The fall wolf hunt: Idaho Fish and Game department details its plans

Traps, bigger bags – and no quotas

By Kimberlee Kruesi
Times-News writer

Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials Friday fleshed out their proposal for this fall's wolf hunt. Among the details: The state would largely avoid any quotas, and trappers could target wolves in a handful of areas.

"We learned last year that wolf hunting is extremely challenging" said Virgil Moore, Fish and Game director, in a news conference on Friday. "We're basing our proposal off of what we saw last year to make the hunt successful."

It's only Idaho's second wolf hunt since the predators were reintroduced in 1995. The first concluded in spring 2010, shortly before wolves were briefly returned to the endangered species list.

Moore said that out of the 30,000 hunters who bought tags last season, only 1 percent actually killed a wolf. Last year the department set a quota of 220 wolves, but only 188 were killed.

The failure to meet that amount was one of the major reasons why the quota was lifted, he said. He cast the lack of quota as similar to other big game such as elk.

Fish and Game must maintain state wolf populations of at least 150 with 15 breeding pairs to meet federal management criteria.

"We will be monitoring the entire time on the amount of wolf

Important changes to the 2011-12 wolf hunt:

The season's longer: Aug. 30-March 31.

Hunters can use electronic calls.

Bag limits would be two wolves per hunter, up from just one in 2009-10.

Trappers can participate in all or parts of five zones: Lolo, Selway, Middle Fork, Elk City-Dworschak and Panhandle.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission will gather public comments on the proposed hunt until July 27. That's the day the commission will meet in Salmon to discuss and vote on the hunt.

NEW FIRE STATION FOR THE EAST END

DREW NASH/Times-News

Firefighter Stacey Thomas gives a tour of the new Rock Creek fire station Wednesday afternoon in Kimberly.

Rock Creek Fire District hosts open house

By Kimberlee Kruesi
Times-News writer

It's surprising how many people have a hard time finding the Rock Creek Rural Fire Protection District.

"I still get asked if we're located at the spot we used to work in over 12 years ago," said Stacey Thomas, a fire captain for the district. "That place has been a sandwich shop for awhile now."

However, with the opening of its new fire station, the district hopes it'll have a stronger presence in Kimberly. To celebrate, the district is hosting an open house tonight so the public can meet the firefighter volunteers.

OPEN HOUSE DETAILS

Where: The new Rock Creek Rural Fire Protection District station, 1559 Main Street N., Kimberly.

What: The open house begins at 6 p.m. with a ribbon cutting ceremony at 7 p.m. Firefighters will hand out plastic fire helmets and stickers to children. The first 150 adults to attend the event will receive red stainless steel thermoses.

"I'm really encouraging people to come down here and see where their money is being invested," Thomas said.

The new station has an impressive 16,000 square feet of space for features like the fitness training center, offices, living quarters and a classroom.

"The entire old building could easily fit in the new garage," Thomas said.

The Bureau of Land Management will share some of the space. The partnership will allow BLM crews to respond to emergencies quicker. The agency will chip in with building maintenance costs.

The total cost of the station — nearly $1.5 million — has stirred up concern that taxes may increase to pay for the construction costs. Thomas said this won't be an issue.

"This area is also growing," he said, "so we've taken into consideration that the growth will help cover the costs."

The new station was also designed to be a resource for the community.

The classroom is large enough for lectures or meetings; there will be no charge for using the space. The two acres of land the station is built on will be used for training exercises like extrication classes.

"The long term goal is to have a full-time staff, we finally have a facility that would allow us to do that," Thomas said. Currently the staff is all part-time except for the new fire chief, Jason Keller.

The living quarters could eventually hold up to 75 people, but it could take three to five years for that transition to take place, Thomas said.

"We would need more interest and money," he said. "This new station may help spark that."

DUIs down over the holiday weekend, year to date

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Multiple agencies report having a slower holiday weekend than last year when it came to drunken driving arrests.

Extended holiday weekends such as the July 4 holiday are apt for celebrations that can lead to drunken driving, but arrest numbers were down.

Twin Falls police reported only five arrests, which is down by half compared to the nine arrests from the July 4, 2010, holiday weekend. The Blaine County Sheriff's Office made just one arrest compared to three last year. Jerome Police made three DUI arrests, one fewer than last year.

"We enforce pretty vigorously," Jerome Police Chief Dan Hall said on Friday. "I think it's had an impact."

The decline mirrors a larger statewide one evident in 2009 and 2010 yearly crime reports.

The end of an era: Planetarium shows final NASA shuttle launch

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

Watching the final launch of a NASA space shuttle Friday gave Rick Greenawald mixed feelings: déjà vu, and melancholy.

The Faulkner Planetarium manager remembers falling in love with astronomy when he was 5 years old. He isn't sure how his interest in space started — maybe watching the moon landing on television or looking at picture books of the constellations. The curiosity of what was beyond earth's atmosphere launched him into a 24-year career as a planetarium manager.

Greenawald witnessed the Challenger explosion in 1986 and saw a Fisherman talks about 5 days adrift

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tuna fisherman Jim Clayholt said Friday he and his son rigged makeshift sails to keep their disabled boat on course as they drifted south for five days along the Oregon Coast.

The 54-year-old Clayholt and his 23-year-old son, Tom Clayholt, were towed to shore after they got a radio message through to the Coast Guard Friday morning.

Coast guard aircraft had been searching for them since Thursday after their relatives got a text message from the disabled vessel and notified authorities.

From Florence, Ore., where the Coast Guard towed them in, Clayholt told The Associated Press that the 40-foot vessel was taking on a little water, so he and his son had to pump water by hand hourly after its battery died.

The sails they rigged from a sleeping bag, tarps and bedding, Clayholt said.

“It worked pretty good. We were making headway,” he said. “We were headed in the right direction. We more than doubled our speed, and we could control our direction.”

Bankruptcy trustee sues county over Bujak case

BOISE (AP) — A bankruptcy trustee has filed a lawsuit against Canyon County seeking to recover money former Prosecutor John Bujak gave the county before filing for bankruptcy, as well as the value of a contract to handle Nampa misdemeanors Bujak transferred to commissioners.

Trustee Jeremy Gugino claims in U.S. Bankruptcy Court that he’s entitled to recover transfers from Bujak to the county so that money can be distributed among all creditors.

He says Bujak paid the county $171,000 in the two months before he resigned and that is more than the county would have received through the bankruptcy. The document lists the $598,000 Nampa contract as one of Bujak’s assets, compared to $1.3 million in debts.

Bankruptcy law allows trustees to pursue debt payments a person makes within 90 days of filing.

Valley rally begins, with $18K goal

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — Ross Bishop, otherwise known as “Rossco,” held a half-smoked cigar loosely between his fingers as he sat in a camp chair under his RV awning on Friday afternoon.

Around Murtaugh Lake Park, bikers were setting up their tents and parking their motorcycles. Most were clad in black leather vests like Bishop’s and a few showed off sleeves of bright tattoos.

No one was in a hurry — the fun was scheduled to start later in the day. Some people sipped on frosty beverages and others browsed the 11 food, clothing and tattoo vendors that had set up shop earlier in the day.

Bishop, an original member of the Snake River Bros., said he rarely goes to the meetings but he always shows up for Rally in the Valley. It’s the camaraderie of the masses that brings him back every year, along with the organization’s fundraising efforts.

Proceeds raised from Rally in the Valley go to help children with medical needs. Through the years the organization has raised around $100,000 to help families and children.

“We like to ride bikes and drink beer but we do it all for the kids,” Bishop said. “Watching a sick little child and knowing you are doing something to help them is awesome. You don’t even Bolton said it seemed like a slower year on Friday afternoon, but most people don’t arrive at the park until after they get off work. The rest of the weekend will consist of live bands, bonfires, a dice run around the Magic Valley and biker rodeos.

Jim and Nikki Nelson of Jerome have attended the rally for three years. This time, they brought their grandchildren. The kids planned to stay for the Friday night festivities and return home today so the adults can enjoy the night-time rodeo, band and tattoo contest.

shuttle take off in the summer of 1994 when he was in Florida for a conference. He said watching a takeoff in person is almost indescribable. The roar of the engines reverberates through your chest and the fire glows a bright yellow and orange, unlike the white blur that is shown on television.

The end of American shuttle launches made Greenawald reflect on what space travel has done for the US of A, including the invention of Velcro, bursts of technology and the production of new materials.

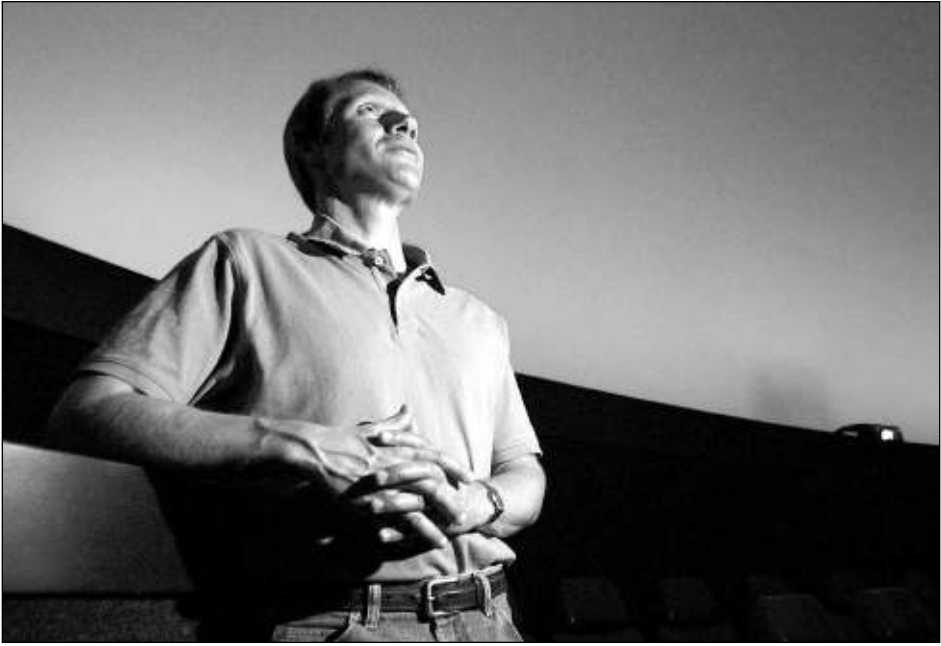

“It’s a disappointment to me that it’s the end of the shuttle era and that it’s not in the will of our country to go out and continue to explore,” he said. “I’m sad to know it’s the last one but I wonder if the U.S. will launch more in the future. It would be nice to maintain that capability.”

Greenawald stood in the back of the planetarium in the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on Friday morning and watched with a handful of others as Atlantis made its final launch toward the stars.

It was decided the afternoon before to show the live-stream on the planetarium’s dome. The NASA stream was set up around 8:30 a.m. Friday and people filtered in to watch the last few minutes of the launch.

Teri Fattig, director of CSI library and the Herrett Center, said she sent an email around the College of Southern Idaho campus inviting people to watch history in the making on the big screen.

Shuttle program ends; future of U.S. space travel now vague

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With a cry from its commander to “light this fire one more time,” the last shuttle thundered into orbit Friday on a cargo run that will close out three decades of both triumph and tragedy for NASA and usher in a period of uncertainty for America’s space program.

After some last-minute suspense over the weather and a piece of launch-pad equipment, Atlantis and its four astronauts blasted off practically on schedule at 11:29 a.m., pierced a shroud of clouds and settled flawlessly into orbit in front of a crowd estimated at close to 1 million, the size of the throng that watched Apollo 11 shoot the moon in 1969.

It was the 135th shuttle flight since the inaugural mission in 1981.

Atlantis’ crew will dock with the International Space Station on Sunday, deliver a year’s worth of critical supplies to the orbiting outpost, and bring the trash home. The shuttle is scheduled to land back on Earth on July 20 after 12 days in orbit, though the flight is likely to be extended to a 13th day.

After Atlantis’ return, it will be lights out for the shuttle program. Thousands of workers will be laid off within days. The spaceship will become a museum piece like the two other surviving shuttles, Discovery and Endeavour. And NASA will leave the business of building and flying rockets to private companies while it turns its attention to sending humans to an asteroid by about 2025 and Mars a decade after that.

It will be at least three years — possibly five or more — before astronauts are launched again from U.S. soil. Until then, American astronauts will hitch rides to and from the space station via Russian Soyuz capsules.

watch it than right here?” she said.

Robert Milligan, a janitor in the CSI maintenance department, took a little time off from his job to sneak into the dark room and watch the final countdown. He said it was the best launch he’s witnessed.

“It makes me interested to know what will happen with this space program,” he said.

harvests being brought in,” Moore said. “We can shut down the season at any time if we feel we are running too low of numbers.”

The department is still determining an ideal wolf population for Idaho. Moore said the current estimated 1,000 animals is too high and anywhere near 150 would be too low. However, he did not give a number that would halt the hunting season.

“I’m not going to speculate the safety net number yet,” he said. “We are still trying to study what the ideal distribution numbers should be.”

If approved later this month by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission, the season will run Aug. 30 till March 31. Trapping would be allowed for 10 weeks during the season. Moore does not expect trapping to account for a large number of wolf kills.

“Trapping takes a certain skill set,” he said. “There are only about 1,000 trappers registered in Idaho and not all of them know how to trap wolves.”

Environmental groups have responded to the proposal with disappointment.

By not setting a quota, the “open season” raises the odds to drastically lower wolf numbers, said Suzanne Stone, Defenders of Wildlife Northern Rocky Mountains representative.

“There is only a focus on controlling and managing wolves,” she said. “There is no discussion on how wolves can be benefit in nature or why they are still important.”

That said, Defenders of Wildlife will most likely not sue Fish and Game over the proposal if it’s approved, Stone said.

“They have a congressional backing,” Stone said. “This prevents a lot of legal intervention.”

Wendell council to firm up utility policy

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The city of Wendell intends to create an overarching policy when it sets next year's utility rates.

At the last two City Council meetings, property owners approached the council to ask for exemptions from paying utilities for empty rented units.

The issue came up on Thursday when Mayor Brad Christopherson said the per-citizen payment for Wendell's sewer project needs to be readjusted from $30.25 to $32.19. The higher costs come from Jeff McCurdy at Region IV Development, reassessing the amount of money Wendell was putting aside to pay for the project and recommending the bump to cover payments.

Though exceptions have been granted, Councilwoman Ilene Rounsefell said she thought property owners should have to pay utilities on empty units.

"You become a businessperson when you become a renter," Rounsefell said. "It's not up to the city to make it not cost as much."

City Attorney Calvin Campbell said that a policy allowing residents to shut off services other than water could be difficult to enforce.

"The problem is how do you verify it if people say 'We're not using the sewer,'" Campbell said. "I don't see how it's logistical-ly feasible."

Christopherson said he would research how surrounding cities handle the issue for the next council meeting.

In other utility news, though $100 security deposits and $25 reconnect fees for services will remain the same, the city is making a change that will save Wendell money. The catch: Wendell residents will have to be better about their bills.

Previously, when a bill was late, city staff delivered a notice and a promise to pay agreement to residents' doors. From now on, those orange paper warnings are no more.

Christopherson said that eliminating the final notice will save the city about $300 to $400 a month and hopefully help bills get in on time.

