T.F. City Launches Budget Talk

The Twin Falls City Council took in the staff's drafted budget Monday night — the first meeting in a two-month process that amounts to one of the council's biggest annual decisions.

BY NICK COLTRAIN
Times-News writer

In the first of what is sure to be several public budget talks, the Twin Falls City Council didn't challenge a possible higher property tax rate in the city on Monday night — though the matter shouldn't be considered forgone either.

Several council members lauded City Manager Travis Rothweiler for his first preliminary budget as leader of day-to-day operations for the city. But in almost the same breath, they added that there would probably be debate over a possible tax rate of 4 percent higher than this year. Even Rothweiler qualified his projection of $7.20-per-$1,000 of taxable value as possibly "far too pessimistic." The rate is based on the community's total assessed value — which has not been finalized — and the city's budget — which is slightly lower than it was last year. From that, the tax rate is determined. "It may be the case that we're left whole," Rothweiler said. "And if it's left whole, that means the tax rate information is completely wrong." The total property taxes paid

- $750,000 The projected street maintenance budget. It is $200,000 more than last year, but less than what the long-term plan calls for.
- $7.20 The potential property tax rate, per $1,000 of taxable value. It is 28 cents more than this year.
- $1.99 The needed increase in monthly water rates to cover the gap in this year's water fund. The gap is blamed on a wet spring.

Senior Center Picks Fourth Director in 2 Years

The move marks the latest personnel switch for the center. The new executive director began July 1.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center is under new leadership, again. The center's latest executive director, Diane Stevens, was removed from her job in late June. Its board of directors made the decision at a June 22 board meeting. Stevens had been in her position for only seven months. "I had no idea I was going to be terminated," she said Monday. "The board finished their meeting and a little after that I was told I would no longer have a job." Stevens said she was terminated because she and the board disagreed on a range of topics, though none were particularly significant. "I was let go because of petty disagreements between me and the board," she said. "There wasn't one isolated incident that led to this decision." Stevens was replaced by former board member Eric Samples. He began his new position on July 1. Samples could not comment on the board decision but said Stevens "elected to resign." However, Stevens said she did not resign, nor did she choose to leave. Samples is the center's fourth director in a year and a half. Stevens was hired in December to replace Phillip Kottraba, who was the cen-

Two Hansen men were found dead in their vehicle early Sunday morning, according to the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office. According to a release, the bodies of Ricky Friel, 52, and William Durfee, 49, were recovered from a 1998 Jeep Grand Cherokee, which a passerby saw mostly submerged in a canal west of 3800 East near 2950 North, which is just south of Rock Creek. The witness saw a rear tire sticking out of the water. The men were last seen around 10 p.m. on Saturday night. It is not known when the crash occurred or who was driving the vehicle. The sheriff's office continues to investigate the situation.

CSI Nets Little in Extra State Funding

TIMES-NEWS

Idaho's three community colleges got a state funding boost Monday. But the College of Southern Idaho got much less out of the deal than its peers. The State Board of Education approved a total $7.5 million in additional money for the colleges. The extra funds come from a surplus of money from the past fiscal year. CSI will receive less than $668,000 in one-time spending, based on a funding formula that takes student population growth numbers and full-time student data into account. North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene will get about $1.8 million, and the 3-year-old College of Western Idaho will receive around $5 million. CWI has rocketed in growth since its inception, while CSI spokesman Doug Maughan said NIC has a higher number of full-time students than the CSI. The state board met in a special meeting on Monday to approve the extra funds. Board Chief Fiscal Officer Matt Freeman said the money is going toward the colleges because of agreements Idaho made with the federal government on education funding levels when receiving some $50 million last year to preserve teaching jobs in public schools. Lawmakers had set state general funding for community colleges at about $23 million for this year, down from about $25 million last year. The extra one-time money will bump up

Not Worried About Earthquakes? Maybe You Should Be, Just A Little

Earthquakes simply aren't on our radar around here.

We here in the Magic Valley watched our neighbors to the north suffer severe damage during the 1983 Borah Peak earthquake and those to the south endure the miseries of the 2008 Wells earthquake.

But if you trace the historical tracks of temblors across Idaho, the six counties of the Magic Valley are largely blank. Oh, we've felt the consequences of other people's earthquakes, but there hasn't been a significant home-grown seismic event here since a 6.0-magnitude quake west of Shoshone in 1905.

Geologists even have a name for us: Snake River Plain Aseismic Area. Conventional wisdom is that our neck of the woods was dragged through the geological wringer over millions of years as the subterranean "hot spot" now under Yellowstone National Park pushed across the heart of what's now the Magic Valley. The ordeal left behind a lot of basalt, but not so much of the type of rock that big earthquakes fracture with disastrous consequences.

That doesn't mean there isn't danger nearby.

Last year, Idaho State University geosciences professor Glenn Thackeray announced the discovery of a 40-mile-long fault line in the Sawtooth Mountains that he believes triggered two major tremors during the past 10,000 years.

Thackeray is convinced it's a major, active fault capable of producing a quake of 7.5 magnitude. By contrast, the earthquake that destroyed San Francisco in 1906 was 7.7.

But even if a major Idaho earthquake didn't break your crockery here in the Magic Valley, there are other reasons to worry. The locations of two of the linchpins of the south-central Idaho economy — Jackson Lake in Wyoming and Palisades Reservoir astride the Wyoming-Idaho border — are worrisome.

Though designed to withstand earthquakes, Palisades Dam would cause "extensive" downstream damage if it failed in the spring, according to a special report on Idaho earthquakes issued by the Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security earlier this year.

"Large multi-year economic losses to Idaho's agricultural economy would likely occur because of the key role that Palisades Dam plays in regional irrigation programs."

That's just the crest of wave. South-central Idaho's economy absolutely depends on a series of aging downstream dams and irrigation infrastructure vulnerable to the consequences of a big earthquake.

We also rely on an interstate highway system crisscrossed with bridges and overpasses that are pushing 60 years old and on dozens of bridges on farm-to-market roads that are well past their prime.

Idaho BHS puts the annual likelihood of a magnitude 7 Idaho earthquake at 1-in-25. By contrast, your odds of dying of a heart attack this year are 1-in-450.

The chances of another quake like the massive Yellowstone temblor of 1959 happening this year in Idaho are just 1-in-6.5 million.

But you never know. The most recent earthquake in our neighborhood happened just 13 days ago, a 2.2 magnitude tremor near Ketchum, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

If you're reading this in Twin Falls, that's just 97 miles away. Which means if this had been the Big One, you'd have been made painfully aware of it in, oh, about .005 seconds.

Shirly Barron, 80, rides her custom three-wheeled Harley Davidson south of Twin Falls on Monday. Barron is leaving with more than a dozen other local women on Wednesday to ride to Wyoming to raise money for breast cancer research.

Never Too Young To Live On The Edge

Meet the 80-year-old Castleford woman who's taking a stand for breast cancer research.

BY AMY HUDDLESTON
Times-News writer

Shirly Barron's three-wheeled Harley Davidson wears a pink-string bikini top across the windshield. A hot-pink boa is twisted around the front of her bike and underlines the word CURE emblazoned in sparkles under the swimsuit top.

The 80-year-old woman from Castleford is a sight to behold as she races down the road in a brilliant pink shirt with bejeweled buttons, black leather chaps and a purple-flamed helmet. Another pink boa, tied to her suitcase rack, flies out behind her like the tail of a kite.

When she finally slowed down and came to a stop on Monday morning, Barron smiled as she removed her helmet and adjusted her scarf — which matched her shirt color perfectly.

The decked-out bike isn't how Barron normally rides around town. But she's getting ready to join a group of women bikers and two men, known as the "cabana boys," in a two-day ride from Twin Falls to Shell, Wyo., on Wednesday morning. The Women Who Ride Conga IV are revving up their bikes around the nation and meeting in the middle for a long weekend of breast cancer survivor speeches, auctions, fundraising for breast cancer research and friendship.

Barron went last year on the Conga ride and said meeting women who have breast cancer or have survived made her want to return again this year. The ride was named "conga" as a way to show that anyone can join in along the way, not unlike a conga dance line that starts small but grows to encompass everyone in the room.

Last year the conga ride raised $36,000. This year, women in Canada and the United States are trying to raise a collective $50,000.

"It just started out as a fun thing but then you realize that these women and their mates are amazing. They may not be able to ride this year because of breast cancer but they are planning on being there next year," Barron said.

Barron bought a motorcycle after her husband Tom's death and started riding seriously in 2007. She's always had a fascination with the large bikes but said the couple led a very conservative life of farming. After 47 years

"We were very conservative, simple farmer folk. Now I play as hard as I can play."

"When I became a widow, I went through a period of mourning and then you go through a period that makes you ask, what do you want to do with the rest of your life?" Barron said. "We were very conservative, simple farmer folk. Now I play as hard as I can play."

The older women with bright blue eyes and a warm laugh chose to buy a custom-made bike with three wheels after she tried to ride a normal, two-wheeled bike with varied results. Sturgis, S.D., was the first stop checked off her bucket list, but riding in the Conga ride has made her be very aware of living life to its fullest.

"Every day you start out this way," she said, pulling at her cheeks to make a smile. "You see these women with their bald heads and they have these big smiles on their faces. You meet people who are really struggling and that makes a difference."

ter's director for only eight months. Kottraba had replaced Misty Humphreys, who started as director in late 2008. Samples said the turnover is because the job requires a strong mastery of management skills and knowledge of the center's structure. "This is a stressful position," Samples said. "We are facing quite a few financial challenges and most people don't understand that when they take on this job."

Stevens has another idea why the position has such high turnover.

She said she offered several options to change the center's structure and focus to meet a wider demographic. But the board, she said, resisted her proposals.

"The board is not easy to work with," Stevens said. "They did not support my decisions or try to meet me halfway."

T.F. Man Accused of Having Child Porn

TIMES-NEWS

A 23-year-old Twin Falls man stands accused of downloading child pornography on multiple computers, according to prosecutors.

Shawn Freeman was charged with 19 counts of felony possession of sexually exploitative material and arraigned on Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court. The police report reveals that the investigation into Freeman began nearly 18 months ago when the state attorney general's office received a tip through its Internet Crime Against Children Task Force.

Police interviewed Freeman in March and April 2010, and he admitted to downloading child pornography since 2004. He agreed to allow police to search multiple computer hard drives, and in August a forensic examiner in Boise reported identifying nearly 1,000 images as possible child pornography.

Freeman was released on his own recognizance and a preliminary hearing is slated for July 22.

The maximum penalty upon conviction is up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Grouse Groups Find New Funding Sources

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
Times-News writer

With federal earmarks no longer an option, Idaho sage grouse conservation groups are left scrambling to find alternative means of funding.

On June 30, local working groups saw an end to the $1 million earmark apportioned to them last year. The groups — formed of people with a stake in improving the birds' population — have relied on earmarks for the past five years. The money paid for contract facilitators and projects.

In November, members of Congress froze earmark spending in an attempt to lower government spending. As a result, conservation groups across the state have faced a budget crisis, said Jon Beals, project manager for the Idaho Governor's Office of Species Conservation.

Now that the federal money has run out, the state must decide if and how it will fund the groups.

"These are groups that are still very important to us," Beals said "However, at this time we have no real resolution how we will fund them."

Beals said the OSC has allotted enough money to fund three working-group facilitators for one more year. Facilitators oversee multiple working groups and participate on the statewide Sage-grouse Advisory Committee.

The OSC hopes to extend its discretionary fund to include funding working groups but is waiting for approval.

Facilitators are critical to the success of the working groups, Beals said.

"If we just had someone from the federal government then we probably wouldn't (have) the same kind of unique collaboration these groups can produce," he said. "Facilitators have proven to be quite useful in getting stuff accomplished."

In the Magic Valley, one facilitator oversees the Jarbidge, North Magic Valley, South Magic Valley and Shoshone Basin groups. These groups work with a variety of landowners, land agencies, biologists and conservationists to improve local sage grouse populations. One key way the groups accomplish this is by proposing projects to the state advisory committee.

"This year our proposed project was approved," said Regan Berkley, a regional biologist for the North Magic Valley group. "But next year it may be different. Our projects are only approved if there is enough money. If there is less money next year then maybe only the top five projects will be approved. It really just depends."

The grouse last year was named a candidate for federal endangered-species protections.

Lindsay Nothern, spokesman for U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, said Crapo has been working towards getting the Interior Department to contribute more funding to the working groups.

"The best way is to work with other groups as a collaborative effort," Nothern said. "If the grouse is listed then everything will fall apart, as everyone will most likely be suing each other."

CLEANING

Question:

Why do vacuums need to be so heavy? Do they really have to weigh a ton to produce "heavy duty" cleaning? Even though my desire for clean carpets is huge, my body and muscle tone is more on the petite side. Is there a better vacuum more suitable to me?
"Not-so-buffed, whisp of a woman, weenie-armed, house keeper!"

