

Early summer: The perfect time to sample Idaho's vintages

Now is an ideal time to visit tasting rooms at Magic Valley's six wineries. Early summer is the first of two annual wine releases, so even people familiar with Idaho vintages can find something new to love. Make a local tasting tour an all-day adventure: Choose a few wineries and a driver. Leave time to wander the vines or chat with the vintners. And ask for the stories behind the wineries' quirky labels. A tasting tour is easy to plan, with Virginia Hutchins' package in today's Food section.

CSI signs off on 2013 state funds requests

Community college envisions new positions, asks $569,000 for arts center operations

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

The College of Southern Idaho will ask for additional state money for new positions and upkeep for its Fine Arts Center for the 2013 fiscal year.

The CSI Board of Trustees signed off on the line-item requests Monday. The funds would be for the year starting July 1, 2012.

But the requests come amid one of the toughest climates Idaho's colleges and universities have seen. Enrollment is up, but state funding for higher education was again cut for the coming year. Tuition hikes and recovering state revenue could help as Idaho climbs out of the recession, but CSI can't wait for those factors to sort themselves out while planning for the future.

About $569,000 of CSI's request would help fund the electricity, upkeep and other maintenance needed for the arts building. The college also seeks money for a new retention specialist position to help ensure that students who enroll at CSI stay to graduate. Officials also want to create a coordinator position and assistants to help oversee multiple projects around the Magic Valley aimed at science, technology, engineering and mathematics growth.

Water stores dropping

Hydrologist refines portrait of Idaho's largest aquifer; depletion worries water users

By Kimberlee Kruesi
Times-News writer

A new model of the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer should clarify how much water it holds and how fast it's losing it.

Most data showing how much water goes in and out of the Lake Erie-sized aquifer under southern Idaho is incomplete, said Mike McVay, technical hydrologist for the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

By using data collected every five years and comparing that to measurements collected on a daily basis, McVay said he was able to fill in the gaps between the years.

"It's frustrating to look at a chart and see that the information telling you how much water is in the aquifer isn't fully comprehensive," he said. "I wanted to find a way to understand the information and figure out how to find the big picture."

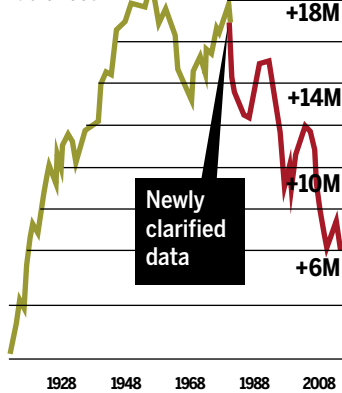

The aquifer had grown steadily from the early 1900s to the mid-1950s. Since then, it has shown a steep decline in storage.

According to McVay, the aquifer has been depleted at an average rate of 225,000 acre-feet of water per year since 1980. That's not enough to create an immediate water crisis, but as the water level recedes farther underground, it will cost more — and require new methods — to reach it.

Downtown T.F. stars in Powerball commercial

By Nick Coltrain

There were more people in downtown Twin Falls Tuesday afternoon than shopkeeper Gary Gillette Jr. usually sees in a week. And one of them was dressed as a big red ball.

The Idaho Lottery filmed a commercial there Tuesday, picking the location for its narrow streets, tree-lined sidewalks and the Americana of a merchant-lined aisle, workers said. It drew gawkers down Main Avenue as they watched a waitress with a coffee pot, a bride and others march down the sidewalk. The "Rockwell slice of Americana" is something Gillette, owner of Eagles soda fountain, said the area already has in dollops and was displayed full-on for the commercial. It was enough to get Gillette to move here after a career in Texas, and something he hopes the city preserves.

Twin Falls residents Chris Henson, 24, and Zach Hill, 18, likewise praised the location, and not just because they landed parts

Judge continues hearing for Auger Falls Fire suspect

Times-News

The Buhl man suspected of starting the Auger Falls Fire last July had his pretrial continued on Tuesday.

Both the state and Don Garibaldi's defense attorney are waiting for a recording of the 911 calls from July 22, 2010, when the 55-year-old is accused of starting a fire that burned nearly 600 acres of the Snake River Canyon land near Twin Falls, including Auger Falls Park. The park is jointly managed by the city of Twin Falls and the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Garibaldi faces three misdemeanor charges, which carry sentences of up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine each. According to the police report, Garibaldi is believed to have thrown out still-lit cigarette butts that started the fire while he was working on private land west of Twin Falls.

On Tuesday, Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Judge Nicole Cannon set Garibaldi's next hearing for six weeks out.

new but it's still sobering, said Randy MacMillan, vice president of research and environmental affairs for Clear Springs Foods in Buhl. The fish producer relies on aquifer water that comes out as springs in the Snake River Canyon.

"We are concerned about the depletion of the aquifer. This is a resource that we depend on, but is it going to be around in a healthy enough state for the next 20 years?" MacMillan said.

McVay's study helps support arguments that the aquifer is declining, MacMillan said, but it doesn't mention what water users can do stop it.

"We've yet to reach any equilibrium to the aquifer. It is continually depleting and that is a concern," MacMillan said. "We are a supporter of the Comprehensive Aquifer Management Plan and we're still hopeful projects can still be put in place to stop the decline in the aquifer, but it's difficult to get things going."

CAMP is a management plan meant to repair the aquifer but has struggled receiving the funding needed to get off the ground.

Lynn Carlquist, chairman of the North Snake Ground Water District, argued that the aquifer's depletion makes sense because of the lack of money being spent on it.

"If you look at what other states are doing and how much money is being thrown at their aquifers to keep them full, it makes what we're doing here look like a drop in the bucket," he said.

McVay said his work was an attempt to help water users move past debating over how much water is in individual wells. Instead, he hopes his information will help streamline the conflicts to move forward to a solution. That might be a hard sell to some since water levels change throughout the aquifer, said Lynn Tomina-ga, executive director of the Idaho Ground Water Appropriators.

"Depending where you're located will determine how you view the state of the aquifer," Tominaga said. "It's not stable throughout the entire aquifer; you're not going to have the same conditions in every area."

College

The requests go to the State Board of Education.

CSI President Jerry Beck said moving the focus of college from simply providing access to education to fostering degree completion is representative of a nationwide shift.

"(It's) not looking at exactly what you start with, but what you finish with," Beck said.

Board Chairman Thad Scholes asked Beck if future funding depended on how successfully CSI was able to make that transition. Beck said he believed it would.

The board also handled several construction-related items at its meeting:

- The board heard about cost increases for the expansion of the Fine Arts Center. Starr Corp. is constructing the 7,500-square-foot addition, which originally cost about $2.6 million. But changes made since to the project — more classroom spaces, HVAC work and entryway adjustments — bumped the price tag to $2.88 million, said Mike Mason, vice president of administration.
- Of the cost, $2 million is coming from an anonymous donor who gave to the CSI Foundation. The remaining sum comes from the college's plant facility fund.

- Trustees approved a $55,000 proposed contract from a Boise architecture firm for planning work for the Jerome Head Start Center. Two independent committees evaluated about 13 applications and both ended up recommending LKV Architects for the job.
- "I find it reassuring that both committees independently came up with the same suggestion," Scholes said.
- LKV's work is no stranger to schoolchildren of Jerome. The firm also handled work for the school district's middle and elementary schools.
- Bids are now out for a Rupert Head Start remodel, Mason said.

Mason also expressed hopes that Head Start will again receive funding through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

If ARRA doesn't disburse money to the program, he said, it will have to come out of existing funds.

"That is sort of the nature of Head Start funding, it's up and down," Mason said. "We'll do as much as we can with the funds we have."

I see by your crumpled fender that you're from the Gem State

You had to know this was going to happen. Two years ago, in a fit of irrational exuberance, GMAC Insurance proclaimed that Idaho drivers were the safest in America.

It did so after asking drivers in all 50 states questions taken from actual state Division of Motor Vehicle tests, covering both traffic and safe-driving habits. Idahoans had the highest average test score in the country, answering 87.1 percent of the questions correctly (the average score nationally was 77.1).

Last year, we slipped to eighth, and the insurance company this week announced the results for 2011. Let's just say that if this trend continues, it won't be long before Idaho's drivers will be worse than Wyoming's.

Wait a minute: They're already worse than Wyoming's.

Eleventh in the nation, to

DON'T ASK ME

be exact. The silver lining, if you can call it that, is that we're safer than Utah drivers. But then again, so are rodeo bulls and tornadoes.

The Idaho drivers I encounter every day have no idea who's supposed to yield at a four-way stop, drive in the left lane of the freeway no matter how slow they're going, and signal only after they've already turned.

They use a turning lane on a major street as a place to park until there's a break in the traffic, routinely make "California stops," and run yellow traffic signals like they're late for All-You-Can-Eat-Prawn Night at Golden Corral.

I mean, have you been to the DMV lately?

In 2009 — the latest year for which statistics are available — Idaho had the 10th-worst traffic fatality rate in the nation, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Higher than California, Florida, Texas, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois or any surrounding state except Montana and Wyoming.

Long story short? We can't drive worth beans.

It's a matter of pride, really. Native Idahoans learned to drive in a '54 five-window Chevy pickup with a gun rack, improvised chicken-wire grill, missing tailgate and all-Bondo finish. They took the state driver's test back in the day when there was no limit on how many times you could flunk it, and finally passed only after they guessed the answers often enough.

Driver's training class requirements notwithstanding, true Idahoans have been driving since they were 11, sitting on a stack of old Mon-key Ward catalogs so they could see over the steering wheel. The single most significant event in their lifetimes has been the Idaho Division of Motor Vehicles changing its rules and allowing driver's licenses to be renewed by mail.

That's why most of the photos on our licenses look as if they came straight out of our high school yearbooks.

What's worse is that our driving habits are contagious. Show me a Californian who's lived here for 20 years, and I'll show you Paris Hilton with blown shocks.

What we Idahoans don't know about driving would fill a book. It's called the Idaho Driver's Manual.

Officials: Southwest wildfires will blaze until rainy season

By Bob Christie
Associated Press

PHOENIX — The wildfires sizzling through dried-out forests and grasslands across the Southwest are a bad omen in a fire season that is expected to continue for weeks until nature provides relief in the form of seasonal rains.

Fire officials are working to contain existing blazes even as they brace for new threats, setting up a dangerous and frustrating summer. But authorities don't expect to be stressed beyond their limits.

While much of the South and Southwest has received less winter precipitation than normal, the rain and snow farther north has led to huge snowpack in the Sierra Nevada range in California and in the Rockies.

The wildfire outlook issued by the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho, calls for above-normal fire potential in the Southwest through September, but normal or milder than normal fire conditions across the rest of the West.

Gus Weinschenker waits Monday at a road block on Highway 92 to be escorted by the Sheriff's Department to his home near Carr Canyon in Sierra Vista, Ariz. Weinschenker desperately needed to pick up his wife's medication and his wallet at their home, which he left behind in his hurry to evacuate.

Millions of acres across Arizona, New Mexico and west Texas have been scorched in recent weeks.

And firefighters are battling tinder boxes in east Texas and north Florida, as well — officials blame fires in those states for at least six deaths this year, including two forest rangers killed Monday near the Florida-Georgia state line.

Rains are expected to reduce the fire danger in Florida this week, but seasonal storms that normally stop the threat in the Southwest aren't expected to come until mid-July at the soonest.

Officials say that means the three large fires now churning across Arizona's forestlands will not be the last.

Forestry officials say the state has seen one of its most dangerous fire seasons in years, with more than 1,500 fires burning 1,300 square miles so far.

Federal court reconsiders Arizona voter citizenship law

over Arizona's effort to require people to show proof of citizenship when they register to vote.

Federal voter registration law allows people to submit a mail-in voter registration card and swear they are citizens under penalty of perjury. But Arizona's law — approved by voters in 2004 as part of a ballot measure — seeks further documentation, such as a driver's license.

Jerome man gets retained jurisdiction for aggravated DUI

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Salvador Jiminez-Lomeli must have good friends. Although they were injured in a crash he admitted to causing last year, they asked a 5th District judge to not throw him in prison, according to prosecutors. The 23-year-old Jerome man could avoid prison if he successfully completes a retained-jurisdiction program, ordered on Monday by Judge G. Richard Bevan. Otherwise, it's three to 10 years in the state pen. Jiminez-Lomeli was sentenced barely two months after pleading guilty to aggravated driving under the influence, a charge stemming from an early morning crash on March 7 near Buhl. According to the police report, Jiminez-Lomeli left the road and slammed into a nearby railroad car after he ran a stop sign at the intersection of 1700 East Road and U.S. Highway 30. Jiminez-Lomeli and passengers Edgar Diaz-Perez and Edgar Martinez-Jaurequi all suffered minor injuries, but another passenger, Carlos Martinez, was reported to have a broken leg and broken rib. Jiminez-Lomeli's blood-alcohol concentration was reported to be .10, but he may have also fallen asleep at the wheel, according to court records. Of the three passengers, none showed up to Monday's sentencing. Bevan did not order a fine, and the crash victims are not requesting restitution. Jiminez-Lomeli's driver's license will be suspended for one year following his release from prison. However, he may be deported to Mexico by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Twin Falls police reported recovering multiple stolen vehicles over the weekend, as well as responding to a rash of vandalism near Harmon Park. According to a release from the city, officers found two stolen cars, a stolen truck and a stolen motorcycle, and are investigating multiple incidents of vehicle burglaries in which owners' personal property was taken. Police would like to remind residents to not leave valuables in their parked vehicles. Also, Twin Falls investigators are looking for a suspect thought to be stealing catalytic converters, compressors and other automotive parts for recycling money.

Osterhoudt accused of breaking man's leg during fight

Times-News

Franklin Scott Osterhoudt stands accused of crushing the leg of Richard Wilson while the two men were fighting on Friday night. Twin Falls police say Wilson was found lying on the sidewalk in the area of Quincy Street and Addison Avenue shortly before 10 p.m. Wilson told officers he was driving west on Addison Avenue with his 9-year-old daughter when they saw Osterhoudt standing in the left turn lane. Osterhoudt, 21, of Twin Falls, allegedly threw an object at the car, smashing its windshield. Wilson pulled over and confronted Osterhoudt, he said, and the two began fighting. Bystanders pulled the two apart, but Osterhoudt allegedly stomped on Wilson's leg. The police report claims that Wilson's tibia and fibula bones were broken, causing Wilson to undergo four hours of surgery to insert rods and plates in his leg. Osterhoudt was taken into custody and told police that

Wilson tried to run him over. He is charged with felony aggravated battery and three misdemeanor charges: injury to a child, resisting an officer and malicious injury to property. His bond was set at $25,000 for the felony — with a preliminary hearing set for July 1 — and $10,000 for the misdemeanors. Osterhoudt is also scheduled for a probation violation hearing later this month for an unrelated prior conviction of injury to a child. He was initially charged with two counts of rape in 2009, but pleaded guilty to a reduced charge and was sentenced to a retained-jurisdiction program, then put on probation in June 2010. He was arrested for the alleged probation violation this April and released a month later. The hearing is set for June 28.

Federal officials approve Monsanto phosphate mine

By Todd Dvorak
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Federal officials have approved an agricultural company's efforts to expand mining operations in southeast Idaho's phosphate patch after concluding that a $30 million liner and drainage system would adequately protect nearby streams and rivers.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management's decision comes after years of environmental analysis and review of Monsanto Co.'s plans in a region still dealing with the side effects of harmful mineral pollution blamed on historic phosphate mining.

Federal land managers gave final approval last week to the Blackfoot Bridge Mine project, located on a combination of private and public land 10 miles northeast of Soda Springs near the Idaho-Wyoming border.

Two years ago, the federal officials balked at the company's application, citing concerns that selenium — a mineral lethal to animals when consumed at high levels — could leach into the groundwater and streams from the massive pile of waste rock amassed during the 17-year life expectancy of the mine.

But Monsanto reworked its design and proposed spending up to $30 million on a drainage system and state-of-the-art liner cap designed to prevent rain and snowmelt from mixing with the selenium-rich waste rock.

"We took this very, very serious because the stakes are so high given the past contamination in the region," said Jeff Cundick, minerals branch chief for the phosphate program of the Caribou National Forest and the Bureau of Land Management.

"There is always going to be risk. But we feel the risk is now manageable and low," he said. "This is not your grandfather or father's phosphate mine we're approving at this point. This is the culmination of a thorough and highly scientific study."

For Monsanto, the agency's green light means it can continue mining the region's rich deposits of phosphate ore, a critical ingredient for its Roundup weedkiller products. The company's current mining footprint, the South Rasmussen Ridge Mine, located just miles from the Blackfoot Bridge site, is expected to be depleted in the next year.

Dave Farnsworth, minerals chief for Monsanto's Soda Springs plant, said the company is pleased with the decision and opportunity to continue its presence in the region.

"The mine and the advanced technologies we will employ will preserve good jobs in southeast Idaho, as well as clean water and a healthy environment," Farnsworth said in a statement.

The BLM posted its record of decision in the Federal Register on Friday, starting the clock on a 30-day window for appeals.

The Blackfoot Bridge project is located at about 6,000 feet in the mountains and 600 feet from the Blackfoot River, a waterway that is already showing selenium levels exceeding federal clean water standards.

USMC Cpl. Phillip M. Baldwin's parent's, Vickie and Bruce Baldwin, hold photos of Baldwin, one with his daughter, Jasmine, 3. Baldwin's brothers and cousin, Elizabeth Covington, USMC Sgt. Darren Covington, Bruce Baldwin and Alan Baldwin, holding Cpl. Baldwin's medals and ribbons gather in the living room of their parent's home in Fort Hall on Monday. Cpl. Baldwin suffered bilateral amputation of his legs while on patrol in Afghanistan Saturday in the town of Kajaki, Sangin District, Helmand Province.