"I was guilty of it, too. I knew if I was a little late with my water bill it was no big deal," the mayor said.

Christopherson said the number of shutoffs has increased from about 30 a month to about 160 a month.

City Public Works Director Bob Bailey said the new policy and the $100 security deposit will help the city recover costs, something it had been having trouble with.

"I'm comfortable that $100 will cover a month's bill and now with the shut-off policy, they won't get more than one month behind," Bailey said.

The council hopes to have a public hearing to hammer down the details, but a date wasn't decided on.

Councilman Jason Houser was absent.

1 suspect in Ketchum burglary sent to district court, charges dismissed against other suspects

Times-News

One suspect in a Ketchum home burglary had his felony case sent to district court following a preliminary hearing in Blaine County 5th District Court this week.

Benjamin Dugan, 31, of Ketchum, will answer to the charge of grand theft on July 18. Meanwhile, two co-defendants had their charges dropped. Juan Molina, 19, and David Aranda, 20, both of Hailey, were initially charged as accessories to grand theft. The charges were dismissed at their preliminary hearing.

A fourth suspect, Shanna DeLeon, 35, of Ketchum, is awaiting a Tuesday preliminary.

The four, along with one juvenile male, were accused of taking more than $100,000 worth of personal items from a Ketchum home through April and May. Police recovered some of the items, which included jewelry, a fur coat and golf clubs.

Shoshone council eyes purchase of HUD homes

By Emily Katseanes
Times-News correspondent

The Shoshone City Council is hoping for a new home — or maybe two.

Tuesday, the council decided to pursue purchasing two area homes from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Though the HUD program, the city would be able to purchase the homes for $1 each on the condition that the property, or the money generated from the sale of the property, be used for community development.

City Clerk Mary Kay Bennett said Shoshone would look at selling the homes to help improve parks around the city, including adding or revamping bathrooms or developing a track of unused land into a park.

The city will have to wait for approval from HUD before moving forward with the project.

In other project news, City Maintenance Supervisor Aaron Aggeler said the crossings at Apple Street and U.S. Highway 26 are too small to accommodate crossing flags without impeding handicapped access. Aggeler said redesigned holders should fit on the sidewalk without compromising accessibility.

Another project that was first proposed in April came to a close. After months of being unable to find a boom truck to help maintain hard-to-reach areas in the city's price range of $14,000 to $17,000, officials were able to purchase a used truck from Weiser for $6,200.

But not all of Shoshone's projects had such a happy update. After postponing the completion of a road behind the Lincoln County Fairgrounds, the council decided to reject all the received bids and return to the drawing board. Bennett said costs were too high and the project was too complicated to start.

"There's just too many variables," she said.

Grim jobs report casts shadow over debt talks

By Jim Kuhnhenr
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama used a bleak jobs report Friday to prod Congress toward a swift agreement on deficits and the national debt. But the higher unemployment numbers hardened partisan views that a weak economy can't tolerate added taxes or cuts in spending, both key to the grand deal Obama seeks.

White House, congressional negotiators and their aides worked to bridge differences over how to reduce long term deficits by as much as $4 trillion over 10 years. Obama plans to call the eight top leaders of Congress to the White House on Sunday to assess progress.

Summing up the difficulties facing them, House Speaker John Boehner likened the task to a notoriously confounding puzzle. "This is a Rubik's Cube that we haven't quite worked out yet," he said.

A budget agreement is central to increasing the nation's borrowing limit, currently capped at $14.3 trillion, to avoid a potentially catastrophic government default after Aug. 2. That looming deadline and a new unemployment rate of 9.2 percent heightened the pressure for a deal, uniting the two most high-profile challenges now facing Obama's presidency.

Obama called on Congress to move quickly to raise the debt ceiling. He said uncertainty over a potential default has hindered hiring in the private sector.

"The sooner we get this done, the sooner that the markets know that the debt limit ceiling will have been raised and that we have a serious plan to deal with our debt and deficit, the sooner that we give our businesses the certainty they will need in order to make additional investments to grow and hire," Obama said from the Rose Garden on Friday morning.

Obama made his case privately Friday to House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi during a half-hour meeting at the White House. And in Congress, Boehner, R-Ohio, embraced the desire to act with speed, even though some members of his party questioned the urgency.

"While some think that, you know, we can go past August the 2nd, I frankly think it puts us in an awful lot of jeopardy and puts our economy in jeopardy, risking even more jobs," Boehner said. "So I believe it's important that we come to an agreement, but it has to be an agreement that really does fundamentally change our spending and our debt situation."

Both parties as well as private economists agree that if Washington does not raise the debt ceiling by early August, the economy will be deeply shaken and perhaps slip back into recession.

Obama's contention that hiring is already freezing up because of the uncertainty, though, is a harder case to make. There is scant evidence that the markets are acting nervously.

The yields on Treasury bonds, which should go up if investors get nervous about a default, are close to historic lows. But it is possible that anxiety is affecting investment behavior in ways difficult to pin down.

The White House and Congress are seeking common ground on a budget deal that would trim 10-year deficits by as much as $4 trillion. Obama has urged lawmakers to strive for that number, but some officials on Friday said they believed that a smaller, $2 trillion deal appeared more realistic.

The larger package would require new tax revenues and significant spending reductions in the main government benefit programs, such as Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security.

"I don't think things have narrowed," Boehner said Friday. "I don't think this problem has narrowed at all in the last several days."

House passes $649B defense spending bill

Pentagon sees boost; other agencies slashed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Friday overwhelmingly passed a $649 billion defense spending bill that boosts the Pentagon budget by $17 billion and covers the costs of wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The strong bipartisan vote was 336-87 and reflected lawmakers' intent to ensure national security, preserve defense jobs across the nation and avoid deep cuts while the country is at war.

While House Republican leaders slashed billions from all other government agencies, the Defense Department is the only one that will see a double-digit increase in its budget beginning Oct. 1.

Amid negotiations to cut spending and raise the nation's borrowing limit, the House rejected several amendments to cut the Pentagon budget, including a measure by Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., to halve the bill's increase in defense spending. "We are at a time of austerity. We are at a time when the important programs, valid programs, are being cut back," Frank said.

Scoffing at the suggestion that "everything is on the table" in budget negotiations between the Obama administration and congressional leaders, Frank said, "The military budget is not on the table. The military is at the table, and it is eating everybody else's lunch."

Still, the overall bill is $9 billion less than President Barack Obama sought. The White House has threatened a veto, citing limits on the president's authority to transfer detainees from the U.S. prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and money for defense programs it didn't want.

The measure includes $119 billion for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Man faces stowaway charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal grand jury on Friday indicted a Nigerian American man on stowaway charges after authorities say he breached multiple layers of airport security and got on a cross-country flight with an expired boarding pass.

Oluwaseun Noibi, 24, was charged with one count of being a stowaway as well as one count of attempting to enter a secure area of an airport by fraud or false pretense. If convicted of both counts, Noibi could face up to 15 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

Noibi, who remains in custody, is scheduled to be arraigned on July 18.

Deputy federal public defender Carl Gunn declined comment because he hadn't seen the indictment.

Authorities said Noibi boarded a flight in New York on June 24 using an expired boarding pass with someone else's name on it.

Pawlenty bets big on Iowa

Campaign has been struggling

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Trailing in polls and low on cash, former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty is betting the future of his presidential campaign on Iowa, where a late summer test vote could make or break him.

"We look to the Ames straw poll as a chance to show improvement," Pawlenty said in an interview this week, acknowledging his lagging fortunes as he opened a 15-day Iowa campaign stretch a month before the state popularity contest that's often a launch pad or cemetery for White House hopefuls. "We have to show some reasonable improvement at the straw poll, and then we've got to be in a position to win, or come close to it, in the caucuses."

The Iowa Republican Party's Aug. 13 straw poll has become Pawlenty's sole focus six months before the state's leadoff presidential caucuses, and for good reason.

By traditional measures, the low-key Midwesterner has little to show for his efforts to raise his profile and build a winning campaign since he first visited politically important Iowa in November 2009.

He has the largest staff of any candidate for Iowa's caucuses but registered support from just 6 percent of likely GOP caucus-goers in a recent Des Moines Register poll.

He acknowledged in the interview that this week begins a critical test for him in Iowa, where he's supplementing his two-week visit with a new television ad and mailbox brochures all aimed at building support for the straw poll.

"You can't really have an impact until you have a sustained concerted series of campaign activities, backed up by mail and media and that's what we're doing now," he said.

But the pivotal month has not gotten off to a smooth start.

On Tuesday, Pawlenty's campaign sought to grab headlines with the news that Sarah Huckabee, the daughter of the failed presidential contender and 2008 caucus winner Mike Huckabee, had signed on as an adviser. But that news was buried by a Florida jury's innocent verdict in the trial of accused killer Casey Anthony.

Hours later, the University of New Hampshire released its latest poll of likely Republican primary voters. It showed former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney with 35 percent of support in the first-in-the-nation primary state and Pawlenty with just 3 percent.

And by Wednesday, Pawlenty found himself having to denounce a top adviser's comment that Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann's early rise in Iowa was due in part to her "sex appeal." He had wanted to spend his first day of a sustained Iowa campaign stretch introducing a message stressing his record handling serious issues.

He hopes to right his campaign on Sunday in an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Pawlenty, a two-term Republican governor of a Democratic-leaning state who was on 2008 GOP nominee John McCain's short-list for the vice presidential slot, has spent the past year and a half working to establish himself as a top-tier candidate. He hired a staff of veteran presidential campaign operatives. He raised millions in support of other candidates. And he gave $2 million in 2010 to local politicians in early primary voting states, hoping to earn chits for his presidential run.

So far, he has little to show for it.

Last week, Pawlenty said he raised $4.2 million over the past three months, with only some of it available to him if he wins the nomination. It's a paltry sum compared to Romney, the GOP front-runner who brought in more than $18 million, all of it for the primary.

And last month, he rolled out an economic policy at the University of Chicago only to be ridiculed by some from both parties for proposals critics said could not be taken seriously as a governing plan.

Among those critics was the liberal Center for American Progress, which said Pawlenty's plan would cost $7.8 trillion over a decade.

Pawlenty found himself on the defensive over the plan the following week during a debate in which his own performance was widely panned.

Pawlenty had laid the groundwork in a news interview to assail Romney over the Massachusetts' health care law that was a model for President Barack Obama's nationwide one that conservatives despise. But Pawlenty hesitated to attack Romney during the debate, feeding into criticism that Pawlenty isn't tough enough to be the nominee.

He later acknowledged a misstep, saying: "I should have been much more clear during the debate."

Gunman often resorted to violence, made threats

By John Flesher and Tom Coyne
Associated Press

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — When Rodrick Shonte Dantzler raised a gun to his head after going on a deadly shooting spree, the bullet ended what those close to him described as a troubled life in which he frequently resorted to violence and often made threats against women and relatives.

Police say the 34-year-old ex-con targeted two former girlfriends in Thursday's rampage, fatally shooting both of them and five members of their families, including his own 12-year-old daughter. He also shot and wounded two other people — one of them another ex-girlfriend — while leading officers on a chase through Michigan's second-largest city.

"He went out hunting these people down. It was very much a purposeful act," Police Chief Kevin Belk said Friday, describing Dantzler as mentally unstable but saying he knew of no clinical diagnosis or motive for the killings.

Dantzler's rap sheet goes back to 1992, when he was charged as a juvenile with breaking and entering and car theft. That was followed over the next eight years by charges of trespassing, domestic violence, destruction of property, larceny and assault.

Dantzler's mother, who said her son set fire to her house when he was 18, was among four women who sought protective orders against him in the mid- to late 1990s.

"Rodrick has a very explosive temper and will act violently without thinking," Victoria Dantzler wrote in the petition filed in Kent Family friend Dennis Rozanski reacts at a memorial to three victims in Thursday's shooting spree in Grand Rapids, Mich., Friday. A gunman opened fire in two Michigan homes killing seven people before taking hostages and later killing himself.

County Circuit Court. "I've lived in fear of him hunting me down or worse, forcing me to hurt him in order to protect myself. I just wish for him to leave me alone."

In May 2000, he was accused of firing a gun at people in a car, then firing four more shots when they attempted to read the license plate of the vehicle he was driving. He was sentenced that year to three to 10 years in prison for assault and paroled three years later.

One woman filed a paternity suit against Dantzler in 1995 and at least three sought child support from him. In each case, judges issued warrants for his arrest for failing to pay.

In a 1997 petition, Stacy Carter said she tried to leave Dantzler while she was five months' pregnant because of repeated abuse. Dantzler tracked her down at a friend's house and warned that she could not leave him "with the baby and myself still alive," Carter wrote.

Dantzler, she said, once pushed her into a bathroom mirror and slammed her on the floor. He grabbed her jaw and told her he would "kill it before he brings another baby in to this world."

That same year, Angela

Merrill filed a petition saying Dantzler threatened her and "slapped me in the face and then swore at me" over a tape he claimed she had.

Despite his record, neighbors on the tree-shaded street where he lived for the past couple of years described him as friendly and mild-mannered and said they were unaware of his criminal past.

"He seemed normal," said Janelle Windemuller, who lived across the street and a few houses down from Dantzler's modest, lime-green house. He often frolicked in the grassy front yard with daughter Kamrie, who was killed in the rampage, and his two pit bulls. He would wave when driving or walking by, she said.

Nichole Martin, another neighbor, was afraid of Dantzler's dogs, which he often allowed to run in the yard without leashes. Still, she said, she "thought he was such a nice guy."

Dantzler was armed with a .40-caliber handgun and plenty of ammunition, the police chief said.

Investigators did not know where he obtained the gun. As a convicted felon, Dantzler would have been forbidden from legally owning the weapon.

Scores killed as violence rocks Pakistan city

The Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — A wave of deadly political and ethnic violence gripped Pakistan's largest city for the fourth straight day Friday, and police and paramilitary troops were given orders to shoot suspected assailants on sight.

As many as 95 people have been killed in Karachi since Tuesday in assassinations, shooting sprees on buses and arson attacks, according to law enforcement authorities, who were widely faulted for doing little to stop the carnage. The fighting spread from one multi-ethnic, lower-middle-class district to other parts of the seaside metropolis, and by Friday the city was under near-lockdown as armed men fired from windows and rooftops.

Karachi, a commercial hub of 18 million people where various ethnic and political groups compete for land and votes, has for decades been the scene of gang-style bloodshed. But this week's fighting ranks among the deadliest, and many of those killed were ordinary residents, including children and elderly people used as "human shields," federal Interior Minister Rehman Malik said.

Late Friday, paramilitary troops in armored vehicles began evacuating people from the most violence-racked neighborhoods, according to Pakistani media. Residents in those areas described anarchic scenes of men prowling empty streets, tossing grenades and launching rockets. Shots were fired at passersby, ambulances and television crews, whose presenters wore flak vests.

Authorities said at least 34 people were killed Thursday alone, becoming the latest victims in a year in which the Human Rights Commission of Pakistan says at least 1,138 have been slain in Karachi.

The latest spasm of violence began Tuesday, after the killing of an activist belonging to the Awami National Party, a political party that mostly represents Pashtuns originally from the Afghanistan-Pakistan border region.