Answer:

You are not alone! Even the more stout house keepers don't enjoy pushing around a sucking "elephant-like" monstrosity throughout their homes! Come check out my MIELE DELPHI canister style vacuum. This is what I personally use in my home, and I love it! Canisters keep the weight on the floor, so it is much easier on your shoulders and back. All you have to maneuver is the light weight wand. And it cleans my home better than any vacuum I've ever had.

P.S. I'm a weenie arm too! Maybe we should unite and form a club.

OBITUARIES

Aug. 17, 1922 - July 8, 2011

HEYBURN • James R. Casey Sr., 88, of Heyburn, passed away Friday, July 8, 2011, at the Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

James was born Aug. 17, 1922, in Blackfoot, Idaho, to Edward Riley Casey and Beatrice Ann Casey. He was the second of 11 children. He lived in Blackfoot then moved to Kamima and then later to the Boise area, where he and his older brother, Verl, joined the CCC. Then he moved to Montana, settling in Dillon, then later in Anaconda, where he went to work for the Anaconda Copper Company. At the start of World War II, he enlisted in the U.S. Army, serving in the 5th Army under Gen. Mark Clark in the 804th Tank Destroyer Battalion, 1st Recon Company in North Africa and the Italian Campaign in the battles of Al Alamaine, Anzio Beach, Gustoff and Adolph Hitler Line, Battle of Monte Casino and Pole Valley and then on to Rome.

After returning from the war, he met the love of his life, Lorraine Marie Morse. They were later married on Feb. 12, 1946. They had four children, James, Linda, Rosalie and Dale. The family was later sealed together for time and all eternity at the Idaho Falls Temple. Dad had a strong testimony of the gospel of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which he lovingly shared with his family. He enjoyed fishing and hunting and camping with his family in the hills of Montana and Idaho. Jim and Lorraine later moved to Heyburn. They shared 63 years of marriage until Lorraine passed away on Oct. 25, 2009.

James is survived by his brother, Merle Casey of Washington; his sister, Edna Cunningham of Heyburn; son, James Jr. (Lorie) Casey; his daughter, Linda (Fred) Smith; his daughter, Rosalie “Rosie” (Greg) Miller; and son, Dale Casey. He had 20 grandchildren; 43 great-grandchildren ; and five great-great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his wife, Lorraine; his parents; five brothers; three sisters; and his beloved granddaughter, Launa.

We’ll never say goodbye, dad, just so long for now. Old soldiers never die. They just fade away.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, July 15, at the Heyburn LDS 2nd Ward Church, 530 Villa Drive. Viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, July14, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, and for one hour prior to the service Friday at the church. Services will conclude with burial at the Shoshone Cemetery with a graveside service at 3 p.m., with military honor rites under the direction of the Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel.

Douglas Max ‘Doug’ Suter

Aug. 9, 1957 - July 8, 2011

JEROME • Douglas Max “Doug” Suter, 53, of Jerome, passed away Friday, July 8, 2011, at his home.

He was born Aug. 9, 1957, in Jerome, Idaho, the son of Max O. Suter and Joan Butler Tortel. Doug was raised in Jerome and attended schools there. He married Diana Lee Twitchell on Nov. 15, 1992, in Jerome. Together, they raised two daughters. Doug owned and operated Doug Suter Co. and spent most of his working life in heavy construction and landscaping, but wasn’t afraid of tackling any and every kind of work. He loved hunting, fishing, camping and horseback riding. He especially loved motorcycle riding and spending time with family and friends. The highlight of his life was being with his wife and daughters. Doug was also the president of the Wood River Chapter of Sober Riders.

Doug is survived by his wife, Diana; their daughters, Karlena and Jayne; his parents, Max (Shirley) Suter and Joan Tortel; brothers, Mike Suter and Randy (Cherri) Suter; step-sisters, Linda (Bob) Johnson, Darlene (Lee) Coates and Tammy (Clint) Gardner; stepbrothers, Errow (Cindy) Tortel and Myles (Valeta) Tortel; his mother-in-law, Leona Twitchell; uncle, Loren Butler; and many extended family members and friends. He is preceded in death by his grandparents; stepdaughter, Tosha Lee Rasmussen; father-in-law, Angus Twitchell; and his brother-in-law and friend, Rodney Moreland.

A celebration of Doug’s life will be conducted at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 16, in the Messersmith Building at the Jerome County Fairgrounds. Condolences may be sent to P.O. Box 142, Jerome, ID 83338. Doug’s family suggests that in lieu of flowers, memorial contributions be made in Doug Suter’s name at any Magic Valley Bank branch.

Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Elmo Rasmussen

May 11, 1919-July 8, 2011

Elmo Rasmussen, 92, of Twin Falls, passed away peacefully Friday, July 8, 2011, with his family at his side.

Elmo was born in Declo, Idaho, to Jens Edward Rasmussen and Sarah Jane Darrington on May 11, 1919. In 1939, Elmo and Josie Udy were married and had four children, Darhl, Elmo, Kara and Roland. They were later divorced and Elmo married Faye Spencer on Nov. 23, 1963. The marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake City Temple. They had three children, Shane, Pamela and Elisha. As a young man, he served a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Copenhagen, Denmark, and served honorably in the United States Army during World War II.

Elmo was a farmer in Oakley and Richfield for most of his life until moving to Wyoming, where he worked eight years for FMC before retiring. He often talked fondly of his younger years riding horses and working on the farm. Elmo was a man of integrity who loved to work and loved his family and he will be greatly missed.

Elmo’s family would like to thank the staff at Twin Falls Care Center and Visions Hospice for providing him with comfort and compassion at the end of his life.

Elmo is survived by his wife, Faye of Twin Falls; son, Shane (Tammy) Rasmussen of Twin Falls; daughter, Pamela (Keith) Farr of Mesa, Ariz.; daughter, Elisha (Ernesto) Figueroa of Eagle; and daughter, Kara (Alex) Gordon of Boise; as well as 15 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren. He is also survived by his brother, Robert (June) of Burley; and Lady, his faithful dog. Elmo was preceded in death by his parents, Jens and Sarah; siblings, Joel, Ralph, Floyd and Roberta; and children, Darhl, Elmo and Roland.

Visitation will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, July 14, at Rosenau Funeral Home in Twin Falls. The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, July 15 at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints chapel at 229 Park Ave. in Twin Falls, with visitation one hour prior. A graveside service will be held later that day at 3 p.m. at the Richfield Cemetery in Richfield, Idaho.

The family requests that donations be made to the American Cancer Society. Family and friends are encouraged to share their thoughts and memories of Elmo at www.rosenaufuneralhome.com.

March 27, 1925 - July 9, 2011

HEYBURN • Oscar H. Heisel, 86, of Heyburn, passed away Saturday, July 9, 2011, at Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

Oscar was born March 27, 1925, in Moreland, Kan., to Oscar and Elizabeth Heisel. He married Madeline Ash and farmed and lived in Rupert most of his life. He served in the Navy during World War II. He was a charter member of the Elk’s Lodge in Rupert and was a member of the NRA and the American Legion. Oscar enjoyed camping, fishing and getting together with his family.

Oscar is survived by his wife, Madeline; children, Christi Schaeffer, Shirley Whiteaker and Ed (Lisa) Heisel; grandchildren, Brian, Amy, Carrie, Branton, Tanya, Ritchie, Jennifer and Jason; great-grandchildren, Nick, Austin, Rylie, Shelbie, Max and Trista. He was preceded in death by a son, Richard; two brothers; and four sisters.

The funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday, July 14, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert. Viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, July 13, one hour prior to the service Thursday at the mortuary. Services will conclude with burial in the Rupert Cemetery with military honors under the direction of Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel.

The family would like to thank Minidoka Memorial Hospital and Dr. Greg Boettcher for the care given to Oscar.

Betty M. Holloway Grigg Smith

March 10, 1933 - June 21, 2011

WOODBURN, Ore.

• Betty M. Holloway Grigg Smith left to be with her heavenly father Tuesday, June 21, 2011, in Tualatin, Ore., after a short illness at the age of 78.

Betty was born March 10, 1933, in Blackfoot, Idaho, to Clay and May Holloway, the oldest of five children. She attended school in Blackfoot, later moving to Nampa, where she met and married Harold Grigg. To this union, four children were born, Janet (Jerry) Bourn of San Diego, Calif., Jeff (Del-la) Grigg of Twin Falls, Idaho, Steven (Pepper) Grigg of Gresham, Ore., and Brent Grigg of Boise. While serving in the army, Harold and Betty lived in several locations, settling in Twin Falls. After Harold’s death, Betty ran their business, where she met and later married Larry Smith and moved to Bellevue, Idaho, later moving to Oregon and settling in Woodburn.

Betty is survived by her children, Janet, Jeff, Steven, Brent, and Mitch

Smith; 10 grandchildren; 14 great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews. Betty is also survived by sisters, Jean (Darrrell) Lovass, Ruth Doughty and Marie (Tom) Grigg; and a brother, Roy (Glenda) Holloway. She was preceded in death by her parents; and first husband, Harold.

Betty was known for her kindness and her ability to show her love for her family and friends. Betty will be missed by all who knew her. We love you, Mom, and you will live on in our hearts until we meet again.

The family requests that in lieu of flowers, a donation may be given to a charity of the donor’s choice.

Betty’s ashes will be put to rest at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 16, at a graveside service at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Local arrangements are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel of Twin Falls. Condolences may be left at www.reynoldschapel.com.

Marilu Coelho de Villa

May 2, 1928-July 6, 2011

Beloved mother and grandmother, Marilu Coelho de Villa, passed away peacefully Wednesday, July 6, 2011, surrounded by her family.

Marilu Coelho de Villa was born May 2, 1928, in Iquitos, Peru, the oldest daughter of Antonio Coelho Figueiredo and Noelina Mairata de Coelho, both from Portugal. After the death of her husband, Enrique Villa Salcedo, in February of 1988, Marilu moved to California to live with her daughter and son-in law, Jeannette and James Jeffries. In 1994, she moved with her family to Idaho, where she lived the rest of her life.

Marilu loved to play the piano, read and swim. More than anything else, she loved God, her family and her friends. She was always there for her family and she will be missed very much. She was a true one-of-a-kind person.

Marilu is survived by her two daughters, Jeannette Jeffries and Marisa Villa; two sons-in-law, James Jeffries and Carlos Villa; and two granddaughters, Marylou and Giselle Jeffries.

At Marilu’s request, there will be no public viewing. A private celebration of her life will be held July 30, 2011.

Why is South-Central Idaho Safer? We Have More Cops

The number of police officers on the street has emerged as a major issue in the roiling controversy between Cassia County and the city of Burley over whether to continue their 23-year-old law enforcement partnership.

It’s also a question in Wendell, where the cash-strapped town’s government is trying to decide just how few sworn officers it really needs to keep residents safe.

And it’s been a topic of debate for years as the Blaine County Sheriff’s Office has taken over most policing duties in Bellevue and Hailey.

In all of those jurisdictions, the assumption has been that the more cops, the less crime. That’s not always true everywhere, but more often than not it’s so in south-central Idaho, according to Crime in Idaho 2010, an annual survey of the Idaho State Police.

Of the 21 police jurisdictions in the Magic and Wood River valleys – cities and counties – the agencies with more average sworn officers per 1,000 population tend to be safer than those within a lower average.

The five cities — Sun Valley, Ketchum, Rupert, Gooding and Filer — with an average of more than two cops-on-the-beat for every 1,000 residents rank 48th, 26th, 25th, 37th and 56th, respectively, in crime rate among the 57 Idaho cities that have police departments.

Only three Magic Valley cities – Jerome, Wendell and Hagerman – have fewer cops per 1,000 residents than the state average for cities.

Same goes for the counties. Camas, Blaine, Twin Falls and Lincoln all have two or more sworn officers per 1,000 population, and they rank 25th, 36th, 14th and 27th among the 42 Idaho counties that submitted crime reports for the year.

Just Cassia, Minidoka and Gooding counties employ fewer sworn officers than the state average for counties.

A relatively higher percentage of street cops and detectives helps explain why, statistically, south-central Idaho has three of the 10 safest communities in the state.

The city with the region’s biggest crime problem – Twin Falls – is only now beginning to catch up from a two-year stretch when dozens of cops moved on to higher paying jobs. Still, there are 5 percent more sworn officers in the TFPD than five years ago, and the crime rate has ebbed by 22 percent during that same period.

Experienced police officers are expensive to hire for cash-strapped small Idaho communities and even costlier to retain. But they get results.

Officers and crime rates

	Officers/ 1,000 pop.	Crime rate*
Sun Valley	6.7	2,967
Ketchum	2.9	5,645
Rupert	2.3	5,730
Gooding	2.2	4,058
Filer	2.2	1,543
Buhl	1.9	6,285
Bellevue	1.9	3,807
Kimberly	1.8	4,058
Hailey	1.8	2,960
Heyburn	1.8	1,529
Twin Falls	1.6	8,321
Jerome	1.4	6,043
Wendell	1.2	4,575
Hagerman	1.2	1,697

Five Myths about America’s Debt Ceiling

Bruce Bartlett

Washington Post

In recent months, the federal debt ceiling has become a matter of national debate and political hysteria.

