WAIT FOR JUSTICE

One year has passed since the life of Jill Gelever came to a violent end in a Twin Falls hotel.

The 24-year-old woman succumbed to a gunshot wound to the back of her head on July 15, 2010, at a Boise hospital — 10 days after she was allegedly shot by 30-year-old Thomas Trevino Jr., who has a previous felony conviction for aggravated assault with a gun.

Trevino Jr. Members of Trevino's family told the Times-News last year they believed the shooting was accidental. Gelever's mother, Carol Bloxham, demands justice for what she says is murder. Trevino's murder trial is scheduled to begin Oct. 4, when a jury will decide who and what to

The prosecution of suspected criminals takes time, especially when it comes to murder. It's not uncommon for a case to remain open for a year or more. And that doesn't count time for appeals: the Idaho Supreme Court overturned the initial conviction of Juan Carlos Fuentes Pina, who aided in the fatal 2005 shooting of Jesse Naranjo, nearly leading to a second jury trial this spring. In all, his case took nearly 2,000 days to wrap up — that's almost 5 1/2 years by the time he pleaded to a lesser charge.

Turn inside to follow what's happened with Gelever's pending murder case in the 12 months since her death. Also, read about other recent high-profile murder cases that went to trial and how much time elapsed between the commission of each crime and a disposition.

How Your Property Tax Rates Measure Up

By NICK COLTRAIN
Times-News writer

If the city of Twin Falls' early budget proposal holds true, then property tax rates will go up even though overall spending will go down.

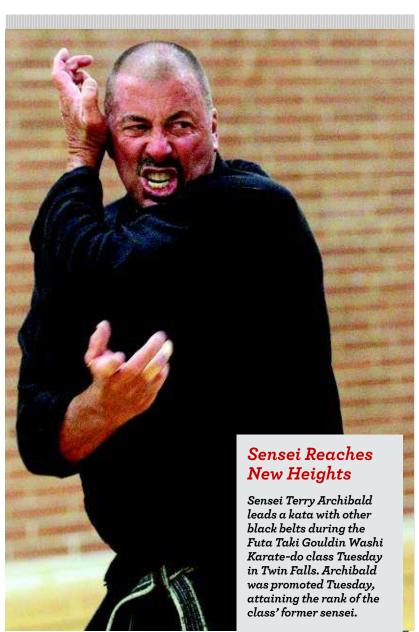

It seems contradictory, but it's all a part of the machinations of property taxes — a process that could leave a homeowner paying more per $1,000 of a home's value but less overall if that value plummets. And, this early in the process, Twin Falls City Manager Travis Rothweiler said he needed to play an especially negative Nostradamus, predicting a substantial decline in the total property value of the city, to reach the 4 percent hike to property tax rates that's in his early city budget.

While the process is still early and everything about the Twin Falls city budget could still change, here's some basic facts about the city property tax rate:

How are city property tax rates set?

A city doesn't control its property tax rate outright — it only controls its spending. The tax rate is reached by taking a city's spending and dividing it by the total assessed value of the area. The result is the property tax rate.

Because of the way this formula is set up, if a city wants to spend the Please see TAXES, M2

Surplus Goes to Schools

Idaho's

Gov. 'Butch' Otter says the region's public schools will receive an extra $12.6 million for next school year.

By AMY HUDDLESTON

Times-News

South-central Idaho's public schools will receive $12.6 million more than expected this year to line the continuously dwindling pocketbooks of district budgets.

On Tuesday, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter announced that $60 million will go toward the Gem State's public schools for the next school year, thanks to state revenues that have outperformed expectations.

The additional discretionary funding can be put where individual school districts need it most, whether that's for operations, teacher salaries or other expenses.

Jerome School District received more than $700,000. Superintendent Dale Layne said he was told by legislators to be very cautious with the money.

"We won't go out and spend it this year," he said.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs is also going to save the money for the next fiscal year, which starts July 1, 2012.

In his district's collective bargaining agreement with teachers, officials agreed to use additional revenue to restore the budget.

Dobbs said his schools have dipped into their carryover funds by around $1 million, and the new $1.5 million from the state will restore the slashed reserves.

Idaho Builds Its Own Health Exchange

In an effort to retain state control, Idaho is preparing to create an insurance marketplace system within two years.

By KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkrusei@magicvalley.com

Idaho lawmakers are continuing to fight for complete control of health insurance markets.

The Obama administration released proposed rules for insurance exchanges this week. The new rules will regulate the development of these virtual marketplaces.

The exchanges were a key feature in the health care reform law the president signed last year.

If a state chooses not to operate an exchange, then the federal government will step in and implement its own. However, state legislators seem determined not to let this happen.

The Department of Insurance and Health and Welfare created the Health Insurance Exchange Governance Workgroup to create a state-based exchange by 2013.

The group's description mandates that they will not mention the new health care reform law in their exchange-enabling legislation.

"We want an exchange that's good for Idaho and Idaho built, rather than the federal government imposing one on us," said workgroup member and state Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley. "We're going to build an exchange that the state of Idaho can regulate but is also federally qualified."

Feng Shui and the Art of Feedlot Design e're in a bit of a funk out here in Rockchuck Acres. And it seems to me that the root cause of depressed housing prices, smelly CAFOs and the annual heartbreak of runaway zucchinis is just this: Southern Idahoans haven't embraced the ancient Chinese art of feng

Feng shui (pronounced "fung SWAY") is just the thing right now. It's a theory that suggests how well you live depends on where you put the couch.

Well, that's a bit of an oversimplification. Practitioners of feng shuibelieve that where you choose to place the objects in your life has a lot to do with how happy you are - and how much money you make.

Which explains why you have that couch, I guess. Anyway, all things - animate and inanimate partake of universal lifeforce energies, the ancient Chinese believed. Feng shui dictates that you examine energy patterns to determine whether homes, offices and the objects they house enhance vibrant, thriving energy patterns, or fail to do so because they've been placed inharmoniously.

You know, like the Velvet Elvis hanging in the bathroom.

Feng shui masters cultivate natural vital energies of the Earth, called the chi. This stuff must flow to any object, be it a house, a refrigerator or your brotherin-law who lives in your basement, to make it work $properly-or\,the\,case\,of$ your brother-in-law, at all.

Fascinating, no? And if you hired Courtney Cachet right now, she'd rearrange your life - and your pocketbook - accordingly.

Can't afford that? I've prepared a few notes on how to feng shui your own trailer - sorry, I meant to say "manufactured home."

1. Plant a sapling in the yard on the spot that would have represented your manufactured home's "wealth corner," if you had one. Trees promote positive chi and grow real good over the septic tank. 2. Some areas of your manufactured home have stagnant energy and others show more sickness and less productivity. I'll let you conclude what those rooms are, but consider moving the fridge and the big-screen out on Cheetos. 3. Placing a Ford F150 chassis in the front yard will help restore harmony. A GMC, by contrast, promotes chaos – especially if it's not paid for.

the front lawn to promote the free flow of chi – and

4. Place mirrors throughout the house to reflect energy back, but take them off the truck

Feng shuing your feedlot can be trickier, admittedly – particularly if the wind is blowing from the west.

But it's useful to remember that either one's local geography is in agreeable alignment with the electromagnetic energy grid of the Earth, or it isn't. You want sleek, linear surfaces that carry the chi downwind – and a cabin in Stanley if that doesn't work out.

Keep in mind that round, smooth objects help to create benevolent chi, so there's no need to pick up the empty beer cans.

What would a higher tax rate get me?

If the property tax rate rises in the coming budget year, it will still collect fewer dollars than last year's lower tax rate did. The preliminary Twin Falls city budget is about $20,000 less than this

It is important to note than none of this is final: The Twin Falls City Council will be debating the budget for weeks to come, possibly tweaking it or making large changes to the amount spent and where it is spent. TIMES-NEWS

Caleb Faulkner's future may be up in smoke.

The 18-year-old Falls man pleaded guilty to one count of felony burglary on Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court, nearly three months after police figured him for a pair of smoke shop break-ins. Faulkner was arrested in early April, suspected of using his truck to smash into the Smoke-N-Head smoke shop on Washington Street North.

When arrested at owner Allen Nagel's other location on Blue Lakes Boulevard, police allegedly found Faulkner in possession of merchandise from the smoke shop - including Hayze spice, an herbal incense some smoke for a marijuana-like high.

Prosecutors dismissed one other count of burglary and two counts of malicious injury to property in exchange for the guilty plea. They will recommend a three- to six-year prison sentence, possibly suspended for a retained-jurisdiction program. OUR VIEW

State's Lobbying Laws Don't Protect Idahoans

f you have money to spend for a well-connected political client, Idaho is the place to do it.

Lobbyists here don 't have to report what they're paid – one of only 17 states where that's the case, according to the National Institute on Money in State Politics, a Helena, Mont.-based watchdog group. Idaho also doesn't perform routine checks on audit reports.

During the legislative session, lobbyists must turn in monthly reports to the Idaho Secretary of State's Office listing spending for lobbying activities in several areas, including paying for lawmakers' meals and entertainment, as well as expenses for travel and phone service. These forms are posted on the secretary of state's website.

Trouble is, there can be broad discrepancy between expenses listed on lobbyists' forms and a lobbyists' full compensation.