House votes to block same-sex marriages on military bases

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Intent on delaying a new policy allowing gays to serve openly in the armed forces, the House voted Friday to prohibit military chaplains from performing same-sex marriages on the nation's bases, regardless of state law.

On a 236-184 vote, the House attached the measure to the defense spending bill, one of several steps the Republican-controlled chamber has taken this year to delay President Obama's new policy.

Pentagon leaders have said they see no roadblocks to ending the 17-year ban, and Defense Secretary Leon Panetta is likely to certify the change for midsummer after military training ends. Still, opposition is strong in the House.

Rep. Tim Huelskamp, R-Kansas, sponsor of the amendment, said he wanted to ensure that "America's military bases are not used to advance a narrow social agenda."

The measure would block funds to train the Chaplain Corps on the new policy. Huelskamp said the intent was to prevent chaplains from performing same-sex marriages, especially on Navy bases.

"What will happen to chaplains who decline to officiate over same-sex ceremonies?" Huelskamp asked. "The directive states that chaplains 'may' perform same-sex civil marriage ceremonies. I fear that chaplains who refuse to perform these ceremonies may find themselves under attack and their careers threatened."

Last month, New York became the sixth state, joining Iowa, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts, to legalize gay marriage along with the District.

Separately, a federal appeals court in California this week ordered the U.S. government to immediately cease enforcing the ban on openly gay members of the military.

Opponents of the amendment said more than a million members of the military have been trained on the new standard and Pentagon leaders see no adverse impact on the force.

The vote's practical effect is unclear. The ban is likely to be lifted before Congress completes the defense spending bill for the budget year beginning Oct. 1.

The overall House bill must be reconciled with a still-to-be-completed Senate version.

In a statement, Alexander Nicholson, executive director of Servicemembers United, said that "fringe lawmakers in the House are continuing to desperately try to slow down or undo a settled issue. Given that the majority of the American people, the military and our senior defense leaders support this policy change, these votes will be a stain on the legacies of those who cast them in the long run."

States weigh 'Caylee's Law' in verdict aftermath

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Lawmakers across the nation are proposing the so-called Caylee's laws that

Anthony

Anthony was acquitted of murder in the death of her 2-year-old daughter, Caylee.

Bills are being considered in a dozen or so states, including Florida. And As of Friday afternoon, an online petition supporting such a law had more than 700,000 signatures.

Some aren't sure how much a new law will help because they say parents usually report their children missing.

Anthony was found guilty of four misdemeanor counts of lying to police. She is set to be released from jail July 17.

CSI fireworks organizers did themselves proud

CHEERS: To organizers of Fourth of July fireworks on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho, for a spectacular show.

Ruth Pierce and her volunteer colleagues raised an impressive $15,000 in the final two weeks to make the 26-minute pyrotechnics display happen.

This year, the Twin Falls fireworks committee joined forces with the Jerome Events Committee to raise funds on both sides of the canyon, collectively, they came up with $5,000 more than last year.

The thousands of spectators who gathered on the campus and surrounding streets to witness it were impressed.

Congratulations on a job well done.

JEERS: To longtime right-wing Republican activist Rod Beck, for his continuing jihad to make his party ideologically pure.

Beck, a former legislator from Boise, wants the state GOP central committee, county committees and legislative committees to vet would-be Republican candidates and filter the field. The committees would choose up to two candidates for every primary race. Other candidates would be out.

Simply put, that would disenfranchise voters — those not already alienated by the new closed GOP primary, which was another of Beck's big ideas.

State Superintendent of Public

Instruction Tom Luna, a Republican, thinks it's a lousy idea to lock out potential candidates.

"I'm a strong supporter of closed primaries," Luna told the Idaho Statesman last week. "I'm not a supporter of closing the ballot access to any candidate. If someone wants to run as a Republican, they can put their name on the ballot with 15 other people, and I have no problem with that."

Isn't that how democracy is supposed to work?

CHEERS: To Luna and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter — two of the five members of the Idaho Land Board — who admit they made a mistake last year when they decided to spend $2.7 million to buy a private storage business whose revenue benefits Idaho public schools and other state institutions.

The Land Board voted unanimously to use proceeds from the previous sale of parcels from Idaho's endowment land portfolio to add Affordable Self-Storage in Boise to its portfolio.

The business is run by a private contractor, but storage industry officials and some conservatives cried foul, accusing Idaho of competing with the private sector.

They have a point. "Superintendent Luna does not support the state competing with the private sector in the storage business or any other kind of business," said Luna's spokeswoman, Melissa McGrath, adding that he's since become "disappointed in his vote and will work with the Land Board to explore selling Affordable Storage."

But Attorney General Lawrence Wasden, Secretary of State Ben Ysursa and Controller Donna Jones — the other three members of the Land Board — haven't changed their minds. They point out that the storage business generated about $30,000 in annual taxes when it was private; it now brings in $20,000 per month. Idaho's endowment — which earns about $48 million annually to benefit schools, universities and colleges, prisons and mental hospitals — holds many timberlands and commercial properties that also compete with private forests.

The authors of Idaho's Constitution, in our opinion, wouldn't have a problem with that. But back in 1889-90, they would have taken strong exception to the state, say, buying a Boise dry-goods store that competed with a privately owned business across the street.

There are plenty of other places for the Land Board to invest besides private businesses.

LETTERS OF THANKS

American Legion thanked for Boys State

I am writing this letter to thank the American Legion for the fantastic time I had at Boys State. Boys State is truly an excellent program and I strongly encourage eligible high schoolers to attend. I learned many things about government, about life and about people.

Among the things I learned:

How to write a bill in proper format.

The ABCs of leadership.

How to use parliamentary procedure.

Parliamentary procedure can be a pain.

How to take a shower in under 10 minutes.

It is possible to find a good balance between seriousness and fun, and Boys State found that balance.

Thank you, American Legion, for serving both your country and youth. I will wear my Boys State shirt often.

Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home thanked for its help, kindness

We would like to thank Mike and Catherine Parke of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home for their kindness recently when we needed help.

Our daughter passed away and although her services were not held here, we needed some assistance with a small family memorial service we held at Island Park. We called Mike and he had everything done for us the next day.

We have had the services for three loved ones at Parke's and we have never met two more kind, considerate and compassionate people. We know they are involved in many community causes. We are so fortunate to have these fine folks in the Magic Valley.

Just when you think you've seen everything ...

Casey Anthony wants more children. "I had a dream not too long ago that I was pregnant," she wrote in a letter to another prison inmate a few years ago.

John Kass

"It was like having Cays all over again," Anthony continued, referring to her little girl, Caylee. "I've thought about adopting, which even sounds weird to me saying it, but there are so many children that deserve to be loved."

And who would dare tell her not to have any more kids? Not the judge who sentenced her Thursday for lying to authorities in the death of her 2-year-old daughter.

The jury acquitted Casey Anthony of murder, yes. But somehow duct tape was pressed against the little girl's mouth. And someone dumped Caylee's body and left it to rot in that Florida swamp.

And for 31 days, Casey Anthony did not report her daughter missing, and testimony showed she lied about it. That's 31 days. For all of Casey Anthony's tears and twitches, what frightens most parents is how cold she was.

Now that she's been acquitted, she'll need money to live. Will she sell her interview? Will she get a book contract chronicling the dark carnival of her life? And will

"What do guilty people do? They lie. They avoid. They run. They mislead. ... They divert attention away from themselves and they act like nothing is wrong."

Lindsay Lohan play Casey Anthony in the Lifetime movie?

In the meantime, if she needs extra cash, Casey's criminal defense lawyers might consider giving her part-time work babysitting their children and grandchildren. After all, she does have experience.

Aside from the death of the child, what's monstrous are the 31 days of lies. According to testimony, Casey lied about Caylee being with some nanny named Zanny. Casey lied about how she and Caylee spent quality time with a wealthy boyfriend. The nanny and the boyfriend were fictitious.

As Casey lied, she partied. She got herself a tattoo — Bella Vita, meaning "Beautiful Life" in Italian. She went dancing. The lying went on for weeks as the body was in the swamp.

And that's what bothers so many parents I know. When a child goes missing, even for a minute, wordless horrors press down on a parent's heart. You tell yourself you'll never lose them, but it happens sometimes. They're little and wriggly and stubborn and often quite devious. And then they're not there.

A friend told me about losing his son for a few minutes at a water park. Another told me of his 4-year-old daughter trotting through the door of a store, to cross a fairly busy street.

The children were quickly returned to their parents. They weren't harmed. But the parents? The incident at the water park and the street crossing happened years ago. And I could see the pain as they told it, a pain that was alive and running under their skins.

It happened to my wife, Betty, when our boys were little. She was at Marshall Field's. The twins were about 4 back then and their strategy was to divide and conquer. One shrieked and had a fit. The other squirmed quietly, scheming. It was the schemer who escaped.

If you're a parent you know how quick they can be. She'd turned to comfort the one who was crying and the other ran off. He hid inside a circular rack of men's coats. He crouched down there and froze, like a rabbit.

Betty shouted his name. Nothing. She then ran to a security guard, and within seconds, they began a lockdown of the store. Just then, the escape artist stepped out from his hiding place among the coats and ran to his mother.

If you're a parent and have been there, then you know. In those few terrible minutes, there were many things going through my wife's mind. But getting a Bella Vita tattoo wasn't one of them. And dancing wasn't on her mind, either.

"Responses to grief are as varied as the day is long, but responses to guilt are oh, so predictable," said prosecutor Linda Drane Burdick in closing arguments. "What do guilty people do? They lie. They avoid. They run. They mislead. ... They divert attention away from themselves and they act like nothing is wrong."

The jury didn't buy it, though, and after the acquittal, the defense lawyers made beautiful speeches about justice. Soon, everyone involved will have their say, except Caylee.

"I was angry and shocked by the verdict," said Casey Anthony's former fiancé, Jesse Grund, on the Today show. "It's obvious from the evidence that was presented that Casey was the last person to see Caylee alive. And her body was dumped in the woods. ...

"Right now, she has everything she ever wanted. She's going to have money. She's going to have people at her doorstep, asking for her, wanting her. She's going to have that partying lifestyle she so craved."

So no matter what happened to Casey Anthony in court, we've got to assume she'll have plenty of money.

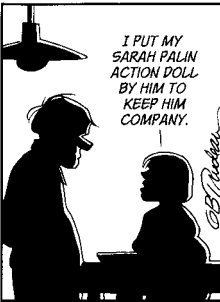

A nice house with a picket fence? More kids?

And a decent new car with a trunk that doesn't smell of death?

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Montana, Exxon Mobil split over Yellowstone River oil spill

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Montana Gov. Brian Schweitzer has decided Exxon Mobil and the state don't make good roommates after nearly a week of working together in close quarters to clean up an estimated 42,000 gallons of crude oil released into the Yellowstone River.

State officials have moved out of a joint command post overseeing the response to the spill — a mess that has painted a fresh target for scorn on one of the world's largest energy companies.

Security guards working for Exxon Mobil Corp. have closely guarded access to the command post on the second floor of the Crowne Plaza Hotel in Billings, where the Environmental Protection Agency and other federal agencies also are stationed. Attempts by The Associated Press to talk to government officials there in the first days after the spill were denied.

Schweitzer says the company and EPA have defied state open government laws by denying public access. So on Friday, he opened an alternate state-run Yellowstone River Oil Spill Information Center, underscoring mounting tensions over the pipeline rupture that has dirtied parts of the scenic waterway.

"Montana has a much higher standard than Exxon Mobil when it comes to transparency," Schweitzer said. "We won't be involved in secret meetings and secret documents."

The Democratic governor pointed out discrepancies in the company's reports of how long it took to shut down the pipeline after it ruptured July 1 and said company officials are downplaying the damage to wildlife.

With its multi-billion-dollar profits and the legacy of the 11-million-gallon

Cleanup workers use oil absorbent materials along the Yellowstone River near Laurel, Mont., Wednesday.

Valdez oil tanker spill of 1989, Exxon Mobil offers an easy foil for a politician like Schweitzer.

Throw in the corporation's massive ground presence to deal with the spill — an estimated 500 contractors and employees as of Friday, plus its role providing security — and it's no wonder the governor's folksy yet combative style has resonated in a state proud of its natural attractions and clean environment.

"I just want to thank you for who you are and for your skepticism of Exxon," Susan Huntoon, 65, of Laurel, told the governor during a community meeting Friday at the state's new command post. "We all know they want to spend as little as they can. We saw that with BP."

Keenly aware of the company's public image, Exxon Mobil executives have repeatedly apologized for the spill and have pledged to spend whatever it takes to restore the river.

But the company has made some glaring missteps on the public relations front, including the appearance that it was downplaying the extent of the contamination in the first days of the cleanup.

The company said then that the damage was concentrated within a five- to 10-mile stretch of river. That figure has been growing since, hitting 30 miles in recent days.

Later came inaccuracies in how long it took to fully shut down the pipeline from the company's control room in Houston. After initially saying it took six minutes, the company revealed in filings with pipeline regulators that it took almost an hour to completely stop the flow.

Exxon Mobil Pipeline Co. President Gary Pruessing has apologized for that, too. Company officials insist there was never any intent to deceive.

Spokesman Alan Jeffers said Exxon Mobil learned its lesson about dealing with spills forthrightly after the Exxon Valdez soiled Alaska's coastline.

Exxon Mobil quickly came under fire in that case for downplaying the threat, deflecting the blame and being aloof. Crude oil from the tanker still lingers on some beaches 22 years later, and some marine species never recovered.

"Our focus needs to be on ensuring accuracy, the double- and triple-checking of data to ensure the public gets accurate information," Jeffers said. "The principal of active and frequent communications with the community is one we take very seriously. It's part of the system that was born out of the Valdez accident and is really important for us."

EPA spokesman Matthew Allen said the agency has been pleased with Exxon Mobil's efforts to date. The company has accepted fault for the spill and has heeded the agency's orders on the cleanup, Allen said.

"It's much better to have a company that acknowledges this is their responsibility and is doing the cleanup than to fight them all the way," he said. "We're happy with the level of cooperation."

There have been confirmed reports of oil as far as 80 miles downstream from the pipeline break near Laurel, and on Friday, state officials said they had found significant amounts of oil 40 miles downstream near Pompeys Pillar National Monument.

Wildfires burn in remote Nevada nuclear test site

LAS VEGAS (AP) — One lightning-sparked wildfire was contained and firefighters were battling a second blaze Friday in a remote undeveloped part of the vast federal nuclear testing reservation formerly known as the Nevada Test Site, a National Nuclear Security Administration official said.

About 100 firefighters with support from three air tankers, a spotter plane and a helicopter were fighting the blazes touched off Monday in rugged mountain and desert terrain about 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The blazes covered more than 9 square miles, but no injuries were reported and officials said no structures, roads, power lines or other facilities in the sprawling federal nuclear proving ground were threatened.

Air monitors detected no release of radiation, said Dante Pistone, an NNSA spokesman in North Las Vegas.

"There have been no positive readings," Pistone told The Associated Press. "These fires are in remote locations and not near any historic testing areas."

The larger fire, dubbed the Timber fire, was burning pinyon, sage and cheatgrass well north of the Nye County community of Amargosa Valley and east of Beatty. Pistone said it was about 25 percent contained.

The separate Weston Fire, several miles southeast of the Timber fire, was 100 percent contained.