The ceiling must be raised by Aug. 2, Treasury says, or the government will run out of cash. Congressional Republicans counter that they won’t raise the debt limit unless Democrats agree to large budget cuts with no tax increases. President Obama insists that closing tax loopholes must be part of the package. Whom and what to believe in the great debt-limit debate?

1. The debt limit is an effective way to control spending and deficits.

Not at all. In 2003, Brian Roseboro, assistant secretary of the Treasury for financial markets, explained it best: “The plain truth is that the debt limit does not affect the deficits or surpluses. The critical revenue and spending decisions are made during the congressional budget process.”

The debt ceiling is a cap on the amount of securities the Treasury can issue, something it does to raise money to pay for government expenses. These expenses, and the deficit they’ve wrought, are a result of past actions by Congress to create entitlement programs, make appropriations and cut taxes. In that sense, raising the debt limit is about paying for past expenses, not controlling future ones. For Congress to refuse to let Treasury raise the cash to pay the bills that Congress itself has run up simply makes no sense.

2. Opposition to raising the debt limit is a partisan issue.

Republicans are doing the squawking now because there is a Democrat in the White House. But back when there was a Republican president, Democrats did the squawking. On March 16, 2006, one Democratic senator in particular denounced George W. Bush’s request to raise the debt limit. “Washington is shifting the burden of bad choices today onto the backs of our children and grandchildren.”

That senator was Barack Obama.

3. Financial markets won’t care much if interest payments are just a few days late — a “technical default.”

Some Republicans believe that bondholders know they will get their money eventually and will understand that a brief default — just a few days — might be necessary to reduce future deficits. “If a bondholder misses a payment for a day or two or three or four,” Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., told CNBC in May, “what is more important is that you’re putting the government in a materially better position to be able to pay their bonds later on.”

This is nothing but wishful thinking. The bond-rating agencies have repeatedly warned that any failure to pay interest or principal on a Treasury security exactly when due could cause the U.S. credit rating to be downgraded, which would push interest rates up.

4. It’s worth risking default on the debt to prevent a tax increase, given the weak economy.

While Republicans’ concerns about higher taxes are not unreasonable, most economists believe that any fiscal contraction at this time would be dangerous. They note that a large cut in spending back in 1937 brought on a sharp recession, which undermined the recovery the country was making after the Great Depression.

5. Obama must accept GOP budget demands because he needs Republican support to raise the debt limit.

Republicans believe they have the president over a barrel. But their hand may be weaker than they think. A number of legal scholars point to Section 4 of the 14th Amendment, which says, “The validity of the public debt of the United States . . . shall not be questioned.”

Some scholars, including Michael Abramowicz of George Washington University Law School and Garrett Epps of the University of Baltimore Law School, think this passage may make the debt limit unconstitutional because by definition, the limit calls into question the validity of the public debt.

Either way, a failure to raise the debt limit would force the president to break the law. The only question is which one.

Bruce Bartlett is a former adviser to President Reagan and a Treasury official in the George W. Bush administration. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Politics in Burley ‘the Way They’ve Gone for Years’

Re. Laurie Welch’s April 12, March 4 and Jan. 22 Times-News articles about alleged ongoing conflicts of interest by some of Burley’s elected and appointed officials, handled by Al Barrus of Cassia County and John Horgan of Jerome County, and (in a remarkable conflict of interest himself) Burley City Attorney Kelly Anthon: There are some things that your readers might not know.

Every current City Council member knew that there was alleged ongoing offenses, and except for some council members leaking information about the alleged ongoing offenses to me, and except for those same council members encouraging me to do something about the alleged ongoing offenses, not one of those council members did anything else.

Additionally, even after one council member was convicted of battery against me, and even after that same council member violated the terms of his deferred prosecution by repeatedly accosting me, and even after the judge extend the “probationary period” of the councilman’s conviction by six months, and even after I twice spoke in City Council meetings about the need for an ordinance-required board of ethics to be impaneled to look into the councilman’s behavior, and even though I wrote personal letters to the mayor and three City Council members asking for the board of ethics, nobody did anything.

That’s the way politics go in Burley. That’s the way they’ve gone for years.

Drive Leads to Golf Course Trouble

My husband and I went for a drive while waiting for my children to get off work to take their dad out for Father’s Day dinner. While driving on a public road we were hit by a golf ball, shattered my husband’s windshield. While sitting there in shock a woman approached us that heard it hit and said for us to go to the club shop and the club would take care of damages. A man approached us saying he had hit it while in a golf tournament and said “don’t know what to say other than I am sorry” then he drove away. We proceeded to go to the club shop and they said the club is not responsible for damages the man was. They did not go get his information or make him pay for his damages. Thanks to the man that will not pay for his damages, my husband had a wonderful Father’s Day!

Drive with caution around golf courses, could end up cost you $200 to $300 for a Sunday drive.

Review Ordered in Death Penalty Case

9th U.S. Circuit Court rules if Joseph Duncan is found incompetent on matter of waiving his right to an appeal, Judge Edward Lodge must hold additional hearing.

By REBECCA BOONE
The Associated Press

BOISE • The life of a man convicted of kidnapping, torture and murder might be spared after an appeals court has ruled that Joseph Edward Duncan III should have been given a competency hearing before he was allowed to waive his appeal.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and remanded Duncan's case Monday, ordering U.S. District Court Judge Edward Lodge to hold a retrospective competency hearing for Duncan.

If Duncan is found to be incompetent on the matter of waiving his right to an appeal, Lodge must hold an additional hearing to determine whether the death row inmate was competent to represent himself. If he's not, Lodge must vacate the death sentence.

In a prepared statement, U.S. Attorney Wendy Olson said that since his arrest in 2005, Duncan has been found competent by every court that has considered the issue, and that his three death sentences remain in place.

She said the competency hearing was simply a procedural matter.

Duncan was sentenced to die in 2008 for kidnapping, torturing and murdering a 9-year-old Coeur d'Alene boy in 2005. Prosecutors said Duncan snatched Dylan Groene and his 8-year-old sister from their northern Idaho home after killing their older brother, mother and mother's fiancé.

Duncan kept the children at a remote Montana campsite for weeks before killing Dylan and returning with Dylan's sister to Coeur d'Alene, where he was arrested.

At his federal trial in Boise, Duncan decided to represent himself even though the court had provided him with three defense attorneys. The court-appointed attorneys were put on "standby" status, ordered to help him when he asks, but otherwise allow Duncan to handle his own defense.

Homeless Marriage Shows 'Love and Hope Through Adversity'

Together for so long that many friends thought they already were married, Verdell Stirm and Robert Anderson, long-term residents of a shelter for men, women and families, tied the knot Saturday at Boise's Kathryn Albertson Park.

By ANNA WEBB
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE • The bride, her hair dyed "sweet pepper," wore purple. She arrived at the ceremony on the back of a Harley motorcycle.

The groom looked somber and was dressed all in black. The best man blessed the guests, including a dog named Smokey, with clouds of sage in a ceremonial "smudging."

Gretchen Wilson's "I'd Love to Be Your Last" played on a boombox.

About 50 guests gathered at a gazebo in Kathryn Albertson Park on Sunday to celebrate the marriage of Verdell Stirm and Robert "Stretch" Anderson.

Like many of the guests, Stirm and Anderson are long-term residents at Interfaith Sanctuary, Boise's homeless shelter for men, women and children on River Street.

Both have lived there for about five years. They have contended with mental health issues. Stirm has migraines and back problems that sometimes put her in a wheelchair.

When one of Anderson's friends joked with him about getting married — "taking a big jump off a short pier" — Anderson countered that his wedding to Stirm is "really more of a short jump off a long pier."

The two have been together for three years, so long that many of their before the wedding, she was tending a fellow resident's baby son on the Corpus Christi day shelter patio.

"We try to help out. If someone needs to talk, we're there for them," said Stirm.

Anderson, whose 6-foot-8 frame explains the nickname he's had for three decades, is a quiet, constant caretaker for Stirm.

"The best thing about marrying Stretch," she said, "is knowing I have my lifelong partner."

Anderson is so devoted to Stirm, "he pushes her wheelchair through the snow," said Kim Willetts.

Willetts has known the couple for four years — "before they even knew they were in love," she said. She was teary after the ceremony and shared a long hug with the bride.

The wedding, in her words: "Awesome. It shows love and hope through adversity. That doesn't stop just because someone is in the shelter."

The Sanctuary community, residents and volunteers, pitched in to pay for a reception — complete with wedding cake — across the street at Ann Morrison Park.

Sorrels presided over the service and helped the couple write their vows. She said there have been other times when the community at Sanctuary has come together as it did Sunday.

"But most of those times have been around death," she said, mentioning the annual service she leads to remember homeless people in Boise who have died during the year.

"This community needs a good story," said matron of honor Tracy DiBenedetti, who colored her hair to match the bride's.

Education Board OKs Extra $7.5M for Colleges

CSI gets $667,000 in funding, while the College of Western Idaho nets $5 million.

By JESSIE L. BONNER
The Associated Press

BOISE • The state Board of Education voted Monday to approve $7.5 million in additional funding for Idaho's cash-strapped community colleges.

The board called a special meeting to vote on the extra funding, which comes from the surplus Idaho is carrying forward into this fiscal year.

The money is going toward the colleges because of agreements Idaho made with the federal government on funding levels for education when receiving some $50 million last year to preserve teaching jobs, said the board chief fiscal officer Matt Freeman.

Lawmakers set state general funding for community colleges at about $23 million for this year, down from about $25 million in the previous year. The additional one-time money for the schools will bump up their state general fund appropriation this year to more than $30 million, which is unprecedented.

The previous high was $28.6 million in fiscal year 2008.

"It's going to be substantial for them," Freeman said.

Of the $7.5 million, the board approved more than $5 million in additional one-time funding for enrollment growth the College of Western Idaho in Nampa. Nearly $1.8 million was approved for North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene and about $667,000 for the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls.

"I can tell you at North Idaho College, the money will be put to very good use," said school president Priscilla Bell, who is retiring next year.

Bell is among community college presidents who have reported swelling enrollments amid declines in state funding for higher education in recent years. In January 2010, Bell reported student enrollment at the college had increased an estimated 20 percent compared to the same time in the previous year.

At the College of Western Idaho, president Bert Glandon told lawmakers this year his enrollment had doubled to more than 7,000 students since 2010. The additional money approved by the board will help "mitigate the massive enrollment increases," Glandon said.

Idaho tax revenue was running more than $60 million ahead of projections for the fiscal year that ended June 30, though official numbers have not been released.

Idaho Tax Commission Looking to Buoy Image

Recent appointment by the governor looks to help agency move beyond scandal.

BOISE (AP) • The newest Idaho Tax Commission appointee believes the behavior of a former panel chairman tarnished the reputation of the agency and certified public accountants everywhere.

Rich Jackson, appointed by the governor last week to the four-person panel, said he has resigned from his outside positions and will recuse himself from any commission business involving former clients or partners, the Spokesman-Review reported Sunday.

Jackson intends to avoid pitfalls such as those that helped prompt former chairman Royce Chigbrow to resign in January.

"I think it tarnished not only the tax commission, but CPAs," Jackson, who is a CPA, said.

Jackson, a Republican, is leaving positions as chairman of the Idaho Legislative Compensation Committee, treasurer of the Boise Metro Chamber PAC, member of the Idaho Manufactured Housing Board; and treasurer of the Idaho House of Representatives Republican Caucus, the newspaper said.

Jackson replaces Sam Haws, who was appointed by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in June to lead the Idaho Commission on Aging.

Starting in 2009, Chigbrow was accused by employees of the tax agency of helping his son's accounting firm and attempting to use his position to help a friend embroiled in a legal dispute with a former business partner. Chigbrow was not charged.

Chigbrow was accused of helping his friend, Benton "Skip" Hofferber, by summoning commission employees to his office to provide them with confidential information about the tax problems of Hofferber's former employer.

Hofferber was then suing the company after being fired in October 2009.

Tax commission employees said Chigbrow met with Hofferber at a private Boise dining club; inappropriately handled the company's cashier's checks; and tried to block a refund after Boise Food Service had brought its taxes current.

Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower's office announced it wouldn't prosecute Chigbrow, saying a statute of limitations expired on one complaint and that admissible evidence of illegal activity in other complaints was insufficient.

Jackson said the concerns over Chigbrow's conduct have prompted state government to bolster controls to prevent a future embarrassment.

Stranded on Island, 15 Illegal Immigrants Call Calif. Authorities

Immigrants being interviewed to determine details of journey and whether some of them might be smugglers, who could face federal charges

By ROBERT JABLON
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Fifteen suspected illegal immigrants who were stranded on a remote Southern California island for three days were being held Monday after what may have been a 300-mile journey in a rickety boat — the latest evidence that Mexican smugglers are heading farther north to avoid capture.

