Local working group touts projects, lacks members

By Kimberlee Kruesi
Times-News writer

ROGERSON — The Jarbidge Sage-Grouse Local Working Group is in the middle of inspecting its past projects. Unfortunately, very few will see them.

The group has completed 14 projects and is working on two more to help protect and enhance sage grouse habitat in its area, the desert southwest of Twin Falls. But on Thursday, the first of a two-day project inspection tour, only two representatives from the Idaho Department of Lands tagged along.

“It’s important to monitor the projects out here because we’ve spent a lot of money on them,” said Brad Lowe, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game’s Magic Valley landowner coordinator. “But the problem is that it takes people to get out here.”

Local working groups are advisory bodies that develop voluntary plans to benefit sage grouse under Fish and Game’s oversight. Federal officials declared the grouse a candidate for endangered-species protections last year, but found listing other species to be a higher priority.

The tour is the second year when group members will evaluate and rate their projects over two days. Most of the work involved building fences around ponds to protect wetland areas for young grouse.

“I wish we could get someone out here from the IDL to work solely in Jarbidge,” said Meribeth Lomkin, an IDL senior resource specialist. “But we can’t seem to get someone to work here.”

Limited membership in the working group has resulted in a smaller scope for future projects, Lowe said.

“Our group is small. A fire may come through like it did a few years ago and burn hundreds of thousands of acres of land, but we can only do so much,” Lowe said. “We’re only going to get so far with the numbers we have right now!”

A painful lesson shared

Intermountain Film and Video Productions prepares to shoot a scene for the movie 'It'll Only Take a Second' Wednesday evening in Jerome County. The movie, based on the crash that killed Twin Falls teen Trevor Hine in 2008, intends to educate Idaho teens of the dangers of distracted driving.

keeps coming back to her, mostly because of the age similarities between the two boys involved in the accident and her own son.

The overturned car on In-

State to continue delaying some Medicaid payments

Times-News

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare will continue to suspend Medicaid hospital payments until the end of next week.

IDHW suspended Medicaid payments to Idaho's 51 hospitals to meet its budget for the fiscal year, which ends June 30. Hospitals were selected because they do not solely rely on Medicaid payments for revenue.

“We are continuing to suspend the payments, but hopefully they will receive their payments by the end of next week,” said IDHW spokeswoman Emily Simmitt.

Last year, the state suspended Medicaid payments to all health care providers for nine weeks after facing a $90 million budget shortfall.

One average, IDHW pays $30 million in claims each week, said Simmitt. However, last week the amount of claims filed dropped and IDHW only had to pay $21 million in claims.

“We still have to wait and see how many claims are filed next week to know for sure what the department will do,” she said. “But we will continue to keep updating the hospitals as soon as we know.”

Hazelton celebrates its centennial today, Saturday

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

The town of Hazelton, which will celebrate its centennial with a slew of events today and Saturday, was founded in 1911 by J.B. Barlow and Fred T. Chittenden.

The eastern Jerome County town was named after Barlow's daughter, Hazel; distant descendents, like Chips Barlow of Twin Falls, still live and work in the Magic Valley.

Chips Barlow said he owns a letter from J.B. Barlow to the latter's brother, a Missouri native, regarding founding the city.

"It talks about Hazel going back to Missouri from Idaho and the 120 acres they received in the Carey Act," Barlow said.

Starting Friday, a town full of memories and stories like Barlow's will celebrate its lineage with various activities put on by the city, local organizations and community members. Most of the activities, including tonight's street dance and a full slate of Saturday activities, will be held at Hazelton City Park.

"Hazelton is a community that rallies together to put on a good time," said Lola Fitzgerald, organizer of Saturday's fish scramble.

The challenge isn't finding members from natural-resource agencies — multiple agencies have worked in the Jarbidge area. The main concern is the lack of representation from the public. And the Jarbidge working group is not the only one struggling to find and keep non-agency members.

"Sometimes it depends on the types of projects you want to start," said Rich Yankey, a member of the Shoshone Basin Local Working Group. Yankey has been a member since the group's inception in 1994.

"Most of the things we want to do involves quite a bit of knowledge of the machinery, the area and it requires a lot of time — something not all private citizens have."

But those citizens are the most essential members to have, and there needs to be a push to recruit them, said a member of another group.

"Citizen involvement is absolutely critical," said Doug Howard, a member of the North Magic Valley Local Working Group. "We helped build the management that took four years to build so we could even start the projects. Agencies bring the knowledge but citizens are the stakeholders in this."

WIC

In Idaho, about 44,000 residents receive WIC assistance.

Locally, WIC is offered through the South Central Public Health District, which covers eight south-central Idaho counties. While the program served as many as 7,300 monthly participants in the area recently, officials in April noted a decline to about 6,800 participants. That decline mystified some health officials, as Idaho unemployment remains high while the state continues its long march out of the recession.

A patched-up park, a new rank

Scout spruces up Twin Falls flag pole for Eagle project

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

Recent Twin Falls High School graduate Derrick Cox has been a Boy Scout since the third grade. Now, he will soon be promoted to the highest rank in the world of scouting.

Cox's current badge-earning project has hoisted him to new heights, as he renovates the flag pole in the Twin Falls City Park. A member of Troop 63, he will achieve the rank of Eagle Scout when his project is complete.

Cox has some helping hands from parents and other Scouts. By June 16, Cox had painted the flag pole and installed new cables and a new pulley. This week, he has broken up the old concrete and stonework around the pole, placing down new concrete.

"Pouring the new concrete took longer than breaking it up because we had to level it," Cox said.

For the concrete portion of the project, Cox had the help of five Scouts from his troop.

"We will put in more than 20 hours of work," Cox said.

All materials for the project were donated by local businesses and the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department. Many other scouts from Cox's troop helped paint of the pole.

The project that started June 13 must be completed by July 4. However, Cox hopes to compete the project by the end of this week.

"We've been planning for about three months," Cox said.

The flag pole that was originally donated by the Elks club in 1937 was due for a renovation. Cox will also redo the stonework around the base and reapply the plaque that named the pole the Elks Flag Pole.

"We've had some people come up to us and ask what we are doing," Cox said. "They always tell us we are doing a good job."

Filer URA begins its work

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The Filer Urban Renewal Agency has its first two board members.

Organizers hope the URA, formally established Tuesday, will help the city improve its economic health.

Last month, the City Council chose residents Chris Frey and John Hodulik to serve volunteer positions on the URA board. The flip of a coin appointed Hodulik, a cabinetmaker, as board chairman for the first year and accountant Chris Frey as vice chairman.

Hodulik and Frey were sworn in Tuesday. Jeremy Callen, the board's third member, was not present but will serve as treasurer once sworn in. Callen owns a heating and air conditioning business.

Urban renewal agencies help Idaho cities encourage businesses to establish themselves in the area and find suitable properties for them to use.

Hodulik, who moved to Filer from southern California, said he enjoys life in a town where people are friendly and wants to see it prosper.

"With the work done on the schools and new roads providing better access to north and south Twin (Falls), everything is here," he said.

Frey accepted a position on the URA board for the simple reason that he graduated from Filer High School and has made the community his home.

"The community has more potential than just an extension of Twin Falls," he said. "You've seen Buhl do a little bit and Kimberly update things. I think it's Filer's turn to grow and be more self-supporting."

As its first act, the board approved a set of bylaws and chose a regular meeting time: 7:30 p.m. every fourth Tuesday in the Filer City Council Chambers.

Representatives from Southern Idaho Rural Development plan to work closely with the board and help its new members understand their role within the city. Meetings will have an in-depth educational focus before projects are actually considered.

"This is a tool the city hasn't had," Mayor Bob Templeman said. "I'm excited to see what they'll be able to accomplish."

Preliminary work begins Monday on I-84 resurfacing project

Times-News

Bridge repairs and some highway patching associated with a $7.8 million Interstate 84 resurfacing project will get under way Monday.

Crews will begin work at the North Side and Milner-Gooding canal bridges east of the Ridgeway Road exit near Hazelton, and will also patch I-84 at various places between the Idaho Highway 50 junction near Hansen and the Burley interchange at Exit 208.

That work is expected to take about a week to complete, before a full-width asphalt overlay of I-84 begins after the Fourth of July weekend. That 26-mile overlay project, done in eight-mile stretches at a time, will reduce traffic to one lane in each direction through the construction zone. A 45-mph speed limit will be enforced, as will a 14-foot width restriction.

Boise-based Knife River Corp. Northwest is the contractor for the project.

Film

Gibbs went to the morgue later that morning to check Hine's body for bruises relating to the accident.

"No one was there with him. I didn't want to leave. I just wanted somebody to be with him," she said. "I just can't seem to put all of this away."

On Wednesday night, Gibbs, alongside the rest of the first-responders who arrived that morning to Lutz's accident, faced her memories of the crash to film a short feature film warning Idaho teens about the dangers of distracted driving.

The film was born out of the juvenile court sentence Jerome County 5th District Magistrate Judge Thomas Borresen gave Lutz after he pleaded guilty to vehicular manslaughter for Hine's death. It started as an idea for a school assembly, but morphed into a video to be shown in driver's education classes and high schools across the state.

The judge has been involved in the whole process, attributing his interest in this particular case to the boys' reputations.

"Both of the boys were poster children for being good kids. They were straight-A students, involved in sports and government," Borresen said. "I kept thinking, what can I do to get a message out to kids to get them to not text or be on their cellphones?"

Lutz, 18, said the assembly sounded like a tougher option. Facing his peers without the barrier of a camera would have felt like a trial, he said Thursday. The film has given him time to work through his grief and will be seen by more Idaho students than one auditorium can hold.

While Lutz didn't attend Wednesday's filming of the accident re-creation, Gibbs was there, her black patrol car parked a few yards away from a red vehicle that rested on its top on the side of a Jerome road. Water bottles and fast-food napkins spilled out of its broken window.

The crash was similar to the one Lutz and Hine was involved in, although Inter-

SAFER BEHIND THE WHEEL

While not all vehicle accidents caused by distracted driving can be identified, the number of times Idaho drivers have been cited for reckless or inattentive driving has decreased from 2007 to 2009, the most recent year statistics are available from the Idaho Transportation Department.

mountain Film and Video Productions producer Paul Jenkins said he changed certain details out of respect to the families involved. But the two students who played the vehicle's occupants came from Twin Falls High School, where Lutz and Hine attended, and were familiar with their accident. On Wednesday, their legs and faces were covered with fake blood and gashes.

The final production will show a few scenes Jenkins hopes everyone will relate to. There's a mother who reaches back to calm a fussy baby, a driver changing a CD, and a scene where a young boyfriend and girlfriend give each other a quick kiss before their car skids off the road.

The movie also includes interviews with Lutz, his and Hine's parents, and an ISP chaplain who delivers heart-breaking news of fatal crashes to families.

Lutz said the film has been a positive but drawn-out experience. He's already gone through months of counseling, he said, so the film hasn't brought many moments of closure.

"I just hope that it will prevent the same thing from happening to other people," Lutz said. "There are still plenty of nights it comes back and revisits me. It's something I'll have to live with for the rest of my life. I definitely hope it will have an impact on someone."

Gibbs said she's ready to be done with the project too, but hopes it will make a significant impact

"It's coming from a kid and this was his best friend," she said. "There is no greater punishment than to live with the fact that you killed your best friend. People need to realize that driving a vehicle is like driving a 2,000-pound bullet down the road. Anything you do could cost someone their life. You have to drive responsibly."

The Hunt Camp inmate who said no

If ever there was an all-American boy, it was Jim Akutsu.

Born and raised in Seattle, he excelled at baseball, wrestling, swimming and fencing. Akutsu studied civil engineering at the University of Washington. And in the weeks after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor that thrust the United States into World War II in 1941, he tried three times to enlist in the Washington National Guard and in the ROTC program at Washington.

Three times he was rejected, and by the following September Akutsu found himself staring out through the barbed wire of the Minidoka Relocation Center in Jerome County. Thousands of Japanese Americans, most of them U.S. citizens, were locked up for the duration of the war under orders from President Franklin Roosevelt.

At Hunt Camp, Akutsu made the mistake of complaining about the food and the primitive living conditions.

"I was placed on a stop list and also under surveillance as a possible agitator," Akutsu says in historian James Dickerson's new book, "Inside America's Concentration Camps."

Soon after, Akutsu received a letter from the War Relocation Authority giving him the option of enlisting in the Army or being deported to Japan — remarkable, since Akutsu was an American citizen.

Akutsu claimed that since the government stripped him of his rights as a U.S. citizen, then he must indeed be an enemy alien and therefore not eligible for the draft.

"Not long after that, he received an induction notice that instructed him to report to the camp hospital," Dickerson writes. "It was dated three weeks before he received the notice, so it was impossible for him to keep the appointment. It was all a setup calculated to frame him. As a result, he was prosecuted for draft evasion and for stealing government documents."

Akutsu was convicted of draft evasion and served two years at McNeil Island Corrections Center in Washington, along with other draft resisters from the Japanese American relocation center at Heart Mountain, Wyo.

Released after the war, Akutsu returned to Seattle where he worked for the city as an engineer. He died 13 years ago.

But his story had legs. In 1957 his friend John Okada published a novel, "No-No Boy," using Akutsu as the model for "Ichiro Yamada." The book was adapted into a play two years ago.