Idaho Marine badly wounded in Afghanistan

By John O'Connell
Idaho State Journal

FORT HALL — Cpl. Phillip Baldwin clenched a small, rubber duck in a tiny soldier's helmet after the explosion Saturday morning in Afghanistan. He tried to hand the sentimental figurine — a gift from his 3-year-old daughter, Jasmine — to his sergeant, fearing he wouldn't pull through to return in person.

Refusing to accept the duck, the sergeant pleaded with Baldwin, a 21-year-old Fort Hall native, to look him in the eyes — and not to glance down.

"Are my legs gone?" Baldwin asked.

The sergeant lied, assuring the badly wounded soldier he was OK. Baldwin, however, wasn't fooled.

Baldwin, a radio operator with the First Battalion Fifth Marines out of San Diego, lost his right leg up to his hip and his left leg to above the knee when he stepped on an improvised explosive device while on foot patrol near Helmand Province.

He also sustained pelvic injuries. But he survived. Within 24 hours of the explosion, he was removed from a ventilator and on the phone imploring his mother, Vickie Baldwin, not to worry.

"It hit me hard," said his father Bruce Robert Baldwin, the patriarch of a military family. "To think, if he wasn't coming back, that would take a heavy toll. My life wouldn't be anything without him."

That morning, Baldwin was involved in a pair of firefights. In one close call, a bullet destroyed his radio.

The group was headed back to the base from an action-packed excursion when his sergeant shouted, "Baldwin!" and nodded to a hidden hazard in his path. Baldwin misread his sergeant's gaze and took one step too many.

"He told me, 'Momma, that was the worst pain I ever felt,'" Vickie said. "They had a medic there who jumped into action. They tied tourniquets on both legs immediately and loaded him up."

Fortunately, Vickie noted, he was wearing all new protective equipment — the best available helmet, chest, back and groin armor, gloves and safety glasses.

Vickie, who works in Indian Health Services for the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, was running errands at 10:30 a.m. Saturday when she received a call on her cell phone from a number she didn't recognize. She panicked when the caller identified himself as a gunnery sergeant, and she thrust the phone at her sister, unwilling to hear more. The caller insisted that he speak only with Vickie, who was listed as an emergency contact by Baldwin.

"You hear 'bilateral amputee' and everything else kind of blurs," Vickie said. "I was kind of in denial. It wasn't until later that I thought, 'He's alive! I didn't expect him to be injured at all!'"

Bruce Robert was participating in an overnight prayer service with the Native American Church at the time of the explosion. He had just returned home and gone to sleep when he was awoken by his oldest son, 22-year-old Bruce Patrick.

"He said, 'It's bad. It's Phillip! I just didn't want to believe it,'" recalled Bruce Robert, a Fort Hall Fish and Game officer who also worked six years with the tribal police department and 17 years as a probation officer. "To best describe it, it's a rollercoaster of emotions I've been through. To hear what took place, it was the scariest moment ... and you know the first 24 hours are critical, and you heard he was in an operation."

The family has elected against sharing the news with Jasmine.

"She saw me crying the other day and asked, 'What's the matter Grandma?'" Vickie said. "He's definitely her hero. She says it all the time."

Bruce Patrick, who so closely resembles Baldwin he could easily be mistaken for his twin, is also a Marine and is close to being discharged, having already served in both Iraq and Afghanistan. Baldwin — a 2008 Highland High School graduate in his third year in the service, deployed to Afghanistan in March — had been considering reenlistment after fulfilling his obligation.

His youngest brother, Alan, 18, still plans to continue the family legacy, even after hearing the news. Alan has enlisted with the Marine Corps and is scheduled to leave Aug. 22 for basic training at Camp Pendleton in Oceanside, Calif. Alan admitted he may at least reconsider the type of military occupational specialty he'll pursue.

"I look up to my brothers a lot. I follow wherever they go," Alan said, adding Baldwin asked that he not worry about him when they spoke following the explosion. "They're good role models. I learn a lot from them."

Having personally been in the service for 26 years with plans to retire from the military in October, Vickie was proud when Baldwin enlisted, and she's prouder still today.

"When he told us he was going in the service I totally supported him, and even after this happened, I don't regret it," she said.

She admits she envisioned his greatest challenges would be tough drill sergeants and early morning runs.

Vickie heads to Hill Air Force Base in Utah for her weekend drills. People from the base are deployed to Afghanistan quite often, and coincidentally, a master sergeant from her squadron was among the soldiers who helped load Baldwin into the plane after the explosion. He learned that Baldwin was Vickie's son the following day and subsequently gave Vickie the family's first detailed medical update.

The first place Baldwin, who is now recovering in a hospital in Germany, will be taken upon returning to the United States will be Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

"Walter Reed is the No. 1 place for prosthetics. He's going to be there for several weeks or months," Vickie said. "It depends on how fast he heals. With him, it might only be a weekend."

Baldwin is already setting goals and looking toward the future. As soon as possible, he hopes to be driving a black 2012 Camaro.

Idaho inmate won't face death row at new sentencing

MOSCOW (AP) — A man convicted a decade ago in the shooting deaths of his ex-wife and her boyfriend will not face the death penalty when he is resentenced.

An Idaho district court judge sentenced Dale Shackelford to death row in 2000 for the murders of Donna Fontaine and Fred Palahniuk out of jealousy. The two bodies were set ablaze and found in a garage in the small town of Kendrick.

The U.S. Supreme Court later ruled in a separate case that juries, not judges, must determine if defendants are eligible for the death penalty. That ruling prompted Idaho 2nd District Judge John Stegner to order a new sentencing for Shackelford, who is now 49.

Last year, the Idaho Supreme Court determined that Stegner was right to order a new hearing.

Fontaine, a former prosecuting attorney from Pilot Knob, Mo., had met Shackelford five years earlier while teaching a class at a Missouri prison where he was serving time on a sodomy conviction. The two began a romance and married the next year after his release.

The couple bought land near Kendrick, where they planned to build a home, but they divorced in 1997.

Prosecutors said it wasn't long before Shackelford began planning to kill Fontaine with the aid of various women he was dating. When his efforts in Missouri failed, prosecutors said the scheme spread to Idaho.

Shackelford later tried to appeal his murder convictions, arguing the district court judge had made several errors during the trial. But the Idaho Supreme Court rejected that argument. The U.S. Supreme Court denied Shackelford's appeal in March.

WASHINGTON, D.C. A twist in Obama's health care law opens Medicaid to some making up to $64,000

President Barack Obama's health care law would let several million middle-class people get nearly free insurance meant for the poor, a twist government number crunchers say they discovered only after the complex bill was signed.

The change would affect early retirees: A married couple could have an annual income of about $64,000 and still get Medicaid, said officials who make long-range cost estimates for the Health and Human Services department.

Up to 3 million more people could qualify for Medicaid in 2014 as a result of the anomaly. That's because, in a major change from today, most of their Social Security benefits would no longer be counted as income for determining eligibility. It might be compared to allowing middle-class people to qualify for food stamps.

Medicare chief actuary Richard Foster says the situation keeps him up at night.

"I don't generally comment on the pros or cons of policy, but that just doesn't make sense," Foster said during a question-and-answer session at a recent professional society meeting.

Facing war-weary public, Obama expected to cut 10K troops from Afghanistan in less than a year

Facing a war-weary public, President Barack Obama is expected to call for a major withdrawal of American troops from Afghanistan Wednesday night, with roughly 10,000 coming home to the U.S. in less than a year.

The phased drawdown is likely to start with 5,000 troops recalled this summer and an additional 5,000 by winter or spring 2012, according to a senior U.S. defense official. Obama is also weighing a timetable for bringing home the 20,000 other troops he ordered to Afghanistan as part of his December 2009 decision to send reinforcements to reverse the Taliban's battlefield momentum.

The withdrawals would put the U.S. on a path toward giving Afghans control of their security by 2014 and ultimately shifting the U.S. military from a combat role to a mission focused on training and supporting Afghan forces.

Obama is to address the nation from the White House at 6 p.m. MDT today.

The president reached his decision a week after receiving a range of options from Gen. David Petraeus, the top U.S. and NATO commander in Afghanistan. Obama informed his senior national security advisers, including outgoing Defense Secretary Robert Gates and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, of his plans during a White House meeting on Tuesday.

NEW JERSEY Huntsman joins presidential race, promising jobs – and civility in time of heated rhetoric

JERSEY CITY — Republican Jon Huntsman joined the presidential race Tuesday with the Statue of Liberty over his shoulder, asserting that he and President Barack Obama both love their country but have far different visions of its future. He pledged to halt an "un-American" fading of national confidence and power.

Hoping to set himself apart from other candidates, he also promised to run a civil campaign for the GOP nomination at a time of heated partisan rhetoric.

The former Utah governor focused on Obama, not his Republican rivals, in his announcement address in the patriotic setting where Ronald Reagan launched his fall presidential campaign in 1980. Huntsman said, "The question each of us wants the voters to answer is, 'Who will be the better president, not who's the better American.'"

As for his pledge of civility, he said, "Our political debates today are corrosive and not reflective of the belief that Abe Lincoln espoused back in his day, that we are a great country because we are a good country."

The announcement was all formality for Huntsman, 51. His aides have been planning the bid for months, and the candidate himself has spent the weeks since he returned to the United States from China visiting early primary voting states, courting donors and building a full-fledged campaign.

Kerry, McCain push Libya resolution

By Donna Cassata
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Two top senators on Tuesday unveiled a resolution giving President Barack Obama limited authority in the 3-month-old war against Libya, warning that the drastic step of cutting off funds for the military operation would be a lifeline to a weakened Moammar Gadhafi.

Foreign Relations Committee Chairman John Kerry, D-Mass., and John McCain of Arizona, the leading Republican on the Armed Services Committee, introduced the bipartisan resolution that would allow the mission to continue but would impose a one-year limit on the NATO-led operation, a period McCain said is "more than enough time to finish the job." It also would prohibit American ground forces in Libya.

The measure is a clear counter to efforts in the House to prohibit spending and effectively end the operation, a reflection of the growing Republican and Democratic anger toward Obama and his treatment of Congress.

"Gadhafi is going to fall. It is just a matter of time. Is this the time for Congress to turn against this policy? Is this the time to ride to the rescue of a failing tyrant when the writing is on the wall that he will collapse?"

— Sen. John McCain

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said late Tuesday that the Republican rank and file would consider two possible resolutions — one mirroring the Senate measure by Kerry and McCain and another to remove U.S. forces from Libya except those involved in search and rescue, aerial refueling, intelligence and surveillance and noncombat missions. The Republicans would weigh the two at a meeting Wednesday.

"We have no desire to damage the NATO alliance, which has been a strong force for peace and stability in Europe and around the world," Boehner said in a statement. "We know that soldiers, sailors and airmen from our allies have fought by our side for decades, most recently in Iraq and Afghanistan, and we honor their service. Still, the White House must not ignore its obligations to the American people and the laws of this country?"

The commander in chief did not seek congressional consent when he launched air strikes against Gadhafi's forces on March 19. Lawmakers argue that Obama is in violation of the 1973 War Powers Resolution, which requires approval of the legislative branch within 60 days, with a 30-day extension. That deadline has passed.

The White House, in a report to Congress last week, said the limited U.S. role in the operation did not amount to hostilities and did not require congressional authorization, an argument that further inflamed lawmakers.

"It is clear that the Obama administration's claim that targeted bombings, missile strikes and other military actions in Libya do not constitute 'hostilities' under the War Powers Resolution is not credible," Boehner said.

Seeking to quell the outrage and send a strong signal of support, Kerry and McCain proposed their measure and urged lawmakers to consider the implications of abandoning the mission.

"Gadhafi is going to fall. It is just a matter of time," McCain said in a speech on the Senate floor. "Is this the time for Congress to turn against this policy? Is this the time to ride to the rescue of a failing tyrant when the writing is on the wall that he will collapse?"

Said Kerry: "The last message any United States senator wants to send is that this madman need only wait us out because we are divided at home."

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said he had the votes to pass the resolution and he would push for its passage. The Senate was likely to debate and vote on the measure next week.

Even Senate Republicans frustrated with the president signaled their support.

"While I disagree with President Obama's disregard for congressional authorization, we must ensure our military has the ability to succeed in Libya," said Sen. Roy Blunt, R-Mo.

Finance officials for Newt Gingrich quit in further sign of campaign disarray

ATLANTA (AP) — Newt Gingrich's top two fundraising advisers resigned on Tuesday, and officials said the Republican candidate's hobbling presidential campaign carried more than $1 million in debt.

The departures of fundraising director Jody Thomas and fundraising consultant Mary Heitman were the latest blow for the former House speaker who watched 16 top advisers abandon his campaign en masse earlier this month, partly because of what people familiar with the campaign spending described as a dire financial situation.

These people, who spoke on the condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the campaign inner workings, said the former Georgia lawmaker racked up massive travel bills but money had only trickled in since he got into the race earlier this spring.

These officials said that he is at least $1 million in debt. The current fundraising quarter ends June 30, and Gingrich will have to disclose his campaign finances by July 15.

Concussion and the Adolescent Athlete
Thursday | June 23 | 5:30 to 7:00 PM | Twin Falls High School | Roper Auditorium

Boise State running back, Matt Kaiserman, will discuss the series of concussions he suffered culminating with a career ending hit in the Maaco Bowl last December, highlighting the importance of properly recognizing, diagnosing and treating concussions in athletes. Dr. Carolyn Faure, a concussion expert, will review cause and effect and current legislation surrounding concussion in the adolescent athlete, and address the critical role parents play in managing their child's concussion with the appropriate medical team as they return-to-play. Physicians, athletic trainers, coaches, parents and anyone interested in the management of concussion in young athletes is encouraged to attend.

Emergency Action Planning
Friday | June 24 | 5:00 to 7:00 PM | Canyon Ridge High School | Football Field

Participants will learn the importance of a documented, structured, and well understood Plan of Action, and why one should exist at every school and athletic activity. Physicians, athletic trainers, physical therapists and local EMS will discuss chain of command, access and evacuation routes, as well as safety guidelines for spectators and trained medical professionals. The forum is targeted toward coaches, parents, athletes, school administration, and any health care professionals who may need to respond to an emergency situation at an athletic event, and will end with a demonstration of a plan in action and sample documents.

Idaho’s pain at the pump and its untended potholes

After he became governor 4 1/2 years ago, C.L. “Butch” Otter made it his mission to tackle Idaho’s aging road infrastructure. Otter said that Idaho should raise its gas tax of 25 cents per gallon and raise vehicle registration fees to help erase a $260 million backlog in highway repair and reconstruction. Those ideas went nowhere in the Legislature, and when the governor took his case to the public he got no traction.

Recent statistics show why. In 2010, Idahoans paid an average of $1,873 per person for gas. That’s 5.81 percent of their personal incomes, fifth-highest in the nation.

Our view:

Politically, highway repair is a tough sell in Idaho — for good reason.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

For starters, lawmakers could change a transportation funding system in which the drivers of cars, light trucks and SUVs overpay by 8 percent — according to the transportation task force’s study — and heavy truckers underpay by 14 percent. In addition to raising registration fees, the state could slap a tax on the sale of tires and auto parts and impose an excise fee on car rentals. It could even charge builders of large projects like shopping centers or housing developments a fee to pay for the costs of maintaining road infrastructure. Californians pay 4.66 percent of their incomes at the pump, and Washingtonians pay 3.66 percent. For Idahoans who are paying two to three times that amount, it makes sense to fund highway repair from sources other than the average drivers’ pockets.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Shame on Times-News for forgetting Flag Day

Kudos to the Times-News paper of June 14. Just another day — until you realize there was not one mention of Flag Day.

As a former veteran that fought for this country, I am writing to express my anger that the people in charge did not have a story regarding “Old Glory.”

Since the beginning of this country, men and women have given their lives for those people that honor the flag of the United States. Today, we have member of our local National Guard stationed in the Middle East for those same reasons. Maybe it is time to forget about all the wars. Maybe it is time that we forget all the people who died fighting for our freedom. Maybe it is time to be complacent and consider Flag Day as just another day in the life of the average American.

I guess it is just too much to have your local media remind people of the sacrifices made so that they can enjoy what most of the people in the world have never seen — freedom.

If we don’t print it, maybe it really does not mean a thing.

It almost seems we have too many guns

This is in response to the letter from Vaughn Phelps concerning Hitler and gun snatching and all that other stuff.

Do you ever listen to yourself or is there too much going out to let anything in? Your vitriolic diatribe doesn’t help much. Weak-minded, vulnerable folks may be stampeded into doing something really stupid, such as voting Republican. I am 65 years old, own four guns and nobody is coming after them ‘cept maybe my kids.

My long guns are all old enough they have no serial numbers. I was somehow able to purchase a new semi-

Don’t know much about history

When the Department of Education last week released the results of the latest National Assessment of Educational Progress — “the Nation’s Report Card” — the bottom line was depressingly predictable: Not even a quarter of American students is proficient in US history, and the percentage declines as students grow older.

