Shooting and kidnapping suspect Clark J. Cleveland of Spring Creek, Nev., is escorted to a patrol car after he surrendered to police at the Hampton Inn in Twin Falls on Friday. Officers blocked off numerous northwest Twin Falls blocks while responding to the nearly three-hour incident at the hotel.

HOTEL STANDOFF ENDS IN CAPTURE

A hostage-taker gave himself up hours after allegedly eluding Idaho State Police troopers, shooting one trooper, killing a man and taking a woman hostage at a Twin Falls hotel. Clark J. Cleveland, 26, of Nevada, now faces multiple criminal charges.

One bystander is dead, an Idaho State Police trooper is wounded and two suspects are in custody following a Friday morning hostage situation at a Twin Falls hotel.

Clark J. Cleveland, 26, of Spring Creek, Nev., is charged with two felonies and held on $2 million bond for allegedly shooting the trooper, whose identity was not released on Friday evening.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb said he has charged Cleveland with eluding police and aggravated battery on a police officer with a deadly weapon. Cleveland allegedly also fatally shot a bystander in the hotel and took a female hostage at the Hampton Inn at 1658 Fillmore St., but those alleged crimes are not reflected in the current charges.

ISP Capt. Clark Rollins told the Associated Press that Cleveland was the only person to fire a weapon during Friday's standoff.

Loeb has yet to release the name of the man killed inside the hotel or how he was killed, other to confirm that he was fatally shot. Loeb said Twin Falls County Coroner Dennis Chambers was still locating and informing the victim's family members on Friday evening.

Cleveland was first named as a suspect by Elko County (Nev.) Sheriff Jim Pitts. Loeb confirmed Cleveland's alleged role in Friday's chaos that evening, after filing the two criminal charges.

The incident started when an ISP

Witnesses Describe Run-In with Gunman

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

The hostage situation that unfolded Friday morning at the Hampton Inn hotel was, by any measure, an unusually high-profile crime for Twin Falls.

An Idaho State Police trooper was shot in the leg by a lone gunman — allegedly Clark Cleveland, 27, of Spring Creek, Nev. Another shooting victim died. Yet considering the number of people involved — including at least two who directly encountered a handgun-wielding man — the casualties could have been much worse.

A female hostage was released without harm. Numerous hotel guests were evacuated from their rooms without reported injuries.

It all came suddenly, entirely by chance. Jeff Bulkley of Twin Falls was fueling up at a Chevron gas station across from the hotel when he saw the accident — a man in a truck hit a recreational vehicle.

Bulkley said he headed to the accident to see if he could help anyone.

"The guy that caused the accident jumps out of his truck and starts running," Bulkley recalled later Friday.

Bulkley started running after him. "I chased him on foot pursuit and chased him into the hotel and chased hotel was fatally shot.

Outlook Grim If No Debt Deal Is Reached

Multiple agencies surrounded the hotel, which was evacuated along with the neighboring Holiday Inn Express, and closed parts of Fillmore Street, Pole Line Road and Washington Street North as Cleveland allegedly holed up in a stairwell with a female hostage.

The wounded trooper was retrieved from the hotel within minutes and transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with non-life-threatening injuries. By 9 a.m., Twin Falls County's Crisis Response Team was clearing rooms in the hotel to avoid further civilian injuries or casualties.

Shortly before 10:30 a.m., police began negotiating with the suspect, who gave himself up about an hour later.

According to online court records, Cleveland has multiple misdemeanor convictions in Idaho, including a June 30 disposition for misdemeanor driving under the influence. He received a suspended jail sentence of 90 days. In Shoshone County, he was convicted of petit theft and carrying a concealed weapon without a permit in 2006. He served 60 days of a 180-day jail sentence.

Cleveland also has a criminal record in Nevada, including an April arrest on suspicion of domestic violence and possession of a firearm while under the influence of alcohol. He is listed on his April booking sheet from Elko County as being employed as a miner by Newmont Mining Corp.

By coincidence, a $500,000 warrant for Cleveland's arrest was signed Friday morning by Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Judge Nicole Cannon for violating terms of his probation, stemming from his DUI conviction. His probation officer claimed in a filing that Cleveland failed to appear for scheduled check-ins.

Federal Appeals Judge Halts Nev. Wild-Horse Roundup

BY MARTIN GRIFFITH
Associated Press

RENO, Nev. • A federal appeals judge on Friday night granted a temporary injunction to halt a government roundup of about 1,700 wild horses from the range in Nevada.

Judge Richard Paez of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals issued the order after U.S. District Judge Howard McKibben earlier in the day denied a motion to stop the federal Bureau of Land Management's removal of Mustangs from public lands near the Utah line.

Paez's order will remain in effect until a three-judge panel on which he sits has a chance to review the horse advocacy group Cloud Foundation's emergency motion for injunctive relief pending resolution of the group's appeal of McKibben's ruling.

BLM spokesman Doran Sanchez says the order is being reviewed by the agency's legal counsel.

him down the hall of the hotel," Bulkley said.

Near the hotel's elevator, Bulkley realized this was more than a simple case of someone fleeing the scene of an accident.

"He goes, 'I've got a gun, I'm going to kill you,'" Bulkley said.

Bulkley then avoided the suspect and told a hotel manager about the situation, after which the evacuation began.

"I know that he meant it," Bulkley said of the gunman. "He was crazy."

Nicholas Speirs, a Twin Falls resident, was in his truck when he saw the accident. After hearing the wheels of the gunman's truck squealing before the collision, Speirs saw the man get out of his vehicle and leave the accident.

"I remember when he opened the door, I kind of saw him shake his head like he was shaken up," Speirs said.

When Speirs noticed Bulkley was at the scene, he told his friend to go after the fleeing man.

After circling the hotel in his vehicle, Speirs went inside the building, where he quickly got a warning from Bulkley.

"Jeff yelled and said, 'He's got a gun,'" Speirs said.

None of this was known at the time to Jake Stickford, a hotel guest staying on the third floor. At first, he wasn't too concerned when the fire alarm went off, as there was no sign of

But after stepping out of his room into the hallway, Stickford came across an unexpected sight: a man standing there, clapping a handgun.

The gunman did not point his weapon at Stickford, who thought it best to leave.

"I just turned around and left," said Stickford, who had traveled from Little Rock, Ark., to Twin Falls for business. "... He didn't look a bit like a cop"

Outside the hotel, the wreckage of the accident that brought the police chase to an end littered the roadway.

Hotel guests chatted about what they heard and looked on as police officers with dogs and rifles kept close watch on the Hampton's entrances.

"We could hear guys yelling," said Lance Snarey of Boise, a hotel guest who had stopped in Twin Falls on his way home from a vacation in Yellowstone National Park.

Bettyjo Colbert of Sacramento, Calif., wasn't able to leave her hotel room right away because her husband, Donald, has a disability.

Dispatchers told the couple to stay put in their room until police arrived. While there, the Colberts heard five or six shots and police officers running up a nearby staircase.

"Everybody had their guns drawn," Bettyjo said.

Filer Adopts Schools Budget, Swears in New Board Member

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

FILER • Filer School Board members approved an $8 million district budget Wednesday for the 2011-12 school year.

“Our general fund balance is reduced about $400,000 this year and with a $600,000 reduction from last year, we’re looking at a two-year $1 million reduction in funding,” said District Superintendent John Graham. His district will be lucky to have about $1 million left in reserves, he noted later Friday.

The board also approved a public hearing for 7 p.m. Aug. 10 to inform residents about a 10 cent increase to school lunch prices for the coming year. The cost for students in kindergarten to third grade will be $1.70. Those in fourth, fifth and sixth grades will pay $1.75. Middle school students will be charged $1.80 and those at the high school $1.90.

The change is being made in many districts nationwide this year. New federal regulations require districts to charge closer to what it costs to produce meals for higher-income students, to ensure subsidies intended for free and reduced-price meals go where they’re supposed to, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Board Chairman Aaron Williams, however, suspected a different motive.

“I understood that they’re trying to raise the price high enough to force everybody to take free lunch,” Williams said. “It’s true socialism and should remind all of us that we made an oath to uphold the Constitution.”

The meeting included a new face. Bruce Banks was sworn in as the district’s Zone 1 representative.

Banks, a regional credit manager with Zions Bank in Twin Falls, ran unopposed for election this spring and takes over from Roger Vincent, who declined to run again.

“We’ve lived in the area for 14 years and all four of our kids attend school in the district,” he said. “I’ve always felt that quality education is important and people need to be actively involved with their schools as well as government.”

Fred Jaynes, who since December has served the remaining months of Eric Williams’ Zone 4 board position, also took the oath for a full term in office. Jaynes is manager of the Farmer’s National Bank Shoshone Street branch office in Twin Falls.

School board officer positions were chosen for the coming year. Williams accepted the nomination to continue as chairman and Shirley Gailey will be vice chairwoman. The board also voted to continue holding monthly public meetings at 7 p.m. the second Wednesday of each month at Filer Intermediate School.

Impaired Driving Patrols Nab Many Offenders

TIMES-NEWS

A recent partnership of the Idaho Transportation Department, Idaho State Police and area law enforcement agencies nabbed numerous offenders during patrols meant to curb impaired driving from June 30 to July 11.

“Your best and only way to ensure surviving a crash is to always wear a seat belt and remain attentive to your surroundings and other drivers,” ISP Region 4 Sgt. Kent Oliver said. “Always have a designated driver when out with friends.”

In ISP’s Region 4, which covers south-central Idaho, 924 contacts led to these charges:

- 402 speeding citations.
- 49 uninsured motorist violations.
- 42 seat belt/child restraint citations.
- 22 hazardous moving citations.
- nine driving under the influence arrests.
- eight suspended driver’s license violations.
- three drug arrests.
- one felony arrest.
- 60 other various contacts.

Absent a deal by then, the government would find itself tight on cash and unable to borrow — and have to start deciding which of the 80 million bills due in August it should pay and which it should put off.

Tough decisions would come immediately: On Aug. 3, some $23 billion in Social Security benefit payments are due to be processed. On Aug. 4, the Treasury Department must pay $87 billion to investors to redeem maturing Treasury securities. On Aug. 15, more than $30 billion in interest payments come due.

In addition to those costs, the government normally pays $5 billion to $10 billion daily to defense contractors, Medicare providers, federal employees and others.

Obama has said he can’t guarantee Social Security checks and payments to veterans and the disabled will go out on schedule in the absence of a deal: “There may simply not be the money in the coffers to do it.” He could be challenged on that, however, because some legal and congressional budget experts question whether he can unilaterally decline to pay Social Security benefits if there are still assets in the program’s trust fund.

Regardless of how that issue is resolved, there’s no question that government services, programs and benefits could take an enormous hit.

No one knows exactly what choices Obama and his top officials would make if the crisis comes. The White House Office of Budget and Management is the agency charged with reviewing possible cuts in benefits and payments while the Treasury Department handles cash flow. All have been mum about their crisis plans, apparently to avoid market speculation or panic.

But Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner has insisted the deadline is real. “There is no credible way to give Congress more time,” he said recently.

One analysis, by the Bipartisan Policy Center, suggests that once the government runs out of cash and lacks the power to further borrow, it would need to slash spending at once by as much as a whopping 44 percent. The U.S. now borrows more than 40 cents for every dollar it spends.

So long as the Treasury has tax revenues coming in, it can still make interest payments to technically avoid default. Some analysts think it would lean that way at first, so as to do less harm to the country’s long-term credit rating. Default would be a “major crisis” that would radiate “shockwaves” through the financial system, Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke told Congress recently.

But putting a priority on paying interest on maturing debt to avoid a default would simply force spending cuts instead — some of them more likely to hit ordinary people.

Parks and monuments can be temporarily shut. That’s been done before.

But is it worth taxpayers’ money to pay the costs of pursuing a second trial against former baseball star Roger Clemens if the judge who declared a mistrial in his perjury case this week clears the way? And what about clinical trials on new drugs or other scientific research projects? Or completing half-finished highway construction projects?

The government is even weighing the prospect of selling off some of its assets — gold in Fort Knox, buildings, property, even some national parklands — to make ends meet, if absolutely necessary.

Government contractors are likely to be among the early victims, says Paul Light, professor of public policy at New York University.

He suggested other early austerity steps would likely include halting of highway projects and research grants.

A Surreal Sight, a Ghost 405 Freeway, Awaits Los Angeles

BY JOHN ROGERS AND DAISY NGUYEN
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • When the sun rises above Los Angeles today, residents in this car-dependent, traffic-choked city will see a rare sight: a 10-mile stretch of one of the nation's busiest freeways turned into a virtual ghost road.

Interstate 405, a freeway normally so clogged that locals like to joke that its name is shorthand for "traffic that moves no faster than 4 or 5 miles an hour," is closing for 53 hours for a major construction project.

As crews worked feverishly to get the freeway open in time for Monday morning's rush-hour, residents have been making plans for weeks to stay off local roads, lest they trigger what officials dubbed "Carmageddon."

Such an event could back up vehicles from the 405 to surface streets and other freeways, causing a domino effect that could paralyze much of the city.

With warnings having been broadcast through television, radio, social media and flashing freeway signs as far away as San Francisco, much of the city's nearly 4 million residents appear ready to stay off the roads.

Traffic was unusually light in the section of freeway slated for closure and most freeways in Los Angeles as residents heeded warnings to stay off roads Friday evening.

Television news broadcasts showed that surface streets were unusually quiet in other parts of Los Angeles, including Laurel Canyon, a winding, narrow north-south route which could be used as an alternative to Interstate 405 for travel between Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley.

Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa said he thinks traffic will move smoothly if motorists take his advice to stay close to home throughout the weekend.

"We can either say we survived Carmageddon or we survived the Carmageddon hype," he said.

If people listen, there will be no shortage of staycation activities awaiting them.

They can snag free popcorn at movie theaters along the 405 or drop in on Michael Jackson's dermatologist for 25-percent-off Botox injections so that frazzled commuters won't look quite so frazzled.

Those who do want that real road warrior look might consider swinging by T-Man's Tattoos (located just off the 405) in the San Fernando Valley.

"If you come on in and mention you're in town because you're stuck from Carmageddon, you can get 15 percent off tattoos and piercings," proprietor Howard Teman said.

For those who do get caught in traffic, LA musician Ken Elkinson is offering free downloads of his boxed set, "Music for Commuting," a collection of soothing tunes.

For those wanting a laugh, Grammy-winning humorist Stan Freberg is planning to visit a mall just off the freeway to sign copies of his latest CD, "Songs in the Key of Freberg," which features a song called "Gridlock."

That is if he can get there. "We could end up just toodling around in traffic in our Prius, playing 'Gridlock' ourselves," he said of himself and his wife, Hunter.

Along with all the gimmicky promotions and attempts to cash in ("I Survived Carmageddon" T-shirts are being sold all over the place), there have also been months of planning.

Construction crews have been gearing up, but so have police, fire and medical officials seeking to ensure that everything goes smoothly. Or, if it doesn't, to ensure they are prepared to handle any emergency.

Heavy equipment needed to demolish a section of a 50-year-old bridge as part of a $1 billion freeway-widening project, was already in place Friday, hours before the 405's midnight closure.

Sections of the bridge's pilings that are being torn out had been marked and prepped in advance.

The city fire department put two dozen additional engines, fire companies and ambulances into service, placing them in neighborhoods that firefighters might have a hard time getting to from jammed roadways.

"Our biggest concern is gridlock, obviously," Battalion Chief Chuck Butler said Friday. "There are a lot of areas over in West L.A. and the San Fernando Valley that we expect to be impacted due to the closure."

Prosecutor: Police Shooting of Idaho Man Justified

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • An investigation has found police officers who shot an eastern Idaho man six times during a June confrontation acted in self-defense.

The results of the investigation released Thursday found Douglas Walters died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head during the June 17 encounter with police officers at his home in Idaho Falls, said Bonneville County Prosecutor Bruce Pickett.

Prosecutors have reviewed the results of the investigation and determined police officers who fired shots at Walters were justified in their actions, Pickett said.

"It was unfortunate that Mr. Walters acted how he did and put the officers in a position where they had to defend themselves," Pickett said.

