Citizens Blast City on Eastland Move

The city of Twin Falls, wanting to make Eastland a five-lane arterial roadway, admits a mistake in staking and spray painting lawns to prepare for work.

BY NICK COLTRAIN
ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

In about mid-June, Mark Burgess found stakes driven in to his lawn on Eastland Drive in Twin Falls, and spray paint marking it up.

It was the day Burgess was supposed to have an open house with his real-estate agent, and two months after he poured several thousand dollars into preparing his house for the market. But with city workers having pounded in the stakes to mark 10 feet of lawn he stands to lose — a move Burgess contends is illegal entry to his property — he said his agent told him not to bother trying to sell.

He's now living in a trailer behind the church he pastors at in Heyburn, he said — unable to sell his Eastland house, thinking he will owe more than it's worth when Eastland is expanded to five lanes, and holding a moral aversion to bankruptcy.

He was one of more than two dozen people who showed up Wednesday at the Twin Falls City Council Chambers, and one of several people to blast city officials for what all parties agreed to be poor handling of rights of way along Eastland. The city is trying to expand North Eastland to five lanes, a multi-million project that will take 10 feet from many property owners along that corridor.

Next Up

The Twin Falls City Council will hear staff explain concerns and complaints about expanding Eastland Drive North at its Monday meeting. Officials invited concerned citizens to attend. The meeting will be at 5 p.m. at the council chambers, 305 Third Ave. East, Twin Falls.

Meanwhile, the Work Goes On

Work on Eastland Drive between Elizabeth Boulevard and Fourth Avenue is on track, City Engineer Jackie Fields said. The section of road is being completely rebuilt by PMF Inc. of Twin Falls for $419,000. Fields said the west side of the road will be finished in three or four weeks, leaving ample time for PMF to get the road open before school starts Sept. 6.

Lawmakers Still Eyeing Change to College Boards

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

JEROME • State lawmakers are still open to the idea of changing community college governing boards so that all counties in each college's taxing district have representation.

The idea was floated in the last legislative session, but that bill died. The effort followed the November 2010 election for two College of Southern Idaho trustee seats. The contested races resulted in a full slate of board members from Twin Falls County, but none from Jerome County after longtime board trustee LeRoy Craig of Jerome lost his seat to Karl Kleinkopf of Twin Falls.

The bill that died would have required CSI to divide its Twin Falls County and Jerome County district into zones based on population, while keeping unchanged the five-member size of the board.

The next effort will likely be much different. The details are far from

The annual Paint Magic program has set out to make Twin Falls a more colorful place by repainting 23 homes owned by seniors or the disabled community. Since 1986, the organization has painted more than 500 homes.

"He said he is really thankful for this," Darrel said as Kenton signed. "They are doing a lot of work."

Rod Burk, Paint Magic president, said around 500 volunteers split into 26 teams gave their time to this week of prepping and painting. But donations were short $3,000. Burk said each year is different — last year there was a lack of applications for homes to be painted, while this year the lack of

Jerome Schools Make Large Cuts to Cover $1.3 Million Budget Shortfall

BY AMY HUDDLESTON
ahuddleston@magicvalley.com

The Jerome School Board formally approved the district's proposed 2011-12 budget on Tuesday in a special meeting, bringing significant cuts across the board.

The district is working with $17 million — a $1.3 million drop from last year's funds.

State funding has dwindled increasingly each year and districts are looking at ways to offer quality education with less money. For Jerome, that meant decreasing supplies, materials and textbook funding by 10 percent. Teachers will be furloughed 8 1/2 days and 15 staff positions were cut, including eight certified teachers. Superintendent Dale Layne said the teacher eliminations were dispersed throughout the schools and only equal a 4 percent cut in certified staff.

"The hardest thing is dealing with personnel," said Brian Bridwell, business manager. "We had to tighten our belts for another year and we've tried to maximize federal funding."

Programs were slashed as well. Layne said the middle school golf program was hacked and the high school's debate team was removed, along with the night school. The J- Center, Jerome's alternative school, will extend its hours to 5 p.m. to accommodate those who need classes later in the day.

Assistant coach and the middle school athletic director positions are also going to be vacant in the upcoming year.

Jerome received more than $700,000 in additional state funding on Monday and Layne said he had hope for the future. The district will save the funds to buffer the next fiscal year.

"I'm optimistic about the economy and I hope we don't have to make any more reductions next year," he said.

donations kept three additional homes from getting new paint.

Since its inception in 1986, Paint Magic has painted 552 homes and partners with South Central Community Action Partnership to install new windows or additional needs.

The Walmart team stationed at the Hamletts' home supplies its own paint and equipment for the project. Other teams get theirs through sponsorships. Angela Crabtree, assistant manger at Walmart, said the home cost about $600 to $700 to paint.

"It makes the community look better and helps the low-income and elderly do something to their house that they wouldn't probably be able to get done," she said. "This is something that is right in their life and right in their day."

finalized, but legislators say one preliminary idea is to expand the size of each community college board from five members to seven and decide how many seats each county gets using its population as a guideline.

For CSI, that would mean two seats for Jerome County, said Rep. Frank Henderson, R-Post Falls, who is working on the bill. The north Idaho lawmaker said the change could assure that all property owners paying taxes to each of the three college districts would have direct representation on the board.

The other two colleges are North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene and the College of Western Idaho in Nampa.

In the Magic Valley, the issue came up on Wednesday at a legislative forum sponsored by the Jerome Chamber of Commerce.

Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, said her county had long enjoyed good representation on the board. She said the last election, while fair, showed a problem that wasn't anticipated.

"All of a sudden, it was taxation without representation," she said.

Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls and a member of the House Education Committee, said that while he's unsure how he'd vote, he's comfortable with the changes.

The last bill had some problems of fairness because it would have affected newly elected trustees, since it didn't increase the size of college boards, he said.

Thad Scholes, chairman of the CSI board, said in an interview that the issue will need more discussion, adding that a bill that would cover all three colleges would likely be complex.

"It's the Legislature's decision, but certainly we're going to want to give some input into the decision," he said.

The scene contrasted with one of the city's last major rights-of-way deals. When Twin Falls wanted to expand Washington Street, officials spent five years negotiating with property owners on a fair price per square foot. The process began with each parcel being assessed by a certified third party and then the city and the property owner negotiating until a price was agreed on.

This time, the window's much smaller. The city sent out the appraisal notices — containing offers many at the meeting called "robbery" — and hoped to begin the work this fall.

At the meeting, property owners' complaints ranged from never being notified the city was going to claim the right of way to getting what they said were unfairly low assessments for their property.

Some said they were offered as little as $2 per foot of right of way. For Burgess and several others, the battle now isn't about stopping what was called a "super highway" from running past their houses: It's about getting a fair price for what seems to be guaranteed construction.

"That's robbery," Burgess said of his assessment. "If you think we're not going to fight this, you'd be wrong."

City Manager Travis Rothweiler opened the meeting with an apology and a promise that this communication breakdown won't happen again.

"How we performed in this was not up to our standards as a city, or up to my standards," Rothweiler said.

Meet Xavier's New Principal

After a tricky year for the Twin Falls charter school, Everett Bomgardner sees good times ahead.

BY AMY HUDDLESTON
ahuddleston@magicvalley.com

Everett Bomgardner, a natural storyteller and a passionate advocate of classical education, recently moved from the busy streets of Cairo, Egypt, to the slower pace of Twin Falls — choosing to leave Africa in a chaotic time of change for a year of transitions at Xavier Charter School.

The school's new superintendent and principal comes with 37 years of education experience and has dabbled for years in the business realm in marketing, a health club and an insurance company. He's lived in various states and also internationally — claiming fluency in Spanish and knowledge of Arabic and German. The Colorado native has traveled the world and recently stopped in Jamaica for a short time, where he married Rosemarie Bomgardner Stephens on June 19.

He's used to adjusting to new situations and doesn't shy away from a challenge.

In Twin Falls, Bomgardner was attracted to the transitions the charter school was going through and said his education philosophies align closely with Xavier's mission.

"It's having a broad brush of everything," he said. "It's based on kids having a lot of knowledge about a lot of areas and knowing how to find things when they need it. We need to teach children to read things critically."

After a tumultuous year of administrative changes and a school board that lacked financial oversight of its management company, Paragon Schools, Xavier is moving into a new era of transparency.

The school has four new board members, a new superintendent and a new in-house business manager in Justin Lanting to handle the accounts.

Bomgardner said he couldn't have picked a better person for the position. The two men both have education and business experience, he said, something Xavier's administration has lacked in the past.

While many things remain to work through with last year's financial data, Bomgardner said he expects smooth sailing.

"Just watch and see," he tells people who wish him good luck in his new position. "Just like any good business, we have a great foundation to work with."

He said even with the drama-filled year, the teachers continued bringing quality education into the classroom and the students weren't affected.

"Our new board is really up to date and they want the same thing I want, which is transparency and to keep people involved," he said.

Jerome Sheriff Seeks Money to House Inmates, Provide Raises

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

The Jerome County Sheriff's Office is over budget for out-of-county inmate housing. Even if it gets a bump in next year's budget, it may not be enough.

Sheriff Doug McFall is asking county commissioners to approve $134,000 in fiscal 2012 — a $4,000 increase, 3.1 percent from this fiscal year — as part of a requested $1.73 million departmental budget.

The county jail, which is 35 years old, holds just 30 inmates.

"We're going to exceed it by quite a bit," McFall said of the cost to house inmates in other counties. According to a report provided by McFall, the department had already spent $84,598 — 65 percent of this year's allotted money — as of April, just halfway

By the numbers

Here's a look at selected line items requested by the Jerome County Sheriff's Office for fiscal 2012, as well as the total budget requested.

Category	Fiscal '11	Requested '12	% change
Salaries	$1,163,760	$1,281,568	10.1
Fuel	$58,000	$60,000	3.4
Housing (out of county)	$130,000	$134,000	3.1
Total budget	$1,571,689	$1,730,797	10.1

through the fiscal year.

"We don't think next year will be enough," he said, adding "we're optimistic about it right now."

McFall is also seeking extra money in a few other vital categories:

- Employee raises. McFall said he has recently lost people to other agencies that can offer a bigger paycheck. He proposes a 10.1 percent increase to his overall employee budget, which accounted for $1.16 million of fiscal 2011's $1.57 million budget.
- Fuel. The department requests a 3.4 percent increase for its 28 vehicles.

In total, the sheriff's office seeks a 10.1 percent increase from what commissioners granted in fiscal 2011.

"The budget pretty well speaks for itself," McFall concluded. "With the economy the way it is, we're hoping for some improvement. But I held it as tight as I could."

ITD Finishes Transition to New Driver's License

TIMES-NEWS

The Idaho Transportation Department announced on Tuesday the transition to central-issue driver's licenses is complete.

ITD introduced the new procedure for obtaining or renewing driver's licenses and identification cards in May on a staggered schedule across the state.

The process included removing equipment that formerly produced the cards at local Division of Motor Vehicles offices and installing new equipment.

Cards are now sent via mail from a secure location, which serves 24 states total.

Almost 30,000 Idaho

driver's licenses and ID cards were issued from May to June, when the switch was completed.

The revamped cards feature a new look and new security features, which the U.S. Department of Homeland Security claims help prevent card fraud.

The public can learn more about central issuance cards at itd.idaho.gov/dmv/centralissuance.htm.

Feds Ask City to Remove Lake Levee Trees

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is calling on the city of Coeur d'Alene to remove hundreds of trees that line the levee along Lake Coeur d'Alene.

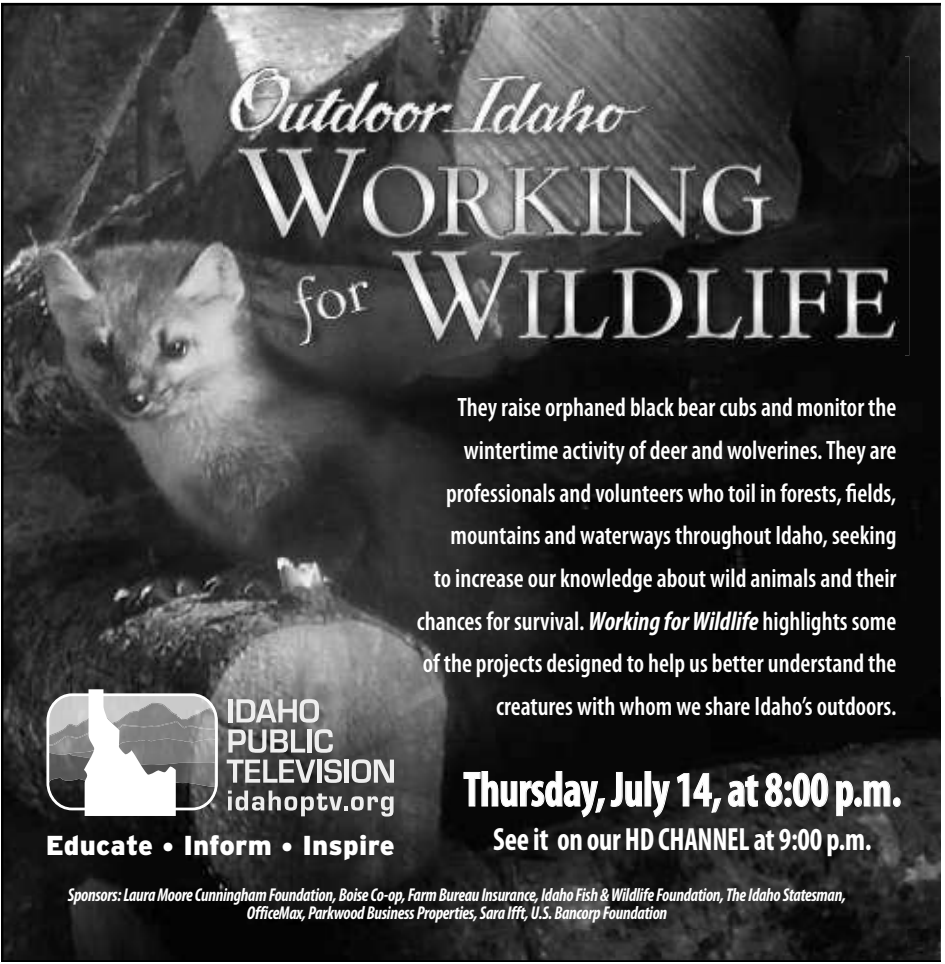

Agency officials say the trees along the levee are too big and are destabilizing the levee's soil.