Akutsu's saga, as told by filmmaker Frank Abe in his documentary "Conscience and the Constitution," will be part of the sixth annual Civil Liberties Symposium at the College of Southern Idaho next week. The movie will be screened at 1 p.m. July 1 in the CSI Fine Arts Theater.

The two-day symposium, which begins Thursday, is open to the public. For registration information, call Russ Tremayne at 732-6885.

Salmon Dam celebrates 100 years of water delivery

By Kimberly Williams-Brckett
Times-News correspondent

ROGERSON — It's how a tough stretch of desert was made farmable.

On Wednesday, the Salmon River Canal Co. celebrated 100 years of water delivery from Salmon Falls Dam.

"If the dam wasn't here, you wouldn't be farming," said Louise Lanting with the canal company.

Building the dam was an extremely important event in the platting of the towns of Hollister, Rogerson and Berger. People came from 14 different nations for the construction.

On Wednesday, Idaho Lt. Gov. Brad Little came from Boise to join the celebration at Lud Drexler Park. A tour of the dam, the canal and the gate system was followed by the dedication.

Many of the canal company's first shareholders moved to the Salmon Tract from out East for the promised irrigated farmland. Investors were "motivated to make life better for themselves and their families," said Little.

Karen Quinton of Hollister presented a historical piece she wrote on Salmon Falls Creek. It was based on stories from her great-great-uncle Thomas Ike Gray's "Life in the Saddle on the South Idaho Desert."

Salmon Falls Dam is a concrete gravity arch dam 223.5 feet high, with a crest length of 450 feet. The reservoir has an area of about 3,400 acres and a length of approximately 15 miles.

The original proposal called for approximately 120,000 acres of land to be irrigated by water from Salmon Falls Creek. Water was to be delivered within a half-mile of every 160 acres.

However, the watershed provided much less water than expected and only 25,000 acres ended up being irrigated.

Because Salmon Falls Dam has not released any water since the floods of 1984, the lower creek depends almost entirely on irrigation runoff drainage to sustain its flow.

The reservoir maxes out at 182,650 acre-feet of water, and held 148,000 acre-feet this week, Quinton said.

Lanting said this year shareholders will receive a full allotment of water.

"My Granny Leonard had a cook shack out here 103 years ago," said Rogerson resident Anita Robinson. Robinson never dreamed she would follow her footsteps by serving lunch for the centennial.

The celebration also included the release of one hundred rubber ducks into the canals. Those who find them are encouraged to contact the canal company to mark the location.

The dam, 38 miles southwest of Twin Falls, has also become a recreation site. Fishermen, boaters and hunters can take advantage of developed sites along the shoreline. The park offers pay camp sites with sanitary stations, water and an RV dump station. Anglers will find an abundance of brown trout, chinook and kokanee salmon, yellow perch, black crappie, channel catfish, small mouth bass, and walleye. There is ice fishing in January and February.

As the dam and canal company's next century begins, change will continue to come. One example: the one-lane roadway over the dam may not be ideal for traffic related to building the proposed China Mountain Wind Project. A new bridge was proposed to the north of the existing reservoir crossing five years ago as an alternative. The canal company encourages sending comments to state legislators and county commissioners by July 6.

After 16 years on lam, Boston mob boss found hiding in plain sight

Capture ends one of biggest manhunts in nation's history

By Christina Hoag and Thomas Watkins
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — As the FBI chased leads on two continents, Boston mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger spent nearly all of his 16 years on the lam in this quiet seaside city, passing himself off as just another elderly retiree, albeit one who kept a .357 Magnum and more than 100 rounds of ammunition in his modest apartment.

Bulger

Bulger — the FBI's most-wanted man and a feared underworld figure linked to 19 murders — was captured Wednesday after one of the biggest manhunts in U.S. history. His undoing may have been his impeccably groomed girlfriend.

During a search of Bulger's apartment, agents found $800,000 in cash, more than 30 firearms, including pistols, rifles and shotguns, several types of knives and several pieces of false identification, Steven Martinez, FBI assistant director in charge in Los Angeles, said at a news conference Thursday afternoon.

The weapons were tucked in hiding places throughout the apartment, Martinez said.

Earlier this week, after years of frustration, the FBI put out a series of daytime TV announcements with photos of Bulger's blond live-in companion, Catherine Greig. The announcements pointed out that Greig was known to frequent beauty salons and have her teeth cleaned once a month.

Two days later, the campaign produced a tip that led agents to the two-bedroom apartment three blocks from the Pacific Ocean where Bulger and Greig lived, authorities said. The FBI would not give any details about the tip.

The 81-year-old boss of South Boston's vicious Winter Hill Gang — a man who authorities say would not hesitate to shoot someone between the eyes — was lured outside the building and captured without resistance. Greig, 60, was also arrested.

Neighbors were stunned to learn they had been living in the same building as the man who was the model for Jack Nicholson's ruthless crime boss in the 2006 Martin Scorsese movie "The Departed."

Deputy Police Chief David Doan said it wasn't surprising that Bulger just blended in with the community.

"This guy was an historic figure on the East Coast but no one on the West Coast knew who Whitey Bulger was," Doan said at the Thursday news conference.

"If you behave and you don't draw attention to yourself and you're in a community where you're not well-known, he's just another old man walking down the street," Doan said.

The arrest closed one chapter in a case that scandalized the FBI.

Bulger fled in 1995 after a retired FBI agent who had recruited him as a government informant tipped him off that he was about to be indicted.

Soon it was discovered that the Boston FBI had a corrupt relationship with its underworld informants, protecting mob figures for decades and allowing them to commit murders as long as they were supplying useful information.

"Although there are those who have doubted our resolve at times over the years, it has never wavered," Richard DesLauriers, agent in the charge of the FBI's Boston office, said after Bulger's capture. "We followed every lead. We explored every possibility, and when those leads ran out, we did not sit back and wait for the phone to ring."

While Bulger's capture is the end of a long, frustrating search for the FBI, it could expose the bureau to even more scandal.

One of Bulger's lieutenants testified in 2002 that Bulger boasted that he had corrupted six FBI agents and more than 20 Boston police officers, keeping them loyal by stuffing envelopes with cash at Christmastime.

"If he starts to talk, there will be some unwelcome accountability on the part of a lot of people inside law enforcement," said retired Massachusetts state police Maj. Tom Duffy. "Let me put it this way: I wouldn't want my pension contingent on what he will say at this point."

N. Idahoan awaits new trial in road-rage case

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A northern Idaho man who was freed from prison for six days after his second-degree murder conviction was overturned is back in custody awaiting a new trial.

Jonathan Wade Ellington, of Hayden, reported Wednesday to the Kootenai County Jail and is being held on a $1 million bond. Ellington, 50, was released from state prison on Friday after his conviction was vacated, his attorney said.

First District Judge John Mitchell then signed an order saying Ellington should report to jail and he turned himself in, the Spokesman-Review reports.

Ellington was sentenced to 25 years for second-degree murder and 15 years each on two counts of aggravated battery charges for running over a woman during what was described as a road-rage encounter on New Year's Day in 2006.

He was 45 when Vonette Lee Larsen, 41, was struck and killed in Athol.

Ellington was accused of driving the vehicle that hit her and a car carrying her two daughters. Larsen died of massive head trauma. During the chaotic incident, Larsen's husband fired a .44-caliber handgun at Ellington's car.

The Idaho Supreme Court unanimously ruled last month that Ellington should get a new trial, citing prosecutorial misconduct and the likelihood that an Idaho State Police officer committed perjury.

In the 32-page ruling, the justices wrote the Kootenai County prosecutor engaged in misconduct during the trial, in part by engaging in improper questioning meant to turn the jury against Ellington.

They also concluded that a veteran Idaho State Police officer, Cpl. Fred Rice, who served as a witness for the prosecution, gave testimony that conflicted with statements on an accident reconstruction he'd made in previous court cases and contradicted training materials Rice had personally prepared.

The case is headed back to Idaho's 1st District Court and a status hearing has been scheduled for Monday.

Ellington's attorney, Anne Taylor, said she will seek to reduce the amount of his bond, though Kootenai County Prosecutor Barry McHugh is expected to object and said he will request that the bond amount remain at $1 million.

Sun Valley officials mull ATV ban on city streets

KETCHUM — Leaders in Sun Valley are considering banning all-terrain vehicles from its streets.

The ordinance under consideration by the city council would also prohibit utility vehicles, off-highway vehicles and specific motorbikes.

Officials say such vehicles pose a hazard to other motorists and pedestrians and create noise.

Idaho law does not allow ATV's or other restricted license plate vehicles on state highways. But they are permissible on county roads, city streets with a speed limit of 35 mph and roads managed by the U.S. Forest Service.

Three killed in rollover crash west of American Falls

POCATELLO — The Idaho State Police says an eight-passenger minivan carrying 11 magazine salespeople went off Interstate 86 in southeastern Idaho and rolled several times, killing three people.

The ISP says the crash happened just before 8 p.m. Wednesday in the eastbound lanes six miles west of American Falls.

The crash killed the driver, 22-year-old Todd Shugart of Heath Springs, S.C., along with 20-year-old Kevin Lewis of Idaho and 22-year-old Christopher Middleton of Florida.

Officials say 24-year-old Charles Alderman of Illinois, 20-year-old Zakery Spencer of South Carolina were airlifted to a Pocatello hospital and 19-year-old Steven Agee of Idaho was flown to a Salt Lake City hospital.

Body found in Salmon River identified as Salmon woman

SALMON — Lemhi County officials say a body found in the Salmon River in central Idaho earlier this week has been identified as a 21-year-old Salmon woman who has been missing since late May.

Sheriff Lynn Bowerman said Thursday an autopsy confirmed the body found in the river near Elk City was that of Lela Knox, who was believed to have drowned when she was swept away while trying to rescue a dog on May 25.

Bowerman says hikers spotted the body Monday. The autopsy was done in Ada County and officials used dental records to confirm it was Knox.

Micron Technology shares slide on weak quarterly results

BOISE — Micron Technology Inc. is reporting fiscal third-quarter results that missed analyst forecasts as sales of computer chips fell.

The Boise-based maker of flash memory chips reported Thursday revenue fell nearly 7 percent to $2.14 billion. For the quarter ending June 2, Micron earned $75 million, or 7 cents per share, compared with $939 million, or 92 cents per share, in the same period a year ago.

Luna opts out, but what if local schools did same?

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna is no fan of No Child Left Behind, the decade-old federal law designed to hold schools accountable. Neither, in fact, are most Idaho educators.

But Luna took a remarkable step Tuesday when he wrote to U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan saying, in essence, Idaho won't be playing anymore.

The Gem State won't raise the benchmarks schools have to meet under federal law — or sanction schools that don't meet these higher testing goals — until No Child Left Behind is fixed to better gauge student achievement, Luna said.

The long-awaited overhaul of No Child Left Behind began last month in the Congress with the first in a series of targeted bills. But a comprehensive reform of the nation's most important education law is a ways down the road.

Idaho can't wait, Luna said.

"The law has become a stumbling block to continued improvement in raising student achievement," he said.

We wonder what would happen in local school boards decided they don't want to participate in the education reforms that Luna pushed through the Legislature earlier this year.

What if local school districts decided not to divert money previously earmarked for teachers in order to buy technology? Or hand out merit pay under the system Luna devised? Or buy laptops for teachers and students?

They'd receive a stern warning from the attorney general — and they wouldn't get state funds to run their districts.

But the rules are different at the top.

"We don't have the luxury of time and resources to continue on with the federal law that should have been rewritten four years ago," Luna wrote to Duncan.

More than two-thirds of Idaho's schools made gains under No Child Left Behind last year. Schools are required to meet 41 benchmarks for student achievement under the law and a school's annual yearly progress, or AYP, is calculated based on test participation, academic achievement, graduation rates and other statistics.

But every few years, the percentage of students who must pass state tests increases. Fewer students in Idaho made adequate progress last year, when benchmarks under the law were increased dramatically.

This year, a school would need 90.4 percent of its students to reach grade-level proficiency in reading to make adequate progress under the law, up from 85.6 percent last year. In math, a school would need 88.7 percent of its students to reach grade-level proficiency to achieve adequate progress, up from 83 percent.

The state will release all of the testing data on how schools performed, Luna said.

"But we're not going to classify them as needs improvement if they don't hit that higher goal and then put sanctions on them," he said.

The trouble, of course, is that No Child Left Behind lacks teeth. No Idaho school has been closed down because of poor performance; failing districts just limp along from year to year.

In his letter to Duncan, Luna explained that the new Idaho education reform laws focus on the academic growth of students, not on whether they can pass a test.

But how, we wonder, do you measure that growth if they can't pass a test?

Don't just save Social Security, raise it

As a labor lawyer, I cringe when Democrats talk of "saving" Social Security. We should not "save" it but raise it.

Thomas Geoghegan

Right now Social Security pays out 39 percent of the average worker's preretirement earnings. While jaws may drop inside the Beltway, we could raise that to 50 percent. We'd still be near the bottom of the league of the world's richest countries — but at least it would be a basement with some food and air. We have elderly people living on less than $10,000 a year. Is that what Democrats want to "save"?