Fourteen men and a woman in their 30s and 40s were rescued from the north side of Santa Cruz Island on Sunday — days after a man called 911 to say he and three other men had been dropped off somewhere on an island and were stranded, authorities said.

“It was a unique situation,” U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer 1st Class Adam Eggers said. “We normally don’t get a phone call from suspected migrants.”

“It was a unique situation. We normally don’t get a phone call from suspected migrants.”

The connection was then lost but it prompted an air, sea and land search of the Channel Islands, a sparsely populated archipelago that stretches northwest of Los Angeles County and includes a national park.

No one was found and the Coast Guard issued an alert to private boaters, urging them to contact authorities if anyone from an island asked for assistance.

On Sunday, a boat reported that some people had flagged them down to seek help on Santa Cruz Island, about 20 miles off the coast of Ventura.

A total of 15 people eventually were picked up from the north side of the island, said Yvonne Menard, National Park Service spokeswoman.

They had found a stream or spring to provide water but apparently had no food, authorities said.

“Everyone was in pretty good shape once they got some food and water into them,” Eggers said.

They were handed over to federal immigration agents. No boat was found, but they may have made a sea trip from Mexico, authorities surmised.

One of the 15 was from Guatemala and the others were from Mexico, said Virginia Kice, a spokeswoman for U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, or ICE.

Two were treated at a hospital for minor ankle and wrist injuries while others had bumps, scrapes and bruises, she said.

The immigrants were being interviewed to determine details of their journey and whether some of them actually might be the smugglers, who could face federal charges, Kice said.

In recent years, smugglers have brought boatloads of people and drugs into California aboard small Mexican wooden fishing boats called pangas. At up to $5,000 a person — roughly twice the fee to cross illegally over land —

one overnight smuggling trip can generate $100,000. Smugglers of human cargo and marijuana are turning to the sea because of increased interdiction on land, said Claude Arnold, special agent in charge of ICE’s Homeland Security Investigations in Los Angeles.

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security reported 110 seizures of watercraft and related equipment in Southern California from October 2009 through September 2010, up from 49 seizures a year earlier.

With the arrival of July and hotter weather, many gardeners leave the garden to fend for itself. Unfortunately, this doesn’t help the harvest.

Although your planting may be done, to ensure good yields you need to spend time in the garden to water, weed, and check for insect pests. Some crops will benefit from a modest side dressing of nitrogen fertilizer as they begin to set fruit or start to grow rapidly, such as when cucurbits send out vines.

Avoid applying high quantities of nitrogen. Sprinkling about a total of one pound of nitrogen along the crop rows is enough for every 1,000 square feet of garden. This amount of nitrogen is contained in about three pounds of ammonium nitrate, 33-0-0, or in 10 pounds of a 4-3-4 organic fertilizer blend made from composted chicken manure.

fall or watering. To prevent foliar diseases, apply water directly to the soil and avoid wetting the leaves of plants if possible.

Many perennials come into bloom this month including a favorite of many Vermonters, the daylily. One nice thing about daylilies is that they can be planted almost any time the soil can be worked. However, early spring and late summer are the best time for transplanting.

Other activities for July: prune spring bulb foliage as it dies back; deadhead annuals (remove faded blooms); renovate strawberry beds after harvest; turn over the compost pile.

Syrian Protesters Attack U.S., French Embassies in Capital

Sharp escalation follows visit by U.S. and French ambassadors to opposition stronghold. Syrian authorities angered by U.S. ambassador's harsh criticism.

By ZEINA KARAM and BASSEM MROUE
The Associated Press

BEIRUT • Hundreds of Syrian government supporters attacked the U.S. Embassy in Damascus Monday, smashing windows and spray-painting walls with obscenities and graffiti that called the American ambassador a "dog." Guards at the French Embassy fired in the air to ward off another group of protesters.

The sharp escalation in tensions followed a visit last week by the American and French ambassadors to the city of Hama, a stronghold of opposition to authoritarian President Bashar Assad. Syrian authorities were angered by the visit and American Ambassador Robert Ford's harsh criticism afterward of the government crackdown on a four-month-old uprising. Ford's residence was also attacked on Monday. The U.S. and France both accused Syrian forces of being too slow to respond and demanded the government abide by its international obligations to protect diplomatic missions and allow envoys freedom of movement. FATEHPUR, India • Railway workers Monday began clearing the mangled wreckage of a derailed passenger train in northern India after ending a rescue operation that found 68 bodies. Throughout the day, anxious relatives searching for missing family members had thronged to the site of Sunday's crash as bodies wrapped in white shrouds lay in rows on the ground next to the train. By late Monday afternoon, rescue teams had finished searching the twisted coaches for victims and survivors and the repair work had begun amid pouring rain. At least 239 passengers were injured when the Kalka Mail jumped the tracks near Fatehpur in Uttar Pradesh state, Brij Lal, a senior state police official said. The main government-run hospital in Fatehpur was overrun by grieving relatives searching for their kin among the injured and the dead. "I was listening to music on the upper berth, when there was a loud bang followed by a thud. I was flung from my seat and hit my head against the side of the coach," passenger Subajit Ghosh, 20, said at a hospital, his head swathed in bandages. Lal said the dead included two Swedish nationals. Another Swedish passenger was injured. Please see INDIA, N2

OBAMA SAYS HE'LL REJECT ANY STOPGAP EXTENSION OF U.S. BORROWING LIMIT

Republicans renew opposition to tax increases Obama sees as crucial along with spending cuts for reducing federal deficits, restraining national debt.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imploring both political parties to give ground, President Barack Obama declared Monday he would reject any stopgap extension of the nation's borrowing limit, adding fresh urgency for Republicans and fellow Democrats to resolve intense tax and spending disputes and head off economic calamity. "If not now, when?" Obama said in a news conference just ahead of his latest bargaining session with congressional leaders at the White House. That meeting lasted about 90 minutes and ended with no sign of progress. Lawmakers planned to return to the White House for more talks Tuesday afternoon. Please see BUDGET, N2

Britain: Even Babies Should Exercise to Fight Obesity

Officials say parents should reduce the amount of time kids spend watching television or being strapped in a stroller, and that playing is likely to meet kids' daily requirement of exercise

By MARIA CHENG
The Associated Press

LONDON • In a new campaign against obesity, the British government issued guidelines on Monday saying that children under the age of 5 — including those who can't even walk yet — should exercise every day. In its first such guidelines for children that young, the health department said kids under 5 who can walk should be physically active for at least three hours a day. Officials also said parents should reduce the amount of time such kids spend being sedentary while watching television or being strapped in a stroller. The three hours of activity should be spread throughout the day. Officials said the children's daily dose of exercise is likely to be met simply through playing but could also include activities such as walking to school. For babies who can't walk yet, the government said physical activity should be encouraged from birth, including infants playing on their stomachs or having swimming sessions Please see OBESITY, N2

Linn Duvhammar, a spokeswoman for the Swedish Foreign Ministry, said that a Swedish man in his 20s had been taken to a hospital but she was unable to confirm any Swedes died.

Authorities were investigating the cause of the crash, H.C. Joshi, a senior railway official, said. Newspapers reported the driver had slammed on the emergency brakes because cattle were on the tracks in front of the speeding train.

Volunteers and army soldiers worked through the night to pull the injured from the train's 12 shattered coaches. Officials said the train was carrying about 1,000 passengers, but the exact number was not known.

By Monday evening, 46 bodies had been identified and 19 of those had been handed over to family members, Lal said, adding that 19 bodies were yet to be identified.

The train was headed to Kalka, in the foothills of the Himalayas, from Howrah, a station near Kolkata in eastern India.

Train services across northern India have been disrupted. At least 62 trains were diverted to other routes and many others have been canceled, said S. Mathur, a railway official.

Budget

Obama told reporters the sessions would be an everyday affair until there was agreement, and he refused to even entertain the idea of a backup plan should they fail and the government should default on Aug. 2.

"We are going to get this done," Obama insisted. They have two weeks or less to do so in order to get any deal through Congress in time.

Yet the path to an accord remained hard to see. Even as Obama spoke, Republicans renewed their opposition to the tax increases he sees as crucial along with spending cuts for reducing huge federal deficits and restraining the soaring national debt.

"Do you need to raise taxes in order to get control of spending? I think the answer is no," said House Speaker John Boehner just before heading to the White House. Said House Majority Leader Eric Cantor: "We are not going to raise taxes. That's all."

And there was no indication late Monday that the latest bargaining session moved either side off its talking points.

"Republicans are insisting on cutting seniors' benefits instead of closing taxpayer-funded giveaways to billionaires and corporate jet owners," Adam Jentleson, spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, said after the White House meeting broke up.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

White House Chief of Staff William Daley, left, and others, listen as President Barack Obama speaks in the James Brady Press Briefing Room at the White House in Washington on Monday.

Democrats suggested that most spending cuts be concentrated in the later years of a deal, but a Republican aide said GOP lawmakers took issue with that suggestion and want the cuts to begin right away.

A potential deal — a package that could total $2 trillion or more in deficit cuts over a decade — is considered necessary for Congress to lift the nation's $14.3 trillion debt limit. Failure to lift that cap could cause the government to default on its bills and sink the economy and the world into deeper trouble.

Obama renewed his case Monday for a package that would put a historic dent in the country's deficits by blending politically poisonous elements for both parties: tax hikes for the wealthy and big corporations opposed by Republicans and social service cuts that Democrats decry.

Obama tried to alter the debate by saying that any potential tax increases on wealthier people would not take effect until 2013. That would fall after the next election, when Obama will seek re-election and control of the House and the Senate will be at stake. Meanwhile, a short-term debt-limit increase would keep the issue boiling during the campaign.

The president said he would refuse to accept stop-gap legislation. "It's not going to get easier; it's going to get harder," Obama said. "So we might as well do it now. Pull off the Band-Aid. Eat our peas."

He said he would refuse to sign into law a short-term extension of the debt limit, which technically left open the possibility that it could become law without his signature. The White House later confirmed that Obama meant he would veto such a bill.

More broadly, Obama sought to position himself as the pragmatist seeking a compromise in a divided town. He tried to build pressure on Congress to prove to a disillusioned American people that "this town can actually do something once in a while."

To Republicans, he said they have long pushed deficit reduction as the way to create desperately needed jobs and now won't take yes for an answer. "Where are they?" he said. "I mean, this is what they claim would be the single biggest boost to business certainty and confidence. So what's the hold-up?"

And to Democrats eager to protect entitlements, Obama said doing nothing is not tenable. The president said Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid have to be made stronger for the longer term and the rising debt each year will crowd out Democratic priorities such as education and medical research.

"So, yeah, we're going to have a sales job," he conceded. "This is not pleasant."

The president himself is under pressure to get a deal that can pass Congress without undermining his own positions — and voters.

Obama's previous meeting with top lawmakers from both parties, on Sunday night, accomplished little.

And that was after the possibility of a grander deal on the magnitude of $4 trillion, as discussed by Obama and Boehner, fell apart Saturday night amid steep Republican opposition.

Obesity

with their parents. The government said children's individual physical and mental abilities should be considered when interpreting the advice.

"It's vital that parents introduce children to fun and physically active pastimes to help prevent them becoming obese children, who are likely to become obese adults at risk of heart disease, diabetes and some cancers," Maura Gillespie, head of policy and advocacy at the British Heart Foundation, said in a statement.

Nearly a quarter of British adults are obese, and experts estimate that by 2050 about 90 percent of adults will be heavy.

For children aged 5 to 18, Britain recommends at least one hour of exercise, but that should include intensive activities to strengthen muscles and bones.

In the U.S., the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advises children and teenagers to get about one hour or more of physical activity every day.

According to the Institute of Medicine, an independent organization in Washington, D.C., toddlers should get at least 15 minutes of exercise for every hour they spend in child care.

formally protested, calling the attacks "outrageous," and saying protesters were incited by a television station heavily influenced by Syrian authorities.

"Ford get out now," protesters wrote on a paper hung on the U.S. Embassy's fence. "The people want to kick out the dog," read graffiti scrawled in red on the wall of the embassy, along with another line cursing America. The protesters smashed the embassy sign hanging over one gate.

The U.S. said it would seek compensation for damage.

Syrian-U.S. relations have been mired in mutual distrust for years. But Monday's attacks were the worst such violence since 2000, when a stone-throwing mob attacked and vandalized the U.S. Embassy and ambassador's residence over American and British airstrikes against Iraq.

The attacks pose a renewed challenge to the Obama administration. The White House has criticized the Syrian regime's violent crack-down on peaceful protests but has refrained from calling for an end to the Assad family's four decades of rule, seemingly wary of pressing too hard as it tries to wind down wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and faces criticism for being part of the coalition battling Moammar Gadhafi in Libya.

The U.S. said about 300 "thugs" breached the wall of the embassy compound before being dispersed by American Marine guards. No injuries were reported.

State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland said the mob got onto the roof of the chancery building, spray-painted graffiti and broke windows and security cameras. They lobbed fruits and vegetables at the compound.