City officials are considering the request, but acknowledge removing 500 or so trees may be unpopular with the public.

The levee runs along Rosenberry Drive, known by locals as "dike road," and draws thousands of people annually as a place to park for events at the local community college or events along the beach. It also includes a trail popular for walkers, joggers and bicyclists.

The levee was built in the 1940s and rules that it must be managed with the Corps' safety and flood control standards.

Sweet, Belated Vindication for Idaho’s Chief Budget Forecaster

Eighteen months ago, Mike Ferguson couldn’t get arrested in Boise.

The Idaho state government’s longtime chief economist had predicted the governor and the Legislature would have $2.43 billion in tax revenue to work with for the fiscal year 2011.

Preposterous, countered Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and the House Republican leadership. They said it would be more like $2.29 billion, and they budgeted accordingly.

Senior members of the budget-writing Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee were perhaps cautious about Ferguson’s forecast, but respectful of his track record. Ferguson had, after all, served three Republican governors — Phil Batt, Dirk Kempthorne and Jim Risch — before Otter came along in 2007. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, had worked with Ferguson for nearly 20 years, and House Appropriations Committee Chairwoman Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, for almost as long.

More fundamentally, Bell and Cameron understood that budgeting to a dubious $2.29 billion revenue figure would mean big cuts in core state programs — education and Medicaid — that couldn’t be easily reversed even after economic conditions improved.

Actually, Ferguson — who retired last December — turned out to be a little conservative with his prediction. When the state closed the books on June 30, it had collected $2.444 billion in taxes for the year.

So the question must be asked: Were Otter and the GOP legislative stalwarts simply wrong back in January 2010, or did they intentionally low-ball their forecast for political reasons?

“The thing that I think changed, and that is worrisome, is that the governor and the Legislature have taken to essentially rejecting the work of professional economists that are hired and paid a salary to do that work,” Ferguson told the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash., this week. “... people’s lives and health are at stake, people’s futures are at stake, in terms of the quality of the education system, the way that people receive services relating to health care, disabilities.”

“... the year and a half ago that my forecast was rejected, that was the first time ever that a governor had rejected the professional forecast and expressly adopted something different. And that happened again this year. So basically, there’s a pattern emerging.”

And not just in the realm of economic crystal-ball gazing. During the last legislative session, the Idaho Attorney General’s Office was frequently asked if bills being considered were unconstitutional. On a half dozen occasions — on union-busting, nullification of national health care, a 22-week limit on abortions in Idaho — the state’s lawyers said yes.

Didn’t matter. The Legislature passed them and Otter signed them anyway.

Which leaves two possibilities: Either legislators and our governor are becoming too smart to require professional advice, or they’re engaging in social engineering — damn the consequences to real people.

Ferguson knew what he was talking about. So did Chief Deputy Attorney General Brian Kane, who wrote most of the legal opinions that lawmakers rejected.

Can we say the same for lawmakers themselves?

Meet John Boehner, a Herder of Cats

John Boehner is in a box.

The House speaker’s Republican caucus doesn’t entirely trust him. His understudy, Majority Leader Eric Cantor, has set him up for a fall with the Tea Party set. Worst of all, his political arch rival is now praising him.

“Speaker Boehner and myself had been in a series of conversations about doing the biggest possible deal,” President Obama announced at a news conference Monday morning, confirming reports of their clandestine meetings. “I want to say I appreciate Speaker Boehner’s good-faith efforts.”

If this weren’t damaging enough for Boehner, Obama added that “I have a stake in John Boehner successfully persuading his caucus that this is the right thing to do.” Obama further vouched that “Speaker Boehner has been very sincere,” adding: “I think he’s a good man who wants to do right by the country.”

It was possibly the biggest interparty kiss since Joe Lieberman planted one on President George W. Bush — and an hour later the speaker called his own news conference in the Capitol so he could wipe the presidential lipstick from his cheek. “I appreciate what the president said today,” a somber Boehner replied. “But the gulf between the two parties now is about policy.”

Boehner is right. The gulf is about policy: the policy of his Tea Party backbenchers not to compromise on anything. This has put Boehner, a dealmaker, in the impossible position of leading a House Republican caucus that is inherently ungovernable.

As The Washington Post’s Paul Kane expertly documented, it was largely Boehner’s idea to use the debt-limit vote as a way to strike a “grand bargain” that would restore the nation’s finances. Surprisingly, Obama went along with it, offering some $4 trillion in spending cuts and putting on the table reforms to Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and the tax code.

quick brown fox All Obama sought in exchange for these concessions was a tax increase equal to about a third of the size of the spending cuts. But when Boehner took that sweet deal to Cantor and House Majority Whip Kevin McCarthy, they told him the caucus would balk. Last weekend, Boehner shut down the grand-bargain talks.

A puffy-eyed Obama, appearing with his top advisers in the White House briefing room Monday morning, voiced sympathy for Boehner. Asked by CBS’s Chip Reid whether the real obstacle was the “Tea Partiers on the Hill,” Obama concurred: “His politics within his caucus are very difficult.”

Asked by National Journal’s George Condon whether Boehner could deliver the votes of his caucus, Obama replied that “the politics that swept him into the speakership were good for a midterm election; they’re tough for governing. And you know, part of what the Republican caucus generally needs to recognize is that American democracy works when people . . . are willing to make some sensible compromises to solve big problems. And I think that there are members of that caucus who haven’t fully arrived at that realization yet.

Cantor clearly has not. Minutes after Obama finished his news conference, the majority leader sat with reporters at a table on the third floor of the Capitol to offer his response. “We are not going to raise taxes — that’s all,” he proclaimed. As for Boehner, Cantor maintained that they are “on the same page” and that any suggestion to the contrary was mere “soap opera.”

The star of this soap opera, meanwhile, was scrambling to reassure his restive caucus that he would never even think about suggesting a tax increase. “Anyone that knows me and knows my record knows I’m not going to agree to a tax hike,” he told radio host Laura Ingraham.

Boehner did not dispute an estimate presented to him by Fox News’ Chad Pergram that 80 to 120 House Republicans — a third to half his caucus — would oppose an increase in the debt limit with or without a tax increase. And he declined a request to name a concession his own side could support.

“I agree with the president that we cannot allow our nation to default on our debt,” he said. “But to prevent a default, a bill must pass the Congress, and a bill that doesn’t meet these tests” — that is, a bill with a tax increase — “can’t pass the House of Representatives.”

Normally, a speaker would twist arms until he won support for the grand bargain he had negotiated. But in this House Republican caucus, leaders are followers.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Luna’s, Otter’s Vision Reeks of Self-Interest

Tom Luna and Gov. Otter are in bed together! They have an illicit relationship, diminishing Idaho schools effectiveness and growth! Their vision is self-oriented, self-interested, myopic in scope and direction! Their leadership (lack of) limits the potential of Idaho students! The ability to compete and fulfill hopes and desires requires exposure and involvement at the earliest possible moments in one’s life!

I speak from experience and was in the California school system in the ’50s! After graduating high school, school budgets and programs were cut; hence, my point! Visionaries and artists struggled and students relied on calculators and computers to get the answers rather than using their heads (knowing how to get the answers)! People moving here from California, Oregon and Washington expect more!

Firms That Donate Will Reap Rewards

Sunday, I cut out and pinned to my kitchen bulletin board Leah Dow’s letter to the editor where she listed those businesses and services who contributed labor or goods preparing the Habitat for Humanity home she received.

Why would I save her letter? I believe in paying it forward, so when I need someone to work on my heating and air conditioning or electric or when I am hungry for donuts, I’ll look for someone listed in that letter to give my shopping dollar. They gave of their goods and services, so I will reward them by shopping from them. What goes around, comes around.

Just sayin’ thanks for all you are doing — you big-hearted people!

Driver to Serve 8 Months in Crosswalk Fatalities

He testified during trial that he believed the couple had waved him through the crosswalk the morning of incident.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • A driver who struck and killed a Boise couple in a crosswalk two years ago will serve eight months in jail and lose his license.

John Tiemann was sentenced Wednesday for the August 2009 deaths of Tom and Mary Woychick, who were hit while walking home from church. A jury convicted Tiemann of two counts of misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter in May.

During sentencing, Tiemann apologized to the family of the victims.

He testified during trial that he believed the couple had waved him through the crosswalk that morning.

Prosecutors argued Tiemann is blind in one eye, has limited peripheral vision in the other and had a responsibility to take extra care while driving. They also argued he was reckless for driving while on medications that could cause impairment.

Idaho Cattle Group to Back Felony Animal Cruelty Law

By JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Under threat of a voter initiative, an Idaho cattle group says it supports legislation to punish third-time animal cruelty offenders with a felony.

The Idaho Cattle Association's feeder council voted unanimously at a recent meeting to pursue the bill in 2012, according to the association's July newsletter.

Idaho, North Dakota and South Dakota are the only states without felony animal cruelty penalties. Agriculture groups have long been wary of removing Idaho from that list, for fear any new law could be used by groups opposed to ranching or animal agriculture to fight these traditional activities.

The association's feedlot group says getting behind legislation now will help it control the outcome — and show the public that cattle producers take pride in caring for their animals.

A phone call to the Idaho Cattle Association wasn't returned. But according to the newsletter, "Members felt as though it was important for the ICA to take initiative on the matter so that the association can control the outcome of the bill."

The association says the feeder council's vote will serve as a policy guide that will be taken up at the Idaho Cattle Association Annual Convention in Sun Valley in November.

The Idaho Humane Society, Stop Torturing Our Pets, and other animal welfare groups are now gathering signatures for a 2012 ballot initiative under an umbrella group they're calling Idaho 1 of 3.

Their initiative, on file with the Idaho Secretary of State's office, would define animal torture and make such crimes a felony on the first offense. For animal cruelty, the measure would increase misdemeanor fines to $400 for a first offense, up from a current $100 fine, and triple fines for a second offense to $600.

It would also make a third animal cruelty conviction within a 15-year period a felony, punishable by between six months and three years in prison and a $9,000 fine.

Virginia Hemingway, president of Idaho 1 of 3, said any measure — regardless of whether it's a bill in 2012 or an initiative that November — should address animal torture. She said her group may support a bill next legislative session, but it will depend on how it is written.

"We're after two groups of people: People who torture animals, and the repeat offenders," Hemingway told The Associated Press.

Jeff Rosenthal, Idaho Humane Society director, said Wednesday the Idaho Cattle Association council's vote was good news and likely reflects a common-sense, locally crafted approach to a long-unresolved issue.

"They're very much a major player in the state, and if that represents their collective stance, that's very encouraging," Rosenthal said.

In 2009, an animal cruelty bill that teamed Idaho's agricultural community and animal welfare advocates including Hemingway went nowhere, in part due to opposition from the national group Humane Society of the United States that feared it left a loophole for puppy mills.

The Humane Society of the United States is separate from Rosenthal's group, but its involvement in past debates — and the perception among Idaho agriculture groups that the organization has a radical agenda — has the Idaho Farm Bureau leery of any new measure, too.

Univ. of Idaho Extension Office in Jeopardy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COEUR D'ALENE • The fate of a University of Idaho extension office in Kootenai County is uncertain as local government officials weigh budget cuts.

Kootenai County Clerk Cliff Hayes plans to recommend that local government officials end the $160,000 in annual funding for the 95-year-old university center based in Coeur d'Alene. Hayes has an Aug. 1 deadline to present his budget plan to county commissioners, the Coeur d' Alene Press reports.

The extension programs benefit the community but with restricted revenues, the county must focus on essential services such as law enforcement, said Hayes, a Republican who ousted longtime Kootenai County Clerk Dan English, a Democrat, during the November 2010 election with 60 percent of the vote.

"The taxpayers of this county cannot afford to fund everything people would like us to fund," Hayes said.

The university will no longer kick in the other $260,000 in funding for the center if the county's contribution stops, said Jim Wilson, who heads the extension office. The center will have to wait until county commissioners approve a final budget before any decisions are made, Wilson said.

"Until we have that information, it's a little bit premature for us to come out and say anything, because things could change," Wilson said.

Gretchen Hauser is among local residents who are protesting the potential cuts to the center, which runs the local 4-H Youth Development program. The group is making phone calls and writing letters to local government officials in opposition of the potential move.

The center provides research and educational programs in subjects including forestry and horticulture. The 4-H program provides kids with something positive to do, said Hauser, a 58-year-old who volunteers with the program.

"I know money is tight, it's tight for everybody," Hauser said. "But you have to look at the long-term ramifications."

Injured Idaho Soldier Returning to U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COEUR D'ALENE • Military officials say a Coeur d'Alene soldier injured in a Baghdad attack that killed two other Idaho soldiers is heading back to the United States.

Idaho National Guard

spokesman Col. Tim Marsano says Staff Sgt. Jason Rzepa is handling the situation well.

Insurgents attacked Rzepa's convoy with an explosive last Thursday. Killed in the blast were 24-year-old Spc. Nathan Beyers and 20-year-old Spc. Nicholas Newby, both residents of Coeur d'Alene.

