New law lets schools access employee files

Personnel records augment district background checks

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

In the past, when school employees wanted to move to a new district in Idaho, they would go through standard hiring practices: background checks, interviews and reference calls would be conducted.

But personnel files from former school districts were not allowed to be reviewed.

That changed on July 1 with a new law that requires school districts to share employee performance files with potential new employers. Now evaluations, any letters of reprimand and more information on employee performance will be available to new employers.

Districts aren't allowed to hire anyone from other Idaho districts without their consent to look through their files.

It's one more tool for school districts seeking to vet the people who teach Idaho's children. Last year, some districts began running potential hires through Idaho's free court-records database, a step that districts have to take themselves.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said the personnel files will be helpful when interviewing candidates.

"All districts can think of a time or two where they hired someone and didn't have the full information," Dobbs said. "This law is intended to give districts the full story about the person they are looking at hiring."

Even with background checks, employees' past work performance and history can be overlooked. Dobbs said the background checks are thorough, but knowing how people have interacted in their past jobs is helpful in deciding whether to hire them.

"We would just receive the dates from which they were employed," Dobbs said. "Districts have been skittish about saying too much because of potential lawsuits."

Cassia County schools chief Gaylen Smyer said his district routinely completes comprehensive background checks on its employees and said the new law won't make a large difference in its hiring practices.

The district reviewed those hiring practices last year after two incidents of teachers accused of sex crimes. One of them was Michael Scott Brinkerhoff, hired in 2006 as the Burley Junior High School English and drama teacher and sentenced last month to a one-year rehab program after pleading guilty to felony sex abuse of a minor under 16.

Smyer said that, in Brinkerhoff's case, the background checks didn't give the district reason not to hire him. The district's checks did miss a string of misdemeanor petit theft

T.F. Co. assessment appeals rise

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County's number of property assessment appeals more than doubled this year compared to last year — to about 113 people and companies — County Commissioner Terry Kramer said.

County residents have been making their cases to the commissioners all week, with the last of them scheduled for Monday.

Kramer thinks part of the reason for the jump was that assessments were based on values from almost a year prior, from Oct. 1, 2009, to Sept. 30, 2010.

Several people testified that assessors dropped their values after closer inspection, but that they still didn't agree with the final assessments.

State law assumes the assessor to be accurate, Kramer said.

Records of direct sales and for-a-fee appraisals have been major considerations for Kramer when he votes on whether to uphold the original assessment, he said.

Twin Falls County Assessor Gerry Bowden said there are three main ways to assess commercial properties: by the ability of the property to generate income, by what the property would go for on the free market, or by the costs of building and improving the property, adjusted for depreciation and inflation.

In a perfect world, Bowden said, all three come out to the same number. But in our imperfect world, the assessor's office gives extra weight to the evaluation method deemed most accurate.

In this week's appeals, several commercial property owners or their representatives disputed their assessments, arguing that an income-based evaluation would have been more accurate. Bowden doesn't take much issue with that because of the fluctuations in occupied rental units.

Simpson budget proposal trims EPA

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Every government budget proposal has its winners and losers.

In this one, the biggest loser would be the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, with a potential cut of $1.5 billion. Among the winners would be the U.S. Forest Service's wildland fire management fund, which would get $37 million more.

Both are in the budget proposal for the EPA, U.S. Interior Department and other natural-resources agencies for the coming fiscal year. The House Interior and the Environment Appropriations Subcommittee, chaired by U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, approved the bill on Thursday, sending it to the full House Appropriations Committee.

The bill has a double-barreled goal of trimming back on federal government spending while also making a slew of regulatory changes that supporters contend are needed for economic growth. Those run the gamut from a one-year prohibition on regulating greenhouse gases from factories to reducing the backlog of applications to graze on federal lands.

"This committee is taking meaningful steps to help put our country's fiscal house in order," Simpson said.

Overall, the subcommittee's $27.5 billion bill is 12 percent less than what President Barack Obama sought.

The EPA faces a potential 31 percent cut when factoring in a budget measure Congress passed in April.

"Some naysayers will no doubt try to portray Republicans as not supporting clean water, clean air, and a clean environment, but such

Golf Course Road signal delayed

Times-News

A project to install a new traffic signal at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and Golf Course Road has been delayed a couple of weeks, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

The delay in the work north of the Perrine Bridge is due to the late delivery of several key components, including the signal poles. The delivery date still wasn't certain Wednesday, and ITD cautioned the delay could run as long as one month.

The signal is being installed in response to increased traffic volumes and crashes. It will take about one month to put in place, including an additional northbound turn lane onto Golf Course Road and widening of that road.

Gordon Paving Inc., of Twin Falls, is the contractor for the $985,000 federally funded project.

But that method is also one his office doesn't have as much information on as they'd like.

Not for lack of trying: The assessor relies on businesses to submit the estimated income for their properties. This year, 2,700 questionnaires were sent out, assessor Andrew Humphries said. His office received about 170 back — 100 of which basically said

"none of your business," he said.

"The problem you have when very few people turn the form in is you are at the mercy of those who do," Bowden said.

Part of the reason for the lack of response, he said, is that the county formerly contracted out the income evaluations to a person who recently retired, leaving the assessor's office now doing the work itself.

assertions are simply untrue," Simpson said. "The reality is that the EPA has received unprecedented and unsustainable increases in recent years."

The bill would extend by five years a rider that allows the Bureau of Land Management to keep in place expiring grazing permits. That change will give cattlemen more time to complete environmental work that's required to renew grazing permits. Without the change, there's less certainty because the rider currently needs Congress' yearly reauthorization to extend an expired grazing permit.

The bill also makes it easier for the BLM to transfer grazing permits with less red tape, a measure aimed at reducing the backlog of applications.

He pointed to trims to EPA programs that provide grants to local communities for clean water needs as an example.

A Jackpot kid's long odyssey to death row

There are 3,260 inmates awaiting execution in the United States, and one of them is from the Magic Valley.

He's Robert Allen Poyson, 34, sentenced to death in Arizona in 1998 after being convicted of murdering three people in August 1996. He was born in Twin Falls and grew up in Jackpot.

According to court records, Poyson was a 19-year-old drifter who befriended a 15-year-old boy in Kingman, Ariz. The boy's mother, Leta Kagen, invited Poyson to stay in their trailer home, along with two hitchhikers: 48-year-old Frank Anderson and his 14-year-old girlfriend, Kimberly Lane. Anderson wanted to go to Chicago, so he, Poyson and Lane hatched a plan to kill Kagen, her son Robert Delahunt, and another man living in the trailer, Roland Wear, and steal Wear's truck.

On the evening of Aug. 13, Lane lured Delahunt into a small trailer on the property on the pretext of having sex.

YOU DON'T SAY
Steve Crump

Anderson slit the boy's throat with a bread knife and Poyson bashed the victim's head against the floor and pounded him with a rock. That didn't kill Delahunt, so Poyson picked up the bread knife and drove it through the teenager's ear and into his nose. That too, failed to dispatch the victim, so Poyson continued to smash Delahunt's head against the floor. Forensic pathologists testified it took Delahunt 45 minutes to die.

Poyson found Wear's .22-caliber rifle, borrowed ammunition from a neighbor and shot Kagen in the head as she slept, killing her instantly. He then shot Wear in the mouth, but the wound wasn't fatal. In the struggle that followed, Poyson beat Wear with the butt of the rifle, kicked him in the head and then picked up a cinder block to finish the job.

Arrested 10 days later in an Evanston, Ill., homeless shelter, Poyson was eventually convicted in Arizona of three counts of first-degree murder, one count of conspiracy to commit murder and one count of armed robbery. Anderson and Lane were also convicted of the murders, and Anderson is also on Arizona's death row.

In the landmark 2002 case Ring vs. Arizona, the U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the death penalty law under which Poyson was sentenced because it allowed judges — and not juries — to impose capital punishment. The Arizona Legislature subsequently changed its death penalty statute to comply with the Supreme Court mandate.

In a post on the website of the anti-capital punishment advocacy group Canadian Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Poyson describes an abusive childhood in Jackpot and serving stretches in the Nevada Youth Training Center for Boys in Elko; the Caliente, Nev., Youth Center, and from 1992-94 at the Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections Center in St. Anthony. He was released when he turned 18.

"All my life I used excuses for why I did what I did and blamed a lot of people but after you've been locked down like I am and have to face the possibilities of dying soon, you begin to think and evaluate your life and you realize that it's no one's fault but your own," Poyson wrote on the CCADP site.

"You see, it was hard for me to see and face my problems. So I began getting into trouble. It was the rush I got when I got away with it but that got old so I went up the drug chain. I avoided the one thing that I should have faced: responsibility."

Arizona executed child killer Richard Bible on June 30. No execution date has been set for Poyson.

Idaho man injured in ultralight crash

Elko Daily Free Press

JACKPOT, Nev. — An Idaho man attempting to land his ultralight aircraft crashed at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Jackpot (Nev.) Airport, according to the Elko County Sheriff's Office.

Sheriff's detective Cpl. James Carpenter said Jesse Kindred, 68, of Kimberly, struck a radar power box near the runway.

Carpenter said Kindred was traveling at 30 mph about 11 feet from the ground when a wind gust blew the ultralight to the side and the right wing struck the box. Kindred sustained minor injury to his arm and chest as the aircraft landed. The ultralight and power box received major damage.

Kindred was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls by Jackpot Ambulance.

Prosecutor slaps man with 40 counts of child porn

Times-News

Twin Falls County prosecutors have charged a Kimberly man with 40 felonies after police claim to have found child pornography on his computer.

Donald Morris, 44, was arrested in June on dozens of counts of possession of sexually exploitative material of a minor.

He was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on Thursday.

According to the police report, a private citizen and an area pawn shop owner turned over three computers, allegedly containing child pornography, to police in November and December. Twin Falls police had the computers analyzed by the FBI lab in Boise in late January as investigators built a case.

The report also claims

Morris admitted to possessing child pornography to police.

A warrant for Morris' arrest was issued on June 10, and he was taken into custody nine days later. He is held on $50,000 bond, and a preliminary hearing is set for July 15.

Burley man convicted again after appeal

By Laurie Welch

RUPERT — A Minidoka County jury found David Leon Johnson guilty Wednesday of two counts of felony lewd conduct with a child, after the Idaho Supreme Court overturned his original 2006 convictions due to the use of "prior bad acts" evidence used in the first trial.

"This was a really tough case because by the time it went to trial this time, the case was seven years old," said Lance Stevenson, Minidoka County prosecutor.

Johnson

— Lance Stevenson, Minidoka County prosecutor

was sentenced in October 2006 to serve two concurrent prison terms of 20 years, with five years before he was eligible for parole in each case. At the time, the Minidoka County prosecutor was Jason Walker.

The Supreme Court vacated the conviction in February 2010 and sent the case back to Minidoka County. Johnson was freed until his re-conviction.

The charges were overturned based on federal rules of evidence that prevent prior crimes or wrongdoings from being used as evidence of character to convict someone of a crime, without proof of motive or a common scheme or plan.

Stevenson said it was up to his office to determine if enough evidence remained to retry the case.

According to Idaho Supreme Court documents, Johnson was originally convicted for molesting his 6-year-old daughter in 2004 when he had sole custody of her over spring break. In his appeal, he objected to the admission of evidence showing he molested his little sister when he was a teenager.

Johnson also appealed other admitted testimony that his daughter only thought he had abused her because she accidentally observed him watching pornography and engaging in a solitary sexual act.