"But we can't afford it!" Oh, come on: We have a federal tax rate equal to nearly 15 percent of our GDP — far below the take in most wealthy countries. Let's wake up: the biggest crisis we face is that most of us have nothing meaningful saved for retirement. I know. I started my career wanting to be a pension lawyer. In the 1970s, lawyers like me expected there to be big pots of private pensions for hourly workers. By the 1980s, as factories closed, I was filing hopeless lawsuits to claw back bits and pieces of benefits. Now there are even fewer bits and pieces to get.

A recent Harris poll found that 34 percent of Americans have nothing saved for retirement — not even a hundred bucks. In this lost decade, that percentage is sure to go up. At retirement the lucky few with a 401(k) typically have $98,000. As an annuity that's about $600 a month — not exactly an upper-middle-class lifestyle. It's too late for Congress to come up with some new savings plan — a new IRA that grows hair, or something. There's no time. We have to improve the one public pension program in place. Should we meanstest it? No. I don't care if they go out and buy bottles of Jim Beam: let our elderly have an occasional night out at a restaurant.

The most paralyzing half-truth in this country is that people hate taxes. People are willing to pay taxes that they spend on themselves. Two-thirds of those surveyed in a CBS/New York Times poll in January were willing to pay more taxes to save Social Security at its modest level. To "save" it, most of us don't need to pay. We could lift the cap on high earners, the 6 percent of workers who make over $106,800 a year. If earnings above the cap were subject to the payroll tax with no increase in benefits to high earners, there would be no deficit in the Social Security trust fund in 2037, as projected.

If people are willing to pay more just to "save" Social Security, they should be glad to pay more to raise it.

What does it take to get Social Security up to half the average worker's earnings? According to the National Academy of Social Insurance, to close the deficit and raise benefits to nearly half of average worker earnings, we would need to find an additional 5 percent of taxable payroll, or find the money elsewhere. If we lift the cap on the payroll tax without paying more benefits to those above it, that gets us 2.32 percent (or a bit less if we slightly increase benefits to the rich). Deducting revenues from the estate tax at its 2009 levels to Social Security gets another half percent. A few other tweaks, like covering new public employees, add another 0.42 percent. The remainder can be found by raising the payroll tax by roughly 1 percentage point for both employees and employers.

I can hear the argument: It will discourage jobs, blah, blah. While I sympathize with the health costs employers pay (I am an employer, at our tiny law firm), they have had a windfall on pensions. In 1975, when I left law school, around two-fifths of American workers were in defined-benefit plans. Now it's just a fifth, and dropping. For employers, that's not the real bonanza.

Retirees today are shortchanged on Social Security because they have been shortchanged on wages for their entire working lives. The labor economist Richard B. Freeman points out that the hourly earnings of workers dropped by 8 percent from 1973 to 2005 while productivity shot up 55 percent or more. The United States is one of the few developed countries where workers are routinely cheated of a share in higher productivity.

And where has the money from the extra productivity gone? It's gone right to the top, to the top few percent. If wages had been paid fairly based on productivity, there would have been enough money subject to the payroll tax to avoid even a modest shortfall.

As I write, the Democrats are proposing to cut payroll taxes — supposedly to create jobs. But the last cut in the payroll tax, a few months back, led to little or no hiring. And did I mention the Paul Ryan plan? Just wait until the Democrats accept some "reasonable" version of this Republican document.

A bigger pension — a raise in Social Security benefits — is the stimulus this demoralized country needs. Come on, Democrats: think of FDR, Robert Wagner, or heck, even Lyndon B. Johnson. Let's ask ourselves: Who are we for?

Thomas Geoghegan, the author of "Which Side Are You On?: Trying to Befor Labor When It's Flat on Its Back," wrote this commentary for the New York Times.

Money for fireworks could be spent better

I cheered aloud when I read the editorial of June 17. I wish I had said that.

Fireworks do not patriotism make. We just had a Western Days celebration. There will be activities in surrounding towns for July 4. On any given Friday evening, there are at least a half dozen or more activities to meet, gather and enjoy the company of others.

I am not a wet blanket, but my point is that the money spent there could be used much more profitably. Youth groups of many categories in the valley could use more support. Free lunches are being offered by school districts. How about some reading help or craft skills taught? The YMCA is planning a Strong Kids campaign to give swimming skills and self-esteem to young people.

More teenagers may be homeless than you think

Teenage homelessness is a concern of mine as there is no current transitional housing available for young adult coming out of foster care or high school who find themselves homeless.

With this in mind, I conducted a survey of the number of teenagers who are homeless or are in danger of becoming homeless in the Twin Falls area; 537 high school-age students were surveyed. The survey indicated that 22 students are homeless and 103 feared homelessness in the near future. The number of homeless may be higher as people don't realize that staying elsewhere because you have no home is considered homelessness. I thought it important to outline resources for others who may not know of services available to them and stress that it is OK to ask for help.

Amy Rothweiler is the local liaison for homeless education. She can be contacted at 737-5208, ext. 3763. The school district can provide assistance with housing, clothing and full access to education. Amy went on to recommend several other resources, such as the navigators at the Department of Health and Welfare (734-4000). South Central Community Action (733-9351) can assist a family with rent, utilities, food, clothing and transportation issues. Valley House (734-7736) can assist in housing opportunities. The Department of Labor provides assistance for adolescents 16 and up in finding career alternatives (for more information, contact Aleah Latin, 735-2500). The Boys and Girls club provides Elev8 during the school year. This mentoring program is free and provides life skills for ages 14 to 21 (for more information, contact Melissa Rowe, 404-4747, or Tahna Cooper, 731-2624).

Anyone can make donations to any of these organizations. Even a small donation of clothes can make the difference for adolescents struggling to stay in school. These donations can also be made at the Boys and Girls Club. Please call first to determine agency needs.

Suspect pleads not guilty in NY pharmacy shooting

CENTRAL ISLIP, N.Y. (AP) — Two years ago, they posed for a wedding photo: Him beaming broadly in a dark suit, she a pudgy fresh-faced bride. They soon started a promising life together in the suburban New York home where he was raised.

Police mug shots of David Laffer and Melinda Brady released Thursday portrayed an altogether different couple: Gaunt, stone-faced suspects charged with a drug-store robbery and the killings of two pharmacy employees and two customers on Father's Day.

Laffer

Laffer, 33, had two black eyes and bruises all over his face during his arraignment on first-degree murder charges, where a court-appointed attorney entered a not guilty plea on his behalf.

A police complaint says Laffer sustained the injuries when he grabbed for a police officer's weapon during a raid at his Medford home on Wednesday. He was tackled to the ground and placed in handcuffs, the complaint said.

Brady, 29, now many pounds lighter than her wedding photo, was being treated at a hospital for an undisclosed ailment, forcing authorities to temporarily postpone her arraignment. She is charged with robbery and obstructing governmental administration, although a prosecutor said Thursday that upgraded charges were likely.

Both were high on drugs when they were arrested, police said.

Assistant District Attorney John Collins described the shootings Sunday at Haven Drugs in Medford as "the most cold-blooded robbery-homicide in Suffolk County history." He said the methodical killings were captured on surveillance video.

Laffer, his wife waiting outside in the car, went into the pharmacy and commenced the carnage, Collins said.

Republicans bail on budget talks, blame Democrats

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans pulled out of debt-reduction talks led by Vice President Joe Biden with a flourish on Thursday, blaming Democrats for demanding tax increases as part of a deal rather than accepting more than $1 trillion in cuts to Medicare and other government programs.

"Let me be clear: Tax hikes are off the table," said House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio. Boehner spoke shortly after the House GOP second-in-command, Majority Leader Eric Cantor, announced he would not attend a planned negotiating session and said it is "time for President Obama to speak clearly and resolve the tax issue."

White House spokesman Jay Carney quickly obliged, while announcing that the talks were "in abeyance." He said Obama supports a "balanced approach" to debt reduction.

"I would point that the president supports a balanced approach," Carney said. "He does not support an approach that provides for a $200,000 tax cut for millionaires and billionaires paid for by a $6,000 a year hike in expenses and costs for seniors."

Numerous officials have said in recent days that Obama and Boehner would soon take a more public role in the negotiations, as time grows short for confronting politically vexing questions over taxes and Medicare and other benefit programs.

As a result, it appeared that the day's events marked an eruption of political maneuvering rather than a blow-up that would jeopardize the success of negotiations.

"The goal of these talks was to report our findings back to our respective leaders," Biden said in a statement. "The next phase is in the hands of those leaders, who need to determine the scope of an agreement that can tackle the problem and attract bipartisan support. For now the talks are in abeyance as we await that guidance."

In general, the negotiations are aimed at producing legislation to cut future deficits while simultaneously lifting the $14.3 trillion limit on Treasury borrowing.

Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner has said that without an increase in the debt limit by Aug. 2, the United States faces a first-ever default, with potentially catastrophic consequences for the economy.

Carney told reporters that Boehner had met unannounced with Obama at the White House Wednesday evening. The meeting was at the president's initiative, and the first known encounter between the two men since their widely publicized round of golf last weekend.

Despite activists' pressure, Obama sidesteps gay-marriage debate

By Perry Bacon Jr.
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — As a few in the crowd shouted "marriage" and "Do you support it?" at him, President Barack Obama on Thursday evening avoided taking a position on a measure being considered by the New York state legislature that would legalize gay marriage. Instead he said, "I believe that gay couples deserve the same legal rights as every other couple in this country."

For months, Obama has insisted his position on gay marriage is "evolving" but has not shifted from his previously stated view that marriage is between a man and woman. But in a coincidence of timing, the president arrived at a downtown Manhattan hotel for a long-scheduled fundraiser put on by gay and lesbian activists as the legislature in Albany was on the verge of voting whether New York will become the sixth state to allow gay marriage.

"We're going to keep on fighting until the law no longer treats committed partners who've been together for decades like they're strangers," Obama told a crowd of more than 600, many of whom had come from other states to attend his first fundraiser specifically for gays in the 2012 election cycle.

He acknowledged the New York legislation, saying "right now I understand there's a little debate going in New York." But as some urged him to support the legislation, Obama would not. "New York is doing exactly what democracies are supposed to do. There is a debate; there is deliberation," he said, refusing to declare a view on the bill or encourage other states to take similar action.

It was not clear how many people in the room were shouting at Obama on gay marriage. But they were loud, at one point yelling "marriage" enough times that the president stopped speaking and said, "I hear you guys."

"Believe it or not, I anticipated" this, Obama said to laughter from many in the crowd.

While not saying explicitly that he supported gay marriage, Obama likened the heckling he received Thursday to earlier in his term, before he signed the repeal of the "don't ask, don't tell" policy that forbade people who are openly gay from serving in the military.

Report: Bin Laden courier's phone provides leads

WASHINGTON (AP) — A cellphone of Osama bin Laden's trusted courier recovered in the U.S. raid last month that killed both men in Pakistan contained contacts to a militant group that is a longtime asset of Pakistan's intelligence agency, The New York Times reported late Thursday.

In a story posted on the Times website, senior American officials and others briefed on the findings said the discovery indicates bin Laden used the group, Harakat-ul-Mujahadeen, as part of his support network inside Pakistan.

It raises questions about whether the group and others helped shelter and support the al-Qaida leader on behalf of Pakistan's spy agency.

The officials and analysts told the Times that Pakistan's intelligence agency had mentored Harakat and allowed it to operate in Pakistan for at least 20 years.

In tracing the calls on the cellphone, U.S. analysts have determined that Harakat commanders had called Pakistani intelligence officials, the senior American officials said. One said they had met. The officials added that the contacts were not necessarily about bin Laden and that there was no "smoking gun" showing that Pakistan's spy agency had protected bin Laden.

Beyond providing leads about why bin Laden was able to live comfortably for years in Abbottabad, a town dominated by the Pakistani military just 35 miles from the capital city of Islamabad, the discovery also may help shed light on bin Laden's secret odyssey after he slipped away from U.S. forces in the Tora Bora region of Afghanistan nearly 10 years ago.

Harakat has especially deep roots in the area around Abbottabad, analysts familiar with the group told the Times. Its leaders have strong ties with both al-Qaida and Pakistani intelligence, known as Inter-Services Intelligence.

The senior American officials did not identify the commanders whose numbers were in the courier's cellphone but said the militants were in South Waziristan, where al-Qaida and other groups had been based for years. Harakat's network would have allowed bin Laden to pass on messages and money to Qaida members there and in other parts of Pakistan's tribal areas, analysts and officials said.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Give mini-donut vendor benefit of the doubt

I was surprised and shocked to read a recent letter titled "Unfair treatment stuns festival-goer." This letter stated that the author had watched a gentleman purchase mini-donuts at Western Days who was evidently overcharged and then as they purchased their mini-donuts that they were charged the correct amount. The inference in the letter was that it was done because the gentleman was Hispanic. The person then persisted in telling others, "do not do business there; they cheat people! Shame on you!"

I would like to state some personal experiences I have had with the owners of the donut stand. They lived in Twin Falls for several years, raising their family and teaching them what a wonderful place the Magic Valley is. They also taught them to be honest, hard working, loving and kind. They have taught them to respect all who they interact with. They have been vendors for Western Days, the Twin Falls County Fair and even Cinco de Mayo for many years. Their business is named after and dedicated to their daughter who is deaf and married to a deaf husband and functions very well in a mainstream world. This family business respects and honors those who patronize them each year.

