Clear Springs' proposal to alter aquifer map could affect mitigation efforts

By Kimberlee Kruesi Times-News writer

The Idaho Department of Water Resources is considering changing the boundary lines of the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer, updating its map of what feeds and who draws from the Lake Erie-sized underground water

Buhl-based Clear Springs Foods submitted a proposal to change the boundary lines in November.

The company claims the current ESPA boundaries were defined by an outdated U.S. Geological Survey model. Its proposed amendments would fit an updated 2006 USGS model.

The aquifer's boundary has been debated for several years, but this is the first time an ESPA user has submitted a change since

See AQUIFER, Main 2

About the change

The Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer runs from eastern Idaho down through the Thousand Springs area near Buhl and Hagerman. It's a source of water for drinking, irrigation, fish farms and other uses. A change in its boundaries would affect the state's reckoning of what tributaries feed the aquifer, as well as what water users pull from it and how they interact with each other.

Although Harold Thompson has left this world, his children were able to fulfill one of his last wishes, by coincidence on Father's Day weekend.

Thompson died June 10 at age 95, after a life of farming and fishing in Jerome County. Over last weekend, his family didn't linger on the typically hard de-

Idaho Supreme Court denies appeal by Twin Falls man

The Idaho Court of Appeals denied on Thursday a Twin Falls man's attempt to get his drug conviction overturned.

The court ruled to uphold a 2009 conviction for Adam R. Pullin, 23, who was sentenced to a prison term of three to seven years for felony possession of a controlled substance. Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy Stoker placed Pullin on a retained-jurisdiction program, and online court records show that Pullin was ordered to probation in May 2010.

Pullin challenged Stoker's instructions to the jury as

Mayer sentencing detail incorrect

A sentencing detail for Twin Falls anti-wolf activist Tony Mayer, convicted of three misdemeanor Idaho Department of Fish and Game violations in a Blaine County courtroom on June 3, was incorrect in Wednesday's Times-News.

Mayer was sentenced to a suspended 220-day jail term and had his Idaho hunting and fishing license revoked for three years. He was also ordered to pay $2,300 in fines and fees, perform 100 hours of community service and serve a six-year probationary period.

The appeal claimed the court "improperly instructed the jury to continue deliberations after the jury stated that it could not reach a verdict, and misled the jury when it told the jury that its option was to continue deliberating either that day or another day, and did not inform the jury of the consequence of a hung jury."

"If Oakley is added, then it will dilute the mitigation water in other districts," he

Brown said his district would only approve the change if it would also get credit for mitigation efforts adding that to the boundary as well. IDWR does not od on the decision ended in recognize those efforts at the moment, said Brown.

Xavier School Board approves lean budget

Xavier Charter School's board approved a whittled-down budget of about $3.2 million on Thursday for the coming fiscal year, while also discussing the transition away from a management firm that had handled its business affairs.

Ketchum police have arrested five suspects believed to have stolen $100,000 or more of valuables from a residence during April and Shanna DeLeon, 35, both of Ketchum, were charged with felony grand theft on Wednesday. A 16-year-old male was also charged with felony grand theft. David Aranda, 19, and Juan Molina, 20, both of Hailey, were past: a 120-bed facility instead of a 165-bed jail. Still, it would be a major move from the current facility, which can hold 28 inmates plus a couple more in a makeshift overflow space that's usually the recreation room.

A release from Chief Steve Harkins claims the suspects took personal items such as jewelry, a fur coat and golf clubs. The theft allegedly happened while the victim, Benjamin Dugan, 31, and Mary Feehan, 60, was away from home. She had given permission for one of the suspects to stay at the Ketchum residence. Police have recovered the stolen jewelry, which the suspects allegedly sold to Wood River Valley jewelry businesses.

The jail's size and future isn't necessarily the first thing on the minds of working inmates, who are glad to have a break from the monotony of a cell to prepare meals and help with laundry.

'It's not so bad, and it's better than being stuck in a cell all day," said David Altes, an inmate preparing lunch in the kitchen with fellow inmate Zachary Sparks. Inmates take the jail's condition in stride and didn't complain about it when talking to the media on Thursday. "It's not anyone's fault," Sparks said of the jail. "It's just old." At the same time, both inhis year marks the 75th anniversary of cheap gasoline in Twin Falls — and the birth of roadside poetry across southern Idaho.

Remembering the Bard of Kimberly Road

In 1936 - deep in theGreat Depression – a 20year-old entrepreneur named Farris Lind opened a filling station on Kimberly Road. His competitive edge: Lind sold gas for less than the 12 cents per gallon that was the going rate at the time.

He knew that would annoy the competition, so Lind called his station Stinker and devised a logo of a skunk wearing boxing gloves.

After World War II, Lind opened other gas stations across Idaho — there are 52 now, stretching from Idaho Falls to Lewiston — and in the process of driving all those empty miles on U.S. Highway 30 and U.S. Highway 91, he grew a little bored.

Why, Lind reasoned, not keep folks awake with a little humor? So he started putting up signs on vacant roadsides – 4-by-5-foot slabs of metal lost in miles of sagebrush. Soon, motorists looked forward to seeing them.

The most famous was near Bliss. It read, "Petrified watermelons — take one home to your mother-in-law." That sign was located in a field of rocks left by a melting glacier hundreds of thousands of years before, and the stones did indeed look like melons scattered across a field. Lind hauled truckloads of rocks to the area because so many people took the native stones home.

From Wayan to Weiser, Lind's signs were small japes aimed at rural sensibilities, writ large in black paint on yellow steel:

- "Tourists: Do not laugh at the natives."
- "Are you crazy about Idaho? We have straightjackets in all sizes."
- "Rain checks cashed. suckers welcome - Bank of Snake River."
- "Ain't this monotonous?"
- "Warning! Methodists watch out — for Mormon crickets."
- And the peerless, "If you lived here, you'd be home

Such messages have remarkable resonance to a long-haul motorist who no longer has any feeling in his buttocks.

Farris' signage was a riff on the Burma Shave signs of a generation earlier; many were sexist and most were corny. Didn't matter; Idaho travelers treasured their poetry the way Russians dote on Pushkin.

- "If your wife wants to drive, don't stand in her
- "Why be a wage slave? Find your wife a job."
- "Idaho is full of lonely and beautiful women."

- "Don't just sit there: Nag
- your husband." • "Have tea with me; bring
- your own bag." • "Beware of curves and
- soft shoulders."
- "Sagebrush is free take some home to your mother-in-law."

President Lyndon Johnson's wife, Lady Bird, effectively killed off the Stinker signs through her highway beautification initiative that eventually banned most commercial signs from rural interstate highways by federal law. Lind died in 1983, and his family sold the company in 2002.

You can now drive the breadth of this state in six hours, thanks to freeways. The same trip in 1936 would have required 12.

But it seems longer now, somehow, because there's no poetry left in the middle of Idaho's High Lonesome. No, "Californians must be dipped before entering Idaho." No ineffably profound, "Sitting Bull stood up here."

Scientists identify flash in distant galaxy

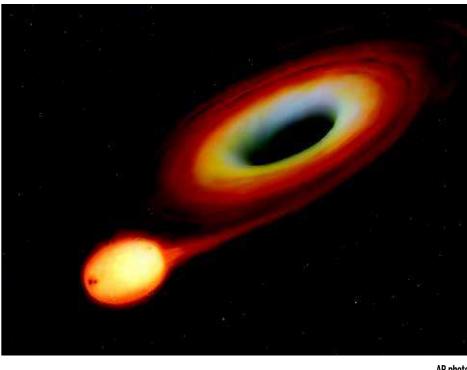

Astronomers think they have solved the mystery of an extraordinary flash spied in a faraway galaxy, saying it came from a massive black hole that devoured a star after it wandered too close.