The 30-year-old Rzepa suffered serious leg injuries in the attack. He had been taken to Germany for treatment.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reports that Marsano declined to comment on the details of Rzepa's injuries and was unsure which military hospital the soldier was headed to.

The soldiers were assigned to the 116th Cavalry Heavy Brigade Combat Team, based in Post Falls.

McGee Stalls GOP Vote on His Leadership, Probe

Lawmaker said it was tradition that such resolutions be vetted by the executive committee, of which he is a member — even though such a procedure isn't required by the party's bylaws.

CALDWELL • Southwest-Idaho Republicans wanting to weigh in on whether state Sen. John McGee should remain the local party chairman and be investigated following an embarrassing June 19 drunken driving incident were stymied when the 38-year-old lawmaker helped block a vote Tuesday.

At a Canyon County GOP Central Committee meeting, McGee succeeded in diverting a resolution to the group's executive committee, rather than holding an immediate vote.

McGee is the Idaho Senate's majority caucus chairman and fourth-highest-ranking official. He pleaded guilty to drunken driving earlier this month after he took a car without the owner's permission and damaged it, then fell asleep inside.

Central Committee member Ronalee Linsenmann's resolution called for a probe of McGee's "drunken actions" and a vote next month on whether he should remain as county chairman.

But McGee said it was tradition that such resolutions be vetted by the executive committee, of which both he and Linsenmann are members — even though such a procedure isn't required by the party's bylaws.

"It's been the tradition, Ronalee. That's how we do resolutions," McGee told a protesting Linsenmann, according to an audio recording of the exchange provided by the Idaho Press-Tribune. "Especially on something as serious as what you're proposing."

"That's the decision of the chairman, and that's unappealable," McGee, R-Caldwell, told a standing-room-only crowd of 100 at the county courthouse.

McGee appeared to have significant support from those in the audience, with one man chastising Linsenmann for her insistence that the resolution be considered. This scolding drew applause.

During a roughly eight-minute statement, McGee apologized to the local party faithful for his behavior — much like he did July 3 in Ada County court when he pleaded guilty to the drunken driving charge in exchange for having the felony count of taking a vehicle that didn't belong to him dropped.

"You know that is not who I am," McGee said. "I'm very embarrassed of that behavior."

While McGee again described his behavior as uncharacteristic, he didn't repeat the explanation that his lawyer, Scott McKay, provided in court to Ada County Magistrate Judge James Cawthon: The senator got drunk at a golf tournament, fell and suffered a concussion that triggered his actions.

McGee has so far declined to provide medical records underpinning his concussion claim — he hasn't returned multiple phone calls from The Associated Press — and Linsenmann's resolution called for a committee of five to seven people to gather those as part of an investigation.

McGee made it clear that he's not backing away from public life. In addition to remaining in the Senate, he'll also keep up volunteer positions, including as chairman of Caldwell-based College of Idaho trustees.

Sgt. Jeff Edwards said Geisser was arrested without incident at a home in Ammon.

Idaho's Crapo Cancels Town Hall Amid Deficit Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo of Idaho postponed an online town hall meeting with constituents as lawmakers and the White House continue talks on how to reduce the federal deficit and whether to raise the limit on what the government can borrow.

Crapo had planned to host the event with constituents late Wednesday but then canceled, saying discussions in Washington, D.C. were expected to go into the evening. The Idaho Republican says the nation is facing an "acute fiscal crisis."

A policeman controls the crowd at the site of an explosion at Dadar in Mumbai, India, on Wednesday. Three explosions rocked India's busy financial capital at rush-hour Wednesday, killing at least eight people and injuring 70 in what officials described as another terror strike on the city hit by militants nearly three years ago.

MUMBAI, India • Three coordinated bombings tore through the heart of India's busy financial capital during rush hour Wednesday, killing 21 people and wounding 141 in the worst terrorist attack in the country since the 2008 Mumbai siege.

Bloody bodies were strewn in the dirt of Mumbai's crowded neighborhoods and markets. Doors were ripped off storefronts, motorcycles were charred and a bus stop was shredded. After the blasts in three separate neighborhoods, police set up checkpoints and were put on high alert.

The bombings came just months after peace talks resumed between India and Pakistan, which New Delhi has blamed for past attacks.

Arup Patnaik, a top police officer, said the attackers used improvised explosive devices in the attack, hidden in an umbrella in the Jhaveri Bazaar jewelry market and kept in a car in the business district of Opera House.

The third blast in Dadar area was caused by an explosive device concealed in an electric meter at a bus stop, the Press Trust of India news agency said.

Prime Minister Manmohan Singh condemned the blasts and appealed to the people of Mumbai "to remain calm and show a united face."

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, and Indian officials refused to speculate on who might be behind the blasts.

Indian officials have accused Pakistan's powerful spy agency of helping coordinate and fund earlier attacks, including the Mumbai siege, which killed 166 people over three days. Peace talks between the countries were suspended after the siege and resumed only recently.

Pakistan's government expressed distress about the loss of lives and injuries soon after Wednesday's blasts were reported.

U.S. President Barack Obama also condemned the "outrageous attacks."

"The American people will stand with the Indian people in times of trial, and we will offer support to India's efforts to bring the perpetrators of these terrible crimes to justice," he said in a statement. "I have no doubt that India will overcome these deplorable terrorist attacks."

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said she will go ahead with her plans to visit India next week despite the bombings. Standing with India "is more important than ever," she said.

The bombings began with an explosion that ripped through the

Suspect Allowed to View Child Porn in Washington Jail

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) • A legal loophole is allowing a Washington state man accused of child sex crimes to view child pornography in jail.

Weldon Marc Gilbert is acting as his own lawyer in the case, and that means he's entitled to review the evidence.

The evidence in the case includes more than 100 videos seized from Gilbert's Lake Tapps home after his 2007 arrest. Authorities say some of the footage was shot by Gilbert.

"Make no mistake — I don't like it," Pierce County Sheriff Paul Pastor told KOMO-TV. "But it is not my choice whether to do it or not to do it. ... There's no question that this makes me grind my teeth."

The materials normally would be contraband at the Pierce County Jail, but restricting Gilbert's access to the videos could result in a mistrial, the station reported Wednesday.

"We don't want to do it, but we have to follow the law," Pierce County prosecutor Mark Lindquist said.

Gilbert worked as a pilot and is accused of using offers of flying lessons, money and alcohol to lure more than a dozen boys to his home, where police say he then molested them.

When Gilbert views his videos, he is with an investigator in a room visible to jail guards, KIRO-TV reported.

Gilbert pleaded guilty in federal court in 2009 to producing child pornography, and received a 25-year sentence. But, The News Tribune reported, the deal was contingent on Gilbert also pleading guilty in state court to sex crimes, with prosecutors recommending a sentence of no more than 17 years, to run concurrently with the federal sentence.

When a judge told Gilbert his state sentence could be as long as life in prison, he withdrew his guilty plea.

GOP Leaders: Nation Can't Afford to Default

The executive and legislative branches of federal government continue debt-limit talks in the nation's capitol.

WASHINGTON (AP) • Hope dimming for a broad debt-limit deal, Congress and the White House scrambled Wednesday to salvage deficit-reduction talks while top congressional Republicans said the nation cannot afford to default on its obligations — for economic reasons and their party's own good.

Ahead of a fourth negotiating session at the White House in as many days, Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell defended his proposal to give President Barack Obama new powers to increase the nation's borrowing limit without GOP support.

"I refuse to help Barack Obama get re-elected by marching Republicans into a position where we have co-ownership of a bad economy," McConnell said on a radio talk show, contending that letting the nation go into financial default would give Obama reason to blame Republicans for the negative fallout.

House Speaker John Boehner added his own warning against default, even as he expressed frustration with the White House over its role in negotiations to trim long-term federal deficits.

"Nobody wants to go there, because nobody knows what's going to happen," he said of a potential financial default. "It's a crapshoot."

In comments to a small group of reporters, Boehner said he has not been able to get commitments from the president and his White House team about cutting big entitlement

LAWMAKER: US AIRPORTS ARE NOT SECURE ENOUGH

WASHINGTON • U.S. airports are still vulnerable to terror attacks, despite billions of dollars invested in security enhancements since 9/11, a Republican congressman said Wednesday.

Rep. Jason Chaffetz, R-Utah, led an inquiry into what he described as the Transportation Security Administration's security deficiencies. He cited government statistics of more than 25,000 security breaches at U.S. airports since November 2001 — an average of slightly more than five security breaches a year at each of the 457 commercial airports.

The TSA has said that number is misleading and represents a small fraction of 1 percent of the 5.5 billion people screened since the 2001 terror attacks. A security breach is broadly defined to include instances ranging from a checked bag being misplaced after it went through security screening to a person who was caught in the act of breaching security and immediately apprehended, the TSA said.

A Pakistani health worker, left, visits families to inform them on polio in Peshawar, Pakistan, in December 2010. Pakistani officials and international health organizations expressed concern on Wednesday that reports of a phony CIA vaccination program meant to obtain DNA evidence that Osama bin Laden was hiding in a Pakistani town could harm legitimate immunization programs in the country.

CIA VACCINATION RUSE SPARKS FEAR IN PAKISTAN

Health organizations are worried that the CIA hindered vaccination programs for diseases such as polio as a means to hunt Osama bin Laden.

BY SEBASTIAN ABBOT
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD • Pakistani officials and international health organizations expressed concern Wednesday that a phony CIA vaccination program meant to obtain DNA evidence in the hunt for Osama bin Laden could harm legitimate immunization programs in the country.

This fear is especially pronounced because of the rising problem of polio. Pakistan was the only country to record an increase in cases of the crippling disease last year and now has the highest incidence of polio in the world.

Vaccination programs to combat polio and other diseases in Pakistan were already hampered by fighting with Islamist militants that blocked access by health workers to certain areas, especially in the northwest. Some Taliban commanders have also declared vaccines as against Islam.

The CIA recruited a Pakistani doctor to run a Hepatitis B vaccination drive in the northwest town of Abbottabad in March in an attempt to get DNA from bin Laden's children and confirm the al-Qaida chief was holed up there, the British Guardian newspaper first reported earlier this week. The Associated Press has confirmed details about the vaccination program from U.S. officials.

The Guardian said it wasn't clear if the alleged scheme helped confirm bin Laden's presence, but cited one source as suggesting the attempt failed. The U.S. went ahead with a covert Navy SEAL raid that killed the al-Qaida chief in Abbottabad on May 2.

Neither the White House nor the CIA would speak about the program. A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity because the program remains secret, said the decision to use vaccinations as a cover was a rare move that reflected the seriousness of the hunt for bin Laden. Intelligence officials were under pressure to confirm bin Laden was in the compound before the president risked American lives.

Pakistani health officials held meetings about the CIA scheme on Tuesday and expressed concern that it could have a negative impact on immunization programs in other areas of the northwest, especially in Pakistan's semiautonomous tribal region along the Afghan border, said a Pakistani official involved in polio eradication efforts. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the subject.

Michael O'Brien, a spokesman for the International Committee of the Red Cross in Pakistan, expressed concern that the CIA program could make it more difficult for medical officials in other parts of the country to administer critical vaccines.

"Anything that compromises the perception and impartiality of medical personnel undermines the activities of medical personnel everywhere, especially in places where access to health care is badly needed and security conditions for health care workers are already difficult," O'Brien said.

famed Jhaveri Bazaar jewelry market at 6:54 p.m. A minute later, a blast hit the busy business district of Opera House, several miles (kilometers) away in southern Mumbai. At 7:05 p.m., the third bomb exploded in the crowded neighborhood of Dadar in central Mumbai, according to police.

Because of the close timing of the blasts, "we infer that this was a coordinated attack by terrorists," Home Minister Palaniappan Chidambaram said.

A lifeless body lay on a cart. Survivors carried the wounded to taxis. One man was dragged out of the area on a red board used as a stretcher. Bleeding victims crowded into the back of a cargo truck to be taken to a hospital, where wards were filled with the wounded, slathered in white burn cream.

At Jhaveri Bazaar, a witness described two motorcycles exploding in flames and saw at least six bodies.

"People were shouting 'Help me, help me,'" the man told Headlines Today television.

People hugged and wept. Crowds gathered in the blast areas as police questioned witnesses, and investigators wearing gloves sifted through the debris for clues.

The government said the blasts killed 21 people and wounded 141 others.

"India is not going to cow down," Cabinet minister Farooq Abdullah said. "Let those perpetrators of this terror remember, we will find them and Inshallah (God willing) we will give them the justice that India believes in."

A U.S. official said there were no immediate claims of responsibility, or firm indication of which terrorist group might be behind the attack. The official spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss matters of intelligence.

The blasts marked the first major attack on Mumbai since 10 militants laid siege to the city for 60 hours in November 2008. That attack targeted two luxury hotels, a Jewish center and a busy train station.

C. Uday Bhaskar, a defense analyst, said the bombings showed that Mumbai remained vulnerable despite precautions taken after the 2008 attack.

Some media incorrectly reported Wednesday's blasts happened on the birthday of Ajmal Kasab, the only surviving gunman from the 2008 Mumbai attacks. Kasab, who was sentenced to death in Mumbai, was born on Sept. 13.

The city has been on edge since the 2008 attack. In December, authorities deployed extra police on city streets after receiving intelligence that a Pakistan-based militant group was planning an attack over New Year's weekend.

In March 2010, Mumbai police said they prevented a major terrorist strike after they arrested two Indian men, who, police said, were preparing to hit several targets in the city. In September, police issued a terrorism alert for the city during a popular Hindu festival.

programs. He said that "dealing with them the last couple months has been like dealing with Jell-O."