According to the Idaho Reporter, Pocatello-Chubbuck Auditorium District paid lobbyist Michael Kane $20,000, and his expenses during the 2011 legislative session for the district are listed at $50.31 on the secretary of state's website. Two community colleges, the College of Western Idaho and North Idaho College, each reported spending more than $20,000 on lobbyists, who reported expenses of $88.43 and $176.71, respectively.

When you're talking about making sure lobbyists – and the special interests and politicians they deal with – are following the law, financial transparency is everything. And state law in Idaho is simply too feeble to ensure that Idahoans get the full picture about lobbyists and how they're influencing government and policymaking.

Only the Legislature can change that.

Wall Street to Rest of Us: Was There a Problem Here?

hey say that winners get to write history. Three years after the meltdown of our financial markets, it's clear who is winning and who is losing. Wall Street — arms outstretched in triumph — is racing toward the finish-line tape while millions of American families are struggling to stay on their feet. With victory seemingly in hand, the historical rewrite is in full swing.

The contrast in fortunes between those on top of the economic heap and those buried in the rubble couldn't be starker. The 10 biggest banks now control more than three-quarters of the country's banking assets. Profits have bounced back, while compensation at publicly traded Wall Street firms hit a record $135 billion in 2010.

Meanwhile, more than 24 million Americans are out of work or can't find full-time work, and nearly $9 trillion in household wealth has vanished. There seems to be no correlation between who drove the crisis and who is paying the price.

The report of the Financial Crisis Inquiry Commission detailed the recklessness of the financial industry and the abject failures of policymakers and regulators that brought our economy to its knees in late 2008. The accuracy and facts of the commission's investigative report have gone unchallenged since its release in January.

So, how do you revise the historical narrative when the evidence of what led to economic catastrophe is so overwhelming and the events at issue so recent? You and your political allies just do it. And you bet on the old axiom that a lie is halfway around the world before the truth can tie its shoes.

If you are Rep. Paul Ryan, you ignore the fact that our federal budget deficit has ballooned more than $1 trillion annually since the financial collapse. You disregard the reality that two-thirds of the deficit increase is directly attributable to the economic downturn and bipartisan fiscal measures adopted to bolster the economy. Instead of focusing on the real cause of the deficit, you conflate today's budgetary disaster with the long-term challenges of Medicare so you can shred the social safety net.

If you are JP Morgan's chief investment officer, you refute the statement that your chairman and chief executive, Jamie Dimon, made to the FCIC in 2010 blaming the failures of major financial institutions on "the management teams 100 percent and . . . no one else." You revise your opinion on the causes of the crisis to instead focus blame on government housing policies.

If you are most congressional Republicans, you turn a blind eye to the sad history of widespread lending abuses that savaged communities across the country and pledge to block the appointment of anyone to head the new Consumer Financial Protection Bureau unless its authority is weakened. You ignore the evidence of pervasive excess that wrecked our financial markets and attempt to cut funding for the regulators charged with curbing it. Does historical accuracy matter? You bet it does.

Traveling down a road unfettered by facts will take us far from where we need to be: prosecuting financial wrongdoing to deter future malfeasance; vigorously enforcing financial reforms to rein in excessive risk; and rooting out Wall Street's conflicts of interests, abysmal governance and badly flawed compensation incentives.

Worst of all, it will divert us from the urgent task of putting people back to work and creating real wealth for America's future. Over the past decade, we squandered trillions of dollars on rampant speculation rather than on making investments - in technology, infrastructure, clean energy and education that increase our productivity and economic strength. The financial sector's share of corporate profits climbed from 15 percent in 1980 to 33 percent by the early 2000s, while financial-sector debt soared from $3 trillion in 1978 to $36 trillion by 2007. With tens of millions still unemployed, isn't it time to shift from an economy based on money making money to an economy based on money creating jobs and genuine prosperity?

We can still get history and the future right. But time is running out.

Yellowstone River oil spill: Climate Change and Disaster in Montana

e're a disaster area;" Alexis Bonogofsky told me, "and it's going to take a long time to get over it."

Bonogofsky and her partner, Mike Scott, are all over the news this week, telling the world about how Montana's Exxon Mobil pipeline spill has fouled their goat ranch and is threatening the health of their animals.

But my conversation with Bonogofsky was four full days before the pipeline began pouring oil into the Yellowstone River. And no, it's not that she's psychic; she was talking about this year's historic flooding.

Everyone agrees that the two disasters — the flooding of the Yellowstone River and the oil spill in the riverbed — are connected. According to Exxon officials, the high and fast-moving river has four times its usual flow this year, which has hampered cleanup and prevented their workers from reaching the exact source of the spill. Also thanks to the flooding, the oiled water has breached the riverbanks, inundating farmland, endangering animals, killing crops and contaminating surface water. And the rush of water appears to be carrying the oil toward North Dakota.

Government and company officials have also speculated that the flooding may even have caused the spill in the first place. Recent testing showed the pipeline was buried five to eight feet under the riverbed, but officials suspect that raging water may have exposed the pipe, leaving it vulnerable to fastmoving debris.

The state's governor may be shaking his fist at Exxon now, but he has championed virtually every fossil fuel project that has crossed his desk, from a vast new coal mine near the Northern Cheyenne Reservation, to new rail lines that would help ship Montana's coal to China, to the controversial Keystone XL pipeline, which would carry oil from Alberta's tar sands to refineries along the Gulf Coast.

Bonogofsky and Scott are at the forefront of the fight against this carbon-centric vision of Montana's future. When they aren't growing food or taking care of their herd of goats, both are fulltime environmental activists: she with the National Wildlife Federation, he with the Sierra Club. But they don't just fight the coal and oil companies; they also work hard to show fellow Montanans that there are other ways to get energy besides drilling, ones that don't turn the state into sacrifice zones.

"We're trying to be selfsufficient," she told me. "We want to grow all our own food and grow food for other people, not be dependent on fossil fuels."

Now their oasis is choking in oil, carried onto their land by floods very likely linked to the burning of that very same black muck.

Scientists use road-kill deer, elk to lure bears

BOISE • Wildlife biologists are due to start putting out fresh road-killed deer and elk to lure Idaho grizzly bears as part of efforts under the Endangered Species Act to monitor their distribution in the area that includes Yellowstone National Park.

Trapping begins July 18 and runs until Aug. 25 in the Caribou-Targhee National Forest south of Yellowstone National Park.

Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials say potential trapping sites will be baited with the deer and elk carcasses.

If there are indications that grizzly bears are in the area, snares or culvert traps will be used to capture the large ISLAND PARK • Cleanup crews in eastern Idaho have finished clearing honey and an estimated 14 million honey bees that got loose after a delivery truck overturned along a stretch of U.S. Highway 20.

Fremont County Sheriff deputies say several workers were stung during the first few hours of the cleanup Sunday.

And some observers told The Post-Register about seeing a strange black cloud and roaring noise above the spill area before realizing it was a massive swarm of bees.

Authorities say a truck was hauling the bees from California to North Dakota when the driver veered off the

The group has been critical of the company's plans to ship massive, oversized loads of equipment along a scenic byway in northern Idaho en route to the Kearl Oil Sands in southern Alberta, Canada.

Idaho ends fiscal 2011 with $85 million surplus

A good chunk of the surplus will go to offset taxes residents pay on food, while programs for the poor and disabled, which saw reduction of more than $100 million in state and federal funding during the last legislature, won't be restored.

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE – A healthy share of Idaho's $85 million 2011 budget surplus will go to offset taxes residents pay on food, but programs for the poor and disabled that saw a $108 million reduction in state and federal funding during the last legislature won't be restored.

The plan Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter announced Tuesday for the extra revenue Idaho collected during the 12 months ended June 30 is already getting criticism from minority Democrats and one Republican budget writer, Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert.

In all, Idaho took in $2.44 billion, up 7.9 percent from 2010 as hiring accelerated, more businesses turned a post-recession profit and the public resumed buying.

Despite the positive revenue, Otter said he's taking a cautious approach as Idaho tries to emerge from the recession. In recent months, job growth has stagnated, and the federal government's current talks over raising the debt ceiling are creating additional uncer-

"We're a long way from out of the woods," Otter said in a prepared statement. "You need to remember that this is about half a billion dollars less than we had in my first year as governor" in

Most of the extra 2011 cash, some $68 million, must be diverted to public schools and community colleges to fulfill commitments to the federal government to maintain funding levels. Combined with $51 million from the federal government to preserve teachers' jobs since last year, Idaho has nearly restored the $128 million fiscal year 2010 cut to public schools.

About $15 million will go to expand the grocery tax credit, Otter said.

Following a 2008 legislative compromise, Idaho's grocery tax credit has been lifted to $70 annually for low-income residents and $50 for others. The 2011 Legislature wanted to delay expansion, citing uncertain budgets, but Otter's decision to boost the credit will provide an additional $10 back on nearly everybody's income taxes.

Otter could have called a special session to ask legislators to partially restore Medicaid, the health insurance program for the poor and disabled, but indicated he felt it was the best way to spend the money.

"That's one of the promises we made long ago, and we've desperately tried to keepit," Otter said.

Cameron, co-chairman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said he'd have preferred to partially restore Department of Health and Welfare programs like Medicaid that would have leveraged federal matching funds of roughly $40 million, restoring about half the money the program is losing.

