French word for 'glop.'"

Despite our mother's interdiction, my siblings and I, children of divorce, were regularly exposed to casseroles during trips to visit our father in Alabama. Our stepmother's repertoire included perennially popular concoctions: asparagus-pea, broccoli-rice, green bean-mushroom. Those offerings did not necessarily disprove our mother's assessment of casseroles, thanks mostly to the fact that their main ingredients, condensed soup and canned or frozen vegetables, shared exactly the same soft, unappetizing texture.

But along with the abundance of sodium that some of those ingredients contained, other taste-bud triggers made the casseroles hard to resist: fat of some sort; goeey or processed cheeses; sour cream; crunchy toppings such as crushed cornflakes, buttered bread crumbs and frizzled onions; and sometimes the ultimate bet-hedger: bacon.

The truth was, even if the tinny chemical taste of cream-of-whatever soups or the sad, muddy nullity of canned asparagus or frozen broccoli made me want to

Biscuits: Get out the butter knives

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

You know that moment when the basket of hot biscuits hits the table? The meal is made. The same can said for “Southern Biscuits,” by Nathalie Dupree and Cynthia Graubart (Gibbs-Smith, May 2011; $21.99). It completes the library of cookbooks that celebrate the South.

The authors have been saving string on this topic for decades. Before the parade of recipes begins, Dupree and Graubart do their best to explain the variables that can cause differences in even the most basic biscuit: fats, liquids, flours and baking pans. A panel of step-by-step photos will go a long way toward illustrating many of the book’s recipes.

The two came to understand that making biscuits is deceptively simple; a home cook who has made them for years might be surprised to learn some of the authors’ tricks. Wooden bowls are their preferred vessel for blending the dough. Whole milk and buttermilk make a better biscuit than their low-fat counterparts.

And just as biscuits can vary from batch to batch, close reading of some recipes in “Southern Biscuits” might yield a head-scratching moment. But when an extra mention of melted or softened butter appears, it’s easy enough to consult a previous recipe or two to figure out what’s required.

Versatility wins the day. There are biscuits you can successfully make in advance; ones that contain yogurt; ones that approximate the biscuits made in certain fast-food restaurants and others that are sweetened with Coca-Cola. The book includes suggestions for what to put between biscuit halves, and butters and gravies to slather on them. Usually sad affairs, even leftover biscuits can be turned into bread puddings and trifles.

MAKE-AHEAD SHENANDOAH VALLEY BISCUITS

Makes 10 biscuits. This recipe recommends resting the unbaked biscuits on a baking sheet (or cake pan, etc.) in the refrigerator for 2 hours or overnight (or freeze overnight). Resting allows the fat to chill and the baking powder to act, and produces a higher-rising biscuit. That is true of many biscuits.

In both recipes here, the type of baking pan you choose will affect the biscuits’ exterior. Soft: Use an 8- or 9-inch cake pan, pizza pan or ovenproof skillet in which the biscuits will nestle together snugly. Crisp: Use a baking sheet (or two stacked, to insulate the biscuit bottoms) or other baking pan where the biscuits can be placed farther apart, allowing air to circulate.

You’ll need a 2 1/2-inch biscuit cutter.

- 2 1/4 cups flour, plus more as needed
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup chilled unsalted butter, cut into 1/4-inch pieces
- 1/4 cup chilled unsalted butter, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- 2/3 cup whole milk
- 2 to 4 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted, for brushing

Fork-sift or whisk 2 cups of the flour, the baking powder and salt in a large bowl, preferably wider than it is deep. Scatter the 1/4-inch-size pieces of chilled butter over the flour and work them in by rubbing the fat and flour with your fingers, as if snapping the thumb and fingers together (or use two forks or knives, or a pastry cutter), until the mixture looks like well-crumbled feta cheese. Scatter the 1/2-inch-size pieces of chilled butter over the flour mixture and continue snapping thumb and fingers together until no pieces remain larger than a pea.

DEB LINDSEY/For The Washington Post

Make-Ahead Shenandoah Valley Biscuits.

Shake the bowl occasionally to allow the larger pieces of fat to bounce to the top of the flour, revealing the largest lumps that still need rubbing. If this method takes longer than 5 minutes, place the bowl in the refrigerator for 5 minutes to re-chill the butter.

Use your hand to make a deep hollow in the center of the flour. Pour half of the milk into the hollow and stir with a rubber spatula or large metal spoon, using broad, circular strokes to quickly pull the flour into the milk. Mix just until the dry ingredients are moistened and the sticky dough begins to pull away from the sides of the bowl. If some flour remains on the bottom and sides of the bowl, stir in 1 to 4 tablespoons of the remaining milk, just enough to form a shaggy, wet dough. If the dough is too wet, use more flour when shaping.

Generously dust the work surface with all-purpose flour. Use more of the flour to coat your hands.

Turn the dough out onto the board and sprinkle the top lightly with flour. Fold the dough in half and pat it out into a 1/3- to 1/2-inch-thick round, using a little additional flour only if needed. Flour again if necessary, and fold the dough in half a second time. If the dough is still clumpy, pat and fold a third time. Pat the dough out into a round 1/2-inch thick for regular biscuits, 3/4-inch thick for tall biscuits and 1 inch thick for large biscuits. Brush off any visible flour from the top. For each biscuit, dip a 2 1/2-inch biscuit cutter into flour and cut out the biscuit, pressing firmly, starting at the outside edge and cutting very close together, being careful not to twist the cutter.

Dough scraps may be combined to make additional biscuits, although the scraps will make tougher biscuits.

Transfer the biscuits to the pan or baking sheet and cover with plastic wrap. Refrigerate for 2 hours or up to overnight, or freeze overnight.

When ready to bake, position the top oven rack in the upper third of the oven; preheat to 450 degrees. Remove the biscuits so you can brush the pan or baking sheet with a little melted butter. Arrange them in the pan or on the baking sheet.

Bake the still-cold or frozen biscuits on the top oven rack for 6 minutes, then rotate the baking sheet from front to back. If the biscuits are browning too quickly on the bottom, slide a second baking sheet under the first one to help insulate them. Bake for 4 to 8 minutes, until the biscuits are golden brown.

When the biscuits are done, remove them from the oven and brush the tops with the melted butter. Turn them out upside down on a plate to cool slightly. Serve hot, right side up.

COCA-COLA BISCUITS

Makes 10 biscuits. These biscuits have a flavor that cannot easily be placed: slightly cocoa-ish, a bit mysterious yet tasty enough to keep an eater interested. They would be delightful baked into a chocolate biscuit bread pudding or simply topped with a smear of Nutella and a toasted marshmallow.

You’ll need a 2-inch biscuit cutter.

- Unsalted butter, melted, for brushing
- 2 cups store-bought or homemade biscuit mix, plus more as needed (see note)
- 1/4 cup packed light or dark brown sugar
- 1/2 cup regular or low-fat sour cream
- 1/2 cup Coca-Cola
- Water, as needed
- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour, for the work surface

Position the top oven rack in the upper third of the oven; preheat to 450 degrees. Have your baking pan of choice at hand; if you are using a baking sheet, brush it with a little melted butter.

Fork-sift or whisk together the biscuit mix and brown sugar in a large bowl, preferably wider than it is deep. Use the back of your hand to make a deep hollow in the center of the mix.

Combine the sour cream and 1/4 cup of the Coca-Cola in a small bowl. Pour that mixture into the hollow and stir with a rubber spatula or large metal spoon, using broad circular strokes to quickly pull the biscuit mix into the liquid. Add the remaining 1/4 cup of Coca-Cola and mix just until the dry ingredients are moistened and the sticky dough begins to pull away from the sides of the bowl. If some flour remains on the bottom and sides of the bowl, stir in 1 to 4 tablespoons of water, just enough to incorporate the remaining flour into the shaggy, wet dough. If the dough is too wet, use more flour when shaping.

Generously dust the work surface with all-purpose flour. Turn the dough onto the floured surface. Use more of the flour to coat your hands.