Four officers were placed on administrative leave after a traffic stop ended with Walters leading them to his home and shooting a policeman. The officers then returned fire, shooting Walters six times in the neck, shoulder and abdomen.

Walters then took his own life, according to the results of an investigation led by the Bingham county Sheriff's Office and the Blackfoot Police Department.

The agency headed a task force that included eight law enforcement agencies. The group handed over the results of their investigation to prosecutors last week.

The confrontation started with a traffic stop at about 1:30 a.m. that day, when Walters was pulled over in his Chevy pickup with broken taillights.

The officer learned Walters had an outstanding misdemeanor warrant out of Bonneville County for failing to pay fines and appear in court for a probation violation. The officer was also told that Walters could be violent.

When Walters was told about the warrant and asked to get out of his truck, officers say he replied: "OK, see ya," and then sped away. Officers say they chased Walters to his home, where he went inside and locked the front door. Officers then decided to go into the home and get Walters, according to investigators.

"I believe that the officers felt they had the situation under control," said Blackfoot Police Lt. Paul Newbold. "Things dramatically changed once they got in there."

Police say Walters shot Idaho Falls Police Officer Malin Reynolds point-blank in the chest. A bullet-proof vest saved Reynolds' life. Police then returned fire at Walters and during interviews later, the officers said they did not remember seeing Walters shoot himself.

Idaho Falls police chief Steve Roos said the shootings were unfortunate but he was pleased with how officers handled the situation.

"Anytime we have any critical incident, we try to learn from our experience and we try to build from that," Roos said. "There'll be lessons learned."

HIGH-SPEED POLICE CHASE ENDS IN CRASH

BOISE • Authorities say a high-speed police chase of a pickup truck that began in Gem County ended when the truck crashed near Eagle.

The Idaho Statesman reports that a vehicle from the Gem County Sheriff's Office pursued the Dodge pickup into Ada County.

Ada County deputies picked up the chase, which reached speeds of up to 85 miles per hour.

The pursuit ended when the truck crashed into a field just after midnight at the intersection of Idaho Highway 16 and Floating Feather Road.

YELLOWSTONE PARK OFFICIALS PROPOSE NEW ENTRANCE

BOZEMAN, Mont. • Yellowstone National Park officials have proposed adding a second entrance near the Roosevelt Arch to help abate traffic congestion at the popular landmark.

The historic stone archway at the park's northern entrance near Gardiner is a popular place for visitors to stop for photos.

The Bozeman Daily Chronicle reports the proposal released Thursday calls for a new access road that will let visitors avoid the line of vehicles under the arch.

The plan also would expand parking and new pedestrian walkways in downtown Gardiner just outside of the entrance.

The National Park Service is taking public comment on the plan until Aug. 13.

Douglas Horngard, center, and Raymond Schwarte, left, attorneys for Mark Lugo, speak to reporters outside of a San Francisco Superior Courtroom in San Francisco, Friday. Lugo is accused of stealing a valuable 1965 Picasso drawing “Tete de Femme” from the Weinstein Gallery in downtown San Francisco.

Police Say Picasso Theft Was Part of Luxury Spree

BY TERRY COLLINS AND CHRIS HAWLEY
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO • A string of art heists at New York galleries and hotels went unsolved until an arrest in the theft of a Picasso drawing in San Francisco led authorities to a treasure trove inside a nondescript New Jersey apartment.

Police believe Mark Lugo is responsible for at least eight thefts since June totaling more than $600,000 worth of artwork, including a $350,000 drawing by French artist Fernand Leger. Pieces from seven of those thefts were recovered during a police raid of Lugo’s Hoboken, N.J., home, as he awaited arraignment in the eighth case in San Francisco.

Lugo, 30, pleaded not guilty Friday to charges of grand theft, burglary and possession of stolen property for allegedly stealing the 1965 Picasso drawing called “Tete de Femme (Head of a Woman).”

Workers at the Weinstein

Gallery reported that a young man brazenly snatched the piece, worth more than $200,000, from the wall on July 5 and casually walked away. Surveillance video from a nearby restaurant showed a man matching Lugo’s description strolling by with the framed drawing tucked under his arm.

The taking of another Picasso from the William Bennett Gallery in Manhattan’s Soho district went similarly.

The thief came into the gallery during business hours on June 27, lifted the piece off the wall and walked out with a rare print of the etching “Sculptor and Two Heads” worth about $30,000, said William Ledford, managing partner of the gallery.

“We’ve got a Picasso installation downstairs and he sort of went right to the middle of it and basically just lifted the piece off the wall,” Ledford said. “Soho is such a retail-centric area, and everybody’s got shopping bags. Our best guesstimate is that he just kind of stuffed it in a shopping bag and off he went.”

The next day, it happened at the posh Carlyle hotel on the city’s Upper East Side.

The 1917 Leger piece, “Composition with Mechanical Elements,” disappeared from a hallway in the hotel lobby around 3 a.m. on June 28, according to Christina Warner, assistant director of the Helly Nahmad Gallery, which had loaned the drawing to the hotel.

“He’s got a lot of confidence to do that,” Warner said.

Lugo apparently also had good taste.

Police who raided his apartment said the stolen works were prominently displayed around his home and may not have been meant for sale.

“The Picasso was hanging on his wall,” said Hoboken Police Sgt. Edwin Pantoja. “The others were displayed all over his apartment. He had a nice little gallery going on.”

Lugo worked at upscale Manhattan restaurants, including Per Se, where he was a kitchen server in 2005 and 2006, said its spokesman Gerald San Jose. San Jose declined further comment, other than to say Lugo left his job in good standing.

Police say art wasn’t the only luxury for Lugo, who also worked as a wine steward.

He faces charges in New Jersey for allegedly stealing $6,000 worth of wine from Gary’s Wine & Marketplace in April.

Lugo was caught on security cameras taking two $2,000 bottles of 2006 Chateau Petrus Pomerol on April 25, said Robert Lesnick, the Wayne, N.J., store’s loss-prevention manager. He returned four days later to take another bottle — wearing the same clothes, Lesnick said.

“This guy is a habitual thief,” Lesnick said. “He has good taste, apparently. But he’s still a thief.”

Three Charged in Alleged Airport Drug Smuggling Scheme

BY JENNIFER DOBNER
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • A federal grand jury has indicted two former Salt Lake City airport contract employees and another man on conspiracy and drug possession charges.

Federal prosecutors say they smuggled about 500 grams of methamphetamine between Utah, California and Georgia by bypassing airport security and using employee doors to move the drugs through the Salt Lake City airport.

The 10-count indictment was unsealed Friday in Salt Lake City’s federal court.

U.S. District Court records show Angel F. Segura, 43, of West Jordan, is facing seven counts of conspiracy and attempted possession of methamphetamine with the intent to distribute and three counts of entering an airport area in violation of security requirements.

Also charged are Oswaldo Rosas, 29, and Jesus A. Aleman, 20, both of Salt Lake City. Rosas is charged with three counts of conspiracy and attempted drug possession and two of violation airport security rules. Aleman is facing just two drug charges.

talked about.”

Court papers say the men met on June 10 in a Salt Lake City International Airport parking lot. Segura gave Rosas a package, which he placed in his backpack and carried into the airport through a secure employee door, court papers say. Rosas bypassed security and took the package into a Delta Airlines lounge, court papers say.

Segura cleared security, recovered the package from the lounge and then transported the drugs — about three kilograms of meth — in a black duffel bag to a client at a hotel near the Atlanta airport, court papers say.

In Salt Lake City, Segura and Rosas were both employed by an airport contractor that provides passenger services, such as curbside baggage handling and wheelchair transportation, airport Director of Operations Dave Korzep said.

Segura worked at the airport for two and a half years and Rosas for about one and a half, he said. Both have been fired.

Segura made an initial appearance in federal court on Friday and a judge ordered him held pending a Sept. 19 trial. A telephone message left for his federal public defender after hours on Friday was not returned.

Aleman and Rosas are both scheduled to make initial court appearances on Monday. Court records show no listed attorney for Aleman. Rosas’s attorney, Darin Goff, also did not return an after-hours message Friday.

Each of the conspiracy and attempted possession of methamphetamine charges carries a possible maximum penalty of life in prison and the airport security violations each carry a penalty of up to 10 years in prison.

Study Finds Problem in Red Blood Cells Stored for Long Periods

BY JAY PRICE
McClatchy Newspapers

DURHAM, N.C. • A Duke University Medical Center study has found a problem in red blood cells stored for long periods that may explain why older blood has been shown to cause heart attacks, respiratory failure and other problems in patients who get transfusions.

The finding could open the way to changes that could make blood safer and ease periodic shortages in the blood supply, like the one now gripping the nation.

Even slightly more shelf life might help, said Sherry Mitchell, director of blood services for the Triangle area chapter of the American Red Cross in Raleigh, N.C.

“We’d still be faced with having to collect 1,600 units a day (for 103 hospitals in North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee), but it might buy us a bit more time when we have these down cycles.”

Under federal law, whole blood can be stored for up to 42 days. Some studies have found, though, that patients who receive blood stored even for a couple of weeks are more likely to suffer infections, cardiovascular problems and even organ failure, particularly those who use several units of older blood.

Anything that could increase the nation’s blood supply even slightly has big implications for the Red Cross, which takes in about 14 million pints from donors and moves it to hospitals in a complicated logistical web. Currently, that web faces a shortage because collections in May and June hit a 12-year low.

Previous studies of older blood have mainly focused on outcomes for patients using it, rather than the specific mechanisms that lead to the problems.

The new Duke study, published Friday in the journal Critical Care Medicine, found that stored red blood cells begin to lose the ability to release a key molecule called adenosine-5'-triphosphate (ATP), which helps prevent the cell from sticking to the walls of blood vessels.

The researchers think the stuck cells cause a number of problems, from obstructing blood circulation in the lungs to hampering the bloodstream’s ability to deliver oxygen around the body, said Dr. Timothy J. McMahon, an associate professor of medicine at Duke and senior author of the study.

Loughner Lawyers Want Clinical Assessments Recorded

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) • Attorneys for the Tucson shooting rampage suspect want all clinical assessments psychiatrists performed on him videotaped while he's at a federal prison medical facility in Missouri.

Jared Lee Loughner's lawyers filed the request Friday in U.S. District Court in Tucson.

In another development, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals scheduled an Aug. 30 hearing in San Francisco on an appeal by Loughner's attorneys over forced medication.

Loughner's attorneys said the videos have "likely evidentiary value" and they want to safeguard his constitutional rights. They also want to see copies of all videos immediately.

Loughner has been at the Springfield, Mo., facility since May 27 after a federal judge concluded he was mentally unfit to help in his legal defense.

The 22-year-old has pleaded not guilty to 49 charges in the Jan. 8 rampage that killed six and wounded 13, including U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords.

Mental health experts have determined Loughner suffers from schizophrenia and will try to make him psychologically fit to stand trial. He will spend up to four months at the Missouri facility.

Friday's filing by lead Loughner attorney Judy Clarke said the "videotaping is for the protection of the defendant subject to commitment and restoration efforts by the government" and the defense team wanted copies of all videos.

If Loughner is later determined to be competent enough for trial, the court proceedings will resume. If he isn't deemed competent at the end of his treatment, Loughner's stay at the facility can be extended.

Loughner's lawyers haven't said whether they intend to present an insanity defense, but they have noted in court filings that his mental condition will likely be a central issue at trial.

A federal appeals court ruled Tuesday that prison officials can't resume their forcible medication of psychotropic drugs for Loughner.

The ruling kept in place an earlier order that temporarily stopped the involuntary medication of Loughner. The order will remain in effect until the court rules on an appeal by Loughner's attorneys over the larger issue of forced medication.

A missing person flier about eight-year-old Leiby Kletzky remains in a subway station on July 13 in the New York after he was found killed and dismembered earlier that day. The flier was distributed by the Shomrim patrol, a local volunteer group whose name means guardians in Hebrew. In the days before he was found dead, the search party to find Leiby grew to as many as 5,000 people.

Orthodox Communities Rely on Patrols for Safety

BY KAREN MATTHEWS
Associated Press

NEW YORK • When an 8-year-old boy from an insulated, ultra-Orthodox Jewish neighborhood in Brooklyn failed to make it home from day camp, his parents' first call was not to the police, but to the Shomrim patrol, a local volunteer group whose name means guardians in Hebrew.

Hasidic areas like Borough Park, where a Shomrim-organized search party looked for little Leiby Kletzky, are worlds unto themselves. Their members are identifiable by their distinctive appearance — wigs and modest dresses for the women, beards and side curls for the men. Community members send their children to Jewish schools, speak Yiddish as a first language and shun modern distractions like television.

Yet another distinction is the patrols, which residents turn to first because "they know the community, they speak the language, they have the trust of the entire community," said Isaac Abraham, a leader of the ultra-Orthodox in Brooklyn's Williamsburg section.

The search party for Leiby grew to as many as 5,000 people and served as a window into the tradition in these ultra-Orthodox communities of relying on each other, which stems in part from a history of persecution against Jews in Eastern Europe.

"We've always come together," said Shmuel Eckstein, a friend of the Kletzky who was praying with the family Thursday. "It's what we've always done, historically."

Neighbors looking for the boy stopped knocking on doors Wednesday when his remains were found and police arrested Levi Aron, a 35-year-old hardware supply clerk who has pleaded not guilty to charges that he killed Leiby and dismembered him.

Despite the endeavor's tragic end, the search was a powerful example of the value of Shomrim and similar patrols to their communities, said state Sen. Eric Adams, a retired NYPD captain who represents a neighboring Brooklyn district.

"The community patrols have the manpower that can immediately go into the crevices of a community that police may not even be aware of," he said. "The deployment of the community patrol allows the police to go further in their search because the community group was on the ground."

Shomrim members have been credited with helping police make arrests, even while placing themselves in danger. Four patrol members were wounded in Brooklyn last September as they were tailing a man they suspected of exposing himself to young girls.

And residents rely on Shomrim because police don't have the resources to check out minor issues like a noise in the backyard but Shomrim does, said Jacob Daskal, a coordinator and founder of the Borough Park Shomrim patrol.

He said the group has 150 members who are all required to volunteer at least one night a month. Dispatchers take hotline calls and send out patrols. Volunteers pay for their own gas. Expenses like office rent and two-way radios are funded by donations with some support from local elected officials.

Patrol members cooperate with the police and wear jackets or vests issued by the department.

Shomrim groups have also arisen in other cities with large communities of observant Jews, but the groups are not without their own challenges. While Shomrim members say the volunteers work tirelessly to keep their neighborhoods safe, critics have accused some of being vigilantes who target blacks.

Two Shomrim members in Baltimore were charged with assaulting a black teenager last November and telling him, "You don't belong around here, get outta here!" Charges against them are pending. In a 1996 case in Brooklyn, several Crown Heights Shomrim members were accused of beating a black man whose nephew they suspected of bike theft.

Adams, who is black, is well aware that critics have accused Shomrim members of targeting black New Yorkers. He said the group doesn't bar minorities or non-Jews from participating.

"People can't be sitting on the sidelines complaining about those who volunteer," Adams said.

Daskal said his group has no non-Jewish members "because no one applied." He said blacks and other non-Jews would be welcome if they passed background checks.

Asked about Shomrim this week, Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly praised the group and said he understands that there is a tradition in the Hasidic community of notifying the citizen patrols first.

But Kelly said he wished the Kletzky family had called 911 at the same time, not two to 2½ hours later. He did not say a quick call to 911 could have saved Leiby.

"But make no mistake about it, we want to be notified right away; we don't think it's a good idea to lag in notifications to the police," he said. "I think also that notifications to Shomrim — the community relies on them, they do a good job, we think that is totally appropriate."

Obama Fundraising Report Signals Juggernaut Campaign

BY DAN EGGEN AND
T.W. FARNAM
The Washington Post

President Barack Obama has amassed a formidable team of more than 240 big-dollar fundraisers just three months into his 2012 re-election campaign, including more than two dozen bundlers who have each raised at least $500,000.

The bundler list and other campaign data released Friday provide further evidence of an astonishing fundraising effort by Obama amid a struggling economy and mediocre presidential approval ratings.