At a combined 6,000 acres, the two wildfires at the Nevada National Security Site were less than 5 percent the size of the Las Conchas fire that has been burning since June 26 in the mountains near NNSA facilities in Los Alamos, N.M. That fire was reported at 40 percent containment Friday.

Pistone said there was no firm estimate about when the Timber fire in Nevada would be contained. He said that with no infrastructure threatened some parts of the fire might eventually be allowed to burn out.

Family, friends search for missing Moab skydiver

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Family members canvassed Moab's main strip Friday and paragliders planned to scan the foothills of the southeastern Utah town Saturday for any sign of a skydiving instructor missing more than a week.

David Brown, 37, was last seen June 29, according to family reports and Facebook posts.

Moab police said they were continuing to investigate the disappearance of Brown, who works at Skydive Moab.

"I'm very grateful for the Moab Police Department, the volunteer search effort and all those who came out in support through social media," Brown's sister, Wendi Tekamp, told The Associated Press on Friday. "They can really help find Dave."

Tekamp, Brown's uncle and Brown's girlfriend traveled to Moab to support search efforts.

Tekamp said two Arizona men plan to fly motorized paragliders along the foothills Saturday, and searchers using dogs continued looking for Brown. Brown's uncle planned to rent a dirt bike to cover the trail system in the area.

Brown's friends told KTVX-TV in Salt Lake City he wasn't planning a trip and he left behind all his belongings, including money.

His friends initially thought he might be visiting his girlfriend in Las Vegas, but Tekamp said Friday that Brown's girlfriend returned to Moab from Sweden on Thursday night to support search efforts.

AROUND THE STATE

3 killed, 1 critically injured in crash near Parma

PARMA — The Idaho State Police says a car carrying four teens from Weiser pulled into the path of a pickup truck hauling a horse near Parma, killing three of them and critically injuring a fourth.

The crash happened just before 11:30 p.m. Thursday at the intersection of U.S. Highways 20 and 95 north of Parma.

The ISP says 16-year-old Sloane Weldon failed to stop at a stop sign. The pickup hit the driver's side of Weldon's car, killing her and two passengers, 17-year-old Elisabeth Cole and 16-year-old Rebecca Cole. Another passenger, 16-year-old Benson Richardson, was hospitalized in Boise in critical condition.

Two adults in the pickup were uninjured. Two children, ages 3 and 2, were taken to the hospital as a precaution, but have been released.

Idaho boosts bag limit for adult chinook

BOISE — Fisherman on the lower Salmon and Little Salmon rivers will be allowed to bag more adult chinook salmon this season, to boost the likelihood that anglers will catch their full share.

Idaho's Fish and Game Commission decided on Thursday that anglers may keep six chinook daily, of which only three of which may be adults, and have 18 in possession, only nine of which may be adults.

The decision comes as high flows on the two waterways have delayed passage of adult salmon bound for the Rapid River Hatchery.

Anglers have harvested only about one third of a 9,000-fish adult harvest share.

Commissioners also authorized a chinook season in the Boise River — if state wildlife managers decide they have enough fish from hatcheries around the state to stock them.

Former first lady Betty Ford dies at 93

Associated Press

Betty Ford said things that first ladies just don't say, even today. And 1970s America loved her for it.

According to Mrs. Ford, her young adult children probably had smoked marijuana — and if she were their age, she'd try it, too. She told "60 Minutes" she wouldn't be surprised to learn that her youngest, 18-year-old Susan, was in a sexual relationship (an embarrassed Susan issued a denial).

She mused that living together before marriage might be wise, thought women should be drafted into the military if men were, and spoke up unapologetically for abortion rights, taking a position contrary to the president's. "Having babies is a blessing, not a duty," Mrs. Ford said.

The former first lady, whose triumph over drug and alcohol addiction became a beacon of hope for addicts and the inspiration for her Betty Ford Center in California, died at age 93, family friend Marty Allen said Friday.

Details of her death and where she died were not immediately available.

"She was a wonderful wife and mother; a great friend; and a courageous First Lady," former President George H.W. Bush said in a statement on Friday. "No one confronted life's struggles with more fortitude or honesty, and as a result, we all learned from the challenges she faced."

While her husband served as president, Betty Ford's comments weren't the kind of genteel, innocuous talk expected from a first lady, and a Republican one no less. Her unscripted comments sparked tempests in the press and dismayed President Gerald Ford's advisers, who were trying to soothe the national psyche after Watergate. But to the scandal-scarred, Vietnam-weary, hippie-rattled nation, Mrs. Ford's openness was refreshing.

Candor worked for Betty Ford, again and again. She would build an enduring legacy by opening up the toughest times of her life as public example.

In an era when cancer was discussed in hushed tones and mastectomy was still a taboo subject, the first lady shared the specifics of her breast cancer surgery. The publicity helped bring the disease into the open and inspired countless women to seek breast examinations.

Her most painful revelation came 15 months after leaving the White House, when Mrs. Ford announced that she was entering treatment for a longtime addiction to painkillers and alcohol. It turned out the famously forthcoming first lady had been keeping a secret, even from herself.

She used the unvarnished story of her own descent and recovery to crusade for better addiction treatment, especially for women. She co-founded the nonprofit Betty Ford Center near the Fords' home in Rancho Mirage, Calif., in 1982. Mrs. Ford raised millions of dollars for the center, kept close watch over its operations, and regularly welcomed groups of new patients with a speech that started, "Hello, my name's Betty Ford, and I'm an alcoholic and drug addict."

Although most famous for a string of celebrity patients over the years — from Elizabeth Taylor and Johnny Cash to Lindsay Lohan — the center keeps its rates relatively affordable and has served more than 90,000 people.

"People who get well often say, 'You saved my life,' and 'You've turned my life around,'" Mrs. Ford once said. "They don't realize we merely provided the means for them to do it themselves, and that's all."

In a statement Friday, President Barack Obama said the Betty Ford Center would honor Mrs. Ford's legacy "by giving countless Americans a new lease on life."

"As our nation's First Lady, she was a powerful advocate for women's health and women's rights," the president said. "After leaving the White House, Mrs. Ford helped reduce the social stigma surrounding addiction and inspired thousands to seek much-needed treatment."

Ex-Cameron aide arrested in UK hacking scandal

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister David Cameron's former communications chief and an ex-royal reporter were arrested Friday in a phone hacking and police corruption scandal that has already toppled a major tabloid and rattled the cozy relationship between British politicians and the powerful Murdoch media empire.

The 168-year-old muck-raking tabloid News of the World was shut down Thursday after being engulfed by allegations its journalists paid police for information and hacked into the phone messages of celebrities, young murder victims and even the grieving families of dead soldiers. Its last publication day is Sunday.

The hacking revelations horrified the nation and advertisers, who pulled their ads en masse. News International, the British arm of Rupert Murdoch's News Corp., jettisoned the paper in hopes of saving its $19 billion deal to take over satellite broadcaster British Sky Broadcasting. But the British government on Friday signaled the deal would be delayed due to the crisis.

Many expressed astonishment that 43-year-old Rebekah Brooks, who was editor of News of the World when some of the hacking allegedly occurred, was keeping her job while the paper's 200 staff were laid off.

People’s views of the afterlife is as varied as individual heritages

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Descansos, or roadside memorials, dot many Idaho highways. The word “descanso” means “little rest” in Spanish, and reminds survivors of the place where the next journey in their loved one’s life began.

But where do we think that journey is? Not surprisingly, our belief in what the after-life has in store is as rich a tapestry as our individual heritages.

Seventy-four percent of Americans believe in an afterlife, according to a 2008 Religious Landscapes Survey conducted by the Pew Research Center.

More people believe in heaven than in hell, the survey showed.

Overall, 74 percent said they believe in heaven, defined as the place “where people who have led good lives are eternally rewarded.” The number is lower — 59 percent — for those who stated a belief in hell, the place “where people who have led bad lives ... are eternally punished.”

The definition of afterlife expands across religions.

The survey found that 62 percent of Buddhists believe in nirvana (a transcendental state above pain and desire), and 61 percent of Hindus believe in reincarnation.

Even stacked against thousands of years of religious dogma, people’s belief of what awaits them after this life is truly personal.

“I don’t think that is something you can decide overnight,” said 33-year-old Chris Weber, of Twin Falls, who hasn’t come to any conclusions about what may be in store for his soul. “There are a lot of factors to consider and you have to weigh them against your own belief system.”

Even for people who believe in heaven, and who have faith they eventually will arrive there, don’t really know what to expect.

Burley resident Will Secondi, 25, said, “I guess I’ll find out when I get there.”

Of FAITH and WORK

Thrift store helps job seekers bounce back

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

After more than 20 years as a machinist, Morgan Layton was out of work and couldn’t find a job in Southern California.

His parents lived in Idaho and, as they were getting on in years, he moved to Jerome to be closer to them. He also hoped the move would increase his chances of finding work. But a year and a half later he still was out of a job.

Then he was referred to Deseret Industries in Twin Falls.

Layton, who on Thursday was busy stocking shelves, now works at the store full time while pursuing his career goals in manufacturing by working toward a certificate at the College of Southern Idaho. What’s more, the store is paying his way through school.

Layton is not unlike hundreds of others who, finding themselves out of work, have found help through the Deseret Industries program, which allows people to earn an income, enhance skills and work at becoming self-reliant.

Deseret Industries, owned by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is supported through donations from community members, said Twin Falls store manager

Solomon Tekle sorts books Thursday at Deseret Industries in Twin Falls. Tekle said he plans to earn a certificate at the College of Southern Idaho, and the store will pay his way through school until he earns it.

Wayne Tonge. People know it as a thrift store, but Tonge said it’s much more than that.

The store employs 11 staff members and 66 associates, he said. Associates are at the store temporarily, just long enough for them to get on their feet and find other work. So far this year, the store has helped place 34 associates into other jobs.

“It’s about helping people progress,” he said. “We want people to be self-reliant.”

Associates don’t need to be members of the LDS church to work at the D.I., but they do need to get approval from a Mormon bishop. About half of the associates are members of the LDS church, Tonge said.

Some, like Solomon Tekle, are refugees.

Tekle, who recently came from Ethiopia, said Deseret Industries is helping him get accustomed to life in Twin Falls.

“I love the work,” he said Thursday as he sorted books in the store’s warehouse. “The company introduces me to new things.”

Tekle plans to attend CSI to enhance his English skills and is considering going into carpentry or construction. As with Layton, the store will pay his way through school until he earns a certificate.

Marcus Thomas, who has been at the store just under a year and now works in a supervisory position, is pursuing a culinary arts certificate. Thomas spent 20 months in prison and said the church and Deseret Industries have given him a new outlook on life and more hope for the future.

When he first came to the store he had the same assumptions about it that a lot of other people might have, he said — that it’s a charity where only the mentally impaired work.

But that’s not the case, Thomas said.

Associates learn skills that help them become more viable contenders in the job market such as how to manage others, work a register or give good customer service.

For some associates who’ve earned a college certificate, Tonge said the store will pay their salaries at other jobs until they become proficient enough that the business will want to hire them. It’s part of a business partnership the store has with some area companies.

There have been many success stories in the more than 20 years he has worked for the church, Tonge said.

Andrew Weeks may be reached at 735-3233 or aweeks@magicvalley.com.

TIPS FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

The LDS Employment Resource Center sits next to Deseret Industries. People of any faith can come to look for employment or learn how to become a more viable contender in the job market. The center won’t find a job for you. But it will help you in the search, said site coordinator Johnny Andrew. The site offers computer stations, job databases, classes and staff to help in the job search. One tip for those seeking work is to make a list of people you know. “We encourage people to do the hard thing — to talk to people,” Andrew said. “Tell them, ‘I’m out of work. Do you know anyone who can help?’ Don’t ask for a job. Ask for information. ... Most people are willing to talk about their jobs.” Information: Call 734-0937 or stop by 726 Cheney Drive, Twin Falls.

A toy awaits sorting at Deseret Industries in Twin Falls.

MISSIONARIES

Returned from serving

Elder Jameson Tyler Bastow returned to Twin Falls on June 29 after serving two years in the Chile Conception Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He will speak at 10 a.m. Sunday in the Twin Falls 18th Ward.

Bastow is the son of David and Tamie Bastow of Twin Falls. A 2008 graduate of Twin Falls High School, he attended the College of Southern Idaho for one year prior to his mission and plans to complete his AAS in pre-med at CSI by January 2012. He is employed by Swensen's Markets, Inc.

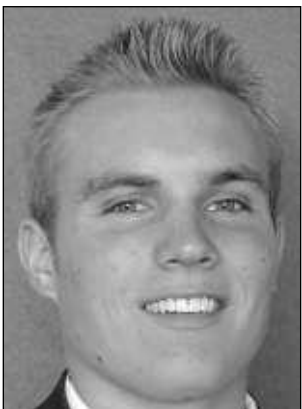

Burley, and Shawn and Trina Baker of Kuna.

Elder Cameron James Clark, the son of Hank and Melanie Clark, has been called to serve in the Virginia Richmond Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Cameron is a 2010 graduate of Declo High School, a LDS seminary graduate and an Eagle Scout. He recently completed one year at the College of Southern Idaho.

Cameron will speak in sacrament meeting at 12:40 p.m. on July 10, at the Declo Stake Center in the Declo 2nd Ward. He will enter the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah, on July 20.

Elder Riley Del Traveller returned to Twin Falls on June 30 after serving in the Panama Panama City Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 2 p.m. in the Twin Falls 15th Ward.

Riley is the son of Mike and Brenda Traveller. A 2008 graduate of Twin Falls High School, he attended Utah State University for one year prior to his mission and plans to return to Utah State this fall.

Dunia Emmanuel, a graduate of Canyon Ridge High School, has been called to serve in the Alabama Birmingham Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He will leave for the Missionary Training Center on Sept. 7.

He is the son of the late John Ninani and Copicita Tabu. Dunia is a member of the Twin Falls 18th Ward.

Called to serve

Elder Brawn Gary Baker has been called to serve in the England London Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He will speak Sunday in the Springdale 2nd Ward.

He will leave for the England Missionary Training Center on July 14.

Brawn is the son of Lisa and Brendon Gorringe of Braden Lee Coleman, a graduate of Canyon Ridge High School, has been called to serve in the Dominican Republic East Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He will depart for the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah, on Oct. 19.

Braden is an Eagle Scout and has been accepted to attend BYU-Provo when he returns.

He is the son of Darren and Valerie Coleman of the Twin Falls 18th Ward.

Chapman University offers to buy Crystal Cathedral property

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — An Orange County university has offered to buy property belonging to the famous Crystal Cathedral Ministries, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection last year.

Chapman University has offered $46 million to use two buildings on the sprawling campus in Garden Grove, possibly for a new medical school, university president Jim Doti said Tuesday.

Other possibilities include exploring the option of building a pharmacy or dental program on half of the property, with the remaining 35 acres leased back to the megachurch, he said.

"It is hard to find buildable land in a dynamic community like Garden Grove," Doti said. "To dream big dreams, it helps to have the wherewithal to do it — and the space."

But there are other potential offers in the works and it is too soon to say what will happen to the sprawling church property, said Marc Winthrop, the church's bankruptcy attorney.

The church aims to sell off its property — and lease portions back for use for services — to help erase its $36 million mortgage and wipe out almost all of the $10 million in unsecured debt that has plagued the institution for several years.