I am not saying that an error did not occur in charging the gentleman the correct amount. I assume it did happen as originally written; however, if there is anyone who feels terrible about what evidently happened, it is this family. They realize they are not perfect, are saddened to learn what happened and are sorry about the situation. Knowing them well, I am confident that this was not done maliciously, not done purposely and not done discriminatorily.

I hope all in the Magic Valley will understand that none of us are perfect and we all make mistakes. What evidently happened was an honest mistake. I hope all will look at this situation with an open mind and heart and realize that regardless of any honest mistakes, we will not classify people with shame when it is undeserved.

Our family will continue to support the donut stand and urge you to do the same.

Public money spent to convict the innocent

There is one big question I would love to see everyone call and ask the county prosecutor's office and the sheriff's office here in Twin Falls.

"How much taxpayer money was wasted viciously trying to convict a clearly innocent man?" I am very confident that the amount, if made public, would leave most speechless and angry.

Simple, honest and professional police work, along with some common sense of those involved, would have saved the county thousands. Instead, prosecutors and investigators withheld evidence and twisted facts. The truth was not cared about. So now what? Will anyone be held responsible?

These people wasted lots of money that could have been used to help local schools or children and families in need.

Well, as some may know, I was noted as helping in the identification and apprehension of an alleged bank robber. Two banks put up a combined $20,000 reward for the information if it leads to a conviction. So I would like to do my part and actually give back to the community. If a conviction is achieved, I would like to commit $3,000 to local charities. All I need is help on what ones. Please don't hesitate to write with ideas.

And to end, I want to thank everyone who stuck by me no matter what. And for anyone in our community that doubted me, remember to never judge anyone too quick. And last but not least, thank you to all 12 jurors whose decision saved my life. God bless.

U.S. military leaders cite risks in Obama's Afghanistan drawdown

By Jonathan S. Landay
and Nancy A. Youssef
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama rejected the U.S. military's recommended timeline for pulling 33,000 U.S. troops out of Afghanistan, opting for a faster, more "aggressive" drawdown of "greater risk," the top U.S. military officer and the senior U.S. commander in Afghanistan said Thursday.

While both Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Army Gen. David Petraeus, head of U.S.-led forces in Afghanistan, said they supported Obama's plan, their unusually blunt public comments revealed the fierce debate within the administration and among lawmakers of both parties over Obama's decision to withdraw the 33,000 troops by the end of next summer.

Some Republicans warned that Obama's plan would endanger hard-won gains against the Taliban-led insurgency, while some joined Democrats in complaining that the pace of the drawdown, which begins with a 10,000-troop reduction this year, is too slow.

Obama denied during a visit to troops at Fort Drum, N.Y., that he was reducing forces "precipitously."

Speaking to soldiers and officers of the 10th Mountain Division, one of the most heavily deployed Army contingents in the nearly decade-long conflict, Obama said the drawdown would be made "in a steady way to make sure that all of the gains that all of you helped to bring about are going to be sustained."

The 33,000 troops were sent last year under a "surge" that Obama announced in a December 2009 war strategy speech in which he pledged to start withdrawing U.S. forces from the country's longest war next month. Their departure would still leave some 68,000 U.S. soldiers, most of whom would be gone by the end of 2014.

Mullen told the House Armed Services Committee that the pace and scale of the drawdown that Obama announced on Wednesday in a nationally televised address are "more aggressive and incur more risk than I was originally prepared to accept."

Hours later, Petraeus echoed Mullen as he testified before the Senate Intelligence Committee during his confirmation hearing as the new CIA director.

Obama decided "on a more aggressive formulation in terms of the timeline than what we had recommended," Petraeus replied to a question from Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., the panel's chairman.

A U.S. defense official said that Obama's decision was a "compromise" brokered by retiring Defense Secretary Robert Gates between the military's recommendation and a proposal pushed by unnamed White House aides for all 33,000 troops to be out by next spring.

State finance director: Idaho banks showing positive trends

Times-News

With Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke stumped by slow economic growth and unemployment hovering above 9 percent in much of the nation, it'd be premature to start singing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

But Idaho Department of Finance Director Gavin Gee said in a Wednesday release that Idaho's banks are mirroring reports of some improving national banking trends. Over the past 15 months, Gee said, more than $1.4 billion in investments were made in banks with Idaho offices, including $260.4 million in new capital announced this year.

"The commitment made by these investors demonstrates a strong vote of confidence in

INCREASED CAPITAL

Capital raised by state-chartered banks operating in Idaho in 2011:
$10.7 million: Placed into escrow for Syringa Bancorp common stock and classified asset purchase. Announced April 25.
$70 million: Securities purchase agreements by Intermountain Community Bancorp, the holding company of Panhandle State Bank. Announced April 6.
$2.7 million: Idaho First Bank investment in its common stock; 81 percent purchased by senior officers and board members. Announced Feb. 7.
$177 million: Cascade Bancorp agreements for purchase of its common stock by various private equity funds. Announced Jan. 28.

these banks, their boards of directors, and management teams," Gee said. "It also reflects the confidence these investors have in the future of our local communities and the critical role community banks will serve in assisting with the economic recovery."

Gee said first-quarter 2011

financial reports also show Idaho-based banks and thrifts outperforming national averages for core capital and interest margins, among other measures.

"Idaho banks are slowly emerging from economic and financial doldrums that have challenged financial institutions across the nation for the past three years," Gee said. "Even with high unemployment, numerous foreclosures and a continued decline in real estate values, Idaho's banks have been remarkably resilient and are now starting to reflect positive financial trends."

Nationally, Bernanke told reporters in Washington, D.C., Wednesday that the Fed cut its economic growth projections for this year to between 2.7 percent and 2.9 percent, down from an April forecast of up to 3.3 percent growth. Bernanke said the problems with the housing market and the banking system may be "more persistent than we thought."

Farm returns prop up Idaho personal income

Times-News

Idaho's continuing decline in wages and weak nonfarm business profits were more than offset by higher farm returns that boosted Idaho personal income by 1.8 percent in the first three months of 2011.

In a Wednesday release, the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis estimated Idaho's total personal income — total wages, business profits, investment earnings, Social Security and unemployment benefits — at a record $52.3 billion during the first quarter. That represents a $928 million increase compared to the final quarter of 2010 — the largest annualized quarterly increase since the recession began in December 2007.

However, most Idahoans working outside of agriculture saw their wages and salaries stagnate or decline. The BEA reported that nonfarm payments in Idaho fell a tenth of a percent compared to the previous quarter.

The Gem State ranked 26th among U.S. states in quarterly percentage gain in personal income, behind all its bordering neighbors. North Dakota ranked first in quarterly personal income growth at 6.9 percent, while Iowa's 0.7 percent growth took the bottom spot among U.S. states.

Inflation during the first quarter was measured at 0.9 percent.

Easing the strain

U.S. and other countries plan biggest release of reserve oil

By Jonathan Fahey and Chris Kahn
Associated Press writers

NEW YORK — The United States and other nations that depend on oil imports said Thursday they will release and sell 60 million barrels of crude from emergency stocks in an effort to ease the strain high oil prices are putting on the global economy.

The release by the International Energy Agency, a group of more than two dozen countries, covers only what the world uses roughly every 16 hours. But it was enough to send oil prices lower, at least for the moment.

In addition to helping the struggling economies of the U.S. and Europe, analysts said the move was meant as a rebuke to OPEC, which has refused to increase oil production to bring down prices.

It will be the largest sale of crude ever from world strategic reserves and only the third since the IEA was formed in 1974 after the Arab oil embargo. The IEA released oil in 2005 after Hurricane Katrina and in 1990 and 1991 after Iraq invaded Kuwait.

Half the oil will come from reserves in the U.S. Refiners who turn crude into gasoline will be able to bid on the extra oil and have it shipped to them from the salt caverns along the Gulf Coast where it is stored.

The IEA said high oil demand and shortfalls of oil production caused by unrest in the Middle East and North Africa threatened to "undermine the fragile global economic recovery."

The uprising in Libya has taken 1.5 million barrels of oil per day off of the market — half a million barrels less than will be released each day by the IEA. The price of oil rose to nearly $114 per barrel in at the end of April, a level not seen since the summer of 2008.

Shell gas worker Toke Fusi lowers gas prices on Tuesday at a Shell gas station in Menlo Park, Calif. Wary of a new surge in gas prices, the Obama administration has decided to release 30 million barrels of oil from the country's emergency reserve as part of a broader international response to lost oil supplies caused by turmoil in the Middle East and North Africa, particularly Libya.

Since then, however, oil prices had fallen considerably, and analysts questioned how much relief the move would provide the economy, and for how long.

One analyst, Andrew Lipow, said the timing of the announcement, a day after Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke delivered a negative outlook on the economy, suggests that industrialized countries are grasping for solutions. He said Americans should expect the price of gasoline to fall, but not dramatically, in the coming weeks.

"Fifteen or 20 cents a gallon of relief is not enough to make people feel good about their job prospects or losses on the stock market or our general economic slowdown," he said.

IEA and the White House said they were acting to increase the supply of oil available during the peak summer driving season.

"We are taking this action in response to the ongoing loss of crude oil due to supply disruptions in Libya and other countries and their impact on the global economic recovery," Energy Secretary Steven Chu said.

Gas prices at the pump have already fallen for 20 days in a row. They were down another penny Wednesday, to a nationwide average of $3.61 per gallon, according to the AAA Daily Fuel Gauge Report. That's about 21 cents lower than a month ago.

The timing of the release brought criticism from business groups and Republican lawmakers, who accused President Barack Obama of playing politics with the country's oil reserves, which are intended to address emergencies.

The amount of oil to be released, 2 million barrels per day, represents 2.2 percent of daily global oil demand. The 60 million barrels to be released over the span of a month is less than one day's demand, about 89 million barrels.

The IEA's move comes two weeks after OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, decided during a tense meeting not to increase oil production to meet rising demand. OPEC is made up primarily of Middle Eastern and North African nations.

Layoffs, housing data point to chronic problems

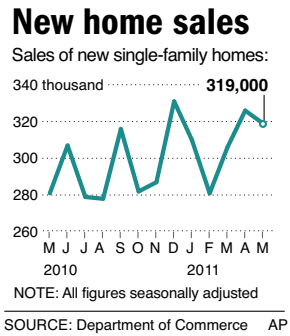

By Derek Kravitz and Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Sour reports Thursday on the number of people who sought unemployment benefits and buyers of new homes illustrate what Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke acknowledged Wednesday: Many factors weighing on the economy are proving to be more chronic than first imagined.

Applications for unemployment benefits rose to a seasonally adjusted 429,000 last week, the Labor Department said Thursday. It was the biggest jump in a month and marked the 11th straight week that applications have been above 400,000. Elevated unemployment benefit claims signal a worsening job market.

New-home sales fell in May to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 319,000, the Commerce Department said. That's fewer than half the 700,000 that economists say must be sold to sustain a healthy housing market. Sales of new homes have fallen 18 percent in the two years since the recession ended. Last year was the worst for new-home sales on records dating back half a century.

Stocks tumbled more than 200 points after the weaker data on housing and layoffs were released. It came one day after the Fed lowered its outlook for growth and unemployment for the rest of the year.

But news of an agreement by the 17-country eurozone, the International Monetary Fund and Greece on a new austerity plan sent stocks higher midday, helping the Dow Jones industrial average recover most of its earlier losses. The Dow closed nearly 60 points for the day.

"We have had a worrisome string of soft numbers which is painting a fairly bleak picture of the recovery," said Sal Guatieri, senior economist at BMO Capital Markets. "The labor market is weakening according to the jobless claims numbers, confidence appears to be slipping among households and small businesses and home sales are still very depressed."

The Fed cut its economic growth forecast to between 2.7 percent and 2.9 percent this year, down from its range of 3.1 percent to 3.3 percent in April. The Fed also raised its unemployment rate estimate slightly, saying it would not fall below 8.6 percent this year.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK (AP) – What began with a steep drop in the stock market ended with a modest decline Thursday. The Dow Jones industrial average lost just 60 points after being down nearly 240 points earlier in the day.

A jump in the number of people applying for jobless benefits and plummeting oil prices drove stocks lower at the market open. By 11 a.m., the Dow was down 234 points. Then came late afternoon reports that Greece may have reached a deal for a new austerity plan. The Dow made up nearly 100 points between 2:45 and 3 p.m. alone.

The Dow finished with a loss of 59.67 points, or 0.5 percent, to 12,050. The Standard & Poor's 500 index, down as many as 24 points, closed down just 3.64, or 0.3 percent, to 1,283.50.

Economists say they are worried by conflicting explanations for the more downbeat view.

In its policy statement, the Fed blamed the worsening outlook in part on temporary factors. High gas prices have forced consumers to spend less on discretionary items, such as appliances and vacations, which help boost growth.

And supply disruptions from Japan's natural disasters have slowed manufacturing growth. The Fed said those problems should abate by supply. Iran and Venezuela want to keep production stable in hopes of keeping prices – and revenue – high. Saudi Arabia wants to increase production, fearing that high oil prices will hurt the global economy and reduce oil demand over the long term.