"My preference would be

(208) 734-4333

either restoring some of the current programs we have cut," Cameron said. "Health and Welfare would be a high priority?"

Rep. Janice McGeachin, R-Idaho Falls and an architect of this year's Medicaid changes, didn't return a phone call.

But House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, said institutionalizing those cuts when money is available will ripple throughout the system: higher prison costs, busier emergency rooms, more human pain.

"The consequence of that is we're going to pay more in the out years," Rusche said.

In Tuesday's announcement, Otter conceded he lost a $100 wager — a "silly bet," he called it in the statement - with former Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus that final collections for fiscal year 2011 would be closer to a forecast of $2.43 billion by former Idaho chief economist Mike Ferguson than Otter's austere $2.29 billion estimate.

Ferguson, who retired in 2010 after more than 25 years as Idaho's chief economic prognosticator, said Tuesday he was pleased Idaho's revenue exceeded even his own forecast. That's after Ferguson found himself at the center of a 2010 budget controversy as conservative legislators, wary the recession would linger, dismissed his projections as too rosy and adopted more austere figures with the budget cuts to match.

Some of "the cuts that were made now may not have been necessary," Ferguson said.

A continued revenue recovery will put conservative Idaho legislators in an unusual, and maybe even uncomfortable, spot: Figuring out what to do with surpluses that could top $100 million as early as next Iuly, even if revenue grows from actual 2011 collections at just the forecast 3 percent

Wayne Hammon, Otter's budget chief, said the governor has two priorities for additional cash: Bolstering education and refilling rainy day reserves drained from $350 million to nearly nothing over the last three years.

"Everyone recognizes that without a hefty rainy day account, the last three years would have been much more difficult," Hammon said.

Others, too, have their eye on incoming cash. House Leader

Moyle, R-Star, last year floated a proposal to reduce Idaho's corporate and individual income tax rates, and said the clamor could become louder as revenue resumes growing.

"We need to backfill some of the needs of education," said Moyle. "And then give it back to the taxpayers."

With the looming threat of a first-ever government default, Senate Republicans are pushing a proposal that would allow the president to secure trillions in funding while virtually absolving Republicans of responsibility if a default occurs and allowing them to avoid the issue altogether.

BY DAVID ESPO

Special to The Associated Press

WASHINGTON • With compromise talks at a vituperative standstill, Senate Republicans unexpectedly offered Tuesday to hand President Barack Obama new powers to avert a firstever government default threatened for Aug. 2.

Under a proposal outlined by Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, Obama could request - and likely secure increases of up to $2.5 trillion in the government's borrowing authority in three separate installments over the next year, as long as he simultaneously proposed spending cuts of greater size.

The debt limit increases would take effect unless blocked by Congress under special rules that would require speedy action — and even then Obama could exercise his authority to veto such legislation. Significantly, the president's spending cuts would be debated under normal procedures, with no guarantee they ever come to a final vote.

The White House had no immediate reaction to the proposal, which came a few hours before Obama presided over his third meeting in as many days with congressional leaders searching for a way to avoid a default and ensuing financial crisis.

State intervention "ideally will support not just the child but the whole family, with the goal of reuniting child and family as soon as possible. That may require instruction on parenting," said Ludwig, who wrote the article with Lindsey Murtagh, a lawyer and a researcher at Harvard's School

Their legislation would have kept the marketplace clear for the cheap, energy-wasting bulbs that have changed little since Thomas Edison invented them in 1879.

Republicans said people who now buy a bulb for 30 or 40 cents shouldn't be forced to pay $6 for a fluorescent bulb or more for LED (light-emitting diode) lighting.

"If you are Al Gore and want to spend $10 for a light bulb, more power to you," Barton said. He exaggerated the cost of most energy-efficient bulbs and neglected to mention that they last years longer than old incandescent bulbs, which convert about 90 percent of the energy they consume as electricity into heat, and only 10 percent into light.

National program requires restaurants to include at least one kids' menu item that's under 600 calories and meets nutritional requirements.

WASHINGTON • Parents seeking healthier restaurant meals for their kids can start to look beyond chicken nuggets and macaroniand-cheese.

At least 19 large restaurant chains - including Burger King, Chili's, IHOP and Friendly's – plan to announce Wednesday that they will include healthier options on their children's menus. At least 15,000 restaurant locations will focus on increasing servings of fruits and vegetables, lean proteins, whole grains and low-fat dairy. The items will have less fats, sugars and sodium.

Less healthy foods like burgers and fries will still be on the menu, but the restaurants say they will do more to promote healthier options. Chili's, for example, will highlight a chicken sandwich with a side of pineapple or mandarin oranges on their kids' menu. Burger King has recently reformulated children's chicken nuggets so they include less sodium, and employees taking orders will ask if customers want healthier apple fries instead of the standard "fries with that?"

The effort is part of a new National Restaurant Association initiative to give kids more healthy options at restaurants and to make it easier for parents to find those options. Some of the items are already on menus, but restaurants will advertise them more prominently and flag the healthier menu items to make ordering easi-

To be part of the program, restaurants must include at least one kids' menu item that is 600 calories or less and meets other nutritional requirements. A side dish worth less than 200 calories must also be included.

"This could provide a great push toward healthier offerings at restaurants," said Robert Post, the Agriculture Department official in charge of developing the department's dietary guidelines, which came out earlier this year. Those urged Americans to eat less salt.

the meeting, Obama said that without a deal to raise the debt limit, he could not guarantee that Social Security checks will be issued on Aug. 3 "because there may simply not be the money in the coffers to do it."

essence, In Connell's proposal would greatly enhance Obama's authority to avoid a default, while also virtually absolving Republicans of responsibility if one occurred.

At the same time, it would allow Republican lawmakers to avoid having to support an increase in the debt limit, something many them find odious.

"Republicans will choose a path that actually reflects the will of the people, which is to do the responsible thing and ensure the government doesn't default on its obligations," McConnell said in a speech on the Senate floor. He also excoriated the administration for seeking tax increases along with spending cuts as part of an agreement to raise the debt limit, adding that as long as Obama is president "a real solution is unattainable." House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, praised McConnell for R-Ohio, doing "good work" with recommendation his but, in an interview on Fox News, did not endorse it.

At the same time, Boehner said he believed Obama was trying to reach a compromise on deficit cuts, "but their insistence on raising taxes is preventing us from getting there."

NEW YORK (AP) • Hope that the Federal Reserve might consider more economic stimulus wasn't enough to keep bad news about Ireland from sinking

Ireland's government bonds were downgraded by ratings agency Moody's to junk status shortly before U.S. markets closed Tuesday, sending stocks sharply lower and erasing the day's gains. Ireland joins Greece and Portugal, whose debt was also recently graded as junk. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 5.85, or 0.4 percent, to close at 1,313.64. The S&P is now down 0.5 percent for the month and 2.2 percent for the week. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 58.88, or 0.5 percent, to close at 12,446.88. More than Miller, Bud and Coors

Zulu Bagels on Washington adds Afterhours beer-and-wine cafe to its operation, featuring wines, craft beers and 'more of a mellow feel' than its sister operation.

BY NICK COLTRAIN

Times-News writer

The Zulu Bagels Afterhours on Washington Street in Twin Falls will have the same name as its Addison Avenue location. But if all goes according to plan, it won't feel like the same place.

The new beer and wine cafe that opened last week focuses more on craft beers than the omnipresent Budweiser, Coors and Miller.

The regular store will continue to operate as it has, only with extended hours and the possibilty of having beer with your bagel, Company Controller Benjamin Ballard said.

Unlike Zulu's Addison Avenue location, the alcohol will share space with the daytime operation. But the older store's layout should encourage a more-casual atmosphere, Ballard said. He also aims for frequent live music, a semi-regular feature at the Addison

"They have a little more of an elegant feel, going upstairs there," Ballard said of the Addison store. "We want more of a mellow theme here: Come in and have a couple of beers, man."

With about two dozen beers available, it'll take more than a couple of visits with a couple of beers to get through it all. Ballard boasted of a selection that includes bottles of Old Engine Oil - a pitch-black porter from Scotland and a tap of Lost Continent Double India Pale Ale, a crisp, bitter beer from Grand Teton Brewing in Victor.

"I want people to come in here and

The Zulu Bagels Afterhours wine and beer cafe has extended from the bagel shop's Addison Avenue location to its building on Washington Street North. It will feature more than 25 wines and 31 beers.

say, 'I want to try one of those just for the novelty of it, just for something different," Ballard said. "Everyone serves the same Bud Light, Miller Lite, the Coors Light, across the board across town. We want to try something different and carry that with us."

The Lost Continent occupies one of only three currently operating taps in the bar, though three more are waiting to be used. And while none include Budweiser and company, those are available by the bottle. For the overwhelmed consumer, Ballard said he has a beer expert for a bartender to help sift through the selection.

"We're all just here, to be perfectly honest, to make people happy. We are running a business so we want to do well and make money, but we spend (a lot of) time talking about customer service," Ballard said.

Ballard's ideal for the new shop is reminiscent of his former home, Sacramento, Calif., where coffee shops would fill with patrons at night and shift to serving beer.

"If I could pack the building and sell beer all night, I'd be so happy, I'd be ecstatic," Ballard said, jumping into plans of serving hors d'oeuvres and live music three nights a week.

Economic development, tailor made

Kimberly is growing economically and a group of people that took part in the Downtown Stakeholder's Workshop want to continue to foster that growth.