In a separate case, Stevenson said his office has not decided yet whether to re-charge James F. Pepcorn Sr. after the Idaho Court of Appeals vacated his convictions on charges of rape and lewd conduct with a child under 16 based on the same rules of evidence. Stevenson said the case differs from the Johnson case because the court upheld two other Pepcorn convictions for lewd conduct and sex abuse and he will remain in prison regardless.

Pepcorn, who is now in his 70s, is serving a life sentence for the upheld lewd conduct charge and will become eligible for parole in 2028, according to the Idaho Department of Correction. He received 15 years on the sex abuse conviction.

Pepcorn taught school in Cassia County from 1966 until he retired in 1994 and was a Boy Scout and church leader. The criminal charges stemmed from incidents involving now-adult family members between 1992 and 1995, but testimony was allowed from other alleged victims spanning back 30 years.

Stevenson said cases are being overturned across the state due to the evidence rules, likely changing how prosecutors look at evidence going into trial.

"We will be looking at evidence we used to submit into court with a different eye," Stevenson said.

Taking these cases to court a second time will have a financial impact on county coffers, he said. It also means victims have to relive the crime once again.

District turns to fish to keep down mosquitoes

By Kimberlee Kruesi
Times-News writer

Usually when you catch a fish, it's yours to feast on. Lucky for bluegill, the opposite is true in Twin Falls County.

The Twin Falls County Pest Abatement District has caught hundreds of bluegill to release into county ponds. The newly placed fish are being moved to feed on mosquito-infested waters.

"We use bluegill because it's a local and cheap way of keeping pest problems down," said Kirk Tubbs, TFCPAD manager. "They work for free, even on weekends and holidays. This is a great option when some of the chemicals we use cost $300 a bag."

The pest district has been treating for mosquitoes since early spring. Mosquitoes and black flies are expected to hit record population levels since water levels have allowed dormant eggs to hatch.

So, to combat the pests, TFCPAD employees and a handful of volunteers spent Thursday morning in Dierkes Lake collecting bluegill. Workers waded out into the lake and walked their way back to shore with a net in the water, corralling the fish into the net.

"We use a small mesh net so it's still gentle on the fish," said Aaron Ursenbach, a summer TFCPAD employee. "We try to keep the stress levels of the fish as low as possible."

Kirk Tubbs holds a bluegill Thursday morning before it was removed from Dierkes Lake near Twin Falls.

One net can catch up to more than 100 bluegill. This is a mere drop in the bucket when it comes to the total number of the fish in the lake right now, Ursenbach said.

"When we were up here the other day, the water looked like it was boiling from the amount of fish we caught on the first try," he said.

Once to the shore, the remaining workers quickly measured and moved the fish into buckets. The buckets were then transported to a holding tank. The tank will store the fish until they are released in 10 different ponds.

"Ideally we want small, young bluegill," Tubbs said. "That way they have a longer life expectancy in the ponds. Also, the smaller the fish, the easier it is to swim up to where the mosquito larva is hidden."

The pest district caught and released bluegill last year. The relocation was part of a study to determine the effectiveness of using the fish to control mosquito populations.

In ponds that were stocked with bluegill last year, the numbers of mosquito went down. In some ponds, mosquito larvae were reduced to 24 percent of their original numbers.

"It's hard to compare year-to-year since we never have the same conditions twice, but we're going to study the larva levels anyways," Tubbs said.

Some of the volunteers came from the College of Southern Idaho.

While taking a summer online biology course, Jenna Vulamore is required to complete a research project that involves field work. She was given a list of possible options but the TFCPAD was the only group that would allow her to participate in a project.

"This was the first place to say yes," Vulamore said. "I'm a business major so I was a little hesitant at first but it's been pretty interesting so far."

How about putting cops in Jerome under one roof?

There’s no question that the city of Jerome needs a different building to house its police station.
But does it really need to ask for it on Nov. 8?

That’s also the day Jerome County will make its fourth attempt at a bond issue to build a new jail to replace the sagging, 37-year-old lockup on the verge of being closed by insurers as a liability hazard.

The Jerome County commissioners have bent over backward to take lessons learned from the three previous bond issue failures and incorporate them into a cheaper, leaner design.

But no matter how cheap and how lean, it’s doubtful that Jerome County voters who live within the city would say yes to two spending proposals in the same election. Both the police station and the jail stand a better chance if one issue is on the ballot on Nov. 8 and the other in the first half of 2012.

Yet maybe this doesn’t need to be an either/or proposition.

How about a single building to accommodate both the sheriff’s office and the Jerome Police Department? That doesn’t necessarily mean the two couldn’t continue to operate independently of each other; it just means they would share a facility expressly designed for law enforcement.

Although planning for the jail is far advanced, perhaps the commissioners and the council members should at least discuss a joint venture before either the city or the county goes to the voters asking for money.

The worst scenario, it seems to us, would be competing ballot measures come November. That would be likely to make both the city’s and the county’s law enforcement dilemmas more acute.

The jail, it seems to us, is the higher priority because the cost of its closure would affect every taxpayer in the county.

Jerome County is spending upwards of $20,000 a month now to house inmates elsewhere because there isn’t enough room in the jail. If the lockup is closed, all of its prisoners would have to be sent elsewhere at a cost of almost $1 million a year.

That’s in addition to the tab for county deputies spending time on the road ferrying inmates to and from outsourced jails in Gooding, Hailey and Soda Springs to court dates in Jerome.

What’s more, the current facility is a security risk — and the greatest risk is to residents of the city of Jerome.

All of which is not to understate the urgency to find another building to house the city police station.

The current building, which dates from the 1920s and was formerly used as a telephone exchange, has no room for expansion. Cramped offices line the station’s hallway.

The partially underground structure has leaky walls and a flat roof that drips, even with repairs.

On Tuesday, the Jerome City Council approved a plan to pay a $20,000 refundable deposit to hold a building along the 800 block of East Main Street, with the option to buy it for $355,000 if the bond issue passes muster with voters. The building sought was formerly office space for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

City officials concede the real need is for a new police station. The old Fish and Game office, they estimate, would tide the police department over for about a decade.

That’s a short-term solution to a bigger problem, and both the city and the county need to be part of that conversation.

Imagine if you will — the Twitter Zone

I knew I should have been out eating charred meat or watching a bad Michael Bay movie.

But I couldn’t help myself. Every July Fourth weekend, I get sucked into the spooky little dimension of The Twilight Zone. As the annual Syfy marathon proves, Rod Serling’s hypnotic show is as relevant as ever.

Maureen Dowd

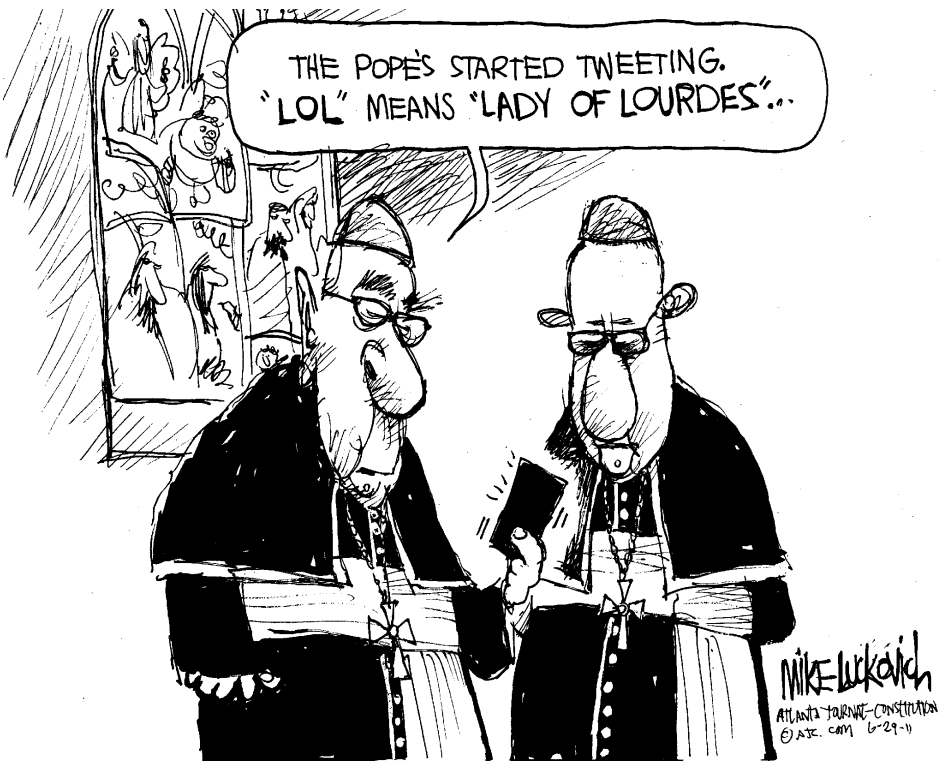

If Anthony Weiner had watched it, he might have been more aware of how swiftly, and chillingly, our technology can turn on us. Prosecutors and reporters, dumbfounded by dramatic reversals in the cases of tabloid villains D.S.K. and Casey Anthony, might do well to keep in mind Serling’s postmodern mantra: Nothing is what it seems.

Agnes Moorehead may seem to be a lonely farm-woman under attack by scary little robots, but after she kills them and takes an ax to their spaceship, it turns out that she’s the scary Amazon alien and the little men were U.S. astronauts from Earth.

ENSORCELLED once more by that inimitable, smoke-filled Serling voice, which is reassuring and unnerving at once, I wondered how the ingenious TV writer would have used social media and search engines in his plots. Given the way Serling treated time travel, space odysseys, robots and aliens, the 21st-century technology giants would probably have been ominous in one narrative and benign in another. (Just like in life.)

No doubt some characters would have been saved and others destroyed by Twitter, Facebook and Google.

“When you look at Twilight Zone episodes, everything is ambivalent,” said Serling’s friend Doug Brode, who, along with Serling’s widow, Carol, wrote Rod

Serling and The Twilight Zone: The 50th Anniversary Tribute, published in 2009. “Rod had an open mind to the good, the bad and the in-between of technology. He was a guarded optimist until the Kennedy assassination. After that, his work reflected his sense of hopelessness.”

He said that Serling’s father, a middle-class grocer, lost his business in the Depression, so Rod had an early lesson in reversals. Serling also had a devastating experience while serving in World War II. During a lull at the Battle of Leyte Gulf in the Pacific, he was standing with his arm around a good friend and they were having their picture taken. At that moment, an Air Force plane dropped a box of extra ammunition that landed on Serling’s friend and flattened him so fatally that he couldn’t even be seen under the box.

“Many Zone episodes are about that split-second of fate where somebody arbitrarily gets spared or, absurdly, does not,” Brode said.

Serling himself lived a reversal, going from a trailer park after the war and 40 rejection slips in a row to having a big Hollywood house and a pool. But he grew disdainful of Babylon’s corrupting materialism and moved back to a cottage on Cayuga Lake in upstate New York. Serling fought furiously against censorship and ads, asking how you could write meaningful drama when it was interrupted every 15 minutes by “12 dancing rabbits with toilet paper?”

In one Twilight Zone, an inept screenwriter conjures up Shakespeare to help him. The Bard produces a dazzling screenplay but then storms out when the sponsor demands a lot of revisions.

Did Serling, who had a searing sense of social and racial justice, believe in God?

“Not Charlton Heston sitting on a cloud with the Ten Commandments, but absolutely, as a force in the universe, he did,” Brode said. “Nearly 35 years ago, George Lucas told me that the whole concept of the Force comes from Rod Serling.”