CHURCH NEWS CRITERIA

What fits our criteria for church news:

- One-time or annual events, such as a concert, holiday luncheon or ribbon cutting.
- An announcement of the launch of a new program or the hiring of a new pastor.
- Special guest speakers who come from outside the valley or state.
- Changes to the time, place or location of an existing program.
- Other one-time developments, such as a church remodeling project.

What does not fit:

- The topics of weekly sermons, or which Scriptures will be read.
- Reminder of regular events, such as weekly fellowship or other meetings.

If you have questions about whether an item qualifies as church news, contact Ellen Thomason at 735-3266 or ellen@magicvalley.com or Andrew Weeks at 735-3233 or aweeks@magicvalley.com. To have information about weekly sermons or meetings, monthly programs, or contact information about your church published in the Times-News, contact the newspaper's paid-advertising department at 735-3253 or announcements@magicvalley.com.

N., Twin Falls, will gather items for relaxation and recreation for men and women in the armed forces. Items such as playing cards, puzzle books, magazines, Frisbees, stationery, hand-held games, etc., are welcome.

Services of Holy Communion will be held at 8 and 10 a.m. Wiggle Worship, which is for children 7 years and younger and their parents, begins at 9:10 a.m. Ascension Café meets at 9 a.m. and will explore the topic of "How do I respond to the parts of the liturgy I do not believe?"

Ascension is handicap accessible.

Information: 733-1248 or www.ascension.episcopaldaho.org.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thomason at ellen@magicvalley.com. Deadline is 5 p.m. Wednesday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Should young people not read the parts of the Bible that are violent and scary?

McClatchy Newspapers

LET THEM READ IF THEY'RE INTERESTED

Most of the parts in the Bible that are violent and scary can be found in the Old Testament. Other than time and place it reads very much like the daily news.

The conflicts, persecutions, struggles and troubles between people of different tribes were rampant then and is today as well.

I believe young people should be introduced to the Old Testament with the understanding it is a combination of historical understanding and myths with a moral and spiritual direction. They need to be taught to look beyond the incidents that took place and find the deeper meaning and lesson in what happened.

With every dark and violent story there is the seed of greater wisdom that can enlighten us on how to make a better world and live a better life.

From the historical and cultural point of view, the Old Testament is a good resource to become familiar with our ancient ancestors and their culture. For spiritual nourishment and direction I suggest the words of Jesus in the New Testament, more specifically the Gospels.

Jesus' message was one of love, forgiveness and compassion. He directed people to be friendly and not fight; to be compassionate and not condemn; to help, not hurt.

If you have a young person who is interested in reading the Bible, I would guess they have the maturity to not be negatively affected by the discomforting parts.

— The Rev. Duke Tufty, Unity Temple on the Plaza, Kansas City, Mo.

PARENTS SHOULD DECIDE WHETHER KIDS ARE READY

Despite how we often speak of it, the Bible is not a single book. Rather, the Bible is a library of many books representing different kinds of literature that are variously accessible to the average reader. I don't recommend that people, regardless of age, read the books of a library sequentially from the first shelf to last. Rather, people are best served if they are deliberate about their choice of books, based on their background and knowledge.

Voices of

Similarly with the Bible. I don't recommend that people read it sequentially cover to cover, and I believe that certain books are more easily understood by the average modern reader.

It is wonderful that young people read and appreciate the word of God in the Bible, but that is best done in a deliberate and orderly fashion. There are passages in the Bible that may not be age-appropriate reading for young persons. The vetting of such passages requires good judgment on the part of the reader's parents and some supervision during the reading.

When the parent feels that their children are of an age that they can understand a challenging biblical passage, and when the parent is willing to sit and discuss the meaning of the passage with their children, that is the time that their young people should be invited to read those violent and scary Scripture passages.

Vatican opens archives for unprecedented exhibit

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican will display 100 select documents from its Secret Archives at an unprecedented exhibit next year that includes previously unpublished papers from its World War II papacy.

"Lux in Arcana: The Vatican Secret Archives Revealed" opens in February at Rome's Capitoline Museums and marks the first time such precious documents, manuscripts and parchments have been allowed out of the Vatican vaults for view by the general public.

The occasion is the archive's 400th anniversary. On view will be the acts of Galileo's trial for heresy as well as the letter from members of the British Parliament asking Pope Clement XII to annul the marriage of Henry VIII and Catherine of Aragon — one of the key events that led to England's break with the Roman Catholic Church.

Organizers said some of the previously unseen documents concern the papacy of Pope Pius XII, accused by some of failing to do enough to stop the Holocaust. Those documents normally wouldn't have been released for another three or four years since Vatican librarians slowly catalog the archives in chronological order and are still working on Pius' papacy.

The Vatican's chief archivist, Monsignor Sergio Pagano, said visitors shouldn't expect to find anything that directly concerns Pius' role in the war in the upcoming exhibit but rather more "emotional" material about the period, such as a diary from a concentration camp.

Releasing selective documentation about the debate over his role in the war, Pagano said, would be "dishonest" since scholars won't have access to the full record.

But he said scholars could expect some "juicy" information when the archives are fully opened. Asked to explain what he meant, Pagano said he knew the general "flavor" and "perfume" of the contents because he has overseen the cataloging for the past four years.

He said he believed the new documentation would show that Pius was "tormented" but that he also "did a lot to defend those who suffered all over the place, and did a lot not just during the war but after the war."

Let’s make a deal

Calif. business trying to tackle Groupon’s model with trio of deals

By Rachel Metz
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Groupon’s online coupons save people cash, but they’re not always great deals for merchants. Some businesses complain that bargain hunters rarely return after scoring a cheap meal or massage.

A new site called LevelUp believes it has a way for restaurants, nail salons and other local businesses to keep people coming back. To drum up repeat business, the company offers consumers a series of three deals, each better than the one before.

Online deal sites abound, but LevelUp hopes to stand out by giving people an initial offer that’s on par with competitors’ — and following that up with even better deals. After three visits, LevelUp figures that customers will be familiar with the merchant enough to return, even without discounts.

It’s still too early to say whether enough consumers will be willing to pay full price— a key factor that will determine whether LevelUp becomes a serious threat to Groupon or remains one of hundreds of wannabes.

Groupon created a new marketing phenomenon catering to people’s hunger for bargains. It offers the chance to purchase discounts targeted to a person’s city and preferences. For example, someone might pay $20 for a $40 gift certificate to a spa, restaurant, car wash or yoga studio.

The Chicago-based company’s upcoming initial public offering of stock is expected to be in high demand, even though it lost $413 million last year on revenue of $713 million.

The harsh reality of the online coupon business is that the concept of offering customers deep discounts is easy to replicate. All you need is a sales team to craft deals with merchants, and an email service for blasting those offers to people who sign up on a website.

But rivals have difficulty breaking through because market leader Groupon already has 83 million people subscribing to its daily offers by email, and second-place LivingSocial has 39 million. By contrast, LevelUp has just 100,000 subscribers.

Small businesses often prefer to partner with a service

Seth Priebatsch, founder of SCVNGR, is seen in a conference room at the company, in Cambridge, Mass., on May 31. Priebatsch is also the founder of LevelUp.

IN A NUTSHELL

WHAT IT IS: Unlike deal sites such as Groupon, newcomer LevelUp offers users a series of three deals, each better than the one before. For example, the first deal might be an offer for $30 worth of food at a local restaurant for $15, while the second could offer $30 worth of food for $10, and the third might be $30 worth of food for $5.

HOW IT WORKS: A user must buy the first deal to be eligible to purchase the second, and both the first and second to get the third.

WHY THEY DO IT: LevelUp thinks that offering increasingly good deals will lead to more repeat customers for local businesses.

— The Associated Press

that can reach more potential customers, even though LevelUp is trying to sweeten the deal for merchants by taking no commission on the first of the three offers.

Others are trying to distinguish themselves by targeting niche audiences, such as nerds or moms, or people with specific interests, such as fitness or food.

Facebook is testing a deals program of its own in five U.S. cities, trying to rival Groupon by tapping Facebook’s base of 750 million users worldwide. Google has one, too, rolled out first in Portland, Ore.

LevelUp comes from the folks behind Scvngr (pronounced “scavenger”), a mobile-gaming startup in Cambridge, Mass., created by 22-year-old Princeton dropout Seth Priebatsch.

LevelUp, whose name is gamer-speak for the act of rising to a higher status in a video game, launched in Boston and Philadelphia in March. It plans to expand this summer to major markets such as San Francisco, New York and Chicago, the home turf of market leader Groupon. Most of the businesses it works with are local, but deals have included larger brands, such as Levi’s.

Sucharita Mulpuru, a Forrester Research analyst who covers online shopping, says LevelUp will have trouble competing not just because of its size. If LevelUp proves successful, competitors may apply the company’s multiple deal model to their own sites. Mulpuru believes Groupon in particular could simply copy LevelUp’s idea. In May, it did something similar by offering a half-off card for eight sandwiches at sub chain Quizno’s.

Weak hiring casts doubts on strength of rebound

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hiring slowed to a near-standstill last month, raising doubts that the economy will rebound in the second half of the year.

The report baffled economists who had predicted much stronger job creation. And it escalated a debate in Washington over how to spur hiring and energize the economy while also cutting federal spending.

Just 18,000 net jobs were created in June, the fewest in nine months. The unemployment rate rose to 9.2 percent, the highest rate of the year, the Labor Department said Friday.

Stocks plunged after the report was released, although the market recovered some losses in late-afternoon trading. The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 62 points for the day. Broader indexes also fell.

For President Barack Obama, the sputtering job market represents a threat 16 months before his reelection bid.

“Our economy as a whole just isn’t producing nearly enough jobs for everybody who is looking,” Obama acknowledged in a speech in the White House Rose Garden.

Obama used the dismal job data to press Congress to raise the government’s borrowing limit. He also said Congress could strengthen the economy by passing three free-trade accords, approving government projects to create construction jobs and extending a Social Security tax cut.

But Republicans oppose an increase in the $14.3 trillion borrowing limit without steep cuts in spending. And they said the report reinforces their argument that tax increases would stunt job growth and shouldn’t be part of any deal.

Friday’s report suggested that a slowdown that struck the economy in the spring and curtailed job creation may be more than brief.

“June’s employment report doesn’t have a single redeeming feature,” said Paul Ashworth, an economist at Capital Economics. “It’s awful from start to finish.”

Two years after the recession officially ended, companies are adding fewer workers despite record cash stockpiles and healthy profit margins.

A result is that more people are giving up looking for work. More than a quarter-million people stopped their job searches in June. That kept the unemployment rate from rising even further. When laid-off workers stop looking for work, they are no longer counted as unemployed.

Caterpillar accused of demoting executive discovering tax dodge

By Peter S. Green
Bloomberg News

NEW YORK — Caterpillar Inc. used offshore subsidiaries in Switzerland and Bermuda to avoid about $2 billion in U.S. taxes from 2000 to 2009, boosting its earnings through a “tax and financial statement fraud,” according to a Caterpillar executive’s lawsuit.

The company, the world’s largest construction-equipment maker, sold and shipped spare parts globally from an Illinois warehouse while improperly attributing at least $5.6 billion of profits from those sales to a unit in Geneva, according to the suit filed by Daniel J. Schlicksup. He was a global tax strategy manager for Caterpillar from 2005 to 2008.

Schlicksup, 49, sued in U.S. District Court in Peoria, Ill., in 2009, claiming he was moved to a job that limits his career opportunities because he complained to superiors that the “Swiss Structure” ran afoul of federal tax rules. He’s seeking a court order to give him back his old job and prevent any retaliation. He also seeks stock options that he claims were wrongly withheld as well as legal fees and punitive damages.

His lawsuit, which calls the structure a “tax dodge,” followed a request for job protection he filed with the Department of Labor under provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, court records show. The law bars retaliation against corporate whistleblowers. Schlicksup declined to comment for this story. His attorney, Dan O’Day, declined to say whether Schlicksup has taken his concerns to the Internal Revenue Service.

Caterpillar spokesman Jim Dugan said the company has engaged in no wrongdoing, and its attorneys said in a court filing that Schlicksup’s transfer wasn’t a demotion. Dugan declined to comment on the suit’s specific allegations, saying Caterpillar “complies with applicable tax laws and regulations.”

It could be difficult to prove the company underpaid federal taxes, said Reuven Avi-Yonah, director of the international tax law program at the University of Michigan Law School in Ann Arbor. IRS officials have had only mixed success recovering large settlements in corporate income-tax cases, and “$2 billion would be an extraordinarily large recovery,” said Edward Kleinbard, a law professor at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles and a former corporate tax attorney.

Peoria-based Caterpillar, which reported year over year earnings growth exceeding 250 percent in each of the last two quarters, is among several U.S. multinationals asking Congress to end U.S. corporate income taxes on profits earned abroad. The company had $3.7 billion of pretax income last year on $42.6 billion in revenue, 68 percent of which came from offshore.

“What we are asking for is a level playing field when we compete with foreign competitors,” said Edward Rapp, the company’s chief financial officer, in testimony to a congressional committee May 12.

Caterpillar’s Swiss strategy, as described in depositions and exhibits attached to Schlicksup’s lawsuit, reflects one way U.S. corporations reduce their actual tax rates. Aided by lower taxes overseas, the company had an overall effective tax rate of about 26 percent on about $27 billion of pretax income from 2000 through 2009, based on data compiled by Bloomberg from the company’s disclosures. The top federal corporate income tax rate in the U.S. is 35 percent.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK (AP) — An unexpected drop in hiring put an end to the excitement that had been bubbling up on Wall Street over the past two weeks.

Stock indexes fell sharply Friday, erasing most of the week's gains, after the government reported that U.S. employers created the fewest number of jobs in nine months. The 18,000 net jobs in created in June were a fraction of what many economists expected and dampened hopes that the economy was improving. Private companies added jobs at the slowest pace in more than a year. The unemployment rate edged up to 9.2 percent, its highest level this year.

The Standard and Poor's 500 index fell 9.42 points, or 0.7 percent, to 1,343.80. That eliminated the index's gains from Thursday and left it with a 0.3 percent gain for the week.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 62.29, or 0.5 percent, to 12,657.20. The Dow, which had been down by as much as 150 points Friday, had only its second down day over the past nine. The Nasdaq composite dropped 12.85, or 0.4 percent, to 2,859.81. It was its first loss in two weeks.

Wynn buys $12.7M Chinese vase set for Macau casino

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Wynn Resorts has acquired a rare set of antique Chinese vases to adorn its newest resort in the Chinese gambling enclave of Macau.

The Las Vegas-based company announced Friday it paid more than $12.7 million for four porcelain vases Thursday at a London auction.

The company says the price is more than double the world auction record for similar artifacts.

The vessels date from the late 1700s and early 1800s. Wynn Resorts says the only similar examples belong to the British Royal Family.

Buying the pieces is part of the Wynn company's project to bring Chinese art back to China.

The vases will be on display in a company resort set to open in 2015 on Macau's Cotai Strip.

Consumers borrowed more for eighth straight month

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans took on more debt in May and used their credit cards more for only the second time in nearly three years. Consumers stepped up their borrowing just as the economy began to slump and hiring slowed.