Sprinkle the top of the dough lightly with the all-purpose flour. With floured hands, fold the dough in half and pat it out into a 1/3- to 1/2-inch-thick round, using a little additional flour only if needed. Flour again if necessary, and fold the dough in half a second time. If the dough is still clumpy, pat and fold a third time. Pat the dough out into a 1-inch-thick round. Brush off any visible flour from the top. For each biscuit, dip a 2-inch biscuit cutter into the reserved flour and cut out the biscuit, pressing firmly, starting at the outside edge and cutting the biscuits very close together, being careful not to twist the cutter.

Dough scraps may be combined to make additional biscuits, although the scraps will make tougher biscuits.

Carefully transfer the biscuits to the pan or baking sheet. Bake on the top rack of the oven for 7 minutes, then rotate the pan from front to back; if the bottoms are browning too quickly, slide a second baking sheet underneath to add insulation and retard browning. Bake for 4 to 7 minutes, until the biscuits are light golden brown. When the biscuits are done, remove them from the oven; lightly brush the tops with softened butter. Turn the biscuits out upside down on a plate to cool slightly. Serve hot, right side up.

Note: To make a biscuit mix, fork-sift or whisk 10 cups of self-rising flour, 3 teaspoons of salt, 5 teaspoons of cream of tartar and 4 teaspoons of baking powder in a large, deep bowl. Scatter 2 cups of shortening, lard or unsalted butter over the flour and work it in by rubbing the shortening and flour with your fingers, as if snapping the thumb and fingers together (or use two forks or knives, or a pastry cutter), until the mixture looks like well-crumbled feta cheese, with no piece larger than a pea. Shake the bowl occasionally to allow the larger pieces of fat to bounce to the top of the flour, revealing the largest lumps that still need rubbing. The yield is about 13 1/2 cups; refrigerate in an airtight container until ready to use.

pass up those dishes, those other inducements enticed me like sirens.

I would eagerly help myself to seconds of hash brown casserole (frozen hash browns, cream of chicken soup, cheddar cheese, sour cream, cornflakes) or Betty Jean's Casserole, a family favorite made with browned ground beef, macaroni, celery, onions, a bottle of ketchup and half a loaf of Velveeta melted on top. I guess I didn't stand a chance against the vast conglomerate conspiracy to coat the world in high-fructose corn syrup and top it with bubbly, Day-Glo-orange "cheez" food.

When I cooked professionally, my relationship with such ghastly amalgamations became more complicated. I accepted them as a guest but rejected them as a chef.

Of course, when convenient, I just decided to put foods I liked in a separate category. Let's face it: Lasagna is a casserole. The pleasure we derive from it is directly proportional to the amount of cheese it contains.

And so, as a supposed entertaining expert who has been caught off guard (no time to go to the grocery store; friends coming over in an hour; fridge basically empty), I set out to devise some one-dish wonders of my own, minus the cans of soup and other processed ingredients.

For the basic formula, I broke out the components of most one-dish meals (protein, vegetable, starch) and filled in the blanks. I started with a personal favorite, shepherd's pie, and gave it a Mediterranean tweak, adding eggplant to the ground-lamb-and-tomato base and topping a layer of mashed Yukon Gold and sweet potatoes with feta cheese and a drizzle of olive oil. The dish freezes nicely, cooked or uncooked.

For Moroccan chicken pearl couscous casserole, I basically matched the ingredients of a vegetable tagine (sweet potatoes, zucchini, chickpeas, dried apricots, raisins, red onions) with spice-coated chicken breasts, tomatoes and chicken broth. I combined them in an enameled Dutch oven with uncooked pearl couscous. The liquids cooked the pasta along with everything else, saving a step.

For a meatless Monday dish — assembled on Sunday — I highlighted butternut squash, shiitake mushrooms and earthy kale with Asian accents: coconut milk, lemon grass, galangal, green chili peppers, ginger, tamari, sesame seeds and chili paste with garlic. When the casserole bakes, the kale leaves on top crisp up to add a nice crunch.

Stuffed cabbage rolls, mine made with ground turkey, basmati rice, crushed tomatoes and a hint of Thai red curry paste, are always crowd pleasers, especially in my house; minus the Thai element, they were a staple in my partner's Polish household when he was growing up. Stacked on a mound of mashed potatoes and topped with dollops of creme fraiche, these two-pot cabbage rolls make a perfect winter dish.

I never once ate tuna noodle casserole as a kid, but apparently that was not the case with my partner. When he came home the day I tested my version of the American classic, his eyes lit up.

"Is that tuna noodle casserole?" Michael gushed with the kind of enthusiasm he never demonstrated for my sous-vide salmon experiments.

He wolfed down a square of it, made as a lasagna with peas, mushrooms, scallions, dill and a zesty bechamel sauce, and then asked for seconds.

Good thing there are two more batches of it in the freezer, one made with salmon.

Along the way in my casserole adventure, I learned these tips:

- If you plan to freeze a casserole straight away, line the dish with aluminum foil before filling it. Once the contents have frozen, you can remove the block from the pan, wrap it well and store it without a dish.
- Defrost frozen casseroles

Photos by JAMES M. THRESHER/For The Washington Post; dishes from Crate and Barrel in the refrigerator overnight, or pop them into the oven frozen but double the cooking time.

- To know whether a casserole is hot enough in the middle, insert a knife in the center, then withdraw it and see if it is hot to the touch; or cook the casserole to an internal temperature of 165 degrees.

There is something so liberating about having hearty, prepped dishes in the freezer that I feel almost compelled to invite people over at the last minute just because I can.

Proud of myself for having created casseroles that are flavorful and free of processed foods yet not overly laden with cheese, fat and sugar, I did what recent converts do: I tried to convert someone else.

I told my mother I was writing an article on the virtue of casseroles, but before I even got the word out, her nose and mouth crinkled in a prunny grimace.

"You know what the word 'casserole' means, don't you?" she barked.

"Yes," I responded. "It's French for 'don't even bother.'"

BUTTERNUT SQUASH, KALE AND SHIITAKE CASSEROLE

8 to 10 servings. This Thai green curry paste in this casserole, made with green chilies, garlic, lemon grass, galangal (Thai ginger), onion, coriander, cumin and kaffir lime, takes butternut squash and turns blah into bling. Kale provides nutrients as well as crunch, when the leaves on top crisp in the oven.

The casserole can be assembled 2 days in advance, covered and refrigerated. It can be frozen (unbaked) for up to 3 months.

- 1/2 cup low-fat coconut milk
- 2 tablespoons Thai green curry paste, such as Thai Kitchen brand
- 1 teaspoon Chinese chili paste with garlic, such as Lan Chi brand
- 1- to 1 1/2-inch piece peeled ginger root, finely grated or pureed (1 tablespoon)
- 1/4 cup cream of coconut
- 2 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce or tamari
- 2 1/2 pounds peeled, seeded butternut squash, cut into 2-inch pieces
- 8 ounces large shiitake mushroom caps, cut into quarters
- 1 bunch (9 ounces) kale, center veins removed, leaves torn into large pieces and rinsed and blotted dry
- 2 tablespoons white sesame seeds

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Lightly coat a 9-by-13-inch baking dish with nonstick cooking oil spray.

Use a whisk to combine the coconut milk, Thai curry paste, Chinese chili paste, ginger, cream of coconut and soy sauce or tamari in a large mixing bowl. Add the squash pieces, mushrooms and kale; stir to coat evenly.

Transfer the vegetables to the baking dish, making sure there are plenty of kale leaves on top (so they will crisp during baking). Sprinkle the top evenly with sesame seeds. Cover with a layer of parchment paper, then seal tightly with aluminum foil. Bake for 35 minutes, then uncover and bake for 25 minutes, or until the squash is fork-tender and the kale on top is dark brown and crisp.

Serve warm.

TUNA OR SALMON NOODLE CASSEROLE REDUX

6 servings. This interpretation of a comfort-food classic is essentially a lasagna, much easier to make using no-cook noodle sheets, one of the food world's great inventions. Tuna packed in oil rather than water (especially Italian or Spanish premium tuna) is preferable; it has much better flavor.

The casserole can be assembled a day in advance and refrigerated, or frozen for up to 3 months. The recipe can be cut in half easily, to make 1 stack of noodles instead of 2.