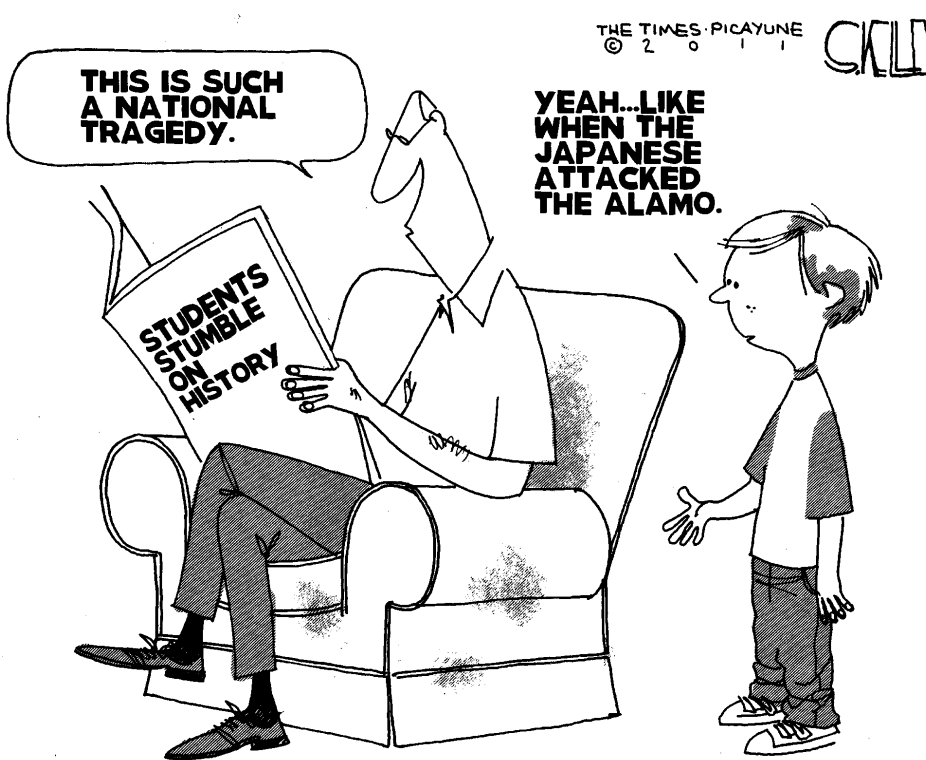

Jeff Jacoby

Only 20 percent of 6th graders, 17 percent of 8th graders, and 12 percent of high school seniors demonstrate a solid grasp of their nation’s history. In fact, American kids are weaker in history than in any of the other subjects tested by the NAEP — math, reading, science, writing, civics, geography and economics.

How weak are they? The test for fourth-graders asked why Abraham Lincoln was an important figure in US history, and a majority of the students didn’t know. Among eighth-graders, not even one-third could correctly identify an advantage that American patriots had over the British during the Revolutionary War. And when asked which of four countries — the Soviet Union, Japan, China, and Vietnam — was North Korea’s ally in fighting US troops during the Korean War, nearly 80 percent of 12th-graders selected the wrong answer.

Historically illiterate American kids typically grow up to be historically illiterate American adults. And Americans’ ignorance of history is a familiar tale.

When it administered the official US citizenship test to 1,000 Americans earlier this year, Newsweek discovered that 33 percent of respondents didn’t know when the Declaration of Independence was adopted, 65 percent couldn’t say what happened at the Constitutional Convention, and 80 percent had no idea who was president during World War I. In a survey vey of 14,000 college students in 2006, more than half couldn’t identify the century when the first American colony was founded at Jamestown, the reason NATO was organized, or which document says, “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.” Numerous other surveys and studies confirm the gloomy truth: Americans don’t know much about history.

Somewhere in heaven, it must all make Harry Truman weep.

He never attended college and had no formal intellectual credentials, but Truman was an avid, lifelong student of history. As a boy he devoured Plutarch’s Lives and Charles Horne’s four-volume Great Men and Famous Women, developing an intimacy with history that would later become one of his greatest strengths.

“When Truman talked of presidents past — Jackson, Polk, Lincoln — it was as if he had known them personally,” the historian David McCullough writes in his landmark biography of the 33rd president.

Truman may have been exaggerating in 1947 when he told Clark Clifford and other White House aides that he would rather have been a history teacher than president. Yet imagine how different the NAEP history scores would be if more teachers and schools in America today routinely imparted to their students a Trumanesque love and enthusiasm for learning about the past.

Alas, when it comes to history, as Massachusetts educator Will Fitzhugh observes, the American educational system imparts a very different message.

While the most promising high school athletes in this country are publicly acclaimed and profiled in the press and recruited by college coaches and offered lucrative scholarships, there is no comparable lauding of outstanding high school history students. A former public school history teacher, Fitzhugh is the publisher of The Concord Review, a journal he began in 1987 to showcase the writing of just such exceptional student scholars. The review has printed 924 high-caliber research papers by teenagers from 44 states and 39 nations, The New York Times reported in January, winning a few “influential admirers” along the way.

But this celebration of what Fitzhugh calls “varsity academics” amounts to just drops of excellence in the vast sea of mediocrity that is American history education. Another kind of excellence is represented by the National History Club that Fitzhugh launched in 2002 to encourage middle and high school students to “read, write, discuss, and enjoy history” outside the classroom. Beginning with a single chapter in Memphis, the club has grown into an independent national organization, with chapters in 43 states and more than 12,000 student members involved in a rich array of history-related activities.

“Our goal,” says Robert Nasson, the club’s young executive director, “is to create kids who are life-long students of history.” He and Fitzhugh have exactly the right idea. But as the latest NAEP results make dimly clear, they are swimming against the tide.

Jeff Jacoby is a columnist for the Boston Globe.

Jane Fonda should not be among ‘100 Women’

I have been made aware that President Obama is considering Jane Fonda for “100 Women of the Century.”

I support Barak Obama and have few criticisms. However, I was a Marine in Vietnam and have strong feelings regarding her actions (I haven’t forgotten!).

For those of us who were there and witnessed her actions, there should not be leniency and she should have to take responsibility for her dastardly deeds! For myself and several of my Marine buddies, this has rubbed us the wrong way! It’s just wrong!

I was proud to serve in the 1st Marine Division Band from 1962 to 1967 and will always be a Marine!

After 44 years, several of us met in Las Vegas. This year, a few more met again. We discussed our lives and those we lost! I received an invitation to my 50th high school reunion. That pales in comparison to the way I feel about these guys!

We’re planning to meet next year, but it’s difficult traveling to Las Vegas. If anyone has suggestions, please advise. I don’t believe the general public understands what’s inside our heads!

Frivolous arrests can ruin young dreams

Hello, world. I was searching the Internet and found an interesting article.

A man was arrested for having baggy pants on and refusing to pull them up. This man was returning home after attending the funeral of a friend who was shot and killed. I know what it is like to lose someone close to you. The airline asked him to pull up his pants and he refused, so the airline called the police and he was taken off the plane and arrested. A little extreme, don’t you think? This man is 20 years old and dreamed of becoming an NFL player.

I just hope his dream is not taken from him. Stupid stuff like this holds people back. I think instead of jail time for most, they should be thrown back to school. Just add on to the schools some more iron bars. I bet you it would be cheaper than what we do now.

As an organization and brand, Al-Qaida's in deep trouble

There's nothing like finally getting the top job after a decade of faithfully playing second fiddle to a high-profile boss. But for al-Qaida's Ayman al-Zawahiri, the dour Egyptian surgeon and longtime deputy to Osama bin Laden, succeeding his old leader comes with an unexpected challenge: His predecessor, it turns out, has gifted him a bit of a lemon. In recent years, al-Qaida has become the Blockbuster Video of global jihad.

The organization and brand are in deep trouble, and Zawahiri is quite unlikely to become the leader who can turn things around.

Al-Qaida is peddling an ideology that has lost much of its purchase in the Muslim world, and it hasn't mounted a successful terrorist attack in the West since the July 7, 2005, transportation bombings in London. The terrorist network's plots, for instance, to blow up seven U.S., British and Canadian planes over the Atlantic in 2006, to set off bombs in Manhattan in 2009, and to mount Mumbai-style attacks in Europe a year later all came to nothing. Most notably, it hasn't carried out a successful attack in the United States since Sept. 11, 2001.

This significant record of failure predates the momentous events of the Arab Spring — events in which al-Qaeda's leaders, foot soldiers and ideas played no role.

Meanwhile, U.S. drone strikes have destroyed the bench of al-Qaida's commanders since the summer of 2008, when President George W. Bush authorized a ramped-up program of attacks in Pakistan's tribal regions. And in the two most populous Muslim nations — Indonesia and Pakistan — favorable views of bin Laden and support for suicide bombings dropped by at least half between 2003 and 2010.

The key force behind this decline has been the deaths of Muslim civilians at the hands of jihadist terrorists. The trail of dead civilians from Baghdad to Jakarta and from Amman to Islamabad over the past decade has largely been the work of al-Qaida and its allies. Though jihadist groups position themselves as the defenders of the Islamic faith, it has become clear that their actions are quite damaging to Muslims themselves.

Conscious of this problem, in December 2007 Zawahiri and his handlers took the unprecedented step of soliciting questions from anyone over the Internet; the al-Qaida leader answered them four months later.

It did not go well. Someone identifying himself as a geography teacher asked: "Excuse me, Mr. Zawahiri, but who is it who is killing with Your Excellency's blessing the innocents in Baghdad, Morocco and Algeria? Do you consider the killing of women and children to be jihad?" Zawahiri responded that he could justify al-Qaida's killings of Muslim civilians, and he did so defensively in dense, recondite passages that referred to other dense, recondite things he had already said about the matter.

This exchange only confirmed Zawahiri's shortcomings, especially compared with his predecessor. Far from being the inspiring orator that bin Laden was, Zawahiri is much more like the pedantic and long-winded uncle who insists on regaling the family at Thanksgiving dinner with accounts of his arcane disputes with obscure enemies no one else cares about.

Not only is Zawahiri a black hole of charisma, he is an ineffective leader who is not well-regarded or well-liked even by the jihadist groups from his native Egypt. And his half-dozen public disquisitions over the past several weeks about the events of the Arab Spring have been greeted by a well-deserved collective yawn in the Middle East.

Zawahiri's persona makes a real difference to the future of al-Qaida, whose members have sworn a personal religious oath of obedience to bin Laden. It's far from clear how many of them will automatically transfer that oath to Zawahiri.

Moreover, al-Qaida's regional affiliates — al-Qaida in Iraq, the North African al-Qaida in the Islamic Maghreb, al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula and Somalia's al-Shabab — all pledged allegiance to bin Laden when they became part of the network. And while al-Qaida in Iraq swore loyalty to Zawahiri in a May 9 statement, the others may not agree to shift their fealty to him.

When bin Laden's followers have described their feelings for him, it has been with love. Abu Jandal, a Yemeni who became one of his bodyguards, described his first meeting with bin Laden in 1997 as "beautiful" and said he came to look on him "as a father." Shadi Abdalla, a Jordanian who was also one of bin Laden's bodyguards, explained his boss's attraction: "A very charismatic person who could persuade people simply by his way of talking. One could say that he 'seduced' many young men."

There is no evidence to suggest that Zawahiri inspires similar feelings. More often he comes off as a classic middle manager, as when he complained in a pre-9/11 memo, later discovered in Afghanistan, that al-Qaida members in Yemen had spent too much money on a fax machine.

One sign of his potential flaws as al-Qaida's new leader is that, despite the fact that Zawahiri had been bin Laden's deputy since 2001, it took more than six weeks for the group to announce his ascension to the top spot — a delay that does not indicate a large pool of goodwill toward him within the terrorist organization.

Despite all of Zawahiri's drawbacks and the serious institutional problems he inherits, there are some opportunities for him to help resuscitate al-Qaida. As the Arab Spring turns into a long, hot and violent summer, Zawahiri will try to exploit the regional chaos to achieve his central goal: establishing a new haven for al-Qaida.

The one place he might be able to pull this off is Yemen. Many of al-Qaida's members, like bin Laden himself, have roots in Yemen, and U.S. counterterrorism officials have identified the al-Qaida affiliate there as the most dangerous of the group's regional branches. And the civil war now engulfing the country has already provided an opportunity for jihadist militants to seize the southern town of Zinjibar.

Surely al-Qaida will want to build on this feat in a country that is the nearest analogue today to pre-9/11 Afghanistan: a largely tribal, heavily armed, dirt-poor nation scarred by years of war.

After the attacks of Sept. 11, Zawahiri wrote in his autobiography that al-Qaida's most important goal was to seize control of significant territory somewhere in the Muslim world. He explained that "without achieving this goal our actions will mean nothing more than mere and repeated disturbances." He may have a chance to achieve it, but given his personal shortcomings, questionable leadership skills and deteriorating institutional brand, there is little reason to suppose that Zawahiri will be able to do so — even in the failing Yemeni state.

Peter Bergen is the director of national security studies at the New America Foundation. He wrote this for The Washington Post.

Not only is Zawahiri a black hole of charisma, he is an ineffective leader who is not well-regarded ... even by the jihadist groups from his native Egypt.

T.F. URA approves $1.7M water project bid

C3 parking lot seal coat bid gets OK

Times-News

A project that could help boost industrial growth in southeast Twin Falls came one step closer to fruition on Monday.

The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency Board approved spending $1.7 million on its Hankins Water Project, which will increase water flow to the Jayco Industrial Park's fire hydrants and allow larger buildings to be constructed in the area.

Boise-based Irminger Construction presented the winning low bid to the URA. It will perform construction work under the supervision of Twin Falls-based J-U-B Engineers, which has handled the project's initial phases.

By J-U-B's expected construction completion date of February 24, 2012, Irminger will install two

Hankins Water Project

What it does: Increases fire hydrant flows to a southeast Twin Falls industrial park, affording the construction of larger buildings.

What it costs: $1.7 million

Who'll do the work: Irminger Construction of Boise

When it'll be done: By Feb. 24, 2012, according to a J-U-B Engineers service agreement to oversee the work

What's involved:

- Two pumps at the city's Hankins water station
- 24-inch pipe along Kimberly Road from Hankins Road to 3300 East Road
- 18-inch pipe on the west side of 3300 East from Kimberly Road to Eldridge Road
- 12-inch pipe on Jayco Street new pumps to the city's Hankins water station, and lay a variety of pipe around the industrial park. The new water loop will provide 4,000 gallons of water per minute to the industrial park's fire hydrants, allowing crews to respond to potential fires at larger buildings. According to city documents, the increased water available will allow buildings of more than 100,000 square feet to be built — up from the current 30,000-square-foot limit.

"The business community expects to have the infrastructure in place that will allow a wide variety of construction types and building facilities," URA Board

Chairman Gary Garnand said in a written release. "We are always pleased when we can help make these improvements available to the community."

Also Monday, the URA Board approved spending $26,827.66 for a seal coat project to improve the parking lot around the C3 call center in north Twin Falls. Quality First Asphalt Maintenance of Twin Falls will do the work.

Costs for the seal coat project will be recouped from C3's $385,380 yearly lease.

Home sales fall to 2011 low; fewer first-time buyers

By Derek Kravitz
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Fewer people bought previously occupied homes in May, lowering sales to their weakest point of the year.

Home sales sank 3.8 percent last month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 4.81 million homes, the National Association of Realtors said Tuesday. That's far below the roughly 6 million annual sales rate typical in healthy housing markets.

Since the housing boom went bust in 2006, sales have fallen in four of the past five years. Analysts say they expect sales to level off at about 5 million a year. That's not much better than the 4.91 million homes sold last year, the worst showing in 13 years.

The depressed housing market has weighed on the

HOME SALES FELL TO 2011 LOW

HOME SALES SINK: Sales of previously occupied homes fell 3.8 percent last month to an annual pace of 4.81 million homes. That's the lowest level in six months and far below the roughly 6 million annual sales rate typical in healthy housing markets.

LEVELING OFF: Analysts expect sales to level off at about 5 million homes sold this year. That's slightly above last year's 4.9 million, the weakest sales level in 13 years.

HURTING ECONOMY: Declining home prices are keeping people from moving to growing areas where jobs are aplenty. They have also made people feel less wealthy, which is reducing consumer spending.

broader economy. Declining home prices have kept people from selling their houses and moving to find jobs in growing areas. They have also made people feel less wealthy. That has reduced consumer spending, which drives about 70 percent of economic activity.

One sign of the housing industry's struggles is that fewer first-time buyers are entering the market. The number of first-timers ticked down to 35 percent of sales last month. In healthy times, they drive about half of sales.

First-time buyers are critical because they tend to improve their properties and invest in their communities, a combination that raises home values. And their purchases allow sellers to move up to pricier homes.

Instead, the market has been saturated with foreclosures, which force prices down. Sales of homes at risk of foreclosure fell in May. But they still made up 31 percent of all purchases. And many pending foreclosures are backlogged in the courts or held up by state and federal probes into questionable foreclosure practices by lenders.

Until the glut of foreclosures are cleared and people think it's a safe time to buy, "it is unlikely that home prices can recover on a sustained basis," said Steven Wood, chief economist at Insight Economics.

Bigger required down payments, tougher lending rules, heavy credit-card and student-loan debt and a shortage of desirable starter homes are keeping many would-be buyers away.

CSI program helps workers, employers keep needed skills

Driven by demand, maintenance tech program graduates first class

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

After a long day of work, the things high on a worker's priority list might include a hot meal, a cold beer, or just some time to unwind. Another hour spent in a classroom after a 10-hour shift usually isn't high on that list.

But for Curtis Duggan, a maintenance foreman at Seneca Food Corp. in Buhl, a four-year string of classes and the new skills that came with him represent both potential career advancement and a boon to his current employer. On Tuesday, Duggan and a handful of other area workers became the first graduates of a maintenance technology apprenticeship provided through the College of Southern Idaho.

The licensed journeyman certificates the graduates earned after being recommended for the program by their employers come with a heavy load of course work and hands-on experience. Each graduate put in 150 classroom hours and 2,000 hours of hands-on experience to fulfill their yearly requirements.

Now, each employer has a skilled employee who can diagnose and troubleshoot issues with the machinery their businesses run on each day. Employers including Seneca, Ameripride Linen and Apparel Services, Saint Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, Amalgamated Sugar Co., Jerome Cheese Co. and Glanbia Foods sponsored employees, often paying their $400-per-semester tuition.