The awesome energy released by the feeding frenzy was first detected by NASA's Swift satellite on March 28 and was later confirmed by a fleet of space and ground telescopes.

Some scientists initially thought the bright flash was a gamma-ray burst from a star collapsing, but flaring from such an event typically lasts only a few hours.

Instead of fading, the cosmic outburst continued to burn bright and emit highenergy radiation months later.

After shootout, trail goes cold in Montana manhunt

By Nicholas K. Geranios Associated Press writer

MISSOULA, Mont. – A Montana fugitive and exmilitia leader has been on the run since a Sunday shootout with deputies, but the trail has gone cold.

Missoula County Sheriff Carl Ibsen said Thursday that deputies were trying to develop leads to find David Burgert, who authorities say ran off into the Lolo National Forest after exchanging shots with deputies following a low-speed car chase.

Police think Burgert is hiding somewhere in the mountains near the Montana-Idaho border, an area of towering peaks, low brush and thick pine forests. In recent decades, this remote region has proven fertile ground for extremist groups including the Militia of Montana, the neo-Nazi Aryan Nations and many others.

Burgert once led an antigovernment militia in northwestern Montana known as Project 7. It was broken up after Burgert was arrested in 2002 on weapons charges. He spent eight years in federal prison before being released in March 2010.

Group says Montana didn't study impact of megaloads on bridges

HELENA, Mont. (AP) A group that opposes an oil company's plans to haul 200 huge loads of oil field equipment through northwestern Montana argues the state didn't adequately analyze the impact of the megaloads on the state's bridges.

ONLY 2 DAYS LEFT!

BOISE (AP) - A federal grand jury has indicted two Idaho men accused of using Molotov cocktails last month to destroy government vehicles and a private business building Pavette.

The eight count indictment was issued Wednesday against 48-year-old David Vonbargen, of Fruitland, and 21-year-old Donovan Bolen, of Payette.

They face a range of charges, from conspiring to use explosive devices in a federal crime to possession of stolen firearms.

Federal prosecutors say the charges stem from the theft of guns from a pawn shop in Fruitland May 27. The indictment alleges Vonbargen and Bolen used Molotov cocktails to destroy a U.S. Department of Agriculture truck and all-terrain vehicle, as well as a building owned by Western Core

oh aah. Ooh aah. Repeat as neces-And then we all go to sleep, the sun comes up the next morning and we all go back to work on Tuesday, July 5, with little lingering benefit from the previous day's aerial pyrotechnics.

For the second year in a row the subject of fireworks has created – well, fireworks. This year the controversy isn't about changing the date for the fireworks, it's about whether or not we'll have the money to pay for them. Despite the best efforts of Ruth Pierce and her citizens' committee, the $35,000 needed to fund the bigger, better combined Jerome-Twin Falls fireworks has not materialized. Perhaps it will; perhaps it won't. We think that it shouldn't.

Fireworks appear to be one of those things that become linked over time with patriotism. And because by now we've all seen a photo of Independence Hall at night silhouetted against vibrant multi-colored fireworks, we are tempted to believe that the tradition started on July 4, 1776. It didn't. Fireworks were invented in China sometime in the seventh century to ward off evil spirits. We hope that we've moved beyond

Fireworks are nice, but they're hardly a necessity. And while the "hard" cost of $35,000 does not seem exorbitant, the opportunity cost associated with it may be. Simply stated, opportunity cost reflects what the $35,000 in individual, business and municipal funds could have been used for if they weren't paying for a 30-minute, once-ayear fireworks show.

Those who run area non-profits could offer a wide array of suggestions on how to spend that money. Although economists continue to tell us that the Great Recession has been over for nearly two years, organizations that rely on charitable donations would beg to differ. As the recovery wanes, so do contributions, and it's a near certainty that individual and business donations to expanded fireworks will be made in lieu of other charitable donations rather than in addition.

What do we suggest? Stop where we're at and realize that regionalizing fireworks between Jerome and Twin Falls can preserve a July 4 show but not expand it. Take the $20,000 already raised and buy the best show that that $20,000 will get us. And stop at that. There is and continues to be incredible need throughout south-central Idaho. An expanded fireworks extravaganza is not among them

Living on bread and circuses

ome in the first two centuries A.D. faced a yawning gulf between rich and poor. The mighty empire built on tribute reached its geographic limits. Its economy created few exportable goods. Slaves acquired by conquest built most of its bridges, roads and aqueducts and took jobs in farming, mining and construction. As this cheaper labor replaced Roman citizens, idle, unemployed, hungry people filled the capital.

Alice Schroeder

The Caesars created make-work and part-time jobs, subsidized housing and doled out grain. Even more, they found, was needed. "A people that yawns is ripe for revolt," wrote Jerome Carcopino in Daily Life in Ancient Rome.

The emperors added holidays until, eventually, the Romans spent half their days attending gladiator games, public executions and chariot races. Disgusted, the satirist Juvenal accused his fellow citizens of selling out for bribes of "bread and circuses." The Romans did nothing to prove him wrong, until two centuries later the empire was divided forever and Rome was sacked by Visigoths.

The complicated causes of Rome's decline have long fascinated historians, and provide a lens through which to examine the vulnerability of other dominant cultures. Americans' addiction to entertainment has been compared to the circuses of ancient Rome. We spend much of our free time watching dreck on TV like Half Pint wrestlers" who attack each other with staple guns and broken bottles.

When entertainment dominates a society, it changes more than the culture; it reshapes the economv. You can see that circuses are where the money is from the rise of digital entertainment, which has steered enormous amounts of discretionary income toward digital content and the devices that run it: laptops, televisions, gaming consoles, smart phones. In the decade leading up to the 2008 financial crisis, the only major industry other than health care that consistently showed strong real growth was consumer electronics.

We face a situation in which our labor costs, laws and regulations make U.S. business less competitive than that of other countries. In the 1990s, manufacturing workers went through a draconian loss of employment as work was sent offshore. The very thing that drove the jobs overseas made the bread cheap. During the highgrowth bubble decade that $culminated \, in \, 2008, the \, sales$ growth rates of basic consumer goods such as apparel, cars and sporting goods averaged less than 2 percent.

Offsetting the loss of manufacturing work, the leverage-happy bubble era created so many jobs for bankers, hairstylists, airline ticket agents and home health aides that we began to describe ourselves as a "service economy." But service businesses are vulnerable to the same forces that drove the fat out of manufacturing. Take retailing. Since the 1990s, businesses that helped make the bread cheaper, such as superstores and warehouse clubs, were the only major category of retailers to show strong growth.

The proportion of our total population currently working has fallen to 58.4 percent, the level it was in 1983.

It's true that this percentage should improve as the economy improves, but structural forces are creating some serious employment headwinds.

Simply put, what has been good for American consumers hasn't been good for

Look at the big picture, and you also see how, unlike Rome, whose armies looted the lands they conquered, the underemployed U.S. must borrow money to pay for our bread and circuses. Rome was so rich it took hundreds of years for the empire to crumble. We're broke, which accelerates the day of reckoning. Reform of U.S. entitlement spending would buy us time, but wouldn't fix the employment situation.