McConnell's and Boehner's remarks came amid a flurry of debt-related developments Wednesday that reflected the rising urgency of an Aug. 2 deadline to increase the government's borrowing authority or fall into a first-ever default.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke warned lawmakers that their failure to raise the nation's borrowing limit could trigger a major financial crisis. He said that if the government defaults on its debt, it would throw "shock waves through the entire financial system."

Adding pressure, the Treasury Department said Wednesday the federal budget deficit was on pace to break the $1 trillion mark for a third straight year. The deficit totaled $971 billion for the first nine months of the budget year. With three months to go, this year's deficit will probably top last year's $1.29 trillion, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

In one hopeful sign for compromise seekers, Republican Sen. Tom Coburn said he might rejoin the so-called Gang of Six, the bipartisan group of senators who have been working for months to reach a bipartisan agreement on a big deficit-cutting deal that would blend spending cuts with a tax code overhaul.

And several lawmakers initiated steps that they said were designed to ease the impact of a default.

McConnell's proposal stood as the most ambitious effort to address the debt limit if negotiations between the White House and congressional leaders fail.

The plan would, in effect, guarantee Obama requests for new government borrowing authority unless Congress mustered veto-proof majorities to deny him. The plan would permit

Obama to secure increases in the debt ceiling — needed for the government to pay its debts — and would let Republicans avoid politically damaging votes.

While McConnell appeared to accept the dire consequences of a government default, a group of conservative lawmakers discounted their own leaders' fears that defaulting on the nation's debt would be disastrous.

GOP presidential hopeful Michele Bachmann was one of three House members Wednesday who disputed Obama's assertion that a default would mean that Social Security recipients might not receive their checks after Aug. 2. The Social Security Trust Fund is financed by government securities — the ones that the government would not be able to guarantee in a default.

A two-hour negotiating session Tuesday produced no progress after a day of poisonous exchanges between Democrats and Republicans.

Explaining his plan, McConnell said on the Senate floor Wednesday that it would "make the president show in black and white the specific cuts he claims to support. If he refuses he'll have to raise the debt ceiling on his own."

"But he's not going to get Republicans to go along with that."

In an interview with radio talk show hostess Laura Ingraham, McConnell also said: "When we cannot force a result, we need to do the next best thing, and that is to clarify the differences between the parties."

McConnell's proposal immediately ran into stiff opposition among tea party conservatives and seemed unlikely to pass the House, but neither the White House nor House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, dismissed it out of hand.

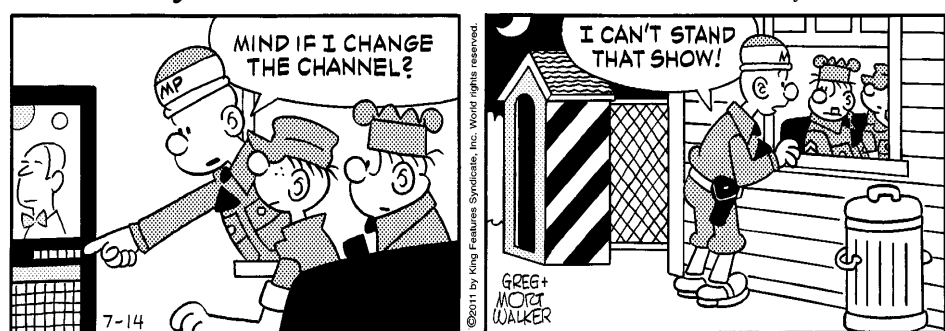

Obama has said he does not want to address the debt ceiling incrementally. But on Wednesday, White House spokesman Jay Carney merely said McConnell's idea was "not the preferred option."

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

NEW YORK (AP) • The Dow Jones industrial average jumped as many as 164 points, or 1.3 percent. Most of those gains evaporated later in the day after Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas President Richard Fisher said in a speech that the Fed had already “pressed the limits of monetary policy.”

The Standard & Poor’s 500 index rose 4.08, or 0.3 percent, to close at 1,317.72. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 44.73, or 0.4 percent, to 12,491.61. The Nasdaq composite rose 15.01, or 0.5 percent, to 2,796.92. Indexes had fallen over the previous three days. Energy and materials stocks rose more than the overall market as investors bought companies that would benefit most from an upturn in the economy. Heavy equipment maker Caterpillar Inc. rose 1.6 percent, the most of any of the 30 stocks in the Dow average.

Budget Deficit on Track to Top $1 Trillion with 3 Months to Go

WASHINGTON (AP) • The federal budget deficit is on pace to break the $1 trillion mark for the third straight year, ratcheting up the pressure on the White House and Congress to reach a deal to rein in spending.

The deficit totaled $971 billion for the first nine months of the budget year, the Treasury Department said Wednesday. Three years ago, that would have been a record high for the full year.

With three months to go, this year’s deficit will likely top last year’s $1.29 trillion gap, according to the Congressional Budget Office. But it is expected to come in below the record $1.41 trillion reached in the 2009 budget year. The budget year ends Sept. 30.

Water Where Jobs Are Wanted

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

A crew from Irminger Construction Inc. works Wednesday on a water line along Hankins Road in Twin Falls.

Facing a size limit of 30,000 square feet for industrial buildings, the Twin Falls URA hopes to up the limit with a $2 million waterline.

BY NICK COLTRAIN
ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

When a massive new water line in southeastern Twin Falls starts to flow, so will the jobs.

That’s the hope of Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency Executive Director Melinda Anderson. She said she’s gotten several inquiries from manufacturing companies seeking to relocate to that part of Twin Falls — but their interest would immediately evaporate when they learned of water issues in the area.

The current water system for the area south of Kimberly Road, between 3300 East and Hankins Road, only provides enough fire protection water for buildings no bigger than 30,000 square feet.

That’s a problem, Anderson said, because the current market is on the hunt for buildings of 100,000 square feet or more. So, the Urban Renewal Agency launched the $2.1 million water line project to make the space possible for the large buildings. Irminger Construction Inc. of Boise broke ground on the project this week. Construction is expected to last until the end of October, as 1.6 miles of pipe are installed. The pipe will travel down Kimberly Road from Hankins to 3300 East, and south until the railroad track.

“This is about jobs,” Anderson said. “Getting more jobs and bringing more jobs to this entire community.”

The extra water, up to 4,000 gallons per minute, will most immediately benefit the largely vacant Jayco Industrial Park, Anderson said. But it could also be a boon to all the surrounding properties, which will gain stronger fire hydrants and the ability to tie into the water line, if owners want to do so.

The farmland surrounding the work site doesn’t have the infrastructure the Jayco Industrial Park does — the latter is essentially ready to go, water flow aside, Anderson said.

“This is the closest thing that we have to a large-size piece of property in the city of Twin Falls that is ready to go,” Anderson said. “Right now, this is our best opportunity to get something on the ground sooner rather than later.”

Derald Bontrager, president of Jayco, largely echoed Anderson, lauding the jobs the expansion will likely bring to the community and calling it “definitely a plus” for anyone in the area.

“It’ll certainly benefit the sale of those properties and open the door to some construction that may not have otherwise been feasible, not only for our property, but some properties along the way,” Bontrager said.

He said his company has been working with Anderson on the project for sometime.

Bernanke: Fed Ready to Act if Economy Worsens

WASHINGTON (AP) • Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke told lawmakers Wednesday the Fed is ready to act if the economy gets weaker. He warned them that allowing the nation to default on its debt would send “shock waves through the entire financial system.”

Underscoring how fragile the economy remains two years after the Great Recession, Bernanke laid out three new steps the Fed could take, including a fresh round of government bond purchases designed to stimulate economic growth.

“We have to keep all the options on the table. We don’t know where the economy is going to go,” Bernanke told the House Financial Services Committee.

The Fed chairman stopped short of promising anything, but Wall Street appeared comforted that the central bank was poised to act. The Dow Jones industrial average was up more than 150 points during his testimony to Congress, and closed up 45.

The nation was creating about 200,000 jobs a month this spring. But hiring slowed almost to a standstill in June, with 18,000 new jobs. It takes about 125,000 a month just to keep up with population growth.

Netflix Price Hike Angers Users, Some Drop Plan

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Some Netflix customers called it a slap in the face. Others a betrayal. Many threatened to drop the movie service.

On Wednesday, many of them vented on Twitter, Facebook and elsewhere, seething over Netflix Inc.’s decision to raise its prices by up to 60 percent for the millions of subscribers who want to rent DVDs by mail and watch movies online.

By Wednesday afternoon, more than 40,000 people had responded to a post on Netflix’s Facebook page announcing the change, with some saying they would switch to rivals such as Hulu.com’s paid service and to Redbox’s DVD-rental kiosks.

Outrage bubbled on Twitter, and on Netflix’s blog a posting about the new plans had garnered 5,000 comments — the limit allowed by the site’s host, Google Inc.-owned Blogger — which included many seething customers.

On Tuesday, the company said it was splitting up its two services, which means that subscribers who want both streaming video and DVD-by-mail access will have to get separate plans that cost at least $16 per month total.

Netflix had been offering both services as a single package that was available for as little as $10 per month. The price changes took effect immediately for new subscribers, and will begin Sept. 1 for current Netflix customers.

‘The Fowl Life’ with Chad Belding Goes Duck Hunting in Idaho

Award-winning national television series “The Fowl Life” with Chad Belding continues its third season on the Sportsman Channel and WILD TV beginning 2 a.m. today. Hosted by renowned hunting guru and outdoorsman Chad Belding, the show takes viewers into the lives of Team Fowl Life as they chase water-fowl throughout the United States and Canada. This week, it focuses on Idaho.

The team goes behind the scenes to call animals such as mallards, puddle and diver ducks, and geese into close range.

Idaho’s expansive land and lakes are home to many flocks of one of the most recognizable ducks in the world. As the flocks of mallards migrate, Team Fowl Life uses decoys and calls to rein in the fowl for close range.

Team Fowl Life heads out to hunt mallards with the help of Chad Ryan and Jake Low. Ryan is an expert waterfowl hunter and dog trainer, and Low is an up-and-coming competition duck and goose caller.

You can view part one of the Idaho hunts at 10:30 a.m. Saturday and 9:30 p.m. Sunday; and part two at 2 a.m. July 21, 10:30 a.m. July 23 and 9:30 p.m. July 24.

Ross Falls Trail Is Low-Impact Getaway

Want to give the family a taste of nature without committing to anything strenuous? This hike is for you.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

HANSEN • Voices from somewhere within the hills. Then a couple of minutes later, like ghosts walking through walls, six figures emerged from the canopy of thick forest, chatting and laughing.

These weren’t spirits, but Julian and Griselda Escobedo and their four young children, who on July 8 hiked Ross Falls, a 1/3-mile trail in the South Hills.

“It was short,” Julian said. “I wish it were longer. But it’s good for kids.”

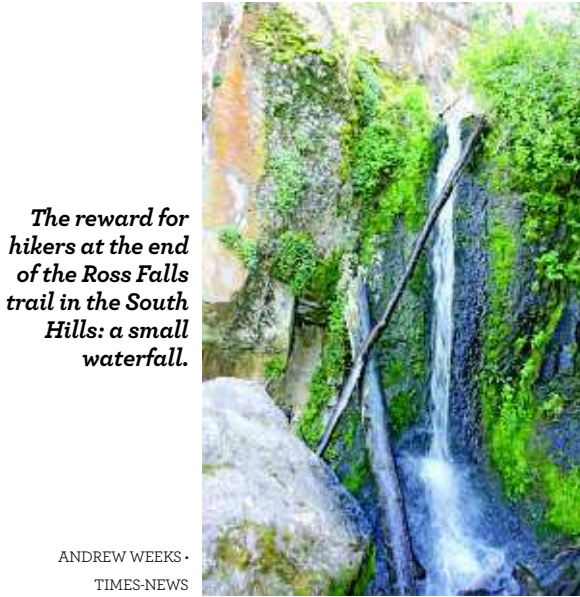

The Twin Falls family enjoyed what they found at the end of the trail: a small but pretty waterfall.

The trailhead, flagged by a sign, sits just south of a parking area about two miles north of Magic Mountain Ski Resort. You won’t get much of a workout here, but the Ross Falls trail offers your family a bit of nature they can hear and feel.

Please see Hike, O3

Elk-Calling Pro Comes to Twin Falls

A hunter specialist, Dieter Kaboth, is scheduled to visit Twin Falls to teach elk-calling techniques.

Kaboth, who hails from northern Idaho, will present his seminar from 6-8 p.m. July 27 at Sportsman’s Warehouse in Twin Falls.

Kaboth is a well-known elk hunter and caller, who’s won competitions in the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation World Elk Calling championships.

A former regional director and life member of the foundation and past president of Chinook Archers, Kaboth has logged more than 300 radio and television interviews from all over the world.

His philosophy: “You don’t have to be an elk-calling champion to call elk in close, but you do have to be a good hunter to be able to be successful consistently.”

Setting Sail

Some people enjoy their motorized watercraft, but a growing number of Idahoans, such as this Twin Falls couple, are taking to the water with their sailboats.

BY EVA STUTZMAN
estutzman@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Motorboats, ski boats and fishing boats are all expected sights on Idaho’s many lakes and reservoirs. But off in the distance at one southern Idaho lake, a sail rises from the water atop a 20-foot sailboat owned by Steve and Julie Davis.

I was caught off guard when I first saw the Twin Falls couple setting up their sailboat at Lake Walcott in June.

Within the first few minutes of talking with them, however, I began to understand why sailing is a perfect pastime for these Idaho boaters.

“I don’t know what it is, it’s just fun,” said Steve, a teacher at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls. “You are always trimming the sails and watching the wind. It’s a thinking man’s sport.”

While Steve likes the excitement, Julie likes the calm, relaxing atmosphere of the sailboat.