The first two years of the course were taught in a traditional classroom, while the last two years were offered online at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls and Cassia Regional Technical Center in Burley. Duggan said the online classes worked well for him

In their own words

The College of Southern Idaho's first class of maintenance technology journeymen includes: Chris Anderson, Bradly Bohon, William Burr, Julio Castro, Ben Drexler, Curtis Duggan, Ron Fassett, Erick Hawker, Kyle Hotchkiss, Steven Jay, Billy Johnson, Brian Moore, Carlos Ortiz, James Pawson, Luke Rubash and Bill Stokesberry. Here's what some of the graduates said about the program:

"I took it to better my knowledge. It's helped me in a lot of ways. You have to be committed, that's for sure."

— Brian Moore, engineer at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center

Moore

"It's a huge commitment, but I kept going because the knowledge I was getting made it better and easier to make improvements for the company."

— Curtis Duggan, maintenance foreman at Seneca Food Corp. in Buhl

Duggan

"There have been a lot of growing pains. It's been difficult at times, but there is no program like this in all of Idaho."

— Tim Nutsch, program instructor at Amalgamated Sugar Co. controls engineer on the nights he couldn't make it to class and had to make up a course on the weekend from a home computer.

Wal-Mart women vow to press bias fight

By Karen Gullo, Greg Stohr and Margaret Cronin Fisk
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON — The women who sought to sue Wal-Mart Stores for gender bias on behalf of 1.5 million co-workers say they will press their fight against the nation's largest private employer in smaller lawsuits in lower courts and claims with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The Supreme Court

Monday said the women failed to prove the world's largest retailer had a nationwide policy that led to gender discrimination. The court deprived them of the leverage a nationwide suit brings, both in pooled legal resources and a potential multibillion-dollar verdict, forcing them to pursue claims on their own.

"When I go back to work tomorrow, I'm going to let them know we are still fighting," said Christine Kwapnoski, an assistant manager at a Sam's Club in Concord, Calif. She had accused a male manager of yelling at female employees and telling her to "doll up" by wearing more makeup and dressing better while working on a loading dock.

Wal-Mart may now face thousands of lawsuits nationwide and claims of discrimination before federal agencies as plaintiffs' lawyers fan out to courts across the country to file new complaints on behalf of members of the failed group suit.

Kwapnoski and others pressing their suit claimed they were victimized by Wal-Mart's practice of letting local managers make subjective decisions about pay and promotions. More than 100 employees filed sworn statements saying they were paid less and given fewer opportunities for promotion than male colleagues.

was a commitment for both the students and their employers. Duggan said Seneca opened the opportunity up for all of its workers four year ago. Three enrolled then, though he was the only one who continued to graduation. Miller said the program was born out of a demand for master technicians.

“A lot of these companies have master technicians who are just five to seven years away from retirement, and nobody will have the skills to keep the machinery healthy,” Miller said. “The kids coming out of high school now don’t have the basic mechanic skills that older generations had.”

Even some who do have enough money for a down payment and a solid credit history are holding off, worried that home prices will keep falling.

Investors are filling some of the void. They are spending cash to scoop up deeply discounted homes in hard-hit areas of Phoenix, Las Vegas and Tampa. Last month, investors accounted for 19 percent of all sales.

All the while, previously occupied homes are cheap and in great supply.

Re-sold homes are a bargain compared with new homes. The median sales price for a previously occupied home in May was $166,500. The median price of a new home is nearly 31 percent higher than the price for a re-sale – around twice the normal markup.

The gap is largely due to the flood of foreclosures and short sales. (Short sales occur when lenders accept less than what’s owed on the mortgage.) A record 1 million homes were lost to foreclosures last year.

IDAHO
DISTRIBUTION NOTICE

■ 48 HOUR DISTRIBUTION BEGINS: Distribution hotlines open at precisely 8:30am this morning for Idaho residents only. These trucks are being loaded at the National Distribution Center of U.S.-based Fridge Electric with new ArcticPro™ high performance portable air conditioners and soon will be delivered to lucky Idahoans.

Idahoans set to get one of 1,546 new portable air conditioners being released by county

Residents who find their county listed below automatically qualify to get a new A/C unit that slashes cooling bills up to 74%, but only the first 1,546 callers who beat the 48 hour order deadline are getting the new A/C units that keep you cool for just pennies

Universal Media Syndicate

UMS – It just got a lot cooler for lucky Idahoans.

That’s because U.S.-based Fridge Electric has just announced that they are releasing brand new portable air conditioners that drastically slash cooling bills by up to 74% to residents of the state of Idaho.

Company spokesman, Ryan Berry, says, “We only have 1,546 new air conditioners to release, so residents of the state of Idaho who find their county listed in today’s paper need to call the Idaho Distribution Hotline immediately to get theirs.”

This is all happening to announce the new ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner that actually cools an uncomfortably hot room in just minutes by blasting out ice cold air.

This amazing performance was verified by Fridge Electric’s top engineer who researches and develops new products at the company’s highly-secured testing laboratory located at their world headquarters.

The ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioners are being called a work of engineering genius from the China coast because they use 74% less electricity than costly central air conditioners to save you money all summer long.

“You see, with central air conditioners you are wasting a lot of money to cool areas of your home that you’re not even using. And window air conditioners are even worse because they weigh so much they’re nearly impossible to move,” said Berry.

But the ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner saves you money because it actually rolls from room-to-room so you can turn down the central air conditioner and stay cool in any room of the house for just pennies an hour. Everyone is getting them because all you do is vent them and plug them in.

Just in time to beat the unbearable summer heat, ArcticPro™ portable air conditioners are being delivered directly to the doors of the first 1,546 Idahoans who beat the 48 hour order deadline.

And here’s the best part. Since the ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner is not being sold at any retail stores, residents of the counties listed in today’s paper are actually saving a ton of money by avoiding all the retail markup. That makes getting the ArcticPro™ portable air conditioner direct a real steal for just three hundred ninety-eight dollars and shipping because it only uses about 10¢ an hour of electricity, so you can leave it on all day long and never be hot again.

With all of the money you save over central air, these high performance portable air conditioners pay for themselves in just a matter of weeks. After that, they just keep on putting cash in your pocket month after month.

“We’re trying to make sure no one gets left out, but we only have 1,546 ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioners to release and when they’re gone, they’re gone so residents of the counties listed in today’s paper need to call right now. Those who do will be the really smart ones because we’re letting residents have two air conditioners per household until we run out just as long as they call before the deadline ends,” confirms Berry.

“We’re bracing ourselves for all the calls because with the amount of money these high performance air conditioners save people on electric bills everyone wants one. But since Idaho residents are not paying the retail markup you better believe they’ll be telling the operators they want two,” said Berry.

“So when the lines are busy keep trying. We promise to answer every call. Then we’ll have a delivery truck out to you in no time at all so you can stay cool and start saving money,” Berry said.

“You’ll never have to be hot and miserable again,” he said. ■

■ SAVES ON BILLS: The new ArcticPro™ uses 74% less electricity than costly central air conditioners, so everyone gets lower cooling bills and stays cool all summer long for just pennies an hour.

■ NEVER BE HOT AGAIN: Even the hottest rooms are no match for the new ArcticPro™ portable air conditioner because it cools uncomfortably hot rooms with ice cold air in just minutes.

■ COOL NIGHT’S SLEEP: Everyone loves a cool, comfortable night’s sleep. The new ArcticPro™ has a built-in sleep timer that puts you in control of how cool you want to be all night long.

■ EASILY ROLLS ANYWHERE: The new ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner easily rolls from room to room to keep you cool. All you do is vent it and just plug it in to instantly stay cool in any room.

The Toll Free Distribution Hotlines open at 8:30am this morning for county residents only. U.S.-based Fridge Electric has authorized the release of brand new ArcticPro™ portable air conditioners to residents who beat the 48 hour deadline. If lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered. If you miss the deadline you’ll be turned away and forced to wait for future announcements in this publication or others, if any.

The only thing residents need to do is find their county on the list in today’s paper and be one of the first 1,546 callers who beat the deadline to order the new ArcticPro™ high performance air conditioner for just three hundred ninety-eight dollars and shipping to drastically slash cooling bills up to 74%. There is a strict limit of two ArcticPro™ air conditioners per household. To get yours call the Toll Free Distribution Hotline number for your county below.

Above are images provided by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration on Tuesday that show several new warning labels cigarette makers will have to use by the fall of 2012. In the most significant change to U.S. cigarette packs in 25 years, the FDA's new warning labels depict in graphic detail the negative health effects of tobacco use.

Cigarettes will carry grisly new warning labels

By Michael Felberbaum
Associated Press writer

RICHMOND, Va. — Rotting teeth and gums. Diseased lungs. A sewn-up corpse of a smoker. Cigarette smoke coming out of the tracheotomy hole in a man's neck.

Cigarette packs in the U.S. will have to carry these macabre images in nine new warning labels that are part of a campaign by the Food and Drug Administration to use fear and disgust to discourage Americans from lighting up.

The labels, announced on Tuesday, represent the biggest change in cigarette packs in the U.S. in 25 years.

At a time when the drop in the nation's smoking rate has come to a standstill, the government is hoping the in-your-face labels will go further than the current surgeon general warnings toward curbing tobacco use, which is responsible for about 443,000 deaths a year in the U.S.

"These labels are frank, honest and powerful depictions of the health risks of smoking," Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said in a statement.

The FDA estimates the labels will cut the number of smokers by 213,000 in 2013, with smaller additional reductions through 2031.

Other countries such as Canada and Uruguay have used graphic, even grisly, warnings for years, and various studies suggest they spur people to quit. But exactly how effective they are is a matter of debate, since the warnings are usually accompanied by other government efforts to stamp out smoking.

"I think it's a great deterrent for kids," said Kristen Polland, 24, of Prattville, Ala. "If you start there, you have won half of the battle."

Rhonda Vanover, 43, of Cincinnati, on the other hand, said: "No one is going to stop me — unless they make it illegal. Cigarettes get me through the day. They are part of my life."

The labels also include images of a smoker wearing an oxygen mask and a mother and baby with smoke swirling nearby. Some images are not graphic at all; one shows a man wearing an "I Quit" T-shirt.

The warnings will take up the entire top half — both front and back — of a pack of cigarettes. They must also appear in advertisements and constitute 20 percent of each ad. Cigarette makers will have to run all nine labels on a rotating basis. They have until the fall of 2012 to comply.

The legality of the new labels is already being challenged in a federal lawsuit brought by some of the major tobacco companies, which argue that the warnings will relegate the brand name to the bottom half of the cigarette package, making it difficult or impossible to see.

A spokesman for Richmond-based Altria Group Inc., parent company of the nation's largest cigarette maker, Philip Morris USA, said the company was looking at the final labels and had no further comment. Altria Group is not a party in the federal lawsuit.

A pack-a-day smoker would see the graphic warnings more than 7,000 times per year.

American Cancer Society CEO John R. Seffrin said the labels have the potential to "encourage adults to give up their deadly addiction to cigarettes and deter children from starting in the first place."

The introduction of graphic warning labels was required in a 2009 law that, for the first time, gave the federal government authority to regulate tobacco. Tuesday's announcement follows reviews of scientific literature, public comments and results from an FDA-contracted study of 36 labels proposed last November.

The U.S. first mandated the use of warning labels stating, "Cigarettes may be hazardous to your health" in 1965. The current warning labels — put on cigarette packs in the mid-1980s — say more explicitly that smoking can cause lung cancer, heart disease and other illnesses. But the warnings contain no pictures; they consist only of text in a small box.

The share of Americans who smoke has fallen dramatically since 1970, from nearly 40 percent to about 20 percent. But the rate has stalled since about 2004, with about 46 million adults in the U.S.

smoking cigarettes. It's unclear why it hasn't budged, but some experts have cited tobacco company discount coupons on cigarettes and lack of funding for programs to discourage smoking or to help smokers quit.

In recent years, more than 30 countries or jurisdictions have introduced labels similar to those created by the FDA. The World Health Organization said in a survey done in countries with graphic labels that a majority of smokers noticed the warnings and more than 25 percent said the warnings led them to consider quitting.

In 2000, Canada introduced blunt warning labels that included images of a pregnant woman smoking, a child and parent puffing away, and a drooping cigarette to illustrate the risk of impotence from smoking. Since then, the country's smoking rate has declined from about 26 percent to about 20 percent. How much the warnings contributed is unclear because the country took other steps to reduce smoking.

David Hammond, a health behavior researcher at the University of Waterloo in Canada, who worked with the firm designing the labels for the FDA, said that while the images are graphic, they are necessary.

"This isn't about doing what's pleasant for people," he said.

Harissa gives flavor to 30-minute meatballs

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

Harissa delivers a lot of flavor in just a few teaspoons. It is a North African spice paste, carried at an increasing number of grocery stores and at Mediterranean markets. Look for small cans; I like Le Cabanon brand.

The original recipe calls for lamb; we also tried this with coarsely ground dark-meat turkey and liked the meatballs just as much.

The yogurt sauce can be thin or thick, depending on whether you use regular or Greek-style yogurt. Serve with warm flatbread or stuffed into warm pita pockets; or with instant brown rice, pomegranate molasses on the side and slices of cucumber or pickled onion.

The sauce can be refrigerated for up to 7 days.

Adapted from “The Butcher’s Guide to Well-Raised Meat” (Clarkson Potter 2011), by Joshua and Jessica Applestone and Alexandra Zissu.

QUICK MEATBALLS

4 servings

- 2 large cloves garlic
- Leaves and tender stems from about 14 stems (1 3/4 ounces) cilantro
- Leaves from 1 small bunch (3/4 ounce) mint
- 3 teaspoons harissa
- 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt, plus more to taste
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, plus more to taste
- 1 pound lean ground lamb (from the shoulder or stew meat; may substitute 1 pound coarsely ground dark-meat turkey)
- 1 cup plain low-fat or nonfat yogurt
- 1 lemon

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Line a rimmed baking sheet with 2 layers of aluminum foil. Have a large ovenproof pan or cast-iron skillet at hand.

Mince the garlic and place in a mixing bowl. Finely chop the cilantro (to yield at least 1/4 cup). Finely chop the mint leaves and place in a medium bowl; add 2 tablespoons of the chopped cilantro. Add the remaining cilantro to the mixing bowl.

Add 2 teaspoons of the harissa, the 1/2 teaspoon of kosher or sea salt and the 1/2 teaspoon of black pepper to the mixing bowl, then add the lamb and use your (clean) hands to thoroughly incorporate. Wet your hands and use them to roll 1-tablespoon meatballs, placing them on the lined baking sheet as you work. You should have 38 to 40 meatballs. (If you use ground dark-meat turkey, form into about 34 meatballs 1 1/2-inch each.)

Use nonstick cooking oil spray to lightly grease the pan or skillet; heat over medium to medium-high heat. When it is hot, add half of the meatballs and cook for 3 to 5 minutes, turning them gently to sear on all sides; they will not be cooked through. Transfer the foil sheet with the remaining uncooked meatballs to a cleared counter-top. Use a slotted spatula to transfer the par-cooked meatballs to the remaining (clean) foil on the baking sheet. Cook the remaining meatballs, leaving them in the pan or skillet.

Return the first half of par-cooked meatballs to the ovenproof pan or skillet; transfer to the oven and cook for about 6 minutes or until the meatballs are browned on the outside and just cooked through.

While the meatballs are in the oven, stir the yogurt and the remaining teaspoon of harissa into the bowl of chopped cilantro-mint. Cut the lemon in half and squeeze in the juice to taste, making sure to keep the lemon seeds from falling in. Stir until smooth and well combined. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Divide equally among individual plates, with dollops of the sauce. Serve warm.

HEALTH & WELLNESS

“For 40-Years, I was tortured by unbearable Acid Reflux”

“Now, I can even eat spicy foods again without that awful acid burn, piercing through my esophagus!”

By Ralph Burns;
“Former” acid reflux sufferer

Here’s My Story:

I’ve Suffered With Acid Reflux for Almost 40-Years Now. Unless you experience it; you can’t imagine how horrible it is. Every time I ate spicy food I would get what I called “ROT GUT”. Like something was rotting in my stomach. But now I can eat anything... No matter how spicy. Even if I never could before.

Let me explain...

For the better part of my life; I purposely avoided of a lot of foods. Especially ones with even a tiny bit of seasoning. Because if I didn’t, I’d experience a burning sensation through my esophagus— like somebody poured hot lead or battery acid down my throat. Add to that, those disgusting “mini-throw ups” and I was in “indigestion hell”.

“I was beside myself. What was I gonna do? Keep taking the pills, or suffer with problems that could ultimately be my demise”.

Doctors put me on all sorts of antacid remedies. But nothing worked. Or if they did, it would only be for a brief period. And then boom! My nightmare would return.

Sometimes, I felt like I was dying. The pain was unbearable and nothing could make it stop.

But then my wife, who occasionally suffered with the same problem; gave me one of her prescription acid blockers. It was a miracle. I felt like I could live again. Because before that, I was just miserable. I wanted to kill myself. But thankfully, it worked, and worked well.

I felt great, until about one year ago; when I read an FDA warning that scared the heck out of me. It went something like this...

FDA WARNING! Using proton pump inhibitors (PPIs) on a long term basis, increases your risk of hip, bone and spinal fractures. That’s a particular concern to me, since many acid blockers are PPI’s. I’ve gone through two back surgeries and bilateral hip replacements. I had to ask myself, could PPI’s have been responsible for my medical woes? After all...

“The Recommended treatment for Prilosec OTC®, Prevacid® 24HR and all other PPI’s is only 14-days— I TOOK THEM FOR 14-YEARS!”