Obama's official campaign raised $46.3 million and spent $11 million from April to June of this year, according to new documents filed with the Federal Election Commission. That left it with a whopping $37 million in the bank, including money left over from the first quarter. Obama also brought in $39.3 million in a joint fundraising effort with the Democratic National Committee, the filings show.

The numbers put Obama far ahead of his GOP rivals, who are led by Mitt Romney with nearly $18.4 million raised. The former Massachusetts governor also reported $12 million of cash on hand at the end of June.

The rest of the field lags well behind, and some, including former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, are already in the red.

Former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty spent $2 million in the quarter, leaving him only $1.4 million in primary cash to battle Romney and other contenders in the weeks ahead. Rep. Michele Bachmann, R-Minn., on the other hand, has $3.6 million in the bank only weeks after declaring her candidacy.

For Obama, the sheer number of bundlers — and the volume of donations they represent — signals another potential juggernaut like 2008, when he shattered all records by raising $745 million. During his first campaign, he had 47 bundlers who raised $500,000 or more — a total he is already more than halfway to matching.

Obama's biggest bundlers include longtime supporters such as Hollywood mogul Jeffrey Katzenberg, former New Jersey Gov. and Sen. Jon Corzine, and fashion editor Anna Wintour. But there are new names on the campaign's bundlers list as well, such as Marc Benioff, a tech CEO who runs salesforce.com.

Several of the key bundlers, including Benioff, held events at their homes in which Obama came. These events usually gave donors special access to Obama, including the chance to ask the president direct questions in a closed-door atmosphere.

Hollywood super-agent Ari Emanuel, the brother of former White House chief of staff Rahm Emanuel, helped raise between $50,000 and $100,000.

Romney did not release a full list of bundlers, but his campaign was required to disclose bundling by six registered lobbyists, totaling $517,000 in contributions. The lobbyists included Patrick Durkin of Barclays, who raised $168,000, and Wayne Berman, with Ogilvy Government Relations, who raised $102,000.

The lobbyist bundler requirement was put in place by an ethics law sponsored by then-Sen. Obama, who has not accepted contributions from registered lobbyists or corporate PACs in his presidential bids. The Obama campaign attacked the GOP field on Friday for declining to identify their top fundraisers.

"President George W. Bush disclosed his bundlers, but the current GOP field has not followed suit, raising questions about the extent to which special interests are funding their campaigns," said spokesman Ben LaBolt.

Romney spokeswoman Andrea Saul responded, "All of our donors are public."

The Obama campaign has sought to emphasize the grass-roots side of his fundraising operation, noting that donors who gave $200 or less accounted for about a third of his total. The campaign says it had 550,000 donors in the second quarter, with an average contribution of less than $70.

But the data show that wealthier contributors are also a crucial part of his fundraising operation. Obama raised nearly a quarter of his total contributions, more than $20 million, from people who gave the maximum possible donation of $5,000 to his campaign and $30,800 to the Democratic National Committee.

The share of Obama's funding from small donors lags his entire 2008 campaign but is well ahead of the first quarter of 2007, when Obama's bid was getting off the ground and had yet to generate the ground swell of enthusiasm that eventually led 4 million people to donate money to him.

The numbers are more bleak for many Republican candidates. Pawlenty, who has struggled to gain traction in the polls, raised less than $4.5 million and spent nearly $2.5 million, records show.

Judge Dismisses Safeway Suit Over Tobacco Ban

U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken threw out a suit filed by Safeway Inc. against San Francisco that argued grocery stores had a constitutional right to sell cigarettes.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • A federal judge on Friday found that the city of San Francisco has a right to ban tobacco sales in stores with pharmacies even if the pharmacy is not the store's main business.

U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken dismissed a suit filed by grocery chain Safeway Inc. against the city that argued grocery stores had a constitutional right to sell cigarettes.

Wilken wrote that the city was acting within its rightful authority. "The purpose of the ... ordinance, to promote the public health by preventing people from becoming addicted to tobacco and by helping those already addicted to stop smoking, is legitimate and even compelling," she wrote.

The first version of the ordinance, passed in 2008, had contained an exemption for grocery stores and so-called big-box stores with pharmacies under the same roof.

After a California appellate court determined that the exemption for grocery and big box stores violated constitutional equal protection guarantees, the city's Board of Supervisors passed an amendment last year removing the exemption.

That more recent version of the ban led to Safeway's suit, which Wilken dismissed with prejudice, meaning the company could not file an amended version of its complaint.

"Those who operate pharmacies have chosen to participate in our health care delivery system, and that should not include the delivery of cigarettes," said San Francisco City Attorney Dennis Herrera, who sought the dismissal.

Safeway officials said they did not yet have a chance to review the ruling. "We are disappointed in the decision," said Susan Houghton, the company's director of public and government affairs.

Businessman Buys Frank Lloyd Wright's Ennis House

BY JACOB ADELMAN
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Billionaire Ron Burkle has snapped up Frank Lloyd Wright's landmark Ennis House at the relative bargain price of about $4.5 million, the building's sellers announced Friday.

Ennis House Foundation chairwoman Marla Felber said Burkle, a supermarket tycoon, would continue rehabilitating the 1924 concrete block home, on which the foundation had already spent $6.5 million for repairs.

"Mr. Burkle has a track record of preserving important historic homes, and we know he'll be an excellent steward of the Ennis House," Felber said in a release announcing the sale of the structure, the last and largest of four homes Wright designed in an experimental "textile block" style.

Inspired by Mayan ruins in Uxmal, Mexico, the 6,000-square-foot estate is built from 27,000 blocks featuring 24 design variations and has breathtaking views of the Hollywood Hills. It has been featured in several movies, including "Blade Runner," "House on Haunted Hill" and "Grand Canyon."

The house, which sits on a hilltop in the Los Feliz neighborhood north of downtown, had been severely damaged in the 1994 Northridge earthquake and torrential rains caused the retaining wall to buckle in March 2005, sending several of the building's patterned blocks down the hill.

The house was completed for men's clothing store owners Charles and Mabel Ennis. Sold in 1936, it has changed hands several times and has seen various alterations, including the addition of a lap pool on its north terrace.

Romney Banks 3-to-1 Cash Edge over Closest Rival

The gap between Romney and his rivals suggest many GOP donors are waiting on the sidelines, watching the topsy-turvy campaign as the candidates start to engage one another.

BY PHILIP ELLIOTT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Mitt Romney leads all Republicans in the contest for campaign cash, cementing his frontrunner status among contenders hoping to go up against President Barack Obama in 2012.

While Romney's $12.7 million in the bank far outdistanced a spread-out GOP field, dollars don't always translate to votes. The chasm between Romney and his rivals suggested many Republican donors are waiting on the sidelines, watching the topsy-turvy campaign foment and the candidates finally start to engage one another.

"It's a little unsettling that people have so underperformed expectations," said Dave Carney, an adviser to Texas Gov. Rick Perry, who is weighing joining the race. "Clearly, there's some ... concern about either economics or about the candidates. I don't know the reason."

Romney, a ferocious fundraiser who spent weeks on the road collecting pledges and checks, added more than $18.4 million to his account during the April-to-June fundraising period. That sum outpaced his closest rival to announce numbers so far, Rep. Michele Bachmann, by a 3-to-1 margin in banked cash. Yet he still came up short for his campaign's internal $50 million goal for the first half of this year.

Unlike four years ago when he hoped to help his first presidential bid with $44.6 million from his own personal fortune, Romney so far has not opened his wallet to help his second White House bid.

Bachmann, a darling among tea partiers, said she would report $3.6 million in the bank, a blend of fundraising and a transfer from her congressional campaign fund. She brought in a total of $4.2 million since formally beginning her campaign in June, much of it available for the primary campaign.

A potent fundraiser, Bachmann relied on small donors to raise $13.5 million for her 2010 re-election campaign and recently brought on board veteran high-dollar fundraising consultants to help build a national operation.

Tim Pawlenty, the former two-term governor of Minnesota, raised just around $4 million during the April-to-June period and has about $1.4 million available for his primary contest and some $600,000 more available if he were to capture the nomination.

The reports also detailed problems for former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, whose campaign was carrying more than $1 million in debt. The former Georgia lawmaker — whose bid has struggled since 18 staff members, consultants and advisers resigned en masse — raised $2.1 million for the quarter but spent $1.8 million. Gingrich listed about $322,000 in the bank.

Former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, who lost re-election in 2006, reported taking in $582,000, with less than $225,000 banked for the primaries.

The financial picture for the 2012 presidential nominating race slowly came into clearer focus with the reports. While money doesn't guarantee success, it does pay for crucial television ads, polling to measure whether a message is working and staff to run the mechanics of a national election.

The numbers are one of the first measures of the campaigns' early strength as they look to take on Obama's well-funded re-election bid. On Wednesday, Obama's team announced it had raised $86 million during the second quarter of the year for his campaign and the Democratic Party.

Georgia businessman Herman Cain has said he raised almost $2.5 million in the first weeks of his White House bid, but some of that came out of his own pocket. Georgia businessman Herman Cain brought in almost $2.6 million in the first weeks of his White House bid, but the talk show host and Godfathers Pizza CEO banked less than the $500,000 he loaned himself.

Rep. Ron Paul, the Texan with a diehard following among the party's libertarian wing, reported $4 million in the bank. That sum included more than $1 million from his House campaign committee; he announced he would not seek another term. was expected to report a strong fundraising quarter.

Aides said former Utah Gov. Jon Huntsman has collected $4.1 million, but as much as half of that could be money he's put into the campaign himself.

Huntsman declared himself a candidate in June, but did not file his paperwork with the FEC until July. That means the first disclosures from the Huntsman camp will be on Oct. 15, when the July-through-September report is due.

On the sidelines, former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin said her political action committee reported raising about $1.7 million during the first six months of the year and spending almost as much, about $1.6 million. The 2008 vice presidential pick has flirted with a White House run and has said she plans to make a decision later this summer.

Hollywood Publicist Slaying Investigation Now Closed

BY GREG RISLING
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • A police investigation into the slaying of Hollywood publicist Ronni Chasen has been officially closed without finding any evidence that the gunman who later killed himself at a Hollywood apartment building had any accomplices, authorities said Friday.

The Beverly Hills Police Department said detectives conducted an exhaustive investigation after the shooting in November that occurred as Chasen, 64, drove home at night in her Mercedes Benz.

Authorities reviewed financial documents, 150,000 emails and texts, as well as following numerous tips.

Police assigned to the case worked more than 10,000 hours to examine every "tip, theory and legitimate lead in order to bring this investigation to conclusion," a police statement said.

Police said they are confident that ex-convict Harold Martin Smith acted alone in gunning down Chasen hours after she attended the premiere of the movie "Burlesque."

The 43-year-old career criminal killed himself on Dec. 1 when police arrived at the apartment building to question him about the Nov. 16 shooting of Chasen.

The gun used to kill Chasen was the same weapon Smith used to commit suicide, authorities said.

Police believe Smith killed the publicist as part of a robbery attempt when he stopped her car at an intersection. He apparently did not take anything and fled on a bicycle before anyone could see him in the early morning darkness.

School Program Thanks Helpers

The Kimberly Safe Routes to School program would like to acknowledge some of the very special people that made the first year of Walking Wednesdays possible.

Each week between 70 and 130 elementary school students met at the Kimberly City Park to walk to school together for their health and to have fun. At the park volunteers from the Mayor's Youth Advisory Council, city council members, law enforcement, city employees, high school health students and Mayor Overacre met to walk with the students ensuring that they all made it safely to school. The students enjoyed their time walking each week and made new friends along the way. Small token prizes and coupons were given out to the walkers for participating and a drawing was held at the end of the year walking celebration.

The grand prizes of bicycles were generously donated by Gary and Polly Hulsey, Mayor David Overacre, Christina Overacre and Wal-Mart.

The Safe Routes to School program would also like to thank Blake and Ginnette Ruffing, owners of Arctic Circle of Kimberly, for their donations of coupons for the students each week and for providing an ice cream social for all of the volunteer students.

The program is looking forward to next fall and continuing its effort to engage more students in walking to school.

WSJ Publisher Quits in Phone-Hacking Scandal

BY JILL LAWLESS AND ROBERT BARR

The Associated Press

LONDON • Rupert Murdoch accepted the resignation of The Wall Street Journal's publisher and the chief of his British operations on Friday as the once-defiant media mogul struggled to control an escalating phone hacking scandal with a public statement of contrition and a personal apology to the family of a murdered schoolgirl.

The scandal has knocked billions off the value of Murdoch's News Corp., scuttled his ambitions to take control of lucrative British Sky Broadcasting, withered his political power in Britain — and is threatening to destabilize his globe-spanning business.

The controversy claimed its first victim in the United States as Les Hinton, chief executive of the Murdoch-owned Dow Jones & co. and publisher of the Wall Street Journal, announced he was resigning with immediate effect.

Murdoch's British lieutenant, Rebekah Brooks, stepped down earlier Friday.

Hinton has worked for Murdoch's News Corp. for 52 years and is one of the media baron's staunchest allies. A member of the board of The Associated Press, Hinton became head of Dow Jones in December 2007.

He was chairman of Murdoch's British newspaper arm during some of the years the abuses took place, but testified to a parliamentary committee in 2009 that he had seen no evidence phone hacking had spread beyond a single jailed reporter: Clive Goodman.

Debt Showdown: Obama Presses for 'Something Big'

BY DAVID ESPO

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Struggling to avert an unprecedented national default, congressional leaders jettisoned negotiations on a sweeping deficit-reduction package Friday despite a plea from President Barack Obama to "do something big" to stabilize America's finances.

Instead, lawmakers embarked on rival fallback plans as a critical Aug. 2 deadline neared: a House version given little chance of success, even by some supporters, and a bipartisan Senate approach holding out more promise.

At the behest of conservatives, House Republicans announced plans to vote next week on legislation to raise the $14.3 trillion debt limit automatically if Congress approves a balanced-budget constitutional amendment. Senate approval of that amendment seemed extremely unlikely in a vote set for the next few days.

Senate leaders from both parties worked on their own measure that would allow Obama to raise the debt limit without a prior vote by lawmakers. That plan was likely to include limits on spending across thousands of government programs, and possibly a down payment on cuts, as well.

As part of that proposal, a panel of lawmakers would recommend cuts in benefits programs by the end of the year, with the House and Senate required to vote yes-or-no on the package without possibility of changes.

"If they show me a serious plan I'm ready to move," declared Obama at his second news conference of the week, even though he said he wanted a far more sweeping deal that might even have raised the age of Medicare eligibility from 65 to 67 if Republicans would increase selected taxes.

"We are obviously running out of time," he said.

Numerous officials have cautioned that a default will occur if the debt limit is not increased by Aug. 2, warning also of a calamitous effect on an economy struggling to recover from the worst recession in decades.

"Now the debate will move from a room in the White House to the House and Senate floors," said Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell, indicating that the daily closed-door negotiations at the White House were a thing of the past.

The House Republican rank and file were advised in a GOP meeting that, barring action by Congress, the government would be able to pay only about half its bills after Aug. 2, and separately that a default could cost the government trillions of dollars in the form of higher interest rates on the debt.

"No matter what 50 percent you choose to pay, there are things in that 50 percent you don't pay that would have really severe consequences," Rep. John Campbell, R-Calif., said afterward.

"There are people out there who keep saying we don't need to increase the debt limit at all. I think this was a way of saying, the people who are saying that need to look at the practical consequences of what they are saying."

Police in Georgia Shut Down Girls' Lemonade Stand

MIDWAY, Ga. (AP) • Police in Georgia have shut down a lemonade stand run by three girls trying to save up for a trip to a water park, saying they didn't have a business license or the required permits.

Midway Police Chief Kelly Morningstar says police also didn't know how the lemonade was made, who made it or what was in it.

The girls had been operating for one day when Morningstar and another officer cruised by.

The girls needed a business license, peddler's permit and food permit to operate, even on residential property. The permits cost $50 a day or $180 per year.

One girl, 14-year-old Casity Dixon, says the three had to listen to police and shut down.

The girls are now doing chores and yard work to make money.