On a positive note, this bread-and-circuses economv does offer new opportunities. People who can help make things cheaper will do well. They can use digital technology to build businesses of truly global scale. Lastly, anyone who can satisfy the public's lust for mindrotting drivel has a viable career ahead in a growth indus-

Drowning a country in vicarious debauchery may be a lousy way to sustain a civilization. Still, there is something to be said for Half Pint Brawlers and its ilk. TVwatching keeps people at home, instead of marching in the streets.

Unfair treatment stuns festival-goer

Gee, did you hear about .? Shame on you, shame on Our recent community festivities, the Western Days Parade, concerts, craft booths and kiddie rides were once again an outstanding show of my home town. A good, wholesome place to live, relatively safe, wellplanned activities and enjoyed by the majority; free of charge if you have your own picnic and supplies. Awesome! Thank you, Magic Valley!

After living in other states, becoming a part of other communities, I can honestly say my heart and pride is here; the magic really is magic!

Standing in line for the traditional treats, well-anticipated and enjoyed. There are two community events I save for and attend no matter where I might be currently living. It's nostalgic. Magic Valley native must do's. I, however, did not spend the whole time as I usually have in past years. Me, shame faced, 2011!

A gentleman ahead of my family member in line for the mini-donuts was grossly overcharged for six donuts. The company advertised right there for all to see: six for $3 and some change! This at the Hagerman Senior Cit-it makes a decision as to man was charged $6 for six donuts on the tray. He was Hispanic. We were dumbstruck! We were charged for our tray as advertised. Might it be that because we may look "clearly not Hispanic" that this company's employee instantly remembered the price of a tray of minidonuts? We are all Americans, south, north central, people of all races and Native Americans! Mostly transplanted Americans! Equal! Period!

At the moment it happened, speechless; I said nothing. You can bet, though, for the remainder of my attendance at these Western Days, my mouth was working ... "Do not do business there, they cheat people! Shame on you!"

I think for me, next time, I'll just haul in some delicious Swensen's full-sized, quartered maple donuts, nice ones, chocolate, too, hand them out to all who come by my picnic blanket on the other side of the sidewalk. Enjoy the festivities my new way! Neighborly like!

I think it was apparent that most citizens want to be assured of 24-hour coverage by an officer that they can call their own. Hagerman is facing the same situation as Wendell – money to support a department. To those who did not read the article on June 3 in the Times-News, you should look it up. Wendell has a three-man department. It is faced with the problem of should it continue to spend $428,815 of its $3.6 million budget on law enforcement?

Hagerman has a lot of money invested in police equipment and the Hagerman Christian Center donated time and money to remodel the old city hall into a police station with a holding cell. The citizens want to be able to utilize that investment. And well they should. Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough was in attendance and was willing to work with the council when

Help needed to recover stolen items

I would like to ask all of the Magic Valley to look for stolen goods. Someone broke into a young family's storage unit in the Curry area and stole memories. The deer antlers cannot be replaced. They hold precious memories, and we would like to have them returned. They also stole camping equipment, tent, stove, sleeping bags, Dutch ovens, sporting goods, golf clubs, hunting waders, fishing poles, towels, pots and pans.

Hopefully, there are people in the Magic Valley that still have good consciences and will help us find this family's stuff and notify the authorities if they have any information about this robbery. Please.

Five myths about the red, white and blue mericans love our flag. We display it at concerts and stadiums to celebrate, and at times of national tragedy to show our resolve.

We have our schoolchildren pledge allegiance to it; we have consecrated it in our national anthem. Yet the iconography and history of the American flag are infused with myth and misrepresentation. Here are five of the most prevalent myths.

1. Betsy Ross made the first American flag.

The Betsy Ross story is the most tenacious piece of fiction involving the flag. There simply is no credible evidence that Ross either made or had a hand in designing the American flag before it made its debut in 1777.

The story cropped up in 1870 when William Canby, Ross' grandson, told the Historical Society of Pennsylvania that his grandmother made the flag at George Washington's behest. Can-

by's sole evidence: affidavits

from family members. It's all but certain that the story about her creating the American flag is a myth.

2. The red, white and blue colors symbolize American sacrifice.

No federal documentl exists providing an official reason for the flag's colors — or their meaning. The closest thing to an explanation are the words of Charles Thomson, the secretary of the Continental Congress. Thomson's report to Congress on June 20, 1782, the day the Great Seal of the United States was approved, contained a description of the colors, the same as those in the flag: "White signifies purity and innocence. Red hardiness and valour and Blue ... signifies vigilance, perseverance and justice."

Historians believe that the use of red, white and blue in the Stars and Stripes has to do with the simple fact that they were the colors of the first flag of the American colonies, the Continental Colors.

3. The Pledge of Allegiance has long been recited in Congress and other governmental bodies.

The pledge was written by magazine editor Francis Bellamy in 1892 for a nationwide public school celebration commemorating the 400th anniversary of Christopher Columbus's landing. In 1898, New York became the first state to mandate that public school students recite the Pledge of Allegiance at the beginning of each school day. Many states followed suit.

In 1988, the pledge became an issue in the presidential campaign. Vice President George H.W. Bush criticized his opponent, Democrat Michael Dukakis, for vetoing a bill as governor of Massachusetts that would have required the pledge to be recited in public schools. Dukakis said he did so after being advised that the law was unconstitutional.

At the height of the campaign, on Sept. 13, the pledge was recited on the floor of the House of Representatives for the first time. Republican members of the House, who were in the minority, offered a resolution to that effect. and it was accepted by Speaker Jim Wright, a Democrat. Wright ruled that from then on, the pledge would be recited at the start of business each day that the House was in session. The Senate did not begin daily recital of the pledge until June 24, 1999. Since then, the pledge has become part of the opening rituals of nearly all state and local governmental bodies.

4. It is illegal to burn the American flag.

It was illegal until 1989, when the Supreme Court ruled 5-4 in Texas v. Johnson that burning the flag is a form of symbolic speech protected by the First Amendment. The Supreme Court's decision invalidated a 1968 national flag-desecration law, as well as similar laws in 48 states. In response, Congress passed the Flag Protection Act, but that law was also challenged and wound up in the $Supreme\,Court.\,The\,court\,in$ 1990 essentially affirmed its earlier ruling, stating that any law banning flag burning violated free speech.

Those decisions led to a national movement to amend the Constitution to make flag desecration illegal, but it's never passed Con-

5. It's OK to wear a Stars and Stripes T-shirt.

The U.S. Flag Code frowns on the use of the flag to sell or display of any "article of merchandise ... upon which shall have been printed, painted, attached, or otherwise placed a representation of "the flag to "advertise, call attention to, decorate, mark, or distinguish the article or substance on which so placed."

In other words, when you wear a flag T-shirt or hat while reclining on an American flag beach towel near your American flag camping chair, you are violating the Flag Code. The code, which was drawn up at the first National Flag Conference in Washington in 1923, is the law of the land. But it is not enforced, nor is it enforceable.

There is no Flag Police. You will not be arrested for wearing a flag-embossed T-shirt on Flag Day — or any other day of the year.

"The best way for ethanol to survive is to stand on its own two feet, without spending something we going to have anyway;" said Sen.

In a sign that some ethanol subsidies are likely to endure, the Senate also voted 59-41 to reject a measure that would have eliminated a government program that supports the distribution of ethanol. The House had passed a similar measure earlier in the day, by a vote of 283-128, adding it to an agriculture spending bill.

The debate played out as the White House and congressional leaders have continued to negotiate spending cuts to help reign in government red ink.

Kroger 1Q profit, revenue jump; outlook raised

CINCINNATI (AP) - Kroger Co. rang up double-digit jumps in first-quarter revenue and net income, as the grocery chain's fuel stations and loyalty discounts helped draw more frequent shoppers when gas and grocery prices rose.