“I’m happy just sitting here reading a book,” Julie said. “You aren’t moving quickly, you can enjoy the birds; there’s just a lack of noise when there’s no one else on the water.”

There is no lack of wind to propel the Davises favorite outdoor toy. In fact, on occasion the couple have run into too much wind. On July 8, Julie and Steve were concerned the wind might be too strong to get the sail up. They’ve had to turn back because of uncontrollable conditions before.

“You just don’t have the control you need when the wind is that strong,” Steve said.

Wind speeds above 20 mph can make the water choppy and gusty winds make it hard to control the sail, he said.

The fact that the boat is propelled by wind is part of why Julie enjoys sailing instead of other types of boating.

“I like that it’s green,” Julie said. “I don’t like the idea that we aren’t changing the water.”

Their sailboat has a small Honda 75 horsepower motor, which they only use when the wind dies or when moving to and from the dock.

Most of the time, their boat glides along with the wind on Lake Walcott, Lucky Peak Reservoir and C.J. Strike Reservoir as Steve tacks and jibs to direct the boat where they want to go.

Space Probes Are Exploring the Solar System from End to End

As any history buff knows, the 15th and 16th centuries are known as the Age of Exploration, when Europeans sailed beyond the Mediterranean to find and colonize unknown lands. Will 23rd century historians describe our current explorations of the solar system in such romantic terms?

Columbus and his forebears began with reconnaissance missions to chart the new territories, with longer stays coming after. So has been the pattern with planetary missions, which commenced with Mariner 2’s, flyby of Venus in late 1962. Mariner 4 flew past Mars in 1965, but before any other new worlds were visited, landers and orbiters had been deployed.

Chris Anderson

The Soviets crashed Venera 3 onto Venus’s surface in 1966, Venera 7 soft-landed on Venus in 1970, and Mariner 9 became the first planetary orbiter (around Mars) the following year.

As of today, probes have flown past every planet, and one (New Horizons) will fly by Pluto in 2015. The MESSENGER probe (Mercury’s first artificial satellite) has been orbiting the innermost planet since March. The European Space Agency’s Venus Express has been studying Venus’s clouds from orbit since 2006. Mars has three working orbiters (NASA’s Mars Odyssey and Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter, and ESA’s Mars Express) and one working rover (Opportunity).

There are no spacecraft currently at Jupiter, but the Juno orbiter is scheduled to launch next month. Cassini has been orbiting Saturn since 2004. And Saturday, if all goes as planned, the Dawn probe will begin orbiting the second largest main belt asteroid, Vesta.

The Apollo landings notwithstanding, it’s going to be many decades before humans begin to colonize the solar system. But the fact that new, close-up images are posted in the Internet daily from nearly every planet may well be what makes this the New Age of Exploration.

Next column: Hubble’s successor.

WILD WOLVES

Idaho Fish and Game Surveys Public on Wolf Hunt

BOISE • Want to howl about Idaho’s new wolf hunt?

The Department of Fish and Game is all ears.

The Idaho wildlife agency is gathering public opinion about its plans for the upcoming season, including the proposal not to have kill quotas in much of the state.

The proposal and survey questions can be viewed at Fish and Game’s website.

Fish and Game officials already say they’ll survey 1,000 randomly selected hunters and 2,000 members of the public about the proposed wolf season.

But for anyone else interested, the questions will be posted on the website along with a spot to offer comments, with the results to be presented to the Idaho Fish and Game Commission at the panel’s July 27-28 meeting in Salmon.

The comment deadline is July 24.

Sailing

Not only does the couple spend many days out on the boat, but they take advantage of the overnight ability sailing provides.

“I won’t camp on the ground,” Julie said. “But I’ll spend the night on the water.”

The Davises boat boasts a galley kitchen and a small cabin that allows them to lay anchor and stay on the water for days at a time.

Finding their boat, which is named after their granddaughter Maddy, might have been the hardest part of sailing. There aren’t any sailboat retailers in the Magic Valley, so the couple went online and eventually settled on buying a boat from Steve’s brother-in-law, who currently sails on the ocean in a much bigger boat. For parts and supplies they have to go to Boise where there is a marine store, Steve said. Other boaters have been accepting of the open-water sport the Davises have brought inland.

“A couple of weeks ago the motor stopped working and a guy was right there to give us a tow,” Julie said. “The boating community has been so friendly.”

Sailing is becoming increasingly popular in Idaho; there are annual regattas at Lake Cascade, Lake Lowell and Lake Payette as well as sailing associations in Boise and Sandpoint.

Preparing the boat for sailing and breaking it back down takes more than a half hour and controlling the boat can be strenuous.

Sometimes the Davises envy other boaters that just pull in and put their boat in the water, but for them the experience of sailing is worth the extra work.

Eva Stutzman can be reached at 735-3288 or estutzman@magicvalley.com.

The Davises named their boat after their granddaughter, Maddy.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments

Question: Fred wrote: “I filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy in April. My uncle Donald passed away in July. Donald’s personal representative just told me that I am in the will and should receive about $50,000. My bankruptcy attorney says I have to give the money to the Bankruptcy Trustee. Can’t I just dismiss my bankruptcy and keep the money?”

Answer: The filing of a bankruptcy creates an “estate”. All assets that exist on the date of filing become part of the estate and can be liquidated for the benefit of your creditors unless the assets are exempt under state law. Idaho law provides sufficient exemptions so that most Idaho debtors do not have any assets liquidated. However, the Bankruptcy Code specifically identifies inheritances that you become entitled to within 6 months after filing your bankruptcy case as property of the estate just as if the inheritance had existed on the date your case was filed. The Bankruptcy Court would not approve dismissal because your creditors are entitled to the money in your estate. Since Idaho law does not exempt your inheritance, uncle Donald’s bequest to you will be used to pay the claims of your creditors and to pay administrative expenses of your case. After the expenses and claims are paid, the rest of the money will be returned to you.

Summer Science — Eastern Idaho Youth Get Creative with Nature

THE POST REGISTER

IDAHO FALLS • Last week, 10 hungry youngsters studied, created and munched on bird's nests at Freeman Park in Idaho Falls.

As part of the Museum of Idaho's Junior Rocky Mountain Adventure Summer Science Camp, elementary school-aged students learned about and explored eastern Idaho's environmental elements.

"We learned that (bird's nests) can be made out of sticks, mud and other gross things, like regurgitated food," 10-year-old Abby Hansen said.

Though the group tried to be as accurate as possible, they bent nature's rules when it came to snack time.

"Since we learned about birds and bird's nests, we're going to make our own bird's nests. But I can guarantee you it's not regurgitated," instructor Zoe Jorgensen said.

The children laughed and chatted as they molded a mixture of noodles, peanut butter and marshmallows into their own "bird's nests," complete with jelly bean and raisin "eggs."

Throughout the week-long camp, Jorgensen and the kids examined bugs, plants, animals, water and the solar system.

"This gets them out in their own backyards," Jorgensen said. "We learn about keeping the earth healthy. All our activities revolve around getting children outside and involved in nature."

While exploring Thursday at Freeman Park, the group waded through a creek to find sediment, insects and plants hidden beneath the cold current.

A few youngsters were surprised to find minuscule freshwater mollusk shells or insect eggs.

While learning about different plants and animals, Taylor Hill, 7, said she thought the lessons could come in handy if she was ever lost or stranded outdoors.

"If I got trapped in nature, I'd know how to get out of it and I'd know what (natural resources) I can use," she said.

Campers didn't only study the environment, but they learned how to preserve it.

Grady Prairie, 8, huddled over a dish of water contaminated with oil. He and fellow campers used spoons, feathers, paper towels, cotton and filtering sponges to soak up the oil.

Though the oily water looked harmless, Grady said, it could harm animals and plants in nature.

"First of all, fish swim in the water and fish have gills to get air through the water," Grady said. "If there's oil in the water, the fish couldn't get their air. (Learning to clean up oil) could help with saving the environment."

Though the Museum of Idaho's campers preserved nature on a smaller scale last week, the children agreed the lessons could help in future careers.

"The reason why I choose to do this is because science has been interesting to me since I was really little," Grady said. "I've always dreamed of being a scientist and helping the environment."

Bow Fishing Helps Keep Archery Skills in Shape

Question: "I recently saw an outdoor program about bow fishing for carp? What are the rules for shooting fish with a bow and arrow?"

Answer: Bow fishing is a great summertime diversion from target shooting and 3D shoots. It also keeps archery muscles in shape and your eye sharp and ready for judging distance.

Idaho Fish and Game Commission rules prohibit archery as a method of take for all game fish, but nongame fish species such as carp, suckers and the northern pike minnow (formerly squawfish) are legal quarry for bow fishing, with no limits.

A valid fishing license is required when bow fishing; however, the archery validation, required for big game hunting, is not needed. The bow-fishing season is closed if the season for taking game fish with hook and line is closed.

Nongame fish are not required to be salvaged, so "waste" is not an issue when discarded. But all nongame fish taken should be disposed of in a lawful and ethical manner. Large numbers of carp left to rot along beaches and in areas frequented by the public would be prosecuted for littering.

Carp, the most commonly bow fished species in Idaho, also provide some good eating. At this year's sportsmen's fish fry at the Magic Valley office, about 40 pounds of deep-fried carp fillets were scarfed down. And Dick Wallace, one of my well-respected professors at the University of Idaho, used to can a mean pickled carp with onions and spice.

Hike

After chatting briefly with the Escobedos, I set my own boots upon the trail — and was swallowed by the forest.

The trail began at an incline but leveled out briefly a couple of minutes later where a small stream presented itself. A wooden bench there invites hikers to enjoy the forest — so dense they can't see the vista beyond.

It became thicker the farther I walked. Lush ferns reached for each other from either side, and sunlight filtered through the trees.

Griselda had told me to be careful, that parts of the trail had sheer drops. I found the drop to my left about halfway on the trail, and if I had slipped would have been cushioned — or splintered — by hundreds of plants and shrubs that crawled up the hillside.

Just a few minutes later I began to hear the rushing of water.

Julian was right. The hike was short. But like a leprechaun finding gold at the end of a rainbow, I found the waterfall cascading from a tall rock wall. The trees opened up, allowing afternoon sunlight to stream down and glisten against the cool, clear water.

"The waterfall is nice," Griselda had said. "The kids will want to come again."

I think I will, too.

Dense forest reaches across the Ross Falls trail, a narrow dirt path that takes hikers to a waterfall. Ross Falls is a low-impact trail good for families.

Largemouth Bass Deliver Explosive Hits on Topwater Lures

BY BRENT FRAZEE
McClatchy Newspapers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Bob Greene was witnessing the calm before the storm.

It was 5:45 a.m., and the surface of the private lake he was fishing was glass-calm. The only signs of life were the occasional flickering of minnows in the shallows.

But that was about to change.

When Greene cast a top-water lure to the edge of a laydown, he made one pull and the bait made a loud blooping sound. Then another.

The third time, a bass hiding under the branches couldn't take it. It crashed to the surface and pounced for the kill.

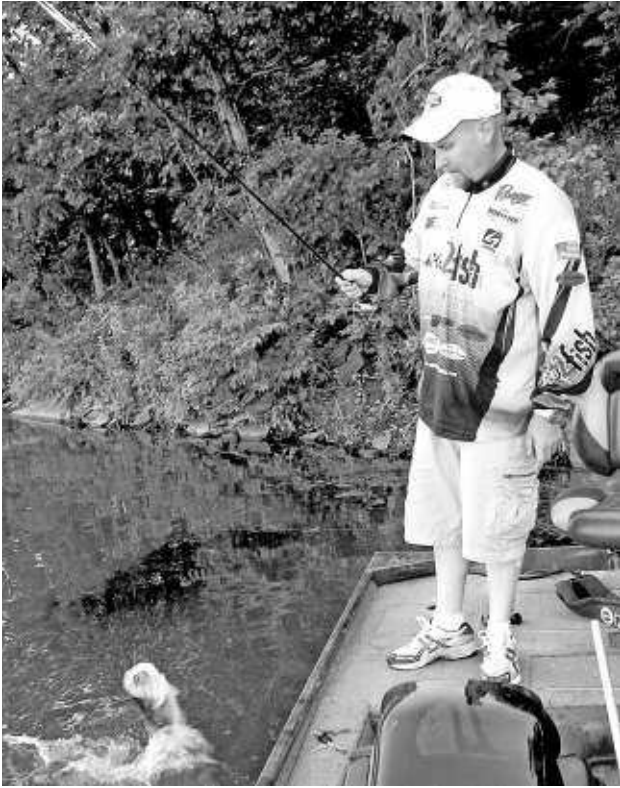

Then it discovered its prey had hooks. And the fight was on.

The bass jumped, shaking its head as it tried to get free. But in a matter of seconds, Greene had the fish in the boat and was admiring his catch, a bass he estimated at 3 to 3 pounds.

"I just love that when they come up and make a swirl so big that it looks like someone flushed the toilet or threw a bowling ball in the water," Greene said with a laugh. "That's when the adrenaline gets pumping."

That's part of the reason Greene, a tournament fisherman from Leavenworth, is so attached to topwater fishing.

When he dreams, he sees

BRENT FRAZEE • KANSAS CITY STAR • MCT
Bob Greene brings an energetic largemouth bass to the boat after hooking him on a topwater lure. Greene was fishing a private lake in the Kansas City, Mo., area.

the wake of a big bass stalking a topwater lure wobbling across the surface in an erratic manner.

That dream has become reality many times in Greene's fishing career. He remembers a hot July day last summer when he was fishing a tournament at Mozingo Lake.

On only his second cast of the day, a huge bass erupted on the Spro Popping Frog he was working across matted weeds.