It’s impossible not to watch a stretch of the endlessly inventive Serling and not notice how many of his plots have been ripped off for movies, and how ahead of his time he was. In a popular new Samsung ad, a young woman jumps up from the lunch table and begins screaming because the tarantula screensaver on her colleague’s phone is so lifelike; another guy at the table takes off his shoe and smashes it.

There’s a Twilight Zone episode where a Western gunfighter time travels forward and goes into a bar, where he sees a TV with a cowboy coming toward him. Thinking it’s real, he pulls out his pistol and shoots the screen.

Looking at this summer’s lame crop of movies and previews you can appreciate Serling’s upbraiding of the entertainment industry for “our mediocrity, our imitativeness, our commercialism and, all too frequently, our deadening and deadly lack of creativity and courage.”

The Twilight Zone was never high in the ratings, and Serling died at 50 from the ravages of smoking six packs a day. He felt like a sellout and failure. He had sold syndication rights for his show to CBS for a few million, thinking he had not written anything of lasting value.

Sadly, he gave himself a trick ending. He died never realizing how influential he would be.

The data-reporting mess in Idaho schools

It was upsetting to me to see the Idaho Association of School Business Officials report on the ISEE, the longitudinal data system for K-12 education. Those most intimately involved with the management of our schools found a difficult-to-use system containing inaccurate data.

They felt that they had had to divert an inordinate amount of already scarce resources to work with the system. They requested that the state Department of Education “slow down,” iron out the errors and bugs and make the system usable, before pushing its greater use. And they are frustrated with an implementation process that has been plagued by problems — little training and inadequate support by the department.

It was very reminiscent of what I was hearing (and still am hearing) about the Idaho Medicaid claims system last summer. Widespread and costly errors, a poor transition process, little help desk support and, as a result, a fiasco for the department, private sector businesses who provide Medicaid services, and the many Idahoans who rely on those services.

READER COMMENT

In both cases, there’s no question that a new system was sorely needed. In both cases similar systems and changes had been implemented elsewhere by the vendor. What was different here?

I submit that the state, Health and Welfare and the Idaho Department of Education were in over their heads. They were ill-equipped to manage a major system change. Financial constraints and staff reduction decisions, poorly written contracts, or simply “not knowing what they didn’t know,” made the projects more expensive and difficult and resulted in an inferior and unacceptable result.

Such bungling of major initiatives is likely to continue. We rely on a department team that only sees part of the whole, is often inexperienced in system and process change, and is often comprised of personnel who are intermittent due to turnover. We are hesitant to involve stakeholders and end users appropriately, we purchase services from entities who can’t deliver or whom we can’t properly manage, and we are driven by “budget” limitations rather than by quality and results, and set timelines based on externalities (i.e. federal reporting requirements or fiscal calendars) rather than reality.

These two areas (Medicaid, K-12 education) are the largest parts of our state budget, together totaling more than $2 billion each year. These are mission-critical applications. And in many ways, they are foundational to the future strategies of those areas. We need accurate claims and membership data to do Medicaid medical management and contracting to bring costs in line. Albertson Foundation is proposing a $25 million expansion of ISEE into a robust reporting and management package. Not to mention that the Luna Plan calls for changes in performance evaluation, compensation of teachers, technology and online course requirements estimated at up to $60 million per year.

The great irony here is in the oft-heard Republican mantra, “We need to run government like a business.”

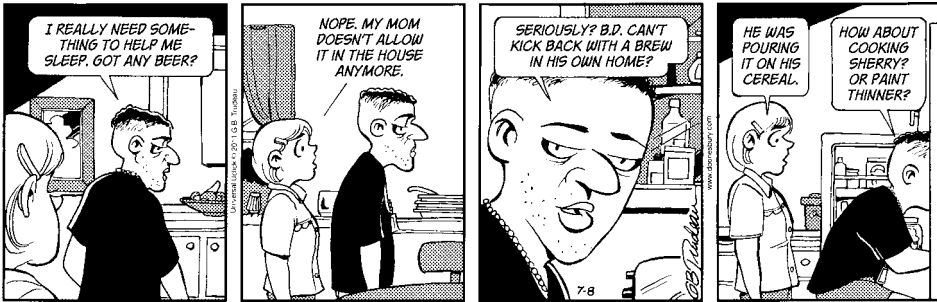

No self-respecting business would ever tolerate the sorts of troubled implementations that we’ve seen at two of our state’s largest agencies. Ultimately, we need to run government like a well-run government — efficient, responsive, fiscally responsible, and accountable. But the calamitous implementation of these high-profile projects suggests such management and leadership is absent. And that’s unacceptable for a business or a government.

No matter how bad it might make the governor or the superintendent look to slow down and wait to get things right, it is better for the state and her citizens to do so. Otherwise we will be compounding the errors and end up with much less than the citizens want and deserve, having paid much more than we can afford.

John Rusche of Lewiston, the Democratic leader in the Idaho House of Representatives, has represented Nez Perce County since 2005.

Otter, Luna reverse stance on storage business

By John Miller
Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna say they erred last year when they voted to spend $2.7 million to buy a storage business whose revenue benefits Idaho public schools and other state institutions.

As Idaho Land Board members, they voted in a unanimous decision to use proceeds from the previous sale of parcels from Idaho’s endowment land portfolio to add Affordable Self-Storage in Boise to its investments.

The business is run by a private contractor, but storage industry officials and some conservatives cried foul, accusing Idaho of competing with the private sector. Nearly a year later, Otter and Luna say they now agree — and that their original vote in August was a mistake.

“Superintendent Luna does not support the state competing with the private sector in the storage business or any other kind of business,” said Luna’s spokeswoman, Melissa McGrath, adding that he’s since become “disappointed in his vote and will work with the Land Board to explore selling Affordable Storage.”

Through spokesman Jon Han-ian, Otter said he shares that senti-ment.

But the remaining three of the five Land Board members who oversee the endowment remain convinced their 2010 decision was appropriate, despite controversy.

Attorney General Lawrence Wasden, Secretary of State Ben Ysursa and Controller Donna Jones said separately they believe the en-dowment’s purchase still makes business sense — and fulfills their responsibility to maximize earn-ings, a requirement dating to the drafting of the Idaho Constitution.

For instance, the storage busi-ness generated about $30,000 in annual taxes when it was private; it now generates $20,000 per month, an annual rate of return of nearly 9 percent, with the pro-ceeds being distributed statewide.

Even if Otter and Luna are enter-taining selling the business, the majority formed by Wasden, Ysursa and Jones said they’d only consider it if the alternative im-proved endowment returns, not to fulfill a philosophical goal of di-vesting the disputed holdings.

They point out that Idaho’s en-dowment, which generates about $48 million annually to benefit schools, universities and colleges, prisons, and mental hospitals, holds many timberlands and com-mercial properties that also com-pete with private forestry compa-nies and the owners of leasing property.

“Our number one responsibility, as trustees, we have a duty of undi-vided loyalty to the beneficiaries,” Ysursa said Thursday, while con-ceding, “I’m sure we’re going to hear more about this.”

During the 2011 Legislature, Re-publicans unhappy with the Af-fordable Self-Storage deal unsuc-cessfully floated a bill to prevent Land Board members from making such purchases — and to force them to unload operating busi-nesses on endowment land. Rep. John Vander Woude, R-Meridian, said Thursday he believes endow-ment-owned businesses enjoy an unfair advantage over private com-petitors.

“They don’t pay property taxes, they don’t pay for any of the serv-ices like fire and police, and yet they still get it all,” he said. “My biggest fear is, they want to start trading off a lot of their forest ground and cottage sites, and put that into commercial.”

The bill stalled, but the issue is far from dead: A 16-member inter-im legislative committee, co-chaired by Republican Sen. Monty Pearce of New Plymouth, will meet on the matter later this summer, likely in late August.

“We’re going to look into the story, we’re going to talk about it, we’re going to listen and we’re go-ing to haul off and decide what to do from there,” Pearce told The AP, adding that education groups are due to participate.

Park: Bear in mauling only protecting cubs

By Matt Volz
Associated Press

YELLOWSTONE NA-TIONAL PARK, Wyo. — A grizzly bear that mauled a 57-year-old hiker to death in Yellowstone National Park was only defending its cubs and had not threatened hu-mans before. So park offi-cials on Thursday decided to leave it alone to wander the backcountry.

The mauling — the park’s first in 25 years — temporari-ly closed one of the park’s top attractions, the south rim of the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, on one of the busiest days of the year. Some tourists were left to wonder what was going on.

“It was not predatory and so we see no reason to take action against the bear,” said Kerry Gunther, bear man-agement biologist for Yel-lowstone.

The attack also highlight-ed the potential dangers, however rare, that face tourists who come in record numbers each year to a park known for its burgeoning bear population and the Old Faithful geyser.

Whenever there is a run-in or attack involving bears, park officials must decide whether the attack was de-fensive or an act of aggres-sion. In Wednesday’s maul-ing, they based their conclu-sion on the account of the hiker’s wife, who survived, as well as their knowledge of bear behavior.

Brian and Marylyn Matayoshi, of Torrance, Calif., were hiking in a back-country meadow along a trail a mile and a half from the trailhead when they spotted the bear foraging about 100 yards away. The couple immediately turned and began walking away, of-ficials said.

The grizzly charged and attacked Brian Matayoshi, then went for his wife, who ran for cover behind a tree. The grizzly lifted her off the ground by the day pack she was wearing and then dropped her.

She tried to call 911 on her cellphone, but couldn’t get a signal. Other hikers in the area responded to her cries for help and managed to get through to emergency offi-cials.

Marylyn Matayoshi told rescuers that the couple sur-prised the sow, its cubs nearby — one of the most dangerous situations possi-ble for humans encounter-ing grizzlies. Park officials believe the grizzly had two six-month-old cubs, based on previous sightings in the area and cub tracks where the attack occurred.

“All indications are that this was a defensive attack,” park spokesman Al Nash said. “In such cases, the park’s policy is to leave the bear in the backcountry.”

The bear had never been documented before, never been tagged, and there was no reason to believe it had interacted with humans be-fore, Nash said. They said the way the attack happened indicated the bear didn’t in-tend to eat the couple.

Marylyn Matayoshi es-caped injury and was no longer at the park, and offi-cials declined to reveal her whereabouts.

In Torrance, neighbor Kathy Hester said Matayoshi and his wife kept their house immaculate and recently had put in a new lawn. “They are the sweetest peo-ple you’d ever want to meet,” Hester said.

Park officials called the mauling a “1-in-3-million” encounter.

While many visitors Thursday morning were un-aware of the attack, many seemed to know about it by the afternoon. Desk clerks at hotels inside the park told new arrivals that there had been a bear mauling. Wor-ried relatives called or texted other visitors.

Some were surprised that rangers didn’t let them know when they entered the park that there had been an attack and that some trails were closed.

“They didn’t say one word about it at the gate,” said Leslie Finch, visiting with her husband and two chil-dren for two days from Mis-soula, Mont. “I would have thought they’d say this area is closed. But they didn’t say anything.”

Sheryl Crow to help group fight Nev. horse roundup

Days on July 22.

RENO, Nev. — Singer, songwriter Sheryl Crow says she’ll donate part of the profits from an upcom-ing concert in Wyoming to a wild horse protection group that is suing the govern-ment to try to stop a big mustang roundup in Neva-da.

Crow says the Colorado-based Cloud Foundation will get a share of the gate from her show with Kid Rock at Cheyenne Frontier

The Grammy Award winner who grew up in Missouri says she shares the foundation’s dedication to the preservation of wild horses on public lands.

The group’s lawyers are due in federal court in Reno on Thursday. They’re trying to win an emergency in-junction to block the Bu-reau of Land Management’s roundup of 1,700 mustangs scheduled to begin next weekend along the Nevada-Utah line.