The head of the IEA, Nobuo Tanaka, expressed disappointment about OPEC's decision after that meeting. At a press conference Thursday in Paris, he said IEA's release would “contribute to ensuring that adequate supplies are available to the global market.”

Kevin Book, an analyst at Clearview Energy Partners, said the move was the first time the IEA has used its reserves as a defensive weapon “to send an unforgettable message to OPEC.”

The reserves, he said, have always acted as a shield. “Now we are using it to bludgeon prices globally. This is the first time we've used our shield as a club.”

the fall, and growth would pick up.

But when pressed by reporters, Bernanke acknowledged that some of the troubles are stronger and more persistent. He singled out the weaknesses in the financial sector and the housing market. And he said those problems could linger for some time.

“The chairman talked about temporary factors, but housing is clearly not temporary. It's a structural problem. This is going to stay with us for a while,” said Yelena Shulyatyeva, an analyst at BNP Paribas.

Everything has its wonders, even darkness and silence, and I learn whatever state I am in, therein to be content.

Two House members want to end U.S. pot ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two House members introduced a bill Thursday that would remove marijuana from the list of federal controlled substances and cede to the states enforcement of laws governing pot.

The legislation would eliminate marijuana-specific penalties under federal law, but would maintain a ban on transporting marijuana across state lines. It would allow individuals to grow and sell marijuana in states that make it legal.

The bill was introduced by Democrat Barney Frank of Massachusetts and Ron Paul, a Texas Republican running for his party's presidential nomination.

Four Democrats are co-sponsors: John Conyers of Michigan, Barbara Lee of California, Jared Polis of Colorado and Steve Cohen of Tennessee.

"Criminally prosecuting adults for making the choice to smoke marijuana is a waste of law enforcement resources and an intrusion on personal freedom," Frank said.

"I do not advocate urging people to smoke marijuana. Neither do I urge them to drink alcoholic beverages or smoke tobacco. But in none of these cases do I think prohibition enforced by criminal sanctions is good public policy," he said.

WASHINGTON — Some of the earliest Americans turn out to have been artists.

A bone fragment at least 13,000 years old, with the carved image of a mammoth or mastodon, has been discovered in Florida, a new study reports.

While prehistoric art depicting animals with trunks has been found in Europe, this may be the first in the Western Hemisphere, researchers report Wednesday in the Journal of Archaeological Science.

"It's pretty exciting, we haven't found anything like this in North America," said Dennis J. Stanford, curator of North American Archaeology at the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History, who was a co-author of the report.

They hunted these animals, Stanford explained, and "you see people drawing all kinds of pictures that are of relevance and importance to them."

"Much of the real significance of such finds is in the tangible, emotional connection they allow us to feel with people in the deep past," said Dietrich Stout, an anthropologist at Emory University in Atlanta, who was not part of the research.

Cave paintings showing animals have been found in Texas, but those were dated to about 4,000 years ago, much more recent than the newly found carved bone.

The bone fragment, discovered in Vero Beach, Fla., contains an incised image about 3 inches long from head to tail and about 1 3/4 inches from head to foot.

"There was considerable skepticism expressed about the authenticity of the incising on the bone until it was examined exhaustively by archaeologists, paleontologists, forensic anthropologists, materials science engineers and artists," lead author Barbara Purdy of the University of Florida said.

The bone was found by a fossil hunter near a location, known as the Old Vero Site, where human bones were found side-by-side with the bones of extinct Ice Age animals in an excavation from 1913 to 1916.

Former university head jailed in prostitution case

The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Former University of New Mexico President F. Chris Garcia was arrested and jailed Thursday in connection with a multi-state, online prostitution ring that authorities say was run by a physics professor from New Jersey.

Police said Garcia, 71, and Fairleigh Dickinson professor David Flory, 68, were among seven members of the top echelon of the ring. Six have been arrested, and warrants have been issued for one more, Albuquerque police Chief Ray Schultz said.

Investigators said the ring had some 1,400 members, including 200 prostitutes, but there was no indication that any other universities or students were involved.

"At this point it looks purely coincidental" that two of the top members were academics, police Lt. William Roseman said.

Schultz emphasized the investigation had just started and that human trafficking and racketeering charges were possible.

Members of the site paid anywhere from $200 for a sex act to $1,000 for a full hour of time, Roseman said. The prostitutes were paid in cash by the clients, not through the site, police said.

Garcia was part of the "hunt club," whose job was to look for new prostitutes for the site known as Southwest Companions, police said, declining to release a range of ages for the women.

Garcia Flory

Garcia was arrested at his home. Police said he used the handle "Burque Pops" and was trying to delete his postings and other information linking him to the site.

Police said the site operators did not appear to be in it for the money.

"This was about sex," Roseman said, noting that a lot of the clients had too much to lose to go looking for prostitutes on the street.

"They needed a safe place where they could go to do this," Roseman said Flory described the site to police as a hobby.

The operators were also using the site to build a database of undercover police officers to help members recognize them and avoid arrest, police said.

Police said the site was started in 2005 by Cara Garrett, who first tipped vice officers to its operation after she was arrested on drug, child abuse and prostitution charges in December.

Summer league builds POOL PROFICIENCY for serious competition

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

Walk into The Pocket and wait for your eyes to adjust to dim light, and you might hear people talking about skill, passion and competition. Members of a summer nine-ball league, just getting under way, have hearty respect for pool.

It's no casual game to shoot between beers. The players at the top practice hard to get there. "It really is a skill sport," said Shelly Wormsbaker of Filer.

Not all of the players are as able as Wormsbaker, who has been shooting pool for about 30 years. Michael Velasquez, 30, of Twin Falls, has been at it for about 18 years and admits being less accomplished than the three other players at his table during league play June 16.

It's good to play with people of different skill levels, Velasquez said. Competing with better players can improve your prowess and, because most leagues give players a handicap, won't hurt your score.

"We are pretty competitive, but it is for fun," said Beau Piercey, 31, of Twin Falls.

Most of those shooting pool at the Billiard Congress of America's Thursday-night league in Twin Falls have been playing for some time, but newcomers are welcome and encouraged.

"You can't get better unless you play," said Scott Wade of Twin Falls. "It's a social sport, and the people are friendly and respectful regardless of how good you are."

Wade has been playing off and on for 15 years and said pool has allowed him to meet new friends and reconnect with old ones.

"It gives people a night to connect and socialize," said Larry Web of the North Side Lounge in Jerome, which sponsors three pool leagues during fall and winter. "Everyone can compete on equal grounds."

Pool is an ideal sport for those who might not be able to partake in more physical competition, Web said. Although it doesn't require physical exertion it does need focus, determination and some math skill.

"It takes a while to be able to see the angles you have to make to get the ball in the pocket," said Teresa Curry of Hansen, president of a winter women's league in Twin Falls.

Gooding turns ranch work into weekend of fun

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Cowboy relay races and trailer loading aren't prorodeo competitions, but they're crowd pleasers nonetheless.

Gooding's Western Heritage Days, which begin tonight at the Andy James Arena at the Gooding County Fair Grounds, are filled with good spectator sport, volunteer coordinator Carmen Stevens said.

Heritage Days highlights include two evenings of Ranch Hand Rodeo, a draft horse show, a Dutch oven exhibition, a cattle drive and horse parade and cowboy poetry.

"Western Heritage Days is a fundraiser for 4-H, and so the county's 4-H'ers will be helping all weekend," Stevens said. In years past the event has helped pay for additional pig pens and other fairground building upkeep.

Gooding's third annual Western Heritage gathering this weekend will be a lively look back at Magic Valley's early days. Here, a piece of last year's ranch rodeo action.

Josh Holt built this pedal car, which features custom pin-stripe painting, and is selling $1 raffle tickets for a drawing to win it during this weekend's Classic Cruisers car show in Twin Falls. Holt's other car, a rebuilt 1962 Mercury Comet, will also be on display.

Corvettes, classic cars cruise into Twin Falls

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Carburetors, horsepower and all-American sex appeal, packaged in muscle cars of the past and present, will be on full display this weekend.

The Classic Cruisers club's annual Cool Classic Nights car show kicks off tonight with a street party in downtown Twin Falls. The Snake River Corvette Club will also be a part of the weekend, with its sports cars lined up alongside the hodgepodge of Model T's, '55 Chevys, El Caminos and Pontiacs from Detroit's glory days.

"We expect about 125 classic cars and 50 Corvettes for the weekend," said Classic Cruisers president Stacy Sommer. "Every year we begin the show with our street party downtown, which will have a DJ playing classic rock 'n' roll music."

Although some car shows cater to a partying crowd, Sommer said, this one is for families.

"One of the really fun events we have every year is the pedal car race for children," Sommer said. "We set up a little track on Main, and it is always a lot of fun for the kids and probably as much fun to watch."

The pedal car race, during tonight's street party, is open to children 5 and younger — as long as they fit in the cars. It's free, and every child gets a prize.

Classic Cruisers member Josh Holt built a peddle car as part of his senior project and will raffle it off during the car show. Holt, who will be a Filer High School senior in the fall, spent the past few months getting the car ready but said the hardest part is selling tickets.

"My family has been a part of Classic Cruisers for as long as I can remember, and going to car shows has always been a family thing," said Holt, who will debut his own rebuilt, baby-blue 1962 Mercury Comet at the show. "The club raises money for Make A Wish regularly, and it's neat to hear about all the kids who get helped. I thought maybe I could do the same thing."

If he sells another $120 in tickets this weekend, he'll meet his modest $1,000 goal. The 17-year-old will sell raffle tickets at a booth at the car show and will draw the winner Sunday afternoon; tickets are $1 each or six for $5.

On the car show side, Holt looks forward to pulling behind the rest of the cars and cruising down Blue Lakes Boulevard during the Saturday-evening drive to Dairy Queen.

"I'm just excited to be there. I was awarded the youngest driver award when I first got it on the road, but it didn't look anything like this," he said.

Like many enthusiasts, Holt rebuilt his car with the help of other hobbyists, including his parents. To find needed or coveted parts, he browsed store shelves, websites and swap meets, like the one featured at this weekend's car show.

One of the unique features of the Classic Cruisers car show is the addition of the Rusty Nuts Swap Meet, now in its second year. Last year Rusty Nuts lured 40 vendors and had people browsing the trailer loads of extra bumpers, high beams, rims, exhaust systems and more, said member Max Thurber.

"When you have people working on everything from Model T's to modern-day muscle cars they need parts, and other people have them," Thurber said. "Swaps are great places to find those hard-to-find parts you need for your project."

All around Magic Valley this weekend, small towns are offering their most entertaining enticements, hoping you'll drop in and be neighborly.

At its Western Heritage Gathering, Gooding is turning ranch chores into a rodeo and a cattle drive into a parade. You'll find a fish fry and a shooting trailer at Filer Fun Days. And Hazelton is celebrating its centennial by dancing in the street, flipping pancakes and scrambling for live fish.

In Twin Falls tonight, you can catch the street party that kicks off the weekend's Cool Classic Nights car show, then — for more nostalgia — take the kids to City Park for a free outdoor showing of "Annie." On Saturday night, the classic cars will cruise Blue Lakes Boulevard and rendezvous at Dairy Queen — a sight worth seeing even if you don't have classic wheels of your own.

Music lovers might as well keep the blankets and lawn chairs in the car trunk now, and stock up on picnic supplies. Enough free outdoor concert series are under way to keep them happy most nights of the week. The Twin Falls Tonight downtown concert series and Hailey's Back Alley Parties, both on Wednesdays, are heading into their second week of the summer as three other outdoor series start up in the Wood River Valley: Jazz in the Park on Sundays, Ketch'em Alive on Tuesdays and Town Square Tunes on Thursdays.

"Circle Mirror Transformation," an oddball comedy that won the 2010 Obie Award for Best New American Play, opens in Hailey on Tuesday. If your ticket budget is tight, that's the night to go: Tuesday is a "pay what you feel" preview.

Heading into the long holiday weekend, Rupert will be the first to send up its fireworks. The city's Fourth of July celebration kicks off Thursday night, with live music leading up to the first boom.

For details on these events — and many others — see the full calendar in today's Entertainment section.

This year, organizers hope to raise at least $5,000 toward a new roof for the fairgrounds' dairy barn, said 4-H program coordinator Marie Baucumi. Money is raised through concession sales during rodeo events and entry into Friday and Saturday evenings' Ranch Hand Rodeo.

So what can spectators expect?

A Ranch Hand Rodeo is a fun way to up the ante on chores done working ranches, fair manager Don Gill said. Twelve teams of four cowboys each — six teams each night — will be scored on how fast they can load cattle into stock trailers or perform team branding (with paint, not a sizzling brand) and other brow-beating duties.

"This is geared for working cowboys," Gill said. "While many of our locals enjoy the PRCA, a lot aren't diehard pro-rodeo fans. And this event brings a lot of families out that don't come out for the rodeos."

Saturday's parade, like the ranch rodeo, complements Gooding's history, steeped in ranching and the pioneering way of life. People are welcome to join the parade as long as they're on foot or Western Heritage Days isn't the only game in town during the weekend. On Saturday, Helping Hearts and Hands is holding a cowboy breakfast and fun run to raise money to fight hunger and poverty in the county.