A witness told The Associated Press that protesters scaled a fence, smashed windows and raised a Syrian flag at the embassy.

Nuland said that Syrian security forces, who are supposed to guard the mission, were slow to respond.

After the crowd at the embassy was dispersed, the protesters moved to the ambassador's residence and attacked it, causing unspecified damage, Nuland said. The ambassador's residence is not inside the embassy compound but is nearby.

Science Seeks Ways to Take Sting Out of Rays

Scientists don't know exactly what causes sunburn pain. But research is getting them closer to some answers.

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON • If you've hit the beach, chances are you've experienced an unfortunate rite of summer: The sunburn. Skin so swollen it hurts to bend. The heat that rises from reddened shoulders. The "ow, ow, ow" from the shower after you'd thought the pain had faded.

For all the creams that promise to soothe, there aren't super treatments for a sunburn. Dermatologists say the best bet: Some of the same pills you pop for a headache — like the ibuprofen found in Motrin and Advil, or naproxen brands such as Aleve.

If that sounds too simple, well, scientists don't know exactly what causes this kind of touch-sensitive pain. But research is getting them closer to some answers.

British scientists found a clue in some healthy people who volunteered to be sunburned for science. Don't worry — they controlled the beams of ultraviolet light so that only a small patch of the volunteers' arms got a medium burn, just enough for a unique kind of testing.

One reason sunburns are so common is that by the time you see pink and head indoors, more damage already is brewing. Unlike an immediate burn from, say, touching a hot stove, a sunburn's pain is delayed as the red darkens over the next 24 to 48 hours.

Researchers from Kings College London tracked how their volunteers' sunburned skin became more sensitive. At the peak of pain, they cut away a small bit of damaged skin to analyze all the biochemical changes inside — and found a protein that's responsible for triggering the cascade of pain and redness.

The protein summons inflammation-causing immune cells to the damaged spot as sunburned skin cells die off. Its activity increased more than did other pain-related chemicals as the sunburn worsened, the researchers reported last week the journal Science Translational Medicine.

It took further experiments with rats to show the molecule, named CXCL5, was a key culprit. Most intriguing, injecting rats' sunburned feet with a substance that tamped down the protein also tamped down the pain, a finding that might lead to new medications. The researchers will next study whether the protein plays a role in more long-lasting types of pain.

One reason sunburns are so common is that by the time you see pink and head indoors, more damage is brewing.

What about today's sunburns? About a third of adults get one each year, and two-thirds of them have more than one, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. That's a bigger problem than pain — sunburns are believed to increase risk of the most serious type of skin cancer, melanoma. There aren't good figures on how often children get sunburned, but their tender skin can burn especially easily.

While water and sand reflect UV rays to increase exposure, it's not just the beachgoer who's at risk. A sunburn can sneak up on anyone, from the kids playing T-ball and their watching families to the afternoon gardener.

First-degree sunburns tend to peel in a few days. But more severe second-degree burns can blister and even require a doctor's care, especially if they cover large areas or come with fever and chills, says Dr. Roger Ceilley of the American Academy of Dermatology and the University of Iowa. A bad burn hinders how well your body cools itself, so it's important to cool down and keep hydrated.

To self-treat the pain, take ibuprofen or similar over-the-counter painkillers known as NSAIDs within a few hours of reddening skin, Ceilley advises. Those pills fight various kinds of inflammation. While they may not directly block the pain-causing protein the British researchers discovered, they do act on related pain chemicals, he notes.

But don't use those pills before going in the sun; they're among a host of medicines that can make your skin more sun-sensitive.

Cool compresses can soothe, and some patients find relief from aloe. But "you don't want to put a lot of heavy ointments on," Ceilley cautions. They can trap in heat.

At Wake Forest University, dermatology professor Dr. Steven Feldman also advises anesthetic sprays to numb the area, and for more serious burns a hydrocortisone cream.

But more important, "Don't get a sunburn," Feldman stresses. The advice:

- Stay out of direct sun when it's most intense, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

- When you are out, wear sun-protective clothing and seek shade such as beach umbrellas. Feldman likes to tell of the dermatologists' convention in Hawaii where beachgoers wore long-sleeved swim cover-ups and big hats.

- Don't forget the sunscreen, especially on the face, hands and arms that are exposed to sun just about every day.

Sunscreen isn't a substitute for the first two tips, Feldman warns, because it doesn't guarantee protection if you stay out too long, use too little or miss a spot.

Still, picking a sunscreen should get less confusing next summer when new government regulations kick in. Those rules will prohibit claims like "waterproof" — you do need to reapply after swimming or sweating — and will assure protection against both types of skin-damaging UV rays.

IRANIAN WEAPONS USED AGAINST U.S. TROOPS

BAGHDAD (AP) • A blunt and frustrated U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta expressed exasperation Monday with Iraqi indecision on whether it wants U.S. troops to stay next year. He threatened stronger U.S. action to stop Iranian-supplied weapons from killing Americans as they prepare to depart.

To reinforce the message of concern about Iran, the U.S. military gave reporters a rare look at samples of what they described as improvised rockets and other devices that have been used to target Americans in Baghdad. Before meeting with Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki and President Jalal Talabani to push for a decision on a post-2011 U.S. troop presence, Panetta told American soldiers that the Iraqis need to act swiftly on two matters critical to their future security: naming a defense minister and deciding whether Iraqi forces need U.S. help longer than originally planned.

"Damn it, make a decision," Panetta said, adding that while Washington is getting frustrated it also recognizes that Iraq's democracy is in its infancy.

On his first visit to Iraq since succeeding Robert Gates as Pentagon chief July 1, Panetta flashed a more candid, unconventional style than his predecessor. His language was more colorful, too, sprinkling in a few curse words.

THE DIGIT

$10.7 billion

Starbucks sales in the clouds • Starbucks brought in $10.7 billion during its most recent fiscal year, nearly three-fourths coming from the United States. Starbucks officials say its international business eventually will produce at least half the company's revenue. Starbucks CEO Howard Schultz doesn't estimate when.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

NEW YORK (AP) — July doesn't look so promising anymore. The European debt crisis appears to be widening, with concerns about government debt defaults spreading beyond Greece to much larger countries like Italy and Spain. If that happens companies that do business internationally could see their revenue and profits decline as European countries and companies curtail purchases. What's more, a widespread financial crisis could cause a credit crunch in Europe and elsewhere. The concerns sent stocks down. After a rally that sent markets up sharply the last two weeks of June, the Standard & Poor's 500 index dropped 24.31 points, or 1.8 percent, to 1,319.49 on Monday.

Sheep belonging to the Nick Martinez family graze in a meadow on Cleman Mountain near Naches, Wash., July 1.

Washington Free-Range Sheep Rancher Hanging On

BY SCOTT SANDSBERRY

Yakima Herald-Republic

NACHES, Wash. — His family business is the state's largest of its kind, and his every day can be a gantlet of federal scrutiny and state wildlife guidelines, permits and land-use restrictions.

Nick Martinez raises and grazes sheep, and he is facing problems that may lie ahead.

While nearly every other free-range sheep ranching operation in the state closed up shop 20 years ago, the Martinezes have survived nearly nine decades of changes in the marketplace and the political arena. They have done so despite losing vast swaths of grazing land to such federal projects as the Hanford nuclear reservation and the Yakima Training Center.

But now they must distance themselves — and their domestic sheep, quite literally — from the wild California bighorn sheep not too far across these Cascade foothills, a complication that didn't exist even two decades ago.

"The last couple of years there's always been something — fire, restoration work from fire safety, road washouts, bighorns," Martinez, 37, says. "Always something."

Domestic sheep carry pathogens that are benign to them but can be fatal in bighorns. Because wildlife scientists believe it can only be passed between the species by "nose-to-nose contact," keeping them apart becomes paramount.

In a high-speed world, sheep ranchers like the Martinezes are an anachronism.

They have grazed this particular Wenatchee National Forest allotment on a two-year rotation for nearly a half-century, and not much about their operation has changed in all that time.

The herders are still brought in on seasonal worker visas from Europe and South America, their only concession to technology being the John Deere tractor the Martinezes provide each to haul his living-quarters trailer to the next two-night layover site.

Kansas Farmers Bite On Offer Of Water Use

SCOTT CITY, Kan. (AP) — The drought is getting so bad in parts of Kansas that farmers are weighing whether to borrow from next year's water allocation to quench this year's crops.

The state's Division of Water Resources has offered water rights holders in selected counties a pair of options for adjusting the way they use their five-year allocations. The program is a condition of a drought declaration for dozens of Kansas counties that have been long suffering under drought conditions.

The Hays Daily News reports that farmers and ranchers are more likely to participate in southwestern counties coping with less than half the normal rainfall.

Jan King, manager of the Western Groundwater Management District No. 1 in southern Wallace County, said irrigators would be allowed to borrow from their 2012 allocation or participate in a flexible account system that spreads their water rights allocation over five years.

"I've heard a lot of people talking about it. I think there will be interest," King said. "It has been very dry here."

OBAMA SAYS 'EAT PEAS' AND GROWERS AGREE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama may not have won a political consensus on how to trim the budget, but he's getting quick agreement from the nation's pea growers.

Speaking at a White House news conference about the need for a politically painful deal to raise the nation's borrowing limit, Obama said that it's time to "pull off the Band-Aid" and "eat our peas."

Pea growers agreed. The USA Dry Pea & Lentil Council chose to take the president's comments as an endorsement of their product. The group says eating peas "will contribute to a balanced diet, if not a balanced budget."

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On October 25, 2011 at the hour of 10:30AM, of said day, on the steps of the Jerome County Courthouse located at 300 N Lincoln, Jerome, ID 83338.

Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as successor trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, cashiers check, certified check or tellers check, (from a bank which has a branch in the community at the site of the sale), money order, State of Idaho check or local government check, or cash equivalent in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the same time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Jerome, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to wit:

Lot 14 in Block 11 of Magic Meadows No. 1 Subdivision, to the City of Jerome, Jerome County, Idaho, as the same is platted in the official plat thereof, now of record in the office of the Recorder of said County

THE TRUSTEE HAS NO KNOWLEDGE OF A MORE PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION OF THE ABOVE-DESCRIBED REAL PROPERTY, BUT FOR PURPOSES OF COMPLIANCE WITH IDAHO CODE, SECTION 60-113, THE TRUSTEE HAS BEEN INFORMED THAT THE STREET ADDRESS OF: 712 17th Avenue East, Jerome, ID 83338, MAY SOMETIMES BE ASSOCIATED WITH SAID REAL PROPERTY.

If the successful bidder cannot provide the bid price by means of one of the above means of payment, the sale will be postponed for 10 minutes only to allow the high bidder to obtain payment in a form prescribed herein above. If the high bidder is unsuccessful in obtaining payment as directed within 10 minutes, the sale will be re-held immediately and any bid by the high bidder from the previous sale, will be rejected, all in accordance with Idaho Code 45-1502 et. Sec.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by ReNae M. Shropshire a single woman, as Grantor to Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of United States of America acting through the Rural Housing Service, or successor agency, United States Department of Agriculture (formerly Farmers Home Administration or Rural Economic & Community Development) or successor agency, United States Department of Agriculture (formerly Farmers Home Administration or Rural Economic & Community Development) as Beneficiary, recorded August 25, 1998 as Instrument No. 985106, Mortgage records of Jerome County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is failure to: Make principal and interest payments as set forth on said Deed of Trust and Promissory Note. The original loan amount was $37,500.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 6.250% per annum, as evidenced in Promissory Note dated August 25, 1998. Payments are in default for the months of December 2010 through and including May 2011 in the amount of $328.63 per month and continuing each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reinstatement. The balance now due is $29,439.06 in Principal; Interest is $922.50, subsidy granted is $895.68 and fees currently assessed are $1,418.98 computed through May 27, 2011 with interest accruing thereafter at the daily rate of $10.4552. In addition to the above, there is also due any late charges, advances, escrow collection fees, attorney fees, fees or costs associated with this foreclosure.

The balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $30,334.74, excluding interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder or in this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

Today is Tuesday, July 12, the 193rd day of 2011. There are 172 days left in the year.
Today's Highlight:
On July 12, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed a bill passed by Congress authorizing the Medal of Honor.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1543, England's King Henry VIII married his sixth and last wife, Catherine Parr.
In 1690, forces led by William of Orange defeated the army of James II at the Battle of the Boyne in Ireland.
In 1812, United States forces led by Gen. William Hull entered Canada during the War of 1812 against Britain. (However, Hull retreated shortly thereafter to Detroit.)
In 1909, the House of Representatives joined the Senate in passing the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, allowing for a federal income tax, and submitted it to the states. (It was declared ratified in Feb. 1913.)
In 1948, the Democratic national convention, which nominated President Harry S. Truman for a second term of office, opened in Philadelphia.
In 1960, the Etch A Sketch Magic Screen drawing toy, invented by French electrician Andre Cassagnes, was first produced by the Ohio Art Co.
In 1977, President Jimmy Carter defended Supreme Court limits on government payments for poor women's abortions, saying, "There are many things in life that are not fair."
In 1984, Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale announced he'd chosen U.S. Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro of New York to be his running-mate; Ferraro was the first woman to run for vice president on a major-party ticket.
In 1988, Democratic presidential candidate Michael S. Dukakis tapped Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas as his running-mate.