The nation's largest traditional grocery operator, which owns Smith's Food King and Fred Meyer stores, now expects better results for the full year than earlier projected, even though Kroger leaders said U.S. economic improvement appears to be stagnating. That can help Kroger because people eat more meals at home instead of at restaurants and are looking for ways to manage spending against higher gas prices.

Kroger said it has both been adding new customers and increasing the number of regular shoppers who earn rewards such as fuel discounts and special coupons for items they buy often.

"With inflation and rising gas prices, customers' budgets are stretched," Rodney McMullen, Kroger's president, told investors on a conference call. "The value we offer them through lower everyday prices, weekly features and personalized rewards to our loyal customers continues to resonate with them."

Cindy Ewing of Springboro, Ohio, said she uses coupons and closely watches for sales and promotions at Kroger and other grocery stores as prices have crept up.

"I've watched it go up 10 cents here, 10 cents there, they do it a little at a time, said Ewing, who shares saving tips at www.happyhomemakercindy.com. "Most people are budgeted out according to what they make."

Kroger said it has cut costs in areas such as store energy use and product distribution and then uses that money to discount groceries - McMullen estimated by $2.1 billion a year - even while passing along product cost inflation estimated at 3.5 percent to shoppers.

Kroger said net income rose to $432.3 million, or 70 cents a share.

Jobless, construction numbers lift economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer Americans applied for unemployment benefits last week and builders broke ground on more homes in May. The latest data offered some hope that the economy may be improving after hitting a slump in late spring.

Unemployment benefit applications fell to a seasonally adjusted 414,000, the Labor Department said. It was the second drop in three weeks and a positive sign that layoffs are slowing.

Still, applications have been above 400,000 for 10 straight weeks, evidence that the job market is weak compared to earlier this year.

Home construction rose last month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 560,000 units per year, the Commerce Department said. Economists say the pace of construction is far below the 1.2 million homes per year that must be built to sustain a healthy housing market. Economists said the steady decline in unemployment applications signals that the job market is improving, but at a very slow pace.

Remember that a pet left in a hot car can be extremely deadly. With summer upon us, we are outdoors more and so are our pets, which increase the chances of Dog Bites.

HOW TO AVOID A DOG BITE

How to avoid being bitten by a dog:

Never approach an unfamiliar dog, especially one who's tied or confined behind a fence or in a car. Don't pet a dog—even your own—without letting him see and sniff you first. Never turn your back to a dog and run away. A dog's natural instinct will be to chase and catch you. Don't disturb a dog while she's sleeping, eating, chewing on a toy, or caring for puppies. Be cautious around strange dogs. Always assume that a dog who doesn't know you may see you as an intruder or a threat.

What to do if you think a dog may attack:

If you are approached by a dog that may attack you, follow these steps:

Resist the impulse to scream and run away. Remain motionless, hands at your sides, and avoid eye contact with the dog. Once the dog loses interest in you, slowly back away until he is out of sight. If the dog does attack, "feed" him your jacket, purse, bicycle, or anything that you can put between yourself and the dog. If you fall or are knocked to the ground, curl into a ball with your hands over your ears and remain motionless. Try not to scream or roll around. Floodwaters from the nearby Missouri River cover a county highway Wednesday, in Hamburg, Iowa. The water level continues to rise and officials say that it should crest sometime later this week.

Missouri River floodwater reaches Iowa town levee

Water that has been pouring through a breached Missouri River levee finally reached a makeshift barrier that is a the worst. South Dakota offismall Iowa town's only hope of avoiding major flooding, authorities said Thursday.

The water, which breached the primary levee south of Hamburg on Monday and has been slowly advancing over the surrounding farmland, reached the 8-foot-tall levee late Wednesday, Army Corps of Engineers spokesman Carlos Lazo said. There were no immediate problems where officials expect about 5 feet of water to eventually collect.

The water appeared to be about 2 feet deep Thursday morning, according to an Associated Press reporter in Hamburg.

Crews finished work on the 3-mile-long levee Wednesday by covering it with plastic to reduce erosion. And most of those living in the threatened parts of town have cleared out.

Any hopes that the breaches might alleviate the long-term flooding threat for communities downstream were short-lived, as river levels that dipped slightly from the release of pressure began rising again Wednesday.

The river has been rising for weeks as the corps releases increasing amounts of water from its upstream dams to clear out heavy spring rain and snowmelt. Releases at Gavins Point Dam in South Dakota hit the maximum planned amount of 150,000 cubic feet of water per second Tuesday, and the corps wasn't planning to reduce the amount it's releasing from its dams until August at the earliest.

Pearson said Monday's a temporary dip in river levels. Once the water spreads out, the pressure will build up and the river will rise again.

"The water is continually being replenished, so it's going to go back up again," Pearson said.

That was already the case near Brownville, Neb., just downstream of the breaches, where the river level fell from 40.74 feet on Monday to 39.54 feet on Tuesday. The river had started rising again by 3 p.m. Wednesday, when it was at 39.92 feet.

Fire sale at Las Vegas' iconic Sahara Hotel draws crowd

LAS VEGAS (AP) Hundreds of visitors lined up outside the once-iconic Sahara hotel-casino on the Las Vegas Strip on Thursday as it reopened for a liquidation sale to get rid of everything inside.

From $10 waste baskets, $3 decks of playing cards and $150 camel lamps, bargain-hunters searched every nook for tagged trinkets and furnishings that let them take home a piece of the iconic joint.

"We don't go to the openings — we go to the closings," said 52-yearold Marc Simon of Las Vegas, who shopped with his wife to furnish a bedroom in his house.

"Each one of my rooms in my house is a suite of a different hotel," Simon said. "Every time one of these goes down, we add on to the house?"

He had spent about $400 by midday on two camel lamps, a slot machine chair and smaller items including bar mats and shot glasses. The Sahara closed last month after 59 years, as owner SBE Entertainment decided it couldn't keep the casino open given the tourism econo-

Jerome's got talent

'Rhinestone Roper' advances in television competition

By Eva Stutzman Times-News writer

With guns blazing, Jerome performer Dan Mink will head to Las Vegas for a shootout with the competition on television show "America's Got Talent."

Mink, 52, who already twirls guns and throws knives on stage for schools, fairs and other events, was contacted by the show's producers. Usually performers go to auditions or send in videos before the NBC show calls them. But Mink has already gained such a level of success - national tours, Wild West performing championships, a "Ripley's Believe It or Not" appearance - that he was asked to audi-

Mink's performance schedule as the "Rhinestone Roper" kept him from going to the first round of auditions. But with the help of a demo video he'd already made, Mink was picked to go on to the second round, auditioning before a live audience in Houston, which aired June 7.

"I was so happy he was first on the show," said Ella Mink of Jerome, Dan Mink's mother. "I had given myself a headache in anticipation." The judges seemed to like what they saw in Dan's second audition. He took the stage twirling guns and throwing knives at his assistant, Melody Emel of Las Vegas.

The Western-inspired act will take the stage at the Planet Hollywood Hotel in Las Vegas later this month. In the next round of "America's Got Talent" competition, viewers call or text to vote for the acts that they think deserve their own shows in Las Vegas. Due to a confidentiality agreement, Dan was unable to tell the Times-News when, exactly, he will head to Vegas.

Local supporters who have followed Dan's career since he started his show in the Magic Valley nearly 18 years ago are also excited to see him in Vegas.