After a short fight, he pulled a 6.33-pound largemouth into the boat.

"I was targeting holes in the matted weeds," Greene said. "When I pulled it into one of those holes and let it sit for a second, that bass just crushed it."

It's experiences like that one that has Greene hooked on topwater fishing. He still remembers the first bass he caught on a surface lure.

"When I was a kid, I bought more lures than I knew how to use," Greene said. "I had this Jitterbug and I was working it across the water, not really paying much attention. All of a sudden, this bass just came up and attacked it."

"I got it in and I thought I had caught the biggest bass in that lake. But in reality, it was probably about a 2-pound fish."

"But to a kid, that was an exciting deal."

That excitement has never worn off. Greene still thrills to the sight of a bass hitting on top.

Consider the trip to that private lake Tuesday morning. Greene started fishing a Zara Spook, a bait that zig-zags across the water in an erratic manner.

But the bass quickly showed Greene that they didn't want any part of it. So he switched to a Lucky Craft G Splash, a popper-type lure that makes more of a commotion. And that made a huge difference.

On Greene's first cast, a healthy bass shot to the surface and attacked the bait when it paused. Once that fish was unhooked and set free, Greene cast for more.

Two hours later, Greene and I had caught and released 21 bass on topwater lures. We later added another 22 bass on small plastic lures.

But it was the topwater fishing that excited Greene. When he goes fishing, it's always part of his repertoire.

He usually restricts his use of topwater lures to prime time — either at dawn or dusk or overcast days.

But he will tell you that it is more than just casting the lure out and bringing it back in. There is strategy involved.

"You have to let the fish tell you what they want,"

Greene said. "It can be different every day."

"You saw what happened today. The bass didn't want the quieter baits that didn't throw off much water. They wanted something that made a commotion!"

Paddlers to Complete Columbia River Trip Friday

BY TOM PAULU
The Daily News

LONGVIEW, Wash. • Lewis and Clark may have paddled down the Columbia River six years before David Thompson, but Thompson's adventures two centuries ago are equally remarkable.

A group of modern paddlers who will stop in Kalama and Longview hope to spread the word about Thompson as they retrace his 1,100-mile route down the Columbia.

Paddlers in the David Thompson Columbia Brigade started June 1 at Invermere, British Columbia. By now well-tanned, the crew will reach the mouth of the Columbia at Astoria on Friday, 200 years to the day after Thompson completed his trip.

"I think David Thompson is at least as important as Lewis and Clark," said Brigade leader Ross McDonald of Invermere.

Consider that Meriwether Lewis and William Clark traveled about 8,000 miles on their round-trip, two-year expedition between the mouth of the Missouri River and the Pacific Ocean.

During his career as a surveyor for the Hudson's Bay and North West fur-trading companies, Thompson traveled more than 56,000 miles through western Canada and what is now the northwest United States. He mapped 1.5 million square miles and is regarded as the world's greatest surveyor. Some of his maps were used for a century before more accurate ones were made.

Still, McDonald said Thompson is much better known in Canada, particularly its northern parts, than the United States.

When Thompson paddled down the Columbia in 1810-11, he hoped to beat John Jacob Astor's sailing expedition to start a fur trading post at what is now Astoria. Astor, however, won the race by two months.

Thompson traveled with five French-Canadian paddlers, two Iroquois paddlers and boat-builders and two Salish-speaking interpreters. Their cedar-plank canoes frequently leaked.

The re-enactors' brigade paddles in nine unsinkable fiberglass canoes and has a platoon of support people in vehicles waiting every night. McDonald said "at any given time, we have about 100 paddlers," some of them from as far away as Hawaii and Wisconsin. About 50 will be paddling at one time.

It's a natural voyage for several men in their 20s from Thunder Bay, Ont.

They work as historical interpreters at Fort William Historical Park, a place Thompson once visited.

"We're traditional fanatics," said Graham McGuire.

Noel Bene' 'Ben' Rambo

Oct. 3, 1958-July 5, 2011

Ben was born to C.L. and Lillian Rambo and grew up in Murtaugh. He graduated from Murtaugh High School and attended one year at CSI, where he met Holly Peck.

Ben and Holly were married Feb. 24, 1978, and resided in Twin Falls, where Ben started work at the Kellwood Stocking Plant until moving on to Falls Brand Independent Meat Co. He was employed by Falls Brand for the next 27 years, working his way up the ladder and ending in the position of plant supervisor. In February of 2005, he was retired from Falls Brand due to developing the auto-immune illness of "Evans Syndrome." It was at this time he and Holly moved to Boise to be closer to their boys, Ben's doctors and to try and find a new job.

During periods of remission, Ben worked a year at Micron, went back to school and earned his welding certificate and worked for Reyco Co. before his illness resulted in his being disabled. He loved making items out of metal which he sold in local Boise stores and also gave to family and friends. He loved hiking, camping, fishing, gardening and being with his family and cat "Beulah."

Ben leaves behind his wife of 33 years, Holly; his sons, Blake (Heather) and Eric (Hollie); and new grandson, Hagan, all of Boise; his mother, Lillian; brother, Gene (Sue Ann) of Murtaugh; his sister, Susan (Phil) Perry of Lacombe, Wash., and many nieces, nephews and extended family. He was preceded in death by his father, C.L. (Jim); and all of his grandparents.

The family wishes to express their sincere appreciation to Dr. Paul Montgomery, all of the MISTI staff and his friends "family" of St. Luke's 4 O.P. 4 South and his friends of 9 East for their care, love and support.

Cremation is under the direction of Summers Funeral Home in Boise with a memorial service planned for 1 p.m. Friday, July 22, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. In lieu of flowers, for those wishing to make a donation, please visit your local Red Cross and donate a unit of blood in Ben's name or donate to the charity of your choice.

Donald Ray Mallory

May 25, 1931-July 12, 2011

PAUL • Donald Ray Mallory passed away Tuesday, July 12, 2011, at the age of 80 at his home in Paul.

Don was born May 25, 1931, in Burley, Idaho, the seventh child of 13 children born to Dellroy and Emma Drucilla (Bailey) Mallory. He had seven brothers and five sisters, Garnold, Max, Elaine (Eldon) Brooks, Gerald (Adrienne), Nyle (Fontella), Lola Wageman (John) Jones, Hazel (Bob) Solomon, Ruth (Gareth) Swatzel, Larry (Sheryll), Wayne, June (Albert) Hodge and Russ (Denise).

He married Betty Lafferty in 1954, and they were blessed with two children, Connie and Wayne. They were later divorced. He met the love of his life and eternal sweetheart, Mary El-dredge, in Twin Falls, and they were married and sealed in the Salt Lake LDS Temple in 1975. With this union, Don's family increased with the addition of Mary's children, Jerry and Kathy.

Don was born and raised on a farm southeast of Burley in the Unity area and was taught the value of hard work by his parents. While he was a typical youth, what they taught him carried over into his adult life.

Shortly after high school, he took a job with Farm and City Distributing, where he worked for several years. After moving to Twin Falls, he continued in that line of work at D and B Supply. He later worked for his brother-in-law as a foreman of a concrete business where they built concrete ditches and mangers. His final career work was for the State Highway Department, where he worked as a road maintenance worker at a very remote location in Riddle and later as a foreman in Bruneau, just west of Mountain Home. He retired in 1996 and moved to Paul, where he resided until his death.

Don was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He had served as a counselor in a branch presidency and bishopric, was a member of a stake high council and served many years as a bishop. He was a faithful home teacher and, at the time of his death, was teaching in the High Priest group. He was always valiant in his church callings, yet felt he was never doing enough.

Don had a long and good life and developed many close relationships, but he was also a very private man who didn't enjoy large crowds or party games. He had a strong testimony of his Savior, Jesus Christ, and will be met joyfully by a large number of family on the other side of the veil. These individuals include his parents; his daughter, Connie; three brothers; five sisters; and in particular his eternal companion, Mary, whom he missed after her death four years ago beyond words to express.

He is survived by his son, Wayne (Deborah) Mallory; stepchildren, Jerry (Margaret) Sharp and Kathy (Ed) Wall; 15 grandchildren; many great-grandchildren; and four brothers, Gerald, Nyle, Larry and Russ Mallory.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 16, at the Paul LDS Stake Center, 424 W. Ellis St. in Paul, with Bishop Shannon Brown officiating. Burial will be in the Paul Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, July 15, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 1 until 1:45 p.m. Saturday at the church.

Gladys A Kraemer

March 17, 1920-July 6, 2011

RATHDRUM • Gladys A Kraemer, 91, passed away at Generations Assisted Living in Rathdrum on Wednesday, July 6, 2011.

She was born to Julius and Anna Garz on March 17, 1920, in Drummond, Idaho. She graduated from Ashton High School. Gladys met her husband Leonard at a church function while he was here from Nebraska working in the harvest on his uncle's farm. He came back a year later for the harvest, and they married on Oct. 24, 1939, in Idaho Falls.

Once a farm girl, always a farm girl. Gladys and her sisters grew up on a farm and she and Leonard worked the land also with their three girls (Gayle, Elaine and Martha). They rented land in the Ashton area both before and after Leonard went into the Army in World War II. Later they moved to a farm in southern Idaho (Paul), where they lived until retiring to north Idaho (Rathdrum) in 1996. They spent their winters in Yuma, Ariz., for more than 20 years, forming many long-lasting friendships.

Gladys and Leonard were active members of Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Rathdrum. Gladys loved to devote time to quilting and LWML and any other church activity. She was an avid gardener, seamstress and cook, and she loved to bowl, fish and camp with her husband. She was active in 4-H with her girls, also teaching them to can, sew and drive tractors.

Gladys is preceded in death by her mother and father; sisters, Margaret Janssen, Alice Carlson and Clara Gray; son-in-law, Jerry Liedtke; and granddaughter, Heather Hill. Survivors include her husband, Leonard; daughters, Gayle (Brian) Hill of Portland, Ore., Elaine Liedtke of South Jordan, Utah, and Marty Nett of Otis Orchards, Wash.; four grandsons, Jeff, Bradford, Jeremy and Dan; eight great-grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews. Thank you to ALL that helped take care of mom.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials sent to Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 17, at Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Rathdrum.

Please visit Gladys' online memorial and sign her guestbook at www.yatesfuneralhomes.com.

Wambach, U.S. Women Leave it Late Again in Win

MOENCHENGLADBACH, Germany • The U.S. women's soccer team kept its fans breathless again. And just like last time, Abby Wambach — who else — came up big. Wambach broke a tense tie with a thunderous header in the 79th minute, and the U.S. earned its first trip to the Women's World Cup final since winning it in 1999 with a 3-1 victory over France on Wednesday. Lauren Cheney and Alex Morgan also scored for the Americans, who will play Japan — 3-1 winners over Sweden — on Sunday in Frankfurt. If the U.S. wins, it would be the first team to claim three Women's World Cup championships.

Burley Claims Area C West Title

The Green Sox swept Kimberly on Wednesday to clinch the top seed from the West Division to next weekend's Area C Tournament. They also remained perfect in division play.

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

KIMBERLY • The Burley Green Sox have had a chip on their shoulder since the conclusion of the high school season in May.

The team ended the season on a sour note, losing to Twin Falls in the district tournament to fall a game short of the Class 4A state playoffs. On Wednesday, the Green Sox positioned themselves well for a state run in Class A American Legion Baseball. Burley swept Kimberly in a doubleheader Wednesday, winning 5-4 and 12-4 to clinch the Area C West Division championship. "It feels good to get these wins and clinch that championship," said Burley shortstop Jackson Kunz. "We've held a grudge since the high school season, coming so close to state. We've known how good this team is and now we're really showing it." Kunz, Jake Mills and Joe Ferrin all played their usual strong games, with Mills earning the win in Game 1 and hitting two doubles in the nightcap, but it

Complaint Just First Step in Title IX Investigative Process

One hundred Idaho high schools were accused of violating Title IX as it regards to sports, but schools typically only find out they're under investigation if accusations like the ones revealed Monday have merit.

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

Many of the Idaho high schools accused in a discrimination complaint may have never found out they were under suspicion if the legal document had never surfaced Monday. A 600-page complaint, dated June 23, suggested 100 schools have potentially fallen foul of Title IX legislation, which requires schools receiving federal funding to promote equal opportunity for males and females. Twenty of the schools listed are in District IV, which covers south-central Idaho and the Wood River Valley. But at this point the 100 schools are only alleged to have committed wrongdoing, and they won't be getting any further correspondence unless the U.S. Office of Civil Rights in Seattle deems the allegations may have merit. "We are evaluating the allegations to determine if they are appropriate for investigation and resolution," Jim Bradshaw, press officer for the U.S. Department of Education, wrote in an email Wednesday. Four Bronco Linemen Added to Watch Lists

FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

Boise State offensive linemen Thomas Byrd and Nate Potter and defensive linemen Shea McClellin and Billy Winn were each named Wednesday to the 42nd Annual Rotary Lombardi Award Watch List, awarded annually to the top lineman in the Football Bowl Subdivision. Potter, a graduate of Timberline High School in Boise, has already been named to the Outland Trophy Watch List, awarded annually to the nation's top interior lineman, in addition to being named first-team Preseason All-America by Athlon Sports, Lindy's Sports and Phil Steele. The redshirt senior has started 21-consecutive games at left tackle dating back to his sophomore season, garnering first-team All-WAC honors in each of the last two years. McClellin, a senior defensive end from Caldwell, garnered Preseason All-America Second Team honors from Athlon Sports earlier this summer. He started each of the Broncos' 13 games in 2010, running his streak of consecutive

Local Trio Headed to Briar Cliff

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

With Twin Falls High School graduate Ricky Akridge acting as the ring-leader, he and two buddies from Canyon Ridge are trekking to Iowa to play college sports. Akridge and Colton Sweesy signed letters of intent to play football and Burhan Hetemi a letter to participate in track and field at Briar Cliff University in Sioux City, Iowa on Wednesday. Akridge began his college search after the football season, sending his highlight videos to dozens of schools across the country. "I was just hoping any school would get back to me," Akridge said. The NAIA school called him this spring showing their interest and it was then time for Akridge to round up his buddies. He told Hetemi and Sweesy about Briar Cliff at the District IV track meet in May, and the three took a campus visit to gether in June. "It was a great trip," Akridge said. "I knew a little bit about the campus and the atmosphere from (Twin Falls boys basketball coach Matt) Harr, but the team and coaches came to us and really took care of us as teammates and friends as well." The trio will follow in the footsteps of Harr and Jerome football coach Gary Krumm, who both played baseball at Briar Cliff. Sweesy originally signed to play for Montana Tech in March, but had a change of heart and was granted a release by the school. "I went back to Montana and told them I had decided to go to Iowa. It was no disrespect to Montana Tech, they have a great program, but I felt like this was a better fit for me," Sweesy said. "It came together and worked out, and worked out for the best." Akridge and Sweesy will suit up for a Chargers' team that went 2-9 last season, including a 1-9 mark in the Great Plains Athletic Conference, which features powers Sioux Falls Mariners: Are They Buyers or Sellers in MLB's Second Half Trade Market?