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 4 ounces sliced mushrooms
- 2 cups frozen mixed peas and carrots, defrosted
- 1 bunch scallions, white and light-green parts, chopped (1/2 cup)
- 1 small bunch dill, chopped (1/4 cup, packed)
- 1 teaspoon salt, plus more for seasoning the vegetables
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, plus more for seasoning the vegetables
- 4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) unsalted butter, cut into small pieces
- 1/4 cup flour
- 4 medium cloves garlic, chopped
- 1 teaspoon powdered mustard, such as Colman's
- 12 ounces canned nonfat evaporated milk (may substitute regular milk)
- 2 1/2 cups whole or low-fat milk
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon hot pepper sauce, such as Tabasco brand
- 1/4 cup freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- 10 sheets no-cook lasagna noodles, such as Barilla brand
- Four 5-ounce cans tuna in oil, drained and broken up into chunks with a fork; or 20 ounces thinly sliced salmon fillet

- 1/4 cup panko (Japanese-style) bread crumbs
- 1/2 teaspoon smoked Spanish paprika

Lightly grease a 2-quart square casserole dish with nonstick cooking oil spray.

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees.

Heat the oil in a medium saute pan over medium-high heat until the oil shimmers. Add the mushrooms and cook for about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally, until they exude their juices and become lightly browned. Transfer to a medium bowl; stir in the peas and carrots, scallions and dill. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Melt the butter in a large saucepan over medium heat. Whisk in the flour and the garlic; cook for a few minutes, stirring, to get rid of the raw-flour taste. Add the powdered mustard, then gradually stir in the evaporated milk and the whole or low-fat milk (or all milk, if you are using), whisking continually to keep lumps from forming. Add the Worcestershire and hot pepper sauces, the 1 teaspoon of salt and the 1/2 teaspoon of pepper. Cook the sauce for 6 to 7 minutes, stirring constantly, until it achieves the consistency of thick gruel. Stir in the cheese. Remove the sauce from the heat and let it cool for 10 minutes.

To assemble: Spread 1/2 cup of the cooled sauce and a sprinkling of vegetables on the bottom of the casserole. (This will prevent the noodles from sticking.) Place 2 lasagna sheets side by side on the bottom. Top the sheets with a quarter of the remaining vegetable mix, a quarter of the tuna or salmon and 3/4 cup of sauce. Starting with a noodle layer, repeat for 3 more layers, then top with a layer of lasagna sheets. (That makes a total of 5 layers of noodles, vegetables and sauce, and four layers of the tuna or salmon.) It is okay if some of the sauce and vegetables pool around the stacked noodles.

Spread the remaining sauce on the top layer of lasagna noodles and sprinkle the panko evenly over the sauce. Sprinkle with smoked paprika. Cover the casserole (loosely, don't smash it) with a square of parchment paper, then seal with aluminum foil. Bake for 35 minutes, then uncover and bake for 20 minutes to brown the crumbs. (If you want them a little browner, turn the broiler on for a couple of minutes and monitor the casserole closely.)

Allow the casserole to rest for 10 minutes before serving.

SHEPHERD'S PIE WITH EGGPLANT

6 servings. With a green salad, you have a perfect meal. The casserole can be assembled and refrigerated a day in advance or frozen for up to 3 months.

For the topping:

- 1 pound (2 large) Yukon Gold potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-inch cubes
- 1 pound (1 large) sweet potatoes, cut into 1-inch slices
- 8 whole cloves garlic
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1/3 cup low-sodium chicken broth or heavy cream, or a combination of both
- Salt
- Freshly ground black pepper

For the filling:

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 3/4 pound unpeeled eggplant, trimmed and cut into 1-inch cubes (4 cups)
- 1 teaspoon salt, plus more to taste
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, plus more to taste
- 8 ounces sliced white or baby bella mushrooms
- 1 small yellow onion, chopped (3/4 cup)
- 1 pound lean ground lamb
- 3 medium cloves garlic, chopped
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon onion powder
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 cup tomato sauce

For assembly:

- 3 ounces (1/3 cup) crumbled feta or freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese

Chopped chives, for garnish

Extra-virgin olive oil, for drizzling

Lightly grease a 6-cup casserole or fluted deep-dish pie plate with nonstick cooking oil spray.

For the topping: Combine the potatoes, sweet potatoes and whole garlic cloves in a large pot; cover with salted water. Cook over medium-high heat until the potatoes are fork-tender. Drain and put the potatoes and garlic through a ricer into a large bowl. Add the oil and the broth and/or heavy cream, stirring until smooth. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Remove from the heat; cover loosely.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

For the filling: Heat 2 tablespoons of the oil in a large nonstick saute pan over medium-high heat until the oil shimmers. Add the eggplant and cook for about 5 to 7 minutes, stirring often, until it is lightly browned and soft. Season with salt and pepper to taste; transfer to a bowl.

Return the pan to medium-high heat; add the remaining 2 tablespoons of oil. Once the oil starts to shimmer, add the mushrooms and onion; cook for 8 to 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the mushrooms have exuded their juices and have browned. Add the lamb, breaking it up with a spoon but not crumbling it completely. Cook for 5 to 7 minutes, or until no traces of pink remain.

Drain all but a thin coating of fat from the pan (either first removing the lamb mixture and then returning it to the pan or by holding the mixture on one side of the pan as you drain). Add the chopped garlic, thyme, oregano, onion powder, garlic powder, cinnamon, 1 teaspoon of salt and 1/2 teaspoon of pepper. Stir in the tomato sauce. Cook for 1 minute, then fold in the cooked eggplant.

Spoon the lamb-eggplant mixture into the bottom of the prepared dish. Spread the mashed potato mixture over the lamb, covering it completely.

For assembly: Top with crumbled feta or grated Parmigiano-Reggiano and bake for 45 minutes, until lightly browned. Garnish with chopped chives and a drizzle of the extra-virgin olive oil.

Serve immediately.

Create this easy Indian dinner in 35 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

Cool as grated cucumber and mellow as a mango lassi, Sanjeev Kapoor is poised to conquer those few corners of the culinary world where he and his food are not yet well known. The 46-year-old Indian chef reaches an estimated 500 million people with his empire of cookbooks, convenience foods and appliances, decades of cooking shows and the new launch of his 24-hour TV food channel.

He was in Washington to promote his first cookbook aimed at an American audience: "How to Cook Indian: More Than 500 Classic Recipes for the Modern Kitchen" (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 2011).

Kapoor is out to prove that "easy" and "Indian" belong in the same recipe headnote. If you'd rather use store-bought ginger and/or garlic paste, for example, he's all for it. As it happens, this particular cashew curry recipe is substantially different from its original incarnation, which calls for tender green cashews and tender green coconut. Those ingredients are not readily available in the States. "I couldn't do this book and not include this dish, though," he says. So Washington food writer and cookbook author Monica Bhide, who helped him produce the book, suggested using shrimp instead of coconut. To approximate the texture of Indian cashews that are soft and almost creamy, we soaked raw cashews in very warm water, then drained them.

SARAH L. VOISIN/The Washington Post

The curry's level of heat can be adjusted by using the low-end range of cayenne and green pepper and adding an optional dollop of coconut cream (the stuff that forms at the top of a can of coconut milk) at the end.

Tamarind pulp is available at Indian markets.

Serve with rice.

KOLAMBI KAJU CURRY

4 servings

20 raw cashews, plus more for optional garnish
20 large or extra-large raw shrimp

1 or 2 small fresh chili peppers, preferably red
15 cloves garlic (from 1 or 2 heads)
2-inch piece ginger root
8 whole black peppercorns
4 whole cloves
2-inch piece cinnamon stick
Leaves from 8 to 10 stems cilantro
1 3/4 cups water, plus more as needed
1 medium red onion
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 or 2 teaspoons red chili powder
1/2 teaspoon ground turmeric
4 teaspoons tamarind

pulp (may substitute tamarind concentrate)
1 to 2 teaspoons salt
2 to 4 tablespoons coconut cream (from the top of a can of coconut milk; optional)

Place the cashews in a medium bowl and cover with very warm water. Let sit while you prep the other ingredients. Peel and devein the shrimp, leaving the tails on if desired. Rinse in a colander and drain.