"I just hope he's on long enough that we can see all of his show," said MaryAnn Stanger, who went to College of Southern Idaho with Dan and performed with him in one of his first stage appearances, "The Will Rogers Follies" with Twin Falls' Dilettantes troupe.

For that show, Dan needed to learn to spin a rope. From there, Stanger pushed him to develop Western skills. "He said he needed practice spinning rope for the play, and I thought he should go perform for schools to practice," Stanger said.

After Stanger arranged without Dan's knowledge for him to appear at local schools, Dan consented to putting on assemblies. Dan's show has grown to encompass many aspects of the Wild West. For schools he incorporates a history lesson, he said, and for

In Wendell, Dairy Days will reach their climax Saturday, as elsewhere in the valley the Buhl Fiesta showcases traditional dancers in swirling skirts and black suits, an artist explains her quirky "pie tin" art in Filer, and a Scottish Festival in Hailey pits locals against each other in ancient contests of athleticism. (The children's competition will guarantee that your youngsters sleep soundly on Saturday night.) Saturday's crazy bed races in downtown Twin Falls will benefit the Multiple Sclerosis Society, and a tour of historical homes that day will showcase Oakley's remarkable Victorian architecture, inside and out.

As tonight's warmup for all of that, catch the gala opening of Twin Falls' Art in the Park. More than 30 regional artists — for the first time, screened through applications — will offer their fine art and original crafts in booths around City Park. The sale continues through Sunday, but take this tip: Saturday is the day to go. That's when a Rotary Club fundraiser will debut 15 original flavors of ice cream and invite your votes.

Touring pianist Marvin Goldstein and vocalist Vanessa Joy who have some renown among Magic Valley's LDS community will perform on a Twin Falls stage tonight and in Burley on Saturday, St. Thomas Playhouse opens its production of "Footloose" on Wednesday in Sun Valley.

And the Twin Falls Tonight summer concert series starts its six-week run on Wednesday night. Outside, of course. They can't keep you indoors for long.

Buhl Fiesta drops rodeo to focus on dance traditions

Weight throwers converge on Hailey for Scottish festival

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Eric Ettesvold attended his first Scottish festival three years ago in Boise. Since then, the Twin Falls man has spent his spare time trying to throw a 56pound weight with a ring welded onto it as high as it can go.

"It's like throwing a big bag of rock salt around," said Ettesvold, who works in the heating and air conditioning business. "I'm closing in on 50, and this sport makes you so strong so quickly."

Ettesvold will don his kilt Saturday for the first Blaine County Scottish Festival and Highland Games. The games will be held from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Nelson Field, between the Hailey Rodeo grounds and Hailey Elementary School.

More than 50 members of the Scottish American Athletic Association — founded to perpetuate Gaelic-Scottish customs and traditions - are coming from as far away as Montana, Utah and Oregon to compete, Ettesvold said. They will be joined by members of Wood River Valley law and fire departments who will compete against one another, and by representatives of various cities in the valley who will compete among themselves.

Anyone, in fact, may try their hand at the competition.

There's even a children's competition in which kids will be challenged with climbing over and under three dozen hay bales, picking up 2- to 3-pound stones and sprinting to the finish, among other things.

"Last year in Ketchum we had 120 kids come out for this. Those kids slept well there will be drums and the that night," Ettesvold said.

'Footloose' cast hopes play will help Idaho fight its fears

Ariel Rawlings, left, Mia Jefferson, Gracie Egan and Karlie Jeneson will perform in a Sun Valley production of 'Footloose,' opening Wednesday.

By Karen Bossick Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - The classic tale of teen rebellion is an inspiring one for Rachel Kaufman.

"I look at 'Footloose' and I remember all the high school and middle school students who showed up at the Capitol a few months ago. They were not OK with what Tom Luna was doing to education, and they helped change things," she said.

Kaufman hopes that St. Thomas Playhouse's production of "Footloose," opening Wednesday, will inspire other teens to stand up and be counted about things they believe in.

The play is an adaptation of the popular 1998 film starring Kevin Bacon, John Lithgow, Chris Penn and movie inspired several hit songs, including Kenny Loggins' "Footloose" with its memorable lyrics: "... cut loose, footloose, kick off your Sunday shoes ..."

The St. Thomas Playhouse version stars Emmet Fortuin as Ren, the newcom-Howard as the Biblethumping Rev. Shaw Moore; troubled daughter Ariel. Director is Freddie Harris and musical director is Alyssa Hershey. Peter Burke and the town has been repressed Sara Gorby choreographed the line and other dances.

A police car burns during a riot in downtown Vancouver, British Columbia, Wednesday following the Vancouver Canucks 4-0 loss to the Boston Bruins in Game 7 of the Stanley Cup Finals

Riots overshadow Canucks fans' Game 7 heartbreak

By Greg Beacham

Associated Press writer

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The plywood sheets filling in for shattered windows on the historic Hudson's Bay Co. department store Thursday were turned into a canvas for expressing a city's embarrassment.

On a spectacularly sunny day after a dreary, disturbing night in Vancouver, hundreds inscribed messages and drew pictures on the wood. It was a form of group therapy for a city recovering from extensive rioting after the Canucks' blowout loss in Game 7 of the Stanley Cup finals.

Some messages were hockeycentric: "So Proud of Our Boys." "Real Fans Don't Riot." "We'll Get 'Em Next Year."

Others were pure apology: "On behalf of my team and my city, I'm sorry."

Overturned cars, raging bonfires, hospitalized fans and hooliganism are likely to be the lingering memory of the Canucks' agonizing failure on the precipice of their first Stanley Cup title.

And that's a shame. Vancouver's citywide pain after the Canucks' 4-0 loss to the Boston Bruins already was heartbreaking enough without the ugliness that followed.

A year after Vancouver hosted ey stick during the playoff run. a successful Winter Olympics, this gorgeous, cosmopolitan city on the Pacific coast was ever so close to a championship it desired perhaps even more than those gold medals won by the Canadian hockey team on the

Longtime Jerome coach inducted to wrestling Hall

Two tables of people at last month's Class of 2011 National Wrestling Hall of ceremony clocked Tim Matthews' induction speech at 29 and 31 seconds.

The Jerome coach thanked his list of people who helped him along the way during his two-decade coaching career and said anyone interested could read the rest of his speech if they could grab it out of his pocket.

That was it, and he sat down next to his wife, Joy.

"And I slugged him," she joked.

He may not be a man of many words or someone who pursues the spotlight, but Matthews left his legacy at Jerome High School and the former coach finds himself in the National Wrestling Hall of Fame Idaho Chapter for his dedication and lifetime service to the sport.

A 1973 graduate of Declo High School, Matthews wrestled at Boise State University from 1973-1977, winning the Big Sky's Outstanding Wrestler award his senior year.

After graduating from Boise State, Matthews moved to Jerome, where he coached wrestling for 22 years and football for 19 and also served District IV as a wrestling official for 27 years.

He won the District IV wrestling Coach of the Year award 12 times and was awarded the Idaho High School Activities Association Distinguished

He's at it again: McIlroy, feeling 'comfortable,' charges to U.S. Open lead

BETHESDA, Md. – If he keeps playing like this, Rory McIlroy's next chance to close out a major should come very soon.

McIlroy, who blew a four-shot lead in the final round of the Masters, is on top at the U.S. Open, shooting a 6-under-par 65 on Thursday to take a three-stroke lead over Y.E. Yang and the man who wound up taking the green jacket, Charl Schwartzel.

220,000 Mavs fans celebrate NBA title

DALLAS (AP) - The face of the Dallas Mavericks laughed, sang and even seemed

For Dirk Nowitzki, the only thing that could come close to being an NBA champion for the first time was celebrating it with the fans in his adopted hometown of Dallas.