Newt Gingrich Campaign Over $1 Million in Debt

BY SHANNON MCCAFFREY
The Associated Press

ATLANTA • Newt Gingrich's presidential campaign is more than $1 million in debt, according to his campaign disclosure provided to The Associated Press on Friday.

The former House speaker's campaign raised $2.1 million since he got into the race earlier this year. But he spent $1.8 million.

Gingrich said he has $322,222 cash on hand.

Gingrich, however, listed $1.03 million in debt, almost half of that for private air travel. The Republican owes $451,946 to Washington, D.C.-based Moby Dick Airways and more than $100,000 for legal fees.

Facing a cash shortfall, Gingrich has in recent months has scaled back his spending, flying commercial airlines rather than corporate jets.

His campaign said he had received contributions from 20,217 donors, with 17,959 writing checks for $100 or less.

One of his campaign's creditors is Gingrich himself. The campaign owes him $47,005 for its use of mailing lists owned by the former Georgia congressman.

Gingrich's White House bid has struggled since 18 staff members, consultants and advisers, including his two chief fundraisers, resigned earlier this year. His campaign filing shows that Gingrich continued to collect donations after that June 9 mass resignation.

N.M. MAN REMAINS JAILED IN TAINTED YOGURT CASE

Anthony Garcia was indicted on charges of adulterating food and making false statements. Police say he was linked to the yogurt through DNA samples.

BY SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN
The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • A New Mexico man indicted on charges that he handed out a semen-tainted yogurt sample at a grocery store will remain behind bars pending his trial after a federal judge ruled Friday that he was a danger to the community.

Anthony Garcia, 32, was indicted this week on charges of adulterating food and making false statements to federal investigators. Police say he was linked to the yogurt through DNA samples.

The judge sided with prosecutors during Garcia's detention hearing, ruling that he should remain in custody without bail. Garcia has not yet entered a plea. John Van Butcher, his public defender, did not immediately return a call seeking comment.

Garcia is accused of handing out the yogurt sample at a Sunflower Market in Albuquerque in January.

Officers responded to the store after a woman said she believed the yogurt she was given was actually a bodily fluid. The woman told police that after tasting the sample, she spit on the floor several times and wiped her mouth on the garment she was wearing to get the taste out of her mouth, according to court documents.

Investigators collected samples of the woman's spit from the floor and took the garment she was wearing as evidence. They later served a search warrant and collected blood and DNA samples from Garcia.

Police said they linked sperm cells found in both the victim's saliva and on the

Midday Shooting Kills 1, Wounds 2 in Busy Atlanta

BY JEFF MARTIN
The Associated Press

ATLANTA • A security guard in shirt and tie opened fire on three women Friday in a parking deck in a bustling Atlanta business district, killing one and wounding two, police said. The suspect left in a black Toyota Prius but was arrested hours later.

Nkosi Thandiwe, 22, was taken into custody and charged with one count of murder and two counts of aggravated assault, police spokesman Carlos Campos said. He worked as a security guard in a high-rise on Peachtree Street, directly across the street from the parking deck where the gunfire broke out, Campos said.

The shootings happened around lunchtime in the Midtown neighborhood, where professionals who work in the densely packed office towers were leaving their desks to head to restaurants.

The survivors were taken to hospitals. Atlanta police spokeswoman Kim Jones said one was shot in the back and another was shot in the ankle.

The public relations firm MSL Group identified the wounded women as its employees, 23-year-old intern Lauren Garcia and 24-year-old assistant account executive Tiffany Ferenczy. Both were in stable condition, the firm said in a statement late Friday.

Debt

told reporters after the meeting he had discussed the additional costs generated by a default — an event that would be likely to raise interest rates.

At his news conference, Obama said that would mean “effectively a tax increase on everybody” by affecting car purchasers, students and businesses.

The second White House news conference in a week was a testament to the overriding political and economic significance of the issue that has convulsed Congress as well as the administration.

Urging lawmakers to cut trillions from deficits at the same time they raise the debt limit, the president said he favored a balanced approach that included spending cuts, changes to huge government benefit programs and higher taxes on wealthy individuals and certain industries.

It was an offer Republicans could — and did — refuse.

“There are going to be no tax hikes because tax hikes destroy jobs,” said House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio.

While Boehner had earlier shown some flexibility on closing tax loopholes as part of an unprecedented deal with Obama, many Republican lawmakers are adamant that deficit reductions be limited to spending cuts.

To underscore their conservative priorities, GOP leaders scheduled a vote for next week on legislation they said would cut $111 billion in the budget year that begins Oct. 1. It would also require a steady decline in spending as a percentage of the overall economy over the next decade.

Even some supporters conceded it was a symbolic gesture given the realities of divided government.

“I think everybody knows the president won't sign this,” Campbell said after the closed-door Republican meeting.

“But we're putting a marker down, and that's an important step that begins the process of resolving this,” he added.

If so, it was in a style that only congressional insiders might recognize as the beginning of the endgame to an unprecedented problem.

McConnell issued a statement announcing the Senate would vote on both a balanced budget amendment and the House's “Cut, Cap and Balance Plan.”

His statement didn't say so, but neither measure has much, if any, chance of passage in the Democratic-controlled Senate.

Still, the votes themselves would clear the way for debate on the fallback plan the two Senate leaders have been working on for the past several days.

Experts: Casey Anthony Should Go to a Safe House

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Casey Anthony sits in the courtroom July 7 before a sentencing hearing in Orlando, Fla. Anthony was acquitted on charges of killing her 2-year-old daughter Caylee in 2008, and was found guilty on four charges of lying to law enforcement officers. She is to be released from jail Sunday.

Security experts say Anthony's lawyers should arrange several SUVs with tinted windows to whisk her away from the Orange County Jail to a safe house because Anthony has been vilified by many people who think she got away with murder.

BY MIKE SCHNEIDER AND KYLE HIGHTOWER
The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. • When Casey Anthony is released from jail Sunday, it will probably be in the middle of the night.

If her lawyers are smart, security experts say, they will arrange for several SUVs with tinted windows to pull up to the Orange County Jail. Then they will bundle her into one of them and whisk her away to a safe house, where she will be protected by bodyguards for days, if not weeks.

“I'd tell her to go to a big house in the middle of nowhere,” said Dallas-based security expert Stuart Diamond, who has worked for celebrities and federal agencies. “That would be the safest thing for her. It's more of an effort for someone to really follow through on a threat.”

Online and elsewhere, Anthony has been vilified, many believing she got away with murder. Some have wished the same fate on her that prosecutors say befell her 2-year-old daughter, Caylee.

Anthony's legal team said Friday it received an emailed death threat with a doctored photo of the 25-year-old woman with a bullet hole through her forehead. The threat was forwarded to authorities.

One of her attorneys, Cheney Mason, said Anthony is nervous about getting out of jail, and he isn't taking any chances: “We are all vigilant and I am armed.”

A jury acquitted Anthony last week of murder but found her guilty of lying to law officers investigating the disappearance of Caylee in 2008. She was sentenced to four years in prison, but with good behavior and nearly three years already served, she will be out this weekend.

Details of her release are being closely held, and the sheriff's department is not making the time public beforehand.

“This will not be a usual release,” jail spokesman Allen Moore said in an email. “Due to the high-profile nature of this case and intense, emotional interest by the public, appropriate measures will be taken to release the individual into the community in such a manner so as to preserve the safety of the individual and public.”

Hinton said that “the pain caused to innocent people (by hacking) is unimaginable.”

“That I was ignorant of what apparently happened is irrelevant, and in the circumstances I feel it is proper for me to resign from News Corp. and apologize to those hurt by the actions of News of the World,” he said.

Just a day after asserting that News Corp. had made only “minor mistakes,” Murdoch issued an apology to run in Britain's national newspapers for “serious wrongdoing” by the News of the World, which he shut down last week amid allegations of large-scale illegal hacking by its staff.

“We are sorry for the serious wrongdoing that occurred. We are deeply sorry for the hurt suffered by the individuals affected. We regret not acting faster to sort things out,” said the full-page ad, signed by Murdoch and due to run in today's editions of Britain's main national newspapers.

Murdoch promised “further concrete steps to resolve these issues and make amends for the damage they have caused.”

Murdoch also met the family of murdered schoolgirl

Milly Dowler, whose phone was hacked by the News of the World in 2002. The revelation that journalists had accessed her phone in search of scoops inflamed the long-simmering scandal about illegal eavesdropping by the newspaper.

The 80-year-old mogul emerged from the meeting at a London hotel to catcalls of “shame on you!” from hecklers. He said that “as founder of the company I was appalled to find out what had happened and I apologized.”

Dowler family lawyer Mark Lewis said Murdoch appeared humbled and had offered “a heartfelt and what seemed to be a very sincere apology.”

“I don't think somebody could have held their head in their hands so many times and said that they were sorry,” Lewis said.

Murdoch's tone was dramatically different from an interview published Thursday in the Wall Street Journal — which is owned by News Corp. — in which he said the company had handled the crisis “extremely well in every way possible” and complained he was “getting annoyed” at all the negative headlines.

The crisis claimed another senior scalp Friday as Brooks, chief executive of Murdoch's British newspaper division, resigned.

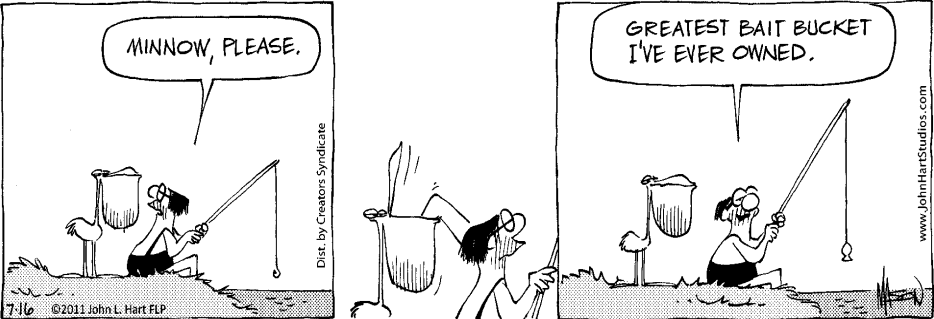

The media magnate had defended the 43-year-old Brooks in the face of demands she step down from British politicians — including her friend and neighbor, Prime Minister David Cameron. After previously refusing to accept her resignation, he made an abrupt switch as News Corp. struggled but failed to contain the crisis.

Brooks said she was stepping aside because “my desire to remain on the bridge has made me a focal point of the debate.”

“This is now detracting attention from all our honest endeavors to fix the problems of the past,” she said in an email to staff.

Gas price drop lowered inflation in June

WASHINGTON (AP) • Consumer prices fell last month for the first time in a year because of a steep drop in gas costs. But Americans paid more for autos, clothes and hotel stays, driving prices outside of volatile food and energy costs up.

The Consumer Price Index fell 0.2 percent in June, the Labor Department said Friday. Gas prices fell 6.8 percent, the steepest decline in two and a half years.

After excluding volatile food and gas costs, core prices rose 0.3 percent. That was the second straight monthly gain and the largest back-to-back increase since the summer of 2008.

NEW YORK (AP) • Activist investor Carl Icahn is offering to take Clorox Co. private in a deal that values the consumer products maker at about $10.2 billion.

The billionaire investor said in a regulatory filing Friday that his firm has proposed paying $76.50 a share for Clorox, which makes cleaning products as well as Hidden Valley salad dressing and the Burt's Bees personal care product line.

Clorox, has about $5.2 billion in annual revenue, said it will review the proposal. The offer is an 11.8 percent premium over Thursday's closing price of $68.43 a share.

New York Begins Collecting Taxes on Indian Cigarettes

BY MICHAEL GORMLEY
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. • New York's renewed effort to collect taxes on cigarettes and tobacco products sold by Indian-operated companies has led to seizures of $1.2 million worth of untaxed tobacco products in the last three weeks outside Indian land.

Inspections at 357 retailers by state and federal law enforcement resulted in the confiscation of almost 20,000 cartons of cigarettes and nearly 25,000 cigars, Lt. Gov. Robert Duffy said Friday. The inspections included off-reservation Indian shops and non-Indians selling untaxed Indian tobacco products.

It's the first step in a new enforcement program that is expected to bring $27 million in tax revenue to the state this fiscal year. Enforcement will continue to include inspections of retailers and stopping vehicles carrying tobacco products.

Friday's announcement follows nearly two decades of failed efforts to tax Indian cigarettes, some of which led to violence. Gov. Andrew Cuomo promised to secure the lost tax revenue and create a fair market for non-Indian businesses operating near reservations.

Courts have sided with New York in its current effort to collect taxes from wholesalers and in distribution off the reservations.

Future steps could include trying to collect taxes on the growing trade in cigarettes manufactured by Indian-owned companies. Tribes, citing federal treaties guaranteeing their sovereignty, argue they are exempt from taxation.

"We will never take any action to collect state taxes or allow the state to do so on our territory. That is not something that's open for discussion," said Seneca Nation President Robert

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Director of State Operations Howard Glaser, left, and Commissioner Thomas Mattox of the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance, listen as New York Lt. Gov. Robert Duffy speaks during a news conference at the Capitol in Albany, N.Y., on Friday. After decades of delay, New York has begun collecting taxes on cigarettes and tobacco products sold by Indian-operated companies. Inspections over the last three weeks of 357 retailers by state and federal law enforcement resulted in the seizing of 19,744 cartons of cigarettes and 24,882 cigars. Officials say the products weren't properly taxed.

Odawi Porter.

Porter said the courts don't allow for taxation of tobacco products manufactured by tribes.

While the Senecas in Western New York are the biggest sellers of national name-brand cigarettes, the Oneida Nation in Central New York has turned to manufacturing its own brands and selling them in their stores and its Turning Stone Casino.

The Oneida Nation stated it won't interfere with the state's effort to collect tax from non-Indian cigarette manufacturers and sellers, but cites federal law that prohibits taxation of cigarettes made and sold on a reservation.

The state appears to dispute the tribes over whether it can collect taxes on Indian-manufactured cigarettes, but Duffy wouldn't answer questions on whether the Cuomo administration will try. He said the administration will seek further negotiations with tribes.

The state's enforcement action also targets untaxed cigarettes from southern states and from Internet sales, but much of the most visible enforcement will involve the lucrative tribal sales in central and western New York. The tribes serve customers globally as some of the biggest sellers of cigarettes.

The seizures have been made since June 21, when a court lifted a temporary restraining order against the state's enforcement. Since then, Director of State Operations Howard Glaser says there has been an "uptick" in the distribution of properly taxed products.

"There clearly has been a division from unstamped to stamped products," he said Friday.

Glaser and Duffy, a former Rochester mayor, wouldn't discuss what the phase-in of more enforcement will mean or how it will be conducted.

"It would be bad for us to signal what will and won't be done," said Duffy, a former police chief. The plan is focused on enforcing the tax law at the distribution and retail levels, off reservations and Indian-owned land.

"I don't think anyone goes on tribal lands to take any enforcement activity at all," Duffy said.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

NEW YORK (AP) • The Standard and Poor's 500 stock index finished with a gain of 7.27, or 0.6 percent, to 1,316.14. Most of the gains came in the last hour of trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average added 42.61, or 0.3 percent, to 12,479.73. The Nasdaq composite rose 27.13, or 1 percent, to 2,789.80.

The late gains Friday trimmed the S&P 500's weekly losses to 2.1 percent. Had the index closed where it was at 2:30pm it would have been down 2.6 percent for the week, making it the worst week for the widely used market measure since last August.

The S&P 500 has only had two up days out of the last six as Italy appeared to be the next European country headed for a fiscal calamity.

Farmers in the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer region have until Wednesday to apply for water conservation funding through the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service.

The programs will help reduce groundwater withdrawal and increase recharge to the Lake Erie-sized aquifer that provides water to much of southern Idaho. The Idaho Water Resource Board identified five actions that funding will be targeted at: aquifer demand reduction; conversion to dry-land farming; transition to crops with lesser water requirements; conversion from groundwater irrigation to surface water; and enhancing irrigation systems to improve water delivery.

St. Luke's Health System has selected Gary Fletcher to be its chief operating officer, a new position that he will fill on Aug. 1.