The Federal Reserve said Friday that consumer borrowing rose $5.1 billion in May, the eighth straight monthly increase. It followed a revised gain of $5.7 billion in April. Borrowing in the category that covers credit cards increased, as did borrowing in the category for auto and student loans.

The overall increase pushed consumer borrowing to a seasonally adjusted annual level of $2.43 trillion in May. That was just 1.7 percent higher than the nearly four-year low of $2.39 trillion hit in September.

Borrowing is a sign of confidence in the economy. Consumers tend to take on more debt when they feel wealthier. That boosts consumer spending. Ultimately, it gives businesses more faith to expand and hire. But an increase in credit card debt can also be a sign of people falling on harder times.

The economy added just 18,000 jobs in June, the fewest in nine months, the Labor Department said Friday.

Economists have said that temporary factors, in part, have forced some employers to scale back hiring plans. High gas prices have cut into consumer spending, which fuels 70 percent of economic activity. And supply-chain disruptions stemming from the Japan crisis have slowed U.S. manufacturing production.

The increase in credit card borrowing marked only the second monthly gain since August 2008. Households began borrowing less and saving more when unemployment spiked during the Great Recession. Many have resisted pulling out their credit cards in the two years since the downturn ended. Even with the May increase in credit card debt, this category is down 4.4 percent over the past year and 18.5 percent from its peak in August 2008.

High unemployment, slow wage growth, and a weakening housing market have forced people to be more frugal. Analysts believe the rise in student loans reflects the slumping economy: more people who have lost jobs have returned to school to get training for new careers.

Most analysts had thought the economy would pick up in the second half of this year. Manufacturing output has shown signs of reviving and auto factories in Japan have resumed production. And gas prices have come down a little. The national average for gas on Friday was $3.59 a gallon, down from a peak of nearly $4 in early May.

But a weaker job market, plus the slumping housing market and fears of the fallout from a European debt crisis, could weigh on the economy for the rest of the year.

Peter Newland, an economist at Barclays Capital, said consumer borrowing would show gradual gains in coming months. But he said the modest gains were "unlikely to be a strong driver of consumer spending for some time to come."

Economists don't expect consumers to load up on debt the way they did during the housing boom. During that period, Americans felt wealthier and more willing to take on increased debt because of the soaring value of their homes.

The Federal Reserve's borrowing report includes auto loans, student loans and credit cards. But it excludes mortgages and loans tied to real estate.

Caterpillar

U.S. multinationals including Google also report overall effective tax rates that are lower than the U.S. rate — partly because of the effect of their overseas operations. Google's overall effective rate for 2007 through 2009 was about 25 percent, based on disclosures in its annual reports. Its overseas tax rate for the period was 2.4 percent.

Caterpillar's Swiss income is subject to a 10 percent tax rate, according to a legal document filed in the case and provided to Bloomberg News by O'Day, Schlicksup's attorney. While the combined federal, state and local tax rate in Geneva is about 24 percent, companies frequently receive exemptions, according to the Geneva Economic Development Office.

The company said in the document that one purpose of the Swiss structure is to lower its taxes. It also agreed that "Caterpillar pays more tax to Switzerland and less tax to the United States than it would have without" the strategy, according to the document.

Around 1999, the U.S.

parent company transferred the role of "global purchaser" of spare parts from third-party manufacturers from itself to the Swiss unit, according to a memo prepared in 2006 by PricewaterhouseCoopers, the New York-based accounting firm that designed the strategy.

The Geneva subsidiary, Caterpillar SARL, or CSARL, had no spare-parts employees and did no work to sell or ship the parts, Schlicksup claims in the lawsuit. The parts are shipped to dealers around the globe from a warehouse in Morton, Ill., about 10 miles southeast of Caterpillar's Peoria headquarters, according to the lawsuit, which also describes the spare-parts business as the company's most profitable line.

"In order to shift profit to Switzerland, Caterpillar pretended to shift the management and control of a large portion of its most profitable business segment to Switzerland, but in reality the management and control of this business remains in the United States," Schlicksup said in an 88-page declaration he filed as part of the suit.

LevelUp

But in the tech sphere, it's not unheard of for a tiny newcomer to best an early leader: Google surpassed Web search pioneers AltaVista and Yahoo, and Facebook triumphed over social networking site Myspace (which had itself trounced Friendster).

Much of Priebatsch's confidence comes from his insistence that the current online coupon model, where sites take a big cut of the revenue from each deal, is unsustainable. Groupon, for instance, takes up to half the price of the coupon, so if an Italian restaurant is offering $50 worth of food for $25, the merchant gets just $12.50.

That's a source of many complaints from merchants. They benefit only when a Groupon customer brings lots of friends who pay full price or comes back later to shop without the discount.

LevelUp is trying to persuade skeptical merchants to offer great deals by taking none of the revenue in the first round. After that, LevelUp takes 25 percent. Priebatsch believes that merchants will be more likely to offer bargains that can be used for repeat visits.

The setup also gives LevelUp an incentive to encourage repeat visits because it makes no money otherwise.

"If we can't get customers to level up, we're not doing anything of value," Priebatsch says.

Boston-based burrito chain Boloco offered $10 worth of food for $5 in the first level, $25 worth of food for $10 in the second and $45 worth of food for $15 in the third. Customers can use one level before buying the next.

Sara Steele-Rogers, who leads Boloco's social media and marketing efforts, says that a month after the promotion ended, the chain saw strong sales growth.

It's hard to tell, but the increase may have been due largely to people redeeming their LevelUp vouchers: Of the customers who bought the first deal, 30 percent also bought the second and 26 percent of those who bought the second deal purchased the third, too.

Still, she says, "in terms of encouraging repeat business, that's awesome."

Hiring

Including discouraged workers and those working part time, but who would prefer full-time work, the "under-employment" rate jumped from 15.8 percent to 16.2 percent.

Businesses added just 57,000 jobs last month. That was the fewest in more than a year. Governments cut 39,000 jobs. Over the past eight months, federal, state and local governments have cut a combined 238,000 positions.

June was the second straight month of feeble job growth. And the government on Friday revised down the number of jobs the economy added in May, from 54,000 to 25,000.

Companies have pulled back sharply on hiring after adding an average of 215,000 jobs per month from February through April. The economy typically needs to add 125,000 jobs per month just to keep up with population growth. And at least twice that many jobs are needed to bring down the unemployment rate.

Unemployment has topped 8 percent for 29 months, the longest streak since the 1930s. At the same point after the previous three recessions, unemployment averaged just 6.8 percent.

Most economists expect unemployment to remain near 8 percent by next year's election. That would mean Obama would face a higher unemployment rate than any president running for reelection since World War II.

Economists have said that temporary factors, in part, have forced some employers to scale back hiring plans. High gas prices have cut into consumer spending, which fuels 70 percent of economic activity. And supply-chain disruptions stemming from the Japan crisis have slowed U.S. manufacturing production.

Most analysts had hoped that as those trends faded, the economy would pick up in the second half of this year. Manufacturing output has shown signs of reviving and auto factories in Japan have resumed production. At the same time, gas prices have dropped to a national average of $3.59 a gallon, from a peak of nearly $4 in early May.

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

Print answer here:

(Answers Monday)

Yesterday's Jumbles: QUEEN TEMPO
Answer: Starting construction without the proper paperwork was — NOT PERMITTED

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

by David L. Hoyt and Jeff Knurek

PUTTING A 30-SECOND TIME LIMIT ON TODAY'S PUZZLE WOULD CAUSE YOU TO DO THIS.

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

The match between Russia and the Netherlands from last summer's European Championships threw up this challenging deal.

Against the Russian contract of four spades, the defenders led hearts at every turn, and East could put his partner in with the club ace for a second ruff to defeat the game.

In our room, the Dutch duly reached four hearts. A diamond went to the jack, queen and ace, and a spade was led, the king winning (the first essential element of the defense). The next spade went to the ace, but at this point West erred by cashing the club ace before continuing a diamond. This gave declarer an easy ride.

Best defense after winning the spade ace would have been to continue with the diamond 10. South wins and must ruff a diamond to dummy and a spade to hand.

West does best to discard on this trick, but declarer crosses to the heart ace and leads a club to the jack and ace. West can return a trump, but declarer scores four plain-suit winners and six trump tricks for 10 tricks in all.

Is there a defense? Yes; West must lead a top heart at trick one (which commits declarer to sacrificing an entry either to hand or to dummy) and duck the first spade. Then, if declarer plays on spades, West goes after diamonds. If declarer tries to ruff clubs, West leads trumps again. Either way, declarer ends up a trick short.

ANSWER: You are too short of quick tricks to drive this hand to five clubs. The choice is to cue-bid to show a good hand and club support, or to jump to four clubs, which tends to be based on shape, not high cards. Since you suspect that the opponents are about to bid four of one major or the other and your hand suggests sacrificing, the jump to four clubs feels most descriptive.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF JULY 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Circumstances may conspire to blind you to certain facts and you could be easily led astray by passing enthusiasms. Between now and mid-September, you need to keep the nose to the grindstone, honor your obligations to the nth degree and be careful not to launch anything of importance. Plan to make significant changes in your life after the first of the year. In February, people will easily overlook your faults, making that a great time to search for a new job, make a long-term commitment, or meet someone who will admire you forever. It could be tempting to make a change in your career in March, but wait until April when the cosmic conditions are more favorable to make a key decision or accept an offer.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Others may easily look up to you as a role model. Use every opportunity to impress people with your trustworthiness and fine character. Someone with romance in mind might take a shine to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Uncertainties and doubts can be laid to rest. Someone might offer a sincere apology, or intuitively say or do the perfect thing to put your mind at ease. It is time to put out the flames of jealousy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you mingle with others at community functions, you might learn inside information that is of value. Soft lights and soothing music could put someone in the mood for a romantic romp.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Getting to know you. Strive to develop a family-oriented atmosphere as though Anna and the King of Siam were knocking at your door. If you go out tonight, concentrate on friendship instead of seduction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The best way to make a friend is to be one. Consider it a privilege to lend a helping hand to a casual acquaintance. You might shine brightest in group settings, not one-on-one discussions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You know more than you can hear or see with ears and eyes. Your intuitive understanding will help you grow closer to others. People will trust you with money just as you trust yours with them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone who may turn out to be very special indeed finds you appealing. This might be a favorable time to meet someone who could become an important part of your life or to strengthen existing bonds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There's no rest for the weary, but you can at least take a break. You will be able to relax and take some time out to smell the roses with a special someone. Romance gets top priority under these stars.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Never kiss and tell. You may feel slightly constrained or reserved in social settings due to an embarrassing lack of funds or because there are confidentiality issues that you must honor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Focus on making sure that your actions can be labeled "G" or "PG." Passions and emotions run high so you might misread a smile as an invitation and accidentally overstep the boundaries of propriety.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Meet and greet new faces. You appear to others as an idealist who looks for the good in everyone, so everyone sees the good in you. The more you share with others, the more you will receive in return.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If your dance card isn't filled, it is time to get out and mingle. You are more attractive and desirable than usual and might meet someone with visionary powers who sees past your warts and wrinkles.

Double mains, Harley Davidsons, tonight at Magic Valley Speedway

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Snake Harley-Davidson is the sponsor for this evening's events which includes a National Guard BlackHawk helicopter landing in the infield to fire up the action at Idaho's only NASCAR sanctioned track.

Once the green flag falls, double mains for the Mr. Gas Late Models highlight the battles to be fought this evening. Last week, sparks were generated between drivers Kris McKean and Jeff Pohlman after contact involving the two wound up with McKean taking a hard hit into the turn one wall.

McKean was visibly upset immediately after the incident and tonight's double mains could add more fuel to the fire. Figure in the ongoing rivalry between Pohlman and Bobby Latham III and the scenarios for this evening's events are wide open.

TJ Woodhall, now second in the point standings, and Jeff Wade, currently fifth, hope to steer clear of any fallout.

Whelen-All American Racing Series action also continues with the Project Filter Street Stocks, Brennan's Carpet Pony Stocks and TVgoldandsilver Thunderdogs. Additionally, Quale's Electronics Hornets drivers will also fight for trips to Victory Lane in double mains this evening.

Motorcycle riders who began their trek from Snake Harley-Davidson earlier in the afternoon will invade the one-third mile track at intermission.

Gates open at 4 p.m., green flag racing starts at 6.

Advance discount tickets are available at Mr. Gas.

Magic Valley cowboys and cowgirls in action at Silver State Rodeo

Times-News

It was a light night for Magic Valley cowboys and cowgirls in the second go-round of the Silver State International Rodeo.

Gooding's Chayna Jones and Wendell's Garrett Webb partnered up in team roping to record a quick run of 17.3 seconds, which was a nice rebound effort for them after recording a no-time in the first-go.

Haillie Taylor recorded a time of 17.89 seconds in barrel racing, a slight improvement from her first go-round, but unfortunately it appears she'll just miss out on the final 15.

Jade Gorrell had one of the quickest runs in break-away roping at 4.09 seconds and McKenzie Zollinger of Oakley also broke the five-second barrier, recording a time of 4.94.

Those who made the top 15 compete in today's final rodeo beginning at 1 p.m.

Complete second go-round results were not immediately available at press time.

A TALE OF TWO GAMES

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Twin Falls Cowboys pitcher Cornelius Wyatt Berg pitches during the sixth inning of their game with the Twin Falls Hawks Friday at Bill Ingram Field.

Twin Falls Cowboys sweep Hawks in doubleheader

Times-News

One game was a slugfest, the other a more traditional baseball game. Either way, it was the Cowboys' night.

The Class A American Legion Cowboys beat the Twin Falls Hawks 17-16 and (12-5) to sweep a doubleheader between the cross-town rivals.

"It's good for us to play against these guys," said Twin Falls Cowboys coach Mark Schaal. "Our team is the younger players and for us to go against these older players will make us that much better."

It was also good for seeding purposes.

The Cowboys (15-16, 6-8) are trying to sneak into the district tournament, which takes the top six teams. With the sweep, they are sitting with Bear Lake, which they play next week, for that final spot.

"These wins were huge for us," Schall said. "We were kind of hoping for a split, but these two wins have us right where we need to be and snag that six seed."

The Cowboys took advantage of a combined 14 Hawks errors in the two games.

Two costly errors hurt the Hawks in the third inning of Game 2.

Wyatt Doyle hit a sharp ball in the hole at second base and the Hawks were able to get the force out at second but the throw to first was wide of first baseman Nic Magee, allowing Hunter Elam to score from third.

Two batters later, Jordan McKinney hit a line drive to right field that was dropped to plate Doyle. Sam Krapf followed with a nice opposite field hit to right field. He and Jason Bride would both come around to score to push the Cowboys' lead to 5-0.

Hunter Elam went 3-for-4 with three RBIs in Game 2.

Wyatt Doyle earned the win on the mound for the Cowboys, while Garrett Basham took the loss.

The Cowboys put themselves in a dire situation in Game 1, falling behind 12-0 after three innings.

"We have a young team and sometimes they do different things. Sometimes we are a little intimidated playing the varsity kids," Schaal said. "That first game was ugly baseball, I'm not going to lie," Schaal said.

They were able to fight their way back into it, however.

The Hawks committed eight errors in the game, including a crucial drop of a fly ball with two outs in the bottom of the sixth that allowed the Cowboys to tie the game.