In 1991, a Japanese professor (Hitoshi Igarashi) who had translated Salman Rushdie's "The Satanic Verses" was found stabbed to death, nine days after the novel's Italian translator was attacked in Milan.
Ten years ago: Abner Louima, the Haitian immigrant tortured in a New York City police station, agreed to an $8.7 million settlement with the city and its police union.
Five years ago: Hezbollah guerrillas kidnapped two Israeli soldiers and killed eight others in a cross-border raid. (The bodies of the kidnapped soldiers, Ehud Goldwasser and Eldad Regev, were returned to Israel in 2008 in exchange for five Lebanese militants.)
One year ago: Roman Polanski was declared a free man, no longer confined to house arrest in his Alpine villa, after Swiss authorities rejected a U.S. request for the Oscar-winning director's extradition because of a 32-year-old sex conviction. NBA commissioner David Stern fined Cleveland owner Dan Gilbert $100,000 for releasing a sharp-tongued statement shortly after LeBron James announced he was leaving the Cavaliers for Miami.

FOUND:

A male shepherd mix puppy was found in Buhl 7-7-11. He is black and brown and probably about four-months-old.

AVAILABLE FOR ADOPTION:

Our shelter is really full right now. We need to get some of these dogs to their forever homes. If you have been thinking about adopting one, please don't wait!

Jackie is a beautiful female schnauzer. She is a light silver color and is very sweet. Jackie is good with other dogs and kids.

Punkin is a terrier mix. She is blonde with wired hair and is a young adult. Punkin is housebroken and is very sweet.

Missy-mae is a beagle/basset hound mix. She is a young adult, probably about 2 or 3-years-old. Missy is tri-colored and very affectionate.

Romeo is a cute pug mix. He is mostly black with a little white. He came into the shelter with his friend Juliet and does well with the other dogs and kids.

Juliet is a Pug mix. She is black with a little white. She is about four-months-old, and is very sweet. She will make a great family companion.

Cookie is a darling poodle. She is black and white and is very affectionate. She is house broken and good with kids. Come see her today. She won't last long.

We have Eight beautiful Shepherd mix puppies. They are about 6-weeks-old and come in different colors and genders. Come take a look!

Casey is an adorable little labrador puppy. He is black with a little white. He is very young probably only about 12 weeks old. He is very sweet and loves to play.

Shasta is a beautiful Shepherd mix. She is beautiful with a brown brindle coat. Shasta is about 8-months-old and very sweet. Come meet her today!

Tyrone is an adult labrador mix. He is black with a little bit of white. Tyrone is a big guy with huge paws and head. He is so sweet and friendly and likes other dogs.

Babe is a sweet Pitbull female. She is tan and white and is very affectionate. She is a little small for a pit bull weighing about 30 lbs. Babe is about two or three-years-old and will be a wonderful pet.

Milo is a darling labrador puppy. He is about 4-months-old and is black with a little white patch on his chest. He is very sweet and will be a nice family pet. Come meet him today!

Macy is a darling St Bernard mix pup. She is probably about 7-months-old and is black and white. She is very affectionate and does well with other dogs. Come meet her today.

Hooch is a handsome St Bernard mix pup. He came into the shelter with his sister Macey. He is tan and white and is very sweet. He does well with other doggies.

The adoption fee is $75 and includes spaying/neutering and the first set of vaccinations.

DEAR ABBY: During this economic recession, may I offer a reminder to your readers who may have their homes on the market and available for showing? Someone entered my home during an open house and rummaged through my drawers. The thief made off with my cherished sapphire engagement ring, an emerald band and several other sentimental pieces.

I'm ashamed for having underestimated people's dishonesty. I never assumed anyone would coldheartedly dig through my clothes and belongings to find hidden valuables — especially with a Realtor onsite. I'm an emotional wreck over the loss of these precious sentimental keepsakes that I will never see again.

Please remind your readers whose homes are on the market to be smart and remove all valuables from the site before showings.

— DISILLUSIONED IN SAN MARCOS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: I'm sorry you had to learn this lesson the hard way. It's unfortunate, but there are individuals who use open houses to case homes and loot items from trusting homeowners. That's why it's important to not only remove personal financial information, jewelry and other items of value to a secure location where they can't be pilfered, but also any prescription medications from bathrooms before a showing. Any stranger entering the house should sign a registration sheet and show identification before being shown around, and even then no one should be out of the real estate agent's line of sight at any time.

If your property has a "For Sale" sign in front and someone comes to the door, that person should be instructed to phone your agent for an appointment. And by the way, for their own safety, many agents now have a second person on hand so they're not alone in a house with strangers.

DEAR ABBY: My grandson, "Tom," who is in his mid-20s, has become caught up in a "love affair" with an unknown person on the Internet. He never dated during his teens, although his mother told me he once developed a crush on a girl who broke his heart when she rebuffed him.

Now Tom tells me he has found his "true love" online. He says she has told him she's unhappy in her marriage and would divorce her husband if she could afford to do so. I asked him how he could know it was really a woman and not some guy playing a joke on him. He answered, "Grandma, no one could say the things she says to me if she didn't really feel them in her heart."

How can I convince him that this may be nothing more than a cruel scam?

— WORRIED GRANDMA IN ILLINOIS

DEAR WORRIED: Your grandson appears to be naive, inexperienced, and unaware of how many people don't tell the whole truth about themselves online. Warn him that if "she" asks him for money to pay for her divorce that it could indeed be a scam. Remind him that even if it's not one, she is cheating on her husband by carrying on an emotional affair with him. And he shouldn't jump in with his whole heart until he knows with whom he's having the pleasure. But you can't safeguard him from being hurt regardless of how much you might wish to do so.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*“Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them,
all day long.”*

— Charles Kingsley

ridge has an internal logic that not everyone embraces and that is not purely a matter of intelligence. After a while, either you get it or you don't. In today's deal, West was one of those players who got it.

West's second double was for takeout, showing extras — usually at least a king more than an opening bid. East properly responded in his four-card major at the two-level rather than in his five-card minor at the three-level. West is supposed to have spades when he makes a takeout double of hearts.

Against three hearts, West started smartly with three rounds of diamonds, East ruffing. East exited with the club jack, which went to declarer's ace. Now comes the crux of the deal: West knows that South is about to draw trump and discard a club on the diamond 10. West also knows that South has the spade ace from the bidding. If East had four spades to the ace along with five clubs, he would have bid two spades over two hearts. So what does it all mean?

It means that if West plays a low club under the ace, declarer will draw trump, discard a club from dummy on the diamond 10, and exit with a club, which West must win. Now West has to lead away from the spade king. Result: misery! However, if West has unblocked his club king under the ace, he can allow East to win the club exit and return a spade. Result: happiness!

IF JULY 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Get vacation hours under your belt in the next few weeks and tie up all your loose ends. During August, you might deceive yourself into thinking that you have everything under control or could be distract-ed by a fledgling romance or dangling financial carrot. You may be called upon to handle more than your fair share of responsibilities in September and October, and your lack of attention in August could leave you with all the blame when things go wrong. Wait until December to make major purchases or decision when the stars are better aligned for your success.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine
Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business and pleasure don't mix. Follow the rules and maintain a professional manner at the work place. Socializing and goofing off when there is work to be done will not earn you any favors.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stay the course. Distractions and boredom may divert your attention from today's appointed task. Remain focused on your responsibilities and you can treat yourself to a little fun after the work whistle blows.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A rose by any other name would smell as sweet. However, a rosy exterior may blind you to the under-lying weeds. Be careful in decision-making and be sure to follow your head and not your heart.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A bargain has no value if it is something that you don't actually need. Offers that seem too good to pass up usually aren't, so wait. You can get the most out of your money by leaving it right where it is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): "No" is not a dirty word. It's fine to lend a few dollars to someone in need, but there's a fine line between generos-ity and being seen as a soft touch. Don't let someone take advantage of your good nature.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What goes up must come down. Your good mood may be tested by some minor disputes. You've been riding pretty high lately and it's only natural that you will hit a temporary bad patch eventually.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't make a deal with the devil. You may find yourself at a disadvantage in negotia-tions. An agreement may resolve a dispute but cost you an unfair premium. Stick to your guns; let the other side blink first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The best things in life are free. However, finding these things may cost quite a bit. Keep an eye on finances, as the bills for an activity you enjoy may be adding up to more than you bargained for.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Know the differ-ence between what you want and what you need. Prioritize your spending so that essential items are cov-ered. You may have to do without some of the little luxuries you enjoy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't fret over spilled milk. An error is an error and once done cannot be undone. This is not the end of the world. Use the experience gained from your mistake to ensure it doesn't happen again.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't press your luck. You may have had success in getting favors from a friend in the past. However, know that there is a point at which certain favors go beyond the boundaries of good taste.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep things nice and crystal clear. Don't let com-munications slide into a gray area; be honest and forth-right and illustrate matters as either black or white. Take a spiritual, rather than material approach.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

THE WORLD

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two-year-old Aden Salaad looks up at his mother, unseen, as she bathes him in a tub at a Doctors Without Borders hospital, where he is being treated for malnutrition, Monday in Dagahaley Camp, outside Dadaab, Kenya.

SOME CHILDREN DIE ON WAY TO REFUGEE CAMP

After years without rain, tens of thousands of Somalis are making the perilous journey over parched earth to refugee camps in equally dry Kenya and Ethiopia.

By MALKHADIR M. MUHUMED
The Associated Press

DADAAB, Kenya • Faduma Sakow Abdullahi and her five children tried to escape starvation in Somalia by journeying to a Kenyan refugee camp. Only one day before they reached their destination, her 4-year-old daughter and 5-year-old son died of exhaustion and hunger. At first the 29-year-old widow thought the two were merely sleeping when they wouldn't get up after a brief rest. She had to leave their bodies under a tree, unburied, so she could push on with her baby, 2-year-old and 3-year-old. She saw more than 20 other children dead or unconscious abandoned on the roadside. Eventually a passing car rescued the rest of her family from what could have been death. "I never thought I would live to see this horror," she said, tears rolling down her cheeks as she described the 37-day trek to Dadaab, the world's largest refugee camp. Tens of thousands of Somalis have watched their land dry up after years without rain. Then the livestock died. Finally all the food ran out. Now they are making the perilous journey over parched earth to refugee camps in Kenya and Ethiopia, regions that also have been hit hard by drought. The U.N. expects at least 10 million people will need food aid, and a U.S. aid official said Monday he believes the situation in Ethiopia is even worse than the government acknowledges. The Ethiopian government announced Monday that 4.5 million people need food aid there, 40 percent more than last year. Jason Frasier, mission director of USAID in Ethiopia, the U.S. government aid arm, suggested that Ethiopia might even be undercounting those who need help. Aid agencies are appealing

"I must say that I visited many refugee camps in the world. I have never seen people coming in such a desperate situation."

Antonio Guterres, the head of U.N.'s refugee agency.

for more than $100 million in emergency funding while warning of dire consequences if help does not arrive. Dadaab was originally built for 90,000 people; more than 382,000 are now here. People die here every day, though no one can provide a reliable estimate of the drought deaths. "I must say that I visited many refugee camps in the world. I have never seen people coming in such a desperate situation," the head of U.N.'s refugee agency, Antonio Guterres, said Sunday while visiting the new arrivals area. Most of those coming to Dadaab are former subsistence farmers whose lands were rendered idle and animals decimated after successive seasons of no rain hit their already war-ravaged country. Hundreds of mothers and children with dust-caked faces gather at 6 a.m. every day at registration centers in Dadaab's three sprawling camps.

Abdullahi, whose two children did not survive the journey, said her family's problems took a turn for the worse after her husband died in May. Still, with 20 cows and a small parcel of land, her family had enough to live on. But when the rains failed, the cows died and the supply of maize was depleted. "We started to dig up roots of trees to survive," Abdullahi said, while her 3-year-old daughter who survived the arduous journey played near her. Abdullahi lost her 4-year-old and 5-year-old, but in many cases parents are dying first. Andrew Wander, a spokesman for Save the Children, said his agency provides care to more than 300 unaccompanied children who were found on roadsides after their parents died or abandoned them. "More children have died of malnutrition in the first four months of this year than in the whole of last year," he said.

Economic Boom in Brazil on Ice Over Debt

SAO PAULO (AP) • Silas Xavier pulls credit card bills from a pocket on the door of the taxi he drives, more from the glove box and still more from a pouch behind his seat, waving them as his voice rises in frustration and desperation. Like many of the 40 million Brazilians who have joined the middle class since 2003, he got a taste for American-style consumption and dived headlong into the enticing world of easy credit, once available only to the wealthy. He defaulted three times in four years. Now he's in over his head again, struggling to provide for his wife and 4-year-old daughter. Xavier is one more debtor adding to fears that the economic boom in Brazil may be partly built on a bubble in personal credit, even with interest rates on credit cards often topping 200 percent. Economists worry that if it pops, it could severely damage an economy that has come through the global downturn better than almost every other nation.