I was “between a rock and a hard place”. Stop using the PPIs and I’m a “dead man in the water”. It would be unbearable. I wouldn’t be able to eat anything. I’d have to go on a water diet.

But that FDA warning was scary. I knew I had to stop or else risk developing spinal stenosis. My mother had that. And I watched her die a horrible death. Her spine just fractured. It was the worst death. She didn’t deserve that. And neither do I.

“Every time I ate something that didn’t agree with me... I’d get what I called ‘ROT GUT’ — like my stomach was rotting out!”

I had to quit. So I stopped taking PPI’s for a day or so. But my indigestion was worse than ever. I would rather take the chance of a spinal fracture than to live like that again. I tried everything. Even started using home remedies like Apple cider vinegar. But it just felt like I was pouring even more acid down my throat.

Then one day at dinner, a friend of mine said “why don’t you try an aloe drink?” I said “aloe drink”? Jeez. That doesn’t sound good at all!” The next day he brought me a case of something called AloeCure®. I was skeptical, but I was desperate! So instead of being an ingrate I decided to try it.

I was shocked! AloeCure®. Tasted pretty good too. It has a pleasant grape flavor that I actually enjoy drinking. I decided to experiment. I stopped taking the PPI’s altogether and replaced it with a daily diet of AloeCure®. Then something remarkable happened... NOTHING! Not even the slightest hint of indigestion.

And here’s the best part. The next day we had Italian food — my worst enemy. But for the first time in 40-years I didn’t get indigestion without relying on prescription or OTC pills and tablets. Finally, I just didn’t need them anymore!

I was so thrilled; I wrote the AloeCure® company to tell them how amazing their product is. They thanked me, and asked me to tell my story... the story that changed my life. I said “Sure, but only if you send me a hefty supply of AloeCure®. I just can’t live without it.

But don’t believe me. You have to try this stuff for yourself. I recommend AloeCure® to anyone who suffers with the same problem I did. It gives you immediate relief. You’ll be grateful you did. I sure am. It’s the best thing that’s happened to me in a long, long time.

TRY IT 100% RISK-FREE!

The makers of AloeCure® have agreed to send you up to 6 FREE bottles PLUS 2 free bonus gifts with every order— they’re yours to keep no matter what.

That’s enough AloeCure® for 30-days of powerful digestive relief, absolutely free!

TASTING TOUR

Photos by DREW NASH/Times-News

Snyder Winery employee Blanka Boom pours wines for a tasting group Saturday afternoon west of Buhl.

SNYDER WINERY

When to go: Summer tasting hours — June through September — are 1-9 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and 1-5 p.m. on Sundays, or other times by appointment; 543-6938. (When the winery switches to winter hours in October, Sundays will drop out of the regular tasting schedule.)

You'll need appointments for wine-making tours and dinner reservations for the restaurant at Snyder Winery, formerly called Blue Rock. But you can just drop in for a wine tasting during restaurant hours — and order desserts or appetizers, if you like. The tasting room and grounds are spacious; bring as many friends as you want.

"And spend the whole evening if you like," co-owner Russ Snyder said. The staff doesn't turn the tables during the course of an evening, so feel free to linger.

Find it: You'll find this unexpected little gem at 4060 N. 1200 E., in farm country west of Buhl. Restaurant tables on a window-enclosed deck surround a sophisticated tasting room, and you'll find more in the garden. The tasting room is outfitted with leather barrel chairs grouped around a piano and fireplace, on a rug-warmed floor of glowing wood.

What you'll pay: It's $5 for three tastes of about an ounce each.

In your glass: Snyder Winery has eight wines to choose from, all made on site from its own or other Idaho grapes: riesling, chardonnay, white syrah, merlot, cabernet sauvignon, syrah, cabernet franc and a Big Wood River Red blend of syrah, cabernet sauvignon and cabernet franc. Claudia Snyder is co-owner and co-winemaker with her husband; she or a restaurant server will handle the wine talk.

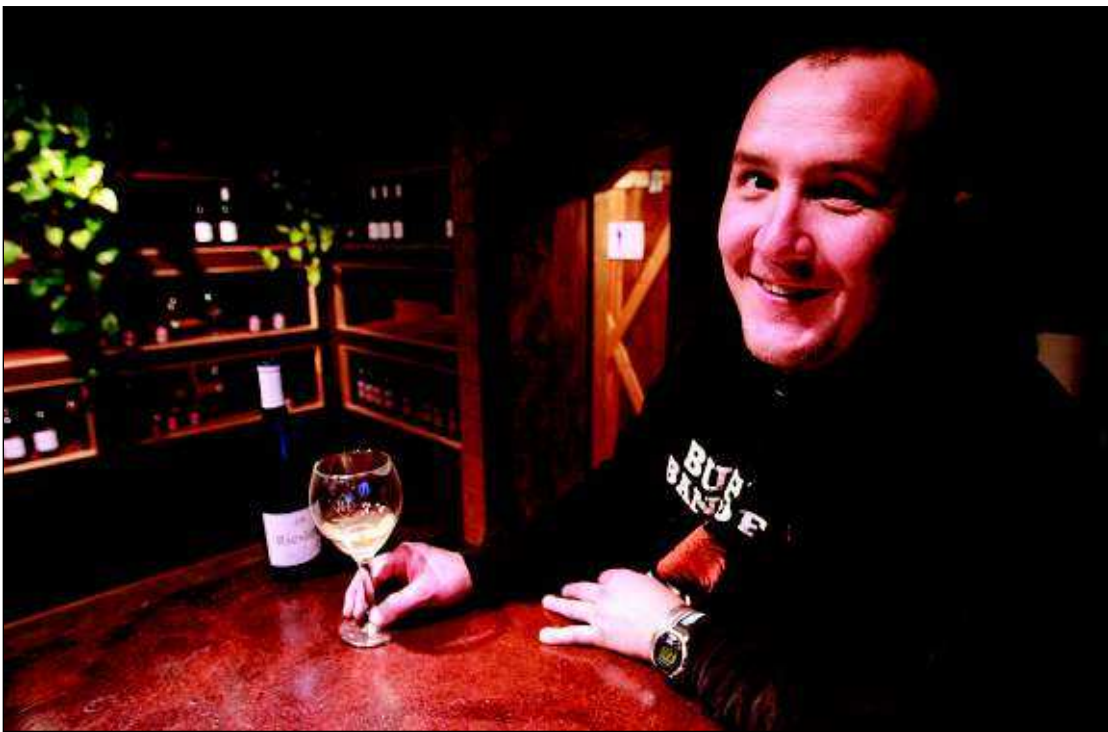

Pretzels and crackers are free, or you can order an hors d'oeuvre platter from the restaurant.

The experience: Start your visit during daylight, because this winery's grounds are gorgeous. Think fountains, bridges, benches, lamps, lawns, streams, stone walkways, pretty pots, lavish flower beds, a rose garden. The newest addition is a pavilion sheltering patio tables.

— Virginia Hutchins

Despite the sophistication of Snyder Winery's tasting room, nice weather and lovely gardens lured Saturday's wine tasters outdoors.

In the tasting room at Holesinsky Organic Vineyard and Winery north of Buhl, owner and winemaker James Holesinsky handles the wine talk himself — if you call ahead.

HOLESINSKY ORGANIC VINEYARD AND WINERY

When to go: Tastings are noon to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, and by appointment on other days; 543-6940 or 420-9887. Even on Saturday and Sunday afternoons it's a good idea to call first, in case the facility has been rented for a wedding reception, class reunion or the like. An appointment for tasting also ensures a one-on-one experience with owner and winemaker James Holesinsky.

The tasting room can accommodate about 10 people; there's outdoor seating for 50 in a garden overlooking the Snake River Canyon.

Find it: To reach 4477-A Valley Steppe Drive, north of Buhl, watch for the vineyard's big sign on Clear Lakes Road; holesinsky.com.

You'll find a low but welcoming building of stucco and brick studded with barrel ends. Inside is a sleek tasting room designed and lighted like a tiny art gallery. You'll stand at a bar of stained concrete. Outside, a weeping willow towers over a wooden deck, a fountain plays in a pond, and a stream intersects the rolling, boulder-strewn lawn.

What you'll pay: A $5 tasting fee covers the first flight of five wines. Or pay $20 per person for an experience that includes in-cellar barrel tasting, cheeses paired with individual wines and more attention from the winemaker.

In your glass: The first flight consists of Purple Octopus syrah, Fat Men merlot, Della's Ghost riesling, Vortex chardonnay and Pink Unicorn rose.

The $20 tasting introduces a variety of private reserve wines. Holesinsky's single-barrel releases include a seven-varietal red blend, a tempranillo, a malbec "and some other surprises," he said. "That's our new thing — small-lot releases."

The experience: During a tasting, you can tour the newly built underground wine cellar and wander the canyon-rim site with its year-round waterfalls.

Novice home winemakers interested in learning about harvest can pay a consulting fee to come back in the fall for hands-on experience with Holesinsky.

— Virginia Hutchins

CARMELA VINEYARDS

When to go: Tastings are seven days a week, year-round: 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sundays. Large groups are fine here.

Find it: 1289 W. Madison St. in Glens Ferry; carmelavineyards.com or 366-2313. You'll stand at the front counter inside a gift shop selling grape-themed T-shirts, candles in wine glasses, Oregon Trail memorabilia and the like.

What you'll pay: Five tastes of about an ounce each will cost $5 if you don't buy a bottle of wine, but they're free if you do.

In your glass: Most of Carmela's wines are reds, but it lists some sweets and whites, too. Carmela makes all of its wines from Idaho grapes — both its own and grapes from small southern Idaho vineyards.

The newest release is Wine-A-Rita, Carmela's summer wine. It's a $13.99 chardonnay blend that pairs well with chicken. "It has a little bit of a margarita flavor, and we're going to put it over ice with a bit of lime," bookkeeper Yvonne Decker said.

For a tasting, you'll choose five wines from the list of 18 — staff recommends three reds, a white and sweet — and get crackers with your wine. An employee (perhaps manager Domonique Sykes) will handle the wine talk.

The experience: Behind the tree-lined entrance you'll find the most developed and tourist-friendly of south-central Idaho's wineries — and the least personal.

It's a wedding-worthy setting: Landscaped grounds and 30 acres of vineyards (labeled by variety) surround the winery on a slope overlooking the Snake River. A stone chateau houses a restaurant, bar and gift shop, with golf, cabins and an RV park also on the grounds.

If you want to tour the wine-making cellars, come between noon and 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, or make an appointment.

No waffling about this difference

McClatchy Newspapers

What is the difference between waffles and Belgian waffles?

A Belgian waffles have deeper pockets than American-style waffles, which makes them great for holding lots of little pools of syrup. The texture is also lighter and crispier.

To make a Belgian waffle, you need a waffle iron with a deeper, larger grid pattern. Most Belgian waffle recipes are yeast-based, to get that crispy texture. But you also can use a waffle batter that uses beaten egg whites for lightness.

A healthy makeover for a classic dinner salad

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

Restaurant diners hoping to lighten their load often go for salads. The usual suspects? The grilled chicken Caesar, the Cobb and Chinese chicken salad.

Here's the problem — they're not always as light as you might think. At one popular national chain, the Chinese chicken salad has almost 25 grams of fat and the Cobb salad has 80 grams. You might as well just eat a cheesy pizza.

But don't write off the idea of a dinner salad just yet. Our Valencia grilled chicken salad is a healthful reimagining of the Chinese chicken salad that can be prepared at home in under a half an hour.

We start with Napa cabbage, which has yellow-green, ruffled leaves that are a lot more inviting than your standard, rather rubbery-looking green cabbage.

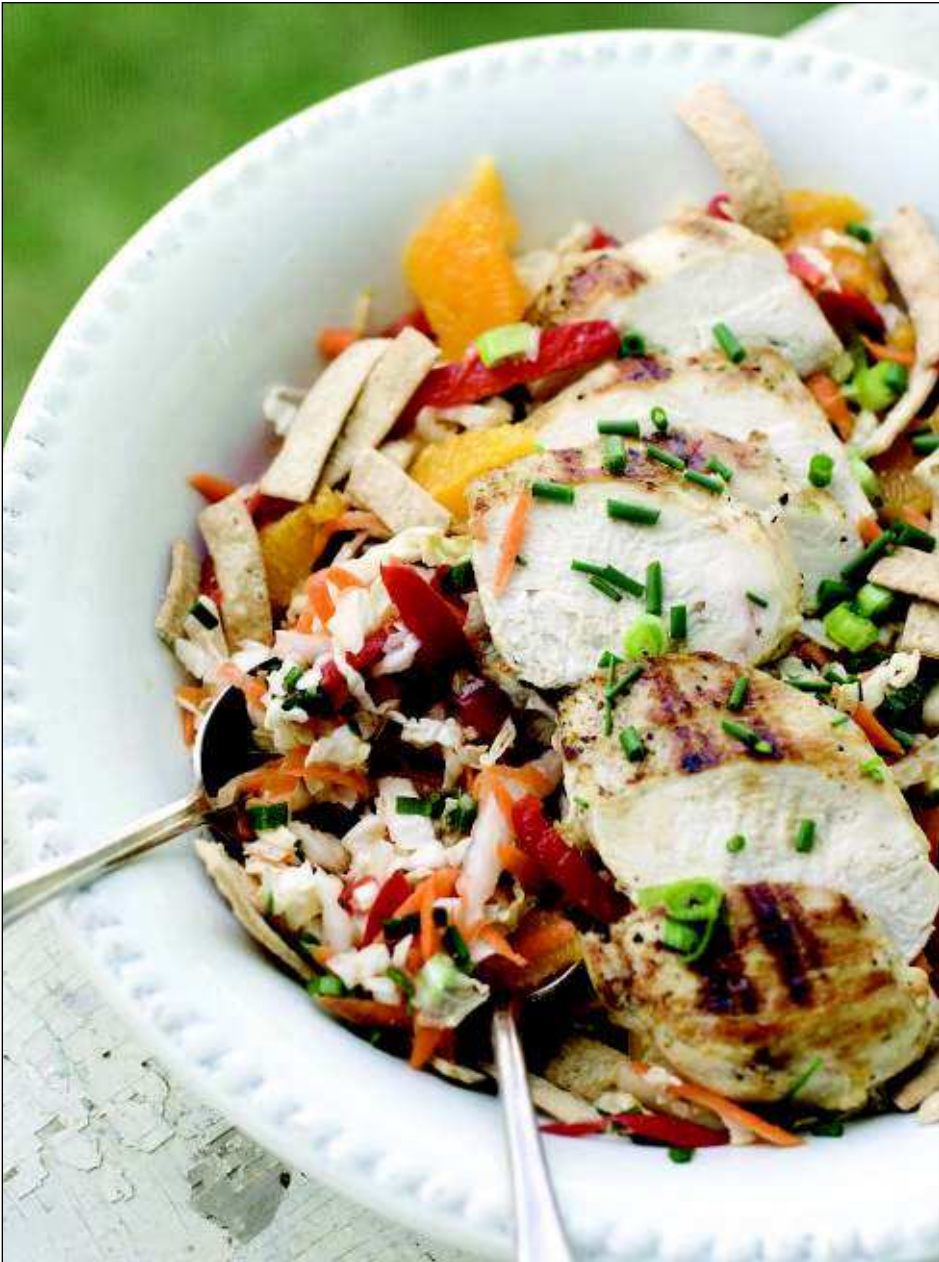

And Napa cabbage, besides being an excellent source for vitamins A and C, has a high water content, which makes it filling without lots of calories. The salad is enriched with a rainbow of other nutritious fruits and vegetables, such as wedges of Valencia orange, red bell pepper and carrots.

The dressing for this salad is key to keeping it light. Instead of going the traditional route of using a high-in-fat oil base, we call for sweet white miso, a fermented soybean paste that gives the dressing its body along with a mellow, sweet and salty flavor. Look for it along with other refrigerated Asian ingredients in the produce section.

Of course, the salad wouldn't be right without crunchy chow mein noodles on top. When you buy them, choose carefully, as some are fried and have considerably more fat and calories than baked varieties.

VALENCIA GRILLED CHICKEN SALAD
Start to finish: 25 minutes. Servings: 4.

1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breasts
1/4 teaspoon salt

This healthful reimagining of Chinese chicken salad can be prepared at home in less than half an hour.

Ground black pepper, to taste
4 Valencia or navel oranges
1/4 cup sweet white miso
3 tablespoons rice vinegar
2 tablespoons peanut oil, preferably toasted
1 tablespoon honey
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
3 tablespoons water
3 cups thinly shredded Napa cabbage
1 small red bell pepper, cored and thinly sliced.
1 cup shredded carrots
3/4 cup sliced scallions
1 cup chow mein noodles

Heat a gas grill to high or light a charcoal fire.
Season the chicken with salt and pepper. Grill until cooked through and 165 degrees at the center, about 5 minutes per side. Set aside to cool.

Slice both ends off the oranges. Holding the oranges over a bowl to collect the juices, use a sharp knife to remove the peel and white pith. Cut the orange segments from the surrounding membranes; discard the membranes. Set the collected juice aside and place the orange segments in a large serving bowl.
To the bowl with the reserved juice, add the miso, rice vinegar, peanut oil, honey, ginger and water. Whisk until smooth, then set aside.
To the bowl of oranges, add the cabbage, bell pepper, carrots and scallions. Add two-thirds of the dressing and toss to combine.

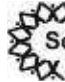

Shred the reserved chicken and toss with the remaining dressing.
To assemble the salads, place some of the cabbage mixture on each serving plate, then top with some of the shredded chicken mixture. Garnish with chow mein noodles before serving.

Super-chef Vongerichten goes Korean in new series

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press writer

WACCABUC, N.Y. — “Try it. Go ahead, stick your finger in!”