Agassi took his own path to Tennis Hall of Fame

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Walk through the museum at the International Tennis Hall of Fame, past the walls of wooden rackets with their yellowing, natural gut strings, past the pictures of women in full-length dresses and men in pressed white slacks, and you come to the room honoring new inductee Andre Agassi.

Suddenly, everything goes from black and white to Technicolor.

The blue denim shorts are there, beneath pictures of Agassi with a goatee and a purple bandanna. There is a shot of him as a towheaded 9-year-old meeting Bjorn Borg, and others with the flowing, highlighted hair that twice shocked the tennis world. In a Plexiglas case, treated with the reverence usually reserved for crystal bowls and silver trophies, is a pair of auto-graphed hair clippers Agassi used to switch to the stubble-headed look he still sports today.

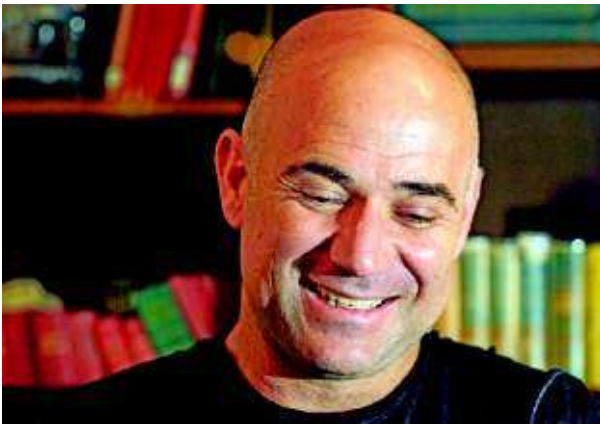

"What I hope is that I brought in that tent, I opened the sport up to people who might otherwise not have been interested," Agassi said in an interview with The Associated Press on Friday. "I hope I brought people to the game. I hope I inspired kids who are out there now doing it better than I ever did it."

An eight-time Grand Slam champion and Olympic gold medalist who was the No. 1 player in the world for 101 straight weeks, Agassi will be inducted into the Hall of Fame on Saturday along with former WTA executive Fern "Peachy" Kellmeyer. Agassi joins wife Steffi Graf, who was inducted into the Hall in 2004, and dozens of men with handlebar mustaches who would, frankly, be shocked at his inclusion among them.

"I think they would get shocked at the state of the world all the way around — including me being in the Hall of Fame," Agassi corrected, with a laugh. "I had, certainly, a rebellion in me. But different than that, I had a fundamental belief that, 'What's wrong with this? There's nothing wrong with this.' If anything, I saw that some people liked it, that people were getting interested."

If John McEnroe shook up the gentlemanly game with his cursing and his combative behavior, Agassi injected it with a sense of style. Refreshing to some, subversive to others, Agassi jolted the tennis world with the way he dressed, the way he talked, and the way he played.

Winn, Potter named to preseason awards watch lists

For the Times-News

Boise State University's Billy Winn and Nate Potter were each named to the 2011 Outland Trophy Watch List, and Winn was also named to 2011 Bronko Nagurski Trophy Watch List, the Football Writers Association of America announced Friday.

The Outland Trophy is awarded annually to the top interior lineman in college football, while the Bronko Nagurski Trophy is given annually to the best defensive player in college football. Winn and Potter were the only two student-athletes from the Mountain West Conference named to the 65-player Outland Trophy Watch List, and Winn was one of five from the MWC named to the 87-player Nagurski Trophy Watch List.

Winn, a redshirt senior defensive tackle from Las Vegas, Nev., has already been named to both the 2011 Lott IMPACT Trophy and 2011 Bednarik Award Watch Lists, each of which is awarded annually to the nation's top defensive player. He has also been named first-team Preseason All-America by Athlon Sports and second-team Preseason All-America by both Lindy's Sports and Phil Steele.

He has been named second-team All-WAC each of the last two seasons. Winn's

AWARD WATCH LIST RELEASE DATES
Monday:	Jim Thorpe Award (most outstanding defensive back)
Tuesday:	Rotary Lombardi Award (most outstanding lineman)
Wednesday:	Rimington Trophy (most outstanding center)
Thursday:	Butkus Award (most outstanding linebacker)
Friday:	Davey O'Brien Award (most outstanding quarterback); Doak Walker Award (most outstanding running back) Monday, July 18; Walter Camp Award (most outstanding defensive player)

9.5 tackles-for-loss in 2010 ranked third on the team, and his 12.5 TFLs in 2009 were the second-most for the Broncos. Winn has also combined for 10 sacks the past two seasons.

Potter, a graduate of Timberline High School in Boise, has already been named first-team Preseason All-America by Athlon Sports, Lindy's Sports and Phil Steele. The redshirt senior has started 21 consecutive games at left tackle dating back to his sophomore season, garnering first-team All-Western Athletic Conference honors in each of the last two years.

He has also performed well in the classroom, recording a 3.92 grade-point average during the spring 2011 semester and earning CoSIDA Academic All-America Second Team honors this past season. The three-time member of the Western Athletic Conference All-Academic Team graduated in May with a bachelor's degree in business, and is currently pursuing a graduate degree.

Rangers beat A's day after fan killed at stadium

ARLINGTON, Texas — C.J. Wilson pitched seven effective innings, Mike Napoli hit a first-inning grand slam off Gio Gonzalez, and the Texas Rangers stretched their winning streak to five games with an 8-5 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Friday night a night after a fan was killed in a fall while catching a foul ball.

Josh Hamilton, who tossed the ball to the fan on Thursday night, hit a fan with a foul ball off his bat. The teenage male fan had blood on his face and was tended to by stadium personnel before he walked away, smiling while he held a compress to his head.

Rangers officials said the fan was treated at the stadium and was OK. They didn't identify him or provide additional details.

Wilson (9-3) won his fifth straight decision to tie Alexi Ogando for the team lead in wins, allowing four runs and five hits with eight strikeouts and three walks.

RED SOX 10, ORIOLES 3

BOSTON — David Ortiz homered in Boston's eight-run first inning, then got into a bench-clearing brawl with Baltimore reliever Kevin Gregg as the Red Sox routed the Orioles.

Ortiz and Gregg exchanged a flurry of punches in the eighth, but neither connected before they were separated as both benches and bullpens emptied for the second time in the inning.

Moments before the fight, Ortiz started toward the mound after taking a second straight pitch inside from Gregg. The benches and bullpens emptied, but nothing developed and Ortiz stepped back into the batter's box.

Rajai Davis knocked in four as the Blue Jays rebounded a day after a stunning loss to beat the Indians.

Jo-Jo Reyes (4-7) pitched 5 2-3 shaky innings for his first win in his last four starts. He gave up three unearned runs, eight hits and two walks without a strikeout as Cleveland left 12 men on base and couldn't build momentum off its exciting win Thursday night on Travis Hafner's walkoff grand slam.

TIGERS 6, ROYALS 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Magglio Ordonez's two-run home run just six pitches in to the game staked Rick Porcello to an early lead and got the Detroit Tigers rolling toward a 6-4 victory Friday night over Kyle Davies and the reeling Kansas City Royals.

Davies (1-8) lost his seventh straight decision and the Royals sank to 5-14 in their past 19 games.

TWINS 8, WHITE SOX 5

CHICAGO — Luke Hughes' three-run homer capped a six-run fourth Friday night and the Minnesota Twins continued their mastery of the Chicago White Sox, rallying for an 8-5 victory.

The Twins are 6-0 against the White Sox this season, have won nine straight in the series going back to last year and are 28-6 in the past 34 games between the two AL Central foes.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PIRATES 7, CUBS 4

PITTSBURGH — Mike McKenry's first major league home run, a three-run shot in the eighth inning, lifted Pittsburgh to a 7-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Friday night and assured the Pirates of a winning record at the All-Star break for the first time in 19 years.

The rookie catcher's drive deep into the left-field bleachers came off Cubs closer Carlos Marmol, who blew his sixth save in 24 opportunities one batter earlier when he relieved Sean Marshall (5-3) and allowed Josh Harrison's game-tying single.

ROCKIES 3, NATIONALS 2

WASHINGTON — Jason Hammel pitched into the seventh inning for his second win in 13 starts, and the Rockies beat the Nationals to end a five-game losing streak.

Hammel (5-8) allowed two runs and five hits in 6 1-3 innings as Colorado won for the first time in eight road games. The right-hander was coming off his shortest outing of the season, when he gave up seven runs in 3 2-3 innings in a loss to Kansas City.

MARLINS 6, ASTROS 3

MIAMI — Hanley Ramirez continued his recent torrid hitting with three hits and three RBIs and Javier Vazquez pitched seven solid innings as the Marlins defeated the Astros.

Florida broke a 2-2 tie and took the lead for good on Ramirez's run-scoring single in the third inning. He drove in Gaby Sanchez, who reached on a two-out double.

DIAMONDBACKS 7, CARDINALS 6

ST. LOUIS — Leadoff man Kelly Johnson broke a seventh-inning tie with his second career grand slam and the Diamondbacks' bullpen barely hung on for a victory over the Cardinals.

Chris Young added a two-run triple and David Hernandez earned his fifth save in as many attempts as the stand-in closer for the Diamondbacks, who have won five of seven and were two games behind NL West-leading San Francisco.

Ian Kennedy (9-3) allowed three runs in six innings, matching his career-best victory total from last season.

BREWERS 8, REDS 7

MILWAUKEE — Mark Kotsay hit a two-out, two-run single in the ninth off Reds closer Francisco Cordero and the Brewers rallied twice to beat Cincinnati for their third straight victory.

Kotsay also homered in the sixth as Milwaukee erased a 4-0 deficit and took a 5-4 lead only to see its bullpen give up three runs in the seventh.

Lewis holds a one-shot lead at the U.S. Open

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Stacy Lewis made it through 29 holes Friday in the U.S. Women's Open at Broadmoor before Colorado's typical summer thunderstorms hit and she walked off the mountain course at 4-under par, with a one-shot lead over I.K. Kim and Ryann O'Toole.

Lewis, who won the Kraft Nabisco earlier this year, shot 3-under 68 in the first round, then after a quick stop for lunch, played the first 11 holes of the second in 1 under as the black clouds moved in and the wind gusts.

Play was suspended Thursday with 131 players still on the course, or still waiting to hit their first shots. That set it up for Lewis and dozens more to play — or at least try to play — 36 on Friday. They finished their first rounds, ate lunch and quickly headed back out to the course.

Not one player had finished her second round when the weather hit Friday, meaning the weekend will be a long one and a Monday finish is possible.

Yani Tseng, trying to complete the career Grand Slam this weekend, struggled early and walked off the course at 3 over, seven shots out of the lead with seven holes to play.

JOHN DEERE CLASSIC

SILVIS, Ill. — Chez Reavie shot a 9-under 62 at the John Deere Classic, relying on his putter to claim a two-stroke lead after two rounds.

Reavie found the greens at TPC Deere Run to his liking while making an eagle and a string of birdie putts, going 8 under during one nine-hole stretch. He went into the weekend at 14-under 128 in search of his first victory since the 2008 Canadian Open.

Steve Stricker shot a 64 to finish at 12 under in his bid for a third straight victory in the tournament.

Steve Marino (66) also was 12 under. Jhonattan Vegas (64), Mark Wilson (67), Brendon de Jonge (66) and Kyle Stanley (67) were four off the lead.

FIRST TEE OPEN

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Russ Cochran made six consecutive birdies and shot a 7-under 65 to take the first-round lead at the First Tee Open.

Cochran had seven birdies overall and played a bogey free round in his return to the Champions Tour after a two-month layoff because of a wrist injury. Cochran was only 1 under through 11 holes before going on his run of birdies at the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

David Eger was one shot back at 66, followed by Brad Bryant, Morris Hatalsky and Jim Thorpe at 67. Ten others were tied at 68.

SCOTTISH OPEN

INVERNESS, Scotland — U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell shot an 8-under 64 to grab a share of the lead at the Scottish Open after storms halted second-round play.

McDowell had perfect conditions in the morning and was tied at 11-under 133 with Scottish pair Scott Jamieson and Peter Whiteford, who had 66s.

Spain's Jose Manuel Lara (66) was a shot behind, while Argentina's Angel Cabrera (64), Belgium's Nicolas Colsaerts (66) and Paul Lawrie (64) were two strokes back.

Burley splits twin bill at Blackfoot

Times-News

R.J. Nevarez won a combined 5-for-7 with three doubles to lead Burley in a doubleheader split against Blackfoot in American Legion Class A action on Friday.

Joe Ferrin tossed six strikeouts in Burley's 11-5 win in Game 1. At the plate, Jackson Kunz went 2-for-3, Jason Boehmer was 2-for-4 and Jason Rebollozo drove in two RBIs.

In Game 2, Burley scored two runs in the seventh inning, but the rally fell short in a 7-6 loss.

"In the first game it seemed like everyone was hitting well and we had timely hitting," said Burley assistant coach Darren Cooper. "In the second game their pitchers were slower and kept us off balance. We couldn't sit back on a curveball and we had a lot of pop-ups and weak ground balls."

Burley (19-11) plays at Idaho

Falls today.

Game 1

Burley 11, Blackfoot 5

314 011 - 11 9 3

Thor Hushovd of Norway, wearing the overall leader's yellow jersey, takes off his rain jacket as he rides in the pack during the seventh stage of the Tour de France cycling race over 135.5 miles starting in Le Mans and finishing in Chateauroux, central France, Friday.

Tour de France competitors relieved to reach mountains

CHATEAUROUX, France — Finally, the mountains.

After seven days of narrow, sinewy roads and sometimes fierce rain, Alberto Contador and Andy Schleck await a change of scenery. They made it through the crash-marred first week of the Tour de France relatively unscathed. Although the hills in Saturday's eighth stage are far less daunting than later climbs in the Pyrenees and Alps, they will be a welcome sight.

"It will be a relief after several nervous and dangerous stages," Schleck said.

British sprinter Mark Cavendish won Friday's seventh stage. He did so in the same town — Chateauroux — where he won the first of his 17 Tour de France stages in 2008. Norway's Thor Hushovd kept the yellow jersey.

Another British rider, Bradley Wiggins, was knocked out of the race after breaking his left collarbone in a crash that took down several riders.

Cadel Evans remains in second place, one second behind Hushovd. Schleck is 12 seconds behind in seventh and Contador is 1:42 off the lead in 24th place.

Bigger gaps may start to appear by Saturday evening after the first of two straight medium mountain stages — although Contador and Schleck might not attack each other just yet.

"Whether any of the favorites will be dropped depends on whether the race is hard from the gun," Contador said. "Hopefully, tomorrow when I wake up I'll be in perfect condition."

Saturday's ride up to the Super-Besse ski resort gives Contador, Schleck and Evans a chance to distance themselves from lesser climbers.

"The time gaps will be small but large enough to shift the overall classification," Schleck said.

The stage ends with a short but sharp climb up to Super-Besse.

"It cannot be underestimated," Schleck said.

Contador was left with cuts and bruises when he came off his saddle two days ago. Wiggins, an outsider for this Tour who finished fourth overall in 2009, was not so lucky Friday.

Part of the same crash was RadioShack veteran Chris Horner. He fractured his nose and rode for almost 24 miles on sheer grit. He was later diagnosed with a concussion and a bruised calf, and his team will decide Saturday morning if he can keep racing.