Egyptian protesters shout anti-military-rule slogans as they march at Tahrir Square in Cairo, Egypt, Monday. Hundreds of Egyptians have set up protest camps in city squares across the country, vowing they would not leave until Egypt's temporary military rulers purge the remnants of Hosni Mubarak's deposed regime.

Egypt's Latest Crisis Puts Pressure on Leadership

CAIRO (AP) • The head of Egypt's security forces has defied orders by the prime minister to fire police officers accused of killing protesters during the nation's popular uprising, in a dispute illustrating the strains of a government facing escalating public pressure to bring former regime figures to justice. Egyptians have again taken to the streets, furious over the failure to cleanse the tainted police and over a leadership they complain is botching an already chaotic transition to democracy. Protesters have camped out in main squares in Cairo, Suez and other cities since Friday, demanding the resignation of the interior minister who heads the police, the purging of former regime loyalists from the civil service and greater action to tackle economic woes. The issue of justice for protesters slain during the 18-day uprising that led to Hosni Mubarak's Feb. 11 ouster is the most explosive amid rising frustration with the handling of the political transition by the military generals who now lead the country. Prime Minister Essam Sharaf, who heads a caretaker civilian government, has found himself caught in the middle. Over the weekend, seeking to calm street demonstrations, he called for Interior Minister Mansour el-Issawi to fire 400 police officers accused of killing protesters. Nearly 900 people were killed during the uprising.

Defense Chief Quits After Blast in Cyprus

MARI, Cyprus (AP) • Dozens of containers of gunpowder seized years ago from an Iranian cargo ship exploded on Cyprus' main naval base Monday in a massive blast that killed 12 people, wounded 62 and wrecked a major power station, causing extensive blackouts. The head of the island nation's navy, Commodore Andreas Ioannides, was killed and its defense minister and military chief resigned. Ioannides' son claimed top officials had repeatedly ignored his father's warnings that the gunpowder was stored unsafely. Defense ministry officials would not comment on the allegation. A Cypriot official said right after the blast that a brush fire had ignited more than 90 containers confiscated in 2009 from a ship heading from Iran to Syria. The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, later said that the fire may have started inside one of the containers. The gunpowder was seized after the United Nations said the Cypriot-flagged M/V Monchegorsk was breaching a ban on Iranian arms exports.

Chavez Calls Fight Against Cancer 'My Longest Walk'

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) • Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez turned to philosophy and Twitter to describe his efforts to beat cancer on Monday, summoning the words of German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche. "I find myself before my highest mountain and my longest walk," Chavez said in a message posted on his Twitter account. "That's how Zarathustra spoke!" That quoted a passage from Nietzsche's treatise "Thus Spoke Zarathustra: A Book for All and None." Nietzsche's book focuses on a prophet who reflects on his life as he descends from a mountain retreat and returns to mix with mankind. Chavez occasionally quotes the German philosopher in his speeches. During a visit to Venezuela's largest military fort later Monday, Chavez borrowed a folkloric expression from "Los Llanos," the vast central plains region where he was born, to note that he's prepared to confront the difficulties that could lay ahead.

Transitions can make or break a triathlon

Growing up, my family celebrated the Fourth of July by attending a parade, followed by a barbecue and fireworks.

For the Coats family of Rupert, their idea of Independence Day fun includes holding their own mini-triathlon. Because nothing says God Bless America like an early morning swim, bike and run.

I know. I thought it was weird, too. But the family invited me this year to the Coatsman 3 Triathlon — and it's actually pretty cool.

"It will be fun," Scott Coats assured me. "We're not real serious."

Going in, I expected a friendly, laid-back event. But when they started handing out bib numbers and exclusive race T-shirts, I realized I was in for something more intense.

I knew I was in trouble 10 seconds into the race when everyone took off in the Snake River like barracudas, leaving me 30 yards behind from the get-go. I swam as hard as I could to stay ahead of 13-year-old Jennifer Coats.

"Good," I said to myself. "At least I'm not last."

However, I spoke too soon. At the end of the swim Jennifer took a better angle toward the exit point and cut ahead of me and I was last out of the water.

I pulled off the wetsuit and jumped on the bike. The only Coats I was able to catch up with was Shelley. No offense to Mrs. Coats, but I hardly felt impressed with myself for passing a middle-aged mother of six.

Two of the Coats boys were in the Air Force Academy, so I didn't mind losing to them. Actually, it felt somewhat patriotic getting my butt kicked by a couple cadets — it being the Fourth of July and all.

The best part of Coatsman was it showed me what I need to work on before Spudman in two weeks. Namely, transitions.

Often considered the fourth event of triathlon, transitions can make or break a race — at least for top competitors vying for a podium spot.

"Every second counts," said my coach, Alice Schenk. "One year I missed a trophy by seconds."

Coach Alice says her transitions used to take so long, "I could have eaten a turkey sandwich." But with practice and learning a few tricks, she is now one of the quickest transitioners in Magic Valley.

For serious triathletes, the race begins the night before when staking out prime real estate in the transition areas.

After that, many little things make the difference in transition efficiency, such as spraying Pam on wrists and ankles for easy wetsuit removal, attaching shoes to the bike pedals and slipping them on while riding, and using lock laces to save time tying running shoes.

The winner of the past two Spudmans, B.J. Christenson, is a transition expert.

Originally from Heyburn and now of North Salt Lake, Utah, Christenson won the Rocky Mountain Regional Championship last weekend.

"One thing is experience. I've done enough triathlons that it's become second nature to transition," Christenson said. "Anything that can be done while moving, you should do it while you're moving."

Christenson's Transition 1 time at last year's Spudman: 1 minute, six seconds.

My Transition 1 time at Coatsman: 4:01.

Christenson in Transition 2: 0:40. Me: 2:18.

Obviously, I should have eaten my turkey sandwich while moving.

So Yeon Ryu Wins U.S. Women's Open in Playoff

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. • As she stood on the 18th green drenched in champagne, holding a trophy and wearing a mile-wide smile, there was no doubt about it: So Yeon Ryu is the brightest star on a South Korean golf roster that has more than its share of them.

The 21-year-old won the U.S. Women's Open on Monday, first with a birdie on No. 18 that tied her Korean rival, Hee Kyung Seo, then with a shotmaking clinic over a three-hole playoff to beat Seo by three shots.

Certainly nobody can ever say Ryu backed into this title, won on a 7,000-yard Broadmoor course that got hit by storms every day, turning it into a test of endurance and patience for some players and a sporadic series of starts and stops for others.

20 Area High Schools Named in Title IX Complaint

The Seattle office of the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights received complaints involving 78 of Idaho's 115 school districts. The office was requested to investigate 100 different schools in Idaho.

BY DAVID BASHORE

Times-News writer

Dozens of Idaho high schools have been accused of violating federal legislation geared toward creating equal athletic opportunities for females in schools that receive public funds.

According to a 600-page complaint dated June 23 and obtained Monday by the Times-News, 78 of Idaho's 115 school districts are alleged to be in violation of Title IX. The complaint totals 100 high schools, 20 of them in District IV.

Twin Falls, Canyon Ridge, Burley, Minico, Jerome, Wood River, Filer, Kimberly, Buhl, Declo, Valley, Gooding, Wendell, Glenns Ferry, Oakley, Hansen, Shoshone, Carey, Castleford and Murtaugh high schools are named in the complaint, which recommends that U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights in Seattle conduct further investigation into each individual accusation.

Multiple athletic directors reached Monday by the Times-News said they were unaware of the accusations, but each said that essentially anybody can make an accusation and start an investigation.

Burley base runner Jake Mills slides safely into second base ahead of the throw to Minico second baseman Nick Redder on Monday at Burley High School.

Burley Cruises Past Rival Minico, 9-1

The Green Sox continued their solid season by soundly beating their Mini-Cassia rival on Monday. Now their attention turns to a doubleheader at Class A Area C West Division rival Kimberly on Wednesday, where Burley needs a split to clinch the West Division title and one of the top two seeds to next weekend's Area C Tournament in Twin Falls.

BURLEY — Rebollozo. Timmons. Wrigley. Winnill.

Mini-Cassia baseball fans will be hearing those names a lot in the coming years.

The stars of tomorrow battled it out on the mound in Monday's Burley-Minico American Legion nine-inning game. Burley pitchers Jason Rebollozo and J.J. Timmons held Minico to one run on five hits in the 9-1 Green Sox victory.

"I'm proud of our young guys for fighting like that," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "Our two young kids threw great."

Rebollozo took his start into the fourth, giving up three hits, including an RBI single to Jeremiah Cofer that gave Minico a 1-0 lead.

Timmons earned the win in relief, pitching 5 1-3 scoreless innings with just two hits. Jesse Bywater closed out the final two batters in the ninth.

"Just throw strikes, let my defense do what they do, let them make the plays," said Timmons.

Minico put the bat on the ball, only striking out twice.

"I saw a ton of positives. Offensively, we hit the ball better than just one run. We hit about seven balls hard right at people," said Minico coach Ben Frank.

Minico starting pitcher Stetzen Wrigley had six strikeouts and pitched well until he started fading in the sixth.

Base hits by Jackson Kunz and Jason Boehmer, followed by a walk to Taylor Carson loaded the bases for Burley.

Jake Mills then delivered the knockout punch, roping a two-run single that gave the Green Sox a 3-1 lead.

"(Wrigley) was struggling throwing strikes earlier," said Mills. "I was 2-0 and the third baseman was playing back and I was thinking about dragging, and then he just left a fastball. It was a good pitch, I just got a good swing on it."

Brayden Winnill relieved Wrigley, but it was too late. Mills' hit sparked a five-run sixth inning, and the Green Sox never looked back.

"I thought both our guys on the mound threw pretty well, with the exception of the walks. Both of them got in trouble when they walked guys," Frank said.

"When (Burley) got guys on base, the game sped up for (our pitchers). They got a little rattled and they couldn't slow the game down, get composed and throw their pitches."

"That just comes with experience."

Joe Ferrin and Jack Darrington each had an RBI for Burley. The Green Sox also scored runs on three errors and two wild pitches.

Burley (22-12) travels to Kimberly on Wednesday, needing one win to clinch Area C's West Division.

"We're doing pretty good right now," Timmons said. "If we can get a couple wins next week we'll be in the driver's seat and ready for districts."

Minico hosts Jerome today.

Ben Curtis Returns to Scene of 2003 British Open Stunner

SANDWICH, England (AP) • Ben Curtis never gets too worked up about anything.

Back in 2003, when he pulled off one of the most stunning wins in golf history, Curtis didn't comprehend the significance until he returned to the U.S.

"We came down the escalator in baggage claim and there were thousands of people down there," Curtis recalled Monday. "That's when it really hit that this was a lot bigger deal than I thought it was."

And now that he's back at the scene of his improbable British Open triumph, how's he feeling?

Same as always.

"I just got here and got acclimated a little bit with the course and the grounds again," Curtis said, looking and sounding as if he might doze off any second. "I'm sure on Thursday I'll be a bit more excited and a bit more fired up and ready to go."

Lately, Curtis hasn't had much reason to get excited about his game.

He's missed more cuts than he's made this season, so naturally he hopes that being back at Royal St. George's will give him a bit of a spark.

"It definitely gives you a little bit of confidence because you know you've done it before, and there's no reason why you can't do it again," Curtis said. "I just hope this is my week. But I'm not going to think about holding that trophy yet. Hopefully when the last putt is holed on Sunday, it will be coming my way."

Then again, the 34-year-old has never put much stock in karma. He certainly doesn't think he's got some sort of special edge just because he claimed the claret jug eight years ago at this course on the English coast.

Curtis didn't even bother trying to follow the identical routine that worked so well in '03. Back then, he stayed at a place that wasn't much bigger than the podium he was sitting on for his interview in the media center. This time, he bashfully admitted to doling out more than $10,000 for a home that could accommodate all his family and friends for the week.

"I'm not a big believer that you have to do the same thing every time you come back," Curtis said. "I'm just trying to keep it relaxed and enjoyable for everybody so when I get back to the house, it's not about the golf. It's just about being together."

While Curtis has put together a solid career — he's won two more times on the PGA Tour and played on the American team that won the 2008 Ryder Cup — but he's still known mainly as the guy who won a major championship on his very first try.

That week, he arrived at Royal St. George's ranked No. 396 in the world, barely known in golf. But something clicked over those four days, giving hope to everyone who supposedly doesn't have a chance.

Kyle Stanley was the last guy to qualify for this British Open, earning his spot with a runner-up finish Sunday at the John Deere Classic. This will be his first major championship as a professional, and he doesn't have much experience at links golf.