Casey Anthony's sentence allows her to go free on July 17

By Matt Sedensky
and Kyle Hightower
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Casey Anthony looked ready for freedom. For the first time since her trial began, she let her hair down, smiling and playing with it as she awaited the judge's decision on when she would be released.

Then she turned stone-faced as the sentence was pronounced: Freedom would not come just yet. She'd have to spend six more days in jail for lying to investigators about the death of her 2-year-old daughter, Caylee.

Late Thursday, Orange County corrections officials said they had "conducted a detailed recalculation of the projected release date" and that Anthony would actually not be freed until July 17.

Thursday's actions mean Anthony will go free nearly two weeks after she was acquitted Tuesday of first-degree murder and other charges in Caylee's death.

The extra time in jail did little to satisfy throngs of angry people convinced of her guilt who gathered outside the courthouse. But it could provide time for the public furor over her acquittal to ease somewhat and give Anthony's attorneys a chance to plan for her safety.

Two days after the verdicts, most of the jury remained silent, with their names still kept secret by the court. One juror explained that the panel agreed to acquit Anthony because prosecutors did not show what happened to the toddler.

When she is released, the 25-year-old Anthony must decide whether to return to a community in which many onlookers long ago concluded that she's a killer, or to a home strained by her defense attorneys' accusations of sexual abuse.

Judge Belvin Perry gave her the maximum sentence of four years for four convictions of lying to authorities. He denied a defense request to combine the misdemeanor counts, which could have made her eligible for immediate release.

"As a result of those four specific, distinct lies, law enforcement expended great time and resources looking for Caylee Marie Anthony," the judge said.

With time served and credit for good behavior, she is now due out on July 17, her 1,007th day in jail.

Anthony

Outside the courthouse, a cluster of protesters chanted "Justice for Caylee" as they waved signs that said "Arrest the Jury!!" and "Jurors 1-12 Guilty of Murder." One man had duct tape with a heart-shaped sticker over his mouth, similar to the way prosecutors contend duct tape was used to kill Caylee. Increased police presence included officers on horseback.

"At least she won't get to pop the champagne cork tonight," said Flora Reece, an Orlando real estate broker who stood outside the courthouse holding a sign that read "Arrest the Jury."

Anthony's parents were present for the hearing but left without speaking to reporters. Prosecutors and defense attorneys did not comment either.

Anger continued to spread online, with commenters vilifying Anthony on social media networks. Nearly 22,000 people "liked" the "I hate Casey Anthony" page on Facebook, which included comments wishing her the same fate that befell Caylee.

The potential for Anthony to profit off the case was infuriating to many who said they feared she could become rich by selling her story to publishers or filmmakers or signing a lucrative television contract.

Gov’t eases foreclosure rules for unemployed

Qualified individuals may go a year without making monthly payment

By Derek Kravitz
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration is making it easier for out-of-work homeowners to stay in their homes, as it tries to re-vamp its troubled foreclosure-prevention program.

Starting Aug. 1, the Federal Housing Administration will extend the period for unemployed homeowners to miss mortgage payments to a full year from three or four months. That will allow qualified homeowners to go without making a monthly payment for 12 months before the foreclosure process begins.

The extended grace period only applies to FHA-backed loans, which are usually given to low- and middle-income borrowers and represent about 14 percent of all active mortgages and roughly 25 percent of new mortgages, and homeowners in the government’s Home Affordable Modification Program.

But the change will likely only help “tens of thousands” of homeowners, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Shaun Donovan said Thursday.

Last year, roughly 17,000 homeowners received a government-supported delay on their mortgage payments. About 3,500 borrowers with FHA-insured loans fall behind on their mortgages each month due to unemployment, officials said, and another 10,000 unemployed homeowners have taken advantage of a three-month delay in mortgage payments in the past year.

Donovan said administration officials hope private lenders and government-controlled mortgage companies Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, which back 90 percent of all new mortgages, will adopt a similar policy.

“Our hope is that this will have broader effects,” Donovan said during a conference call.

Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac had no initial comment on Donovan’s push for a broader, industry-wide grace period for the unemployed.

But new rules going into effect Oct. 1 for the mortgage giants to allow for long-term forbearance when a home or a place of unemployment has been destroyed; if BOISE — The women sat expectantly as Monica Knight told them she once routinely spent $600 a month on groceries for her family of four. Breaking into a broad smile, Knight says that figure has been reduced to only $100 to $150 a month.

And now the dental hygienist and mother of two is about to tell them her secret.

The women lean forward in their seats. They’re the latest disciples of extreme couponing; women who carry pictures of their overflowing pantries on their cell phones; savvy shoppers who will spend hours flipping through newspaper and magazine advertisements in search of their bargains, and homemakers who have pinched pennies to put food on the table during the recession and need the extra help.

Most have watched the television series “Extreme Couponing,” which debuted on TLC in April and follows shoppers whose intense devotion to finding bargains can whittle a $555.44 grocery store bill down to $5.97, to cite one extreme example.

Heather Border, a 36-year-old mother of four in rural Idaho, is a new to the extreme coupon phenomenon. But she was hooked a few weeks ago, after coupons and store deals brought her $180 grocery bill down to $40.

“I was feeling a little conspicuous because people were staring at me,” Border said. “Then, I felt a rush.”

She was among about 20 women who attended an extreme coupon class on a recent Saturday in Boise. The three-hour course was taught by Knight and her business partner, Cathy Yoder. They own the extreme couponing blog, “Fabulessly Frugal.”

The women oohed and awed as Knight pulled out the fat binder of coupons that saves her 50 percent to 90 percent on every grocery bill. She showed off pictures

LINGO FOR EXTREME COUPONING

Devotes of extreme couponing have their own lingo:

- Peelies — Peel off coupons that are found on product at the grocery store.
- Blinkies — Coupon machines that are found in the grocery store aisles and have blinking lights to grab the attention of shoppers.
- Catalinas — A printable coupon that is handed with a receipt at check-out.
- Stacking — When two coupons, one from the store and one from the manufacturer, are used to purchase a product.

Heyburn man appointed to commission

Times-News

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter has appointed Ned Moon, of Heyburn, to the Idaho Wheat Commission.

Moon will represent wheat growers in the Magic and Treasure valleys as one of five commission members. The commission is made up of wheat growers in Idaho and exists to market Idaho wheat outside the state, do research for and educate wheat growers in the state.

Moon, a retired captain in the Air Force, grew up on a Heyburn farm and now works as the marketing manager for Jentzsch-Kearl Farms, a 16,000-acre partnership that grows potatoes, sugar beets, wheat, hay and seed beans.

“Ned brings a wealth of marketing and business experience to the Idaho Wheat Commission,” commission Chairman Gordon Gallup said in a statement provided by the governor’s office.

In the statement, Moon said it is “a privilege and an honor” to represent the wheat growers in his district. He said his goal on the commission is to see that it continues to improve profit margins for state wheat farmers.

Grisly labels not so scary for cigarette sales

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The nation’s top tobacco companies’ sales aren’t expected to go up in smoke despite new grisly warning labels that are set to appear on U.S. cigarettes packs next year.

The graphic labels, which were released in June by the Food and Drug Administration and include an image of rotting teeth and gums, will cause a decline of less than one percent in overall U.S. tobacco revenues in 2013, according to a recent analysis by research firm IBISWorld.

An average person smokes fifteen cigarettes a day at a cost of about $1,500 per year, which translates to about $300 million in lost revenue. That’s only a fraction of the estimated $43.8 billion in revenue for the tobacco industry in 2013, the firm’s calculation show.

The analysis, however, does not take into account the cost of re-designing and printing new cigarette packages, the number of people who won’t start smoking because of the warnings, or the smokers who cut down on their habit.

“Gradually, the warnings could impact the smoking population,” said IBISWorld cigarette and tobacco industry analyst Mary Gotaas. “But in the near term, it won’t have much of an impact.”

The nine warning labels are required by federal law to take up half of the pack — both front and back — by the fall of 2012. The labels, which represent the biggest change in cigarette packs in the U.S. in 25 years, also include images of the corpse of a dead smoker, diseased lungs, a smoker wearing an oxygen mask and a man wearing an “I Quit” T-shirt.

The warnings must also appear in advertisements and constitute 20 percent of each ad, and cigarette makers will have to run all nine labels on a rotating basis. The FDA estimates that the labels will cut

Oil, gas on the rise again

The Associated Press

A funny thing happened on the way to lower oil and gasoline prices: They went up.

Two weeks after the U.S. and other oil-importing nations took action that knocked down the price of oil to almost $90 a barrel, it’s back around $100. And gas pump prices, which had dropped since May, are up about a nickel since Friday.

Oil is rising again as investors bet that the economies of many countries, including the U.S., will improve in the second half of the year, and global demand for petroleum will rise.

Benchmark oil for August delivery rose $2.02, or 2.1 percent, to settle at $98.67 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Brent crude gained $4.97, or 4.4 percent, to settle at $118.59 per barrel on the ICE Futures exchange.

Higher oil prices mean higher gas prices. The national average pump price rose 1.4 cents on Thursday to $3.583 a gallon.

Police: Michigan shootings suspect commits suicide

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — A gunman opened fire in two Michigan homes Thursday, killing seven people before leading police on a high-speed chase through downtown Grand Rapids and taking three hostages. The standoff ended when he killed himself with a gunshot to the head, authorities said. The hostages were released unharmed. Authorities did not have a motive for the suspect, 34-year-old Rodrick Shonte Dantzler, or disclose his exact relationship with those he killed. The manhunt for Dantzler began after four people were found dead in one home and three were discovered in another across town. Two of the dead were children. “We believe there were prior relationships with at least one person at each location, so we think there were some difficulties there,” Police Chief Kevin Belk said. Following the discovery of the bodies, Dantzler led officers on a chase, crashed his car and then took the hostages, police said.

Dozens of officers with guns drawn cordoned off a neighborhood near a small lake in the northern part of the city and shut down nearby Interstate 96. Records show Dantzler was released from state prison in 2005 after serving time for assault less than murder. A spokesman for the prison system said he had not been under state supervision since then. At one point during the chase, the suspect crossed a wide grassy median on the interstate and drove the wrong way down the highway while more than a dozen squad cars pursued him. Belk said he crashed the vehicle while driving down an embankment into a wooded area of the highway, which remained closed hours later. Two other people were shot when the suspect fired at police during the chase, but their wounds were not considered life-threatening. One man was wounded in what Belk described as a “road rage” attack after the suspect fired through the rear window of the vehicle. A woman was hit in the arm in a separate shooting. The names of the dead were not immediately released.

Texas executes Mexican after court stay rejected

The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — Texas executed a Mexican citizen Thursday for the rape-slaying of a teenager after he and the White House pleaded in vain for a Supreme Court stay, saying he was denied help from his home country that could have helped him avoid the death penalty. In his last minutes, Humberto Leal repeatedly said he was sorry and accepted responsibility. “I have hurt a lot of people. ... I take full blame for everything. I am sorry for what I did,” he said in the death chamber. “One more thing,” he said as the drugs began taking effect. Then he shouted twice, “Viva Mexico!” “Ready warden,” he said. “Let’s get this show on the road.” He grunted, snored several times and appeared to go to sleep, then stopped all breathing movement. The 38-year-old mechanic was pronounced dead at 6:21 p.m., 10 minutes after the lethal drugs began flowing into his arms. After his execution, relatives of Leal who had gathered in Guadalupe, Mexico, burned a T-shirt with an image of the American flag in protest. Leal’s uncle Alberto Rodriguez criticized the U.S. justice system and the Mexican government and said, “There is a God who makes us all pay.” Leal was sentenced to death for the 1994 murder of 16-year-old Adria Saucedo, whose brutalized nude body was found hours after he left a San Antonio street party with her. She was bludgeoned with a piece of 30to 40-pound chunk of asphalt. Leal was just a toddler when he and his family moved to the U.S. from Monterrey, Mexico, but his citizenship became a key element of his attorneys’ efforts to win a stay. They said police never told him following his arrest that he could seek legal assistance from the Mexican government under an international treaty.