The dollop of spicy hot-pepper paste is hard to turn down, coming as it does from the blender of Jean-Georges Vongerichten, one of the best-known chefs in the world, not to mention the owner of 31 restaurants and the man known for basically revolutionizing fine dining in New York.

And we’re in his own home kitchen, yet. So the pinky-finger slurp is gratefully accepted. “Full flavor, no?” he asks. That’s an understatement.

Vongerichten is famous for the variety of his dishes and the magic he creates by mixing unusual and exotic flavors. But today, in an airy, open kitchen that looks out over a pond in suburban Waccabuc, N.Y., what’s being served is outside his comfort zone and experience: Korean food, prepared not by him but by his wife, Marja.

In July, “Kimchi Chronicles,” hosted by the Korean-born Marja, debuts nationwide on public television. (Marja’s husband will be her celebrity sidekick.) The show is part travelogue, part cooking show, and aims to introduce viewers to a cuisine that, while on the rise, has yet to make strong inroads in the U.S.

Even Vongerichten himself — whose empire includes 10 restaurants in New York alone, among them his flagship Jean Georges and the Asian-themed Spice Market — spent five formative years in Asia but was still unfamiliar with Korean cuisine until recently.

“I didn’t know anything about it until I met Marja,” he says. His wife of six years has been cooking Korean more and more since the show got under way, vying for kitchen space with her husband.

There are a number of reasons Korean food has not become nearly as prominent in the U.S. as some other Asian cuisines. Most Korean restaurants are small places in Koreatowns geared toward native Koreans, says Wendy Chan, a food consultant who has worked to introduce the cuisine to Americans. There’s little explanation of the menu and often perfunctory service, she says.

But it’s also the nature of the food itself that’s difficult for Americans to understand, even if they may have encountered kimchi (spicy cabbage), or barbecue or bibimbap, a bowl of rice with stir-fried vegetables, and often meat and an egg on top.

“People are confused,” says Chan. “They go into a restaurant and before they even order, they’re presented with a dozen different little dishes. These little side dishes — maybe vegetables of the day or pickles of the day — are very important in Korean cuisine. But they confuse people — often there isn’t even a name for them.”

Also, many people mistakenly assume all Korean food is spicy and red — like the gochujang, or hot pepper paste, that Marja Vongerichten has prepared today, a Korean staple used to give zest to countless dishes, almost like a ketchup. But that’s inaccurate, says Chan.

A big hope for Korean cuisine in America, she notes, is the rise of several Korean-born chefs introducing their talents to the restaurant world: David Chang, for example, at Momofuku Ko in Manhattan, Akira Back at Yellowtail in Las Vegas, and Roy Choi, known for his Korean taco truck in Los Angeles.

There’s also a well-orchestrated effort by the South Korean government to aggressively promote Korean cuisine in the United States. At this summer’s Fancy Food Show in Washington, D.C. the Korean section will be the largest of any Asian cuisine, says Chan, and will include a pop-up Korean restaurant.

Indeed, the South Korean government is among the sponsors of “Kimchi Chronicles,” says executive producer Charlie Pinsky, a longtime producer of TV food shows. He explains that the idea for the show came one evening at dinner at Jean Georges with some Korean businessmen.

“We suddenly realized Marja was the ideal person to host, and with her husband they made a great team,” he says.

For 13 episodes, Marja Vongerichten and the crew made two long visits to South Korea (her husband came on one of them.) Each episode focuses on one key element of Korean cuisine — such as rice — and involves trips to markets, restaurants or homes. An accompanying cookbook, “The Kimchi Chronicles,” provides recipes adapted for the American palette.

Take guacamole to a new level

The Associated Press

Classic guacamole already is amazing. Add heaps of marinated crabmeat and shrimp or lobster (or be crazy and use both), and now you have a bowl of true comfort to serve with a mound of tortilla chips.

This recipe from Roberto Santibanez’ “Truly Mexican,” can be prepared and refrigerated up to an hour in advance, but let it warm at room temperature a bit before serving. The flavors will be much better.

SEAFOOD GUACAMOLE

Start to finish: 35 minutes. Makes about 3 1/2 cups.

For the seafood:

- 4 ounces jumbo lump crabmeat, picked over for shells
- 3 ounces cooked shrimp or lobster, cut into small pieces (1/2 cup)
- 3 tablespoons freshly squeezed orange juice
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
- 1 tablespoon minced jalapeno or serrano chili, including seeds, more or less to taste

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 2 teaspoons minced canned chipotles in adobo, including sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon fine salt or 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt

For the guacamole:

- 2 tablespoons finely chopped white onion
- 1 tablespoon minced jalapeno or serrano chili, including seeds, more or less to taste
- 1/4 teaspoon fine salt or 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro, divided
- 1 large or 2 small ripe Hass avocados, halved and pitted
- Splash of lime juice

In a large bowl, mix together the crabmeat, shrimp or lobster, orange juice, cilantro, chili, olive oil, chipotle and salt. Let the mixture marinate for about 20 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare the guacamole.

On a large cutting board, mince and mash together the onion, chili, salt and half of the cilantro. Transfer to a bowl.

Use a knife to score the flesh of the avocado halves in a crosshatch pattern, then scoop out with a spoon and add to the bowl. Toss well, then mash. Season with lime juice and additional chili and salt.

With a slotted spoon, transfer about half of the seafood mixture into the guacamole, then stir. Season to taste with additional salt, then garnish with the remaining seafood mixture and the reserved cilantro.

The seafood mixture and the guacamole (with a piece of plastic wrap pressed against the surface) can be stored separately in the refrigerator for up to an hour. Let the guacamole come to room temperature and let the seafood mixture stand at room temperature just long enough to take some of the chill off before you assemble and serve.

Good nutrition is worth a hill of beans

By Jennifer LaRue Huget
Special to The Washington Post

Beans are very nearly the perfect food: Packed with vitamins, minerals, protein and fiber, they're also quite low in fat. They are known as "nutrient-dense" foods, meaning they provide a lot of nutrition per calorie. On top of that, they're cheap.

"They're truly the unsung heroes of our food chain," says David Grotto, a registered dietitian and author of "101 Optimal Life Foods" and "101 Foods That Could Save Your Life!" So it's no wonder beans are favored in the 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans. That document, which spells out the federal government's recommendations for healthful eating, includes beans on a short list of foods we should all be eating more of.

How much?

The new guidelines recommend eating 1 1/2 cups of beans a week. That's half of what was suggested in the 2005 guidelines but still way more than one-third of a cup, which is Americans' median weekly intake of dried beans and peas, according to Trish Britten, a nutritionist with the USDA's Center for Nutrition Policy and Promotion. That figure wasn't available when the 2005 guidelines were written; the new guidelines reflect a more achievable goal.

The basics

What's a bean? Legumes are plants whose seed pods split into two halves. Beans and peas are the mature, edible seeds of some such plants. Examples such as kidney beans, pinto beans, black beans, garbanzo beans (or chickpeas), lima beans, black-eyed peas, split peas and lentils all fall under the

BEANS: BY THE NUMBERS

The number of cups per week a person on a 2,000-calorie daily diet should eat. That's just under a quarter-cup a day. You can do that, right?

Cups of cooked beans and peas recommended each week for a vegetarian who eats eggs and dairy.

category of beans, according to the guidelines.

What's not a bean: Green beans, which are listed in the guidelines as a green vegetable, and green peas, listed as starchy vegetables. Neither is a legume. Soybeans and peanuts are legumes but not considered beans under the guidelines.

Vegetable and protein: Beans and peas are staples of these two food groups in the Dietary Guidelines. If you get plenty of protein, feel free to include beans in your vegetable tally (2 1/2 cups a day is recommended). For vegetarians and vegans, beans can be a key source of plant-based protein.

The benefits

- Fiber. Because they are so packed with fiber (a half cup delivers 6 grams, about a quarter of your daily need), beans make us feel full quickly and help maintain that feeling for a long time. Fiber consumption has been linked to reduced risk of cardiovascular disease, being overweight and Type 2 diabetes.

- Vitamins, minerals and more. Beans are rich sources of iron, zinc and folate, and they're high on the list of foods containing antioxidants, which are thought to protect against inflammation and cell damage by combating stray oxygen molecules ("free radicals") that harm our bodies' tissues. In general, the deeper the color of their skin, the more antioxidants they offer. Plus, beans, like other vegetables, contain lots of potassium, which may help protect against high blood pressure and stroke.

- Value. When it comes to cheap eats, you can hardly beat beans. At my grocery store, for instance, a 16-ounce bag of dried garbanzos is $1.69 and yields 10 quarter-cup cooked servings (about 17 cents a serving). A 16-ounce bag of dried lentils is $1.49 and makes 14 quarter-cup servings (about 10 cents each). Even canned beans are a bargain: A 15-ounce can of black beans costs $1.29 and contains six quarter-cups (about 20 cents apiece). And a 16-ounce can of red kidney beans, also $1.29, has seven quarter-cup servings (about 18 cents each).

Consumer concerns

- Sodium. Canned beans, though more convenient than dried, are swimming in sodium. Some manufacturers offer reduced-sodium versions. Draining and rinsing them in a colander cuts sodium by 40 percent, Grotto says.

- Cooking. Dried beans require the extra steps of soaking and cooking. To save labor, cook a bunch at once and freeze what you don't use.

- Refried beans. These are perfectly good beans, Grotto says. They're just cooked pinto beans that have been mashed up. Sometimes they're cooked with lard or vegetable oil;

look instead for fat-free varieties such as those offered by Ortega and Old El Paso.

- The musical fruit? If beans make you toot, blame the carbohydrate raffinose, which hangs around in our digestive tracts when we eat beans (as well as cabbage, broccoli and some whole grains), Grotto says. Our bodies lack the enzyme needed to digest raffinose, which ends up fermenting in our guts. The problem's worse when we suddenly introduce fiber to our systems, he says. To avoid getting gassy, try phasing in beans, starting with just a tablespoon a day, Grotto suggests. If that doesn't work, try Beano or similar supplements, which contain a key bean-digesting enzyme.

Lonny Ray Amen

Jan. 28, 1957–June 18, 2011

RUPERT — On Saturday, June 18, 2011, the world lost a wonderful man. Lonny Ray Amen, 54, of Rupert, died suddenly while doing the thing he knew best, working. His heart simply couldn't keep up with him.

Lonny was born in Burley on Jan. 28, 1957, to Violet and Jerome (Jerry) Amen. He graduated from Minico High School and went on to take various courses from CSI in music and art. He also studied electrical engineering through correspondence courses. He married Vicky Spackman and lived in Rupert with her until she passed away. He continued to live there with his son thereafter.

Lonny was a star employee for Kraft Foods Inc. from 1976 to 2006 and then went on to work at McCains in 2008. Everyone loved working with him and openly admitted he was a very hard worker. He attended church at the First Christian Church in Rupert and had a strong faith in God. Lonny enjoyed a variety of things. He loved sports, music, art, golfing, billiards and outdoor activities. Lonny refereed basketball and participated in billiard leagues. He enjoyed spending time with friends and family and making us all laugh. He also enjoyed an occasional trip to Jackpot to relax and have some fun. What he enjoyed the most, though, was being a wonderful dad to his son, Chris.

Lonny is survived by his parents, Violet and Jerome (Jerry); his son, Christopher; his brothers, Danny, Jonny and Jeremy; and his sister, Gina. Lonny also had four stepchildren, Kim, Amber, Mike and Jason, who played an important role in his life. Lonny was preceded in death by his wife, Vicky.

All are welcome to attend the service for Lonny. The viewing will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, June 23, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert. The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, June 24, at the Christian Church Praise Chapel, 1110 Eighth St. in Rupert.

The Amen family would like to express their gratitude to all who were involved in the effort to keep Lonny with us that day. He will be greatly missed and forever thought of and loved.

VANCOUVER, Wash. — Mary Draper, 70, died Wednesday, June 15, 2011, in Vancouver, Wash.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, June 24, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, Idaho. Internment will be at Paul, Idaho.

Mary was born Aug. 22, 1940, in Rupert, the first of six children of Clarence and Virginia (Knodel) Sparks. She loved life and had many interests. She loved to cook and donated cookies to the monthly meeting of Al Anon Reflections on a regular meeting. She also made fliers for the meeting. She was a member of Al Anon for nearly 30 years.

She loved her many grandchildren and enjoyed buying gifts for them. Another hobby was making blankets. Nearly all of her grandchildren have a blanket to remember her by. She also collected cookie jars and has more than 100 in her collection.

On March 9, 1958, she married Jay Ronald Draper in Rupert. She was the prettiest girl he had ever dated, and they were married 53 tumultuous years. He is bereft that she is gone.

She was preceded in death by three infant sons and one adopted son. She is survived by three children, Greg, Gary and Tracy; three brothers, Jerry, Clarence and Ronnie; two sisters, Judy Coelho and Beverly Son; 15 grandchildren; and 25 great-grandchildren.

Laura Morrill

March 17, 1949–June 19, 2011

HAZELTON — Laura Morrill of Hazelton was called home by our Heavenly Father on Sunday, June 19, 2011. Laura was at home surrounded by her family during her final days battling cancer.

Laura was born March 17, 1949, to Albert and Lulu Burton. She married Don E. Morrill in 1968. They were blessed with five children and 12 grandchildren.

She is survived by her husband, Don; children, Jackie (Jim) Murphy of Hazelton, Laurie (Perry) Freitag of Hazelton, Jarvis (Becky) Morrill of Sedro-Wooly, Wash., Bethany (Roger) Nelson of St. Maries and Philip Morrill of Hazelton.

A service will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday, June 23, at the Valley Christian Center in Hazelton, with Pastor Wes Johnson officiating. Burial will follow at the Hazelton Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of Rose-nau Funeral Home in Twin Falls.

For obituary rates and information, call 735-3266 Monday through Saturday. Deadline is 3 p.m. for next-day publication. The e-mail address for obituaries is obits@magicvalley.com. Death notices are a free service and can be placed until 4 p.m. every day. To view or submit obituaries online, or to place a message in an individual online guestbook, go to www.magicvalley.com and click on "Obituaries."

SALT LAKE CITY — Jason Valdez is no stranger to Utah police. His latest brush with the law, however, may have been the most public.

An armed Valdez, 36, held a woman hostage at a motel in a tense 16-hour, overnight standoff with SWAT teams, all while finding time to keep his family and friends updated on Facebook, authorities said.

He even got some help from the outside over the social network: A friend posted that a SWAT officer was hiding in the bushes.

"Thank you homie," Valdez replied. "Good looking out."

When officers swarmed the room, Valdez shot himself in the chest with a handgun, Ogden police said. On Tuesday, he was in critical condition.

The Associated Press reviewed Valdez's Facebook profile page on Tuesday. Police believe he wrote the messages during the standoff.

It wasn't immediately clear, however, whether police were following the posts in real-time, though the department spokeswoman said officers routinely search the Internet and other sources for background on suspects.

In all, Valdez made six posts and added at least a dozen new friends.

His family and friends responded with 100 comments. Some people offered words of support, and others pleaded for him to "do the right thing."

Court records show Valdez has a criminal history, including convictions for aggravated assault and domestic violence in front of a child.

In March, prosecutors filed felony and misdemeanor drug possession charges against Valdez. A judge issued a warrant for Valdez's arrest after he missed a June 1 preliminary hearing in the case.

On Friday afternoon, Ogden police tried to serve Valdez with a felony drug warrant for the missed court appearance.

Valdez barricaded himself inside the Western Colony Inn.

"I'm currently in a standoff...kinda ugly, but ready for whatever," Valdez wrote in his first post at 11:23 p.m. "I love u guyz and if I don't make it out of here alive that I'm in a better place and u were all great friends."

Valdez said in posts that he was with a woman named Veronica. Police described her as a hostage.

In his posts, Valdez told friends when police shut off the power that his "hostage" was fine — and with him willingly — and that police are jeopardizing her life by their actions.

At 2:04 a.m., Valdez posted two pictures of himself and the woman.

"Got a cute 'Hostage' huh," Valdez wrote of the photographs.

At 3:48 a.m., one of Valdez' friends posted that police had a 'gun ner in the bushes stay low!' Valdez thanked him in a reply.

The final post was at 7:25 a.m. Saturday: "Well i was lettin this girl go but these dumb bastards made an attempt to come in after i told them not to, so i popped off a couple more shots and now were startin all over again it seems..."

SWAT officers stormed Valdez's room about 90 minutes later. Police never fired, Ogden Lt. Danielle Croyle said.

Police believe that responses from Valdez's friend gave him an advantage.

Authorities are now discussing whether some of Valdez' friends should be arrested and charged with obstruction of justice for hampering a police investigation. "We're not sure yet how to deal with it," said Croyle.

"We're talking about it and trying to figure out how do we address the kind of conflict that it presents," Croyle said.

Valdez could be facing new charges stemming from his actions during the standoff, including fire his handgun at police, Croyle said.

Melvin Loose

June 6, 1926–June 19, 2011

RUPERT — Melvin Loose of Rupert, Idaho, died Sunday, June 19, 2011, 13 days after his 85th birthday.

He was born June 6, 1926, in Gering, Neb., the son of Carl Loose and Elizabeth Wamboldt Loose.

On July 15, 1945, he married Marjorie Rohrick in Scottsbluff, Neb. Together, they had four sons and for many years farmed in the Nebraska panhandle area as well as in Casper, Wyo. For a brief time, Melvin worked for Hunt-Wesson Foods in Woodland, Calif., and owned and operated a Shell Service Station in Lake Tahoe. He and his wife returned to Casper, where they continued to farm near the Natrona County Airport. Mr. and Mrs. Loose divorced in 1984.