Fletcher, 64, is the current chief executive officer of St. Luke's Treasure Valley operations. He will report directly to CEO David Pate, and will assume oversight of system operations and provide operational direction for St. Luke's five hospitals in Twin Falls, Ketchum, Boise, Meridian and McCall, and the more than 100 system clinics. Hospital CEOs will report directly to Fletcher.

Fletcher will be replaced by 40-year-old Chris Roth, current St. Luke's Treasure Valley COO.

"St. Luke's Health System has experienced tremendous growth over the last several years and we have many challenges and opportunities ahead of us," Pate said in a written release. "Moving forward toward accomplishing our goal of transforming health care to deliver patient-centered, quality care across our system will require a level of leadership that both Gary and Chris exemplify."

Fletcher joined St. Luke's in 1987 as COO for what was then St. Luke's Regional Medical Center. Prior to his arrival at St. Luke's, he served in hospital administration positions in Montana and Iowa.

KETCHUM • Cindy Hamlin planted her first garden room when she was pregnant with her first son.

Now, three sons later, her 2 1/2-acre sanctuary underneath towering pines south of Ketchum is an enchanting maze of garden rooms filled with lavender, thyme, peonies, herbs and wandering clematis. She even grows corn on top of her chicken coop.

“I wanted a garden where kids and animals can run through to their hearts’ content. And the garden inspires me from my studio window where I build my birdhouses,” said Hamlin, who has adorned her garden with her birdhouses as well as other intriguing objects — a sheep wagon, Galena ski markers, a limestone trough from France.

Hamlin’s garden at 202 Easy St., in the Hidden Hollow neighborhood between Hailey and Ketchum, is one of seven gardens to be showcased today on the Sawtooth Botanical Garden’s 16th annual Garden Tour from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Today’s tour — a chance for home gardeners to harvest both inspiration and ideas — features five lush gardens in the upscale Gimlet area three miles south of Ketchum, as well as one home in the Star-weather neighborhood just south

Blossoming Trend

Want a cheap way to glam up your outfit? Try hair flowers made by south-central Idaho crafters, or get creative and fashion your own.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

They’re fashioned from zippers, yarn, cotton and satin. They come in as many designs, sizes and colors as greenhouse blooms. And you can find them nestled in the hair of girls and women across south-central Idaho.

Flower hair pieces in the form of barrettes, clips, headbands and fascinators are Magic Valley’s hottest accessory — a low-budget fashion statement that’s getting a boost from royals and celebrities. Whether they’re bright and glittery or small and cute, the flowers are an affordable way to liven up an outfit.

Oakley crafter Summer Robinson started making the flowers after she couldn’t find ones she liked for her newborn daughter’s hair. After good feedback, she started crafting them to sell — with great results. She’s sold 600 of the flowers online so far this month on groopdealz.com.

Courtney Kilton of Burley makes flowers for herself and her online shop on Etsy.com. She wears hair flowers almost daily: plain blooms with casual outfits, flowers with beads and sparkles for dressy digs.

“I think they’re just the perfect accessory to show off the volume in your hair,” Kilton said.

Businesses are seeing an increased interest in flower hair clips. Nichole David of the Flutter boutique in Twin Falls said younger girls are drawn to cute flower clips, while older customers like the headbands.

“It’s a recent trend for us,” she said.

Why are they so hot right now? Liyah Babayan, owner of the Ooh La La store in Twin Falls, has her theories. In a rough economy, accessories are a cheap way to liven up an outfit, she said.

“Maybe fine jewelry isn’t the thing as much anymore,” she said, but flower hair pieces are affordable.

What’s more, high-profile fashion icons like Duchess of Cambridge

Turn Back
Your Clock

Dr. Henry Lodge, co-author of The New York Times bestseller “Younger Next Year: Live Strong, Fit and Sexy — Until You’re 80 and Beyond,” will speak on the secrets of a long, healthy life in Ketchum this month.

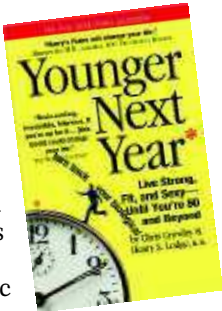

Lodge will present “Younger Next Year: The New Science of Aging” at 5:30 p.m. July 27 at the Presbyterian Church of the Big Wood, as part of the St. Luke’s Wood River Foundation’s health speaker series.

During his free public lecture, Lodge will address a whole-body approach to wellness of body, mind and spirit through changing daily habits, eating healthy and staying active.

“His insight and guidelines on turning back the biological clock and staying young, vibrant and fit at any age is unparalleled,” foundation president Dr. Scott McLean said.

Lodge, practicing internal medicine and prevention, heads a 23-physician group practice in Manhattan.

Protecting Your Decks
from Idaho Weather

Those in the know say now is a good time to weatherize your wood.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

If your deck is looking a little beaten up, now is a good time to give it a new look.

That’s just what John McClain is doing.

The Gooding man began remodeling his deck last summer. At 605 square feet, it proved a daunting task, and he didn’t finish the project. He plans to complete the deck this season, replacing old boards with new ones.

A number of other Magic Valley homeowners also are refurbishing their decks. Some of them, according to area home-improvement stores, are doing the simple task of applying a weatherization sealant to protect their wood against southern Idaho’s climate.

If you’re among the number, there are a few things you should know.

“You usually want to do it when temperatures are between 50 and 90 degrees,” said Russ Cantrell, a customer service associate at

Lowe’s Home Improvement Center. “You can’t do it in winter, and wouldn’t want to do it in 100-degree temperatures.”

The reason: In extreme heat, the sealant begins to dry before it penetrates the wood very deeply, and it doesn’t penetrate well in cold or moist weather.

A popular brand at the store is Olympic’s Maximum, Cantrell said, which offers solvent-based clear, semi-transparent and solid colors.

Jerry Fischer, owner of Krengel’s True Value Hardware, recommends a different product.

“We like Penofin,” he said, noting that it’s environment-friendly. “It uses Brazilian rosewood oil, and it penetrates really, really well.” It also comes in transparent and a variety of colors.

If daytime temperatures are expected to be high, Fischer recommends applying sealants in mornings when it’s cooler. This gives the product a chance to soak into the wood before drying.

New Pastor Takes Reins at Buhl Church

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE

For the Times-News

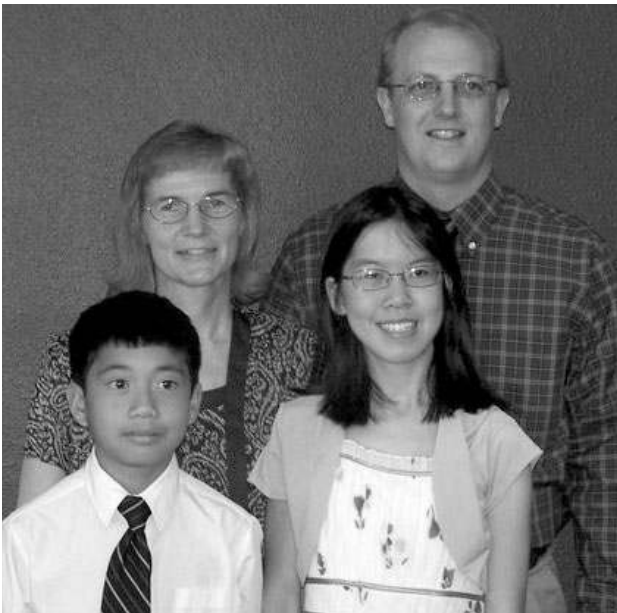

"I know the plans I have for you," the Lord says, "plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future." (NIV, Jeremiah 29:11.)

God's plan for the Buhl Church of the Nazarene included a June installation of Rev. David Ackerman as the congregation's new pastor.

"Whether in the church pulpit or conducting a classroom lecture, I've always felt my calling is to preach and proclaim the gospel, and that's what guides me through my life," Ackerman said. "It's pretty clear that we need to try growing this church and let the community know we want to make a difference."

Ackerman, 44, was born and raised in Spokane, Wash., by church-going parents. But he credits that small congregation with nurturing an introvert's early relationship with God and setting him on the path toward ministry.

"Being part of that youth group taught me courage and the pastor kind of took me under his wing," he said. "I started leading Bible studies and every few months, from about the age of 15, I would get the chance to preach in church."

In 1989 he graduated from Northwest Nazarene University in Nampa with a bachelor's degree in religion and went on to earn a Masters of Divinity at Nazarene Theological Seminary in Kansas City, Mo., and a Ph.D. at the University of Denver Iliff School of Theology. While in Colorado he served as pastor of the Eastside Church of the Nazarene.

"I met my wife, Rhonda, who grew up in the Gooding-Buhl area, while we were both students at Northwest Nazarene," Ackerman said. "She's also an ordained minister, with a focus mostly on children's ministry, and a registered nurse."

Moving back to Idaho, Ackerman attended services with the Buhl Nazarene congregation while finishing his doctoral thesis. The couple then served 10 years in the mission fields of the Philippines and Australia and returned to the states in 2008.

"I taught Bible at Asia Pacific Theological Seminary in Manila and lectured at Nazarene Theological College in Brisbane, Australia, before serving a church in Sheridan, Wyo., and then coming here to Buhl," he said. "That experience of community prevalent in the Philippines and a more in-your-face approach of Australia taught me to think more globally."

Buhl parishioner Russell Sheridan believes that Ackerman's practical, hands-on skill sets as well as a sense of familiarity with his style were instrumental in the congregation sending a pastoral call. "He's a young man and interested in a lot of things we need to focus on, including growth and outreach," Sheridan said. "We had already heard him preach and just felt the Lord would be sending us the right man."

Boston Cardinal O'Malley to Sell 6 Churches

BY MARK PRATT

Associated Press

BOSTON • The head of the Archdiocese of Boston has paved the way to sell six churches, including three where parishioners have been holding protest vigils since their parishes were closed in 2004.

The decision by Cardinal Sean O'Malley, announced Thursday after several weeks of "consultation, reflection and prayer," means the churches are no longer holy places, but secular buildings.

The church term for the move — "relegation for profane use" — means the churches can be sold and used for other purposes in line with Roman Catholic values, including as places of worship by other denominations, affordable housing or community centers.

The churches deconsecrated are St. James the Great in Wellesley; St. Jeanne D'Arc in Lowell; Star of the Sea in Quincy; Our Lady of Lourdes in Revere; St. Frances Xavier Cabrini in Scituate; and Our Lady of Mount Carmel in East Boston.

Vigils are still being held at the Wellesley, Scituate and East Boston churches.

O'Malley made the move after consulting with lay Catholics in an online survey, neighboring parishes, priests' councils and the archdiocese's finance council, and only after those who had opposed the closure of their parishes in 2004 had their appeals to the Vatican rejected.

"What I have heard from these consultations is that we have reached a point as a community of believers where we must relegate these church buildings as part of the continuing healing and rebuilding of the archdiocese," O'Malley said in a statement.

Church buildings sold by the archdiocese since 2004 have been used by other faiths, for housing and, infamously, by a photographer who quickly flipped the building for a $1.8 million profit.

Peter Borre, co-chairman of the Council of Parishes, which formed to fight church closings, anticipated the Cardinal's decision and said the vigils will continue and the decision will be appealed to the Vatican, which has already reversed the decisions by some U.S. bishops to deconsecrate churches.

RELIGION LETTERS

The Message of the Cross is an Anchor to Our Souls

After death what next? That was a subject in the Times-News Religion section on July 9. ("The great beyond: People's views of the afterlife is as varied as our individual heritages").

What happens after you die? It all depends on where you place your faith while you live.

If you create a designer God by denying the existence of God, abandoning the Bible as a man-made document and declaring absolute truth unknowable, your soul will be shipwrecked on the shifting sands of the imaginings of your own heart. The consciousness of sin and the fear of hell will be lost.

One inevitable day you will stand before Almighty God justified by the inadequate fig leaves of your own righteousness. Your afterlife will be spent in hell: eternal separation from the God you pridefully rejected.

Creating an alternate reality does not change the facts. All men are separated from God by sin. All men deserve eternal death. Jesus took upon Himself all the guilt of all our sins and died instead of us on the cross.

If you respond in faith to God's immutable promise to save all who believe on Jesus Christ, you will be clothed in the unmerited righteousness of Christ and your massive debt of sin will be paid in full.

Your afterlife will be spent in heaven: eternal fellowship with the God you love.

God has given us an anchor for our souls: He has anchored us to Himself by the message of the cross.

Let us never cast that anchor off.

KAREN BOSSICK • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS
Virginia creeper accents the French country home of Bob and Claudie Goldstein, one of the Wood River Valley homes where you can look for gardening inspiration today.

Gardens

of Hidden Hollow.

The Starweather stop, at 261 Teal Drive, features a French country garden marked by signs like “Le Jardin del a Maison” to match the French country house with its Old World timber beams and half-doors.

“I lived in France for 30 years and my wife is French, so we designed it after our country home in Normandy,” said Bob Goldstein, looking over the spread of hollyhocks, honeysuckle, roses and lavender. “It’s entirely perennial, so every year it comes back. We wanted it that way because we do everything ourselves.”

All the gardeners on the tour must contend with deer, elk and even bears. Carol Scheifele-Holmes said she saw one bear climb 60 feet up one of the soaring cottonwoods on her woodsy yard at 126 Deer Run to munch its leaves.

She hasn’t taken special precautions to keep them away from the lettuce and herbs planted at the edge of her wood deck or from her 40-year-old peonies and antique columbines.

“I’m creating a salad bar for all the animals,” she said.

Candy Burnap, on the other hand, has tried ultrasound and predator urine to dissuade the elk, which can eat her rosebuds just as fast as they come out. Finally, she and her husband, Bart, resorted to a tall fence to protect the azaleas, rhododendrons, dogwoods and red beech they grow despite their mile-high location.

All are set against an expansive lawn along the Big Wood River at 110 Wall St. that includes a sunken tennis court, croquet court, greenhouse and potting shed, a wedding gazebo used to create a raised flower and vegetable bed and even a garden patio for the caretakers.

Tim and Candy Johnson, at 5 Polo Lane, have left the hydrangeas and dinner plate dahlias lining their log home available for the taking. But they grow their lettuce, French sorrel, tomatoes and other vegetables in raised beds inside a 6-foot-tall log and wire fence which also encloses a greenhouse.

“Our greenhouse has enabled us to grow some tender herbs and tomatoes that wouldn’t be able to survive in this high-altitude environment without added protection,” Candy Johnson said.

Karen Bossick may be reached at kbossick@cox-internet.com or 578-2111.

Decks

Remove old paint from decks before seal coating. If wood is splintered or cracked, you might have to sand it or, like McClain, replace old boards.

Make sure your deck is clean and dry before weatherizing, Fischer said. The same tips apply when weatherizing wood fences.

Depending on the product you use, you’ll likely have to re-seal your deck and fence every couple of years.

“It’s not a major issue to maintain your deck,” Fischer said. “It just takes a little time and elbow grease.” His best advice after it’s protected: “Keep your eye on it.”

Got tips on a home-improvement project? Have you started a project or thought about starting one? If so, Andrew Weeks would like to talk with you. Call him at 735-3233.

Trend

Kate Middleton and pop singer Lady Gaga wear glitzy fascinators and head pieces. (Remember the fabulously gaudy hats at the royal wedding?) You won’t find many flamboyant hats in southern Idaho, but flower clips provide a more subtle alternative while allowing the wearer to express herself.

For flower maker Cheri Archibald of Oakley, the answer is simple.

“They’re fun and they’re whimsical and they’re cute,” she said. What more do you need?

Make them

Interested in making your own flower hair accessories? Here are tips from crafters:

Construct them well. Hair flowers need to stay put through tousling, head shaking and fussing throughout the day, and shoddy construction can cause them to fall apart, said crafter Cheri Archibald of Oakley. “I really double and triple stitch to make sure they’re good and sturdy,” she said.

Experiment with materials. Courtney Kilton of Burley tried several types of fabric for her hair flowers to get the distressed, curly look she wanted. Other crafters use cotton, yarn, zippers, ribbon and silk for the petals and adorn them with glitter, buttons and pearls.