BY BLAIR KOCH

Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY • With high-performing public schools, a main street featuring several destination boutique shops and the "best-tasting water in Idaho," Lance Godfrey said Kimberly has sown many seeds for a prosperous future.

Godfrey, owner of Kimberly's Select Source and president of the Kimberly Business Owners Association, was one of about 15 people in attendance Monday at a Downtown Stakeholder's Workshop, hosted by the city's economic development arm. The meeting was the first of several that will shape a plan to foster economic growth for the

"Kimberly has a lot of potential but we have to plan for the future in order to tap into that potential," Godfrey said. "Personally, I think connecting the Main Street corridor with Red Cap Corner would be the best thing we could do."

Gathering such ideas will be paramount to developing an economic development plan the community can wrap its arms around, said Boise-based consultant Mark Rivers, hired by the city in March. As part of his $5,000, sixmonth contract, Rivers is assisting the city in areas pertaining to economic development, beautification and working with existing businesses and organizations - including guiding the draft development strategy. "We want this to reflect the interest of the entire community," Rivers told the Times-News.

Rivers urged those in attendance to consider more than just businesses already in town when thinking about the shape the plan should take.

"We need ideas and what your priorities are," Rivers said. "What kind of businesses do you see that could be a good fit? What kind of amenities are missing?"

Elements that thriving downtowns share, Rivers said, include ample and easy parking, venues for entertainment, pedestrian access, and places of commerce. Also, he said, "they look alive."

Although attracting new business is a motive for the development plan, helping retain those already providing goods and services is just as important, said City Administrator Polly Hulsey.

"Making sure that our downtown thrives means answering the question, 'How do we support the businesses that are already here?" Hulsey said. "We need feedback and input from our residents and businesses throughout this process so that everyone's interests are included?"

In a Twin Falls kitchen: Lemon caper langostino pasta with artisan bread and fresh vegetables.

Pasta with a Twist of Lemon

Inspired by a citrusy seafood pasta in Ketchum, a Twin Falls couple created a lemon caper langostino fettuccine. The results? A memorable dinner party and a recipe they're sharing with our readers.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvalley.com

As the wind whipped through the sagebrush outside Twin Falls, Dr. Kevin and Debi Kraal stayed inside their Southwest-style home, putting together a dinner party in their spacious kitchen. On the menu: Lemon pasta with langostino caper cream sauce. It was the latest creation for a culinary couple who loves to cook and share their creations with friends. Kevin and Debi both enjoy good food and frequent downtown kitchen store Rudy's - A Cook's Paradise, where they take cooking classes. Debi cooks more often, but Kevin specializes in making pasta.

"We kind of do this thing together where he makes a pasta and I make a sauce," said Debi, a nurse. They got the idea for the lemon pasta dish after sampling a similar meal at Ketchum Grill. After some tweaking, Kevin came up with a good approximation.

Homemade pasta sounds fussy, but with a food processor and pasta machine, it comes together quickly. Kevin cracked the eggs into a food processor, then added the lemon juice and zest.

"I've found that the zest actually adds more lemon than the lemon juice," said

DREW NASH/TIMES-NEWS

Dr. Kevin Kraal of Twin Falls guides pasta dough through a pasta machine on Thursday. Kevin tweaked a recipe to add more lemon flavor.

Kevin, an emergency room doctor. Kevin used a hand-cranked pasta machine to flatten the dough, then to cut it into fettuccini. Flour flew as he guided the dough through the machine.

(If there's not a mess, you're doing it wrong, Kevin said.) After he cut the noodles, he moved them to a towel on the counter to dry. It's an important step skip drying and you'll end up with doughy noodles.

"We used to hang this," Kevin said. But the pasta would stretch and fall to the floor. So he now uses a wooden chopstick to gently lift the noodles as they come out of the machine, then transfer them to the towel.

As he worked, Debi gathered ingredients for the sauce. The versatile lemon pasta goes well with plenty of ingredients - such as fresh-picked tomatoes, basil, pepper or olive oil - but for tonight's party, they chose the lemon caper seafood sauce.

Kevin cracked open a bottle of wine while Debi talked about her history with food. She didn't always cook, she said – when she was a young woman, cooking wasn't something young, empowered women did. But she realized she enjoys creating great food and has thrown herself into the food scene. Now, she makes her own cheese, raves about Barbara Kingsolver's treatise on local foods and owns a share in a community-supported agriculture venture in Filer.

Sun Valley Wine Auctions Inspire Cookbook

Can't afford to bid with the extravagant buyers? Oh, well. A new cookbook offers tastes and tips from Sun Valley's famous annual wine auction — without the pricey tickets.

Entertaining

BY KAREN BOSSICK

kbossick@cox-internet.com

KETCHUM • Every July, some of the Eric Claptons and Michael Jordans of the chef world are flown into Sun Valley where they serve knockout food paired with top-drawer wines for intimate dinners in some of the valley's most elegant private homes.

It's a pricey luxury for the well-heeled. But now, the Sun Valley Center for the Arts is offering the rest of the foodie world a peek at these over-the-top dinners, which are served up as part of the three-day Sun Valley

The art center's Junior Patrons Circle has compiled a cookbook titled "Entertaining Sun Valley Style: Behind the Scenes from the Sun Valley Center Wine Auction" just in time for the 30th anniversary of the wine auction, July 21-23.

The coffee table-type hardcover book offers six dozen recipes for such dishes as sweet potato frittata, mushroom-encrusted elk tenderloin and Turkish lamb kebab, concocted by Sun Valley and national chefs.

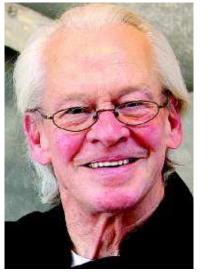

"I get hungry looking through the recipes," said Kristine Bretall, the Sun Valley Center's marketing director.

The book also offers wine-pairing suggestions, floral arrangement guidelines and such entertaining tips as creating the perfect dessert platter for chocolate lovers.

And it features photographs from past wine auctions, a resource guide for unusual food ingredients and wines and seven menu lists from past vintner dinners. Those dinners featured such dishes as Monterey Bay red abalone with white summer corn and winter black truffle vinaigrette, honeysuckle ice cream, asparagus folded lasagna, chilled passion fruit soup and olive oil cake with red wine.

Proceeds from sales of the $49.95 book, available at the center and at Ketchum bookstores, will benefit the center's arts education outreach, which takes artists into schools and brings children to the center.

"It's a way to turn the wine auction inside out so people feel a little more part of it," said Sally Boettger, the center's co-executive direc-

To celebrate its 30th auction, the center also enlisted the help of 10 artists to turn wine barrels into art. The barrels, which sport everything from Sun Valley foxes enjoying the wine picnic to sunflowers, can be seen around town leading up to the July 22 wine auction, where each will be sold to the highest bidder.

And two Ketchum artists Jineen Griffith and Karen McCall - collaborated on a commemorative lot of wine bottles that when standing next to each other feature scenes of Baldy and the fishing on the Big Wood River. The lot was commissioned by Atkinsons' Market, which offers wine bottles etched with scenes of Sun Valley each year.

"At its height someone bid $78,000 on the Atkinsons' lot," said Griffith. "I'm volunteering at the auction that night so I can watch it go. I'll be rooting to bid it up since I have a personal stake in it this time."

Glenn Janss, who founded

Hailey graphic artist Judy Stoltzfus painted 'Feast of the Foxes' on this wine barrel outside F-Stop Camera and Video at 460 Sun Valley Road in Ketchum.

Sun Valley Center 40 years ago, founded the wine auction 10 years later after attending a similar event in California. She will serve as honorary chairwoman of this year's event, which begins July 21 with the dinners with the vintners in the private homes of such people as philanthropist Teresa Heinz and Sen. John Kerry.

The center will hold a Riedel Wine Symposium focusing on West Sonoma Coast wines at 11:30 a.m. July 22 in the Sun Valley Inn, followed by the Wine Auction Gala at 5 p.m. under the big tent at Dollar Mountain.

July 23 will include a Riedel Wine Symposium focusing on Australian wines at 11:30 a.m. at the Sun Valley Inn; a Wine Tasting Extravaganza from 12:30 to 3 p.m. under the Big Tent at Dollar Mountain; and a Wine Auction Picnic and concert featuring flamenco music by Sam Lardner and Barcelona from 6 to 9 p.m. at Warm Springs Ranch.

T.F. Gets Third Farmers Market

A new farmers market is coming to Twin Falls.

The Lynwood Farmers Market opens Saturday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., in the parking lot of Lynwood Shopping Center, 528 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

The weekly market will have produce, craft and jam vendors, organizer Jessica Baker said. As of Tuesday, she had four or five vendors committed for the market's opening day but hoped to secure more by the end of the week.

On Saturday, expect to find watermelon, breads and cookies from Hagerman, and jams, jellies and corn from Twin Falls, for example.

Baker hopes market customers will linger at the shopping center and visit stores after they finish picking out vegetables. "We wanted to kind of draw people back to the Lynwood Shopping Center to remind people they're still there."