An estimated crowd of 200,000 crammed downtown Thursday morning for a parade in the team's honor, with another 20,000 or so filling the arena for a rally filled with emotional moments.

After waiting 31 years for the franchise to be atop the NBA, fans honored the feat in a way that many said was worth the wait. Dallas wrapped up the title in Miami on Sunday night so, other than their airport arrival, this was the first chance for fans to show their appreciation in person.

They were peaceful, too, unlike the scene in Vancouver following the end of the Stanley Cup finals on Wednesday night, and the commotion during a Cowboys championship parade in 1993.

Nowitzki was the unquestioned star of the show, drawing the loudest cheers from start to finish - usually chants of "M! V! P!" There were German flags in the crowd, a sign calling him "Der Kaiser" and cut-out letters that spelled "Thank you Dirk."

This day had two emotional crescendos for Nowitzki.

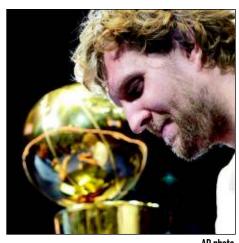

The first came when coach Rick Carlisle said, "You're looking at the best basketball team on the planet. It's also very clear we have in our presence the greatest basketball player on the planet." The overhead jumbo board showed a close-up shot of Nowitzki wiping his eyes.

When it was Nowitzki's turn to speak, his teammates and Cuban were among those standing and chanting "MVP." Nowitzki bit his bottom lip and looked down. He was too overcome with emotion to answer the first question from co-emcee Chuck Cooper-

"It's been an amazing ride, an amazing journey," Nowitzki said. "It's been a lot of ups and a lot of downs. This is the top of the iceberg. It feels absolutely amazing."

He relived his journey from a 19-year-old draftee with a bowl cut and a bad earring – "just a bad look," he said with a smile – to the greatest player in team history, a former league MVP and the newly minted finals

"I didn't really know what to expect," he 13 years."

said of his early days in Dallas. "It's been an amazing ride and you guys have been with me every step of the way. This is for our Another highly charged moment came when it was Cuban's turn to speak. He couldn't.

The rambunctious billionaire determined to do things his way seemed awed by the moment, surely thinking about his own journey from a fan who used to buy scalped tickets to buying the club in January 2000.

When Cooperstein joked about this being "a long way from Reunion Arena," Cuban just shook his head, lips pinched. After Carlisle came to the rescue with an answer and they embraced, the guy who loves being the center of attention motioned for quiet.

He had a story to tell.

"The day I bought the team, but it had not yet been announced, I went out with some friends to have an adult beverage," Cuban said. "I go into this bar and I see this tall, German, goofy-looking guy — with his bowl cut, earring — and I know I'm going to be his boss the very next day. He has no idea.

"So I walk up to him and say, 'Yo. Let me buy you a beer? He just looks at me, shakes his head and walks away.

"The next day, we're at (the practice facility). I'm supposed to get introduced to the team. I walk in the door and I walk up and I just look at him and he just shakes his head. That's pretty much been our relationship for

It looks like the NBA is taking notice.

The array of non-BCS draft prospects on this year's list ranges from All-Americans Jimmer Fredette and Kawhi Leonard to blue-collar guys such as Butler's Matt Howard and even those coming from NBA royalty such as Pepperdine's Mychel Thompson.

That would mean 15 of the 48 players who have come to Indy were from non-BCS schools.

It's not just Bird, either.

"The reason we're bringing a lot of these guys in is a lot of these guys we haven't seen as much as we would like and we want to put them in different matchups," Minnesota assistant general manager Tony Ronzone said Thursday. "Who knows where we'll be in the draft? We could be all over so we want to be prepared on certain guys that we don't have a good feel on."

Those under the microscope have a different take.

"I think you've seen more success with teams in those positions and if those teams are having success, scouts figure there must be something good about these guys," Howard said after one of his 10 scheduled workouts. "I think some of the best players we played this year were from smaller schools."

Bird acknowledges NCAA tournament success can help improve the draft stock of lesser-known players.

But there's more to it than winning games on college basketball's big stage.

Jake Kelly, the Indiana State guard who transferred from Iowa, contends the talent gap between big schools and small schools is shrinking rapidly. Morehead State's Demonte Harper credits the changes to improved midmajor coaching.

UNC releases public records after judge's ruling

RALEIGH, N.C. - North Carolina has released documents showing a group of Tar Heel football players accumulated more than $13,000 in parking citations over a 3½-year period.

The school released the documents Thursday, a day after the state Court of Appeals denied the school's request to delay the release of those records pending an appeal. A Wake County Superior Court judge had ruled in April that the school withheld documents it should have provided to requesting media outlets covering the NCAA investigation into the football program.

The documents show that the players combined for 395 citations between March 2007 and August 2010, though the records don't specify which players received each violation.

The citations ranged in penalty from $5 for improperly displaying a parking permit to $250 for parking in a fire lane or in a handicapped parking The total amount of the citations was $13,185.

The university said in a statement that the citations include records for 11 players requested by the media as well as an additional player, whom the school said had 68 tickets. The school said not all of the 11 players requested by the media had received tickets, but didn't specify which citation belonged in Bethesda, Md., Thursday.

Of the 395 citations, the school said 30 remain unpaid.

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) -World rankings proved to be worth only so much in the opening round at the U.S. Open.

The top-ranked trio of No. 1 Luke Donald, No. 2 Lee Westwood and No. 3 Martin Kaymer went out as a group and all failed to break par Thursday at Congressional Country Club. They finished a total of 10-over, collecting 17 bogeys and a double between them, with only 9 birdies.

Donald and Westwood, both Englishmen, shot 74 and 75. Kaymer, a German, finished with a 74.

"I think all three of us struggled a bit," Donald said. "There were no fireworks. We didn't get on a run and sometimes you need one or two guys to get on a run to get everyone going. It just didn't happen.

"It was," he added, "kind of a solemn group, I guess."

The problem certainly wasn't the start. Going off the 10th tee, both Donald and Kaymer made birdies, and the Englishman hit another 4-iron flush into the 11th green for a second straight birdie.

"I was loving the start," Donald said. But his red ing because of his certainty numbers were quickly that the long and brutal body has gone out this morning and shot 66," Westwood said.

Asked whether the Open setup, with its fast greens, narrow fairways and graduated rough, heaped additional pressure on the players, Westwood replied, "Any course is a mental grind if you're not sharp. The U.S. Open is no different. ... I didn't hit enough fairways. I didn't hit enough good irons. My short game was pretty sharp actually. I just made too many mistakes."

Kaymer blamed his problems on an inconsistent driver. He hit eight of 14 fairways, one better than either of his playing partners, but said an inability to take advantage of the course off the tee cost him all the way around.

"My short game kept me alive," he said.

So did a good attitude.

"A little strange for me pars, I wasn't making them. playing with five English laughed Kaymer, guys," caddie, Christian whose Donald, is Luke's brother. "But we all get along very

BETHESDA, Md. – Dear Tiger:

Don't know what you had planned for this week, maybe picking up the kids from preschool or cleaning out that bedroom closet you've been meaning to get to. Understand you're kind of out of your normal routine, but maybe the guys at the club will want to do lunch or play some cards.

You're not really missing much at Congressional, where the biggest news is they switched around some holes since the last time the U.S. Open was played here. Something about making things more interesting on Sunday, where someone from somewhere other than the host country will surely be hoisting the trophy over his head.