Think beyond hair. Depending on what backing you choose, your flowers can adorn more than your head. Archibald’s hair clips can double as decorations for necklaces, shoes or bags. “They really are quite versatile,” she said.

Get creative. Look at other flower pieces for inspiration, recommended crafter Summer Robinson of Oakley, but “don’t try so hard to make it look like somebody else’s. Just make your own,” she said.

Buy them

If you don’t want to make your own flowers, but still want to rock this trendy accessory, here are some of the places you can buy them:

Ooh La La, 132 Main Ave. S., Twin Falls.

Flutter, 1540 Fillmore St., Twin Falls.

A Perfect 10 Nail Salon, 560 Filer Ave. No. C, Twin Falls.

Laughing Daisy, 217 Main St. N., Kimberly.

Twin Falls Farmers Market, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays, North College Road across from the College of Southern Idaho’s Expo building.

Friday Night Market, 5-8 p.m. Fridays, Main Avenue between Shoshone and Gooding streets, Twin Falls.

Etsy.com. Local shops on the Etsy website include Summer Robinson’s summersariah, Cheri Archibald’s sewercheri, Courtney Kilton’s courtneyannb, Sarah Ternus’ bristolbaydesigns and Lea Rogers’ OldWorld-Handworks.

Decorating Book is Heavy on Ideas

BY MARY BETH BRECKENRIDGE
Akron Beacon Journal

For many of us, decorating can be daunting. Stephen Saint-Onge seeks to take the scariness out of the process in his new book, "No Place Like Home: Tips & Techniques for Real Family-Friendly Home Design."

Saint-Onge is familiar to many through his television appearances and his "House Calls With Stephen Saint-Onge" column in Better Homes and Gardens magazine. In his book, he inspires his readers with rooms that are warm, approachable and functional and helps them achieve similar results by giving them processes to follow and room makeovers to emulate.

The book is heavy on the how-to. Saint-Onge provides guidance on everything from weekend makeovers to major renovations, pointing out specific elements in each room that readers might incorporate in their own homes. He sprinkles the book with tips and ideas and helps readers get started on projects by posing questions to help them define their needs and wants.

"No Place Like Home," from Wiley Publishing, sells for $19.99 in softcover.

Crafters Urged to Get Educated on Copyrights

BY AMY LORENTZEN
For The Associated Press

As a crafter, you put time, talent and care into each creation. Experts say you should also spend a few moments making sure you're not violating any copyrights and protecting your own original work.

"We all love to create, but very few us know what the rules are," says Tammy Browning-Smith, an Amherst, Ohio-based attorney who concentrates on intellectual property law in creative industries, including arts and crafts.

She says crafters' most common mistake when it comes to copyrights is assuming they can use another person's work, whether it's photocopying a pattern or making a replica of an item seen online. Her recommendation: Always check the designer's, manufacturer's or publisher's instructions. Often, it takes only seconds of research to make sure you're not infringing on someone else's idea, she says.

"Crafting is meant to be fun, and it's just a very small thing to follow basic respect of others and enjoy it even more," Browning-Smith says.

So what's the harm in photocopying a pattern for a friend, or sewing a handmade Mickey Mouse or Strawberry Crafter Luisa Brown works on a bracelet.

Shortcake onto a child's T-shirt?

If the copyright owner hasn't given you permission to use the material and would see your use as infringement, then it's illegal. Some companies have bought the rights to make patterns based on TV and movie characters. Even if you buy an approved pattern to make an item featuring a copyrighted character, you can't put it up for resale without the copyright owner's direct permission.

At her website Craft Designs for You, Cherie Marie Leck reminds crafters that other artists make a living designing patterns and instruction books. Every time you copy an idea without paying, she says, you are taking money from them, the shop owners who sell the patterns and the publishers who print them.

"Designers make very little money, and it hurts them deeply both financially and emotionally when their source of income is stolen from them by the very customers and crafters who want to stitch their patterns," she writes at her site under the heading "Copyright Theft Hurts!"

If you were to get caught and be sued, it could cost you a lot of money. Friends who accept photocopied or scanned patterns, or members of online groups that share patterns without permission can also get in trouble.

Leck writes: "You may think you are being generous by sharing a copied pattern with someone who perhaps can't afford to buy it, but you are really sharing someone else's property that you don't have the right to share."

Etsy.com, a popular website featuring sellers of handmade and vintage items, knows that copyright issues are of interest to its online users. It provides some information on reporting infringement, but "whether selling on Etsy or elsewhere, it is up to each artist to research the issues and make the best decisions for their business," says Etsy spokesman Adam Brown.

If you've designed an original creation, you may want to consider registering it with the U.S. Copyright Office. It costs only $35 to register online and is a sort of "insurance policy" if someone tries to steal your idea, says Browning-Smith.

Copyright attaches to any original work the moment it's created, but by registering you get the official copyright registration title. That gives you a stronger enforcement right if someone were to copy you.

Victor Domine, a spokesman for the Craft and Hobby Association, understands that crafters want to share their creations with friends and family. But he cautions that posting a picture of your item on a blog or social networking site, such as Facebook, could catch the eye of someone else, even a shady manufacturer, who may decide to copy it and sell it without giving you credit.

"We have a wonderful Internet that is driving hundreds of millions and billions worth of sales, but people are out there and they don't think about protecting their rights before they post pictures," Domine said.

He added that some websites, in their fine-print on user agreements, even make you sign over the copyright to photos you post.

"The sheer volumes of untraceable photos, artwork and music have sadly desensitized consumers to the full impact of copyright infringement," Domine said.

Browning-Smith hopes crafters will educate their friends that crafts and hobbies fall under the same protections as music and film, and that they'll consider the copyright before copying a pattern or someone else's idea.

"The Golden Rule really applies: If this was yours, would you want somebody to copy it or legitimately use it?" she asks.

OBITUARIES

Helen Mae King Burks

Sept. 4, 1919-July 13, 2011

RUPERT • Helen Mae King Burks, longtime Rupert resident, passed away in the presence of her family in Meridian, Idaho, on Wednesday, July 13, 2011, at the age of 91 years and 10 months.

Helen was born Sept. 4, 1919, in Kimberly, Idaho, the youngest child of Clyde E. and Emily Claiborn King. She grew up on farms near Kimberly and Jerome, and graduated from Jerome High School in 1937. She married Samuel Dennis Burks Jr. on May 26, 1940.

Helen and 'Dennis' lived in Jerome and Twin Falls before moving to Rupert in 1947. Because of Dennis' work as manager of Flat Top Sheep Company, their family spent their summers in Ketchum and the Little Wood Valley in Blaine County. Helen's priorities were supporting Dennis and instilling in her children the values of family unity, patience, kindness and love. Traveling was a favorite activity. Helen and Dennis enjoyed visiting family members in many places across the country; and made special trips with family and friends to the Oregon Coast, Mexico, Australia, Spain, England and Scotland, and Alaska; additionally, Helen and Barbara Jean traveled to Germany to visit Karie, while she was living there. In 1980, Helen and Dennis moved to their home in Muldoon, which became a summer retreat for family and friends. They spent summers in Idaho and winters in Yuma, Ariz. Helen was a gracious hostess, welcoming numerous gatherings of family and friends. She was an active member of the Rupert United Methodist Church and a 50-year member of P.E.O., Chapter BS. Helen will be remembered as a beloved wife, mother and grandmother. She will be missed by her family and many cherished friends.

Helen is survived by her husband of 71 years, Dennis; three children, Samuel Dennis "Denny" Burks III and his wife, Carole of Meridian, Karie Lee Strosnider of Phoenix, Ariz., and Barbara Jean Fobian of Hemet, Calif.; nine grandchildren; 15 great-grandchildren; and a close extended family. She was preceded in death by her parents; her brother, Mitch King; her sister, Velma Ott; and son-in-law, Joe Strosnider.

A funeral service will be held at 1 p.m. Monday, July 18, at the Rupert United Methodist Church, 605 H St., with Pastor Pamela Meese officiating. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of Hansen Mortuary.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations be made to the American Heart Association.

Michael Lyle Brown

Oct. 4, 1971-July 12, 2011

Mike has joined his mother, brother and sister in heaven. He passed away at home.

He is the son of

Gary and Constance Brown. He leaves behind a wife, six sons, and a daughter. He will be missed by many. RIP Dad.

Juana Alvarez Salazar

May 3, 1925-July 14, 2011

RUPERT • Juana Alvarez Salazar, 86, of Rupert, passed away Thursday, July 14, 2011, at Countryside Care and Rehab in Rupert.

Juana was born May 3, 1925, to Bernardino and Emilia Salazar in Dolores Hidalgo, Guanajuato, Mexico. She married Jesus Alvarez in 1952. In 1947, she came to the United States, where she lived in McAllen, Texas. She moved to Idaho in 1990 to live with her daughter. She worked cleaning houses and was a member of the St. Nicholas Catholic Church. Juana loved playing cards and being with family and friends.

Jauna is survived by her children and grandchildren, Juan Salazar of Dolores Hidalgo, Genoveva Rivera (Manuel G. Rivera Jr.), Juan Alvarez, Jesus Ernesto Garcia, Erica Ortega, Ruben Alvarez, Marvel Rivera III, LeeRoy Rivera, Noemi Lopez (Armando Lopez), Armondo Lopez Jr., Gabriel Lopez, Hector Lopez, Dora

Labra (Mario Labra), Edgar Lee Alvarez, Anthony Labra, and Lucero Labra; 10 nietos, and 2 nitas; 20 great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Jesus Alvarez; two grandchildren, Klarissa Ortega and Abel Alejandro Ortega; parents, Bernardino and Emilia Salazar; and two sons, Ernesto Alvarez and Hector Alvarez.

A funeral Mass will be held 11 a.m. Tuesday, July 19, at St Nicholas Catholic Church in Rupert, with Father Justin Brady as celebrant. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. A viewing for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday, July 18, with a recitation of the rosary at 7 p.m. at the church. Viewing will also be one hour prior to the service at the church. Arrangements are under the direction of Hansen Mortuary.

Former German Media Mogul Leo Kirch Dies

BY GEIR MOULSON

Associated Press

BERLIN • Leo Kirch, a German media mogul whose television-based empire unraveled in a spectacular bankruptcy nearly a decade ago, died Thursday. He was 84.

Kirch, a towering business figure in postwar West Germany, was a friend of longtime German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, and had business ties with News Corp.'s Rupert Murdoch and Italian Premier Silvio Berlusconi.

Kirch died in Munich. A brief statement from his family said he died peacefully, but gave no further details. He had long suffered from severe diabetes.

The reclusive Bavarian winegrower's son built a media group that at its height included a thriving film rights trading business, stakes in publisher Axel Springer and in Germany's second-biggest TV broadcaster ProSieben-Sat.1, TV rights for the football World Cup and a majority stake in Formula One motor racing.

Kirch's media empire crumbled in 2002 under some (euro) 6.5 billion ($9.3 billion) in debt following a money-losing venture into pay television and acquisitions that didn't pay off.

Kirch launched himself on the road to success in 1956, borrowing money from his wife's family to buy the German rights to Federico Fellini's film "La Strada."

The film was a hit, and Kirch kept buying until he had the largest film library outside the United States, including the Buster Keaton library, Laurel and Hardy, and the Howard Hughes/RKO library with "King Kong" and "Citizen Kane."

Selling Hollywood to German state television made Kirch rich. And when Kohl ushered in private television in the 1980s, Kirch moved to assemble television properties.

Kohl and his wife, Maiké, said in a joint statement that "Leo Kirch was a great man, a great German," who "looked into the future before others even dreamed of it." They said that they had "lost a true friend."

"The lifetime achievements and self-discipline of Leo Kirch fill us all, friends and critics, with respect," Bavarian Governor Horst Seehofer said. "He was a businessman with vision and the courage to take risks. That's how he turned from a film trader into the engine of private broadcasting in Germany."

Kirch's slide into bankruptcy stunned Germany a decade ago.

His group was hurt by big losses at pay-TV broadcaster Premiere, which was burning up cash fast while his successful businesses were leveraged to buy the rights to Formula One.

Pay TV has been a difficult proposition in Germany, where households typically receive dozens of free channels.

The former Premiere — renamed Sky Deutschland in 2009 and now 49.9 percent-owned by Murdoch's News Corp. — is still in the red, though it is narrowing its losses.

Kirch's collapse fueled speculation at the time that foreign media moguls such as Murdoch and Berlusconi, whose companies were already minority shareholders in his businesses, might take over more Kirch assets and shake up Germany's media landscape.

In a rare interview shortly before his business collapsed in 2002, Kirch suggested that Murdoch was hoping to snap up parts of the group if it failed to secure new financing.

"Murdoch is a shark. Sharks have sharp teeth," he was quoted as telling the weekly Der Spiegel. "I can't be angry with Rupert, even if he wants to eat me. That's the way he is."

SENIOR

Q. When I stayed overnight at the hospital recently, the nurse who was filling out my paperwork asked if I had a Living Will or a Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care. I don't have either one. Should I?

A. Nobody wants to think that a time will come when they can't make decisions, but it is best to be prepared. In Idaho, there is a simple form that includes both of these important health documents. Together they can put your mind at ease knowing that people you trust will be empowered to act on your behalf, should the need arise. A Living Will clearly states your wishes for end-of-life medical treatment. The Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care designates a Health Care Agent to make a host of health care decisions if you cannot. This form is available at: www.ag.idaho.gov/livingWills/LivingWill_DurablePowerOfAttorney.pdf

Trying to Kill Off Toenail Fungus

BY RACHEL SASLOW

The Washington Post

For people with toenail fungus, there is no good time to wear sandals. Not even at the beach in July.

Toenail fungus causes nails to become thick, yellow and brittle in a way that looks pretty ugly and can be painful. Sufferers can spend years and hundreds of dollars trying to clear the infection with drugs, topical treatments and home remedies, sometimes to no avail. It tends to be a cosmetic issue for the younger set and a pain issue for older folks.

"The problem is huge. It is bigger than you can imagine," says Washington podiatrist Stephen J. Kominsky. "I would say 70 percent of the patients who come into my office have fungal infections on their toenails."

There may be hope. Podiatrists have begun using a laser treatment that combats the infection — or wastes their patients' money because it doesn't work, depending on whom you ask.

The treatment, in which the podiatrist aims a laser beam at the patient's toenails to kill the organisms that cause the fungus, costs about $1,000 and is not covered by insurance because it is considered an aesthetic procedure. The nails aren't immediately clear after the treatment, which takes up to an hour; the patient must wait for the fungus-free nails to grow out.

Last year, the Food and Drug Administration cleared the first laser, PinPointe, for "temporary increase of clear nail" in patients with onychomycosis, the medical term for a fungal infection of the nail. The FDA cleared a second one, GenesisPlus, in April. Practitioners have been using other lasers on toenail fungus since about 2009.

Kominsky has treated 400 to 500 patients with the Pin-Pointe laser. Compared with oral medication, he says, "the odds of success are better with the laser; plus, there's no side effects."

The most common oral treatment, Lamisil, works for about two out of three patients, according to Lamisil's FDA-approved prescribing information, but it has been associated with rare cases of serious liver problems. Other potential side effects include diarrhea, headache, rashes and changes in taste. According to Lamisil's manufacturer, Novartis, the relapse rate is 15 percent one year after completing treatment.

In one small study about laser treatment for toenail fungus, which appeared last year in the Journal of the American Podiatric Medical Association, "26 eligible toes (10 mild, seven moderate, and nine severe)" were treated with a laser produced by Nomir Medical Technologies, which is still seeking FDA approval. After six months, 85 percent of the toenails had improved.

"I never use the term 'cured' with toenail fungus," Kominsky says. "With a cure, people think there's no chance for a recurrence. In this case, there is a chance."

Even John Strisower, the founder of PinPointe USA, says patients should expect at least a minimal reinfection within five years after laser treatment.

Research done by Pin-Pointe, which is based in Chico, Calif., identified more than 100 organisms, including fungi, yeast, mold and bacteria, that work together to cause toenail fungus.