Melvin retired from farming and moved to Rupert in the late 1980s, where he lived with his life partner, Katherine Lorraine Rimmer, until his death.

Melvin is survived by four sons, James of Jackson, Wyo., Richard of Casper, Wyo., Gary of Lander, Wyo., and Steven of Casper, Wyo. He is also survived by his ex-wife, Marjorie; his partner, Lorraine Rimmer; six grandchildren, Brian Loose, Janae Mercado, Jennifer Cyr, Matthew Loose, Angela Curtis and Stephanie Loose; six great-grandchildren; three brothers, Carl, Victor and Willard; four sisters, Betty Bauer, Juanita Bauer, Judy Hoff and Elnora Harmon.

He was preceded in death by his parents; and a brother, Harry.

Memorial services will be held 2 p.m. Friday, June 24, at Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, with Pastor Joel Pike officiating, and in Scottsbluff, Neb., at a later date.

SENIOR

Q. As my parents age, I want to promise them that they'll always be able to stay at home, or come to live with me. Is it wise to make a promise to a loved one that you will never place him or her in a long term care facility?

A. It is impossible to predict future events that could affect your ability to keep this heart-felt promise. Placement in a long term care facility, or nursing home, may become necessary. Your loved one's medical condition could worsen, requiring more extensive care, or they may develop behavior problems related to their condition, and need more supervision or higher level of care than what you are able to offer. It is more reasonable and honest to say that you will always seek the best care possible for your loved one. Then, carry through by investigating and evaluating all care options, including long term care facilities, as conditions change. If placement becomes necessary, remember to visit as often as time allows. The relationships you build with facility staff and other residents can be fulfilling and help you through this difficult time.

Serena Williams wins in return to Grand Slam play

Serena Williams of the US reacts during her victory over France's Aravane Rezai at the All England Lawn Tennis Championships at Wimbledon, Tuesday.

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

WIMBLEDON, England — The 352 days Serena Williams lived through between Grand Slam appearances were filled with health problems and hospitalizations, doubts and depression.

Cuts from glass on both feet. One subsequent operation on her right foot, then a second. Clots in her lungs. Surgery to remove a pool of blood under her skin. On and on it went.

Finally healthy, and finally back at a major tournament, Williams was simply overwhelmed by it all at the conclusion of her match at Wimbledon on Tuesday. As soon as she snapped off her 13th ace of the afternoon to close an uneven performance in a 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 victory over

“It definitely was so emotional for me because, you know, throughout the last 12 months, I’ve been through a lot of things that’s not normal; things you guys don’t even know about.”

— Serena Williams

Aravane Rezai of France in the first round, Williams placed her right palm on her chest. Her eyes welled with tears.

By the time she walked to the net to shake hands with Rezai, Williams was crying. She sat in her sideline chair, covered her face with a tournament towel and sobbed. And she kept right on bawling through a post-match TV interview with the BBC.

“It definitely was so emotional for me because, you know, throughout the last 12 months, I’ve been through a lot of things that’s not normal; things you guys don’t even know about,” the 29-year-old American said at her news conference. “So it’s just been a long, arduous road. To stand up, still, is pretty awesome.”

A first-round win at a Grand Slam tournament is not exactly the sort of achievement Williams normally would celebrate: Her career mark in such matches is now 44-0, after all. But she’d never before been away from her sport for such an extended time — and, more to the point, she’d never before been through such a series of scares. Williams got the “all clear” from her doctor about 2 1/2 months ago, only began practicing at full speed about one month ago, and played her first match anywhere since July at a grass-court tournament in Eastbourne last week.

Rezai, once ranked as high as 15th but now 61st, was struck by the high level of Williams’ play, particularly down the stretch — and by her reaction at match’s end.

“It shows she’s not a machine; she’s a human being,” Rezai said. “We all have a heart. We all have emotions. ... If she wins the next two or three matches, I think she can win the tournament.”

Williams wasn’t quite ready to pronounce herself the player to beat at Wimbledon, where she has won four of her 13 Grand Slam singles championships, including each of the past two years.

Twin Falls Cowboys making first appearance at Battle of Omaha Baseball Tournament

The Twin Falls Cowboys are going on a road trip.

The Class AA American Legion baseball team is making its first appearance in the Battle of Omaha Baseball Tournament in Nebraska this week.

Coinciding with the College World Series, the Battle of Omaha consists of eight tournaments in six different age groups, ranging from 11 to 19 years and drawing teams from nearly every reach of the country.

Twin Falls is playing in the 42-team 19U Tournament, beginning Thursday, which Duke guard Kyrie Irving is expected to be selected first overall by the Cleveland Cavaliers in Thursday’s 2011 NBA draft.

Cavaliers mulling NBA draft decisions

By Tom Withers
Associated Press writer

CLEVELAND — They’re done measuring, timing and talking to prospective draft picks. It’s time for the Cleveland Cavaliers to choose a few.

Empowered with the Nos. 1 and 4 picks in Thursday’s NBA draft, the Cavs will spend the next 48 hours deciding who to add to their roster. While all signs indicate they will select Duke point guard Kyrie Irving first overall, the Cavs have not yet made any final decisions.

They’ll spend Tuesday and Wednesday setting their board and debating their many options, which could include a trade — or two. The Cavs also have two second-round picks (Nos. 32 and 54) and a $14.5 million trade exception, assets they may package with players or owner Dan Gilbert’s cash to make deals.

On Monday, the team held its last round of workouts by hosting Arizona forward Derrick Williams, Turkish center Enes Kanter and Kentucky guard Brandon Knight at their suburban training facility. Williams and Kanter were in for their second visits, and the pair also met with Gilbert and some of his kids, adding another layer of mystery to the team’s true intentions.

The Cavs have treated this draft with air-tight security, throwing up an impenetrable defense around their plans. Other than a few random tweets on his Twitter account, Gilbert has been out of sight; general manager Chris Grant has made no public comments in weeks and the club closed player workouts to the media.

NBA owners, players swap proposals, to meet Friday

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Saying it reflects a “desire to go as far as we can to avoid a lock-out,” NBA Commissioner David Stern revealed Tuesday that owners have moved off their insistence on a hard salary cap.

Players don’t see it that way.

So it appears the cap system remains as the biggest obstacle to a new collective bargaining agreement before the rapidly approaching June 30 deadline.

NFL owners, players to meet once more

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. — NFL owners have been briefed on discussions for a new collective bargaining agreement that would net the players just under 50 percent of total revenues. Next up: more talks with the players.

Several people with knowledge of the negotiations told The Associated Press that Commissioner Roger Goodell and his labor committee will meet with players association chief DeMaurice Smith on Wednesday and Thursday in Boston.

The owners spent five hours Tuesday getting updated on various CBA issues. The people spoke on condition of anonymity because the negotiations are supposed to be confidential.

“We’re going to meet with them soon and we’re eager to accelerate the pace of the negotiations,” said Jeff Pash, the league’s chief negotiator.

One person told the AP that the players’ share would approach the 50 percent the NFLPA has said it has received throughout the last decade. But the expense credits — about $1 billion last year — that the league takes off the top would disappear.

Also, there would no longer be “designated revenues” from which the players would share, the person said. Instead, the players would share from the entire pie, which they project will grow significantly over the course of the new CBA, which is expected to run anywhere from six to 10 years. So if they are taking 48 percent or more of a much higher revenue stream — without the initial NFL deduction for operating expenses — the players still would receive far more money than they got under the previous agreement.

A salary floor keeping teams within 90 percent of the cap also would be included. The players have been concerned that some teams whose revenue streams don’t match up with the richer clubs would try to hold down salary spending.

“It was a good day in the sense of we had a full discussion on the issues,” Goodell said. “Ownership is united

McKeon still up to winning ways

MIAMI — The Florida Marlins' new 80-year-old manager still has the winning touch.

Jack McKeon earned his first victory since coming out of retirement when the Marlins broke an 11-game losing streak by beating the Los Angeles Angels 5-2 on Tuesday night.

Javier Vazquez and five relievers gave up 13 hits and the Angels had at least one hit in every inning, but they went 1 for 15 with runners in scoring position.

Gaby Sanchez hit his 13th home run and Hanley Ramirez had his first multi-hit game since May 21 for the Marlins, who improved to 2-19 in June. They are 1-1 since McKeon took over Monday as interim manager for the rest of the season.

Vazquez (4-7) went 51-3 in innings and allowed 10 hits but no runs to lower his ERA to 6.37, still the highest in the majors. The right-hander had been 0-3 in his past five starts.

NATIONALS 6, MARINERS 5

WASHINGTON — Wilson Ramos capped a five-run ninth inning with a game-ending three-run homer for Washington.

Jerry Hairston and Danny Espinosa each had two-out

RBI singles before Ramos connected on a 1-1 pitch from David Pauley, hitting a drive deep to center for his sixth homer. Ramos threw his arms up almost immediately after the ball left his bat and Pauley (4-1) trudged off the mound.

The Mariners wasted a fine effort from Doug Fister, who allowed one run and three hits in eight innings. The right-hander is 0-3 in four June starts despite a 3.60 ERA.

RANGERS 5, ASTROS 4, 11 INNINGS

ARLINGTON, Texas — Mitch Moreland blasted the first pitch of the bottom of the 11th inning into the upper deck in right field, sending the Texas Rangers to a 5-4 victory over the Houston Astros on Tuesday night.

BREWERS 5, RAYS 1

MILWAUKEE — Zack Greinke struck out 10 over seven effective innings and the Milwaukee Brewers got back to their winning ways at home with a 5-1 victory over the Tampa Bay Rays on Tuesday night.

Greinke (7-2) provided his best performance so far with the Brewers as Milwaukee came into play a 1/2-game behind St. Louis in the NL Central.

Florida Marlins interim manager Jack McKeon, left, celebrates with Hanley Ramirez after the Marlins defeated the Los Angeles Angels 5-2 in an interleague baseball game, Tuesday in Miami. McKeon earned his first victory since coming out of retirement when the Marlins broke an 11-game losing streak and Ramirez had his first multi-hit game since May 21.

PADRES 5 RED SOX 4

BOSTON — Former Boston prospect Anthony Rizzo drove in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning to help San Diego snap a season-worst six-game losing streak.

Rizzo grounded out with the bases loaded to first baseman Adrian Gonzalez, traded to Boston in the offseason for Rizzo and two other minor leaguers. Chase Headley scored on the slow roller that Gonzalez bobbled before getting the out at first.

ROCKIES 4, INDIANS 3

CLEVELAND — Seth Smith's second homer of the game snapped a ninth-inning tie and Colorado held Cleveland hitless into the sixth.

Smith connected off Cleveland closer Chris Perez (2-3), hitting a 2-2 pitch into the right-field seats for his eighth homer of the season and fourth career multihomer game.

Matt Belisle (5-2) worked one inning for the win. Huston Street pitched the ninth for his major league-leading 22nd save in 24 chances.

ATHLETICS 7, METS 3

NEW YORK — Josh Outman threw another impressive game, Jemile Weeks scored three times and streaking Oakland handed rookie Dillon Gee his first loss of the season.

Ryan Sweeney had four hits, including an RBI single, and the A's won their sixth straight after dropping 13 of 14 — their longest win streak since a seven-game run in September 2009.

BRAVES 5, BLUE JAYS 1

ATLANTA — Brian McCann hit a two-run homer, Jason Heyward had an RBI single and Mike Minor ended a nine-start winless streak as Atlanta won its third straight.

Minor (1-2) allowed five hits, one run, one intentional walk and struck out a season-high eight in seven innings.

PIRATES 9, ORIOLES 3

PITTSBURGH — Neil Walker had two hits and drove in three runs to help Pittsburgh snap a four-game losing streak.

Chris Resop (3-2) picked up the victory in relief after starter James McDonald couldn't get through the requisite five innings — even though he was staked to an early five-run lead.

DIAMONDBACKS 7, ROYALS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wily Mo Pena and Chris Young homered, and Joe Saunders pitched seven strong innings for Arizona.

Saunders (4-7), who started the season 0-5, picked up his fourth victory in six starts. He held the Royals to six hits and two runs over seven innings, his 10th consecutive start pitching at least six innings.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PHILLIES 10, CARDINALS 2

ST. LOUIS — Jimmy Rollins and Chase Utley each had a two-run single during Philadelphia's season-best nine-run eighth inning, lifting the Phillies to a 10-2 rout over the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday night.

Carlos Ruiz had four hits and one of two bases-loaded walks in the eighth for NL East-leading Phillies, who have won Roy Halladay's last seven starts but put it together too late for the right-hander to become the majors' first 10-game winner. Two days earlier, Cole Hamels missed his bid for No. 10 in a 2-0 loss at Seattle.

Wimbledon

It was only a handful of days after that latest title that Williams was sliced on both feet by glass at a restaurant in Germany. She played an exhibition match in Belgium later that week, but eventually realized she needed surgery. Williams now has a jagged scar that runs several inches from the top of her right foot up her leg.

"She really appreciated this chance to return to tennis, and she couldn't wait to get back," her mother, Oracene Price, said after watching the match on Center Court, where singer Diana Ross had a front-row seat in the Royal Box. "Now she has something to get that zeal back. The hunger and the fire that you lose comes back. I know she had been depressed at times."

There was none of that sort of drama on the day's later matches on Centre Court, which included straight-set victories for Roger Federer, Novak Djokovic and Maria Sharapova.

Not really bothered by swirling wind he called "tricky," six-time Wimbledon champion Federer won 68 of 80 points on his serve — including 29 of 31 in the first set — while beating Mikhail Kukushkin of Kazakhstan 7-6 (2), 6-4, 6-2. Djokovic, playing for the first time since his 43-match winning streak was ended by Federer in the French Open semifinals, dropped only 11 points on serve and eliminated Jeremy Chardy of France 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. Andy Roddick, a three-time runner-up at the All England Club, served quite well, too, pounding 30 aces to defeat qualifier Andreas Beck of Germany 6-4, 7-6 (6), 6-3.

Other winners included 2009 U.S. Open champion Juan Martin del Potro, two-time French Open finalist Robin Soderling, top-seeded Caroline Wozniacki and French Open champion Li Na. But former No. 1 Jelena Jankovic lost in the first round.

pool winners play Sunday morning with the two final winners slated to play for the championship Monday.

This spring's Class 4A state champions and winners over 5A teams this past week, the Cowboys look forward to playing some of the best teams in the country.

"We're going to see some good teams. This is something we've had marked on our calendars for a long time," Stadelmeir said. "It will be a good atmosphere for us."

The tournament is also a good chance for the six seniors and 11 underclassmen to build team camaraderie. The team was crammed together on a bus for its 10-hour trip to Cheyenne on Tuesday.

"We try to get these guys out of Idaho, go on one big, long trip and open their eyes to other teams. It also gives us a chance to get together," Stadelmeir said. "We have a lot of good times and some of the guys will get tired of each other as well. It's definitely a team-building experience."

On Friday, the players will take a tour of the Nike Fieldhouse where they will design their own shoes and uniforms and watch a CWS game on a projector screen.

"It's going to be a really good experience for these guys," Stadelmeir said. "We're just a 4A school going out and trying to win games."

and determined to reach an agreement and have a full 2011 season."

Several owners were expected to have objections to some of the proposals. Goodell was asked if there was a consensus among owners, to which he replied that "is a little deceiving because we don't have an agreement" with the players.

"The membership has a strong view of the priorities and what we need to do, and a determination to get there," Goodell said.

But both sides appear eager to find common ground for a new collective bargaining agreement rather than going back into court. A U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is considering the league's appeal of a lower-court injunction that originally blocked the lockout. That injunction is on hold, and a ruling could come anytime.

"This is the season to get a deal," Indianapolis Colts owner Jim Irsay said. "I think the logic that you're pushing on both sides is saying why get a deal Oct. 1, or whenever, when you could have had July 7, or whatever."

The lockout began March 12. Training camps are scheduled to open in late July.

Cal's Campbell delivers big hits in 7-3 CWS win

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — California coach David Esquer called on all hands to save his baseball program, and he's doing the same to keep his team playing in the College World Series.

Freshman utilityman Derek Campbell drove in two runs out of the No. 9 spot, closer Matt Flemer pitched three scoreless innings in his longest outing of the year and the Golden Bears kept up their improbable postseason run with a 7-3 victory over Texas A&M.

"I'm happy our guys kind of grinded it out, because that's kind of how we do it. We don't do it easy," Esquer said.

The Bears (38-22) won their first CWS game in three appearances since 1980 and will play either Virginia or South Carolina on Thursday in another elimination game.

Aggies coach Rob Childress said he told his players that they should expect to come back next year.

"We didn't play like we're capable of playing the two games that we were here,"

Childress said. "It's nobody's fault."

SOUTH CAROLINA 7, VIRGINIA 1

OMAHA, Neb. — Colby Holmes, John Taylor and Matt Price combined on a five-hitter and defending national champion South Carolina tied the record for consecutive NCAA tournament wins with a 7-1 victory over Virginia at the College World Series on Tuesday night.

Adrian Morales and Brady Thomas had three hits apiece for the Gamecocks, who won their 13th straight national tournament game to match the record held by Southern California (1972-74) and LSU (1997-98).

The Gamecocks (52-14) are off until Friday and would have to be beaten twice by Virginia or California to not return to the best-of-three finals next week. No. 1 national seed Virginia (55-11) plays California in a Thursday elimination game.

FLORIDA 3, VANDERBILT 1

OMAHA, Neb. — Night or day, it didn't matter to Florida's Steven Rodriguez.

The pitcher did not give up a hit in 4 1-3 innings of relief over two days, and Florida finished off a 3-1 victory over Vanderbilt on Tuesday in the completion of a College World Series game suspended because of inclement weather.

The sophomore left-hander retired three batters Monday night before high winds and heavy rain disrupted the game in the bottom of the sixth. He struck out six of the 11 batters he faced Tuesday. He finished with seven strikeouts and a walk.