Seattle has hovered within 3 games of the AL West lead for most of the season, but a five-game skid going into the All-Star break saw the Mariners sink to 7 1/2 games out of first place as the second half starts. That has the team stuck in no-man's land about what to do at the trade deadline, which is July 31.

SEATTLE (AP) • An underperforming offense, mixed with dominating pitching has left the Seattle Mariners at the All-Star break with a surprising record, mixed with a tinge of missed opportunity.

It's created a murky definition for the 43-48 Mariners who before the year appeared headed for a rough season trying to bridge a troubled past with the promise of young stars and a bright future.

But as the second half begins on Thursday night at home against AL West-leading Texas, Seattle faces a balance between taking advantage of its pitching staff and attempting to be a contender, or continuing its youth movement toward 2012.

The final week before the All-Star break could have sealed which direction the Mariners head in the second half, with five straight losses that dropped Seattle 7 1/2 games back in the division.

They begin the second half with a brutal 13-game stretch — four at home versus Texas, then a road trip to Toronto, Boston and the New York Yankees.

By the time Seattle returns home on July 29, its status should be clearer.

Then again, just using the "contender" phrase associated with the Mariners in a season with no expectations is an accomplishment for first-year manager Eric Wedge.

The surprising success is largely due to a pitching staff that has the second-best ERA in the American League and has tried to make up for the Mariners anemic offense that has seen underperformances by everyone from Chone Figgins and his .183 batting average to a slumping Ichiro Suzuki.

But for all Seattle's rotation of Felix Hernandez, rookie Michael Pineda, a resurgent Erik Bedard and Jason Vargas and Doug Fister have done, it may not be enough to overcome the team's offensive problems.

"You want to be able to go out there and give everyone a break from time to time," Wedge said just before the All-Star break. "I feel we're going to be a better offensive club in the second half, but the fight has been good. The experience in all these close games is going to come back to help us.

"Every day is tight. Having the experience of playing those tight games, those tough games emotionally, mentally whatever it is, it's taxing and these guys have been able to come through and handle it."

It hasn't been the easiest first half for Wedge to manage.

The Mariners have debuted eight rookies during the first three months and with that can come headaches.

The team has also had to deal with substandard performances by some of the veterans.

Troubled outfielder Milton Bradley was sent packing in May. Jack Wilson and his $5 million salary has become a bench player, same with Figgins now after the arrival of third base prospect Kyle Seager.

Jack Cust, thought to be a possible answer for Seattle's lacking left-handed pop, has been replaced as the regular designated hitter by a combo of others.

The Mariners might stick around on the fringes a bit longer thanks to its pitching.

Hernandez is the reigning AL Cy Young Award winner, yet has the fourth-best ERA among Seattle's starters.

Pineda has flashed an arm that makes fans dream of Hernandez and Pineda at the top of a dominant staff for years to come.

Fister is just 3-10, but has a 3.09 ERA, while Vargas already has thrown four complete games. All five Seattle starters have sub-3.50 ERAs.

In the bullpen, Brandon League stepped into the closer role and became an All-Star with 23 saves in the first half.

"I'm close but I've been inconsistent. I throw one game good then one OK. I've got to be more consistent and just try to do what I did last year," Hernandez said.

Much of the final 2 1/2 months will focus on the development of second baseman Dustin Ackley, first baseman Justin Smoak, Seager and outfielders Greg Halman and Carlos Peguero.

Just 20 games into his major league career, Ackley might already be the Mariners best hitter with a .304 average and three homers.

Smoak has endured a two-month slump but has flashed a bat that made him the centerpiece of what Seattle acquired from Texas in exchange for Cliff Lee last summer.

Seager rolled through the minor-league system needing just a handful of games at Triple-A before getting promoted.

Just what Seattle does at the trade deadline could be determined in the next week.

Make a push and perhaps general manager Jack Zduriencik tries to acquire some offense.

Continue to struggle and some pieces may be shipped out.

Most speculation has centered on the comeback of Bedard, a pleasant surprise after missing most of the past two seasons with shoulder trouble.

But he recently found himself on the disabled list with a sprained knee. He's only on a one-year contract and could have some significant suitors as July progresses if he can get back on the mound.

Beyond that, there might not be much Zduriencik can do without potentially tapping too much into the Mariners' long-term plans, meaning Wedge and the rest of the Mariners might be forced to accept the struggling offense for this season.

"I don't want it to be Groundhog Day. I want to see improvement," Wedge said.

Twin Falls Splits With Treasure Valley

TIMES-NEWS

The Twin Falls Cowboys wasted a great opportunity and had to settle for a split with the visiting Treasure Valley Stars on Wednesday.

Twin Falls (23-10) had three opportunities to score with runners at third base, two chances with less than two outs, but couldn't score and the Stars took advantage with a home run in the seventh to win the nightcap 7-6, after the Cowboys took the opener 9-3.

T.J. Ellis and Ryan Fuchs both had two-run doubles in a seven-run fourth inning in Game 1.

and Morningside.

Both are expected to play receiver in the Chargers' offense that is evolving from a spread attack to a more balanced set emphasizing the run.

They are confident they can step in and play right away with the team returning only one player who has recorded a reception.

"That was a big reason for me to choose them," Akridge said. "I like the idea of stepping in right away and contributing."

Hetemi has the chance to not only step in to the track and field team, but leave a big mark on the program.

The Canyon Ridge graduate finished third in the long jump at this spring's state track meet and has a personal best mark of 22 feet 6 inches, two inches away from the existing Briar Cliff school record.

"That'd be sweet (to get the record)," Hetemi said.

"I love that sport, am passionate about it and I'm happy to go to school and get a good education and do something I love."

He's also pumped to be going to school with his two best friends.

"That's a really cool deal. I'm excited that we're all in this together," Hetemi said.

Complaint

discrimination claim.

According to the Department of Education's website, almost anyone can lodge a complaint. The threshold is a belief that discrimination has taken place and information about the alleged offense. The complainant doesn't have to be the victim of the alleged offense, either.

From there, claims are either dismissed or forwarded to the offending school's district superintendent, as well as the state public schools chief.

John Billetz, executive director of the Idaho High School Activities Association, said any schools subject to investigation would work constructively with the OCR to achieve a positive resolution.

"(The OCR) won't drop a hammer. ... It might be a case where they do an interest inventory, to see where the girls' interests lie. It might be that girls at that school just aren't interested (in sports)," Billetz said. "They want to make sure schools are doing everything they possibly can, and if not they work together to try and improve."

Remedies could include the inventory, additional opportunities for females in sanctioned activities or greater promotion of non-sanctioned activities that can be used to satisfy Title IX, such as bowling, lacrosse, or swimming and diving.

One measurement OCR uses is a comparison of a school's female students to total students and female athletes to total athletes.

Wood River High School — which had the best ratio among the schools in the complaint — has a boys lacrosse team on which girls can participate. Several other District IV schools already offer bowling and/or swimming and diving.

In the meantime, the IH-SAA aims to get in front of any future complaints by working with the Idaho State Department of Education to arrange webinars and inservice training about Title IX.

"We could have been a little more proactive, but in the five years I've been here I can't remember a call about violating Title IX," Billetz said. "We thought all our people have a good handle on it and it's not an issue. I still think that's the case, but here's a good opportunity to make lemonade out of lemons."

Idaho is the third state to be hit with a spate of Title IX allegations involving high school athletic departments. The Oregonian reported in June that nearly 100 schools in the state had been accused, and Washington had a similarly large complaint revealed in April.

The crux of the complaint alleges that schools use cheer and dance participation numbers to inflate Title IX counts, in spite of a July 2010 federal ruling that cheer and dance cannot satisfy the requirements.

Jerome Athletic Director Ty Jones denied Monday that the school includes cheer and dance in its Title IX counts.

He added that the school allocates equal funding for boys sports — including football — and girls sports as part of its comprehensive plan to satisfy requirements.

was the play of the unheralded players that led the Green Sox to the sweep.

Spencer Rice, in for relief of Game 2 starter Jesse Bywater, pitched four shutout innings and hit a three-run home run in the fifth inning to put the game away for the Green Sox (24-12, 14-0 Area C West).

"The last few games, we've had a lot of different kids contribute," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "In the high school season, you emphasize and put your system in place, but during the summer you just let the kids play."

The Astros tied the game four-all in the fourth inning as Seth Champlin and Baxter Morse each ripped RBI triples and Jordan Gentry added an RBI single. Burley, however, dropped the hammer in the fifth, scoring eight runs.

Rice's homer was the knockout punch, after Jack Darrington drove in two runs — on two at-bats in the inning — and Mills belted his second double of the game.

The Astros twice loaded the bases in the game, only to come away empty.

"We left some runs out there," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers. "We played that first game tight, but came up short and I was a little afraid of how we were going to approach Game 2. Now we're going to have a battle for that third spot."

The Astros (20-16, 9-5 Area C) play a pivotal doubleheader against Canyon Ridge on Friday.

Burley, meanwhile remains undefeated in Area C play and returns to the field in Pocatello against the Razorbacks.

Harrison Unloads on Goodell, Teammates in Magazine Interview

NEW YORK (AP) • Heavily fined Pittsburgh Steelers linebacker James Harrison calls NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell a “crook” and a “devil,” among other insults, in a magazine article. The 2008 AP Defensive Player of the Year hasn't been shy about ripping the league after he was docked $100,000 for illegal hits last season. In the August issue of Men's Journal, his rants against Goodell reach another level of wrath.

“If that man was on fire and I had to (urinate) to put him out, I wouldn't do it,” Harrison told the magazine. “I hate him and will never respect him.”

His other descriptions of the commissioner include an anti-gay slur, “stupid,” “puppet” and “dictator.”

If the Steelers had defeated the Green Bay Packers in the Super Bowl, Harrison said, he would have whistled in Goodell's ear during the trophy ceremony. “Why don't you quit and do something else, like start your own league in flag football?”

Harrison also criticizes other NFL execs, Patriots-turned-commentators Rodney Harrison and Tedy Bruschi (“clowns”), Houston's Brian Cushing (“juiced out of his mind”) — and even teammates Rashard Mendenhall and Ben Roethlisberger for their performances in the Super Bowl loss.

Harrison calls the running back a “fumble machine” for his fourth-quarter turnover. Mendenhall said on Twitter on Wednesday he didn't have a problem with what Harrison said “because I know him.” But he also included a link to his stats from last season, which show he didn't have a pattern of fumbling.

Of the quarterback's two interceptions, Harrison says: “Hey, at least throw a pick on their side of the field instead of asking the D to bail you out again. Or hand the ball off and stop trying to act like Peyton Manning. You ain't that and you know it, man; you just get paid like he does.”

Steelers President Art

Rooney II said in a statement that he hadn't seen the article or talked to Harrison.

“We will discuss the situation at the appropriate time, when permitted once the labor situation is resolved,” he said.

Harrison also questions whether a black player is punished more for a hard hit on a white player than the opposite. Beyond the insults, Harrison makes some serious points about what he believes are the league's misguided attempts to increase safety.

He explains how non-guaranteed contracts make players more likely to hit high, because in the short term, a torn knee ligament is more costly than a concussion.

Harrison suggests the real way to prevent head injuries is to shorten the season to 14 games, start offseason workouts later and trim the length of training camp so “we're not bangin' heads so much in August; that's where the brain trauma comes from.”

Star QBs: It's Time for NFL, Players to Deal

NEW YORK (AP) • Calling the players' offer “fair for both sides,” star quarterbacks Tom Brady, Peyton Manning and Drew Brees — plaintiffs in an antitrust suit against the NFL — said Wednesday “it is time” to wrap up negotiations on a deal to end the league's lockout.

At the bargaining table, though, it wasn't that easy.

On the day Brady, Manning and Brees spoke as a group publicly for the first time, players and owners spent nearly 11 hours meeting at a Manhattan law office before pausing for dinner.

“We're just taking a break — long day,” players' association chief DeMaurice Smith said.

Regardless, negotiations were expected to continue today. With each passing day, the need to strike a bargain and end the first NFL work stoppage since 1987 becomes greater.

Deadlines are coming up next week to get training camps and the preseason started on time. Although it seems the sides have agreed on the basic elements of how to split more than $9 billion in annual revenues, among the key sticking points recently have been how to structure a new rookie salary system and what free agency will look like.