Air, soil, wells near Mont. oil spill to be tested

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Indoor air, cropland soils and residential wells downstream of a Yellowstone River oil spill will be tested for contamination after residents raised concerns about hazards from the tens of thousands of gallons of crude that poured into the watercourse, the Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday. EPA and local officials said they do not expect to find significant health dangers but were acting as a precaution. Some residents in oil-stained areas have complained of nausea, dizziness and shortness of breath that have lingered for days. An estimated 1,000 barrels of oil, or 42,000 gallons, have fouled areas along the scenic Yellowstone since Friday after a 12-inch pipeline operated by Exxon Mobil Corp. broke near the south-central Montana town of Laurel. George Nilson, 69, of Billings, said the fumes from oil that washed into his neighbor’s property have been overwhelming. “I’ve been in it for five days now, and the only way I can breathe is to have all the windows open,” he said. Contractors for the EPA and Exxon Mobil were to collect air samples beginning Thursday or Friday, and the results would take about a week, said EPA on-scene coordinator Steve Merritt. Twelve homes would be tested initially, with possibly more to follow.

Crude oil contains dangerous chemicals including benzene and hydrogen sulfide. But officials said much of those substances would have evaporated quickly after the initial spill, meaning the long-term health risk is low. Air sampling along the river has not detected either of the chemicals, and water sampling shows no petroleum hydrocarbons that exceed drinking water standards, the EPA said in a written statement late Thursday. “The air is not inundated with these potentially harmful chemicals,” said Yellowstone County Health Officer John Felton. “We can smell things that are no longer creating the same level of hazard.”

Q. My elderly father lives with us. He is not able to be left alone anymore. Fortunately I am home all day. The problem is that I am starting to feel overwhelmed. I don’t think of Dad’s care as a burden, but I don’t seem to have a minute to myself!

A. The stress you feel is common in people who care for loved ones on a full-time basis. Spending time away is vital to your health and happiness, and to your ability to provide quality care. We suggest that you plan regular getaways—to attend a grandchild’s soccer game, for example, or to enjoy a few uninterrupted hours in the garden. Ask a responsible adult to sit with your dad while you relax and recharge. Caregivers are often reluctant to seek help, but this is important! And, if your family wants to go on vacation, look into long term care facilities that provide respite services.

Amid scandal, Murdoch kills off News of the World

By Jill Lawless and Robert Barr
Associated Press

LONDON — The Murdoch media empire unexpectedly jettisoned the News of the World Thursday after a public backlash over the illegal guerrilla tactics it used to expose the rich, the famous and the royal and remain Britain's best-selling Sunday newspaper.

The abrupt decision stunned the paper's staff of 200, shocked the world's most competitive news town and ignited speculation that Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. plans to rebrand the tabloid under a new name in a bid to prevent a phone-hacking scandal from wrecking its bid for a far more lucrative television deal.

"This Sunday will be the last issue of the News of the World," James Murdoch, son of the media magnate, announced in a memo to staff.

Mushrooming allegations of immoral and criminal behavior at the paper — including bribing police officers for information, hacking into the voice mail of murdered schoolgirls' families and targeting the phones of the relatives of soldiers killed in Afghanistan and the victims of the London transit attacks — cast a dark cloud over News Corp's multibillion-dollar plan to take full ownership of British Sky Broadcasting, an operation far more valuable than all of Murdoch's British newspapers.

James Murdoch, chairman and CEO of News Corp., Europe and Asia, is driven away from the offices of News International in London, Thursday.

Faced with growing public outrage, political condemnation and fleeing advertisers, Murdoch stopped the presses on the 168-year-old newspaper, whose lurid scoops have ranged from Sarah Ferguson's claims she could provide access to ex-husband Prince Andrew to motor racing chief Max Mosley's penchant for sado-masochism.

James Murdoch said all revenue from the final issue, which will carry no ads, would go to "good causes." The paper has been hemorrhaging advertisers since the phone hacking scandal escalated this week, with companies including automakers Ford and Vauxhall, grocery chain J. Sainsbury and pharmacy chain Boots pulling ads from the paper.

Police say they are examining 4,000 names of people who may have been targeted by the tabloid, which sells about 2.7 million copies a week.

The paper has acknowledged hacking into the messages of politicians, celebrities and royal aides, but maintained for years the transgressions were confined to a few rogue staff. A reporter and a private investigator working for the paper were jailed for hacking in 2007.

But in recent days the allegations have expanded to take in the phone messages of 13-year-old Milly Dowler, who disappeared in 2002 and was later found murdered, as well as the families of two other missing schoolgirls.

James Murdoch said if the allegations were true, "it was inhuman and has no place in our company."

"Wrongdoers turned a good newsroom bad," he said, "and this was not fully understood or adequately pursued."

"While we may never be able to make up for distress that has been caused, the right thing to do is for every penny of the circulation revenue we receive this weekend to go to organizations — many of whom are long-term friends and partners — that improve life in Britain and are devoted to treating others with dignity," he said.

WikiLeaks getting credit card funds

The Associated Press

LONDON — WikiLeaks has again begun accepting credit card donations, a company affiliated with the secret-spilling site said Thursday.

Andreas Fink, the chief executive of Icelandic payment processor DataCell, told The AP that Visa and MasterCard were again processing payments to WikiLeaks after a seven-month hiatus.

Fink claimed the move as a tacit admission of guilt from the credit card companies, but it may well have been accidental.

Visa Europe spokesman Simon Kleine told AP that processing the payments was "not something that we've sanctioned" and that the company was investigating. An email and phone calls seeking comment from MasterCard were not immediately returned.

Visa and MasterCard pulled the plug on the company, DataCell ehf, in early December, shortly after WikiLeaks began publishing about 250,000 U.S. State Department cables. But Fink said Thursday that card services had been restored — saying that lawyers had made sure of it by making test donations.

Conservative small town

Photos by DREW NASH/Times-News

Zachary Miller plays Ren McCormack, an outsider who moves to a small town, during a 'Footloose' dress rehearsal Tuesday evening at Howells Opera House in Oakley. The show opens Thursday.

Oakley actors see something of themselves in 'Footloose' characters

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Zachary Miller can relate to Ren McCormack.

Like Ren, the lead character in “Footloose,” Miller moved from Chicago to a small town. The Rupert teen knows the culture shock — there are no clubs, few malls, seemingly nowhere to hang out.

“That brings a lot of Ren out in me,” said Miller, rehearsing for the Oakley Valley Arts Council production of “Footloose” which opens Thursday.

It’s just one of the parallels between the community putting on the production and the town of Bomont, where the story takes place. The similarities help the actors relate to their characters.

“Footloose,” based on the 1984 movie, tells the story of city boy Ren who moves to Bomont after his father abandons his family. Ren struggles in his new surroundings, especially after finding out that dancing is illegal in city limits.

Tyler Reagan, who plays bad boy Chuck Cranston, said he sees plenty of similarities between Oakley, where he lives, and Bomont.

Lyn Brisbon, left, Marian Christensen and Sierra Zollinger, playing Ariel's friends, perform alongside Zachary Miller, as Ren McCormack, during a Tuesday rehearsal.

Twin Falls store is perfect fit for modeling competition

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

Twin Falls will host Idaho's only casting call for the upcoming season of “America's Next Top Model,” and the next closest casting venue is Salt Lake City.

Formality, a Twin Falls bridal and gown shop, will host the Saturday event, which owner Diane Bevan said is right up her alley. As an event planner and former Mrs. Idaho pageant participant, Bevan has donated her shop and time to prepare the competition venue.

“We will move out most of the dresses to make room for the walkway,” Bevan said Tuesday in Formality, where she was hanging tulle for decoration.

The show's producers require that audition locations have a 40-foot catwalk to allow the girls to show off their modeling abilities. So Bevan will clear out the racks of dresses that aren't attached to the wall and will take over the empty building beside her store for registration.

The most recently filmed season of “America's Next Top Model” will first air at 7 p.m. July 27 and will continue at 7 p.m. every Wednesday. The women auditioning Saturday will be seeking spots in the season that airs next year. If chosen to compete in the reality show, they will give up their homes, jobs and families to live in a house with up to 14 other women from October to November, under constant surveillance.

To be eligible, applicants must be 18 to 27 years old and at or above 5 feet 7 inches tall. However, the producers said they reserve the right to make case-by-case exceptions.

Earlier this year Bevan was contacted by Neuhoﬀ Communications, which airs “America's Next Top Model” locally on KTWI. Lisa Collins, a sales manager at Neuhoﬀ, said the casting location is a perfect fit — particularly because Bevan is doing more prep work than venues usually do.

Youngsters take over Twin Falls park to enhance creative talents

By Eva Stutzman
Times-News writer

Watch out! On Saturday, creative, crafty and curious kids will take over Twin Falls City Park. The annual Kids Art In the Park still has spots for children 3 years old through seventh grade.

The event draws nearly 300 children to the park for an array of hands-on classes.

“We try to tie the activities to elements of art and art history,” said Karen Fothergill, a Filer art teacher who has volunteered her teaching skills for Kids Art In the Park for almost 20 years. Fothergill will teach kindergartners through second-graders to use scissors and brightly colored plastic to create Matisse-reminiscent designs.

“They will be using geometric and organic shapes like Matisse did, and they'll be using a recycled plastic, which is something artists like to do,” Fothergill said.

Magic Valley Arts Council, which organizes the event, received donations from local charitable organizations, so there is little cost to the children and their families. Early registration was $2, but students can still register for $5 right up to 9 a.m. Saturday. Participants choose three different age-appropriate activities

Shoshone Arts in the Park

Where history sounds like a fiddle and looks like a quilt

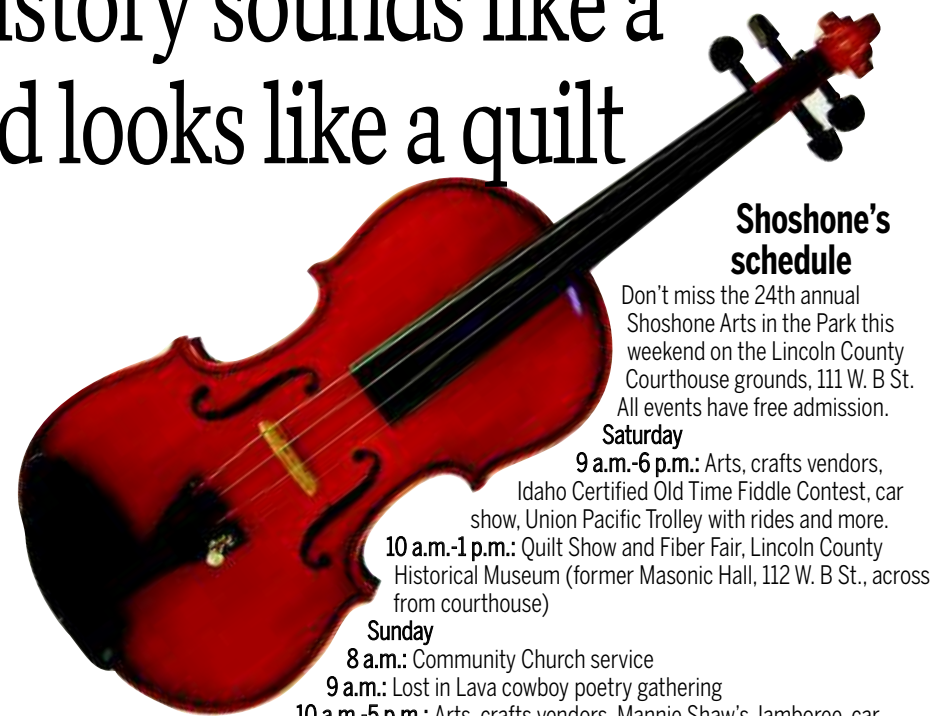

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Like silverware, photographs and stories, music is passed along through the years — a musical history as varied as the people playing it.