The public is also welcome to join the Gooding Fire Department for its benefit barbecue. In addition to a variety of children's activities and freebies, the police department will provide free fingerprinting for children. The firemen are conducting a raffle to raise money for their burnout victim fund; tickets are $1 each or six for $5.

The Gooding Chamber of Commerce is also hosting its annual duck race that afternoon as well. Put your money on a lucky duck and you may win a great prize. At the least, you'll add to the chamber's scholarship coffee.

Class choices in Twin Falls and Burley

Times-News

Looking for a new creative outlet? Consider these classes from the College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center:

- "Acting Essentials for Stage and Screen," taught by Craig Bagley, 6-8:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, July 5-28, at CSI's Mini-Cassia campus in Burley. Cost is $60, plus a $5 supply fee. This course is for aspiring and intermediate actors 16 and older. The performance-focused class will enable actors to encounter an audience and fellow actors with an attitude of generosity and strength, promoters say.
- "Weave Your Own Scarf" workshop, taught by Desiree Thompson, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 9 and 16 at CSI's Mini-Cassia campus; and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 19 and 26 on CSI's Twin Falls campus. Cost is $30, plus a $50 supply fee that covers a pre-measured warp chain wide enough to make an 8-by-72-inch scarf and the use of a loom frame, rigid heddle and stick shuttle. This hands-on workshop teaches basic weaving skills; how to calculate yarn requirement, plan color and color patterning; and use of simple tools to create larger projects.
- "Peace, Love and Hot Glass" for children, taught by Robin Dober, 9-11 a.m. July 11-14 at Hands On in downtown Twin Falls. Cost is $25, plus a $60 supply fee. Wear close-toed shoes to class. In this class, students will learn the science behind glass fusing, how to cut glass safely and assemble simple projects and what happens to glass in the kiln. Each will make several glass pieces to take home, including peace sign sun catchers, heart candy dishes, magnets, sparkly dichroic jewelry and candle votive holders.

- "Black and White Photography," taught by John Berglund, 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays, July 12 through Aug. 2, at CSI's Mini-Cassia campus. Cost is $40. Taking amazing black-and-white photographs is a matter of discovering the art of seeing in shades of gray. This class will consist of field trips in which students learn to look past color into contrast, texture and tone.

Symposium explores wartime vulnerability of civil liberties

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

A few days before the Fourth of July, history professor Russ Tremayne will celebrate the holiday with talks of protests and segregation. The College of Southern Idaho associate professor will lead CSI's sixth annual Civil Liberties Symposium, focusing this year on a theme of wartime.

"It's going to be a very sort of patriotic event, a high-powered academic event," he said. "It's a learning opportunity."

The symposium, with speakers specializing in disciplines from history to law, will explore some of the ways civil liberties can become vulnerable during wartime.

That history includes the internment of Japanese Americans at Minidoka's Hunt camp during World War II, but the symposium is more than a recapping of the internees' experience. Tremayne said speakers will range from Dave Adler, specializing in constitutional law, to Larry Matsuda, a poet born in the Minidoka relocation camp. Author and historian Todd Moyer will talk about the paradoxical life of black airmen who signed up to fight for a country that was still segregated.

"To look at any topic like civil liberties and war, it's best to look at it through all these prisms," Tremayne said. "We want to have different generations, different disciplines."

One of the symposium's highlights will be the unveiling of a monument to WWII soldiers who hailed from the Minidoka camp. Tremayne has worked with the Friends of Minidoka for five years to help reproduce the original wall, which was torn down after the war.

Historian Robert Sims said part of his symposium talk will look not just at how events like the Minidoka internment occurred, but at how they are remembered. Sims said many people now think of the Japanese internment as an action that was wrong, but justified at the time. But, Sims said, there's

ACADEMIC EXPERIENCE

- What: College of Southern Idaho's sixth Civil Liberties Symposium. The theme: civil liberties during wartime.
- When: 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., June 30 and July 1. On July 2, participants can join a pilgrimage to the site of the Hunt internment camp.
- Where: CSI's Fine Arts Auditorium.
- Registration: For CSI students seeking one social science credit, the cost is $110. For other CSI students the fee is $35, and for all other participants it's $70. Includes two breakfasts and two lunches.
- Contact: Russ Tremayne, 732-6885 or rtremayne@csi.edu; or register online at [csi.edu/forms/civil liberties/](http://csi.edu/forms/civil liberties/).

more evidence that the government was acting on bad information and rumors during WWII and that the internment was not justified.

"There's been an official recognition that it was a mistake, but I think there's a lingering public feeling that it was justified at the time," Sims said. "There's still education that needs to be done."

Sims hopes to highlight the importance of acting on solid facts, something that can still come into play today.

After the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, "an awful lot of Americans who were blameless to that were really treated badly," Sims said. "When we get into times of crisis, whether WWII or 9/11, we can create a vulnerability for our civil liberties ... We're all, all of us, responsible to uphold our civil liberties."

Rosemary Fornshell, a retired CSI business and economics professor, said she has attended three of the college's symposiums because of the way historical issues are put into context.

"I like that there's a theme," Fornshell said. Tremayne "takes that and kind of creates a broader issue of civil liberties. It's part of what it means to be an American — to have individual liberties."

DREW NASH/Times-News
Beau Piercey plays in a Billiard Congress of America league game June 16 in Twin Falls. 'It's competitive, but you're the only person that can beat you,' Piercey says.

Pool

The skills necessary for lining up a shot transcend age groups. Pool leagues primarily take place in bars so the minimum age is 21, but players as old as 80 participate in league play, Wormsbaker said.

Marilyn Young and other seniors in Jerome have organized a women's-only league in the Jerome Senior Center.

"We planned to just have league during the winter, but when winter was over we just never stopped," Young said.

League play goes for two or three hours, during which five or six games are played. In one night a player can improve his game. Some of the winter leagues travel to bars in Hagerman, Bliss, Filer, Jerome and Hazelton, which enhances the sport's social aspect and introduces players to larger competition.

Not ready to play at that level? Summer's semi-competitive league is great preparation.

Refugee Day introduces Magic Valley to foods, cultures of its new populations

Times-News

Set aside an evening to learn about your new neighbors.

The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center is coordinating an evening of ethnic food and entertainment at Twin Falls City Park's band shell, at 6 p.m. July 15.

The second annual Magic Valley Refugee Day will feature seven ethnic populations who are assimilating into southern Idaho since the refugee center sponsored their relocation, event organizers said. Each group will have a tent with displays, information about their home countries, and samples of their foods. Presentations on the band shell stage will feature ethnic music, singing and dancing.

Event coordinator Michelle Pospichal said two raffles will be held — one for a quilt created by 20 refugee young people this spring, and the other for a dozen traditional crafts created by refugee families. Refugee Day is designed to celebrate the area's cultural diversity and to thank the community for its support of the growing refugee population, she said.

The event is free and open to everyone. Information: CSI Refugee Center, 736-2166 or mpop-sic@spro.net.

Mauisha Kami, 13, drew Nepali dancers April 8 as part of 'The Place I Left Behind,' a program of the Magic Valley Arts Council and the College of Southern Idaho's refugee center. Drawings by Kami and other refugee children are now on a quilt to be raffled off at a mid-July event in Twin Falls City Park.

Evans and her Los Angeles band will play the July 3 concert at Ketchum's Rotary Park near Warm Springs and Saddle roads.

"She's such a favorite at the Sun Valley Jazz Festival each year," said Dayle Fowler, who sponsors the summer jazz series each year. "I jumped at the opportunity to bring her here."

series runs 6-8 p.m. Sundays. This year's series will kick off with jazz pianist Paul Tillotson, who divides his time between New York and Sun Valley, on June 26.

Evans will follow on July 3.

July 17: Boise Latin Jazz Connection with Russ Caldwell.

July 24: Kevin Kirk and Onomatopoeia from Boise.

Free concert series blends country, rock and reggae

Burley's Mills signs to play baseball at Miles CC

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Burley baseball standout Jake Mills has signed a letter of intent to play at Miles Community College, in Miles City, Mont.

“It was fun going around seeing all the campuses and meeting all the coaches and players of the teams,” Mills said. “I enjoyed the recruiting process, but I’m happy it’s over now and happy to have my mind made up.”

Mills was a three-year starter for the Burley Bobcats. His senior season he batted .492 with 22 RBIs from the cleanup spot. As a pitcher, Mills had an 8-1 record with a 2.92 ERA. He also played football and basketball at Burley and is currently spending the summer with the Burley Green Sox American Legion club.

“It’s great to see a kid work hard, put the time in, and go play in college,” said Burley coach Devin

Kunz. “Jake’s put in a bunch of time and he’s getting what he deserves. It’s nice to see the hard work pay off.”

In recent weeks, Mills had narrowed his list down to a handful of schools, including College of Southern Idaho, Spokane Falls, Treasure Valley and College of Idaho. While other schools recruited him to be solely a pitcher, Mills said a major factor in choosing Miles was the ability for him to be an everyday player.

Mills

“I wouldn’t mind if I was just stuck in the bullpen, but I’d like to have the chance to play and be an everyday guy. It’s nice to get the opportunity,” Mills said.

The Miles Pioneers compete in the NJCAA’s Division II and won the Region IX Tournament championship in May, their sixth in a row.

Mills graduated high school with a 3.68 GPA with a bevy of college credits that will allow him to enter school as a sophomore academically. He plans to finish his associate degree at MCC, and then transfer to a four-year college to finish his studies in either education or engineering.

Meanwhile, he also has his sights set on his baseball future.

“Other than playing professional baseball, it’s been my biggest dream (to play in college),” Mills said. “It’s nice to have that achievement and reach a milestone. Now I’m just looking to improve, move to a four-year (school), and then if I get the opportunity to get drafted or sign to play professional ball, I’d love to.”

Kimberly goes 2-0 to lead off Donnelley tourney

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two stellar complete-game pitching performances provided Kimberly with a pair of wins on Day 1 of Burley's Donnelley Wood Bat Tournament on Thursday.

Sam Bourgeois battled through the day's opening game to give Kimberly a 5-0 win over the Burley Green Sox.

“With these wood bats, you just have to throw strikes,” Bourgeois said. “Coach said we have a lot of games and very few pitchers, so we’ve got to fight through it. You’ve got to be tough with games like this.”

With a stout defense behind him, Bourgeois needed only three strikeouts to earn the shutout.

“I love my defense,” Bourgeois said. “I wouldn’t change my defense. They’re the best in the state, I honestly believe that. They clutch up, get things done and play the right way.”

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Jazz filled two needs in Thursday's NBA draft, using the No. 3 pick on 6-11 center Enes Kanter of Turkey, then taking Colorado guard Alec Burks at No. 12.

They never got the chance to take local favorite Jimmer Fredette as he was drafted No. 10 by Milwaukee.

The 6-6 Burks has the size to play in the NBA, and the inside shooting touch, averaging 20.5 points, 6.5 rebounds and 2.9 assists for Colorado.

While Fredette was a guy who could bomb 3s from anywhere, Burks is more of a shooting guard who can rebound and defend, with a 36-inch vertical jump. He hit better than 50 percent of his shots overall but less than 30 percent from 3-point range.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The Sacramento Kings found a shooter they hope they can eventually pair in the backcourt with Tyreke Evans and a high-profile player to help in marketing when they ended up with high-scoring guard Jimmer Fredette after making a draft-day trade Thursday with Charlotte and Milwaukee.

The Kings moved from seventh to 10th in the draft, while also acquiring swingman John Salmons from the Bucks and sending guard Beno Udrih to Charlotte. That created a need in Sacramento for a shooter in the backcourt who could also play some point guard, making Fredette an attractive option.

Fredette couldn't meet with the media until the deal was final. “Took a little while waiting back there,” said Fredette, obviously the favorite with the crowd at draft held at the Prudential Center. “But it’s a great moment for me and for my family and for the Sacramento Kings organization. Hopefully their fan base is excited because I’m really excited to get out there and start the season with them and have a great year.”

French Open champ Li upset; Serena struggles to advance

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

WIMBLEDON, England — After playing so well, so often, at this year's first two major tournaments, Li Na's run at Wimbledon came to an early end.

Only 2½ weeks after giving China its first Grand Slam singles championship at the French Open, and five months after being the runner-up at the Australian Open, Li was knocked out in the second round at the All England Club on Thursday, the grass-court tournament's biggest upset so far.

The third-seeded Li wasted two match points and succumbed to the speedy serving of wild-card entry Sabine Lisicki of Germany in a 3-6, 6-4, 8-6 loss. Lisicki hit 17 aces, including one at 124 mph, which the WTA said is the fastest serve by a woman all season.

“I mean, (from) the first point ‘til the end of the match, every serve was, like, around 117 miles (per hour),” said Li, 14-1 in Grand Slam play in 2011 before Thursday. “I mean, this is impossible for the women.”

Elsewhere, Serena Williams again was pushed to three sets before winning, then complained a bit about having to play on Court 2 instead of Centre Court or Court 1; Roger Federer overwhelmed his opponent in straight sets, then basked in a standing ovation after playing under the retractable roof at the main stadium for the first time; and two-time French Open runner-up Robin Soderling came back after losing the first two sets to beat 2002 Wimbledon champion Lleyton Hewitt 6-7 (5), 3-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4.