John Clifford Hepworth

June 18, 1927 - July 10, 2011

John completed his life journey Sunday, July 10, 2011, at home while holding his wife's hand. He passed away peacefully from complications due to Parkinson's dis-

John was born June 18, 1927, in Salt Lake City, Utah, to Charles and Mabel Hepworth, joining his three brothers, Charlie, Ralph and Merlie, and his sister, Yvonne. His mother passed away when he was 5 years old and John was raised by his father and siblings in Albion, Idaho. His father was a butcher and had a small meat market in Albion.

John grew up and attended school in Albion, Idaho. During his youth, John enjoyed and excelled in all sports. He had a particular fondness for basketball and enjoyed a lot of success as a high school basketball player and even played one year of college ball at Idaho State. His stardom in basketball resulted in several articles written of him in the newspapers. John, with the help of his three brothers, made the Hepworth name famous in sports. John graduated from Albion High School in 1945. After graduation from high school, John enlisted in the Navy, where he served until the end of the war in 1946. He was stationed on the USS Attu. After the war, John attended Idaho State University from 1946 until 1948. He also attended the University of Utah from 1948 until 1952, where he received his law

John married his high school sweetheart, Donna James, on Feb. 11, 1947. John and Donna had four children, Tanya, Janet, Charlie and Jeff. The Hepworth family lived in Buhl, Idaho, from 1952 until 1978. Sadly, Donna Hepworth passed away in

In 1977, John married his wife, Bonita. John and Bonita moved from Buhl to Twin Falls in 1978, and they continued to reside in Twin Falls until the present. One of the great joys in John's life during the time he lived in Twin Falls was his relationship with Bonita's son, Bradley. Bradley was born with special needs and he lived with John and Bonita until his death in 2009. Bradley was a very happy and loving person and was a source of great love and joy in John's life.

John was always active in his children's lives and tried to attend every activity. He helped coach Little League. His children were a very important part of his life. Watching his children and grandchildren succeed and chatting with his sister, Yvonne, on the phone were highlights for John. He was a devoted husband and father

John was well known for his many accomplishments as a trial lawyer. He opened his own private law practice in Buhl in 1952. He was joined by Bill Nungester in 1960 and by Mike Felton in 1965. Later, Brent Martens joined the firm in Buhl. In the '60s and '70s, the law firm of Hepworth, Nungester and Felton developed a strong reputation in the Magic Valley and throughout the state of Idaho. John, in particular, proved to be very skillful in the courtroom as an ardent advocate for his clients. Throughout the '60s and '70s, John tried many jury trials to successful verdicts and, in a few cases, set records for the largest verdicts in the state for the types of cases he handled. During the '80s and '90s, the Hepworth law firm continued to grow and thrive. Lawyers such as John Hohnhorst and John Lezamiz joined the practice and proved to be very capable trial lawyers themselves. Additionally, partners Jeff Rolig and Penelope Parker joined the firm in Twin Falls. The one constant throughout the life of the law firm was the skill and leadership that John provided. He was hard working, smart and fiercely competitive, all attributes that served his varied clients well until he retired from the firm and the practice of law at the age of

John was a civil trial lawyer and the courtroom was his stage. He was a lawyer's lawyer and was liked and respected by his colleagues. Many of his courtroom adversaries were his closest friends, which was a reflection of his professionalism. He had a long and distinguished career as a trial lawyer. He was listed in "The Best 100 Lawyers in America" in several editions. John was a member of the Idaho State Bar, from which he received the highest attorney accolade of "Distinguished Lawyer." He was a member of the American Bar Association. He was one of the founding members of the Idaho Trial Lawyers Association, was a national board member of the American Board of Trial Advocates and was a member of the American College of Trial Lawyers, an invitation-only group limited to fewer than 1 percent of the nation's trial lawyers. He served as president of the 5th Judicial District Bar Association, served on the State Redistricting Committee and was nominated by the Idaho Statesman as a "Distinguished Citizen." John was asked as the only Idaho lawyer to join the Inner Circle of Advocates, a distinguished group of 100 of the best trial attorneys in the United States. John was also a frequent speaker on trial advocacy throughout the country.

John enjoyed great success as a businessman as well. In the mid 1960s, he worked with his good friend, Ted Eastman, to start a commercial trout company called Clear Springs Trout Company. With a lot of hard work persistence, Springs grew from a fledgling trout company to becoming the world's largest privately owned commercial trout company. John was chairman of the board for the company for many years. He was very proud of his role in helping to form and grow the Today, Clear company. Springs Foods continues to thrive and is one of the largest employers in the Magic Valley.

John was also very involved in the creation of the College of Southern Idaho. In fact, when CSI was just getting started as an educational institution, it was located in Buhl. In time, it relocated to Twin Falls where it is located today. John served on the board of directors for CSI for many years. John also took an active role in helping to form the foundation for the College of Southern Idaho. John and Bonita have always been active supporters for the college and they take great pride in the many ways that CSI benefits the local community. John was a gentleman and treated everyone with respect. He loved to visit with people and never knew a stranger and was always ready with a handshake. He loved the law, his wife and family, his dogs (Princess and Duchess) and any sport in which a ball was used! He enjoyed playing golf, but mostly enjoyed playing tennis with his buddy, Bob Seibel. He and Bonita loved to travel and did so extensively, creating many good friends and memories. Going to Normandy Beach was a particularly memorable trip, but traveling to Italy was also a favorite.

John was a member of Immanuel Lutheran Church. He was also a member at the Blue Lakes Country Club. He loved traveling to Salt Lake to watch the Utah Jazz play especially seeing Michael Jordan! John was a devoted husband and Bonita meant the world to him. He knew he was very lucky to have her, especially these last few years. John loved their home and was very comfortable there.

John is survived by his wife, Bonita of 34 years; his children, Tanya (Craig) Storti of Boise, Janet (Lynn) Askew of Hailey, Charlie (Margaret) Hepworth of Boise and Jeff (Leslie) Hepworth of Twin Falls; stepson, Rod Mason of Twin Falls; 11 grandchildren, Tyler, Jack and Jeff Storti, Charlie and Paige Askew, Haley, Matt, Mark and Grace Hepworth, Grady and Lexi Hepworth, and Eric Mason; his sister, Yvonne Chatburn of Spokane; sisters-in-law, Helen Meyer and Loretta O'Connell; and many nieces, nephews and cousins. He is also survived by his mother's youngest sister, Harriet Carniato, who is 106 years old and still going strong.

Those passing on before him were his wife, Donna; his parents; brothers, Charlie (USAF), Ralph (NAC) and Merlie (USN); brother-inlaw, Joe Chatburn; and "his boy," Bradley.

He lost the battle he has been fighting valiantly for a few years. He may not have immediately recalled your name, but that does not diminish how he felt about his friends.

We want to thank his caregivers, Lavenna, Patty, Rod, Ashley, Socorro and Cody for being so very loyal to both of us. Thanks for the love and support of our friends through these challenging times. Our sincere appreciation also to Hospice Visions for the dignity and care and love given to John, to Pastor Vedder for the visits and prayers over the last few years, and to Pastor Sedlmayer for his constant vigil, prayers and songs he sang to John.

In celebration of John's life, it is suggested that memorials be made to the Southern Idaho Learning Center, Immanuel Lutheran Church or to the College of Southern Idaho Nursing Program in John's name.

The funeral for John will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 16, at the Immanuel Lutheran Church, 2055 Filer Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Visitation will be held before the service from 10:30 until 11 a.m. in the Fireside Room at Immanuel Lutheran Church. A celebration of John's life will be held immediately after the funeral ceremony at the Turf Club, 734 Falls Ave. in Twin Falls. There will be a graveside service at 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the West End Cemetery in Buhl. Services have been entrusted to Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

Pitching, speed and a little bit of power. The National League is back on top in the All-Star game, using the same formula that worked during its dominating run in the 1970s and '80s.

Colorado Bound

Casey Christiansen, Suede Denker and Slade Winmill were key parts of Minico's run to the Class 4A state baseball tournament in May. Now each will compete in college, and all of them will do it in Colorado.

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Minico baseball players Suede Denker, Slade Winmill and Casey Christiansen have pinned down their future plans, and all three are headed to Colorado to play in the NICAA.

Denker and Winmill have committed to Northeastern Junior College, and Christiansen has signed with Lamar Community College.

"Of all the places I went, Lamar seemed like the best fit and they had the best offer as far as the future, the program that they run and the places that they can put players. It's a good fit for me," Christiansen said. "It wasn't easy. I had three or four places I really liked, but Lamar had a little bit of a step up on

A three-year starter for Minico, Christiansen batted .614 with 40 RBIs, struck out just four times and led the team in on-base percentage (.690) during his senior season. The 2011 Great Basin Conference Pitcher of the Year had a 2.65 ERA with 68 strikeouts against 14 walks. He plans to both pitch and play middle infield for the Lamar Lopes, who were the 2011 Region IX champs.

Minico coach Ben Frank said one word sums up Christiansen: consistency.

"Casey has been the same guy for us since his sophomore year," Frank said. "His approach is always consistent, his demeanor is always consistent. Pitching-wise, you knew exactly what you were going to get from Casey every time."

A first team All-Great Basin Conference outfielder, Denker hit .500 from the leadoff spot. He drove in 24 runs, led the team in stolen bases and was second in on-base percentage (.550).

"I don't know what I would do without the game. It's been a part of my life since I was 4 years old," Denker said. "Every year the dream became more real and more achievable. I realized my senior year that if I put in the work, I could play college ball."