There's no reason for him to feel he can actually win.

Then he thinks of what Curtis did.

"This game is a lot of instinct, a lot of feel," Stanley said, looking a bit bleary-eyed after an overnight flight from the States. "You never know when it's going to be your week."

Martinez Tears ACL, Could Miss Girls Hoops

Times-News

Wood River standout Kaitana Martinez tore her ACL and will miss much of the coming athletic year, she told the Times-News Monday afternoon.

Martinez, the 2010-11 Times-News girls basketball player of the year and also a key figure on the Wolverines' girls soccer team, suffered the injury during summer basketball. She said she'll miss all of the girls soccer season but hopes to return in time to help Wood River's girls basketball team back to the state tournament.

Last season Martinez led the Wolverine basketball team to the best record in program history, its first Great Basin Conference championship, second state tournament and first state trophy.

Wood River lost to Middleton in the Class 4A championship game and has many of its key players returning.

Kentucky Speedway Apologizes, Offers Ticket Exchange to Fans

NASCAR fans wanting to see the inaugural Sprint Cup race at Kentucky Speedway last weekend were tied up in traffic for hours trying to enter the grounds, with many being turned away because there was no place for them to park when they finally got there.

BY JENNA FRYER

Associated Press

Kentucky Speedway on Monday offered a ticket exchange to fans who were stuck in traffic and missed the inaugural Sprint Cup Series race.

Speedway Motorsports Inc. president Marcus Smith said fans can swap their unused Kentucky tickets for entry into events at any 2011 race at an SMI track. The tickets can also be swapped for entry into the 2012 race at Kentucky.

"We felt like this was a situation we wanted to roll out all the stops, and go above and beyond," Smith told The Associated Press. "All the plans we made and all the effort we put forth didn't produce the results we wanted, and we want to try our best to make it right with fans who are understandably frustrated."

Fans were stuck in traffic for hours as they tried to get into Saturday night's race at the track in Sparta, Ky. Many fans said once they did get to the gate, they were turned away by police because the track had no more parking spaces. The track announced a week before the race that it had sold out all of its 107,000 seats for a Cup race the region had been hoping to host for more at least a decade.

SMI spent millions on capital improvement and updating the infrastructure to the speedway, which was acquired in 2008. Smith said speedway officials in hindsight needed far more shuttles running from remote lots, malls and hotels to reduce the number of cars heading into the speedway.

"The traffic was anticipated. We knew it was going to be bad. We have been saying for a couple of years we need more roads," he said. "We did make plans, the plans clearly didn't work. We don't want to point fingers and make excuses, but in hindsight, there are a lot of things we have to do differently."

"There were tens of millions of dollars spent on parking lots and trying to make it better for the fans, and it's really frustrating that it wasn't enough."

The SMI ticket exchange offer also came with a firm apology from both Smith and general manager Mark Simendinger. It was the first apology offered in three statements from the speedway.

Complaint

expressed confidence that his school would be found compliant.

"We're compliant in the areas mentioned. If we need to we'll open our books and show them how much we're spending on girls sports and boys sports (as well)," he said.

The government has not revealed the complainants.

The complaint accuses the schools of inflating female athlete numbers by counting cheer and dance participants as athletes, in addition to further misrepresentation of athlete numbers and a failure to adequately inform female students about other athletic activities, both sanctioned and unsanctioned by the Idaho High School Activities Association.

A July 2010 federal court ruling stated that cheer and dance cannot be used to satisfy Title IX.

Another point of accusation is the disparity in female athletes to the total athlete pool, as it relates to female students to the student body as a whole. As an example, Burley's student body for 2010 was 49.1 percent female, but girls only comprised 35.6 percent of all athletes at the school.

Schools that receive federal funding can satisfy Title IX requirements by meeting one of three criteria:

- Provide athletic participation opportunities that are substantially proportionate to the student enrollment.

- Demonstrate a continual expansion of athletic opportunities for the under-represented sex.

- Full and effective accommodation of the interest and ability of underrepresented sex.

A similar slew of accusations hit the Oregon school system recently.

According to a June 27 report on oregonlive.com, the online arm of The Oregonian, nearly 100 schools were accused of violating Title IX.

The Idaho State Department of Education told KBOI-TV that it was still reviewing the document and had no comment.

Yao Retirement Risks NBA's Profile in China

The popular Chinese center is expected to retire after a nine-year NBA career spent entirely with the Houston Rockets. But Yao's missed 250 regular-season games over the past six seasons with leg and foot injuries.

BEIJING (AP) • Yao Ming's expected retirement could diminish the NBA's once-burgeoning popularity in China, with many fans saying they would no longer watch games.

"What's the point of watching NBA now?" asked an online user called Lubingxia on Sina Weibo, a Chinese Twitter-like site.

An online poll on Weibo by Monday lunchtime showed that 57 percent of respondents would stop watching the NBA after Yao's retirement.

The 7-foot-6 center is expected to announce July 20 at a news conference that he's retiring from the NBA after nine seasons because of leg and foot injuries.

He boosted the popularity of the basketball league in China and throughout Asia, spiking merchandise sales and TV ratings for games after the Houston Rockets made him the top overall pick in the 2002 draft.

The 30-year-old Yao has missed 250 regular-season games over the past six seasons.

"He is one of the most influential people in today's society — especially to those born in the '80s," said Ren Bo, a 25-year-old sports trainer.

"It's probably going to be a while until we see another Yao Ming."

Yahoo! Sports first reported that Yao is retiring. A person with direct knowledge of his decision confirmed to The Associated Press that Yao decided the risk of another injury and subsequent rehabilitation was too great.

The news upset fans in China, where he has been praised as a role model for the past decade, and strengthened that image by carrying his country's flag during the opening ceremony of the 2008 Beijing Olympics.

"It is Yao Ming who makes the kids in China like basketball and it's also Yao Ming who makes the kids know how a real professional basketball player should be," said Xu Jicheng, a longtime basketball commentator.

"I'm not thrilled about his retirement, but I will still support him. Millions of Chinese still idolize him," said 24-year-old Guo Ju Fei, a small business owner.

Some online comments conveyed sadness that his retirement would mean the end of a great era and that they would not get to see him at the 2012 London Olympics.

There also was some anger that his injuries kept him from reaching his peak.

"I still haven't recovered from the fact that Yao is retiring. The feeling is worse than being dumped," wrote one online user going by the name of Xie Chen.

Others hoped a "miracle" would occur and that Yao would change his mind.

Many comments expressed gratitude to the player for being a Chinese icon and an athlete they could be proud of.

Online comments and newspapers also singled out his wit, humor and humility.

"Yao Ming is like an ambassador. With a basketball player's height, a comedian's humor, post-80s generation's freshness ... one does not know how many foreigners' impressions of the Chinese he has changed," wrote the Chinese Business Morning View, based in Shenyang city in northeastern Liaoning province.

U.S. Women All the Rage After Epic Win Over Brazil

A day after the United States came within seconds of elimination before rallying to stun Brazil, the team shifts from celebration mode to turning their attention to Wednesday's Women's World Cup semifinal against France.

DUSSELDORF, Germany (AP) • The U.S. women's soccer team shared the Yankee Stadium scoreboard with Derek Jeter, made an appearance on "Good Morning America" and can now count Tom Hanks, Lil Wayne and Super Bowl MVP Aaron Rodgers among their list of star-studded admirers.

Like Mia, Brandi and Foudy more than a decade before them, Hope, Abby and the rest of the Americans have become quite the sensation thanks to their performance at the World Cup, a rare turn in the spotlight for U.S. soccer that could produce another watershed moment in the game.

Now the trick is to keep it going.

The Americans play France in the semifinals Wednesday. Win, and they'll face either Japan or Sweden in Sunday's final with a chance to become the first team to win three Women's World Cup titles.

"It's overwhelming. It's amazing," midfielder Carli Lloyd said Monday morning, still savoring the United States' epic victory over Brazil in a penalty shootout Sunday. "The support and buzz back home is really awesome, and I think it's helping women's soccer. This could be a huge turning point for the growth of soccer back home, and that's what we're trying to do and trying to accomplish.

"Hopefully, as an added bonus, we come back with the cup."

Unlike the American men, for whom making it out of the group stage at the World Cup is a strong showing, the U.S. women have been soccer's dominant team for about as long as anyone can remember. They've won three of the four Olympic gold medals to go with their two World Cup titles. The 1999 squad was such a crossover hit that fans were on a first-name basis with Mia Hamm and Brandi Chastain — or last-name basis in Julie Foudy and Kristine Lilly's case — and soccer moms and dads alike turned out in droves with their kids, packing stadiums from coast to coast for that year's World Cup.

But U.S. fans can be a fickle bunch. They've become so accustomed to the women's success they yawn at anything less than a World Cup title, and the Americans haven't won soccer's biggest prize since that '99 squad did it. Haven't produced a team that comes close to duplicating that group's rock star appeal, either.

The U.S. women's soccer team celebrates Sunday after beating Brazil on penalty kicks in their Women's World Cup quarterfinal match in Dresden, Germany.

Until, perhaps, now.

"We're participating in something that's huge," said Abby Wambach, whose magnificent, leaping header in the 122nd minute Sunday sparked one of the most riveting finishes ever in a World Cup game — men's or women's. "Very few times does the spotlight shine so bright on women's soccer, and we want to prove to everybody around the world that we have a product and that product is worth watching."

The only thing Americans love more than a winner is one with "U-S-A" emblazoned on its chest, and the fact the women are a gritty, spunky bunch only heightens their appeal.

Down a player for almost an hour, on the verge of their earliest World Cup exit ever, with Marta and the Brazilians pushing, shoving and whining for every call they could get, the U.S. responded with a can-do attitude that is uniquely — proudly — American.

After Wambach tied the game, Hope Solo denied the Brazilians in penalty kicks, her swat of Daiane's attempt so resounding it could be heard all the way back to the States.

With that, Americans from Hollywood to Hoboken, N.J., were hooked. FIFA said it was only the fourth time in World Cup history that a team came back to win after falling behind in extra time, and a first at the Women's World Cup.

"Go ahead, jump on the bandwagon and let's do this together," Solo said Monday on Twitter. "One Nation, One World, One Team."

ESPN's broadcast drew a 2.6 overnight rating, the best for a Women's World Cup game since 1999 and second only to that dramatic final at the Rose Bowl, when the Americans beat China on penalty kicks. The game was re-played on ESPN2 a few hours later, an honor reserved for "instant classics."

Hanks posted a picture of the team on Twitter, saying "I LOVE these women!" Ellen DeGeneres gushed, "The Women's World Cup game blew my mind today."

Rodgers tweeted his congratulations, adding, "Now let's get the cup ladies!!" Montages of Wambach's goal, and fans' reaction to it, popped up on YouTube.

The win was front-page news in USA Today, The Washington Post, The Miami Herald and The Wall Street Journal. "GMA" featured Wambach and Solo, and Ali Krieger, who buried the final penalty kick to seal the victory, chatted with MSNBC's "Morning Joe."

"It's just amazing that it's getting outside the soccer world," said Heather O'Reilly, who played 108 minutes three days after missing the final group game with a strained groin. "Soccer people have been following this World Cup and appreciate the game whether it's men's or women's."

"But now the general sports fan is really picking up on how special this team is and how special that win was. That's great."

Hundreds Gather for Funeral of Texas Fan Who Fell from Bleachers

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) • Hundreds of friends and family joined a funeral procession Monday for 39-year-old Shannon Stone, who was fatally injured trying to catch a souvenir baseball at a Texas Rangers game.

Stone's widow, Jenny, and their 6-year-old son, Cooper, walked hand-in-hand behind a fire truck carrying his casket on a scorching day in central Texas. The pallbearers included 10 fellow firefighters, men who knew Stone and some given their nicknames by the 18-year veteran of the Brownwood Fire Department.

More than 60 emergency vehicles were in the line of cars headed to a cemetery eight miles from the church. Trash collectors and farmers pulled over to join hundreds of people lining the streets, hands over their hearts, as the procession passed by.

Nearly 1,000 people crowded inside the church for a private memorial honoring Stone, with speakers fondly recalling his kindness, love of baseball and skill as both a firefighter and a loving father.

Fire department chaplain David Fair read notes from family members and friends. He kept the mood light, telling funny stories and offering a Top 10 list that actually had 11 items because, a relative joked, Stone wasn't the best at math. He said the couple had only one child because Stone loved Cooper so much he didn't know whether he had any more love to give.

Stone took young Cooper to a Rangers game in Arlington on Thursday night, interrupting the three-hour drive with a stop to buy the boy a new glove. They were sitting in left field behind Cooper's favorite player, Josh Hamilton.

Hamilton threw them a foul ball in the second inning, but the thrill quickly turned tragic. Stone fell headfirst about 20 feet onto concrete, with Cooper watching. Witnesses said Stone was conscious after landing and spoke about Cooper being left alone. Stone was pronounced dead within an hour; an autopsy ruled the cause as blunt force trauma from the fall.