Li appeared headed to the third round, too. Leading 5-3 in the third set, she was a point away from victory while Lisicki served at 15-40. But Lisicki got out of that jam this way: 122 mph service winner, 123 mph service winner, 124 mph ace, 122 mph ace.

“Obviously, a good serve is important, but also, you have to use it well,” the 62nd-ranked Lisicki said. “And I think I’m serving quite smart, as well. So it definitely helped me today.”

Li became an instant star in China with her French Open title; more than 100 million people in the nation of 1 billion watched that final on TV. Li may not have been kidding when she asked reporters at Wimbledon not to write that she'd be flying home now, so there might be a chance to have some private time with her husband.

Even though her Grand Slam triumph came so recently, Li already could sense a change on court — not in herself, but in other players.

“I didn’t feel different. I didn’t feel, like, pressure. I mean, (the) only change is, right now, opponents see you different,” she said. “Everyone (who plays) against you, they feeling nothing to lose. So they can play (their) best tennis.”

By the looks of things so far, Williams is going to face a true test every time she takes the court this year at Wimbledon, which she has won four times.

She was forced to a third set for the fourth consecutive match since returning to the tour after nearly a year away because of a series of health scares. And while she eventually seized control to beat Simona Halep of Romania 3-6, 6-2, 6-1, it's clear that Williams is still working her way into shape.

Nationals manager quits after team beats M's

WASHINGTON — Manager Jim Riggleman abruptly resigned after the surprising Washington Nationals beat the Seattle Mariners 1-0 Thursday for their 11th win in 12 games.

General manager Mike Rizzo said that Riggleman quit after he requested the team pick up the option on his contract for 2012 and the club declined.

Bench coach John McLaren will manage the Nationals on a short-term basis, starting with today's opening game of an interleague series against the Chicago White Sox, according to a club official who informed The Associated Press on condition of anonymity Thursday night because a formal announcement had yet to be made.

Riggleman has been seeking more security for some time. He took over for Manny Acta on an interim basis during the 2009 season. Riggleman's resignation came moments after Laynce Nix hit a game-ending sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth, pushing Washington (38-37) over .500 for the first time since April 20.

GIANTS 2, TWINS 1
SAN FRANCISCO — Tim Lincecum struck out 12 in seven superb innings, Miguel Tejada and Cody Ross drove in runs for the Giants, who won their second straight following a season-long five-game skid. Michael Cuddyer extended his hitting streak to 12 games with three hits and an RBI for Minnesota, which lost its second in a row after a season-best eight-game win streak.

DIAMONDBACKS 5, ROYALS 3
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Daniel Hudson pitched seven strong innings to win his ninth game, and Miguel Montero and Juan Miranda each homered to lead the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Hudson (9-5) is tied for the National League lead in victories. He is 8-1 with a 2.78 ERA in his past 11 starts after losing his first four starts. He held the Royals to three runs on six hits, while walking one and striking out one.

NATIONAL LEAGUE CARDINALS 12, PHILLIES 2
ST. LOUIS — Chris Carpenter threw seven strong innings and Jon Jay and Lance Berkman homered to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 12-2 win over the Philadelphia Phillies on Thursday.

Carpenter (2-7) picked up his first victory since May 10. He allowed one run and five hits to end a string of seven successive starts without a win. Carpenter struck out seven and walked one.

St. Louis won for the first time since three-time NL MVP Albert Pujols fractured his left forearm on Sunday.

The Cardinals managed just two runs and 11 hits during the first two games without Pujols, who is out 4 to 6 weeks.

T.F. Cowboys begin Battle of Omaha with a victory

Times-News

The Twin Falls Cowboys beat East Grand Forks (Minn.) 7-0 in their opening game of the Battle of Omaha Baseball Tournament Wednesday in Omaha, Neb.

Cy Sneed and Michael Garcia combined to pitch the seven-inning shutout, giving up only three hits.

“When we get pitching like that, we’re tough to beat,” said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir.

Cody McBride hit a triple, T.J. Ellis added a double and the Cowboys worked the basepaths, stealing six bases.

Twin Falls (13-5) plays two games today, against Omaha Central at 9:30 a.m. MST and Ralston (Neb.) at noon.

Late Wednesday Golf

MILEY WINS TREASURE VALLEY OPEN
Twin Falls golfer Kyle Miley won the IGA Juniors Treasure Valley Open on Wednesday, firing a two-day total of 2 under par (140).

Miley shot even par on Day 1 and was in third place, trailing the leaders by a shot, but he fired a 2-under 69 on Wednesday to win by two strokes. Buhl’s Kade Crossland and Jerome’s Alec Perkins tied for eighth at 4 over on the tournament.

In the boys 13-14 age division, Buhl duo Hayden Eckert (7 over) and Kasey Crossland (11 over) finished in ties for fourth and ninth, respectively.

Buhl’s Sierra Harr was third (11 over) and Twin Falls’ Jenna Sharp eighth (20 over) in the girls’ competition.

Brian Harris hit a hole-in-one at Pebble Ponds Golf Course in Filer on Friday.

Harris pitched in from 100 yards on No. 7. His shot was witnessed by Michael Malone and Tyler Brutke.

Tseng leads rain-hit LPGA Championship

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — No matter how hard she tried, Paula Creamer couldn’t quite catch Yani Tseng. Neither could anyone else.

Tseng, the top-ranked player in the world, shot a 6-under 66 on Thursday to take a one-shot lead over Creamer after the first round of the LPGA Championship.

The 22-year-old Tseng, already the youngest player to win three majors, made five birdies on the front nine and three more on the back to go with a pair of bogeys as she began her quest for another major title.

“I tried to put it on the fairways as much as I could,” said Tseng, who finished second to Stacy Lewis at the Kraft Nabisco Championship in March, the first major of the year. “When you put it on the fairways, you have more chance to make birdies. The second shot I hit it very good.”

Among her eight birdie putts on what was mostly a sunny, calm day at Locust Hill Country Club, none was longer than the 8-footer she made at No. 15. And although Tseng hit only six of 14 fairways, her strength allowed her to hit solid shots out of the thick rough and she was able to reach 15 of 18 greens in regulation. And she was nearly flawless on the short holes, birdieing all four par 3s on a course that had been softened somewhat by an overnight thunderstorm.

RAIN DENTS TRAVELERS CHAMPIONSHIP
CROMWELL, Conn. — Michael Bradley had a one-stroke lead when first-round play in the Travelers Championship was suspended for the day.

Bradley was 6 under with two holes left when play was stopped at 11:30 a.m. local time at TPC River Highlands.

Officials reopened the driving range late in the afternoon and hoped to resume play at 5:45 p.m., but another shower forced more delays and officials eventually decided not to restart play before 7 a.m. Friday.

Vijay Singh was in a group of seven players a shot back.

Only two groups finished the round.

STENSON LEADS BMW INTERNATIONAL OPEN
MUNICH, Germany — Sweden’s Henrik Stenson shot an 8-under 64 in rainy conditions to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the BMW International Open.

England’s Gary Boyd was second.

Virginia ends Cal’s fairytale season at CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Unbeaten Tyler Wilson carried a shutout into the eighth inning, Virginia used a four-run sixth to break open a close game and the No. 1-seeded Cavaliers eliminated California from the College World Series with a 8-1 victory on Thursday night.

Virginia (56-11) will face defending national champion South Carolina in the Bracket 2 final. The Cavs would need to beat the Gamecocks on Friday and again Saturday to reach next week’s best-of-three finals.

The loss ends an improbable postseason run for California (38-23), which started the year with its program scheduled to be dropped in 2012 for budgetary reasons. A $9 million fundraising effort saved the program.

Kenny Swab singled and came around to score on a three-base error to start Virginia’s big sixth inning.

Wilson (10-0) allowed five hits over his career-high 7 2-3 innings. Cal starter Dixon Anderson (4-4) took the loss, failing to get past the third inning for the third time in five starts.

Virginia, which batted

.246 with just three extra-base hits in its first two CWS games, got 11 hits off five pitchers.

Five of those hits came as the Cavaliers extended their lead to 6-0 in the sixth.

Swab scored after Darrel Matthews misplayed the bounce on his hard drive into center field and the ball rolled to the wall. The play was scored a single and three-base error. It was Matthews’ first error in 50 games this season.

Keith Werman and John Barr followed with RBI singles and Chris Taylor with a runthe game, Bourgeois said he didn’t expect to a shutout.

“All I wanted to do was get a few runs and just put the ball in play. I did that, and they rolled over a lot, which helped with the pitch count. It was a good day,” he said.

Clay Matthews went 2-for-4 with a double and an RBI for Kimberly, while Jordan Gentry and Bourgeois each drove in a run.

For Burley, pitcher Joe Ferrin went six innings with five strikeouts, but the Green Sox never got it going offensively.

“It was just a rough day at the plate. That’s all that really happened,” Ferrin said. “My defense was behind me and everything, but at the plate we just didn’t have the runs, and that’s how you win. We were just antsy at the plate.”

Kimberly got its second gem of the day from James Higginbotham, who struck out eight, walked none and yielded an unearned run in a 13-1 win over Bear Lake.

Seth Morris went 4-for-4 with a pair of doubles.

“We plan to play six games this weekend,” Bourgeois said, hinting at Saturday’s championship.

TWIN FALLS HAWKS 11, UPPER VALLEY 4
Jon Cron went 2-for-3 with three RBIs and also earned the win on the mound as the Twin Falls Hawks defeated Upper Valley 11-4.

Twin Falls committed several errors and fell behind 2-0 early. But the Hawks cleaned it up and hit their groove at the plate, knocking in five runs in the third inning, with RBIs from Scott Speer, Trae Bishop and Cron.

Jimmer

last season after leading the nation in scoring with 28.9 points per game, including the Naismith, Wooden, AP and the USBWA awards. With his seemingly unlimited shooting range and a long list of highlights, Fredette was one of the most popular players in college basketball.

That popularity could benefit the Kings, who nearly moved to Anaheim after this past season and are hoping to generate enough interest to build a new arena in Sacramento. The city must have a new arena plan by March 1 or the franchise will likely relocate.

Fredette topped 30 points in 16 of his 37 games at BYU last season, including three 40-point games and a career-high 52 in one game against New Mexico. He also averaged 4.3 assists per game and made 124 3-pointers in helping BYU reach the regional semifinals of the NCAA tournament before falling to Florida.

There were questions heading into the draft about Fredette’s ability to defend quicker and bigger NBA guards, but the Kings believed the 6-foot-2 Fredette would work well in a backcourt with Evans, who won the NBA Rookie of the Year award in 2009-10. The 6-6 Evans has the ability to match up with bigger guards defensively, easing the load on Fredette.

The Kings also have Marcus Thornton in what figures to be a three-guard rotation in the backcourt. Thornton averaged 21.3 points in 23 games for Sacramento after being acquired in a midseason trade with New Orleans.

While Evans’ strengths offensively are as a slasher who is able to score in the paint, Fredette gives the Kings one of the best outside shooters who should have room to operate on an offense that also includes last year’s first-round pick, center DeMarcus Cousins.

Fredette also gives the Kings another ballhandler and distributor to take pressure off Evans, who is not a natural point guard. Evans was hindered this past season by plantar fasciitis in his left foot. Evans played just 57 games, averaging 17.8 points, 5.6 assists and 4.8 rebounds per game. Those numbers were all down from his spectacular rookie season.

But the Kings are hoping a healthy Evans, a more seasoned Cousins and now Fredette will help improve a franchise that has had five straight losing seasons. Sacramento went 24-58 last season, their third straight year with fewer than 30 wins. Washington and Minnesota are the only other teams that have not reached 30 wins in any of the past three seasons.

Utah

way I handle the ball, I just feel like there aren’t a lot of people that can stay in front of me,” said Burks, the first Colorado player in school history to score over 770 points, grab 240 rebounds and hand out 100 assists in a single season.

“I hit the 3s in college when I needed to. ... My versatility is my greatest asset.”

In Kanter the Jazz get their coveted big man, especially considering the injury issues that have plagued Mehmet Okur.

The 19-year-old Kanter was considered the best center in the draft, with raw skills and NBA size.

He is a bit of a mystery as he hasn’t played basketball in nearly a year after being ruled ineligible at Kentucky.

“It was so difficult because I couldn’t play,” Kanter said. “I still didn’t give up. I knew in the end I would be fine.”

Kanter showed flashes at the 2010 Nike Hoops Summit, scoring 34 points for the World Team to break Dirk Nowitzki’s record (33). He also was Most Valuable Player for the 2009 Turkish Under 18 National team.

“I will bring the team toughness and post moves, rebounding, everything,” Kanter said. “I will try to do everything to make the playoffs.”

He also said he already feels at home in Utah, with fellow Turkey native Okur “like family” even though the two have never met.

Jazz President Randy Rigby announced the first pick at Utah’s downtown Salt Lake City arena, where more than 7,000 fans showed up to cheer on a team that they hope is rebuilding for the playoffs.

The Jazz finished 39-43, only the second time in the last 28 years they finished below .500. They also are the only team in NBA history to start 15-5 and 27-13 and not make the playoffs.

Missing the playoffs capped a tumultuous season that saw Hall of Fame coach Jerry Sloan abruptly retire on Feb. 10, and the Jazz trade All-Star point guard Deron Williams two weeks later. They sent him to the Nets, fearing he wouldn’t sign a long-term deal with the club after the 2012 season.