On Saturday and Sunday, musicians will descend on Shoshone for the 24th annual Arts in the Park, which features the Idaho Certified Old Time Fiddle Contest and Mannie Shaw's Jamboree.

Coordinator Ken Worthington said contestants will bring some style and favorite tunes from where they're from. Around southern Idaho, players' repertoire commonly includes "Cotton Eye Joe" and the "Tennessee Waltz."

"The music is passed down from generation to generation, but the style of the song evolves with the musician," Worthington said. "The experience, the expertise and the personality of the individual playing breathes new life into old-time fiddle songs. There has been a lot of discussion about 'what is old-time fiddle music?' if the tunes don't sound exactly the same as when we were playing them way back when ... but I think as long as they are being played and being heard then that's old-time fiddle

Shoshone's schedule

Don't miss the 24th annual Shoshone Arts in the Park this weekend on the Lincoln County Courthouse grounds, 111 W. B St. All events have free admission.

Saturday

9 a.m.-6 p.m.: Arts, crafts vendors, Idaho Certified Old Time Fiddle Contest, car show, Union Pacific Trolley with rides and more.

10 a.m.-1 p.m.: Quilt Show and Fiber Fair, Lincoln County Historical Museum (former Masonic Hall, 112 W. B St., across from courthouse)

Sunday

8 a.m.: Community Church service

9 a.m.: Lost in Lava cowboy poetry gathering

10 a.m.-5 p.m.: Arts, crafts vendors, Mannie Shaw's Jamboree, car show, Union Pacific Trolley with rides.

music, regardless of style."

At any rate, the music is a great backdrop for other activities on the Lincoln County Courthouse grounds.

For more than two decades, the event has drawn artisans, painters, photographers and foodies from across the West. Payson Reese, Lincoln County Chamber of Commerce president, said about 50 vendors have registered.

"The goal has always been and continues to be to make Shoshone Arts in the Park an event that not only draws locals but attracts tourists as well," Reese said. "With fiddlers, the arts, crafts and vendors and now the quilt show and expanded fiber fair, we have quite a lot going on."

Saturday's Quilt Show and Fiber Fair at the Lincoln County Historical Museum promises rich history displayed on everything from heirloom quilts to functional hand towels. Coordinator Karma Fitzgerald said entries are still pouring in; already the show has more than 80 to display.

Fiber arts — crotchets, embroidery, cross stitch, rug hooking — are experiencing a healthy resurgence across younger demographics. Fresh enthusiasts may trade Sun Bonnet Sue for a skull pattern when learning to cross stitch, but the show's work is fairly traditional in style, Fitzgerald said.

"This is a celebration not a competition," Fitzgerald said. "So many quilt and fiber shows are judged and juried, but the pieces that are most significant to families and to our community's histories aren't the ones that are going to win shows. We want to display the ones that are important, hold memories and are special. Some of the quilts have been with families for hundreds of years."

Learn the whole process of painting during art class

Times-News

Caleb Meyers will teach the week-long adult class "Painting from Start to Finish" for the Twin Falls Center for the Arts.

It runs 6:30-8 p.m. July 25-29. Cost for the week is $160 for Magic Valley Arts Council members and $175 for others. Each session will be a self-contained project, and individual sessions are $35 for members and $45 for others. The class is open to all levels of students, and a materials list is provided at registration.

Students will learn the painting process from first sketches to final touches. Classes will use the elements of art and principles of design as a guide to explore painting. Drawing techniques will also be a major focus, as they're the foundation upon which a painting is laid.

Pre-registration is required: 734-2787.

Buhl author capitalizes on Idaho archaeology

Times-News

Beneath southern Idaho's desert landscape, the secrets of a forgotten civilization hidden in a labyrinth of caves await discovery. In her newest book of adventure fiction, Buhl author Vonia Jackson lets the reader make that discovery through the eyes of 12-year-old Anna and her friend Martin. Their discovery might change the future, but only if the kids keep greedy profiteers from getting to it first.

Jackson will hold a book signing for "The Bell Ridge Cave" at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science, 6-8 p.m. Tuesday. The book's inspiration is taken from the discovery of the Buhl Woman skeleton in 1989; the Herrett Center played a key role in the recovery of 11,000-year-old "Buhla," who turned out to be one of the oldest skeletons ever discovered in North America, the center said.

When she was a College of Southern Idaho student, Jackson got to know former Herrett Center director Jim Woods, observatory coordinator Chris Anderson and other local cave and archaeology experts, a Herrett press release said. Names and places in her work of fiction closely mirror many real and historical ones.

Jackson lives within a mile of where the remains of Buhl Woman were discovered in what is now Melon Valley in the Snake River Canyon north of Buhl. The book is geared to ages 8-14, but Jackson said many adults have told her they enjoyed it.

form and incorporate cultural history.

"I think it's important for the kids to have an opportunity to learn about art," said Carolyn White, program director for the arts council. "It's becoming more important that we step up and provide art education."

The arts to be taught Saturday are not just visual. Try-a-band-instrument workshops are planned for kindergartners through fourth-graders. Organizers have also put together a variety show of talented children from around the Magic Valley for afternoon entertainment: vocal performances, clogging by Rocky Top Cloggers, a hand bell performance by the Energico ensemble and a dance performance by Nielsen's Star Gazers Dance Co.

Some classes at Kids Art in the Park are taught every year due to their popularity; however, organizers integrate new elements every year so that return students don't have to go to the same workshops.

Though the classes all have structured lesson plans, teachers still encourage creativity and uniqueness.

"Even with the more crafty projects we want the students to make it their own," White said.

Kaylee Blacker, top center, plays female lead Ariel Moore in Oakley's 'Footloose.'

Footloose

"If you do something wrong, your mother knows before you do," Reagan said.

Zachary Carson, who plays Willard, agreed.

"Everybody knows everybody," the Burley man said. And the play's take on religion isn't lost on the actors.

"(Oakley) is so little," Reagan said. "I hate to say it, but it's very revolved around the church."

Oakley does have strong ties to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. But dancing isn't illegal — and the Oakley Valley Arts Council's lively musical productions encourage it. The rules aren't as strict and conservative as the fictional town's, Carson added.

The fast-moving play presents plenty of challenges to the actors.

"They want us in different costumes in each scene," actor Linda Christensen said. Tuesday was the first run-through with all the costume changes, actor Walt Robberson said, and some actors missed a few cues because they were still changing. At one point, Miller has less than a minute to switch from jeans to a full tux; it takes four people to help him.

There are other snags for the actors to overcome. On Tuesday, they were still trying to figure out cues and when to start the pre-recorded music for the songs. And four of the parts are double cast.

"It's like acting with two different parts every night," said Reagan, who plays opposite Kaylee Blacker and Anthonette Turner, the two women who play Ariel. "It's tough because they're both totally different."

Since moving to Rupert, Miller has changed. Instead of pining for the city, the Chicago native now spends his time showing horses and dreaming about performing on Broadway.

"I've changed quite a bit since I've moved out here," he said.

Which southern Idaho town could be the setting for a dance-loving city boy's culture shock?

Oakley, of course. The actors in an Oakley Valley Arts Council production of "Footloose," opening Thursday, see something of their own small town in the musical's conservative setting. Still, OVAC's on-stage dancing will be anything but sedate.

In the mood for theater before that opening? Try JuMP Co.'s production of "The Music Man"; the tale of the fast-talking con man and the librarian Marian is on stage tonight and Saturday in Twin Falls. Or catch Buhl's "Tribute to Broadway II" musical and dance revue, also today and Saturday. The oddball comedy "Circle Mirror Transformation" continues its run in Hailey all week.

You'll spot many of your neighbors among the more than 100 artists offering their work — handmade brushes, bronze sculptures, rustic woods — at the Ketchum Arts Festival this weekend. And here are three more good reasons to be outside: Kids Art In the Park's popular (and dirt cheap!) outdoor classes for children, Saturday morning in Twin Falls; the baby crawling race and hot dog eating contest of Kimberly Good Neighbor Days on Saturday; and the fiddling contest and quilt fair of this weekend's Shoshone Arts in the Park.

Then shower off the sweat and pull on your best duds for Sun Valley Opera's Sunday-night concert, at which martial arts performer, stage fighter and former linebacker Glenn Stanton will drop his broadsword and rapier to sing top-hit arias. Promoters say it's an evening that can change a skeptic's mind about opera.

Four men and a soprano: An evening to change your mind about opera

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Glenn Stanton performs with a rock band, speaks Russian and German and is an expert at fighting with broadswords and rapiers on stage. And he just closed out a "Soul Samurai" show in Chicago, in which he performed martial arts and katana fighting as Queens shogun Grand Master Mak.

On Sunday night this former middle linebacker for Ohio Northern University will sing arias at the Sun Valley Pavilion as part of Sun Valley Opera's "Midsummer Night's Serenade" concert.

"I've always been a stand-out at sports. But when I made the college team I realized I wasn't very excited," Stanton reminisced. "That was shocking because it had always been my dream to play in the NFL. But I took music classes in college and started to get the same kind of feeling that I had gotten with football. I love the sharing with the audience that music and live theater give."

nial Hackman, who has performed Figaro for Virginia Opera and the Bing Crosby character of "White Christmas" for Cumberland Playhouse.

The lone female is soprano Terri Richter, who has performed with Seattle Opera and Opera Idaho. "What soprano wouldn't want to share the stage with four cute guys with fabulous voices!" she said.

During the first half of the concert, the singers will sing some of the favorite arias that have been performed over the Sun Valley Opera's 10-year history, including "Toreador" from "Carmen." Following intermission they'll perform favorite hits from the 1960s through the '90s, including "Brown Eyed Girl," "You Raise Me Up," "Viva La Vida" and "What a Wonderful World."

They also will sing new arrangements of songs made famous by Elton John, Coldplay and Bryan Adams by Sun Valley Opera music director Brett Strader, who used to conduct the Hour of Power Orchestra during TV broadcasts for Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, Calif.

"If anyone in Sun Valley doesn't think they like opera singers, they will change their mind after they see this show," opera co-founder Frank Meyer said.

Three-day festival draws Magic Valley artists to Sun Valley

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Bliss artist Debra Lynn Featherston has become known as "the brush lady," but don't confuse her with the Fuller Brush Man.

Featherston crafts handmade brushes of deer, moose and elk hair, encased in decorated ceramic holders and ranging from 2 inches to 32 inches long.

"I needed brushes and didn't have access to them, so I started making my own," Featherston said. "I can't believe some of the uses people have for them. I've sold them as artist brushes, ceramic brushes, makeup brushes, body massage brushes, pastry brushes, as bonsai tools, for archaeological digs and computer dusting..."

Featherston will be among more than a hundred artists exhibiting and selling their work at the 12th annual Ketchum Arts Festival today through Sunday at Festival Meadows on Sun Valley Road.