Stem the chili peppers (to taste) and place in the bowl of a food processor. Peel the garlic (see note) and the ginger, cutting the ginger into small chunks; place half of the peeled garlic cloves and all of the peeled ginger in the food processor or blender, along with the peppercorns, cloves, the cinnamon stick (break it up into smaller pieces), half of the cilantro leaves and 1/4 cup of the water. Puree to form a paste, making sure the spices are thoroughly ground. Scrape into a bowl. Cut the onion into chunks and place in the food processor; pulse until it is finely chopped but has not released moisture.

Heat the oil in a large non-stick saute pan or skillet over medium heat. Crush the remaining cloves of garlic (using the flat side of a chef's knife). Finely chop the remaining cilantro.

Once the oil starts to shimmer, add the crushed garlic cloves and cook for 3 minutes, stirring as needed to keep them from burning. Add the finely chopped onion and cook for 5 minutes, stirring to coat.

Add the chili pepper-ginger paste and cook for 5 minutes, stirring to incorporate. Add the chili powder (to taste) and the turmeric; cook for 30 seconds, stirring, then add the tamarind pulp (being careful to discard any seeds in it), salt (to taste) and the remaining 1 1/2 cups of water. Mix to incorporate.

Once the mixture starts to bubble at the edges, add the shrimp. Drain the cashews and add them as well. Cook for 4 to 6 minutes, stirring a few times, until the shrimp is opaque and just cooked through.

If desired, stir in the coconut cream (to taste). Add water as needed to form a smooth sauce.

Divide among individual plates. Sprinkle with the remaining cilantro and more cashews, if desired. Serve hot.

Note: To peel a head of garlic more easily, peel away excess papery skin, then soak it in warm water for 5 minutes. Or separate the cloves and place them in a jar with a tight-fitting lid; shake vigorously to dislodge the papery skins.

Speedy turkey and sides, fresh off the press

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

Admittedly, I am totally late to the panini press party. But I've totally fallen for mine.

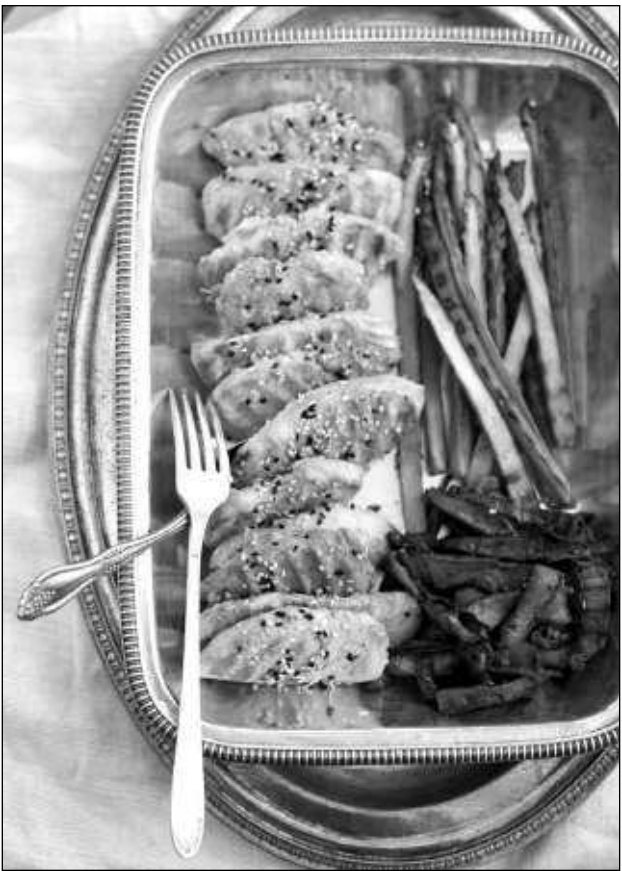

After purchasing one on a bit of a whim, then barely using it, I've suddenly discovered the many and often unexpected ways to use it to make my weeknight cooking faster, easy and less messy.

Boneless, skinless chicken breasts, for example, cooked so quickly and so well, there was no time for them to dry out. Bacon crisped up perfectly in no time. French toast on the panini press totally rocked. And don't even get me started about the hash browns.

So for this recipe, I decided to do the entire meal on the press — meat and a veggie side.

For the meat, I opted for turkey tenderloins sliced into thin medallions. If you'd rather do chicken, just get thinly sliced chicken breasts or slice regular breasts into cutlets. A quick Asian-style marinade effortlessly added tons of flavor, and the medallions cooked in no time on the press.

For the side, I went with sliced portobello mushrooms and asparagus, both of which have the heft to stand up to the high heat of the press.

(15 minutes active). Servings: 4.

1/4 cup seasoned rice vinegar
2 tablespoons toasted sesame oil
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger
Ground black pepper
1 1/4 pounds turkey tenderloin, cut into 1/2-inch-thick rounds
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon hoisin sauce
1 bunch asparagus, bottoms trimmed, halved crosswise

2 large portobello mushrooms, cut into thick slices
1 tablespoon toasted sesame seeds
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt

In a medium bowl, whisk together the vinegar, sesame oil, soy sauce, garlic powder, ginger and 1/2 teaspoon black pepper. Add the turkey rounds, turning to coat each. Cover and refrigerate for 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a second medium bowl, whisk together the olive oil, hoisin and 1/4 teaspoon black pepper. Add the asparagus and mushrooms, then toss to coat evenly. Set aside until the meat is ready.

Heat the oven to 200 degrees.

Once the meat has marinated, heat a panini press or other countertop grill (if your press has temperature settings, use high).

Arrange the turkey rounds on the panini press, close it and cook for 3 1/2 minutes, or until browned on both sides. Transfer the rounds to an oven-safe platter, sprinkle with sesame seeds, then place in the oven to keep warm.

Arrange the asparagus and mushrooms on the panini press, close it and cook for 3 minutes, or until the vegetables are nicely seared and just tender. Sprinkle them with the salt, then cook for another minute. Serve the vegetables with the turkey medallions.

Think outside the box for this simple and quick rice pilaf

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

Most people know rice pilaf as a side dish that comes from a box. But it can be so much more.

This simple and speedy recipe for cranberry almond rice pilaf can be on the table in about 25 minutes, only about 10 minutes of which you'll need to actually do anything. The flavor is so much better than packaged pilafs, and the recipe is totally versatile.

Don't like almonds? Use chopped cashews or pistachios. Dried currants, cherries, golden raisins or sliced dried apricots can sub in for the cranberries. And while we keep the seasonings simple with just a bit of cinnamon, cumin and black pepper, feel free to take this in any direction you like (curry powder wouldn't be a bad way to go).

To make a meal of this, serve it topped with grilled herbed chicken breasts.

Also consider doubling the recipe to allow for leftovers. Then drizzle the chilled leftover pilaf with a bit of vinaigrette, toss with arugula and sliced cherry tomatoes, and call it a salad.

CRANBERRY ALMOND RICE PILAF

Start to finish: 25 minutes (10 minutes active). Servings: 4.

- 1 cup basmati rice
- 1/4 cup orzo pasta
- 2 3/4 cups chicken broth
- 1/3 cup dried cranberries
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
- Ground black pepper
- 1 medium yellow onion, diced
- 1/3 cup sliced almonds
- 1/2 cup grated carrots
- Salt, to taste
- 2 scallions, finely chopped

In a medium saucepan over high heat, combine the rice, orzo and broth. Bring to a boil, then cover, reduce heat to simmer and cook for 10 minutes. Once the rice has cooked, quickly stir in the cranberries, then cover and set aside for another 5 minutes, stirring occasionally.

While the rice and cranberries sit off the heat, prepare the rest of the pilaf. In a large skillet over medium heat, melt the butter. Add the cinnamon, cumin and 1/4 teaspoon black pepper, then cook for 30 seconds. Add the onion and saute until it begins to soften, about 4 minutes. Add the almonds and carrots, then cook for another 2 minutes.

Add the rice and cranberries to the skillet, toss well.

Season with salt and pepper, then mix in the scallions. Serve immediately.