Frank praised the work ethic of Denker, who went from a backup JV second baseman as a freshman to a starting varsity outfielder the next year, and one of the top outfielders in Idaho as a senior.

"He makes quick improvements because he's a good athlete and he's a hard worker," Frank said. "Each year Denker has improved a ton — maybe more than I've ever had a guy improve in four years."

Winmill, who transferred to Minico from Burley prior to his junior year, batted .384 with 24 RBIs as a senior.

"The word I use to summarize him is projectable," Frank said of Winmill. "He's a big-bodied kid, he's got good bat speed, all the physical tools. He's been a great kid to have in the program and he has set a good example with his work ethic."

Both Winmill and Denker expect to play in the outfield for Northeastern.

"We liked the facilities, it's a pretty brand new college, classrooms are upto-date," Denker said. "Their coach seemed pretty strict, a lot like Coach Frank. He doesn't take crap."

Said Winmill: "We went and worked out there and we thought it would be cool to room together... It's definitely been a goal my entire life. I've always wanted to play college baseball. Since I was a little kid I've wanted to get a scholarship and play at the next level, and its finally coming true."

Buhl Tribe Splits Pair With Skyline

BY JOHN DERR

BUHL • The Tribe rallied to tie the game early, but had no answer for a hot hitting Skyline squad as they fell 16-5 in the first game of an American Legion Area C "A" doubleheader Tuesday afternoon.

Braden Hillebrant paced the Grizzlies offensive attack early, doubling in a run in the Andrew Peterson smacked an RBI single and Jack Hamilton doubled to knot the score, but things fell apart.

Seven Skyline runs came across the board in the fifth, on two walks, a single, a fielding error and a three-run homer from Skyline pitcher Scott Allison.

The Grizzlies kept hammering away, tallying 12 hits on the game. Hamilton added an RBI double in the sixth for the Tribe.

NFL: What's Ahead if Labor Deal Isn't Reached by End of the Week

NEW YORK (AP) • Think back four months to that disappointing day in March when the NFL lockout began. The general opinion was the owners and players would reach a new labor agreement long before training camps opened.

They had plenty of time and about 9 billion reasons to get it done.

training Well, some camps open at the end of next week, and the two sides have not yet gotten it done. Yes, they are closer than ever, with several key issues – particularly how to split more than $9 billion in revenues – just about settled.

But there is serious doubt that a disruption to the preseason can be avoided. While the regular season still appears safe, the situation isn't as simple as shaking hands and going back to business as usual, even assuming owners and players patched everything up when face-to-face talks resume today - an unlikely scenario.

Once an agreement in principle on the core economic issues is drawn up, there will be more work to be done. That's because there are certain issues that won't be addressed in full until after the NFLPA reestablishes itself as a union a process that might take a couple of days - and can then serve once again as a collective bargaining unit for the players.

Items that could fall under that umbrella include the league's drugtesting program, health insurance, retired players' pensions and other benefits - none of which is likely to be resolved completely while the union is still dissolved.

Yet without a collective bargaining agreement in place soon, many teams will need to delay training camp. The New York Giants and Jets and Baltimore Ravens already have canceled out-of-town camps and will do all their preseason work at their home facilities, at a significant cost to the communities where normally have gone.

The Pro Football Hall of Fame inductions will go on as scheduled on Aug. 6.

But the game the following day between the St. Louis Rams and Chicago Bears is in jeopardy, which certainly would put a damper on the festivities.

And with owners and players haggling over the rookie wage scale, guidelines for free agency and how benefits for retired players will be funded, the next few days are critical.

Should the differences remain strong and prevent a timely deal, the first full weekend of preseason games could be canceled at a cost upward of $60 million.

"English golf is very strong right now," Donald said Tuesday. "Obviously in the world rankings, with myself and Lee heading that list. We've both been having good years so far, and there's a bunch of other English guys that probably haven't played as well as us but certainly have the potential to win." The numbers sure look a lot more promising than the did eight years ago, the last time an Open was held at Royal St. George's. Back then, there were no English players in the top 10 and only two (Casey

Question Now is How Good Will McIlroy Be?

Britain's newest star, Rory McIlroy, returns to the golf course this week for Europe's only major. In his last tournament, the 22-year-old Northern Irishman won the U.S. Open for his first major title.

ANDWICH, England – The strong wind blowing Tuesday across Royal St. George's was just another sign that the moonscape masquerading as a golf course on the English coast would offer a vastly different test than the one solved so easily by Rory McIlroy at the U.S. Open.

The British Open can be a puzzle of its own, as McIlroy found out last year when he followed an opening 63 with a big fat 80 when the wind started howling at St. Andrews. He was too young, it was too early, and someone else got their name on the claret jug.

Then came four days at Congressional Country Club that made people forget Tiger Woods isn't playing much golf these days.

Now comes a week that might tell us as much about McIlroy as he found out about himself at the U.S. Open. A week that could answer the question of the past month: Just how good can McIlroy be?

We already know the kid is the real thing. He proved that by taking a victory lap around Congressional on the final Sunday in an eightshot rout that brought back visions of the way Woods used to toy with fellow competitors. But will McIlroy win major championships in bunches? Will he dominate over time the way he dominated a few weeks back? History suggests not.

Players who are truly great come along only once every era, and this era already has Sitting in a packed interview room Tuesday, though, McIlroy suggested yes.

"All I need to do is focus on my game, and, if I can do that, I know my good golf is good enough to win plenty more tournaments," he said.

That no one doubts. McIlroy's swing is a beauty reminiscent of other times, and his putting is good enough to carry him if that lets him down.

Whether it will happen this week is another matter. Although British bookmakers have made McIlroy a prohibitive favorite, only six players have won both the U.S. Open and British Open in the same year in the long history of both championships.

Erasing the inevitable hangover that comes from victory might be the hardest part for McIlroy.

"It will be interesting to see," said Graeme McDowell, a fellow Northern Irishman who won the U.S. Open last year, then promptly went into a slump. "It's going to be overwhelming for him. That's how it was for me last year."

Unlike McDowell, though, McIlroy seemed to be building for his big win long before it happened. He was in contention at three majors before finally breaking through, learning some painful lessons that served him well when he was poised to win his first major title at the U.S. Open.

He has led seven of the eight rounds of the two major championships so far this year, and managed to come back from a final round collapse at the Masters to lap the field at Congressional. Like a fighter who gets better after he wins a title,

McIlroy believes he will be better now that no one's asking when he will win his first major. "It has lifted a huge weight off my shoulders," he said. "Now I can talk about winning my second one after having won the first." It's hard to find anyone rooting against McIlroy adding that second major. The unassuming 22-yearold with a mop of curls has a connection with fans that even Woods would envy, and he brings excitement to a sport that has been badly missing it ever since Woods crashed his SUV one fateful Thanksgiving night.

'The thing about Rory is that he plays golf with a real flair and a real charisma, and I think fans are drawn to that," Phil Mickelson said.

Jury Seated for Clemens' Federal Perjury Trial

Ten women and two men will decide whether former baseball star lied to Congress about whether he used performanceenhancing drugs.

WASHINGTON (AP) • An overwhelmingly female jury with little interest in baseball will decide whether former pitching star Roger Clemens lied to Congress when he said he never used performance-enhancing drugs.

The jurors who took their seats Tuesday include a woman whose cousin, former outfielder Al Bumbry, was a coach for the Boston Red Sox when Clemens played for the team. Another woman on the jury said she believes Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Michael Vick was "done wrong" in his criminal conviction in connection with dogfighting.

The jury took shape after four days of questioning by U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton and lawyers for both sides. Clemens' defense team said the seven-time Cy Young Award winner will begin his defense by questioning the propriety of lawmakers' investigation into whether Clemens used performance-enhancing drugs. Opening arguments scheduled for Wednesday.

Both sides seemed to want to start with a blank slate and sought jurors who don't have many preconceived notions about the case or Clemens himself. When the Eagles fan said during questioning that she didn't know a thing about baseball, Clemens' attorney Rusty Hardin responded, "That's a plus."

The jury includes a 22year-old aspiring fashion designer who works two part-time jobs and cares for her young daughter and an older woman who said her three-times-a-week dialysis treatments will not keep her from attending the trial.

Another juror is a yoga teacher and lawyer who said she finds U.S. drug laws "a bit heavy-handed."

The two sides threw out the maximum number of 20 people before the jury of 10 women and two men along with four alternates were seated. The jurors themselves were not told who among them are alternates but they were told to avoid news and sports programs. To keep the panel from encountering the dozens of journalists at the courthouse, the judge told them they will meet off site each daily, be bused into a back entrance and use nonpublic corridors. They will be served breakfast and lunch in what was once a judge's chambers so they don't have to use the cafeteria where reporters, attorneys Clemens himself take their Clemens sat and watched final jury selection but didn't weigh in and left it to his lawyers to pick who will decide his fate. His wife, Debbie, was back home in Houston with their sons after being in court last week, Hardin said. She will be a witness in her husband's defense and will not be allowed to attend the trial until after she testifies, a fact Hardin explained to jurors who might otherwise wonder where she was.

Clemens' attorney Michael Attanasio revealed Tuesday that Clemens plans to begin his defense by questioning if lawmakers' investigation into whether he used performance-enhancing drugs was proper.