The festival will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. all three days, with coffee smoothies, Sun Valley Brewery microbrews and other food and drink. There will be music all three days — including the Paul Tillotson Trio, which will play jazz from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

This year the festival will boast a free Kids Activity Tent for the first time, with painting, puppets, bubbles, hooping, collage making, stories and face painting from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

In addition to Featherston, the festival includes a number of Magic Valley artists such as Kimberly's Dave LaMure Jr., whose glass, bronze and raku clay sculptures were featured on HGTV's "Modern Masters" series.

of the rustic wood furniture he creates from alder.

"I take a piece of new wood and make it look a hundred years old," he said. "It's a way of getting a vintage look in a home without spending $5,000 on an antique. And it's a unique look, too."

Twin Falls artist Sandie Davis creates shadowbox picture frames that can be customized with a favorite picture or quotation.

"When people read the quotes I've painted, they always have a story to tell. I could do a storybook on all the stories I've heard," she said.

Those familiar with Hailey painter Mary Roberson will find that she has switched from bagging big game animals in her impressionistic paintings to focusing on birds.

The change came after she started a flower garden in her Woodside yard about five years ago. As she worked on her hands and knees, she became awed by the insects crawling around and hummingbirds buzzing above.

One of her recent paintings features a wolf sitting calmly as a raven chews it out. It is titled "Nature is Everything," reflecting the fact that Roberson now cares about the little things as much as "the big brown things." Another depicts a variety of hometown birds checking out a penguin interloper which has found its way onto the canvas.

Davis said she loves the Ketchum Arts Festival, in part because it coincides with the Allen and Co. conference at Sun Valley, which brings in such notables as Oprah Winfrey and the president of Mexico.

"I meet people from all over the country at it," she said. "Last year that show brought me orders from all over the country throughout the year."

24 locals to play in Caldwell on Saturday

By Stephen Meyers
Times-News writer

Before they head off to college, 20 area athletes will play one last high school football game this weekend.

District IV players from Twin Falls and Minico to Carey and Gooding have been chosen to play in the Seventh Annual All-State Football Games on Saturday at Simplot Stadium in Caldwell.

The event features an 11-man Class 5A-2A game, an 8-man game and an eighth-grade game. Four District IV players will play in that game.

Carey's Caleb Cenarrusa and Blair Peck are two of the 11 District IV players on the 15-member 8-man East team, which won last year's game 26-16.

In the 11-man ranks, Team Idaho beat Treasure Valley 22-0 last year.

The Twin Falls trio of Ricky Akridge, Jayson Welker and Parker Elliott traveled to Boise together for practice this week and are excited to see how they stack up against Idaho's best.

"It's a whole new experience to be able to play with some of the best players in the state because you can't get away with some of the stuff you could before because they'll take complete advantage of your mistakes," Welker said.

The games provide more than just a measuring stick with which the players to gauge themselves. It's also an opportunity to make new friends and interact with players with whom they've only read about in the papers.

"I've met a lot of kids that love football just as I do and that makes us really come together as a team," Akridge said.

The 8-man game kicks off at noon, with the 11-man game beginning at 3 p.m.

"I couldn't ask for more than to play another high school football game," Elliott said.

Cowboy up

Twin Falls tops Minico in Area C double-dip

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — For Twin Falls baseball, the future appears to be as bright as the present.

Youngsters Michael Garcia and John Hohnhorst, who will both be juniors in the fall, each tossed a gem on Thursday as the Class AA Cowboys swept an American Legion doubleheader against Minico at Warburton Field in Rupert.

Garcia threw a two-hit shutout in Twin Falls' 9-0 victory in the opener. Casey Merritt and Cody McBride each went 2-for-4 at the plate and Minico committed four errors.

"I tried to pound the strike zone as well as I could," said Garcia. "(Catcher) Sayer Conrad behind the plate was blocking every ball in the dirt and was working really hard.

"We had a couple double plays to get out of those tight spots, so it was a good team effort today."

Twin Falls (20-9, 6-2) won 2-1 in Game 2 as Hohnhorst allowed five hits.

The only run the Cowboys allowed all day was when Hohnhorst committed a bases-loaded balk.

"I don't pitch too much, so this was a really good game for me," Hohnhorst said. "I'm hoping I can work my way up to that starting position. I haven't thrown six innings for a long time.

"I usually struggle, but I felt a lot better this game. I had a good defense behind me too. (We got) a lot of ground balls, that's what we want."

Minico coach Ben Frank praised the pitching of Sager Nevarez and Suede Denker, but lamented the lack of effort everywhere else.

"The only positive we had was on the mound," Frank said. "Every other aspect of the game was pretty much JV ball. If we play like this again, I'm going to check into getting the team skirts. Spartanette skirts."

Denker pitched exceptionally in Game 2 as well, giving up only one hit in a complete-game effort. However, the Spartans were unable to get clutch at-bats, including in the bottom of the seventh when they stranded the tying and go-ahead runs at the corners.

"I pitched lights out tonight, but if you don't have an offense... you've got to put up hits to score runs, and we didn't do that tonight," Denker said. "Obviously the guys didn't put in the work in the break.

"Some of us did, (but) some of us didn't."

Jason Bryce's RBI single in the second inning scored Ryan Fuchs. Casey Merritt scored on Tucker Donnelley's sacrifice fly in the sixth to make it 2-1.

Zayne Slotten closed out the seventh inning, retiring the three batters he faced in order with a strikeout, fielder's choice and fly-out to left field.

Taylor on bubble at Silver State

Times-News

Haillie Taylor faces a nervous wait to see if she'll get another pole bending run at the Silver State International Rodeo.

The Hailey cowgirl was 12th after the first go-round in Winnemucca, Nev., but her second run Thursday morning was slightly slower than her first. The top 15 in each event after today's conclusion of the second go-round advance to Saturday's championship go.

Kimberly's Alli Cornie rebounded from a tough first go in goat tying, halving her time in her second run, but will still miss the finals.

Oakley cowgirl McKenzie Zollinger is poised to advance in two events. Zollinger was eighth in both breakaway roping and goat tying after the first go-round concluded Wednesday evening.

Other area participants within striking distance of the top 15 included Gooding's Cassie Bahe (21st, poles), Wendell's Garrett Webb (16th, tie-down) and Jerome's Greyden Anderson (17th, steer wrestling).

Besiktas in talks with Deron Williams

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkish team Besiktas says it is close to reaching a deal with locked out NBA All-Star guard Deron Williams.

Besiktas manager Murat Murtezaoglu told The Associated Press on Thursday that talks are under way with the New Jersey Nets player and U.S. Olympian, who formerly played for the Utah Jazz.

Coach Ergin Ataman told the state-run Anatolia news agency that a deal was close. He also told The New York Times that an agreement had been reached.

Jeff Schwartz, Williams' agent, did not immediately return a telephone call seeking comment.

The Nets were not able to comment because the NBA has told teams not to comment on players during the lockout, which the owners initiated last week after the old collective bargaining agreement expired.

New Jersey Nets guard Deron Williams, left, puts up a shot as he runs into Chicago Bulls' Kurt Thomas during the second quarter of a March 17 game in Newark, N.J.

Kerr, Anderson lead when storms hit U.S. Open

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Instead of teeing it up when she comes back to the Broadmoor, Cristie Kerr’s next shot at the U.S. Women’s Open will be a blast out of the bunker on the front, right side of the seventh green.

A difficult shot. It could be worse.

A quirky day of thunder and lightning — but only spits of rain — suspended play Thursday with 25 players making it through the first round. It was a bad break on the opening day of the toughest test in golf — balky weather that figures to turn one of the most difficult weeks on the schedule into an even bigger grind.

“That’s part of the gamble,” said Christina Kim, who will try to squeeze in 36 holes today.

The rain halted a mini streak for Kerr, who had made two straight birdies to get into a tie for the lead at 2-under par with amateur Amy Anderson. After her second birdie, Kerr, who opened her round on the back, teed off into the right rough on No. 7, then hit her approach into the sand. That’s when the siren sounded and the players headed to the clubhouse.

“At least I’ll get to practice some long bunker shots before we go out, so maybe it’s a good thing for me,” she said.

After halting play, the USGA kept the players in the clubhouse for 2 1/2 hours, but with the thunder still rumbling and the radar blinking red, officials called play. There were 75 players on the course and 66 who hadn’t hit a shot.

That means nearly half the field, including defending champion Paula Creamer and Yani Tseng, trying to complete her career Grand Slam, could face 72 holes in three days.

LATE RUN SENDS BLANKS TO DEERE CLASSIC LEAD

SILVIS, Ill. — Kris Blanks birdied his final five holes Thursday to finish with an 8-under-par 63 and grab the first-round lead at the John Deere Classic.

Blanks, who played the back nine first, rolled in a 25-foot putt on No. 5 to start his late run and capped it with an 11-footer to leave him alone at the top after Canadian rookie Matt McQuillan and veteran Davis Love III held that spot much of the day with 64s.

Another late starter, Steve Marino, also came in with a 64. Mark Wilson, who has won twice on the tour this year, and Kyle Stanley were another stroke back, while Steve Stricker, seeking his third straight tournament title, shot 66.

Blanks, 38, is in his third year on the tour and came in tied for 175th in putting.

WESTWOOD, TULLO SHARE LEAD AT SCOTTISH OPEN

INVERNESS, Scotland — Lee Westwood and tour newcomer Mark Tullo of Chile shot 7-under 65s on Thursday to share the lead after the first round of the Scottish Open.

Westwood made six birdies and an eagle in the warmup event before next week’s British Open. A bogey at the 16th hole was his only setback.

With a win at the new links course at Castle Stuart, the second-ranked Westwood would regain the No. 1 ranking held by fellow Englishman Luke Donald.

Tullo, ranked No. 232 and in his first season on the European Tour, birdied his first four holes and then five of the back nine to join Westwood atop the leaderboard.

in the field, all at catcher. He last played first base in 2002 in Class A.

NATIONAL LEAGUE CUBS 10, NATIONALS 9

WASHINGTON — Darwin Barney’s tiebreaking ninth-inning double, capped off a wild comeback and the Chicago Cubs rebounded from an eight-run deficit to beat the Washington Nationals 10-9 on Thursday night.

Owners, NFLPA members meet in New York

NEW YORK — NFL teams owners and players' association leaders met for another long negotiating session Thursday, hoping to finally break the labor lockout that has now lasted more than 16 weeks.

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and NFLPA chief DeMaurice Smith joined in the sixth set of recent talks, which went stretched on for more than 12 hours, deep into the evening.

Players involved in a lawsuit against the league also had a regularly scheduled conference call, a person with knowledge of the situation told The Associated Press.

The person, who spoke on condition of anonymity because the two sides are not announcing details of the labor talks, said the call featured a discussion of the proposals that have been presented regarding free agency.

The players' group at the meeting included NFLPA president Kevin Mawae, while the NFL owners were represented by Robert Kraft of the Patriots, John Mara of the New York Giants and Jerry Jones of the Dallas Cowboys.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Arthur J. Boylan, who has served as a mediator between the two sides, also was involved. He is scheduled to go on vacation Saturday, but talks are expected to continue in his absence.

HALL OF FAMER JOHN MACKEY DIES

BALTIMORE — John Mackey revolutionized the tight end position, his incomparable ability to catch passes off the line of scrimmage helping to usher the NFL into the pass-happy modern era.

After his retirement, Mackey remained on the forefront of change in professional football. He pushed for better health care and championed the cause of former players, even as he battled the dementia that ultimately forced him into an assisted-living facility.