Oakley football petitions state to play 11-man

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — The Oakley High football program has petitioned the Idaho High School Activities Association, requesting to participate in the Class 2A Canyon Conference beginning with the 2012-2013 school year.

The IHSAA board will review the petition during its June 8 meeting.

“We’ll find out at board meeting what they’ve got in mind,” said IHSAA board member Jay Darrington. “They will present their case to the board and the board will decide yea or nay. We look at what it does to scheduling, what it will do to the 1A Division I scheduling, and the 2A football scheduling.”

If approved, the move would require Oakley to transition from 8-man football to 11-man.

Oakley head coach Tim Behunin believes the move would be a positive one for the school, but said he would respect the state’s decision. He also said he’s aware the IHSAA may request that all of Oakley’s athletic programs make the move.

“It’s wait-and-see. I can’t speak for the rest of the athletic department, I can just speak for what I think is right for football.”

— Oakley head coach Tim Behunin

Only the Hornets’ football program was included in the petition.

“It’s wait-and-see. I can’t speak for the rest of the athletic department, I can just speak for what I think is right for football,” said Behunin.

At the heart of Behunin’s desire to move Oakley to 11-man ball is to provide more playing time to more players. Last year the Hornets had 38 boys out for football.

Oakley had a difficult time filling its schedule with 8-man opponents last season, so the Hornets played two 11-man games. Oakley beat the junior varsity team from Canyon Ridge 41-12 and defeated Century’s JV 43-22.

“Granted they were JV, but I thought those games went very well. It was a good test for us,” said Behunin.

If Oakley is denied, Behunin said, “I would like to see a 1A 11-man division instead of two 8-man divisions. I think there are enough teams that could play 11-man.”

Myers, Flinn lead South to game-winning touchdown

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

This was the fourth-quarter drive Tyler Myers had been waiting for his entire high school career.

Down by three with just over 3 minutes left in the game, Myers orchestrated a 78-yard drive to lead the South to a 28-25 win over the North team in the 34th Annual District IV North-South Shrine All Star 11-man game Tuesday night at Twin Falls High School.

“This was the most fun I’ve ever had playing football,” Myers said. “I’ve thought about having a drive like this since I stepped foot on the football field my freshman year at Twin Falls.”

The Canyon Ridge quarterback capped the drive with a 27-yard touchdown pass to Buhl receiver Jesse Flinn with 23 seconds remaining. The pair drew up the play themselves, with Flinn running a slant-and-go.

“I was tired, but I knew I had to make a play for my teammates,” said Flinn, who also caught a 3-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter.

Myers completed four passes on the final drive, including crucial third-down conversions to Canyon Ridge teammate Sawyer McMillan and Twin Falls receiver

Ricky Akridge.

“It was fun to play football with teammates who are passionate and excited about the game,” said Myers, who earned offensive player of the game honors for the South.

The North team took the lead in the fourth quarter on Casey Pierson’s 2-yard run — the second touchdown for the Gooding running back.

Heimerdinger, Horner shine in 8-man game

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

All the seniors in Tuesday’s 34th annual District IV North-South All Star Shrine Football 8-man game enjoyed the chance to put on the pads one more time. But for Houston Horner, there was added meaning.

The Castleford senior missed his entire senior season after suffering a torn ACL last summer.

“It meant a lot to me,” said Horner. “I finally got to play with my friends and all the guys I got to play with in the past and I had a great time doing it. I’m really going to miss playing with everybody.”

Horner did his best to pack an entire season of defensive highlights into one game Tuesday, snagging three interceptions for the South

17-yard line, in the end zone and at the 5-yard line.

“Kind of makes up for missing my senior year,” said Horner, who plans to run track at Treasure Valley (Ore.) Community College.

But Horner’s interceptions weren’t enough to offset the three rushing touchdowns by North running back Alex Heimerdinger of Dietrich.

Heimerdinger scored the first TD of the game on a 43-yard romp up the middle to kick-start the North’s 24-12 victory at Twin Falls High School. Heimerdinger added a 13-yard score late in the third period and iced the win with a 14-yard TD jaunt that gave the North the final margin with 2:42 to play.

“I felt like I played one of my best games,” said Heimerdinger, who plans to attend school at the University of Idaho. “It was great, I

CSI men add two NCAA transfers

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

College of Southern Idaho head coach Steve Gosar announced Tuesday the signing of his first incoming recruits for the 2011-12 season as the Golden Eagles try to defend their NJCAA national championship.

CSI inked two NCAA transfers, adding shooting guard Patrick Swilling Jr. and power forward Paul Egwuonwu.

Swilling comes to CSI from NCAA Division I program St. Joseph’s, while Egwuonwu left NCAA Division II Northwest Nazarene University in Caldwell to join the Eagles.

Swilling led Brother Martin High School in New Orleans to Louisiana’s Class 5A state championship before signing with St. Joseph’s. He played in 23 games at St. Joe’s last season, averaging 1.4 points, 1.1 assists and 0.9 rebounds before leaving the program in February.

Swilling’s father, Patrick Swilling Sr., was a four-time NFL Pro Bowl selection with the New Orleans Saints.

“He gives us a little bit more size on the perimeter,” Gosar said of Swilling Jr. “He’s probably 6-3 and built a lot like his dad. He goes about 215 (pounds), shoots the ball well and is just a nice all-around guard. ... He can really sit down and defend.”

Swilling shot just 22 percent at St. Joseph’s, including 18 percent from 3-point range, but displayed a nice stroke during his recent campus visit to CSI.

Egwuonwu played at Boise’s Capital High School before redshirting at NNU during the 2009-10 season. He was named the co-Great Northwest Athletic Conference Freshman of the Year after averaging 10.1 points and 4.5 rebounds.

Gosar said the 6-8 Egwuonwu is a player CSI has followed since his days at Capital, where he averaged 12 points, 8.8 rebounds, 3.5 blocks, 2.8 assists and 1.9 steals per game as a senior.

“We’re excited about him,” said Gosar. “He’s an athletic power forward that can step out and shoot the ball too.”

CSI now has seven players signed for next season, including returning players Fabian Harris, Gerson Santo, Kevin Attila and Paul Bunch. March transfer Luke Cothron has also signed. Cothron and Jerrold Brooks, last year’s second-leading scorer, remain suspended from a March arrest on drug possession charges, but could be part of the 2011-12 roster.

James, Heat take Game 1 over Dallas

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press writer

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade’s night began with a hug for his mom. It ended with an embrace from LeBron James.

And the Miami Heat have struck first in the NBA Finals.

James scored 24 points for his first win in five finals-game appearances, Wade added 22 points and 10 rebounds and the Heat beat the Dallas Mavericks 92-84 in Game 1 of the title series on Tuesday night.

The Heat trailed by eight points early in the third quarter before pulling away, remaining unbeaten at home in these playoffs and snapping Dallas’ five-game road winning streak.

Chris Bosh scored 19 points — holding up three fingers when it was over, a clear nod to the three wins Miami needs for a title — and Mario Chalmers added 12 for the Heat, who host Game 2 on Thursday night.

Wade’s 3-pointer with 3:06 left put the Heat up 82-73, then the largest lead of the game for either team. The Mavs shaved two points off it on the next possession when Nowitzki hit two free throws, but James gave the Heat their first double-digit lead of the finals a few seconds later.

He dribbled upcourt against Shawn Marion, crossed his dribble over and got clear for a dunk while being fouled. The free throw made it 85-75, and most in the sellout, white-clad crowd began standing in anticipation.

Longoria homers Rays past Rangers

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Evan Longoria hit a go-ahead two-run homer in the eighth inning and the Tampa Bay Rays beat the Texas Rangers 5-4 on Tuesday night.

The Rays trailed by a run before Longoria connected against Arthur Rhodes (3-3) with two out. Longoria's fourth homer came after Johnny Damon reached on an opposite-field bloop single that deflected off short-stop Elvis Andrus' glove.

Longoria was back hitting fourth after three games as the leadoff man, a move designed to help him work out of an offensive funk. The All-Star third baseman went 2 for 3 with a walk Tuesday after getting five hits in 11 at-bats during the previous three games.