Believe me, this tournament needs something to make it interesting. You'll probably be out on the yacht this weekend, but if you tune in, I challenge you to tell me the difference between one long tree-lined hole at Congressional and the long treelined hole that follows it.

The course is missing something, but the field is missing even more. Without you there's no swarm of humanity moving from hole to hole, no fans climbing trees for a better look, and no one high-fiving the stranger next to him when you hole yet another crucial putt.

I'm sure you'll agree with me that Rory McIlroy is a fine young golfer with a fine future. The graceful way he handled his final-round blowup at the Masters this year won him a lot of admirers. So did his trip to Haiti earlier this month to see if he could do anything about the suffering there.

But he's not you. My guess is you'll resist the urge to turn on the big screen and watch it all unfold. After all, if the Open is really as hard as Phil Mickelson made it appear Thursday, you wouldn't have won it on just one leg at Torrey Pines three years ago.

I know you're missing your first U.S. Open since turning pro, but I did see your caddie here with Adam Scott's bag over his shoulder. That got me thinking that you may be gone longer than you've let on or that all wasn't right with Team Tiger, but I'm sure you'll explain everything when you finally do come

Your new swing coach is here, too, though no one seemed to notice. Sean Foley was just one of 10,000 guys walking around with fanny packs, though you'll be happy to know he did stop long enough at the driving range to diagnose the woes of some of his other clients.

Hope the knee is feeling better, and those reports of you in a walking boot and on crutches aren't true. Even if they are, I'm pretty sure you could contend this weekend among the pretenders to your throne.

I mean, the course isn't that tough, Tiger. They've obviously been putting water on the greens, and the pins were set in positions even a freshman congressman could handle. You would have torn this place apart, and probably been back at your hotel leading by four shots now.

But it's more than that. Wandering around Congressional during the opening round were golf fans who paid good money thinking they were going to watch you play. It used to be almost all of them did that so they could cheer for you to win, but I'm sure you've found out by now there are also those who cheer for you to lose.

But they cheer one way or another because you are Tiger Woods.

If nothing else, you would have created some buzz. A few F-bombs shouted from the tee surely would have livened up things a bit, even if you were out there hobbling between shots.

Anyway, Iknow you miss it, even the fun in the interview room, where you like nothing better than to engage in some clever repartee with sweaty scribes. The guy who gave you the beat down in the PGA Championship a few years back was in there after shooting an opening 68, but it just wasn't the same.

Still, Y.E. Yang seemed to perk up when I asked him about you. Turns out he misses you. Sort of.

"Half of my heart is disappointed," Yang said. "The other half is probably, I wouldn't say thrilled, but I know that my chance is a little bit better because Tiger is not in the field."

Your buddy Phil probably thought that, too. The guy has never won an Open, and he had to be salivating as he walked up to his first shot of the day knowing you were out of the way and the road to victory was clear. So what does the poor devil do? He promptly hits his first shot in the water, then spends the rest of his day trying to hack it around trees and out of rough as high as cornfields.

You might think the top three players in the world rankings would make their move in your absence, too, but none came close to breaking par. Doesn't really matter because we know who the true No. 1 is, don't we, Tiger?

Maybe you've just intimidated everyone for so long that no one knows what it's like to go out and take charge of one of these anymore. Sure, McIlroy shot what seemed like an effortless 65 to take the first-round lead, but surely you remember what happened to him the last time he had a lead in a major championship.

Well, that's about it from here, Tiger. Time to go out and see if that is really Sergio Garcia lurking just off the lead or just some impostor who knows how to putt. I'll give him your best, though I'm sure he's the last one who needs a reminder that you're not in the field for this one.

No one needs to say it, but we're all thinking the same

Get well soon. We miss having you around.

said. "And when you have that combination like that, everything's OK."

He hit 17 greens in regulation and did it from the fairways, which he hit nine times, and the rough, which was thick, but maybe not as vicious as it can be at the typical U.S. Open venue.

He made putts from short and long range and strung together three straight birdies in the middle of his round. He went 18 holes without a bogey — the only player of the 156 in the field who did - a remarkable feat on a course measuring 7,514 yards for the first

Rain that greeted the players early started again as McIlroy was heading to the ninth green - hislast hole of the day — but there was no dampening this effort.

He's not looking too far ahead, either.

"I have to back it up tomorrow so I can go into the weekend in good position,"

Open champion Louis American Oosthuizen, Ryan Palmer, Kyung-tae Kim and Scott Hend were met but because it was a tied for fourth at 2 under; a group of 10 finished another stroke back.

"I don't know how you compare the two, but the Olympics are a twoweek tournament. The Canucks are part of people's everyday lives in B.C. and Vancouver. We're proud to represent this part of the world."

Vancouver was the NHL's best regular season team by far, racking up a franchiserecord 54 victories and 117 points while winning the Presidents' Trophy. The Canucks led the league in goals scored (262), fewest goals allowed (185) and power-play efficiency (24.3 percent), and were second in penalty-killing success (85.6 percent).

Rep. Weiner resigns

Seared by sex photos scandal, he says he can't continue

By Karen Zraick and Andrew Miga Associated Press

NEW YORK - Seared by scandal, New York Rep. Anthony Weiner announced his resignation from Congress on Thursday, done in by lewd photos he took of himself, sent to women online and then adamantly lied about after being caught.

"I'm here today to again apologize for the personal mistakes I have made and the embarrassment I have caused," he said reading from a brief statement in Brooklyn.

"I make this apology to my neighbors and my constituents, but I make it particularly to my wife, Huma."

Weiner's wife was absent as he announced his decision, as she was 10 days ago when he admitted having sent inappropriate messages and photos to several women online.

Weiner said he had hoped to remain in Congress but conceded his predicament had made that impossible. Instead, he said he would resign "so my colleagues can get back to work, my neighbors can choose a new representative and, most importantly, that my wife and I can continue his career, or perhaps an ignoto heal from the damage I have minious pause for a brash liberal

In part, that echoed what party leaders have said for days as they pressured him to resign so Democrats could resume positioning themselves for the 2012 election campaign without constant moral grounds.

Weiner made his announcement at the same senior citizen center in Brooklyn where he announced his candidacy for the New York city council in 1992. He did not take questions, leaving from Congress marked an end to party campaign committee, on with ambitions to become mayor of New York.

The crowd on Thursday included hecklers and radio shock jocks, vying for attention at what became a New York media event.

Weiner, 46, has been on leave criticism from Republicans on from the House since last weekend. He had not been seen in public since telling reporters on Saturday morning he intended to return to work.

One official said Weiner telephoned House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi and Rep. Steve Is-

Wednesday evening to tell them of his plans to quit.

They had pressured him to resign, concluding the relentless media focus on his activities was complicating the Democrats' efforts to position themselves politically for the 2012 elections.

Weiner's decision to give up his House seat marks the end of a nearly three-week sex scandal without the sex - an event that resulted from the brash New Yorker's use of social media such as Twitter and Facebook.

He at first denied having sent any inappropriate photos, then unsaid whether his resignation rael of New York, the head of the recanted in a remarkable news conference 10 days ago at which he admitted having exchanged inappropriate messages with several women.

His confession triggered a tabloid-style frenzy in print and online that only grew more pronounced a few days later when an X-rated photo surfaced on a web-

After initially calling for a House ethics committee investigation, Pelosi dramatically ramped up the pressure on Saturday when she joined with Israel and Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz of Florida, leader of the Democratic National Committee, in calling on Weiner to step down.

Within hours, Weiner disclosed his plans to enter treatment, and Pelosi's aides made it known that did not negate her demand for a resignation.