The Hall of Famer for the Baltimore Colts died at age 69. Mackey's wife notified the team about her husband's death, Ravens spokesman Chad Steele said Thursday. No cause was given.

Favorites take no risks at rain-lashed Tour

LISIEUX, France (AP) — Alberto Contador knew it made little sense to take risks on a day when blinding, torrential rain lashed riders in the Tour de France.

The 141-mile course Thursday — the sixth and longest stage in the three-week race — made for a dangerous trip. And the field was fortunate to avoid a major crash, a day after riders went tumbling everywhere.

“It was another nervous stage and because of the rain I virtually couldn’t see anything,” said Contador, the defending champion and three-time Tour winner who crashed Wednesday. “At the end of the stage I was moving to the very front of the pack, simply to avoid accidents, and not because I wanted to attack.”

Contador and his Tour rivals, like two-time runners-up Cadel Evans and Andy Schleck, played it safe as Edvald Boasson Hagen of Norway led a sprint to capture his first stage on the Tour in 5 hours, 13 minutes, 37 seconds.

Matt Goss of Australia was second and overall race leader Thor Hushovd was third, giving Norway the distinction of having the stage winner and yellow jersey on the same day.

Moving fairly close to the front meant relative safety for Contador, Schleck and Evans. They all were part of the first 50 of the 197 riders who completed the stage.

“Yesterday wind, today rain. ... Luckily, there seemed to be some kind of understanding within the peloton not to take too many risks today,” Schleck said. “As if all the teams had suffered enough crashes yesterday.”

Evans kept second overall, one second behind Hushovd. Schleck is 12 seconds behind in 10th spot. Contador is 1:42 off the lead in 34th place.

A rider would have encountered untold trouble if caught behind the peloton in a Wind made things even more hazardous, as fans watched, soaked to the skin in kinship with the riders.

“In the last few kilometers I was thinking only about not falling because it was a dangerous course,” Contador said. “At the end of the stage I got to the front of the peloton not to lose time, to avoid problems.”

Contador is no stranger to problems. The 28-year-old Spaniard tested positive for the banned anabolic agent clenbuterol late in last year’s Tour and he could yet be stripped of all his titles back to last July if the Court of Arbitration for Sport rules against him next month.

Although he was cleared to race by the Spanish cycling federation, many fans have questioned his presence on the race and he has been jeered by some.

Contador’s Tour got off to a dreadful start when he was slowed by a crash in last Sat-

Umpires strike back, and back, and back again

If you tune into baseball games to see the umpire strike back, the All-Star break couldn’t come at a worse time. July is already shaping up as one of the best months ever for ejections.

Since the calendar turned over, 17 players, managers and coaches have been sent to cool off early, the same number that were tossed during the first weeks of April, May and June combined.

The early leader in the clubhouse for best exit was Blue Jays pitcher Jon Rauch, who got a jump on things by shedding his jersey and hat even before stalking off toward the stalls. Then Tigers manager Jim Leyland did Rauch one better. Leyland was still standing in the dugout when he got tossed for the second time in nine days, shortening his trip to the showers to a matter of steps.

“Like I said after that one, something is going on,” Leyland said Thursday. “It’s just not good when there’s that much tension around.”

Even with another day to think things over, Leyland hasn’t figured out what’s causing all the pile-ups between the umps and players, managers and coaches.

“In no way, shape or form am I blaming the umps. I want to be clear about that,” Leyland said in a phone call from Kansas City, where his Tigers were preparing to play the Royals. “We’ve all got to do better, especially with what happens right after a call somebody doesn’t like is made. For the good of the game, everybody needs to relax a little bit.”

Blame it on rising temperatures, the replay videos available at every turn, a handful of Triple-A call-ups filling out the umpiring crews as vacation relief, or the mounting frustration some clubs express as their spring-training dreams circle the drain even before the season hits the midway point.

Then again, as Angels manager Mike Scioscia suggested the other day, maybe it’s just “cyclical.”

“I haven’t noticed anything that would point to it being anything but random,” he said.

So far, Scioscia’s guess is as good as any other. According to MLB figures, 93 players, managers and coaches were ejected this season through June 30, less than the average of 102 over the same time period for the past half-dozen seasons. The totals have ranged between a low of 78 and a high of 116.

“You’re never going to figure it out. And maybe if the umps got it right once in a while,” chuckled Hall of Famer and former manager Earl Weaver, “you wouldn’t be having all these problems.”

Weaver acknowledged a moment later that he’s hardly impartial. He’s third on the managers’ list of all-time ejections with 97, trailing only Bobby Cox (131) and John McGraw (117). Weaver also watches only two dozen or so games a season from his home in Pembroke Pines, Fla., but he does have a theory.

“Umps are human beings and they have to take a lot of guff, so to some extent, they’ve always been like that,” he said. “But from what I see, more and more they’re taking exception to just about everything. I had plenty run-ins, but it seems like the old guys were more secure about the job. It’s almost like the newer guys are being taught how to be mean in ump school or something.”

Increased use of instant replay might ease the tension, but current rules allow it only on home-run calls, and there’s no chance of that being expanded anytime soon. Former manager Joe Torre, now an MLB executive vice president, has been working tions are currently under way on a new CBA, but the topic hasn’t even been seriously broached.

Besides, players, managers and coaches are all over the map on the issue.

“I think you could expand it, but to what degree, I don’t honestly know,” Leyland said. “I do not want to take human element out of the game, especially since we ought to be amazed how many times those guys are right.”

“But it’s the way the situations are being handled after the call that we have to get straight right now. I know Joe Torre is working his fanny off, but the relationship has got to be workable. Like I said, maybe we all just need to relax a little.”

At the table it would be easy to predict what would happen to most declarers in four hearts. They would cover the opening spade lead with dummy's queen, and East would take his ace and shift to a club.

The defenders can cash their two club winners and would probably exit with a spade. Declarer's only legitimate chance now would be to find a spade-diamond squeeze. However, West can guard spades while East controls the diamonds, so nine tricks will be the limit.

Curiously, though, the natural lead of the spade jack allows the contract to be made if South concludes that the spade ace is with East. Declarer must duck the first trick in dummy — a play far easier to find on paper than at the table. If East takes his spade ace to shift to clubs, declarer loses only two clubs and a spade since the two diamonds from hand can be discarded on dummy's spade winners. If the spade jack holds the trick, that leaves West on lead, and he cannot sensibly attack clubs from his side of the table. Best is to exit passively with a trump, but declarer can take a ruffing finesse against the spade ace, then throw a club on a winning spade honor. South can later develop a diamond trick for his 10th winner. In all, he loses one trick in spades and one in each minor.

ANSWER: You have enough values to drive to game here, but you may have a 4-4 spade fit, which you would surely want to play in if it is available. To investigate, you can bid two clubs as Stayman if you play "system on," meaning that you use the same methods over a one-no-trump overcall as you do in response to a one-no-trump opening bid.

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced 20 years ago. The court approved a mutual agreement that Dad would pay monthly alimony until Mom remarried or one of them died. He has never missed a payment.

I have recently discovered that Mom secretly married her live-in boyfriend 11 years ago, but has continued receiving the alimony without telling my father. Is she committing a crime for which she could be arrested? And is her husband guilty of any wrongdoing?

I am extremely upset over this and want to do something to correct this injustice. It isn't fair. What can I do?

— FURIOUS IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST DEAR FURIOUS:

Marriage certificates are public records, so get a copy of your mother's and mail it to your father. He needs to stop paying the alimony, and he can sue her in family court for any money she wasn't entitled to. His next move should be to consult an attorney and decide how he wants to handle this.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I apparently have a problem communicating with people. I have had conversations with colleagues, managers, friends — even my girlfriend — and have been told my words were too harsh and made them feel defeated. It's at the point where people are afraid before I even open my mouth.

I don't mean to be cruel. I just speak the truth as it comes to me and I don't sugarcoat things. Some folks appreciate my candor, but it's getting in the way of having decent relationships. How do I learn to communicate differently when I'm just being myself? The words flow naturally out of my mouth. Am I a jerk?

— UNVARNISHED IN INGLEWOOD, CALIF.*DEAR UNVARNISHED:

You may be grossly insensitive — or you may have a disorder of some kind. (Forgive my candor.) Because you are having difficulty relating to others and it has become a handicap, you should discuss the problem with a psychologist who can help you to gain the tools for better communication.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a friend who rides to work with her several times a week. My wife is helping "Libby" through a difficult financial time by taking her. The problem is, Libby wears very strong perfume and appears to bathe in it rather than use it sparingly.

The passenger seatbelt and shoulder harness in my wife's car have become saturated with this smell. I have reached the point that I don't want to ride in her car. My wife complains about it as well.

Would it be rude for my wife to ask Libby to cut back or eliminate the use of the perfume? I say we have that right, but my wife is afraid it wouldn't be polite. Please help.

— HOLDING MY NOSE IN FLORIDA*DEAR HOLDING YOUR NOSE:

Many people are allergic to perfumes, and others develop a sensitivity after frequent exposure. It would not be rude for her to tell Libby that the lingering scent of her perfume has made you uncomfortable — and that she should refrain from wearing it during the commute. (She can apply it at work and ride home with someone else.)

P.S. The car may have to be professionally cleaned and detailed to get rid of (most) of the smell. You have my sympathy.

IF JULY 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: No amount of wishful thinking will “make it so” this month, so be forewarned that you could waste time, energy or resources on what may turn out to be a wild goose chase. You will need to work harder than usual just to keep your head above water in August and early September, and may be challenged by criticism from superiors. Hold off on making major changes, decisions or signing key documents, especially loans. In February your mojo returns, making that a perfect time to implement needed changes or to pursue a lifelong dream. People will respect your judgment during that time period so a new employer might be dazzled by your efforts and offer rewards or an intimate relationship could move to the commitment stage. A helpful opportunity could lead to a permanent improvement in your life.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get up to date. Sign up for a training class or seminar. You might best prove your worth by having letters after your name, a certificate or a diploma. Do not begin anything of major significance now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Those who shine the brightest make the easiest targets. Someone might be a bit jealous of your success and aim to take you down a notch. Accept grouchiness, aggravations or criticism with good grace.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't let a competitive spirit prevent you from appreciating peacemaking efforts. Your desire to own the best things in life can make you careless with your cash. Hold off on major credit card purchases.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You won't get accolades at work unless you do more than is expected of you. You won't receive trustworthy advice from others, so rely upon your own judgment. Be thorough, patient and practical.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Small flaws could be pointed out that might undermine your confidence. Use even negative feedback to your advantage. Take little criticisms to heart and try to do just a little bit better to please others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Admit your errors and back down from arguments. The fickle finger of fate can't fiddle with your finances without your consent. Where your piggy bank is concerned it is smart to hang on to your pennies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You might get a dent during a social collision. A difference of opinion where money or values is concerned might become intense. This is not a good time to make someone jealous in order to get attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tame your wildest impulses and rein in your extravagances. Acting on a whim by asking someone out to dinner, accepting a dare or making a spur-of-the-moment purchase might be regretted tomorrow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You feel the pressure of being between a rock and hard place. Those in charge may overlook your mistakes if you agree with their philosophy or ideas. Compromising principles can be costly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The Great and Powerful Oz was not much of a challenge once revealed to be a small man behind a curtain. Not everyone is as idealistic as you are, but sometimes you forget that enemies hold buckets of water.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There might be something up the sleeve. See what card the other guy plays before you play your own. Your competitiveness is high but honesty is low. Focus on avoiding controversy and commitments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Start saying what others want to hear. Voice your own opinions in a way that is pleasing to others. It is time to adopt a philosophy based on experience and the concrete lessons of the real world.