Draft analysts called Kanter a perfect fit for the Jazz because he is a high-IQ, high-character player.

Utah fans, unlike a year ago when they booed the choice of Butler star Gordon Hayward at No. 9, cheered when Kanter’s name was announced.

“I’m so excited,” Kanter told fans in an interview shown on the jumbo screen. “I know the Utah Jazz fans are crazy and I love them.”

U.S. determined to end title drought at Women's World Cup

Americans' last World Cup championship came in 1999

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press writer

The last time the United States won the Women's World Cup, Mia Hamm and Julie Foudy were still playing, Abby Wambach had just led Florida to the NCAA title and Alex Morgan was all of 10.

That 1999 title is so far in the distance, in fact, that captain Christie Rampone is the only current U.S. player who was part of the watershed tournament.

"It's been way too long — 12 years — since we brought home that trophy," goalkeeper Hope Solo said. "Twelve years is a long time."

Ending that drought is the Americans' sole objective at the Women's World Cup, which begins Sunday and runs through July 17 in nine cities across Germany. One of the four top seeds, the U.S. opens group play Tuesday against North Korea in Dresden, then faces Colombia on July 2 in Sinsheim, and Sweden on July 6 in Wolfsburg.

Two-time defending champion Germany and Brazil, silver medalist at the last two Olympics and runner-up at the 2007 World Cup, are also top seeds, as is Japan.

"Everyone has the final game on our minds, and winning it," Wambach said. "But we can't skip any steps to get there."

Despite coming up short at the last two World Cups, the Americans haven't exactly been in a slump. They've won the last two Olympic gold medals, and begin the World Cup as the No. 1 team in the world. They have the world's best goalkeeper in Solo, and one of the best goal-scorers in Wambach.

Yet the Americans aren't the juggernaut they once were.

Part of that is a credit to other countries, many of whom are seeing the results of the additional resources they poured into their programs over the last decade. But the U.S. has also been uncharacteristically inconsistent as of late, particularly over the last year.

After going more than two years without a loss, the U.S. dropped three games in five months. The Americans were stunned in the semifinals of regional World Cup qualifying by Mexico, a team that had been 0-24-1 against its northern neighbor. The U.S. had to win a home-and-home playoff with Italy just to get to Germany.

"It comes down to playing well all the time and getting some lucky breaks. Really, luck plays so much into it. To win any championship in the world, you need some luck, too. What I do know is this team has the heart and the will and the desire to win."

– United States forward
Abby Wambach

The United States lost to Sweden in the Four Nations opener, though it did go on to win the tournament, and then was beaten by England for the first time since 1988.

And now the Americans take a relatively inexperienced squad into the World Cup, where the stadiums will be loud and the pressure intense. Thirteen of the 21 players on the roster were part of the gold medal squad in Beijing, but only eight have played in a World Cup.

Should the U.S. win its group, it would face the runner-up in Group B – Japan, New Zealand, Mexico and England. A potential showdown with Germany looms for the semifinals.

"They just haven't shown that normal consistency of excellence that the U.S. is known for," said Tony DiCicco, the U.S. coach in 1999 who is now an analyst for ESPN, which will broadcast live all 32 matches from Germany. "(The team) has had great games and then all of (a) sudden it has a game that seems sub-par. I'm not sure why that is."

Injuries have been a big factor in the Americans' fickleness. Solo missed qualifying after having shoulder surgery in September, and didn't return until March. Wambach missed Four Nations with a heel injury. Heather Mitts, one of the team's best defenders, struggled with a hamstring early in the year. Lindsay Tarpley, a key player in the midfield, was ruled out of the World Cup just last month after tearing her right ACL with 15 minutes left in a tune-up game against Japan.

Slow starts haven't helped. Morgan scored in the 83rd minute against China in October to salvage a 1-1 draw and preserve the Americans' six-year unbeaten streak at home. Her goal in stoppage time gave the U.S. a much-needed 1-0 win in the first playoff game against Italy. Lauren Cheney scored in stoppage time to lift the team to a 1-0 victory over Mexico in a June 5 send-off match.

"Our biggest weakness has been how we start the games," Rampone said. "We have acknowledged it and now we are working on it and implementing things to start quicker. We know we can't afford any (slow starts) in Germany. I think we are ready and we've had enough time together and we're hitting our stride on the field. We're now playing our way."

And if the U.S. hits its stride, look out.

After losing the opening game in Beijing to Norway, the Americans outscored Abby Wambach of the United States reacts after scoring the first goal against England during their quarterfinal match at the 2007 FIFA Women's World Cup soccer tournament in Tianjin, China, Sept. 22, 2007. Wambach leads the United States into this summer's World Cup in Germany.

their next five opponents 12-3, including a 1-0 overtime victory against Brazil in the gold medal game. Even in a year when they've "struggled," the Americans have posted six shutouts in 11 games, and outscored opponents 23-8.

"I've talked with (teammates) about it, what everyone needs to do in order to win," Wambach said. "It comes down to playing well all the time and getting some lucky breaks. Really, luck plays so much into it. To win any championship in the world, you need some luck, too."

"What I do know is this team has the heart and the will and the desire to win."

Clean-up of Former Training Area 3
Kimama Training Site
Idaho Army National Guard
Lincoln County, ID - The Department of Defense (DoD) and the Idaho Army National Guard are in the process of completing a Remedial Investigation/Feasibility Study (RI/FS) for the former Training Area 3 at the Kimama Training Site (KTS) in accordance with the Military Munitions Response Program (MMRP). Historically, the DoD has conducted small arms training and maneuver exercises at the site. The former Training Area 3 has not been used by the Army since the early 1990s.
The Army will perform the following field activities as part of the RI/FS: 1) a non-intrusive visual survey to identify areas with evidence of past military-related training; 2) an intrusive investigation to determine the nature and extent if any, of subsurface anomalies within these areas; and 3) shallow soil sampling to determine the nature and extent of munitions constituents at the small arms ranges and areas with confirmed materials potentially presenting an explosive hazard. Information collected from these investigations will be used to characterize site conditions, assess the risks to human health and the environment, and evaluate remedial action alternatives. ## LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries and Regional fishery managers that, through June 19, weekly angler surveys indicate that about 60 percent of the State's harvest share of hatchery Chinook salmon greater than or equal to 24 inches total length (adults) returning to the Clearwater River drainage has been harvested. By June 27, anglers likely will have harvested 70 percent of the non-tribal harvest share of adult Chinook salmon returning to the Clearwater River drainage. The majority of that harvest is expected to occur in the North Fork Clearwater River and in the Clearwater River downstream of the Orofino Bridge.

To ensure opportunity for upstream communities, such as Orofino, Kamiah, Kooskia and Grangeville to harvest adult Chinook salmon, the Bureau of Fisheries recommends prohibiting retention of adult Chinook salmon in the Clearwater River fishery downstream of the Orofino Bridge and in the North Fork Clearwater River fishery effective at the close of legal fishing hours on June 26, 2011.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes the North Fork Clearwater River and the Clearwater River downstream of the Orofino Bridge to harvest of Chinook salmon greater than or equal to 24 inches total length effective at the close of legal fishing hours on June 26, 2011.

Copies of Order 11-23 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, ID 83707.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"We combat obstacles in order to get repose, and when got, the repose is insupportable."

— Henry Brooks Adams

In today's deal from last year's match between the Swedish and English women's teams from the European Championships, both declarers played six no-trump.

In the room not shown here, the Swedish declarer (North) ran into a challenging defense when Nevena Senior (East) found the spade lead, then shifted to a heart when she got in with the diamond queen. However, the declarer could have succeeded even then.

But let's say you receive a diamond lead (as did the English declarer), won by dummy's king. A reasonable plan would be to win the club ace and continue with a club to your hand. With the actual layout, you are rewarded by finding out that clubs are 5-1. When you cash the diamond ace and clear that suit, you might discard one card from each of dummy's majors.

East now probably plays back a heart (best for the defense), which you win with the ace, then play the spade ace and a spade to the king. Now you cash the two diamonds to reduce to a three-card ending, discarding the heart 10 and the club eight from dummy (unless West unguards that suit).

To retain two clubs, West will be able to keep just one heart. Now when a club is played to the king, East will likewise have to retain her spade queen and be reduced to one heart. So you will win the last two tricks with the king and eight of hearts.

ANSWER: You must look beyond the fact that you have a minimum in high cards. Instead, focus on the double fit for your side and your fifth trump, plus your singleton club. These three factors, taken together, mean you have more than enough in reserve to bid three spades — which, incidentally, is purely competitive and not a game-try.

AND BE SEEN!

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Ed," and I have been together for six years, married for two. This is the second marriage for both of us. We have children from our first marriages.

Ed works offshore. He's gone 21 days and here 21 days. The three weeks he's gone, I work, take care of the house and the kids, do the yard work, etc. When he comes home, I want him to myself the first weekend — I don't want to share him with his friends. I'd like to do fun things with him sometimes, just the two of us.

Ed says I have to understand his friends are important. He says I'm selfish and jealous. He doesn't show affection very well either (except behind closed doors), and I am a very affectionate person. Am I asking too much from him? I am considering counseling, but I'm unsure whether Ed would go.

— BORED AND LONELY IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR BORED AND LONELY: Counseling is an excellent idea, and if Ed won't go, you should go without him. Asking your husband to spend two days of one-on-one time with you when he returns from three weeks away isn't too much, and it's not selfish. He needs to reorganize his priorities and put you higher on the list than his buddies.

Affection is supposed to be spontaneous, and you shouldn't have to beg for it. What you describe going on behind closed doors sounds more like plain old sex and a whole lot less like affection. Unless your husband is willing to put more effort into your marriage, I can't see you living until death do you part on a starvation diet — and you can tell both your husband and your counselor I said so.

DEAR ABBY: I know you get many letters from people who are unemployed, depressed and don't know how to climb out of the funk. I was laid off from my management position three weeks after giving birth to my first child. Talk about depressing.

After several months of recovering from a difficult birth, I contacted my local SPCA and began volunteering. Not only do I help by feeding and cleaning the kitties, but I am using my professional skills to help them with photography, graphic design and fundraising. I'm still looking for work and getting occasional interviews. And in those interviews, potential employers always seem impressed with my volunteer work.

I'm writing to encourage anyone who is unemployed to find charitable organizations to work with. Offer your professional skills. It is something to get up for and do during the day. It also looks good on your resume and makes you feel great.

— UNPAID FOR NOW, BUT HAPPY IN CALIF.

DEAR HAPPY: That's a valuable suggestion, and thank you for it. At this point, 13.9 million Americans are unemployed. Many suffer from depression because, through no fault of their own, they have been unable to find jobs. When people feel embarrassed, frustrated and angry, they tend to isolate themselves, which doesn't help and can be unhealthy.

The more connections you make, the greater your chances for finding permanent employment, because in the final analysis it's all about people and relationships. I wish you luck in your job search. Whoever hires you will be lucky to have you.

IF JUNE 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Expect an extended period of popularity leading to romantic and career success in the year to come. Avoid taking on new responsibilities, getting involved with new partners or signing agreements or contracts during the last week of July or first week of August. A new job or relationship could turn your life upside down in late August or September. Wait to put your deepest desires into motion during the last week of September or first week of October if you want your enterprises to prosper. You are likely to experience good luck and could receive unexpected help during that time, so it is possible that crucial prayers will be answered.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dust off your discrimination. Some people just love the idea of being in love and aren't too picky about who or what they love. You should be cautious about relationships based on vague romantic notions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't buy the cow just to put cream in your coffee. It is easy to be attracted by the latest craze or to become enthused by the most recent social issue. Act sensibly in public and be sure to use common sense.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look for lasting treasures, not fleeting fads. Your friendly attitude that treats everyone fairly but formally might spark admiration from admirers — although not all honeyed words you hear are true.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Unless you are flying a kite and expect to have strings attached, avoid entering into new agreements or contracts. Romantic misunderstandings are possible so make sure you explain every step and detail.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Houston, you have a problem. Your highly original ideas might seem very alien to others. You may be accused of having your head in outer space if you try to lead a revolt against tried and true conventions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Let the past lead you to the future. Co-workers might provide unexpected amusement. You may have more fun talking about joint ambitions with a significant other than hitting the local watering holes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The ugly truth cannot be airbrushed out of the picture. You may be willing to overlook imperfections and inadequacies in order to meet someone who will fulfill your ideal of love and affection.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Fairy tales are fractured. You might meet a new admirer who has sipped a love potion and is ready to fall in love with the first person met. If you recall your fairy tales, think about how that worked out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Relax, unwind, clear your mind — and meditate. Amorous designs may be on the drawing board, but it is best to focus on existing relationships. A new connection formed now could prove troublesome.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People may seem sympathetic, but you might not know what they really think. Your best tactic under these stars is to keep new acquaintances at arm's length and treat everyone with equal respect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Darth Vader might be victorious. The Force will not be with you if you make amorous advances or initiate investments. On the other hand, you will do well in group settings or at community gatherings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It is only safe to do window shopping. An impetuous purchase or a new romantic alliance could prove unsatisfactory. Things that attract you this weekend may not last or turn out to be as advertised.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