Florida (52-17) beat its Southeastern Conference rival for the fourth time in five meetings this season and is now in control of Bracket 2. The Gators need a win over Vanderbilt (53-11) or North Carolina on Friday to advance to the best-of-three finals.

CSI's Duncan, Montgomery returning for sophomore seasons

Times-News

College of Southern Idaho's Jessi Duncan and Bailee Montgomery are returning to the softball field for their sophomore seasons.

On Tuesday, the pair both signed letters of intent to remain at CSI.

Duncan, a pitcher from Battle-ground, Wash., accumulated a 22-6 record in the circle with a 4.14 ERA this season for the Golden Eagles. She was second in innings pitched behind Jyl Eckstein at 167.1, pitching 13 complete games with 114 strikeouts.

Montgomery, who graduated from Buhl, served as the team's bullpen catcher.

The Golden Eagles fell to Salt Lake in the Region 18 Tournament title game in May.

JEROME CLASS A DROPS TWO

The Jerome Cyclones Class A American Legion baseball team was swept by the Pocatello Razorbacks Tuesday, losing both games of a doubleheader 12-0 in five innings.

Jerome was held to only seven hits in the two games and drops to 3-7 on the season.

Nearly one year after LeBron James stripped them of their identity, the Cavs have all the power — and they're using it.

Aside from the record rainfall, it's been an otherwise joyous spring in Cleveland, a city not accustomed to feeling too good about its sports teams. The Cavaliers, who lost 63 games and were out of the playoff hunt by January in their first season without James, won the draft lottery in May.

Then James, whose tortuous departure last summer left scars, lost to Dallas in the NBA finals, giving Cleveland fans a chance to gloat over someone else's misery for a change.

But this draft has spawned optimism and is giving the Cavaliers a chance to accelerate their post-LeBron recovery. As the first team with two picks in the top four since Houston in 1983, Cleveland is confident it will come away climbing a few rungs up the ladder back to contention.

Trouble is, experts have labeled this draft as one of the weakest in recent memory.

Several top players, including lottery locks Harrison Barnes and Jared Sullinger, decided to stay in college perhaps because of concerns about a possible labor lockout. What's left are players laden with question marks and only Irving and Williams viewed as potential perennial All-Stars.

Stern said the league has proposed a "flex cap," in which teams would target a uniform dollar amount to spend, but would still be permitted to exceed up to an unspecified level. Players argue it's still a hard cap, because the ceiling would eventually kick in.

So even though both sides felt there was progress in what Stern had said was an important day in these negotiations, a sizable gap remains.

"At this point we're still just really far apart on the largest issue of hard salary cap, and still some economic issues as well," players' association president Derek Fisher of the Lakers said.

Calling it "virtually the best shot we think we have" to avoid a work stoppage, Stern said the owners' proposal would ensure that players' total compensation would never fall below $2 billion a year in a 10-year contract, slightly less than the league paid this season.

He said the average player salary would be about $5 million and Deputy Commissioner Adam Silver said the goal would be an eventual 50-50 split of basketball revenues. The players are currently guaranteed 57 percent.

Though Stern refused to call this his last offer, he said the "cupboard is getting barer and barer."

"It's all out there," he said. "The owners to a person feel that this is what we have to give."

The flex cap offer had previously been proposed to the players, but had not been disclosed publicly until Tuesday. According to Stern, teams would be targeted to spend approximately $62 million, with the option to spend above through various exceptions before reaching an unspecified level they could not exceed.

Under the current soft salary cap, teams can use various exceptions to exceed the cap, with the penalty of a dollar for dollar luxury tax once they reach a certain threshold. The cap this year was $58 million, and the NBA champion Dallas Mavericks, under big-spending owner Mark Cuban, blew well past the tax level of $70 million.

The union made what Stern called a "directionally better" proposal than its previous ones and asked for another meeting Friday.

Rematch: Isner needs 2 hours, 3 sets to beat Mahut

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The rematch of the longest match in tennis history certainly was a lot shorter.

A year after needing 11 hours, 5 minutes spread over three days to finish a match that ended 70-68 in the fifth set, John Isner required only about two hours and a mere three sets to beat Nicolas Mahut in the first round at Wimbledon this time.

Isner won 7-6 (4), 6-2, 7-6 (6) Tuesday.

“It wasn’t easy,” he said, “but obviously it was considerably quicker than the last time we played.”

Isner, of Tampa, Fla., also won their first-round marathon at the All England Club in 2010, when play twice was suspended by darkness and the match shattered all sorts of records, including for most time on court, most total games, longest set and most aces.

“Nothing’s going to live up to that match,” Isner said.

Last year, they played 183 games. This year, 34.

Last year, the fifth set alone lasted more than eight hours. This year, the total match time was 2:03.

Last year, Isner hit 113 aces, and Mahut 103. This year, each man finished with eight.

Last year, the match featured twists and turns and required all manner of physical and emotional stamina. Not so Tuesday.

Asked about the original, Isner said: “I don’t know if those are good memories. Long, long memories.”

Understandably, that match sapped Isner of all his energy and left him barely able to move. He lost his 2010 second-round match in straight sets.

“It’s a huge relief. I’m happy to put this one behind me,” Isner said Tuesday. “Obviously I’m a lot fresher for my next match.”

Isner-Mahut II was played on Court 3, instead of last year’s site, Court 18, which now has a plaque commemorating the occasion.

“I’m actually glad they put

us out here on this court. I don’t know if they want to tarnish the legacy of Court 18 by playing a second time,” said Isner, who is ranked 47th. “Chances are our match today wasn’t going to live up to last year’s match.”

Indeed, there were dozens of empty green seats in the stands at the start, despite all the buzz in the tennis world about the rematch. Almost from the moment Isner and Mahut randomly were paired off in Friday’s draw at the All England Club, everyone has been talking about the odd coincidence.

Said Isner: “Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, I heard a lot about this match (and) what we did last year. It was tough. I’m assuming I won’t get asked a lot of questions about last year’s match from now on.”

Perhaps.

Earlier Tuesday, 16-time Grand Slam champion Roger Federer was asked whether he was looking forward to the second version of Isner-Mahut.

“In some ways, it’s a crazy idea that they’re playing again. But it’s wonderful. I think it’s great for the fans who missed it last year to just at least go show respect to those guys who hung in there,” Federer said. “I’ll try to watch them. I hope it finishes today.”

Isner and Mahut were scheduled as the fourth match on Court 3, so they didn’t walk out until 6:15 p.m. After the coin toss, they paused to pose for photographers while standing at the net, and Isner tapped Mahut on the shoulder before heading to the baseline to begin warming up. After the match, they hugged.

They’ve become friends since last year’s shared ordeal, speaking to each other or exchanging text messages two or three times a week — although never discussing a certain match.

After last year’s loss, France’s Mahut said Tuesday, “At first, I was really disappointed. ... I’m still disappointed. But what we did last year, it’s much more than a tennis match. ... I’m very proud of it.”

Part of the reason their record-breaking match went as long as it did was because neither could manage to break the other’s serve, and Tuesday’s first set followed that pattern. But in the tiebreaker, Isner raced to a 6-1 lead and eventually took the set when Mahut sailed a backhand passing shot long.

The first break of serve came when Mahut pushed a forehand long to give Isner a 3-1 lead in the second set. And Isner broke again to end that set. During the rest period before the third, the 6-foot-9 Isner put a towel down on the sideline and got on his back, turning to both sides to stretch his back.

He was broken for the only time all day to fall behind 2-1 in the third set, and by then it was past 8 p.m.

There are no artificial lights anywhere other than Centre

Court at Wimbledon, and even on a clear evening, it’s rare for play to stretch much beyond 9 p.m.

That amounted to the closest thing to drama.

“I was down a break, and I was telling myself that if I lose the third set, chances are we’re not going to finish this match,” Isner said. “Everybody’s going to start talking about how it’s going into a second day, maybe into another third day.”

No such problems.

Isner broke back to 4-all, and again came through in a tiebreaker. He finished with 41 winners and only 10 unforced errors.

“He just played better than me, and that’s it,” Mahut said.

Isner was asked to compare how it felt to win his two very different matches against Mahut.

“I would say I was more relieved last year to finally get it over with, because what we did was remarkable, and you can’t ever think something like that could happen. But I also knew, to be honest, after last year’s match that I had no shot in the second round. That was kind of tough to swallow,” Isner said.

“This year, I’m happy to get through this one. The goal is the second week,” he added. “If you can get to that, anything’s possible.”

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Let us have wine and women, mirth and laughter, Sermons and soda water the day after."

— Lord Byron

Pony Nehmert was one of the few declarers to survive in four spades, played in last year's European Championships, from which all this week's deals come.

West led the heart king, and declarer won with the ace and played three rounds of diamonds, disposing of her losing heart. She next ran the spade eight to West's king and ruffed the return of the heart queen.

Nehmert now asked herself why West was forcing her to ruff. She decided that there was a strong indication that trumps were 4-1, so rather than play a spade, relying on 3-2 trumps and a winning guess in clubs, she cashed the top clubs, felling West's queen. She continued with the club 10, and when West discarded, declarer played a fourth club, ruffing with dummy's spade five. East could overruff, but there was only one more trump trick available for the defense. Whatever East led, declarer could arrange to finesse against the trump A-J.

Four spades failed at the other table, so Nehmert's play had earned Germany a big swing.

(Incidentally, West had missed a difficult chance at trick five — that of leading a diamond, offering up a ruff and discard, which would have allowed East to discard a club. Then, if declarer plays a trump off dummy, East can go up with the ace and play a heart, which secures trump control for the defenders if declarer ruffs. If South discards, West wins the heart queen and plays a club to leave East with two trump winners.)

ANSWER: You have too many values and too much shape to pass now. It looks best to try for game, rather than go all the way on your own. The choice is to reraise to three clubs (which typically shows six) or to use the fourth-suit call of two diamonds, which is more flexible but might get you to no-trump from the wrong side. Nevertheless, I prefer the latter course of action.

DEAR ABBY: I was a victim of domestic abuse by my wife, and I don't feel I have been treated fairly. There are many programs for abused women, but I haven't found any for men. This problem is more common than people realize, but men are embarrassed to say anything. I'd like my voice to be heard to encourage men to speak up.

I did not hit my wife back after she beat on me. I still love her, but I refuse to be abused any longer. Abby, please help me help myself and others.

— BILL IN ARKANSAS

DEAR BILL: Gladly. Among the problems with spousal abuse is that it escalates. Over the last decade domestic violence groups have become more aware of female-to-male domestic violence and violent behavior in same-sex relationships, and are better prepared to offer help than they used to be. That's why it's important you contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline. The toll-free number is (800) 799-7233. Counselors there offer guidance to women and men who are being abused by their spouse or partner.

Another organization, SAFE (Stop Abuse for Everyone), also assists victims of abuse regardless of age, gender or sexual orientation. Its website is www.safe4all.org.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is divorced with two children. She has been dating a man who has three children. Recently, they decided to move in together. All the children are first grade or younger.

What would be the proper way to handle birthdays?

If my daughter and her boyfriend were married, or even engaged, I wouldn't have a problem sending gifts to his children. But since my husband and I hardly know this man (we live in another state and have met him only once or twice), we're not sure how to handle this. Should we just continue to send birthday gifts to our daughter's kids and nothing but cards to his? Or would that look bad? What's the proper thing?

— FAIR-MINDED IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR FAIR-MINDED: Your daughter and grandchildren have formed a household with her boyfriend and his kids. If you're compassionate people, you will treat all of the children equally for as long as the relationship lasts. If they decide to marry, which is a possibility, you will wind up being grandparents to all of them. If they eventually separate, you will have done the right thing and lent some stability and happiness to those children's lives.

DEAR ABBY: For a lot of reasons — many betrayals among them — I have almost completely lost my faith in the basic goodness of people. I have started isolating myself because I believe that more contact with people will destroy what little belief I have left. I don't want to be so bitter and cynical, and I need help overcoming this. Any advice would be appreciated.

— WOUNDED SOUL IN MINNESOTA

DEAR WOUNDED: I'm sorry you have suffered disappointment. But isolating yourself from others isn't the solution. I don't know anyone who hasn't been disappointed in someone at some point, but it's not a reason to hide.

Today is Wednesday, June 22, the 173rd day of 2011. There are 192 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On June 22, 1911, Britain's King George V was crowned at Westminster Abbey.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1611, English explorer Henry Hudson, his son and several other people were set adrift in present-day Hudson Bay by mutineers aboard the Discovery; their fate remains unknown.

In 1870, the United States Department of Justice was created.

In 1940, during World War II, Adolf Hitler gained a stunning victory as France was forced to sign an armistice eight days after German forces overran Paris.

In 1941, Germany launched Operation Barbarossa as it invaded the Soviet Union.

In 1944, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, more popularly known as the "GI Bill of Rights."

In 1945, the World War II battle for Okinawa ended with an Allied victory.

In 1969, singer-actress Judy Garland died in London at age 47.

In 1977, John N. Mitchell became the first former U.S. Attorney General to go to prison as he began serving a sentence for his role in the Watergate cover-up. (He was released 19 months later.)

In 1981, Mark David Chapman pleaded guilty to killing rock star John Lennon. Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was deposed as president of Iran.

In 1993, former first lady Pat Nixon died in Park Ridge, N.J., at age 81.

Ten years ago: The British government announced that 18-year-old Jon Venables and Robert Thompson, who were 10 years old when they kidnapped and killed toddler James Bulger, had been granted parole. Striking Comair pilots ratified a new contract, ending a three-month strike.

Five years ago: During a visit to Hungary to commemorate the 1956 revolt against communism, President George W. Bush said war-weary Iraqis could learn from the Hungarians' long and bloody struggle against tyranny. The Bush administration confirmed it had gained access to international banking records as part of a classified program to choke off financial support for terrorism. The Red Cross admitted Israel as a member and allowed it to use a star of David as its symbol.

One year ago: White House Budget Director Peter Orszag announced he was stepping down. South Carolina Republicans chose Nikki Haley, an Indian-American and tea party favorite, to run for governor (she went on to win a runoff and the general election).

IF JUNE 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: In the year to come, you may be more interested in developing trust with others. People may look at you in a favorable light so it is important to stick with whatever you begin. Try to maintain harmony both in the world around you and in your personal consciousness as this year passes. Early September is the best time to make crucial decisions or to begin something of key importance. Your desire for a family or perfectly matched partner may grow in scope and intensity especially in October. Opportunities or relationships that come to your attention during that month could help you shift to an easier path that is less stressful and more rewarding although you may need to abandon one lifelong goal.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The longest day of the year was too long for some people. Aggravations that stymied you are disappearing, but life still has a few surprises up its sleeve. Success depends upon learning to wait.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Thank your lucky stars. Someone in close connection might share a stroke of good fortune with you. Learn everything you can about a new subject of interest. Wear out the search engine or library card.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hold off on your pursuit of personal ambitions. If you want your name known and go out of your way to advertise it, you might end up with notoriety rather than fame. Slow and steady wins the race.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spinning wheels merely spin and go nowhere unless they are firmly on the ground. You may have enthusiasm and are anxious to make a change, but could lack the experience and solid know-how.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When work is done, it is time for fun. Yesterday's summer solstice may offer an excuse to escape from a day of drudgery. Leave business and career pressures behind; concentrate on creative hobbies at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work or personal responsibilities could interfere with your ability to satisfy romantic yearnings. or otherwise put social life on hold. Potter around at home with some hobbies or pursue sidelines.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Remember that rebels often have no cause. Your inner poet may be pinning to find expression, but feels stifled by conventions. Bide your time and contemplate what-ever is beautiful and delightful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have an itch that is impossible to scratch. You may be restless to make changes in your routines or exposed to unusual ideas. The boss or other authority figures might do something unexpected.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Clouds often have a silver lining. You might brush shoulders with unusual people and be the recipient of surprise visits. Although you are spending money like water you will be delighted with results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep focused on existing goals and put your reliance in trusted partners. This is not a good time to ask for a raise or apply for a new job. A family dispute could disrupt the even tenor of your life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unexpected events might work out in your favor. Welcome sudden breaks in routine or an unexpected visitor. Something of great interest or value that appears right under your nose is worth a sniff.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your crystal ball might be away at the repair shop. Don't make important changes or business decisions if you can't predict the outcome. Concentrate on favorite pastimes and romantic pleasures at home.

Clean-up of Former Training Area 3
Kimama Training Site
Idaho Army National Guard

Lincoln County, ID - The Department of Defense (DoD) and the Idaho Army National Guard are in the process of completing a Remedial Investigation/Feasibility Study (RI/FS) for the former Training Area 3 at the Kimama Training Site (KTS) in accordance with the Military Munitions Response Program (MMRP). Historically, the DoD has conducted small arms training and maneuver exercises at the site. The former Training Area 3 has not been used by the Army since the early 1990s.

The Army will perform the following field activities as part of the RI/FS: 1) a non-intrusive visual survey to identify areas with evidence of past military-related training; 2) an intrusive investigation to determine the nature and extent if any, of subsurface anomalies within these areas; and 3) shallow soil sampling to determine the nature and extent of munitions constituents at the small arms ranges and areas with confirmed materials potentially presenting an explosive hazard. Information collected from these investigations will be used to characterize site conditions, assess the risks to human health and the environment, and evaluate remedial action alternatives. The information will be made available for public review at the Bureau of Land Management, Shoshone Field Office in accordance with the 32 CFR Part 179 requirements. For questions, contact Lieutenant Colonel Kyle Carpenter, Environmental Management Office at (208)272-4170, cell phone at (208) 921-9658, or e-mail kyle.e.carpenter@id.ngb.army.mil.