There's no one route of infection, but sources include pedicures and locker room showers. Fungi love moist, dark environments such as wet shoes, Kominsky says, so people such as lifeguards, landscapers and fishermen are particularly susceptible. Shoes are the reason why toenail fungus is much more common than fingernail fungus, which can also occur.

How to Prevent Toenail Fungus

Here are some tips for preventing toenail fungus, excerpted from the Mayo Clinic's website: Keep your nails short, dry and clean. Trim nails straight across and file down thickened areas. Thoroughly dry your feet, including between your toes, after bathing. Wear socks made with synthetic materials that wick away moisture; they can keep feet dryer than cotton or wool socks. Change socks often, especially if your feet sweat excessively. Use an antifungal spray or powder. Spray or sprinkle your feet and the insides of your shoes. Don't trim or pick at the skin around your nails. This may give germs access to your skin and nails. Don't go barefoot in public places. Wear shoes around public pools, showers and locker rooms. Choose a reputable manicure and pedicure salon. Make sure the salon sterilizes its instruments. Better yet, bring your own. Give up nail polish and artificial nails. It may be tempting to hide fungal infections under pretty pink polish, but this can trap moisture and worsen the infection. Wash your hands after touching an infected nail. Nail fungus can spread from nail to nail.

Darren Clarke reacts after putting on the No. 18 green on Friday during the second day of The British Open Golf Championship at Royal St George's golf course Sandwich, England.

Mentally Fit Darren Clarke Shares Lead at British Open

He's the last person writers expected to be in the lead at the British Open, but 42-year-old Darren Clarke sits atop the leaderboards after shooting a second round score of 68.

SANDWICH, England • His work done for the day, Darren Clarke trudged into the media center to explain how a portly 42-year-old guy with gray hair was somehow able to escape the wilds of the British Open when a wave of youngsters half his age weren't nearly as successful.

Before he could, though, Clarke was given a gentle reminder of his rightful place in golf's new pecking order.

"The last person we expected to see in here was you," a writer told him.

No worries, because a few days ago Clarke would have thought the same thing. His putting stunk, and he wasn't exactly feeling good about his game heading into his 20th Open.

His younger countrymen were winning major championships, and Clarke was starting to get the feeling that maybe his time had passed.

Then a session with his shrink changed everything.

Forgetting for a moment that he's not the Northern Irishman who is supposed to win this Open, Clarke matched his opening round 68 with the same score Friday to move to 4-under-par. It not only put him four shots up on fellow Ulsterman Rory McIlroy, but gave him a share of the lead midway through the championship.

If golf is mostly mental, Clarke could even be considered a favorite going into the weekend. Yes, he's won only twice in the last eight years, but he's full of newfound confidence — which he will need if he is to win the first major title of his long career.

Still, a skeptical writer asked, does he really think he can win?

"Of course I do," Clarke replied. You're not just saying that?

"No, of course I do."

If Clarke does, maybe he should share the claret jug with Bob Rotella, a prominent sports psychologist who has made a career out of convincing golfers that they're better than they think. Clarke had a session with Rotella on Wednesday, and just like

Tour de France Riders Await Daunting Climb in Pyrenees

Pyrenees: It's by far the toughest state of the Tour de France, but it could also prove the most pivotal.

BY JEROME PUGMIRE

The Associated Press

LOURDES, France • The most grueling stage yet of the Tour de France looms in the Pyrenees in what promises to be the race's first major turning point.

"It's going to be one of the key days," two-time runner-up Cadel Evans said. "There'll be fireworks, don't worry!"

The test comes Saturday, a day after after Norway's Thor Hushovd won the 13th stage and France's Thomas Voeckler kept the yellow jersey.

It gets serious now, with Evans ready to take on defending champion Alberto Contador and the Schleck brothers.

Contador's right knee is still bruised but healing. The Schleck brothers are racing with — or against — each other depending on who is to be believed. Evans, an Australian, is gliding over obstacles with the cool of a surfer negotiating crushing waves.

Saturday's stage is the third consecutive day in the Pyrenees. The 105-mile ride from Saint-Gaudens to Plateau de Beille starts with a sharp climb up Col de Portet d'Aspet followed by two ascents up Col de la Core and Col d'Agnes. It finishes with a 10-mile climb to Plateau de Beille, a famed ascent that has a reputation for making, or breaking, contenders.

Although Evans and the Schlecks all took some time off three-time champion Contador in Thursday's 12th stage, the damage was not enough to seriously hurt Contador's chances.

"I will have to see my legs hold up and what the others do," the Spaniard said. "But if I get the chance, I will attack!"

He said he had a "little niggles" in his knee at the beginning of the stage, but after that was fine. He banged the same knee in two crashes.

Contador finished Friday's stage nestled with Evans and the Schlecks. The contenders let others do the attacking on a 95-mile run that started from Pau and ended in Lourdes, home to one of the most famous Catholic shrines.

Voeckler leads Frank Schleck — the older of the two

'Tank' Rolls in Two Divisions at MVS

Douglas Brownfield thanks the crowd and his sponsors after a win earlier this season in the Hornets division.

BY LINDA BRITTSAN

Times-News correspondent

Standing 6 feet 4 inches with a football lineman physique, he doesn't look like he'd be a natural behind the wheel of a racecar, but Douglas "Tank" Brownfield has nevertheless been collecting the bling at Magic Valley Speedway.

Starting out last season in the Jr. Stingers division, Brownfield found Victory Lane in his first race. There were a couple more wins along the way but his biggest accomplishment was coming from behind in the point standings to capture the series championship on the final night.

For Brownfield, now age 16, it was just the beginning of a new passion at the track.

"I fell in love with this the very first night I ever went out there. I'd been a fan for many years and sitting in the stands was really fun, but getting out there and actually being on the track is a whole lot funner," Brownfield said.

Not only was he having the time of his young life at MVS, Brownfield continued to reveal his talents as a driver. Starting the 2011 season competing in the Hornets division, he quickly shot to the top of the point standings after

Koopman Leads Jerome to Sweep Over Spartans

TIMES-NEWS

Gary Koopman hit a grand slam in the opener and struck out 12 in the nightcap to help the Jerome Cyclones sweep Minico 13-3 and 12-0 in a Class AA American Legion Baseball doubleheader. Jerome took advantage of 14 Minico walks in the opener, and Koopman blasted his grand slam in the fourth inning to really break open the game. He pitched a gem in the nightcap, allowing only two hits. Kevin Bos hit a three-run home run. The Cyclones have four games remaining in the regular season, playing Twin Falls today and Pocatello on Monday.

Hawks Sweep Kimberly Astros

The Twin Falls Hawks swept Kimberly in a crucial Class A American Legion Baseball doubleheader to clinch the third seed in next week's Class A Area C Tournament. The Hawks won 8-3 and 10-8 in the nightcap. "These were obviously big wins for us," said Twin Falls coach Brady Madsen. "We were able to win the third seed outright and get a good position for the tournament." Josh Schrader led the Hawks at the plate, hitting doubles in each game, while Scott Speer earned the win in Game 1 and the save in Game 2. The Hawks (25-11, 9-7) begin tournament play on Thursday in Twin Falls.

NFL, Players: We're Making Progress Toward Deal

Legal and financial teams for both the NFL Players Association and team owners keep chipping away at getting a new agreement in time for the 2011 season.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Noting that "progress has been made," NFL owners and players wrapped up a round of intensive talks Friday without a full agreement to end the league's four-month lockout, but determined to keep pushing over the weekend. NFL Players Association head DeMaurice Smith expects to speak with NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell in the next couple of days, possibly in person, while the two sides' legal and financial teams continue working. After about eight hours of negotiations in New York on Friday — tacked onto more than 25 hours across Wednesday and Thursday — the league and players issued a joint statement, saying: "The discussions this week have been constructive and progress has been made on a wide range of issues." They did not reveal any details, citing a gag order imposed by the court-appointed mediator, U.S. Magistrate Judge Arthur Boylan. "I wouldn't dare speculate on where we are," said Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, one of six members of the owners' labor committee participating Friday. But people familiar with the discussions told The Associated Press that Friday's talks moved beyond economic issues to cover other remaining areas where gaps need to be bridged to finish off a deal. That included player health and safety matters, such as offseason workout rules. The aim was to build upon the significant steps made Thursday, when the framework for a rookie salary system was established, including that first-round draft picks will sign four-year contracts with a club option for a fifth year. On another financial matter, the per-team cap figure for 2011 will be in the range of $120 million in salaries plus about $20 million or so in benefits, according to people with knowledge of the talks. The people spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity because the negotiations aimed at breaking the impasse are supposed to be confidential. One person also told the AP that owners first learned Thursday that the NFLPA set up $200,000 in "lockout insurance" for each player if the 2011 season were lost entirely, a policy that cost at least $10 million and was taken out nearly a year ago. That policy was first reported by SI.com.

Newman Takes N.Hampshire Pole

LOUDON, N.H. (AP) • Stewart-Haas Racing finally gets top billing.

Ryan Newman won his 47th career pole, turning a track-record lap of 135.232 mph Friday at New Hampshire Motor Speedway and Tony Stewart was second to give SHR its first front-row sweep. Stewart was right behind his employee and teammate at 135.064. They were the only drivers to top 135 mph. Newman won his first pole of the season in the No. 39 Chevrolet, a far cry from the 20 combined poles he earned in 2003-04. Those pole positions early in his career helped boost his total and he's now 10th on the career poles list, including a record five poles at New Hampshire. "It works," he said. "It's like making good macaroni and cheese. Sometimes, it just tastes good. I don't know what the entire chemistry is, but I like it."

It's the sixth pole for Stewart-Haas Racing, but the first time both SHR Chevrolets will start side-by-side at the front of the field. "I felt really confident in practice today that we would have a shot at the pole today just based on the way the car felt," Newman said. Newman hopes the strong start will translate into his first victory of the season. Newman enters Sunday's Sprint Cup race ninth in the points standings. "Without a doubt I have higher expectations; when you have the fastest race car you have no excuse," Newman said. "It's just a matter of making it the fastest car or the best race car on the last lap, given you have the right position and the right strategy and do the things that are needed to put yourself in that position." David Reutimann, Kurt Busch and Brad Keselowski round out the top five.

Stewart is 11th in the points standings, one shy of cracking the top 10 needed to make the Chase. Stewart, a two-time Cup champion, typically heats up during the summer races. He hasn't found the answers yet and hasn't won a race this year.

that the putts began to drop. Just what Rotella told him will remain between the guy in the chair and the one on the couch. Clarke joked that he pays him too much to share his secret to success. Whatever it was, it worked. Clarke went out on a windless morning Friday and shook off a double bogey on the fourth hole to play 3-under the rest of the way and get in a tie with Lucas Glover at the top of the leaderboard. Unexpected, sure. While McIlroy came in as the heavy betting favorite off his dominating win in the U.S. Open, Clarke was a 150-1 longshot known more lately for being more of a mentor to McIlroy and Graeme McDowell than a player who could contend in the British Open. But impossible, no. Anyone who remembers Clarke in the 2006 Ryder Cup in Ireland shortly after the death of his wife, Heather, from breast cancer knows he has both the game and the will to compete and win. Clarke went 3-0 that week to lead Europe to an emotional victory that up until now was the highlight of his career.

"Nothing could be more difficult than that particular week," Clarke said. Though Clarke broke a three-year winless drought earlier this year on the European Tour by taking the Iberdrola Open in Spain, he has been eclipsed in recent years in Ireland by both McIlroy and McDowell, who have both won U.S. Opens. He's close to both, withdrawing from a tournament in Germany last month at the last moment so he could be home to celebrate McIlroy's Open win with him. A win here by Clarke would give Ireland three of the last six major championships — all by different players. "If Darren were to do it this weekend, I think we'd have an influx of golfers moving to Northern Ireland," McDowell said. McDowell will have to root for Clarke from afar after missing the cut following a fat 77 Friday. But there's a chance Clarke could be battling McIlroy — who honed his game with support from Clarke's junior golf foundation — down the stretch. McIlroy shot a 69 in the second round and was four shots off the pace. The scoreboard is crowded, though, and could change quickly. Rain and wind are forecast to return to the English Coast over the weekend, and the tournament may just be won by the player who handles the elements best. Clarke may have an advantage there. He recently moved his family from London back to Northern Ireland, where he practices and plays at Royal Portrush, a links course that shares many characteristics with Royal St. George's. Another characteristic it shares is that the weather is often dreadful. "It's a case of getting used to playing in bad weather on links again, and that's what I've been doing all over the winter," Clarke said. "Hopefully it will stand me in good stead." The huge crowds that lined the fairways and crowded the grandstands Friday hope so, too. They cheered him along the way, delighted he was contending for the lead. Maybe that's because he's a British subject and a Ryder Cup hero. Maybe they just identify with him because he's a bit chunky and loves a fine cigar and a drink to go with it. Or maybe they just like their players mentally fit.

capturing back-to-back main event wins. On June 25, the rookie was crowned champion for the first half of the season in the series. But it still wasn't enough for the young driver. After watching the newest division at MVS, the Thunderdogs, where practically anything goes as far as type and style of vehicle, he knew he'd be spending even more time at the track. The theme for the new car was a natural.

"I got my nickname when I started playing football," said the junior at Canyon Ridge High School. "They called me 'Tank' because nobody could ever stop me. It's a good nickname to have — it means a lot to me." Come race time, his No. 1 'Sherman Tank' car with the army green paint is one of the most noticeable vehicles on the track. "My mechanic (Loren Levesque) took it up to the next level by putting that turret on top," Brownfield said. "He made it a really nice car."

I can't explain it, my car is so loud but I can hear my mom and other people over there yelling and cheering," he said. Keep encouraging him, and Canyon Ridge High may lose a member of the football team this fall. Brownfield says racing at MVS is the most fun he's ever had, "by far"

Gap Between Good, Great Teams Narrowing at Women's World Cup

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) • Used to be, you could predict the lineup for the final four at the Women's World Cup before the tournament began.

The Americans were a given. The Germans, too. Brazil's been there to the bitter end in recent years, and Sweden or Norway were never a bad bet. This year? Anybody who predicted Japan playing in its first final and France making the semis either knew somebody on one of the teams or based their picks on uniform colors.

"It's amazing to see a team like France, a team like Japan in the final. Germany knocked out. Brazil knocked out," U.S. player Megan Rapinoe said Thursday. "It's amazing to have that (parity) — and that we are still right there, at the top."

Yes, the Americans are the lone constant in this topsy-turvy tournament.

The world's top-ranked team, the United States is trying to become the first country to win three World Cup titles when it faces Japan on Sunday. This may be the Americans' first appearance in the final since 1999, the last time they won it all, but they've won two gold medals in the interim and had a two year-plus winning streak going until November.

"It is a great opportunity for us," Japan coach Norio Sasaki said after the Nadeshiko beat Sweden 3-1 in the semifinals, their second big upset of the tournament. "It is going to be a huge opportunity for us and a big platform."

For all of women's soccer, really.

Back when Mia Hamm, Julie Foudy, Michelle Akers, Kristine Lilly and the gang ruled the world, the World Cup often wasn't a fair fight. Some of the scores in the group stage were laughable, and the gap between the elite and the second tier was more like a chasm. In the first World Cup, in 1991, the Americans routed Taiwan (7-0) and Brazil (5-0) while Sweden romped to an 8-0 win over Japan.

Four years later, eventual champion Norway won one game 7-0 (Canada) and another 8-0 (Nigeria). Even four years ago, Germany hung an 11-0 — no, that's not a misprint — pasting on Argentina.

But unlike softball or women's hockey, where the rest of the world has failed to keep pace with the one or two dominant teams or had no interest in doing so, countries all over the world have been pouring money and resources into their women's soccer teams. The results could be seen clearly in Germany as, slowly but surely, the gap between good and great narrows.

There were no blowouts in the tournament, the 4-0 wins by Japan over Mexico and France over Canada the most lopsided of the matches. There were 19 draws or one-goal victories in the first 30 games, and the scoring average is down to just 2.63 from 3.81 in 1991 and '95.

"France is obviously a bit of a surprise but, when we played them, we gave them a lot of respect in the locker room," said Abby Wambach, whose header in the 79th minute broke what had been a tense tie with France, which reached the semifinals in its second World Cup appearance. "All of us were talking about what pretty soccer they played, how exciting it was to watch their front four or five players. Not that we want to play like anybody else, but it was exciting to see."