MLB Teams Reviewing Fan Safety at Stadiums

A Texas Rangers fan died last week falling from the stands trying to catch a ball thrown to him. This week, a fan at the Home Run Derby in Phoenix nearly fell over a rail trying to catch a home run ball.

PHOENIX (AP) • Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig says major league teams are reviewing stadium safety following the death of a fan at a Texas Rangers game last week.

The fan, 39-year-old Shannon Stone, fell over a railing while trying to catch a ball thrown to the stands by Rangers outfielder Josh Hamilton.

"It was a horrible accident, heartbreaking, almost beyond comprehension," Selig said Tuesday during a question-andanswer session with the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

"Each team determines its own ballpark safety features based on local laws.

"Maybe there's some things they can or can't do," Selig said. "Common sense should always take over in this situation."

The commissioner also said he had found more support than he had expected for a one-game playoff between wild-card teams if the playoffs expand from eight to 10 clubs in 2012.

He also said the 2013 All-Star game is likely to be at the Mets' Citi Field. While Selig said baseball would consider moving the All-Star game to a Wednesday in the future allowing pitchers who started the previous Sunday to participate — teams might be resistant because of their preference to play regular-season games on Thursdays.

Selig said that he was not interested in radical realignment that would eliminate divisions or make major alterations to the leagues, but it was possible one team could move from the NL to the AL to leave each league with 15 teams. Because the 2012 draft schedule already has been completed, that likely could not occur to 2013 at the earliest. The downside would be that interleague play would have to be spread throughout the regular season.

He also backed Derek Jeter's decision not to play in the All-Star game. The New York Yankees captain came off the disabled list last week and got his 3,000th hit Saturday. Jeter said he needed to rest because of the calf injury that had sidelined him.

"There isn't a player that I'm more proud of in the last 15 years than Derek Jeter. He's played the game the way it should be played. He's an even greater human being off the field," Selig said. "I think I would have made the same decision that Derek Jeter had."

Selig said the proposed sale of the Houston Astros was on track and that he thinks the Mets financial situation would be stabilized once the Wilpon family completes a deal for a cash infusion from David Einhorn, who once lived next to Selig in Milwaukee.

He also repeated his desire to reach an agreement with the players' association on an international draft and a slotting system for draft picks.

Timberwolves Fire Rambis After Two Years

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) •The longer the Kurt Rambis saga dragged on, the bigger the mess got for president of basketball operations David Kahn and the Minnesota Timberwolves.

The organization endured a torrent of criticism nationally for allowing Rambis to twist in the wind, tarnishing the team's image across the league while many accomplished candidates took other jobs as Kahn mulled the decision.

The long expected firing finally was officially announced Tuesday, ending uncertainty and awkwardness surrounding the head coach of the worst team in the more than three months of NBA last season. "People can argue about this should have happened and that should've happened, but I think collectively we felt that we were doing the right thing in terms of the way we approached it," Kahn said. "But I also recognize it took a long time. That's on me. And I realize that it can look more convoluted and complicated than maybe it really is, and that's on me. And to that extent I feel badly about that, too, and I apologize for that."

Kahn hired Rambis in 2009 to turn around one of the league's struggling franchises. But Rambis went 32-132 in his two seasons, including a league-worst 17-65 in his second year on the job.

The unusual sequence of events began at season's end, with Kahn holding his own press conference hours before the season finale on April 13 to say that he would take his time to make a decision on Rambis' future. The eventful summer also included Kahn asking Rambis to write a report on what he would change if he returned for a third season and offering a position in the front office if he quit.

Through it all, eyebrows were raised across the league, never more than in May when dozens of league executives came to Target Center to watch a group of draft prospects workout. Rambis showed up unannounced, even though he did not know if he would be back. Rambis wasn't fired until seven weeks later, long after being told he was not welcome at an introductory news conference for point guard Ricky Rubio or the draft on June 23.

It was somewhat similar to when Kahn was first hired in 2009 and let then-coach Kevin McHale dangle for weeks before ultimately deciding not to retain him.

"I wish it was easier to do," Kahn said of finding the right coach, mentioning that 19 have been fired since Rambis took the job in 2009. "I feel certainly the weight of having to do this. I don't want to say this at Kurt's expense, but obviously we need to do it better than the last one."

What Tired Legs? U.S. Women Ready for French Challenge

The United States women's soccer team takes on France today (9:30 a.m., ESPN) for a berth in the Women's World Cup finals.

MOENCHENGLADBACH, Germany (AP) •The Americans feel just fine, thank you, not tired a bit. The high they were on after that epic Brazil game? That's so yesterday.

The U.S. women are one game away from reaching their first World Cup final since 1999 — the last time they won soccer's biggest prize — and the only thing on their minds now is beating France.

"Losing is not an option," Abby Wambach said Tuesday. "We want to win this thing, and France is standing in our way right now."

The Americans are the top-ranked team in the world and defending Olympic gold medalists, yet they were almost afterthoughts when the tournament began two weeks ago. Two-time defending champion Germany was considered the heavy favorite, sure to get a boost playing on home soil. Then there was Brazil, runner-up at the last three major tournaments and led by Marta, FIFA's player of the year five years running.

And the U.S.? They had to win a playoff with Italy just to get here, and they'd been uncharacteristically inconsistent with three losses in a five-month

But the Germans are now spectators, stunned by Japan in the quarterfinals. Brazil is gone, too, losing to the Americans in a penalty shootout in one of the most exciting games ever at the World Cup, men's or women's. And the U.S.? They're still playing, and they go into today's semifinal with more than a touch of swagger.

"We have what it takes," Wambach said. "It's just a matter of putting it all together."

The biggest uncertainty for the Americans isn't their fitness, it's their backline. Rachel Buehler has started all but one game the last two years, and her bruising style of defense – isn't called "Buehldozer" for nothing has been vital. But she's suspended for the semifinal after getting a red card for taking down Marta in the box in the 65th minute Sunday.

While U.S. coach Pia Sundhage wouldn't say who will play in Buehler's place, Becky Sauerbrunn was working with the starters during training Tuesday.

"I've been fortunate enough to play with her (with the WPS' magicJack) so we're very connected that way," said Christie Rampone, the U.S. captain and its other central defender. "Becky and I feel confident together. We'll watch some film on France today, see what little tactics they have, what little tendencies they have with their forwards, communicate with each other and we'll be fine."

They will have to be because, much like Brazil, France has creativity and flair.

Playmaker Louisa Necib, she of the silken touch and deft passes, has been likened to Zinedine Zidane, the highest compliment a French player can get.

Her control of the midfield is masterful, the driving force behind France's quick, fluid offense.

"For us, it's very important to be patient," Sundhage said.

"We need to pick up the rhythm and dictate the tempo, and we need the midfield to get more involved. I don't want to make it a stretch game. Or make it a (physical) fight."

Griepel Lets Bike Do Talking at Tour de France

CARMAUX, France (AP) · After all the feuding and hard words, Andre Greipel finally got what he wanted and it had nothing to do with talk: a winning ride in the Tour de France.

The German sprinter beat Mark Cavendish his former teammate and sometimes adversary – by the length of a wheel Tuesday to capture the 10th stage of a three-week race that is soon to leave the flatlands for the perilous climbs of the Pyre-

Thomas Voeckler of France kept the yellow jersey after nestling safely in the main pack for most of the day. Defending champion Alberto Contador did much the same, and the Spaniard had even more reason to be careful after hurting his right knee during crashes in the fifth and ninth stages.

"At the beginning of the stage, I wasn't sure what to think," said Contador, a three-time champion. "But as the stage progressed my knee was feeling less sore."

Contador, the best climber in the world, trails main rivals Cadel Evans of Australia and Andy Schleck of Luxembourg by 1:41 and 1:30 entering Wednesday's flat run.

Tuesday's 98-mile trip from Aurillac to Carmaux ended with Cavendish applying brutal acceleration and seemingly headed toward his third stage victory in this Tour. Instead, Greipel got on his wheel and surged ahead in the last 20 yards, a winning leg in cycling's showpiece race at last secure.

Greipel and Cavendish clashed last year while on the HTC-Highroad team. Greipel, who now rides for Omega Pharma-Lotto team, was in a conciliatory mood.

"I have a lot of respect for Cavendish – he was won 17 stages of the Tour de France. Now I have one," Greipel said. "He was not always really friendly his comments (about) me. This is not my level. I just try to show on the bike what I am able to do. I always said to my teammates that we need to believe in our race and do our own things."

Cavendish is one of the most outspoken cyclists, his comments sometimes scathing. But after beating Greipel to win last Friday's seventh stage in Chateauroux – in much the same way Greipel beat him Tuesday with a late sprint - the two cleared the air.

"We had a chat after the Chateauroux stage and he said 'I have a big respect for your sprint," Greipel said. "I think he has shown he is one of the fastest sprinters on earth."

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Claude" for eight months. We are planning a trip in the fall to visit his family's chateau in France. Claude has long legs and refuses to travel in coach because it's uncomfortable, so he will buy a businessclass ticket for himself and a coach ticket for me.

While I'm grateful Claude is paying for my ticket, I feel that since we're a couple, we should travel together. I don't want to be upgraded to business class necessarily, but I'd like him to sit in coach with me. When I brought this up, he refused and is now calling me "ungrateful."