INDIANS 6, BLUE JAYS 3

three games since coming off the disabled list last week. But ended his slump with a pair of RBI doubles. He finished 2 for 4, raising his average to .255.

WHITE SOX 10, RED SOX 7

BOSTON — Alexei Ramirez tied his career high with four hits, and Philip Humber stymied Boston for seven innings.

It was Chicago's sixth straight win at Fenway Park, its longest streak here since the "Go Go" Sox era of 1958-59.

TIGERS 8, TWINS 7

DETROIT — Brennan Boesch broke an eighth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly, leading the Tigers to the victory.

After Danny Worth led off the bottom of the eighth with a single, Austin Jackson tried to bunt him to second. Twins reliever Phil Duma-

son. It was the second multi-homer game of his career.

ROYALS 7, ANGELS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jeff Francis pitched seven strong innings and rookie Eric Hosmer drove in two runs in Kansas City's five-run third.

Alex Gordon and Chris Getz both had three hits for the Royals, who won for only the fourth time in 17 games. Jeff Francoeur drove in two runs and leads the Royals with 32 RBIs.

NATIONAL LEAGUE NATIONALS 10, PHILLIES 2

WASHINGTON — Danny Espinosa hit a pair of homers and drove in four runs to lead the Washington Nationals to a 10-2 win over the Philadelphia Phillies on Tuesday night.

Espinosa hit a three-run shot to cap the Nationals' five-run third inning, and added another solo blast in the sixth, his 10th of the season. It was the second multi-homer game of his career.

PIRATES 5, METS 1

NEW YORK — Neil Walker hit a two-run single in the eighth inning off a game and gritty R.A. Dickey to help the Pirates rally past the Mets.

Josh Harrison stroked a tying single with two outs in the eighth to cap a successful major league debut and Pittsburgh got another fine outing from a starting pitcher.

BREWERS 7, REDS 2

CINCINNATI — Ailing Corey Hart homered and drove in four runs on a hot, muggy night, leading the Brewers to a victory over the Reds that broke their losing streak in Cincinnati.

CARDINALS 4, GIANTS 3

ST. LOUIS — Skip Schumaker's infield RBI hit capped a three-run eighth inning, taking tough-luck Chris Carpenter off the hook in the Cardinals' victory over the Giants.

Albert Pujols and Allen Craig hit RBI doubles in the eighth before Schumaker, who had been in a 2-for-19 slump, got the go-ahead single against Javier Lopez (2-1) on a perfectly placed grounder between first and second. Schumaker's head-first dive into the bag beat the throw from second baseman Freddy Sanchez, who went far to his left to glove the ball.

PADRES 5, BRAVES 4

ATLANTA — Ryan Ludwick had an RBI single in the three-run seventh, Heath Bell struggled to earn a fourth straight save and the Padres beat the Braves for their season-high fourth consecutive victory.

ASTROS 7, CUBS 3

CHICAGO — Cubs closer Carlos Marmol blew his third save of the season, allowing six runs in the ninth inning as the Astros beat Chicago.

Matt Downs' pinch-hit, two-run double tied the game and Michael Bourn singled in the go-ahead run off Marmol (1-2). Hunter Pence added a three-run shot for the Astros.

Acting CONCACAF chief tries to fire Blazer

ZURICH (AP) — CONCACAF reacted swiftly after its acting president tried to fire whistleblower Chuck Blazer just hours before FIFA's presidential election, telling the interim chief he did not have the authority to make such a move.

According to CONCACAF rules, the executive committee has jurisdiction over Blazer, general secretary of the federation that represents North and Central America and the Caribbean. Not only has the executive committee taken no action, but a majority of committee members told Lisle Austin he lacked the authority to fire Blazer, according to a statement posted on the CONCACAF website Tuesday night.

"This attempted action was taken without any authority," the statement said. "Chuck Blazer continues as CONCACAF general secretary and with the full authority of his office."

FIFA has been shaken to its very core following Blazer's accusations that longtime CONCACAF president Jack Warner and Mohamed bin Hammam tried to buy votes for Wednesday's presidential election. According to Blazer, Warner and bin Hammam offered Caribbean soccer leaders $40,000 each in exchange for their votes.

Bin Hammam had been the only challenger to Sepp Blatter, who is seeking his fourth four-year term.

Blatter awaits re-election as head of reeling FIFA

Sepp Blatter acknowledged that corruption scandals have left FIFA "shaking on its foundations" on the eve of a presidential election that should give him another four-year term and a chance to restore order to soccer's reeling governing body.

It was a stunning turnaround for Blatter, who a day earlier denied that the bribery case that led to the suspension of his only challenger had caused even a hint of crisis within FIFA.

On Tuesday, two more top sponsors broke decorum of business-as-usual to express concern about the stains the scandals have left on the sport and, by extension, their global investment in soccer.

And IOC President Jacques Rogge compared FIFA's situation to the Olympic corruption crisis a dozen years ago leading to the 2002 Salt Lake City Winter Games. He urged voters to adopt the same fundamental reforms that rescued the Olympic body. "I am sure that FIFA also can emerge stronger," Rogge told the 208 delegations at the FIFA Congress that will have little option but to confirm the 75-year-old Swiss for a last term Wednesday.

New Lakers coach Brown says it's still Kobe's team

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Phil Jackson is retired, the triangle offense is out, and Mike Brown is in. And the Los Angeles Lakers are still Kobe Bryant's team.

Brown made it clear Tuesday during his introduction as Jackson's successor that Bryant's role won't change under his regime. He said his first meeting with the superstar who owns five NBA championships "went very well." "This is still his team. We'll make sure that he'll have the ball in the sweet spots that he likes," Brown said. "He has a great understanding of my vision and he's onboard."

Bryant, Derek Fisher and Andrew Bynum had publicly supported longtime Lakers assistant Brian Shaw in his bid to replace Jackson, who retired after Dallas swept the two-time defending champions out of the second round.

Besides meeting with Bryant and talking on the phone with his wife, Vanessa, Brown said he's talked to Fisher and his wife, Pau Gasol, Bynum and Ron Artest.

Public reaction to Brown's hiring has been mixed.

"Everybody is entitled to their opinion, I respect that," he said. "Winning will cure all of that."

General manager Mitch Kupchak said he, owner Jerry Buss and Jim Buss, the owner's son and an executive with the team, interviewed three people for the unenviable job of following Jackson, who owns the most titles in NBA history. Besides Shaw and Brown, Rick Adelman also was in the running.

The elder Buss said that initially he didn't think Brown "would be the man."

"Then when he started talking to us, he said how he would handle this team. He was very prepared," Buss said. "I liked his X's and O's, his visions for our future. Very few people understand that our job is to try and remain on top forever. He likes that philosophy. I like that."

Miller's desperation heave on the final play of the game was intercepted by Flinn.

The only score in a first half dominated by penalties and turnovers came when the North pressured South quarterback Kale Weekes into an intentional grounding call in the end zone. The resulting safety gave the North a 2-0 halftime edge.

Trailing 16-0, the South finally got some life when Hansen's Jayme Johnson returned a kickoff 90 yards for a score to end the third period.

Shrine game rules designate that a team trailing by nine or more points gets the ball back in the fourth quarter. The South made the most of that chance as Weekes hit Adam Machado of Castleford and Johnson for long pass plays, setting up Weekes' 6-yard scoring run.

Sedin twins' path to Stanley Cup blocked by Bruins

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Daniel Sedin absently scratched his red playoff beard, thinking back on a decade of struggle and setbacks before the Vancouver Canucks reached the Stanley Cup Finals against Boston.

Down the hallway, his identical twin rubbed his identical beard exactly the same way.

Henrik Sedin was considering a more pressing problem, though: Now that the Swedish superstars are finally close enough to touch the Stanley Cup, how do they get it away from hulking defenseman Zdeno Chara and the bruising Bruins?

“We’ve had a lot of challenges along the way to get here, but he’s the biggest one yet — literally, I guess,” said Henrik Sedin, last season’s NHL MVP. “It’s going to be exciting to see what happens, because we haven’t played each other enough to know those guys very well. It’s unpredictable.”