Cavendish, who rides for HTC-Highroad, sprinted out of the speeding pack in the last few hundred yards, beating Alessandro Petacchi and Andre Greipel to the finish.

Cavendish celebrated the same way as in 2008, clasping his head in both hands at the finish line.

"It was a tribute to winning here three years ago," he said. "I wanted to do the same gesture as 2008."

When a dazed Horner crossed the line, the American hardly knew what town he was in — let alone the names of the former French kings chateaux he rode past all day.

"Another day, another crash," RadioShack rider Yaroslav Popovych sang as he reached the sanctuary of his team bus. Another rider, Astana's Roman Kreuziger, also went to hospital for a scan on his left wrist.

"Sorry for those injured today," Evans said. "Especially 'old mate' Chris Horner. Hope you're healing well."

Outside Sky's team bus the mood was downcast. Dave Brailsford, the team's manager, took in the news that his riders had lost their leader.

"Really bad day for the team because I was really looking forward to riding for him in the mountains," Sky teammate Geraint Thomas said. "We were lucky until now."

After Thursday's treacherous rainfall, described by Evans as the worst he had seen on seven Tours, riders again set off under a heavy shower Friday on the 135-mile trip from Le Mans to Chateauroux.

Keselowski rolls to Nationwide victory at Ky.

SPARTA, Ky. — Brad Keselowski won the NASCAR Nationwide race at Kentucky Speedway on Friday night, stretching his fuel over the final 67 laps to pick up his first win in the series this year.

Kevin Harvick was second, followed by Kyle Busch, Kasey Kahne and Elliott Sadler.

Keselowski, the 2010 Nationwide champion, led 132 laps but needed to go light on the gas pedal over the final miles to win for the first time since taking the checkered flag at Gateway last fall.

Joey Logano, who was looking for his fourth straight win at Kentucky, ran out of gas on the last lap and finished 10th.

Sadler took over the Nationwide points lead after Reed Sorenson ran into trouble on pit road and finished 17th.

Keselowski dominated the series a year ago, winning six times while running away with the championship. Things haven't been quite so easy this season. His previous best finish this year was second at Texas in April.

He made it look easy at the 1.5-mile oval, avoiding what little trouble was out there to pull away from a field stacked with Cup regulars who pulled double-duty with the Cup Series scheduled to make its debut at the speedway on Saturday.

Keselowski also benefited from a late miscue by Harvick. Both drivers were attempting to stretch their fuel during the lengthy green flag run at the end when Harvick's crew ordered him to pit only to tell him to stay out at the last second and hope for a caution after another car spun out.

The yellow flag never flew, and Harvick wasted valuable gas getting up to speed while giving Keselowski enough breathing room to win.

Busch, who won the Trucks race on Thursday night after starting on the back row, nearly did it again. He wrecked during qualifying and was forced to go to a back-up car. He had little trouble working his way into the top 10 but couldn't quite find the speed to chase down Harvick and Keselowski, who combined to lead all but 12 of the 200 laps.

Logano, who won a week ago at Daytona, entered the night a perfect 3-for-3 in Nationwide races in Kentucky but never threatened to make it four straight. He qualified fourth yet couldn't keep up with the leaders before slipping to 10th when his No. 20 Toyota ran empty. Sorenson saw his points lead slip away thanks to a pit road gaffe when a jack got stuck under his car.

Kyle Busch to start on pole for Kentucky Cup race

SPARTA, Ky. — Kyle Busch will be on the pole for the inaugural NASCAR Sprint Cup race at Kentucky Speedway, grabbing the top spot after rain washed out qualifying and the starting order was based on practice times.

Juan Pablo Montoya will start second in Saturday night's 400-mile race and Kurt Busch will be third.

Nearly half of the 48 cars attempting to make the 43-car field got in a qualifying run before a thunderstorm resulted in qualifying to be based on the best laps during Friday's practice session. The storm kept Kentucky native Michael Waltrip from making the field. He was fourth fastest of the 22 cars that went through qualifying, but those numbers were wiped out and he will miss the race because his top practice speed wasn't among the 43 fastest.

Yao Ming decides to retire from the NBA

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets center Yao Ming is retiring, according to a report by Yahoo! Sports.

The 7-foot-6 Chinese star, plagued by lower-body injuries in the second half of his career, has informed the league office that his playing career is over, the website reported.

The Rockets declined to comment on the report because of the lockout, and the NBA has not received official retirement paperwork from Yao.

Yao's contract expired after last season, and the Rockets said they were interested in re-signing him if he came back healthy. Yao said in April in China that his professional future depended on his recovery from a stress fracture in his left ankle.

John Huizinga, one of Yao's American agents, would not confirm the report during a phone interview on Friday. He said Yao's recovery was "on track," but Yao's future with the Rockets has been uncertain for some time.

"He's really enjoyed his time in Houston," Huizinga said. "If he feels that he's recovered enough to play, and if the lockout ever ends, and if the Rockets are interested in him, then there's certainly a good chance he'll stay in Houston."

"But there are a whole lot of 'ifs' in that statement."

An eight-time All-Star selection, Yao averaged 19 points and 9.2 rebounds in his eight seasons, but his impact on the league goes far beyond the numbers.

Yao single-handedly expanded the NBA's reach throughout Asia, spiking merchandise sales and TV ratings for games after the Rockets made him the top overall pick in the 2002 draft.

Marc Ganis, president of Chicago-based consultancy SportsCorp, said Yao's worldwide impact on the league will probably never be duplicated by another player.

"There's never been anything like him before," Ganis said, "and I doubt we'll ever see anything like him again."

Ganis said Yao became an iconic symbol of China's growth and status. He carried the Olympic torch through Tiananmen Square and proudly carried his country's flag during the opening ceremonies in Beijing in 2008.

He also donated $2 million and set up a foundation to rebuild schools in the wake of the 2008 earthquake in Sichuan.

"He was the embodiment of the cultural aspirations of the Chinese society," Ganis said. "He always talked about 'team,' always talked about sacrifice, always talked about those who needed help."

Yao was already a larger-than-life national hero in China when he joined the Rockets. He played for the Chinese national team in the six summers before he joined the NBA.

Skeptics doubted Yao was ready for the league, but he made the All-Rookie team after averaging 13.5 points, 8.2 rebounds and 1.74 blocks in 82 games. He was the only rookie to lead his team in both rebounds and blocks, and the only rookie to rank in the top 20 in three statistical categories.

Yao helped the Rockets reach the playoffs in the next two seasons. Houston acquired versatile star Tracy McGrady before the 2004-05 season, and the franchise envisioned the duo as the cornerstones of a championship team.

The Rockets lost first-round series in seven games in both 2005 and 2007. Yao and McGrady both started encountering injury problems in the seasons that followed.

Yao played in 77 games in the 2008-09 season and with McGrady sidelined, helped Houston reach the second round of the playoffs for the first time since 1997.

But Yao broke his left foot in a postseason game against the Lakers, and underwent complex surgery that sidelined him for the entire 2009-10 season. He lasted only five games at the start of the 2010-11 season, before breaking his left ankle. He underwent surgery in January, and was lost for the season again.

Yao, who turns 31 in September, missed a total of 250 regular-season games over the past six seasons due mostly to injuries to his left foot and leg.

The Rockets missed the playoffs for the second straight season in 2010-11, parted ways with coach Rick Adelman and hired Kevin McHale. McHale said Yao's future with the team was contingent on his health.

"We'd all be really happy if Yao comes back to play, and I hope he can," McHale said. "I think he'll give it his best shot. His body is going to dictate if he can come back and play. That's all going to be laid out in the future."

Ganis said the NBA's popularity in China may never be the same without Yao.

"There was a fascination, with Yao Ming and the Chinese fans," Ganis said. "It was almost like the Michael Jordan effect. The casual fans that Jordan brought to the NBA, when he retired, they simply disappeared."

"That doesn't mean there isn't interest, that doesn't mean there isn't significantly higher, long-term interest in the NBA there. But the numbers the NBA attracted, in Yao Ming's heyday, will never be reached again — unless there's another Yao Ming around the corner."

Montana, Exxon Mobil split over Yellowstone River oil spill

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Montana Gov. Brian Schweitzer has decided Exxon Mobil and the state don't make good roommates after nearly a week of working together in close quarters to clean up an estimated 42,000 gallons of crude oil released into the Yellowstone River.

State officials have moved out of a joint command post overseeing the response to the spill — a mess that has painted a fresh target for scorn on one of the world's largest energy companies.

Security guards working for Exxon Mobil Corp. have closely guarded access to the command post on the second floor of the Crowne Plaza Hotel in Billings, where the Environmental Protection Agency and other federal agencies also are stationed. Attempts by The Associated Press to talk to government officials there in the first days after the spill were denied.

Schweitzer says the company and EPA have defied state open government laws by denying public access. So on Friday, he opened an alternate state-run Yellowstone River Oil Spill Information Center, underscoring mounting tensions over the pipeline rupture that has dirtied parts of the scenic waterway.

"Montana has a much higher standard than Exxon Mobil when it comes to transparency," Schweitzer said. "We won't be involved in secret meetings and secret documents."

The Democratic governor pointed out discrepancies in the company's reports of how long it took to shut down the pipeline after it ruptured July 1 and said company officials are downplaying the damage to wildlife.

With its multi-billion-dollar profits and the legacy of the 11-million-gallon

Cleanup workers use oil absorbent materials along the Yellowstone River near Laurel, Mont., Wednesday.

Valdez oil tanker spill of 1989, Exxon Mobil offers an easy foil for a politician like Schweitzer.

Throw in the corporation's massive ground presence to deal with the spill — an estimated 500 contractors and employees as of Friday, plus its role providing security — and it's no wonder the governor's folksy yet combative style has resonated in a state proud of its natural attractions and clean environment.

"I just want to thank you for who you are and for your skepticism of Exxon," Susan Huntoon, 65, of Laurel, told the governor during a community meeting Friday at the state's new command post. "We all know they want to spend as little as they can. We saw that with BP."

Keenly aware of the company's public image, Exxon Mobil executives have repeatedly apologized for the spill and have pledged to spend whatever it takes to restore the river.

But the company has made some glaring missteps on the public relations front, including the appearance that it was downplaying the extent of the contamination in the first days of the cleanup.

The company said then that the damage was concentrated within a five- to 10-mile stretch of river. That figure has been growing since, hitting 30 miles in recent days.

Later came inaccuracies in how long it took to fully shut down the pipeline from the company's control room in Houston. After initially saying it took six minutes, the company revealed in filings with pipeline regulators that it took almost an hour to completely stop the flow.

Exxon Mobil Pipeline Co. President Gary Pruessing has apologized for that, too. Company officials insist there was never any intent to deceive.

Spokesman Alan Jeffers said Exxon Mobil learned its lesson about dealing with spills forthrightly after the Exxon Valdez soiled Alaska's coastline.

Exxon Mobil quickly came under fire in that case for downplaying the threat, deflecting the blame and being aloof. Crude oil from the tanker still lingers on some beaches 22 years later, and some marine species never recovered.

"Our focus needs to be on ensuring accuracy, the double- and triple-checking of data to ensure the public gets accurate information," Jeffers said. "The principal of active and frequent communications with the community is one we take very seriously. It's part of the system that was born out of the Valdez accident and is really important for us."

EPA spokesman Matthew Allen said the agency has been pleased with Exxon Mobil's efforts to date. The company has accepted fault for the spill and has heeded the agency's orders on the cleanup, Allen said.

"It's much better to have a company that acknowledges this is their responsibility and is doing the cleanup than to fight them all the way," he said. "We're happy with the level of cooperation."

There have been confirmed reports of oil as far as 80 miles downstream from the pipeline break near Laurel, and on Friday, state officials said they had found significant amounts of oil 40 miles downstream near Pompeys Pillar National Monument.

Wildfires burn in remote Nevada nuclear test site

LAS VEGAS (AP) — One lightning-sparked wildfire was contained and firefighters were battling a second blaze Friday in a remote undeveloped part of the vast federal nuclear testing reservation formerly known as the Nevada Test Site, a National Nuclear Security Administration official said.

About 100 firefighters with support from three air tankers, a spotter plane and a helicopter were fighting the blazes touched off Monday in rugged mountain and desert terrain about 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The blazes covered more than 9 square miles, but no injuries were reported and officials said no structures, roads, power lines or other facilities in the sprawling federal nuclear proving ground were threatened.

Air monitors detected no release of radiation, said Dante Pistone, an NNSA spokesman in North Las Vegas.

"There have been no positive readings," Pistone told The Associated Press. "These fires are in remote locations and not near any historic testing areas."

The larger fire, dubbed the Timber fire, was burning pinyon, sage and cheatgrass well north of the Nye County community of Amargosa Valley and east of Beatty. Pistone said it was about 25 percent contained.

The separate Weston Fire, several miles southeast of the Timber fire, was 100 percent contained.

At a combined 6,000 acres, the two wildfires at the Nevada National Security Site were less than 5 percent the size of the Las Conchas fire that has been burning since June 26 in the mountains near NNSA facilities in Los Alamos, N.M. That fire was reported at 40 percent containment Friday.

Pistone said there was no firm estimate about when the Timber fire in Nevada would be contained. He said that with no infrastructure threatened some parts of the fire might eventually be allowed to burn out.

Pipe bomb found near Rawlins

RAWLINS, Wyo. (AP) — Authorities in Carbon County say they have no leads on how a pipe bomb ended up in a gravel pit near Rawlins.

A resident spotted the device Wednesday evening and the bomb squad from neighboring Sweetwater County used a robot to deactivate it.

The bomb was made of PVC pipe. Investigators say it contained an explosive but they haven't said what type or how much.

Carbon County undersheriff Mike Morris told the Rawlins Times that the device had the potential to cause some property destruction and personal injury. He said some people use the quarry to run their dogs. There's also been some underage parties there.

3 killed, 1 critically injured in crash near Parma

PARMA — The Idaho State Police says a car carrying four teens from Weiser pulled into the path of a pickup truck hauling a horse near Parma, killing three of them and critically injuring a fourth.

The crash happened just before 11:30 p.m. Thursday at the intersection of U.S. Highways 20 and 95 north of Parma.

The ISP says 16-year-old Sloane Weldon failed to stop at a stop sign. The pickup hit the driver's side of Weldon's car, killing her and two passengers, 17-year-old Elisabeth Cole and 16-year-old Rebecca Cole. Another passenger, 16-year-old Benson Richardson, was hospitalized in Boise in critical condition.

Two adults in the pickup were uninjured. Two children, ages 3 and 2, were taken to the hospital as a precaution, but have been released.

Idaho boosts bag limit for adult chinook

BOISE — Fisherman on the lower Salmon and Little Salmon rivers will be allowed to bag more adult chinook salmon this season, to boost the likelihood that anglers will catch their full share.

Idaho's Fish and Game Commission decided on Thursday that anglers may keep six chinook daily, of which only three of which may be adults, and have 18 in possession, only nine of which may be adults.

The decision comes as high flows on the two waterways have delayed passage of adult salmon bound for the Rapid River Hatchery.

Anglers have harvested only about one third of a 9,000-fish adult harvest share.

Commissioners also authorized a chinook season in the Boise River — if state wildlife managers decide they have enough fish from hatcheries around the state to stock them.