In a statement released to The Associated Press via the NFL Players Association, New England's Brady, Indianapolis' Manning and New Orleans' Brees said: “We believe the overall proposal made by the players is fair for both sides and it is time to get this deal done.”

They continued: “This is the time of year we as players turn our attention to the game on the field. We hope owners feel the same way.”

In response, the NFL issued a statement saying: “We share the view that now is the time to reach an agreement so we can all get back to football and a full 2011 season. We are working hard with the players' negotiating team every day to complete an agreement as soon as possible.”

Brady, Manning and Brees are among 10 players who are named plaintiffs in an antitrust suit that is pending in federal court in Minnesota. That class-action lawsuit was filed March 11, hours after federally mediated negotiations to arrive at a new collective bargaining agreement broke down, and the old labor contract expired. The NFLPA immediately dissolved itself, meaning players no longer were protected under labor law but instead were allowed to take their chances under antitrust law.

On March 12, the owners imposed a lockout on the players, a right management has to shut down a business when a CBA expires. During the lockout, there can be no communication between the teams and current NFL players; no players — including those drafted in April — can be signed; teams won't pay for players' health insurance.

A series of court rulings followed, including one last week from an appeals court that said the lockout could continue.

Talks gained steam in May, overseen by a court-appointed mediator, U.S. Magistrate Judge Arthur Boylan, who is on vacation this week. Boylan ordered both sides to speak with him in Minneapolis next Tuesday, and the owners have a special meeting set for July 21 in Atlanta, where they could vote to ratify a new deal if one is reached.

That means there's intense pressure on Smith and NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell to keep things moving in a positive direction. Disruptions to the planned preseason schedule would decrease the overall revenue pie.

In an added complication, a federal judge has set an Aug. 8 hearing for NFL retirees, who claimed Wednesday that the league and NFLPA “have conspired” to set low retiree benefit and pension payments in the negotiations. The retirees also say they have been illegally and intentionally excluded from the talks.

Cavendish Takes Tour's Stage 11, Sprinter Lead

Generally regarded as the best sprinter in the cycling world, Mark Cavendish has never won the sprinter's title at the world's most prestigious cycling race.

LAVAU, France (AP) • British sprinter Mark Cavendish won Wednesday's 11th stage with a blistering late attack to clinch his third stage win of this year's Tour de France, and Frenchman Thomas Voeckler kept hold of the race leader's yellow jersey for another day.

Cavendish nearly lost a shoe in the final stretch of Wednesday's stage, but kept his cool to beat Andre Greipel of Germany at the line to take the leading sprinter's green jersey.

The prolific Cavendish claimed the 18th Tour stage win of his career, crossing the line in 3 hours, 46 minutes, 7 seconds.

"It's incredible to have the green jersey. It's the most beautiful jersey in the world," Cavendish said.

Despite his impressive tally of stage wins, the coveted sprint champion's jersey has so far eluded Cavendish.

He was second last year behind Alessandro Petacchi of Italy, and second to two-time sprint champion Thor Hushovd in 2009. Cavendish pulled out before the Alpine stages in 2008 to save energy for the Olympics.

Voeckler, meanwhile, said he expects to lose his yellow jersey in the Pyrenees.

Defending Tour de France Alberto Contador wants to show his rivals he is still the world's best climber when the race hits the Pyrenees on Thursday. It just depends whether his troublesome right knee lets him.

The three-time champion has been bugged by a swelling in his right knee since he crashed on last week's fifth stage, and he banged the same knee again when falling of his bike on stage 9 last Sunday.

With two mammoth climbs up the Col du Tourmalet and an uphill finish to Luz-Arden awaiting him on Thursday's 12th stage, the Spaniard feels quietly confident his body will not let him down. It had better not, otherwise Andy Schleck and Cadel Evans, his main Tour rivals, will not hesitate to try to knock him out of contention.

Cruel, but that's the Tour. After all, Contador did not wait around when Schleck's chain came off last year.

"My knee is responding well so I'm obviously very happy," Contador said Wednesday's 11th stage. "But keep in mind that I didn't climb the Tourmalet today. I have to see how it responds and on that basis I will make a decision how to do the race on the last climb tomorrow."

Evans is the best placed of the main Tour contenders and the Australian veteran currently leads Schleck by 11 seconds overall, and Contador by 1 minute, 41 seconds.

starts to 24. He registered 13.5 tackles for loss last season, tying for the team high. He also ranked 22nd nationally in sacks with a team-best 9.5.

Winn, a redshirt senior defensive tackle from Las Vegas, has already been named to the Bronko Nagurski Award, the Lott IMPACT Trophy and the Bednarik Award watch lists, each of which is awarded annually to the nation's top defensive player, in addition to being named to the Outland Trophy Watch List. He has also been named first-team Preseason All-America by Athlon Sports and second-team Preseason All-America by both Lindy's Sports and Phil Steele.

Byrd — also named Wednesday to the Rimington Trophy Watch List, an award for the nation's top center — is a three-year starter for the Broncos. He was named first-team All-Western Athletic Conference in 2010 after starting each of the team's 13 games, and was a key member of an offensive line that helped the Broncos rank second nationally in total offense.

Eligibility for the Rotary Lombardi Award is limited to down linemen on offense or defense who set up no more than 10 yards left or right of the ball, or linebackers who set up no farther than five yards off the line of scrimmage.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Eye Nature’s walks, shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the manners living as they rise.”

— Alexander Pope

.....

At the Dyspeptics Club the player sitting West today is regarded as something of a loose cannon. You never know in which direction he is going to be shooting, and as East will tell you, quite often he has been the victim of “friendly fire.” However, in today’s deal it was South who took something of a mortal wound, and despite repeated and loaded questions, was never able to discover if he was the victim of malice or a lucky accident.

Before I tell you precisely what happened, consider the play in three no-trump when West leads a fourth-highest club six.

Declarer takes East’s jack with his king and infers from the spot led that West has four clubs ready to cash as soon as the defenders get on lead. The best chance for the contract will therefore be to run the spades with the aid of a finesse. (This line succeeds whenever West has the spade queen in a two- or three-card suit. Playing for that layout, South would emerge with nine tricks.)

But compare what happened at the table when West kicked off with a deceptive club two. Now declarer believed clubs were breaking 4-3, so it was safe for him to knock out the diamond ace rather than rely on the spades. West won his diamond ace and impassively cashed out the clubs.

ANSWER: It would be reasonable to bid two spades, looking for no-trump facing a heart stop. But your spades are not quite good enough for that action — you might play game off the spade suit. By contrast, Q-10-2 of spades might be enough for that action, by the way.) Better is to raise to three diamonds and hope your partner can show a major-suit stopper or bid no-trump himself.

DEAR ABBY: I agree with your advice to “Driven Away in Georgia” (May 26), whose widowed mother has become so bitter, all eight of her children avoid her. As a clinical neuropsychologist who works with people with dementia and other aging-related problems, I’d like to share my thoughts.

When a spouse dies, previously undetected early-stage dementia can become apparent to others. If the surviving spouse had pre-existing cognitive deficits, they may have been concealed by the competency of the other spouse. After the spouse dies, the structure and functional support once provided is suddenly removed. Symp-toms then become apparent to family members.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Another diagnostic option might be depression, which can often resemble dementia in elderly people. There are medications that can help manage and even slow down the progression of dementia, and early intervention may partially stabilize her at a higher level of functioning. You were right to recommend that family members become more involved rather than back away since this woman clearly needs either psychiatric or neurological intervention, or both. Thank you for shedding light on a very common problem that can touch any family.

— RICHARD FULBRIGHT, Ph.D., DALLAS

DEAR DR. FULBRIGHT: Thank you for sharing your expertise and raising awareness for those with family members who are also struggling with similar issues. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In addition to concerns about dementia, the mother may be overwhelmed with living life as a widow. The eight surviving children should try to arrange for part-time hired help for her household chores that build up. If Mom is living on limited income, she may be crushed with financial stress. Perhaps it’s time for her to downsize to a more manageable home. Instead of avoiding her, these “kids” need to find out exactly what problems are overwhelming their mother and get her help.

— CONCERNED SON IN LAUREL, MD.

DEAR ABBY: “Driven” and her siblings could offer more by getting together, taking potluck dishes and meeting at Mom’s house over a weekend to split up her chore list. My own mom would say, “Many hands make labor light” – and laughter makes the time pass quickly. If they can do this two or three times a year, Mom might feel more secure and relaxed.

Her children also should take turns taking Mom out to dinner and a movie once a month. It will give her something to look forward to. When you lose someone who was involved in your daily life, it gets lonely. A tip to the kids: Imagine yourselves in your mom’s shoes instead of thinking about how much you have to do. Even a person with dementia, if this is the case, can be happy with the right help.

— NANCY IN PAYSON, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: If each child contributed a small amount of money each month, they could hire a handyman to take care of the various projects Mom needs to be done. A cleaning person is also an option. Aging parents can be a challenge, but pulling away and spending less time with them will only lead to regrets later.

— LAUREN, SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: Anytime our family got together, or my folks were having special guests over, my mom would ask me to clean her house. I resented it, figuring since I could clean my home, Mom could clean hers. Mom passed more than a year ago, and I’d give ANYTHING to be able to clean house for her again.

— BILL IN TRASKWOOD, ARK.

IF JULY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You could be distracted by a fresh amorous attachment or led astray by dreams of grandeur where a money making project is concerned between now and the end of August. Keep your feet firmly on the ground and make key decisions in the last two weeks of September. Get your business ideas, career moves and investment alterations completed by the end of September, because your luck will change for the worst in October and November. As long as you fulfill existing obligations and make no new ones, you will sail through temporary planetary turbulence unscathed. Wait until next April, when opportunity knocks loudly, to make your most important decisions and changes.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Work comes first. You should avoid giving into the temptation to put off current projects to follow social pursuits. The more work you get done now, the more time for play you'll have later.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Mind your own business. Trying to act as mediator in a dispute may just be pouring gasoline on the fire. Let the chips fall where they may and let others deal with their problems on their own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Beware the green-eyed monster. You may feel that you want what you can't have or that you're being left behind. Count the many blessings that you do have instead of coveting the blessings of others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. You've been on a bit of a roll financially, but you still think you can do a little bit better. A good poker player knows when to take his winnings and leave the table.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stay out of the spotlight. Being conspicuous in public could breed resentment and contempt as others may become jealous of your successes. Keep working towards your goals but avoid making commitments.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be careful that the toes you're standing on are your own. You are able to make fantastic progress but make sure that certain others are not left woefully behind. If a decision is required, sleep on it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A star quarterback can't succeed without a good, solid line to protect him. While someone else may grab the spotlight for the time being, rest assured that your work behind the scenes made it all possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be a diplomat. It is easy to get your way, but a direct approach may leave others feeling slighted. Do your best to keep everyone happy. Put negotiation skills to work as you are capable of sealing the deal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Set the pace. Your understanding of the current project enables you to lead by example. Though you can tackle the task with ease, others may struggle to keep up. Offer your assistance when needed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Bide your time. Your plans are shaping up nicely, but it is not quite time to act. You'll get much farther by going with the flow rather than trying to rock the boat. Stick with established routines.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't let every pretty face turn your head. Knowing the difference between love and lust could save you a few headaches down the road. The safest bet you can make is to not make a bet at all.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Conflicts are best viewed at a distance. Tempers may flare at work today and your best option is to just stay out of it. Adults can look after themselves. Stall deals and avoid signing contracts until tomorrow.

Cattle Group to Back Animal Cruelty Law

By JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Under threat of a voter initiative, an Idaho cattle group says it supports legislation to punish third-time animal cruelty offenders with a felony.

The Idaho Cattle Association's feeder council voted unanimously at a recent meeting to pursue the bill in 2012, according to the association's July newsletter.

Idaho, North Dakota and South Dakota are the only states without felony animal cruelty penalties. Agriculture groups have long been wary of removing Idaho from that list, for fear any new law could be used by groups opposed to ranching or animal agriculture to fight these traditional activities.

The association's feedlot group says getting behind legislation now will help it control the outcome — and show the public that cattle producers take pride in caring for their animals.

A phone call to the Idaho Cattle Association wasn't returned. But according to the newsletter, "Members felt as though it was important for the ICA to take initiative on the matter so that the association can control the outcome of the bill."

The association says the feeder council's vote will serve as a policy guide that will be taken up at the Idaho Cattle Association Annual Convention in Sun Valley in November.

The Idaho Humane Society, Stop Torturing Our Pets, and other animal welfare groups are now gathering signatures for a 2012 ballot initiative under an umbrella group they're calling Idaho 1 of 3.

Their initiative, on file with the Idaho Secretary of State's office, would define animal torture and make such crimes a felony on the first offense. For animal cruelty, the measure would increase misdemeanor fines to $400 for a first offense, up from a current $100 fine, and triple fines for a second offense to $600.

It would also make a third animal cruelty conviction within a 15-year period a felony, punishable by between six months and three years in prison and a $9,000 fine.

Virginia Hemingway, president of Idaho 1 of 3, said any measure — regardless of whether it's a bill in 2012 or an initiative that November — should address animal torture. She said her group may support a bill next legislative session, but it will depend on how it is written.

"We're after two groups of people: People who torture animals, and the repeat offenders," Hemingway told The Associated Press.

Jeff Rosenthal, Idaho Humane Society director, said Wednesday the Idaho Cattle Association council's vote was good news and likely reflects a common-sense, locally crafted approach to a long-unresolved issue.

"They're very much a major player in the state, and if that represents their collective stance, that's very encouraging," Rosenthal said.

In 2009, an animal cruelty bill that teamed Idaho's agricultural community and animal welfare advocates including Hemingway went nowhere, in part due to opposition from the national group Humane Society of the United States that feared it left a loophole for puppy mills.