The only sure bet is that one championship drought will end for one long-suffering hockey-loving city after the Canucks face Boston in the Stanley Cup Finals, starting in Game 1 tonight in Vancouver.

The Canucks have never won it all, falling in their only two previous finals appearances in four decades of existence. Their ever-anxious city is buzzing with anticipation, with hundreds of fans filling the sidewalks and bars of Granville Street in blue-and-green jerseys in the days before the finals.

They’re breathlessly following the Sedin twins, who finally turned their talent into team success during a spectacular season in Vancouver. With impressive depth and solid defense backing their star-studded top lines, the Canucks won the Presidents’ Trophy with 54 victories and 117 points before winning nine of their past 12 playoff games heading into the finals.

The Canucks might be the best team ever assembled on Canada’s West Coast, yet they realize they haven’t done anything until they raise the Cup.

“With the parity that is in the league, you’ve got to do a lot of things right for a long time,” Canucks coach Alain Vigneault said. “I do believe you’ve got to get some bounces, you get the bounces because you’ve been doing things right for a long time. I believe that Vancouver is due for 40 years of good bounces.”

The Bruins have lost five straight trips to the finals since Bobby Orr led them to their last title in 1972, and haven’t made it at all since 1990.

Yet with only moderate expectations and a largely star-free roster featuring no scorers in the NHL’s top 25, Boston survived a rough Eastern Conference run during which it faced elimination twice in the past three rounds. The Bruins coolly won two Game 7 show-downs, both on clutch goals by Nathan Horton, earning the right to travel to the opposite coast for a shot at their ultimate goal.

Pryor’s cars now the focus of NCAA probe

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A day after coach Jim Tressel’s forced resignation for lying about Ohio State players receiving improper benefits, the focus has shifted to the investigation of star quarterback Terrelle Pryor and his succession of used cars.

The salesman who put Pryor behind the wheel of several vehicles said in a sworn affidavit released by Ohio State on Tuesday that he didn’t offer any special deals to Buckeyes.

“The deals that I did for Ohio State student-athletes were no different than any of the other 10,000-plus deals that I’ve done for all my other customers,” Aaron Kniffin said in the statement.

Tressel’s 10-year reign as coach of the Buckeyes ended in disgrace Monday as he was forced to step down for breaking NCAA rules. He knew players received cash and tattoos for autographs, championship rings and equipment and did not tell anyone at Ohio State or the NCAA what he knew for more than nine months. NCAA rules — and Tressel’s contract — specify that he must disclose any and all information about possible violations.

Pryor, the highest profile recruit of Tressel’s 25-year coaching career, is one of five Buckeyes who have already been suspended for the first five games of the 2011 season for taking money and tattoos from local tattoo-parlor owner Edward Rife, who pleaded guilty last week to federal drug trafficking and money-laundering charges.

Ohio State confirmed that the NCAA continues to look into potential violations.

“I can tell you that obviously you have an open investigation,” Ohio State spokesman Jim Lynch said Tuesday. “The university and the NCAA are working jointly to review any new allegations that come to light. We’re going to continue to do so until their investigation wraps up.”

The Columbus Dispatch has reported that the NCAA and Ohio State are investigating more than 50 vehicle purchases by Buckeyes players, family members and friends over the past. Sports Illustrated, citing a source close to the investigation, reported that Pryor, who will be a senior this fall, might have driven as many as eight cars in his three years in Columbus.

Federer to face Djokovic at French Open

PARIS (AP) — Quickly and rather quietly, Roger Federer is back in the French Open semifinals.

There will be absolutely nothing low-key — or, it seems safe to say, easy — about what comes next for the 16-time Grand Slam champion: a showdown against Novak Djokovic, who is 41-0 this year and unbeaten in his last 43 matches overall.

With attention focused elsewhere, perhaps in part because some assume his best days are behind him, the no-fuss, no-muss Federer simply has won all 15 sets he’s played so far, capped Tuesday by a 6-4, 6-3, 7-6 (3) quarterfinal victory over No. 9-seeded Gael Monfils of France.

“For me, the plan is trying to get a step further and into the finals of the French Open,” said Federer, who won the 2009 title at Roland Garros to complete a career Grand Slam but lost in the quarterfinals a year ago. “At the end of the day, that’s, for me, the big picture, and that’s why I entered the French Open. It wasn’t to stop Novak.”

Nevertheless, their semifinal is sure to be the talk of the tennis world until it’s played Friday.

For Djokovic — who did-drought since he won his first major title at Wimbledon in 2003. It would allow Federer to make clear to everyone that he’s still at the top of the game as his 30th birthday approaches in August. Plus, it would serve as something of a rebuke to Djokovic, who beat Federer in the semifinals at the U.S. Open in September and Australian Open in January.

“There’s less at stake for me than for him,” said Federer, who is 13-9 against Djokovic over their careers but 0-3 this year. “He’s got a lot of things going on.”

Both men surely are well aware who the last player to defeat Djokovic anywhere was: Federer, a 6-4, 6-1 winner in the ATP Finals at London, way back on Nov. 27.

Against Monfils, Federer began poorly, bothered by swirling wind that reached 30 mph and delayed the match at one point because clouds of loose clay dust kicked up into the players’ eyes. He pushed one easy forehand into the net and flubbed a gimme volley. He double-faulted twice in one game while getting broken at love en route to trailing 3-1.

“It was not just playing against Gael,” Federer said. “It was playing against the conditions.”

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Arbor Settee

Do-it-yourselfers can use this arbor settee to create a quiet retreat in the yard or garden. It seats two on facing benches and features a graceful arch. A good project for the novice woodworker, it requires several straight cuts, a few curved cuts traced from full-size patterns and basic construction techniques.

The finished arbor settee measures just over 8 feet tall by 8 feet long by 40 inches wide.

Today is Wednesday, June 1, the 152nd day of 2011. There are 213 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On June 1, 1861, Capt. John Quincy Marr, CSA, was killed during a skirmish with Union cavalrymen near Fairfax Court House in Virginia; he is widely regarded as the first Confederate officer killed in the Civil War.

TODAY IN HISTORY*On this date:

In 1792, Kentucky became the 15th state of the union.

In 1796, Tennessee became the 16th state.

In 1813, the mortally wounded commander of the USS Chesapeake, Capt. James Lawrence, gave the order, "Don't give up the ship" during a losing battle with the British frigate HMS Shannon in the War of 1812.

In 1868, James Buchanan, the 15th president of the United States, died near Lancaster, Pa., at age 77.

In 1909, the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition opened in Seattle. (The fair closed in October the same year.)

In 1943, a civilian flight from Portugal to England was shot down by the Germans during World War II, killing all 17 people aboard, including actor Leslie Howard.

In 1958, Charles de Gaulle became premier of France, marking the beginning of the end of the Fourth Republic.

In 1961, an earthquake measuring 6.7 on the Richter scale shook northeastern Ethiopia, killing 160 people. Regular FM stereo broadcasting began in the United States.

In 1971, American theologian Reinhold Niebuhr, 78, died in Stockbridge, Mass.

In 1980, Cable News Network made its debut.

Ten years ago: A suicide bomber attacked a Tel Aviv nightclub, killing himself and 21 Israelis, most of them teenagers. The king, queen and seven other members of Nepal's royal family were shot dead by Crown Prince Dipendra, who then mortally wounded himself. "Dennis the Menace" creator Hank Ketcham died in Pebble Beach, Calif., at age 81.

Five years ago: Six world powers, including the U.S., agreed on a package of incentives to persuade Iran to halt its uranium enrichment program. A contrite U.S. Army Corps of Engineers took responsibility for the flooding of New Orleans by Hurricane Katrina. Seven family members were shot to death in an Indianapolis house. (Two suspects were later convicted of murder; Desmond Turner was sentenced to life in prison without parole while co-defendant James Stewart received 425 years in prison.)