President Barack Obama added to the pressure on Monday, saying it he were in Weiner's situation, he would step down.

Several officials have said in recent days that Weiner was reluctant to make any decision about his career without speaking with his wife, a top aide to Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton who had been overseas since shortly after the scandal broke. The trip ended Tuesday night.

Abedin is pregnant with the couple's first child.

Weiner's outspoken, in-yourface style cheered liberal supporters and angered conservatives. He even irritated some party leaders in 2009 when he led the charge for a government-run health care system long after the White House had made it clear that Obama was opposed.

Weiner's district includes parts of Queens and Brooklyn. New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo has the authority to call a special election to fill the seat once the congressman submits his resignation.

GEORGIA CDC: 1 in 4 high schoolers drink soda every day

ATLANTA — A new study shows one in four high school students drink soda every day.

The national survey found that teens drink water, milk and fruit juices most often. But a quarter say they have at least one soda each day.

For all sweetened beverages, the figure is closer to two-thirds when other sugary drinks like Gatorade are counted along with soda. That seems to be less than in the past when more than three-quarters reported drinking a sugary drink each day.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"More ways of killing a cat than choking her with cream."

— Charles Kingsley

Finesses come in all shapes and sizes. Today's five-club contract appears to hinge on a finesse of the heart queen, but with the king over dummy's queen, declarer looks to be in trouble. Not so, as long as he is careful.

On the opening diamond lead, declarer wins his ace and takes the three top spades before drawing trump — some things just can't wait. When both opponents follow, declarer discards his diamond loser, ruffs a diamond, then plays a trump. If East had the bare club ace and no more spades, he would have to concede at once, but as it is, he can exit with his remaining trump.

Declarer now wins the trump in dummy and leads the fourth spade, ruffing it in hand when East discards. Then he leads a low heart from hand and has reached the crux of the deal.

If West follows small, as would most of the civilized world, declarer puts in the eight from dummy, allowing East to win with the 10 and forcing him now to concede a ruff-sluff or lead a heart around to the queen.

Of course, a diabolical West might work out to put the jack in on the first round of the suit, confronting declarer with a dilemma. If West had the J-10, declarer would have to duck this trick and endplay West instead of East. With the cards lying as they do, declarer must cover the jack and finesse against the 10 on the second round of the suit.

ANSWER: Your action here depends a little on the vulnerability and maybe also on the form of scoring (and your partner's sense of humor!). My instincts are to bid five diamonds at once, robbing the opponents of Blackwood and making my LHO guess whether to introduce his clubs at once. Even if he has a balanced hand, the penalty may not be so extreme.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a guitarist in a rock band that has been performing in the San Francisco Bay area for five years. Because my on-again, off-again girlfriend, "Robin," didn't get along with my band mates, I found myself often caught in the middle. Her dislike of the band scene distanced me from the other members of the band and resulted in my not hanging out with them like I used to. Mounting pressures from both sides caused my breakup with Robin, someone I cared about and loved deeply. The split resolved the problem with the band, but now they are asking me for reassurance that I won't date anyone in the future who will have a negative impact on the band. I made a big personal sacrifice for them, and I think it's insulting and insensitive to demand reassurance that history won't repeat itself. I have told them I'm ready to move forward with no more obstacles. Abby, please advise.

- DISSONANT CHORD IN THE COMPOSITION

DEAR Abby Jeanne Phillips

DEAR DISSONANT CHORD: You may be a "dissonant chord," but your band mates' demand strikes a sour note with me. While a career in music - particularly if you get lucky and spend a lot of time touring is undeniably demanding, your partners in this business should not have the right to dictate your personal life. You gave 'em an inch, and now they expect a mile.

If you're prepared to have them dictate your life for as long as the band lasts, then keep on strumming and keep your promise. But I predict that at some point you are going to have to draw the line. Have another gig lined up when you do.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a gay man in a bad situation. My boyfriend, "Kyle," is bipolar/schizophrenic. Sometimes he can be violent. Much of our time together is spent taking care of him. I work; he doesn't.

We are both college students and I believe, regardless of what I have been through, I have a bright future ahead of me. Kyle is verbally and physically abusive at times, and yes, I end up hurt most of those times. I have convinced myself that it's my fault because I make him mad when he is under stress or he is manic. He breaks up with me every week and then tells me he loves me, then turns around and says he hates me.

Abby, all I want to do is love him and help him. I don't know what he wants or what will make him happy. I need to know if I should stick with Kyle or give up.

HOPELESSLY DEVOTED IN JERSEY CITY, N.J. DEAR HOPELESSLY

DEVOTED: Healthy, loving relationships are based on a relatively even give-andtake between partners. You may want to help Kyle, but you are not qualified to do so.

Because you say your situation is a "bad" one, and your boyfriend is verbally abusive and hurts you physically as well as emotionally, I am advising you to find out from a mental health professional why you would subject yourself to the emotional roller coaster ride that you have. If you do, this will happen to you less often in the future. Also, the counselor can help you decide whether this relationship is salvageable.

DEAR ABBY: After moving out of your parents' home, is one expected to knock on the door when visiting, or is it OK to just open the door and walk in? - HEY MOM,

I'M HOME! DEAR "HEY MOM!": The considerate thing to do would be to knock, which would prevent any embarrassing surprises.

IF JUNE 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your popularity is at a high point right now, but you also might be a bit more gullible than usual. A new romance that develops during the next six to eight weeks might be mostly wishful thinking, but due to optimum planetary conditions you will do no lasting harm. Any opportunity that comes your way during the second half of July is sure to be beneficial and that is a wonderful time to set important matters into motion because your judgment and your luck are at a zenith. Between September and May, as your ambitions take control, be as responsible and ethical as possible, and do whatever is required by others, Do not, however, undertake new projects of your own or make important changes.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The more, the merrier. Spend some time with friends and co-workers than pursuing rather amorous adventures. Spend time in public places, such as bookstores, where you might meet an influential contact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There is safety in numbers. Participate in a group discussion, join a local club or go out on the town with the gang. The friendlier you are toward others, the more likely you will gain acceptance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Meet them and greet them. Your gracious manners are best employed on the social scene. You could meet someone who could become a lifelong friend. Put business matters on the back

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Rethink old habits that hold you back. Your favorite companion might not be in a frolicsome mood, so plan on a quiet evening at home. Try to streamline necessary but monotonous everyday rou-

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't go it alone. You might strike up a valuable friendship by just being in the right place at the right time. It is possible to form a lasting connection tonight, but it might not be of the romantic VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get organized. When your ducks are in a row, they can easily waddle to the right destination. It is easier to be successful if you start your day knowing where everything is and what needs to be done.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends come in assorted flavors. This weekend put on your best manners to impress others and form some new friendships purely for the sake of sharing interests. Shelve business and financial affairs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The local watering hole may be a place to meet a friendly face. Sometimes you just need someone who shares interests and a person you can count on to get your back when the going gets tough.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Perfection at prioritizing brings peace. Focus on making things orderly and getting lists in place. Some people say a messy desk is the sign of a busy person, but the truth is that it can slow you down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You might be happiest in a herd. Invite friends or acquaintances out for dinner or join a club where you can meet people who share your passions. Investment ideas might not be viable or profitable. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Happy hour might be happening. Use the buddy system; spend time at the club, library or usual meeting place. Make plans for the future, but don't act now. A lack of expertise can ruin negotiations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A stranger in a strange land can quickly become a bosom buddy. Meet people from different backgrounds who share similar interests. Your street smarts aren't good enough for the big leagues today.