My feelings are hurt, and Claude can't understand why I am upset. My friends and family think he is acting rude and selfish. I can't help but agree. Do I have a right to be upset? I am so uncomfortable with this arrangement that I'm considering not even going.

- NOT UNGRATEFUL IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR NOT UNGRATE-FUL: San Diego to France is a LONG flight. It's a long time to expect a tall person to fold up like a praying mantis just so you won't be sitting alone in a coach seat on your way to an allexpense-paid vacation. Claude has good reason for wanting to sit in business class. So be a sport and offer to pay for an upgrade to business class and sit with him. I agree that you shouldn't be seated "10 paces behind him," and this way you would both be comfortable.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband, "Ken," proposed three years ago, he had a steady job with an income twice as high as mine. He was laid off before our wedding, but we went ahead with the marriage. After our wedding, Ken was unemploved for another year before finally finding a minimum wage job. After one year at that job, he was fired. He has since found another minimum wage position.

I am a young teacher. We live in an expensive part of the country. We struggle every day to pay for groceries, gas and other essentials. I wasn't raised to expect many frills in life and I am frugal, but there are certain things I always assumed I would have - a house of my own, children, a savings account. If I stay with Ken, I don't believe these things will ever be within my reach.

In all other ways, Ken is a wonderful man and I love him with all my heart. But is there ever a time when love isn't all you need?

- SECOND THOUGHTS IN ASHEVILLE, N.C. DEAR

THOUGHTS: You and Ken have hit a rough patch early in your marriage, but millions of Americans are even worse off - out of work and have given up trying to find any. When you married Ken you promised each other "for richer or poorer." This recession won't last forever and, in the meantime, you have a wonderful man you love with all your heart. Whether that's enough or not, only you can answer. But if you trade in this model, there are no 100 percent guarantees that the next one will be able to give you all you need, either. You may find that in order to get all you need, you'll have to do it on your own.

THE ACES ON $\mathsf{BRIDGE}^{\scriptscriptstyle (\!\scriptscriptstyle B}$

"The difficult we do immediately. The impossible takes a little longer."

> – Slogan of U.S. Army Service Forces

Eddie Kantar recently showed me a deal where everyone told him he couldn't have made his slam, only for him to discover a day later that the hand was cold. When Eddie reminded me of the deal (I was on the Dallas Aces, and one of his opponents), I thought I'd give you the challenge too. Cover up the East-West Kantar believes in opening one club with really strong hands that have 5-5 in the black suits. As it happened, this helped him wind up in six clubs, a great contract, but how would you have played it? West was dealt jack-third of trumps; East, a singleton.

Kantar simply drew trump, took two spade finesses, and went down. But afterwards he decided he should have won the opening lead in dummy with the queen, played the heart ace, discarding a spade, and ruffed a heart, stripping that suit. Next would come the three top clubs followed by overtaking the diamond king with dummy's ace, leaving the diamond 10 as a return entry to his hand.

With West stripped of safe redsuit exits, the stage is set to lead a spade to the jack. As it happens, West has both spade honors, so the best he can do is win and exit with a heart, yielding a ruff-sluff. Kantar could have ruffed with his last trump, discarding a spade from dummy. The spade ace and a spade ruff set up the spades, with the diamond 10 a re-entry to the South hand.

ANSWER: You have enough to try to obstruct your opponents by raising to three spades — even facing a third-in-hand pre-empt. But wouldn't you like a diamond lead against an eventual fourheart game? Best is to use three diamonds here as lead-directing with at least spade tolerance a gadget known as McCabe. All new suits at the three-level here are lead directing, even by an unpassed hand.

IF JULY 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: In August and September, you could drown in a sea of fantasies and may be more gullible than usual, so it is a good idea to get all of your loose ends tied up firmly in the next few weeks. Don't be lulled into a false sense of security, but get the oil changed in your car and your dental checkups completed now, too, because October and November could be months when any responsibilities you have ignored or failed to honor could come back to haunt you. Those are not months to begin anything of importance, but you can be successful with financial or career decisions December, when your business savvy is enhanced.

HOROSCOPE 对Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): There's no task you can't do when you put your mind to it. Make ideas a reality and get pet projects off the ground. The tasks ahead may be difficult, but you'll find that your stamina is greater than you realized.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There's no substitute for hard work. If someone doubts your commitment to a project, show them up by displaying an exemplary work ethic. The key to today's success is teamwork, not competition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't wander around in the dark. If you are unsure of what course of action you should take, don't hesitate to ask for advice from a trusted source. Once you've gained insights, the task will take care of itself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Enthusiasm can be contagious. The bigwigs want an increase in productivity and it is up to you to make it happen. Whistle while you work and soon your colleagues will be whistling along with you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't play the fool. You may feign ignorance when confronted with an issue. This may get you off the hook, but you'll have gained nothing from the experience. Share your knowledge with others to get the job done.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't lose sight of what is truly important. You may be waist deep in a new proj ect at work, while at the same time neglecting the needs of your loved ones. Be sure to give everyone a fair share of your time. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A boss deserves respect. If you feel that you are being made to perform tasks that that are not in your job description, speak up for yourself. Even a boss doesn't have the right to take advantage of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Slow and steady wins the race. You can take the quicker path and just get the job done or you can apply the extra time and effort to create a resounding and lasting success. Share your passions with others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do or do not, there is no try. Find the confidence and energy to tackle all the responsibilities set before you. Doubt is your enemy. Just like that little engine, if you think you can . you will.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go after big game. Show a little initiative and take on a project that will bring you the greatest recognition and reward. Don't be selfish with your time and talent. Lend a hand if someone needs it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A puppetmaster pulls the strings, but all anyone looks at is the puppet. You may feel that you are being manipulated to suit someone else's ends. In the end, however, you share the credit for the success.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep moving forward. If you he sitate on the road to success, you might get left behind. Stay one step ahead of everyone else by staying informed, alert, and enthusiastic. Put your high energy level to good use.

Teen Pleads Guilty in Smoke Shop Burglary

TIMES-NEWS

Caleb Faulkner's future may be up in smoke.

The 18-year-old Twin Falls man pleaded guilty to one count of felony burglary on Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court, nearly three months after police figured him for a pair of smoke shop break-ins. Faulkner was arrested in early April, suspected of using his truck to smash into the Smoke-N-Head smoke shop on Washington Street North.

When arrested at owner Allen Nagel's other location on Blue Lakes Boulevard, police allegedly found Faulkner in possession of merchandise from the smoke shop — including Hayze spice, an herbal incense some smoke for a marijuana-like high.

Prosecutors dismissed one other count of burglary and two counts of malicious injury to property in exchange for the guilty plea. They will recommend a three- to sixyear prison sentence, possibly suspended for a retained-jurisdiction program. Nagel said he intends to seek restitution as he suffered approximately $12,000 in damages to his stores.

Sentencing is scheduled for Sept. 6.

How T.F.'s Property Tax Rates Measure Up

By NICK COLTRAIN

Times-News writer

If the city of Twin Falls' early budget proposal holds true, then property tax rates will go up even though overall spending will go down.

It seems contradictory, but it's all a part of the machinations of property taxes process that could leave a homeowner paying more per $1,000 of a home's value but less overall if that value plummets. And, this early in the process, Twin Falls City Manager Travis Rothweiler said he needed to play an especially negative Nostradamus, predicting a substantial decline in the total property value of the city, to reach the 4 percent hike to property tax rates that's in his early city budget.

While the process is still early and everything about the Twin Falls city budget could still change, here's some basic facts about the city property tax rate:

How are city property tax rates set?

A city doesn't control its property tax rate outright — it only controls its spending. The

The potential 4 percent increase to the Twin Falls property tax rate — from $6.92 to $7.20 per $1,000 of taxable value — comes from Rothweiler's possibly "over-pessimistic" prediction of the city's decline in value.

The projected tax rate may also go down, if total value for Twin Falls — which includes new construction — remains about the same as it did last year. Rothweiler said he plans to get a better estimate from Twin Falls County Assessor Gerry Bowden.

Idaho Is Building Its Own Health Exchange

In an effort to retain state control, Idaho is preparing to create an insurance marketplace system within two years.

By KIMBERLEE KRUESI

kkrusei@magicvalley.com

Idaho lawmakers are continuing to fight for complete control of health insurance markets.

The Obama administration released proposed rules for insurance exchanges this week. The new rules will regulate the development of these virtual marketplaces.

The exchanges were a key feature in the health care reform law the president signed last year.

If a state chooses not to operate an exchange, then the federal government will step in and implement its own. However, state legislators seem determined not to let this happen.

The Department of Insurance and Health and Welfare created the Health Insurance Exchange Governance Workgroup to create a statebased exchange by 2013.

The group's description mandates that they will not mention the new health care reform law in their exchange-enabling legislation.

"We want an exchange that's good for Idaho and Idaho built, rather than the federal government imposing one on us," said workgroup member and state Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley. "We're going to build an exchange that the state of Idaho can regulate but is also federally qualified."

Earlier this spring, the Idaho legislator attempted to pass a bill that would nullify any implementation of the federal healthcare reform. Governor C. L. "Butch" Otter vetoed the bill because it included a ban on insurance exchanges.

By having the state develop its own exchange, the federal government would be unable to control the state's insurance market, Otter said in a letter to the legislator.

Local health insurance companies have also expressed an interest in having a state-based exchange