One year ago: Attorney General Eric Holder said federal authorities had opened criminal and civil investigations into the BP oil spill. A divided U.S. Supreme Court ruled, 5-4, that criminal suspects had to explicitly invoke their right to remain silent, and that simply remaining silent was not sufficient to stop police questioning. Former Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper, announced their separation after 40 years of marriage.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF JUNE 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Today's new moon and partial solar eclipse falls near your part of the zodiac. You might feel slightly out of sorts if you are very sensitive or you might be more emotional than usual. The decisions you make this week may not be entirely based on rational thinking, so hold off on major changes. Your business sense is out of kilter through mid-July, so don't change jobs. You will do better if you wait until December to make crucial investment decisions or to put career ideas into motion. Plan your vacation for August or early September if you want to have carefree relaxation.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep a cool head. Events may conspire to make you fly off the handle and create an unpleasant scene. Think first before you act. You may not win this round but you'll certainly live to fight another day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This is a poor day for serious debate. Try to keep a casual, pleasant demeanor and avoid conflicts. Self-improvement can be attained simply by becoming a little more self-sufficient and self-reliant.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put your money where your mouth is. It's time to settle all accounts, debts and scores. Do what is required of you, but realize this is a poor time for making key decisions or taking on extra responsibilities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take the bull by the horns. The time for talk and planning is over. You should assert yourself and take command to make sure a project is done right. Do not fret over petty details; the big picture is most important.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The truth shall set you free. You might think you can impress your peers by embellishing your skills somewhat, but the joke will be on you when a demonstration is called for. Stick with what you know.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Leave nothing to chance. Don't mince words and be very clear of your intentions or else a frustrating misunderstanding is likely to develop. Don't make a final decision until all the facts have been presented.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Grin and bear it. You may be in a bit of a slump right now, but greener pastures lie in the immediate future. Social obligations may interfere with production at work. Be an adult and take care of business first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep your head out of the clouds. Humdrum routine may have you longing to break free to take flights of fancy and chase your whims. Your responsibilities, however, will not take care of themselves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends make poor business partners. Pass up all offers that are "too good to pass up." The only sure thing you can rely on is that there's no such thing as a sure thing. No matter what the question is, the answer is no.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Whether you think you can or you think you can't, you are correct. How far you progress today depends on how far you are willing to go. The only limits are the ones you set for yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): For every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. Weigh the options and choose your actions carefully. It may be time to turn an idea into reality. Use your intuitions to guide you through troubles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There's no need to buy a new tire if you have a patch handy. Quit looking for an expensive solution when a quick fix will do the job just as well. Double-check your work to prevent minor errors.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 40-year-old, stay-at-home mom with a 17-year-old and a 14-year-old. Three weeks ago, on my birthday, I found out that I am pregnant. Forty and pregnant – it is truly a miracle. My husband, who is almost 50, is in complete shock.

He has looked like a ghost since he found out. I finally had an emotional meltdown and told him I don't feel like he's very happy for our unexpected bundle. His reply? "Sorry, Hon, I'm not!" He thinks he's too old. My older child has said only one sentence to me since I told her the news: "You're going to be an old mom." They feel I have ruined their lives. I feel ... happy. How do I get them to warm up to this new addition to the family?

— OLD MAMA IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR "OLD" MAMA: According to the 2002 National Survey of Family Growth by the Guttmacher Institute, in 2001, 49 percent of pregnancies in the United States were unintended. Among women aged 15 to 44, the unintended pregnancy rate was 51 per 1,000 women.

So remind your husband that this pregnancy didn't happen "magically"; he was an equal partner. He may have had other plans in mind for the next 20 years than raising another child, so his feelings are understandable. While it would be nice if he felt differently about the latest addition to the family, he might perk up if you point out that there are many older dads these days, and many older moms, too.

As to your daughter's attitude, she will be out of the house and gone soon, so don't take personally that she's not over the moon about the changes that are coming. If you maintain a positive attitude, your enthusiasm will be contagious.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 53, work in an office six to eight hours a day, and then come home to cook dinner and do household chores.

My husband, "Todd," is 48. He works eight to 10 hours a day and expects sex three to four times a week. I'm exhausted and can't do it anymore!

My best friend, "Mavis," has been a widow for five years. She tells me she's going crazy because she hasn't had sex in all this time. She asked if I'd share Todd just one night a week. Mavis isn't pretty, but she has a very shapely figure. Frankly, I'm ready to agree, but I haven't mentioned it to Todd.

If my husband agrees, it would take a lot of pressure off me and I could sure use the rest. What are your thoughts on this arrangement?

— NEEDS A BREAK IN PHOENIX

DEAR NEEDS A BREAK: Please find another way to take a break. What you're contemplating would likely be the beginning of the end of your marriage. You may think you'd be "safe" because Mavis isn't pretty, but to quote Benjamin Franklin, "In the dark, all cats are gray." If you're tired, let Mavis help with the chores – but not this one.

DEAR ABBY: I wish there was some way to make families understand that because someone has been widowed, we don't stop caring about them. So why do they stop inviting us to family functions? Is it because they didn't care for us in the first place?

DEAR LEFT OUT: There isn't a one-size-fits-all answer to your question. However, I suspect that in many cases it's because the widow's presence is a painful reminder of the family member who is "missing."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Of all the icy blasts that blow on love, a request for money is the most chilling and havoc-wreaking."

— Gustave Flaubert

In today's four-heart game, had West led his singleton diamond, South would have won the king, drawn trump, and ducked a diamond. East wins this trick, but declarer's club losers can now be discarded on diamonds.

However, after the spade lead, the defenders were still in the game. East, realizing the potential danger of dummy's diamonds and knowing South had only one spade, overtook and shifted to the club jack. South covered with the queen, but West won and returned a club, establishing a second trick for East. South was sunk — he still had to lose one more trick in each minor for down one. It was nice defense by East, but a major error by South.

When the club jack is led, South should have tried to freeze the club suit by playing the ace. If East has the king, the queen will take a trick later, but if West has it and East has the 10 — as seems likely — the club suit is frozen.

A frozen suit is one that neither side can lead without giving up a trick. Say South wins the club ace, draws trumps, discarding spades from the table, and plays the king and a diamond. When West shows out, the diamond is ducked to East, who must attack clubs now to have any chance.

However, if East leads the 10, South covers, West wins, but dummy's nine is the master. If East leads the eight, South ducks, West wins the king, and South's queen is high.

ANSWER: Are you a man or a mouse? With the opponents virtually sure to have at least nine hearts between them, your partner strongly rates to have spade tolerance and short hearts. This is the moment to bid four spades confidently, rather than selling out to four hearts. Both contracts could easily be laydown!

NOTICE OF 30-DAY PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD AND HEARING REGARDING PROPOSAL ON OPEN BURNING OF CROP RESIDUE

PROPOSED ACTION: The Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) is proposing to submit an Open Burning of Crop Residue State Implementation Plan (SIP) Revision to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) pursuant to the requirements of Section 110 of The Clean Air Act.

The new crop residue burning rules have been in effect since 2008. Upon completion of the second year of burning under these new rules, it became apparent that some smaller crop residue burns could and should be regulated differently than those large-scale, high-fuel content burns.

This SIP addresses small fuel-loading and small acreage burns including propane flaming, spot burns, burns of one acre or less, and broken bales. DEQ determined that the administrative requirements of both the grower and DEQ for these types of burns were unnecessarily burdensome when compared to the minimal potential air quality impact. This SIP revision streamlines the administrative requirements for the growers and DEQ while retaining the control measures necessary to ensure air quality protection.

AVAILABILITY OF MATERIALS: The Open Burning of Crop Residue SIP Revision can be viewed at DEQ's State Office, 1410 N. Hilton, Boise, Idaho as well as at regional offices in Coeur d'Alene, Lewiston, Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello, and Idaho Falls, and on DEQ's website at <http://www.deq.idaho.gov>.

SUBMISSION OF WRITTEN COMMENTSASSISTANCE ON TECHNICAL QUESTIONS: Anyone may submit written comment regarding this SIP by mail, fax, or e-mail at the address below. Please reference "Crop Residue SIP" when sending comments or requesting information.

For technical assistance on questions concerning this project, please contact Mary Anderson at (208) 373-0202 or Mary.Anderson@deq.idaho.gov.

All written comments concerning this proposal must be directed to and received by the undersigned on or before 5:00, p.m., MDT, July 7, 2011.