"This game has come a long way, a long way since '99."

And should continue to do so.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"It is better to know some of the questions than all of the answers."
— James Thurber

With the North cards facing a strong no-trump, one would normally transfer to spades, then bid and rebid hearts to show 6-5 or 5-5 and slam interest. Here, however, the quality of the spades compared with that of the hearts persuaded North to treat his hand as a single-suited slam-try with spades and short diamonds, essentially ignoring hearts altogether. This slightly unconventional approach worked perfectly, when a subsequent exchange of cuebids got South to what appeared to be a laydown slam, but one that was threatened by the hostile breaks in both majors.

West predictably kicked off with the diamond jack. Declarer ruffed, then drew trump in four rounds, as East came under severe pressure. If he had discarded a heart, it would have been easy to set up and cash out that suit, so he discarded all three of his diamonds, then a low club. Now South led a heart to the queen, prepared to claim 12 tricks. He had to reassess the position when the 5-0 break came to light, but found an elegant solution when he cashed the heart ace and 10.

East had to duck the 10 or dummy would effectively be high. But declarer next played the club ace, a diamond ruff to dummy, and the heart jack, discarding the master club! East could win this trick, but now had to give the lead to dummy at trick 12.

Had East pitched his clubs on the trumps, cashing the ace and king of clubs would have created a very similar position.

ANSWER: Just in case anyone is in any doubt, while a jump overcall over a one-level opening bid shows the two lowest unbid suits, a simple overcall of two no-trump over a weak-two bid is natural, showing strong no-trump values. Here the weak long suit is a negative, but the positional value of the heart honors is almost as good as the A-K-Q, so you are fully worth a two-no-trump bid.

Today is Saturday, July 16, the 197th day of 2011. There are 168 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On July 16, 1911, actress-dancer Ginger Rogers was born Virginia Katherine McMath in Independence, Mo.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1790, a site along the Potomac River was designated the permanent seat of the United States government; the area became Washington, D.C.
In 1862, David G. Farragut became the first rear admiral in the United States Navy.

In 1935, the first parking meters were installed in Oklahoma City.

In 1945, the United States exploded its first experimental atomic bomb in the desert of Alamogordo, N.M.

In 1951, the novel "The Catcher in the Rye" by J.D. Salinger was first published by Little, Brown and Co.

In 1964, as he accepted the Republican presidential nomination in San Francisco, Barry M. Goldwater said "extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice" and that "moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue."

In 1969, Apollo 11 blasted off from Cape Kennedy on the first manned mission to the surface of the moon.

In 1973, during the Senate Watergate hearings, former White House aide Alexander P. Butterfield publicly revealed the existence of President Richard Nixon's secret taping system.

In 1981, singer Harry Chapin was killed when his car was struck by a tractor-trailer on New York's Long Island Expressway.

In 1999, John F. Kennedy Jr., his wife, Carolyn, and her sister, Lauren Bessette, died when their single-engine plane, piloted by Kennedy, plunged into the Atlantic Ocean near Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Ten years ago: South Asian nuclear rivals India and Pakistan failed to reach an accord on their half-century dispute over Kashmir, ending a landmark three-day summit on a solemn note. Russia and China signed their first friendship treaty in more than half a century. Jacques Rogge was elected to succeed Juan Antonio Samaranch as president of the International Olympic Committee.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush and other Group of Eight world leaders meeting in St. Petersburg, Russia, urged Israel to show "utmost restraint" and blamed Hezbollah and Hamas for escalating violence in the Middle East. Claiming election fraud had robbed him of Mexico's presidency, leftist candidate Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador led hundreds of thousands of marchers through the capital.

IF JULY 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: To everything there is a season and for the next several weeks, you can take charge, assert yourself and get much accomplished. This is a good time for physical exercise and personal growth. By September, you could be inspired to try your business expertise out on a new project, but be forewarned that you could be blind to facts in October. In November, avoid signing contracts or taking on additional financial burdens such as loans which could become hard to repay. Although you might have excellent ideas at the beginning of the year when your finger is on the pulse of popular commerce, you should wait until after May to put your plans into motion.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you talk the talk, be sure that you can walk the walk. By practicing what you preach, you can draw the trust and admiration of those around you. Avoid giving into trivial suspicions and simply live and let live.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Find an escape. Take the weekend as a time for recharging your batteries by riding a bike, swimming some laps or merely stretching your legs. The more the merrier, so bring along a friend for twice the fun.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Clear the air. Set aside some time to sit down with a loved one and resolve a delicate situation. Dispel misunderstandings now before they snowball into something more severe. Physical activities will yield benefits.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sometimes the best course of action is to take no action at all. A dire situation will resolve itself by the afternoon so avoid getting embroiled in an unnecessary row. Pass the time with some sporting endeavors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep your passions in check. Indulging yourself with what you want could make what you actually need unattainable. A change of scenery is the remedy for soothing sore spots and getting the most enjoyment from your day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Swim with the current. Going against the flow will only make you tired and will not get you anywhere. Compromise is the key. Be an adult and remain above petty squabbles. Find the good in all situations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fresh air equals a fresh new perspective. Don't take root on the couch when there's a whole beautiful world to explore. Have an adventure in the great outdoors and if you're feeling lonely bring along some friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Honesty is the best policy. An adversary may stoop to mudslinging to bring you down a peg. Completely ignoring the barbs will make the other party look bad and earn you the respect of others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A rolling stone gathers no moss. Keep active and your energy level will only increase throughout the day. Find ways to get that heart rate up, either through exercise or physical labors around the house.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look after yourself. Find ways to improve your physical health. Take a hike in the woods, shoot a round of golf or tackle those nagging little jobs around the house. It's better than watching reruns.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's good to have roots, but not when they fasten you to the sofa. Don't waste your day off by lounging about; get out and see what nature has to offer. A short excursion could clear your head and recharge your batteries.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): First impressions can be deceiving. By midmorning, you may be ready to crawl back into bed, but give the day a chance. Things will improve throughout the day until the evening when a full-blown backyard bash may erupt.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Difficulty Level ★★★★★ 7/15

DEAR ABBY: My 12-year-old niece “Tammy” is very shy. When I recently visited my brother’s home, she hid in her parents’ bedroom behind a closed door. She wouldn’t come out to say hi or even speak to me through the door.

Today I was on the phone with my sister-in-law and I asked if I could say hello to Tammy. I was told Tammy had left the room because she didn’t want to talk. My sister-in-law then remarked that she has the shiest kids on Earth.

I think Tammy’s parents should MAKE her speak to me (or anyone else) in person or on the phone. Am I wrong?

— OUTGOING AUNT IN TEXAS

DEAR OUTGOING AUNT: Tammy’s behavior is rude, and her mother is covering for her. If Tammy has such overwhelming social anxiety that she cannot exchange even the briefest social amenities, she needs the help of a therapist to help her overcome it.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have worked in a medical office for a number of years. We all get along like a family and there are rarely any problems. However, something has been bothering me since one of my co-workers’ (unmarried) daughter had a baby.

We all bought gifts for the baby and tolerate the many pictures and recitation of day-to-day events of the baby, but now the first birthday is here. I received an invitation and was told what they would like to receive, plus a wallet photo of the child and a larger photo with a magnet on it.

Many of us have grandchildren, but we have never gone overboard this way. I would never impose an invitation on my co-workers to attend any of my grandchildren’s birthday parties. My feeling is that grandchildren parties are for families! What to do?

— FRETTING IN OHIO

DEAR FRETTING: Fret no more. Politely decline the invitation and say you have other plans. (You do – you plan not to attend or be milked for a gift.) Stand firm now, because if you don’t, you will be invited to every birthday party the kid has until he or she is an adult.

DEAR ABBY: We are progressive parents, but conservative about social issues. We have a problem on which we disagree and we have agreed to abide by your answer.

Our three children are all in high school. Our older daughter has a good friend – a boy who is gay. We like him very much and he has visited our home many times. However, our daughter would like to invite him to a sleepover, as she does with her girlfriends.

Is it appropriate for a teenage girl to have a gay boyfriend on a sleepover?

— PUZZLED PARENTS IN THE NORTHWEST
DEAR PUZZLED PARENTS: I see no reason why an “out” gay teenage boy shouldn’t attend your daughter’s sleepover. Their relationship is the same as the ones she has with her girlfriends.

Loughner Lawyers Want Clinical Assessments Recorded

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) • Attorneys for the Tucson shooting rampage suspect want all clinical assessments psychiatrists performed on him videotaped while he's at a federal prison medical facility in Missouri.

Jared Lee Loughner's lawyers filed the request Friday in U.S. District Court in Tucson.

In another development, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals scheduled an Aug. 30 hearing in San Francisco on an appeal by Loughner's attorneys over forced medication.

Loughner's attorneys said the videos have "likely evidentiary value" and they want to safeguard his constitutional rights. They also want to see copies of all videos immediately.

Loughner has been at the Springfield, Mo., facility since May 27 after a federal judge concluded he was mentally unfit to help in his legal defense.

The 22-year-old has pleaded not guilty to 49 charges in the Jan. 8 rampage that killed six and wounded 13, including U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords.

Mental health experts have determined Loughner suffers from schizophrenia and will try to make him psychologically fit to stand trial. He will spend up to four months at the Missouri facility.

Friday's filing by lead Loughner attorney Judy Clarke said the "videotaping is for the protection of the defendant subject to commitment and restoration efforts by the government" and the defense team wanted copies of all videos.

If Loughner is later determined to be competent enough for trial, the court proceedings will resume. If he isn't deemed competent at the end of his treatment, Loughner's stay at the facility can be extended.

Loughner's lawyers haven't said whether they intend to present an insanity defense, but they have noted in court filings that his mental condition will likely be a central issue at trial.

A missing person flier about eight-year-old Leiby Kletzky remains in a subway station on July 13 in the New York after he was found killed and dismembered earlier that day. The flier was distributed by the Shomrim patrol, a local volunteer group whose name means guardians in Hebrew. In the days before he was found dead, the search party to find Leiby grew to as many as 5,000 people.

Orthodox Communities Rely on Patrols for Safety

BY KAREN MATTHEWS
Associated Press

NEW YORK • When an 8-year-old boy from an insulated, ultra-Orthodox Jewish neighborhood in Brooklyn failed to make it home from day camp, his parents' first call was not to the police, but to the Shomrim patrol, a local volunteer group whose name means guardians in Hebrew.

Hasidic areas like Borough Park, where a Shomrim-organized search party looked for little Leiby Kletzky, are worlds unto themselves. Their members are identifiable by their distinctive appearance — wigs and modest dresses for the women, beards and side curls for the men. Community members send their children to Jewish schools, speak Yiddish as a first language and shun modern distractions like television.

Yet another distinction is the patrols, which residents turn to first because "they know the community, they speak the language, they have the trust of the entire community," said Isaac Abraham, a leader of the ultra-Orthodox in Brooklyn's Williamsburg section.

The search party for Leiby grew to as many as 5,000 people and served as a window into the tradition in these ultra-Orthodox communities of relying on each other, which stems in part from a history of persecution against Jews in Eastern Europe.

"We've always come together," said Shmuel Eckstein, a friend of the Kletzky who was praying with the family Thursday. "It's what we've always done, historically."

Neighbors looking for the boy stopped knocking on doors Wednesday when his remains were found and police arrested Levi Aron, a 35-year-old hardware supply clerk who has pleaded not guilty to charges that he killed Leiby and dismembered him.

Despite the endeavor's tragic end, the search was a powerful example of the value of Shomrim and similar patrols to their communities, said state Sen. Eric Adams, a retired NYPD captain who represents a neighboring Brooklyn district.

"The community patrols have the manpower that can immediately go into the crevices of a community that police may not even be aware of," he said. "The deployment of the community patrol allows the police to go further in their search because the community group was on the ground."

Shomrim members have been credited with helping police make arrests, even while placing themselves in danger. Four patrol members were wounded in Brooklyn last September as they were tailing a man they suspected of exposing himself to young girls.

And residents rely on Shomrim because police don't have the resources to check out minor issues like a noise in the backyard but Shomrim does, said Jacob Daskal, a coordinator and founder of the Borough Park Shomrim patrol.

He said the group has 150 members who are all required to volunteer at least one night a month. Dispatchers take hotline calls and send out patrols. Volunteers pay for their own gas. Expenses like office rent and two-way radios are funded by donations with some support from local elected officials.

Patrol members cooperate with the police and wear jackets or vests issued by the department.

Shomrim groups have also arisen in other cities with large communities of observant Jews, but the groups are not without their own challenges. While Shomrim members say the volunteers work tirelessly to keep their neighborhoods safe, critics have accused some of being vigilantes who target blacks.

Two Shomrim members in Baltimore were charged with assaulting a black teenager last November and telling him, "You don't belong around here, get outta here!" Charges against them are pending. In a 1996 case in Brooklyn, several Crown Heights Shomrim members were accused of beating a black man whose nephew they suspected of bike theft.

Obama Fundraising Report Signals Juggernaut Campaign

BY DAN EGGEN AND
T.W. FARNAM
The Washington Post

President Barack Obama has amassed a formidable team of more than 240 big-dollar fundraisers just three months into his 2012 reelection campaign, including more than two dozen bundlers who have each raised at least $500,000.

The bundler list and other campaign data released Friday provide further evidence of an astonishing fundraising effort by Obama amid a struggling economy and mediocre presidential approval ratings.

Obama's official campaign raised $46.3 million and spent $11 million from April to June of this year, according to new documents filed with the Federal Election Commission. That left it with a whopping $37 million in the bank, including money left over from the first quarter. Obama also brought in $39.3 million in a joint fundraising effort with the Democratic National Committee, the filings show.

The numbers put Obama far ahead of his GOP rivals, who are led by Mitt Romney with nearly $18.4 million raised. The former Massachusetts governor also reported $12 million of cash on hand at the end of June.

The rest of the field lags well behind, and some, including former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, are already in the red.

Former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty spent $2 million in the quarter, leaving him only $1.4 million in primary cash to battle Romney and other contenders in the weeks ahead. Rep. Michele Bachmann, R-Minn., on the other hand, has $3.6 million in the bank only weeks after declaring her candidacy.

For Obama, the sheer number of bundlers — and the volume of donations they represent — signals another potential juggernaut like 2008, when he shattered all records by raising $745 million. During his first campaign, he had 47 bundlers who raised $500,000 or more — a total he is already more than halfway to matching.

Obama's biggest bundlers include longtime supporters such as Hollywood mogul Jeffrey Katzenberg, former New Jersey Gov. and Sen. Jon Corzine, and fashion editor Anna Wintour. But there are new names on the campaign's bundlers list as well, such as Marc Benioff, a tech CEO who runs salesforce.com.

Several of the key bundlers, including Benioff, held events at their homes in which Obama came. These events usually gave donors special access to Obama, including the chance to ask the president direct questions in a closed-door atmosphere.

Hollywood super-agent Ari Emanuel, the brother of former White House chief of staff Rahm Emanuel, helped raise between $50,000 and $100,000.

Romney did not release a full list of bundlers, but his campaign was required to disclose bundling by six registered lobbyists, totaling $517,000 in contributions. The lobbyists included Patrick Durkin of Barclays, who raised $168,000, and Wayne Berman, with Ogilvy Government Relations, who raised $102,000.

The lobbyist bundler requirement was put in place by an ethics law sponsored by then-Sen. Obama, who has not accepted contributions from registered lobbyists or corporate PACs in his presidential bids. The Obama campaign attacked the GOP field on Friday for declining to identify their top fundraisers.

"President George W. Bush disclosed his bundlers, but the current GOP field has not followed suit, raising questions about the extent to which special interests are funding their campaigns," said spokesman Ben LaBolt.

Romney spokeswoman Andrea Saul responded, "All of our donors are public."

The Obama campaign has sought to emphasize the grass-roots side of his fundraising operation, noting that donors who gave $200 or less accounted for about a third of his total. The campaign says it had 550,000 donors in the second quarter, with an average contribution of less than $70.
